He was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, July 10, 1814, and his ancestry on both sides was of English origin. His paternal grandfather, Joshua Collins (for whom he was named), was a native of Rhode Island, but settled in Dutchess county in early manhood. He married Mary White, who was also of English descent, and reared a family of six children: Martin W., our subject's father; Oliver, a leading resident of Pleasant Valley, a school teacher by occupation, and for many years a Justice of the Peace; Joshua, a farmer in Illinois; Gideon, a farmer in Franklin county, N. Y.; Martha, who married Mr. Viele, a farmer in the town of Lagrange, and Susan, the wife of Caleb Angeline, a business man of Poughkeepsie.

Martin W. Collins was born at the old homestead in the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and lived there until his marriage to Anna Foreman, a daughter of Isaac Foreman, a prominent agriculturist of Pleasant Valley. The early ancestors of this family also came from England. Shortly after his marriage, Mr. Collins settled upon a farm in Pleasant Valley, and he became one of the leading men of that locality, taking great interest in the work of the Democratic party, and other public movements, holding the office of Alms House Keeper, and Justice of the Peace for many years. He and his wife were Presbyterians in faith. He died in 1876, and Mrs. Collins survived him ten years. The subject of this sketch was the eldest of their four children; Isaac is a well-known resident of Poughkeepsie, where his son, Martin Collins, is also attaining to a prominent place; Mary Ann married William Gurney, a business man of New York City, but both are now deceased, and Rhoda lives at Wappingers Falls.

Rev. Mr. Collins spent his youth upon the farm; but his abilities and inclinations fitted him for a wider sphere of action, and at the age of twenty-three he entered Yale College; but his eyes failed him, and after one year there he was compelled to give up his intention of graduating. From 1842 to 1847 he was in charge of the Mathematical and Classical departments of West Point College; but he then retired to the old homestead in Pleasant Valley. In 1877 he moved to Wappingers Falls, and in 1880 he was united in matrimony with Miss Isabella Johnston, a lady of Scotch descent. Although unfortunately deterred from carrying out his plans in early life, Mr. Collins has been a thorough student, following many branches of learning as opportunity afforded, and his years have been faithful in good works. He was ordained a clergyman of the Congregational Church in 1859, at Arlington, Vt., and two years later was taken into the North River Presbytery, and he has preached effectively in several places. He takes an active and intelligent interest in public affairs, is a Democrat in politics, and has been for many years a leading worker in temperance reform.

DR. ISAAC NEWTON MEAD. Many of the most prominent citizens of Dutchess county served their country during the dark days of the Rebellion, making a record honorable and glorious. Among these brave boys who "wore the blue" is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He is now an honored resident of Amenia, where for many years he has been successfully engaged in business.

The Doctor is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Amenia, September 13, 1840, and traces his ancestry back to Nathan Mead, who died February 24, 1777, at the age of eighty-six years. Job Mead, the son of the latter, came to Dutchess county from Horse Neck, Long Island, at an early date, and bought a farm from the Nine Partners in the town of Amenia, where, during the remainder of his life, he carried on agricultural pursuits. When the colonies resolved to throw off the British yoke, he joined the Continental army, and served through the war of the Revolution as captain. He married Miss Mercy King, and to them were born five children: Job, Jr., the grandfather of the Doctor; Nathan; Joshua; Mercy and Alice. The mother of these children died August 28, 1812, and the father passed away April 23, 1819, at the age of eighty-four years.

Job Mead, Jr., spent his boyhood days on the home farm in the town of Amenia, and, like his father, he also took up arms against Great Britain, serving in the war of 1812. He was united in marriage with Miss Ruth Hebard, who died January 29, 1808, at the age of forty-six years, and they had six children: Nancy, Sarah, Mary, Henry, John K. and Barak. The grandfather's death occurred January 12, 1838, when he was aged seventy-seven years.

John K. Mead, the father of our subject, was born September 6, 1799, on the homestead farm in the town of Amenia, where his early life was passed in aiding in the work of the fields, and in attending the district schools of the neighborhood. All of his active business life was devoted to the improvement and cultivation of the home farm. On February 28, 1827, he married Miss Jane A. Sutherland, who was born November 17, 1807, and died April 20, 1885. Six children blessed their union: Sarah Esther, born September 11, 1829, married E. W. Simmons; Mary Jane, born July 3, 1832, married Rev. E. W. Clark, a missionary to India; John F., born March 16, 1834, died September 29, 1888; Isaac N. is next in order of birth; Henry Sutherland, born May 25, 1842, is living in Millerton, N. Y.; Ruth Alida, born June 11, 1853, married Charles Benham, of Amenia. Religiously, the father was a Baptist, taking an active part in the work of his Church, in which he served as deacon for many years, and was also quite prominent in public affairs, being a member of the New York Assembly in 1844, and serving as supervisor of Amenia and justice of the peace. His first vote was cast in support of the Whig party, and on its dissolution he became a stalwart Republican. He died March 27, 1873, passing away at the end of a long and well-spent life.

The boyhood and youth of Dr. Mead were passed upon the old home farm, and he obtained his literary instructions in the district schools and the Amenia Seminary. In 1857 he entered a store in Smithfield, town of Amenia, where he clerked for one year, and then was similarly employed by Oliver Chamberlain at Amenia. In the spring of 1859 he began the study of medicine at Millerton, Dutchess county, with Dr. Lucius P. Woods, and the following fall took a partial course in the Berkshire Medical College, at Pittsfield, Mass. In 1859-60 he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons at New York City, after which he returned to study at Millerton.

In response to the call of the general government for volunteers to defend our national life, Dr. Mead enlisted in the fall of 1862 as a private in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I.; on the following Christmas Day was transferred from this regiment to the 5th N. Y. C. as hospital steward, and in the fall of 1864 was promoted to assistant-surgeon. He remained in active service with that command until August, 1865, when he was mustered out at Harts Island. He escaped uninjured, but had two horses shot under him—one at Hanover, Penn., June 30, 1863, and the other at Winchester, Va. He was always found at his post of duty, gallantly defending the old flag, and saw much hard service, participating in the following battles: Upperville and Aldie, Va.; Hanover, Penn.; Gettysburg; Barnesboro; Hagerstown, Md.; Falling Waters; Culpeper; Brandy Station; Wilderness; Spottsylvania; North and South Anna River; Cold Harbor; Petersburg; raid to Richmond; Winchester; Cedar Creek; Fisher's Hill; Waynesboro; Charlotteville; Appomatox; and Five Forks. The 5th N. Y. C. served under Gens. Sheridan, Kilpatrick and Custer. When hostilities had ceased, Dr. Mead returned to New York, and again entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he graduated in the spring of 1866. For one year he then engaged in practice in Amenia, then in 1868 removed to Millerton, where he practiced for the same length of time, when he again came to Amenia.

On January 13, 1869, the Doctor was married to Miss Julia Mygatt, daughter of Abram P. Mygatt, and they now have one child, Alice. Since his marriage the Doctor has successfully followed his chosen profession in Amenia. In 1873 he became a member of the firm of Bartlett & Mead, handling drugs, groceries, hardware, agricultural implements, grass seeds, etc., which connection continued until 1889, when Horace B. Murdock bought out the interest of Mr. Bartlett.

Socially, Dr. Mead holds membership with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., in which he served as first master; with John M. Gregory Post, G. A. R., Department of Connecticut,

No. 59; and Cavalry Society of the Army of the United States. In politics the Doctor affiliates with the Democratic party, although his first vote for President was cast for the martyred Abraham Lincoln. In religious belief he is a Presbyterian, belonging to the Church of that denomination in Amenia. He has won his way to the regard of the people with whom he comes in contact in his daily rounds by his ready tact and kindly sympathy, and is as faithful to his country in days of peace as in the dark days of the Rebellion.

EDGAR M. VANDERBURGH, a farmer and stock raiser, was born in the town of Canaan, Columbia county, August 26, 1820, and is the son of Martin and Mary (Halstead) Vanderburgh.

Col. James Vanderburgh, great-grandfather of our subject, was a farmer in the town of Beekman. His father was of Dutch descent, and was probably born in Holland. Col. Vanderburgh served all through the Revolutionary war, and Washington and La Fayette made his home their stopping place. The Vanderburgh mansion, which was built some time prior to the Revolution, was the first substantial house in Beekman. It stood about one-quarter of a mile northeast of the village of Poughquag, and was torn down in 1860. It was built of wood and stone, and a broad, covered veranda extended across the front of it. The slaves had quarters in the basement. In this house Col. James Vanderburgh had eighteen children born to him, all of whom reached maturity, and whose descendants are reckoned among the solid and substantial residents of Dutchess county to-day. It is said that a "Tory" plot was once hatched to kill him in his own house, but was frustrated by his wife, who barricaded the mansion so effectually that the "Tories" despaired of their purpose and ran away. It was after that event that Col. Vanderburgh entertained Gen. Washington at his hospitable table. Many traditions clustered around this old house, and it is a pity such a historic spot should have been blotted out.

Col. Vanderburgh was born September 4, 1729, and died April 4, 1794. He was married to Miss Margaret Noxon on September 29, 1753, and to them the following children were born: Elizabeth, Henry, Bartholomew, James, Magdalen, Peter and Stephen. Mrs. Vanderburgh died August 9, 1766. On October 25, 1767, Col. Vanderburgh married Miss Helen Clark, and these children were born: William, Margaret, Richard, Gabriel L., Egbert B., Clarissa, George W., Paulina, Almira, Federal and Caroline. In "The Surrogate", a magazine published in New York, March, 1891, appears the following: "Col. James Vanderburgh was one of the most influential citizens of Beekman, Dutchess county, and was descended from Holland ancestors, who settled at an early day in that region. He was a member of the Provincial Congress in 1776, and during the Revolutionary war was a zealous friend of the patriot cause, and while Gens. Washington and La Fayette were in his vicinity he entertained them and their staffs at his home." In later life he followed farming in Beekman, where he died.

Henry Vanderburgh, grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Beekman. He married and located in the town of Hyde Park, where he reared the following family of children: Lewis, Margaret, Martin, Fannie, John, Richard, Lucinda, Eliza, Maria and Katherine. The grandfather died in Hyde Park in May, 1841; his wife had passed away several years previous. Henry Vanderburgh was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and participated in the battle of Bunker Hill.

Martin Vanderburgh attained his majority in Hyde Park, and was a merchant and school teacher. He married Miss Mary Halstead, who was born in the town of Clinton. Her father, Richard Halstead, was a native of Westchester county; he married a Miss Griffin and they had a large family of children. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Vanderburgh moved to Canaan, Columbia county, locating on a farm; they became the parents of nine children, namely: Emeline, Susan, Oscar, Edgar M., John, Richard, Annie E., Maria and Lucinda. Of these, Emeline died unmarried; Susan married V. J. Wilcox, a farmer in Columbia county; Oscar is a retired farmer in the town of Chatham, Columbia county; John (deceased) was a farmer and merchant; Richard was also a farmer and merchant, and is now deceased; Annie E. became the wife of Sylvester S. Kady, a merchant of Jamestown; Maria married Rev. C. W. Havens, and is now deceased; Lucinda became the wife of E. W. Levensworth, a farmer and landlord in Columbia county. The parents of this family went to Columbia county in 1820, where the father died in 1864, and the mother in 1866; in politics, Mr. Vanderburgh was a Whig, and in religious faith both he and his wife adhered to the Society of Friends.

E. M. Vanderburgh

Edgar M. Vanderburgh, the subject of this sketch, spent his boyhood days on the farm in Columbia county, and attended the district school until fourteen years of age, when he went to Canaan Center Academy. He was obliged to earn his own living, so taught school in winters and attended them in summers; but failing health prevented him from completing the classical course. He married Miss Hannah Sutherland in 1844, and they had three children: Anna, who married Philip J. Sherman, a farmer and school teacher; Amelia married Rev. U. Symonds, and died in 1882; Henry is at home. In 1845 our subject moved to the town of Stanford, where he farmed, and where his wife died in 1853. In 1870 he married Mrs. Kate (Sackett) Lockwood, the widow of John F. Lockwood, and moved to his present place at Lithgow. His wife is a descendant of one of the old families. Mr. Vanderburgh was originally a Whig, voting first for Henry Clay, and since the organization of the Republican party he has supported it at every National election, including that of 1896. He was elected superintendent of common schools in 1849, and again in 1850, '51, '52, and '53; in 1857-58, he was elected supervisor of the town of Stanford; in 1864 he was elected superintendent of the county poor, being the first incumbent to that office in the county, and he held it for six consecutive years.

Mr. Vanderburgh is a firm believer in the Christian religion; that Christian unity should embrace the faithful of all denominations; that Christ is more than creed; that Christianity is more than sect; and that Christian character should be the test of Christian fellowship. The following lines represent some of his living maxims:

What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This teach me more than hell to shun,
That more than heav'n pursue.

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the faults I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me.

If I am right, Thy grace impart!
Still in the right to stay;
If I am wrong, oh! teach my heart
To find that better way.

MRS. MATILDA VAIL NOXON. Among the well-known pioneer families of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, the Vails have always held an honored place. Each generation has been engaged mainly in tilling the soil, and industry, frugality, and progressive spirit of the typical American farmer have been marked characteristics.

Moses Vail, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born and educated in the town of Unionvale, and established his home there upon a farm. He and his wife, Phoebe Losee, had eleven children: (1) James, a farmer, married Anna Montfort, and had six children, of whom, Stephen M., a clergyman, married Louise Cushman; Isaac M. married Mary Wheeler; Susan L. married Rev. James Runyon; Phoebe A. married Henry Segine; Cordelia E. married John Segine; and James W. died in young manhood. (2) Isaac married Rebecca Vail, and had one child—George W. (now deceased). (3) Stephen died at an early age. (4) Thomas married Susan A. Barlow, and had five children—Elisha B., who is single; Phoebe (Mrs. Charles Elmore); Maria J., the wife of Mr. Pultz; Caroline (Mrs. Presten); and Louisa, unmarried. (5) John is mentioned below. (6) Lavina married Tunis Van Benschoten, and had seven children—Phoebe Ann (Mrs. James Thurston); Mary (Mrs. Elisha French); Sarah (Mrs. Jones); Elizabeth (Mrs. Bronson); Jennie; Catherine White; and Phoebe (Mrs. Philo Vincent). (7) Mary married Levi Vincent, and had eleven children—Phebe (Mrs. J. Velie); Isaac (deceased); Deborah (deceased); Gideon; Platt; Thomas (deceased); Lavina (Mrs. Brown); Edwin; Chester (deceased); Albert (deceased); and Mary Ida (Mrs. Phelps). (8) Elias married Jane A. Cook. (9) Simon married Mary Potter, and had six children—Henrietta (Mrs. Helms); Fredrick; Edwin (deceased); Clarence, who married Maria Bartlett; Alice (deceased); and Evelenia (unmarried). (10) Moses married Hester Bussing, and had no children; he was well educated, and practiced law in New York City, but died at Saratoga, N. Y., in 1888. (11) Platt married Amelia A. Davis, and had five children—James D., who married Phoebe Vincent; Julia and Lavina, who are not married; Jesse, who died in the army in 1864; and Moses (deceased).

John Vail, our subject's father, was born at Verbank, Dutchess county, in November, 1800, and was educated in the schools of the town. His main occupation was farming, but he was also engaged in mercantile business, and conducted a woolen-mill at Verbank for some time. He married Elizabeth Vincent, and had ten children: (1) Sarah, born February 8, 1828, married Jacob Baker, a blacksmith of Freedom Plains, and is now deceased. (2) Matilda is mentioned below. (3) Loretta, born April 4, 1831, remained single all her life. (4) Samuel, born July 4, 1832, was a carpenter by trade, and had four children—Libbie (wife of Leonard Secord); Charles (who married Carrie Cass), William and Abbie (both deceased). (5) Mary, born October 13, 1834, married Simon Losee, and has two children—Lizzie and Wesley. (6) Martha, born January 14, 1836, was educated in Amenia Seminary, became a successful teacher, and is now deceased. (7) Rebecca (deceased), born October 1, 1837, married Richard Hall, a farmer of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, and had four children—Everett; Libbie (deceased); Herbert and Minnie. (8) Stephen, born February 23, 1839, is a carpenter by occupation. (9) James (deceased), born February 22, 1841, was a blacksmith by trade, and he and his wife had one daughter, Sarah (now Mrs. Richard Case). (10) George, born May 23, 1843, is a well-known dairyman of Unionvale; he married Miss Phœbe Noxon, and has three children—Henry, Hettie and John.

Matilda Vail first saw the light September 14, 1829, at the old home in Verbank. She was educated there, and later became the wife of Dewitt C. Noxon, son of Abram Noxon, a well-to-do farmer. Mr. Noxon followed mercantile pursuits in early life, and then for a time engaged in farming, but he spent his later years in New York City on the police force. He bravely served his country in the Civil war as a member of Company I, 128th N. Y. V. I., but was discharged on account of ill health. He died in 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Noxon had two children: Emma and Ada, of whom the latter died at an early age; Emma (now also deceased) married John G. Duncan, and had two children—J. Davis and Emma.

CLEVELAND H. TITUS, general merchant, and the popular postmaster of Webatuck, town of Dover, Dutchess county, was born on January 29, 1843, in New York City. There the birth of his grandfather, Richard Titus, occurred, and as an occupation he followed trucking in that city. In his family were five children: Joseph R. and Benjamin J. (twins), Richard, Alonzo and Sarah.

Joseph R. Titus, father of our subject, was born in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, in 1809, but received his education in New York City, and, like his father, engaged in trucking. He spent two years in the West, where he followed farming; but owing to ill health returned to New York. He married Miss Ruth Amelia Titus, daughter of Samuel J. Titus, a farmer of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county.

The parental household included fourteen children. (1) Adaline C., born November 3, 1841, died in 1851. (2) Cleveland H. is next in order of birth. (3) Stanley, December 2, 1844, died July 27, 1861. (4) Agnes I., born August 24, 1846, died July 22, 1847. (5) Eugene, born June 29, 1848, died November 27, 1849. (6) Albert, born June 15, 1850, died March 9, 1853. (7) Louisa J., born August 13, 1852, died October 20, 1857. (8) Mary A., born April 3, 1854, in New York City, was there educated, and married Ferdinand Blackenhorn, of Poughkeepsie, who served as cashier of the Third National Bank of New York City, but is now deceased—died in 1893. Six children were born of the union—Barbara, Amie, Jacob F., Ethel, Eugene and Ruth. (9) Ida, born April 15, 1855, died April 1, 1862. (10) Stephen, born April 17, 1858, in New York City, where he was educated, married Miss Agnes O'Neill, of that place, and they have three children—Ruth, Albert and Cornelius B. (11) Frank L., born December 5, 1859, in New York, married Miss Ellen Diamond, of that city, and they are now located at Palouse, Wash., where he is engaged in merchandising. They have three children—Joseph, Stanley and Margaret. (12) Mellie S., born July 7, 1861, in New York City, completed her literary education in the New York Normal College, and after studying law in the office of Mr. Hildreth, of New York, was admitted to the bar in 1894 to practice in the Supreme Court. However, she is now engaged in teaching in the Eighty-sixth street grammar school. (13) Eliza I., born May 1, 1864, was also a school teacher, and died April 15, 1896. (14) George I., born November 14, 1865, in New York City, is now employed as ticket agent on the Second Avenue Elevated road.

Our subject pursued his studies in the common schools of the town of Dover, and was employed in merchandising for his uncle for some time. After the latter's death, he turned his attention to farming until about eight years ago, since which time he has conducted a general store in Webatuck, where he also served as postmaster. He carries a full and complete stock, and secures a liberal share of the public patronage. Socially, he is a charter member of Dover Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., of Dover Plains.

On May 17, 1868, Mr. Titus was united in marriage with Miss Sarah E. Allis, daughter of Hiram and Mary J. (Hoag) Allis, of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and they now have two sons: (1) Joseph A., born April 17, 1869, in Dover, received a common-school education, and followed the mercantile business with his father until his marriage in 1892, to Miss Matie Orton, daughter of Judson and Susan (Wheeler) Orton, agriculturists of Dover Plains (he is now engaged in carrying the mail). (2) Stanley H., born July 23, 1879, in the town of Dover, was there educated, and now in the store with his father at Webatuck.

David Allis, the grandfather of Mrs. Titus, was also a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and after leaving school always engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Sarah Burton, and they had three children, of whom Hiram was the eldest. Alva, the second son, removed to Pennsylvania, where he followed farming, but previously he had married Miss Mariette Briggs, of Amenia, Dutchess county, by whom he had two children—Sarah J. and one who died in infancy. Phœbe, the only daughter, was born and educated in the town of Dover. She became the wife of a M. Sherman, a farmer of that town, and they had one son, Ebenezer.

Hiram Allis, the father of Mrs. Titus, was born in the town of Dover, April 8, 1802, and a life-work also followed farming. Religiously he was a member of the Society of Friends. He wedded Miss Mary G. Hoag, daughter of John and Hannah Hoag, the former a farmer and blacksmith of Dover. Three children preceded their union: Phœbe, born February 26, 1840, married Elias H. Deuel, by whom she had one daughter, Nellie L., wife of Egbert Slocum, and the mother of one son, Hener; Martin A., born December 23, 1842, died at the age of three years; Sarah E., born April 24, 1849, is the honored wife of our subject.

Cleveland H. Titus and his wife are the possessors of some 165 acres of land, which is rented for farming purposes. In politics, Mr. Titus is a Democrat.

WILLIAM A. BREWSTER. Esteemed and respected by all, there is no man in the business circles of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, who occupies a more prominent position than this gentleman, not alone on account of the success he has achieved, but also on account of his honorable and straightforward dealings. He was born September 17, 1854, in Hughsonville, town of Wappinger, this county, and has always made his home in that locality.

Mr. Brewster's paternal grandfather was William Brewster, of Bloomingburg, Sullivan Co., N. Y., whose son, William H. Brewster (the father of the subject of this sketch), was born in that village in 1812. When a young man he came to Hughsonville, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he engaged in his occupation as carpenter and contractor, afterward accepting the position as foreman of the carpenter department of Garner & Co.'s print works at Wappingers Falls, N. Y., which position he held for about thirty years. He was married September 18, 1852, to Mary Eliza Hoyt, daughter of William and Maria (Roe) Hoyt, and is still living at a ripe old age; but his wife died July 1, 1863.

Our subject's maternal grandfather was William Hoyt, whose parents came from Saugerties, Ulster Co., N. Y.; he married Maria Roë, daughter of Joseph C. Roe, who was a tanner and currier, and owned and conducted that business at Gayhead, Dutchess Co., N. Y. William Hoyt died August 3, 1885; his wife still survives him, at the age of eighty-five.

W. A. Brewster, the subject proper of this review, is the only child of this union. His boyhood days were spent at Hughsonville, where he began his education, which was completed at Poughkeepsie. On laying aside his text books, he was employed in the print works at Wappingers Falls, at the carpenter's trade, for about two years. On January 1, 1875, he became bookkeeper in the Bank of Wappingers Falls, a deposit bank, where he remained until he became cashier of a private bank of the same place, although at that time he was only twenty-six years old. After filling that position for a short time he was, on April 15, 1881, elected treasurer of the Wappingers Savings Bank, and November 1, 1884, was elected trustee of the same institution. He is also a local fire insurance agent, representing ten of the largest American and foreign companies.

Mr. Brewster was married October 19, 1881, to Miss Sarah S. Siddle, who was born in Clinton, Iowa, and is a daughter of Abram Siddle, a paper manufacturer of that place. The Siddle family is of English origin. A daughter, Helen, graces the union of our subject and his wife. As a Democrat in politics, Mr. Brewster takes great interest in political questions, and has served as trustee of the Hughsonville school district, was town clerk of Wappinger, and also represented his town on the board of supervisors. He is an honored and valued member of Wappinger Lodge No. 671, F. & A. M., of which he is a past master; of Evening Star Lodge No. 98, K. of P.; and of Lafayette Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F. He stands high in social as well as commercial circles, and his career has ever been such as to warrant the trust and confidence of all.

STEPHEN T. DEUEL. Prominent among the leading and influential farmers and stock raisers of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, is the gentleman of whom this sketch is written. He has one of the finest farms in the township, comprising 250 acres of valuable and productive land, which he has placed under a high state of cultivation, and made thereon many substantial and useful improvements. The passerby is at once attracted by its neat and thrifty appearance, and knows the owner to be a man of industry and of progressive methods.

Mr. Deuel was born in the town of Washington, May 27, 1833, and can trace his ancestry back to William Deuel, who emigrated to this country August 3, 1640. The family is of French origin, the name being originally spelled Davol, and later assuming the present mode. Jonathan Deuel, the son of William, was born at Dartmouth, Mass., and died in 1709. His son, Jeremiah Deuel, was also born at Dartmouth, and died November 29, 1753. In direct line to our subject, he was followed by Timothy, who was born at Bristol, R. I., January 1, 1714, and married Lydia Mosher, by whom he had eight children, namely: Lydia, Philip, Hannah, Rhoda, Juele, Silas, John and Benjamin. For many years he engaged in farming in Rhode Island and about 1750 came to Dutchess county, locating on a tract of land near Millbrook.

The seventh in that family, Silas Deuel was born at Bristol, R. I., July 13, 1748, and by his marriage with Hannah White became the father of eleven children: Eunice, Sarah, John, Ruth, Lydia, Silas S., Hannah, Phoebe, Benjamin, Isaac and Malessa. The father who was an agriculturist, lived to quite an advanced age, dying January 9, 1825. His tenth child, Isaac Deuel, who was born in Washington township, Dutchess county, November 21, 1798, became the father of our subject. He was united in marriage with Cynthia Thorn and five children blessed their union: William, Josephine and Henry, deceased; Thorn, a farmer in Washington town; and Stephen T., whose name introduces this sketch. The father followed the various pursuits of farmer, miller and merchant, and died in 1854.

Our subject was reared upon his father's farm, and educated in the district schools of the neighborhood. After attaining his majority he commenced farming for himself, which occupation he made his life work. As a companion and helpmeet on life's journey he chose Miss Louise M. Allen, a native of Washington town, born August 6, 1840, and their marriage was celebrated in that town, February 1, 1855. She was the daughter of Norton Allen, a native of Connecticut, who became a merchant of Hart's Village. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Deuel located on a farm near Millbrook, where they resided about five years and where she died January 24, 1864. One child blessed their union, Isaac N., who married Miss Katie F. Maroney, who was born in Washington town, a daughter of Patrick and Margaret (Whalen) Maroney. To Isaac Deuel and his wife have been born three children: Stephen T., Isaac M., and Olive. For his second wife Stephen T. Deuel married Miss Kate Maroney, a lady of Irish descent and a native of Washington township.

In 1866 Mr. Deuel removed from Millbrook, and settled at Little Rest, where he purchased the homestead and an adjoining farm, where he now lives. On his land is an old mill, which was once a school building and used for that purpose 125 years ago, and was at that time an old building. He also has a deed for the first land owned by the Deuel in Dutchess county, the date whereof is 1720.

Stephen J. Duell

and the signature that of Daniel Wood. Mr. Deuel is entirely independent of party lines in politics, considering, in the exercise of his elective franchise, rather the fitness of the man for the office than the party who placed him in nomination. Public-spirited to a high degree, he takes great interest in every measure calculated to benefit the community.

WILLIAM RECORD, a prominent merchant of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and one of the most public-spirited citizens of that town, is related by descent or marriage with several of the oldest families of the locality. On the paternal side of his grandfather was John Record, a native of South Mountain, Dutchess county, where he passed his entire life, receiving his education in the common schools of the town of Dover, and later engaging in the manufacture of chairs, in which business he won a notable success. The name of his wife is not known, and of their children three only are now remembered: George W.; Mary, who married Fred Shafer; and Amanda, who married Mr. King. George W. Record, the subject's father, was reared in his native village of South Mountain, attending the public schools and learning the blacksmith's trade. For a number of years he conducted a shop on Chestnut Ridge, and then he moved to the village of Dover, where he became a leading worker in that line of business. He always took great interest in religious matters, and was an active member of the Baptist Church at Dover Plains. He married Miss Susan Burlingame, daughter of John and Phœbe Burlingame, well-known residents of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, who reared a family of children as follows: Susan, born March 28, 1816; Salina, January 11, 1818; Charles and Miles, twins, May 11, 1821; Harriet, May 13, 1823; John, April 3, 1825; Mary, November 7, 1827; and Philip, May 10, 1830; the youngest child, Phœbe, was born in 1831. George W. Record and his wife had five children: Mary (Mrs. Samuel Hobson); Amanda (Mrs. William G. Evans); William, our subject; Charles, who died in the army; and Emma, who died at the age of twenty-six years. The subject of our sketch was born June 1, 1845, at the old homestead in Dover Plains, and received a good education in the public schools there. His first experience in business was gained as a clerk in a general store, which he entered at the age of fifteen. After a few years in this employment he engaged in farming, continuing with marked success until 1872, when he returned to mercantile pursuits, establishing a flour, feed, coal and lumber business. This is one of the principal enterprises in the place, his trade having increased at a gratifying rate as time has passed. Mr. Record is progressive in ideas, and has the advancement of the town at heart. He has always been identified with the Republican party, and has held a number of town offices, including those of supervisor, collector and commissioner, having been elected to the last-named position several times. He belongs to the Masonic Lodge, No. 666, of Dover Plains. In 1871 he was united in matrimony with Miss Adelia Lee, and they have four children: (1) George, born in 1871, is now his father's partner in business, and one of the leading young men of the town. On June 20, 1894, he was married to Miss Martha Moore, daughter of the late Henry Moore, once a professor of penmanship in the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, and later a well-known farmer of the town of Dover. He died at the age of thirty-four years, and his wife, Amy, at the age of thirty-six. (2) William Record, Jr., born in 1873, married Anna Weaver. (3) Theo, born in 1876, is at home. (4) Obed, born in 1878, died in infancy. Mrs. Record was born, in 1849, in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and was educated there. Her grandfather, William Lee, was a native of Gaylords Bridge, Conn., where he was engaged in farming for some years. He married Miss Mehitabel Ward, by whom he had six children: Jane (Mrs. Edward Ferris); Louisa (Mrs. Oliver Warner); Ward (Mrs. Record's father); Egbert, who married Abbie J. Carey; Emily, who married (first) George Travers, and (second) Ira Bowlby; and Emiline, the wife of George Wickham. Ward Lee was also born at Gaylords Bridge, but he was educated in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, his parents removing to that locality when he was a child. He learned the carpenter's trade, and followed it all his life with the exception of ten years which he spent in farming, and many houses in the town of Dover were built by him. In politics he was a Democrat; was road commissioner for a number of years, and held other offices at various times. In 1846 he was married to Miss Mary Cutler, and had four children: Adelia (Mrs. Record);

Emily (Mrs. Alvin Marcy); William, who died in infancy; and Angeline (Mrs. Darwin Warner). Mr. Lee died August 12, 1886, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, and while his death was keenly felt among a large circle of friends it left the deepest sorrow within the home where his qualities of mind and heart were best known. Mrs. Record's mother, Mary Cutler Lee, was born in 1828, in South Dover, Dutchess county, where her ancestors were early settlers. Her grandfather, William Cutler, was a native of that place, and passed his life there as a well-to-do farmer. He married Miss Elizabeth Hiller, and had eight children: (1) Rhoda (Mrs. Isaac Northrup); (2) Abigail (Mrs. Thomas Tompkins); (3) Mahala, who never married; (4) Thursie, who died; (5) Bigelow and (6) Thomas, the names of whose wives are unknown; (7) William, who married Irene Brush; and (8) Calvin, the father of Mrs. Lee. He was born in South Dover in 1799, and after obtaining an education in the schools of that place engaged in agriculture. His wife was Miss Keziah Varney, daughter of John and Mary (Rodgers) Varney, prosperous farmers in Connecticut. Eight children were born to this marriage: John and Jerome, who died in infancy; Elihu, who married Lydia Wilcox; Elezer, who married Maranthy Eggleston; Francis, who married Elizabeth Carey; Priscilla (Mrs. William Hall); Mary (Mrs. Ward Lee); and Sarah (Mrs. William Hooker).

WILLIAM S. TRIPP. As an enterprising and wide-awake citizen of Millbrook, Dutchess county, engaged in the butchering business, we take pleasure in giving this brief biography of the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Washington, near Millbrook, on June 24, 1856, and is a son of Daniel Tripp, who was born at the same place in 1833. On that farm his great-grandfather, Samuel Tripp, had located after his marriage with Miss Mary Howard, and there reared their family of eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Phoebe, January 29, 1779; John, November 27, 1780; Hannah, March 1, 1782; Susanna, January 31, 1784; George, November 16, 1785; Howard, December 5, 1787; Patience, October 20, 1789; Mary, November 21, 1791; Samuel, April 6, 1794; Wasson, July 8, 1796, and Isaac, October 7, 1798. The father of this family was born November 15, 1751, and his wife on November 8, 1757. In religious belief the family were Friends.

Wasson Tripp, the grandfather of our subject, was born on the old homestead, where he was reared, and which he continued to cultivate after reaching man's estate. In 1818 he was united in marriage with Sally Buckbee, by whom he had two children: Edward B., who was born October 7, 1819, and followed farming as a means of livelihood, and Malvina, who was born August 17, 1821, and became the wife of Henry C. Haight, also an agriculturist. Both are now deceased. For his second wife Wasson Tripp chose Hannah Tompkins, at their wedding was celebrated May 18, 1822. Seven children blessed their union, namely: Howard, born June 26, 1826, became a merchant and, later, station agent at Millbrook; Charles, born July 27, 1828, was for a time merchant in New York City, but now makes his home in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Sarah, born August 8, 1830, married Edwin Curtis, a merchant, but both have passed away; Daniel, born October 28, 1833, is the father of our subject; Maria, born May 7, 1836, is the wife of William Rust, a contractor of Poughkeepsie; George, born February 23, 1839, is a citizen merchant of Poughkeepsie, and Mary E., born January 3, 1842.

After reaching manhood, Daniel Tripp married to Miss Mary E. Seeley, a native of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and daughter of William Seeley, who in early years followed farming, but his later years were passed in retirement at Poughkeepsie. At their marriage they located upon the old family homestead, where they reared their family of nine children: Wasson, who died in March, 1865; William S., of this review; E. Bennett, who makes his home in Poughkeepsie; Hiram, a resident of Millbrook; Gertrude, wife of Clark Barmore; Edward and Daniel, who live in Moores Mill; Kate, wife of Frank Taylor, of the same place; and Elizabeth, at home. The father still carries on farming at Moores Mill and in politics is an ardent Democrat, by which party he has been elected to several positions of honor and trust.

The boyhood days of William S. Tripp were spent upon the home farm until sixteen years of age, when he started out to fight his battle, being employed as a farm hand until he was twenty-two. He then came to Millbrook, and for a year and a half worked at the butchering business for Hiram Warner. He has since made that business his life work, and has met with a fair degree of success, establishing his present shop in September, 1881. He is numbered among the prominent business men of Millbrook, and stands high in the estimation of his fellow citizens.

On January 18, 1882, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Tripp and Esther M. Smith, and one daughter was born to them—Esther; but the mother was called from this life April 8, 1884. For his second wife our subject wedded Frances La Due, a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, and a daughter of Alexander La Due, who is of French descent and a farmer by occupation. The lady is a constant and faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while in political sentiment Mr. Tripp is a Democrat.

MRS. ANN A. HAYES. It is not alone by eloquence of speech and force of argument that the modern advancement in the status of women—which means the advancement of the human race—has been brought about. The changes in public sentiment which have made it possible for the women of today to extend their activities to every line of effort have found their most potent justification and cause in the lives of thousands who have quietly taken their places in public life, and proved the wisdom of their course by an unmistakable success. The subject of this sketch, a descendant of two of the oldest and most highly esteemed families in the county, has spent more than forty years in the service of the government as assistant postmaster at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county; a fact which in itself speaks volumes for her ability, energy and independence of character, for in the beginning of this long term the employment of women in such positions was by no means common. It is well for the present aspirants to official places that the pioneers labored so successfully as to disarm the objections of the most conservative.

Mrs. Ann Akin Hayes was born at Quaker Hill, where her grandfather, John Toffey, settled prior to the Revolutionary war. He was a native of England, born June —, 1748, and in early years was a hatter by trade, but later a farmer, his estate at Quaker Hill being the one that is now occupied by Mrs. Hayes.

He was married January 1, 1776, to Abigail Akin, daughter of John Akin, of the well-known Quaker family, whose various members have held conspicuous posts of honor and usefulness. Mrs. Toffey was a member of the Society of Friends, to which her husband inclined. He was a man of strong character, and was prominent in the locality. His death occurred in 1825; that of his wife in 1829, when she was in her eighty-first year. They have five sons, who in manhood had not a pound of difference in their weight. Their names and dates of birth are as follows: Hewlett, December 5, 1776, who married Miss Scofield, and settled in Canada; Akin, June 28, 1781, who lived at Quaker Hill; George, June 15, 1783, a resident of the town of Beekman; John, January 21, 1786, Mrs. Hayes' father; and Daniel, May 1, 1788, who settled at Quaker Hill.

John Toffey inherited the homestead, and for many years carried on a general mercantile business in a store adjoining his farm, erecting a new building in 1823. He was a thrifty man, successful both as a farmer and as a merchant, and was also prominent in local politics, holding the office of postmaster for many years. His honesty and generosity were noticeable traits, and he was highly respected by the people of his locality. Although he was a Friend in principle, he never united with the Society. He was married September 18, 1814, to Esther H. Akin, daughter of James Akin, of Quaker Hill, and had three children. Polly, born April 4, 1815, married DeWitt C. Thomas, and settled near Delhi, Delaware county, N. Y.; John James, born March 3, 1819, died January 12, 1838; Ann Akin, our subject, was born March 12, 1821. The father died March 15, 1867, in his eighty-second year; his wife passed away July 12, 1879, in her eighth-third year. In 1847 the subject of our sketch was united in matrimony with John P. Hayes, who took charge of the store and continued the business successfully for many years. They have no children.

MATTHEW V. B. SCHRYVER, a leading citizen of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and president of the board of trustees of that village, is a member of one of the oldest and most influential families of that locality.

John T. Schryver, his grandfather, was born about 1788, in Dutchess county, and was one of the principal workers in securing the incorporation of the village, and was the first to hold the office of president, which his grandson now fills so ably. John T. Schryver, who was of German descent, married Miss Helen Conklin, a native of Fishkill, Dutchess county, born about 1780, and a descendant of a well-known Holland-Dutch family. Their son, George W. Schryver, our subject's father, was born in Rhinebeck, in 1810, and spent the greater portion of his life there. His wife, Maria E. Fellows, was born in 1819. They had six children, of whom two died in infancy. Matthew was the youngest of the four who lived to maturity, the others being: Helen, Mrs. E. Marshall Pavey, of New York (deceased); Kate, Mrs. Edward D. Cowman, of New York (deceased); and Georgia, now Mrs. D'Linton W. Greenfield, of Rome, New York.

Matthew V. B. Schryver began his mortal career January 12, 1859, in Rhinebeck. He was carefully educated, and completed his literary studies at De Garmo Institute, graduating in 1875. He prepared for the legal profession, receiving the degree of LL. B. in 1880, from the law department of Columbia College, and was admitted to the bar immediately after graduation. He began to practice in New York City, and after two years went to Stevens Point, Wis., where he spent one year in professional work. In comparison with other places the old home acquired new attractions, and he returned to Rhinebeck, where he is now engaged in insurance business in connection with certain lines of legal work. For nine years past he has served as justice of the peace—his logical, well-trained mind making him a most valuable official. He is identified with the progressive movements of the locality and is especially prominent in municipal affairs, as is attested by his successful administration of his office as president.

RUFUS S. CRAIG, engineer and engine dispatcher on the Harlem railroad, with residence at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is descended from a worthy Scotch family. Alexander Craig, his grandfather, was born in Scotland, and, having joined the British army as a commissioned officer, came to the United States with Gen. Burgoyne, at the age of nineteen years, being with that commander at the time of his surrender to Gen. Gates. He served as lieutenant, and participated in seven battles in this country. He wedded Miss Mary Newton, of Groton, Mass., and to them were born eight children: Thomas, who married Sarah Allard; Carrie and George, who were also married; Silas, the father of our subject; Aaron, who married Olive Allen; Rebecca, married to Devilla Lawrence; Mary, who married Chester Cooley; and Elizabeth, married to Isaiah Lawrence.

Silas Craig was born at Westfield, Mass. August 29, 1792, and was educated in the common schools. By occupation he was a farmer, and in politics was an unswerving Republican, but cared nothing for public office. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary Wood, a daughter of Hezekiah and Mary (Savage) Wood, farming people of Vermont in whose family were eight children: Joe, Peter, who married Laura Hitchcock; Thomas, who married Mary Cooley; John, married to Betsey Clark; Betsey, who married Dudley Hayes; Mary, the mother of our subject; Harriet, who married William Clark; and Levina, who married John Livingston. Eight children were born to the parents of our subject, as follows:

(1) Obediah, born at Highgate, Franklin county, Vt., in 1824, worked at the carpenter trade and at bridge building there throughout life. He married Miss Arvilla Fuller, daughter of Rodney Fuller, a farmer, and they had two children—Frank and Flora. Of these, Frank was born at Dorchester, Mass., in 1858, and was educated in the schools of Lowell, the State. He entered the railroad service with the Vermont Central at Lowell, and from there went to Santa Fé, N. M., being an engine on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé railroad, on which road he was killed in 1891. He was a charter member of Fort Madison Lodge of the Masonic fraternity, and served master of a lodge in Iowa. In that State also held membership with the Order of Red Men, and was grand high sagamore. He was one of the leading railroad men of the West and served as chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. He married and had two children—Ida, who died at the age of nine years; and Frank B. Flora, the daughter of Obediah Craig, was also born at Dorchester, Mass., and married Charles Shearer, a railroad employee, formerly of New Hampshire, and they have three children.

(2) Eunice, a sister of our subject, was born at Highgate, Vt., and married Joseph

Thomas S. Spring

Clark, a farmer of that State. They have no children living.

(3) Richard Baxter, also a native of the Green Mountain State, was there educated and followed farming and milling. He married Miss Agnes Daniels, daughter of Joseph and Agnes Daniels, in whose family were five children: Ezra, Margaret, Ira, Agnes and Joseph. Richard Baxter Craig and his wife had three children: Sewell, born in 1862; and Darwin and Baxter (twins), born in 1868.

(4) Abraham was born in Vermont, and there engaged in farming. He married Miss Laura Allen, and had five children: Rufus S., Joshua C., Emma, Annie and Ellen.

(5) Rufus S., the subject of this sketch, is next in order of birth. (6) Harlo, a native of Vermont, who is engaged in farming in Canada, married Miss Marion Davis, and has two children: Warren and Ida. (7) Myron enlisted in the Second Vermont Cavalry, becoming a member of Company M, during the Civil war; was also in the navy for three years, and now draws a pension for both army and navy service. He was also married. (8) Flora married John Whiting, an agriculturist, of Highgate, Vt., and they have four children.

Rufus S. Craig, the subject proper of this sketch, was born at Highgate, Franklin Co., Vt., January 10, 1834, and there secured his education. At the age of sixteen years he started out in life for himself, going to Michigan, where for one year he was fireman on the Michigan Southern railroad. He then went to Lake Erie, as assistant engineer on the old "United States," where he remained for two years. At Boston, Mass., he next secured a position on the Boston & Providence railroad, being with that road for two years as fireman and engineer. On March 6, 1865, he came to Dover, Dutchess county, and has since been with the Harlem railroad as engineer and engine dispatcher. His long continued service well indicates his faithful discharge of duty, and he is held in the highest esteem by all who know him. On June 13, 1866, he joined King David Lodge, F. & A. M., of Taunton, Mass., whose charter dates back to 1798, being one of the oldest lodges in the country, and assisted in the establishment of Dover Plains Lodge No. 66. He is also a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Mr. Craig was united in marriage with Miss Harriet M. Thornton, a daughter of Joseph and Mary Thornton. Her father, who was a native of Nantucket, Mass., was a mason by trade, but became a prosperous farmer of Dedham, that State. She was the third in order of birth in a family of five children, the others being Susan, who married James Kinney; Louisa, who married John Johnson; Mary J., who married George Varney; and Mrs. Lucretia Taylor. Mr. Craig has been called upon to mourn the loss of his faithful wife, who died July 16, 1886, and was laid to rest in Brookvale cemetery, Dedham, Massachusetts.

Sewell Craig, a nephew of our subject, was born in Franklin county, Vt., in 1862, and is the son of Richard Baxter and Agnes (Daniels) Craig. After finishing his education in the public schools of that State, he became connected with a brass foundry, but later entered the employ of the Harlem railroad in the round house. He was promoted to engineer on that road, a position he now fills, and is one of their most trusted and careful men, as his long service of fifteen years indicates. He holds membership with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and also with Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., while politically he is a Republican.

In 1886 Sewell Craig was married to Miss Alice Dennis, who was born in England, and in 1881 came to the United States. They have two children: Richard B., born August 25, 1887; and Cora E., born October 11, 1888. Thomas Dennis, the grandfather of Mrs. Craig, was born, reared and educated in England, where he also learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed throughout his life. He married Miss Emma Godfrey, and they always made their home in England. Their only child was Benjamin (the father of Mrs. Craig), also a carpenter by trade; he married Miss Sarah E. Dennis, a distant relative, and they had two daughters: Alice (Mrs. Craig) and Maude, who was also born and educated in England. She married a Mr. Beardwell, of that country, where they still reside, and have one child, Charlotte Rose.

NOAH L. BISHOP, a worthy citizen of Wassaic, Dutchess county, was there born June 20, 1848, his father, George Bishop, being depot agent, and a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church at that time. George Bishop was twice married, having by the first union two daughters and three sons, namely: Jennie, wife of Francis Chapman, deceased, of Pawling, Dutchess county; Mary A., wife of Joseph S. Hobbs, of Centralia, Ill.; Seneca Smith, who was a sailor and is supposed to have died at sea; George W., a mechanic, who died and was buried at sea while on his way to Japan, where he was going to superintend the erection of some buildings (he left a wife and four children at New Haven, Conn.); and Charles Wesley, formerly a business man in New York City, who died in the army. After the death of his first wife George Bishop wedded Miss Louisa Butts, and to them were born three children: William G., now deceased; Catherine M., wife of Edward Brown; and Noah Lent.

The education of our subject was such as the district schools near his home afforded; but at the early age of ten years he laid aside his text books and began work for Gail Borden as an errand boy in the condensed milk factory, where he has since remained, serving as superintendent since 1870. His promotion was gradual; after serving as errand boy for a time he worked at filling cans by hand in the forenoon, putting up all the milk there made; next heated up the milk in the wells as received, and was then engaged in sealing the milk. In the tin shop he was next employed at general work; later fired the boilers, then became operator at the vacuum pans, and subsequently served as milk inspector until appointed to his present responsible position in 1870. His long-continued service well indicates his faithful discharge of duty, the confidence and trust reposed in him, and the capable and efficient manner in which he conducts the business.

At Wassaic Mr. Bishop was married to Miss Jennie A. Jones, daughter of Jarvis Jones, and they now have two children: Lena M., wife of Dr. F. Bruce, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Cora J. Mr. Bishop takes quite an active interest in civic societies, being a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and the Royal Arcanum at Wassaic, while politically he uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party.

GEORGE T. WILLSON, senior member of the well-known firm of Willson & Eaton, wholesale grain dealers of Amenia, Dutchess county, belongs to that class of reliable and trustworthy citizens to whom may be attributed the stable welfare and prosperity of a community. A native of Dutchess county, he was born February 3, 1837, in the town of Northeast. His paternal great-grandfather, Robert Willson, a native of Scotland, was one of the early settlers of that town, securing his land from the Indians.

The grandfather, who also bore the name of Robert Willson, was born, reared and educated in the town of Northeast, and on reaching manhood there followed farming. He was one of the heroes of the Revolutionary war, and was a Presbyterian in religious belief, serving as deacon in his Church. He married Miss Sarah Thompson, and to them were born nine children, namely: John, Hiram, Theron, Samuel, Edmund, Henry, Barak, Sarah and Rebecca.

Theron Willson, the father of our subject was also born in the town of Northeast, and spent his boyhood days upon the home farm. By occupation he was also a farmer, and was a strong temperance man. He married Miss Eliza Collins, daughter of Capt. James Collins of Northeast, and they became the parents of five children: Collins, who lives at Pine Plains Dutchess county; Eli, of Northeast; Sarah, wife of Joseph Belding, of Amenia; George T. of this review; and Lydia, wife of Samuel Guernsey, of Northeast. The mother was called to her final rest in 1856, and the father died in January, 1862.

George T. Willson was reared on the home farm, and acquired his education in the district schools. On the breaking out of the Civil war, he joined his country's service, enlisting in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I.; this regiment was assigned to the Eastern arm until after the battle of Gettysburg, when was transferred to Gen. Sherman's command. Our subject continued with his regiment through the war without receiving a furlough. At the battle of Gettysburg he was wounded in the head, and taken up for dead; on ascertaining that life was not extinct, he was taken to the hospital, and a few days later was able to rejoin his command, with which he served until mustered out at Poughkeepsie. He participated also in the battles of Nashville, Chattanooga, Resaca, and in the Atlanta campaign.

Returning to the town of Northeast, he resumed work upon the home farm, where he remained for three years, and then removed to the village of Amenia to engage in the horse and cattle trade. In March, 1878, he assumed control of the feed and grain business heretofore run by B. Willson & Co., taking as his partner Lewis F. Eaton, and the firm has since been Willson & Eaton. They were the first to sell hominy chop in the locality, and they are now at the head of an extensive and constantly increasing business, their wholesale trade extending throughout several counties in New York, while they carry on a retail trade at Amenia, Wassaic and Shekomeko.

In the town of Amenia, in May, 1876, Mr. Willson was married to Mrs. Emma (Darke) Reed, daughter of Charles Darke, and they now have four children: Charles T., Bessie, Georgia and Lee. Mr. Willson is public-spirited and progressive, and faithfully discharges every duty of citizenship with the same fidelity that he displayed on Southern battlefields, when he followed the stars and stripes to victory, and thus aided in the perpetuation of our glorious republic. In political sentiment he is a Republican.

JOHAN J. HUMESTON, who is practically living retired in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, is one of the most prominent citizens of the community. He was born in that town on July 5, 1835, and is a son of James E. Humeston, whose birth occurred in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, December 1, 1795, while his grandfather, Eli Humeston, and his great-grandfather, Joyton Humeston, were both natives of East Haven, Conn. After his marriage, the grandfather, who was a wagon-maker, removed to the town of Dover, where he reared his family of five children, of which the father of our subject was the eldest. He was followed by Hannah, who married Joseph Palmer, a farmer of Dover; Edwin and Joseph, both wagon-makers of Dover; and Mariett, wife of George Bassett, a railroad man of Chicago, Ill. The family belonged to the Society of Friends.

James E. Humeston grew to manhood in the town of Dover, where he learned the wagon-maker's trade, and there married Elizabeth Perry, by whom he had two children: Thomas P. (deceased July 22, 1885); and Catherine E. (deceased October 19, 1895), who became the wife of George T. Underhill, a farmer of the town of Washington. Mrs. Humeston died June 12, 1831, and for his second wife Mr. Humeston wedded Lydia V. Underhill, the ceremony taking place February 5, 1832. She was born in the town of Washington, September 24, 1804, and was a daughter of Nathaniel Underhill, a native of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and of English descent. After his marriage Mr. Humeston located upon a small farm near Hibernia Mills, where our subject, the only child by the second union, was born. In politics, the father was a Whig and for several years served as justice of the peace. His death occurred in the town of Washington, July 31, 1872, and his wife departed this life October 4, 1881.

The earliest years of John J. Humeston were spent near Hibernia in the uneventful manner of most farmer boys, and in early life he learned the carpenter's trade. On February 20, 1861, Mr. Humeston was married to Miss Lydia A. Deuel, a native of the town of Dover and a daughter of Jacob and Charity (Gould) Deuel, the former of whom was born January 21, 1797, on the same farm where his daughter's birth occurred, and the latter May 24, 1804, in Ballston, Saratoga Co., N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Deuel were farming people, and the parents of eight children, namely: Anna M., who died November 10, 1876; Lydia A., honored wife of our subject; Phœbe G., who wedded Jonathan Benham, a farmer living near Lithgow, Dutchess county; Mary G. (twin sister of Phœbe), who died May 11, 1856; Elias H., a farmer and landlord at South Dover, Dutchess Co.; Myra J., who died March 10, 1854; Emily H., wife of E. W. Benson, a farmer of South Dover; and Obed J., also a farmer of that locality, who married Charlotte Horton, has always remained on the homestead. The father, who supported the Democracy, was elected road commissioner and town assessor, and in religious belief both he and his wife were Quakers. He was called to his final rest October 27, 1879, and his wife died June 2, 1895. He was a son of Joshua Deuel (a farmer of the town of Dover), whose father and grandfather both bore the name of Benjamin. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Humeston was Joel Gould (a son of Adam Gould), who was born in the town of Washington, where on reaching manhood he engaged in farming.

After his marriage, Mr. Humeston took his bride to Amenia, Dutchess county, where he followed his trade for two years, and then went to Dover, where he engaged in the same occupation for some thirteen years, after which he came to the town of Washington. For the past three years he has resided upon his present farm, where to a limited extent he engaged in agricultural pursuits, but is practically living retired. He has a beautiful home, and is surrounded by all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. In the family are two children—Mary C. and Phebe A.—and they hold a high position in the social circles of the community, where true worth and ability are received as the passports into good society. In politics, Mr. Humeston is entirely independent of party lines, preferring to vote for the man who, he thinks, will best fill the position.

ARTHUR V. ROCKWELL, "silk throwster" of one of the leading manufactories of Matteawan, was born February 14, 1866, at Millbrook, Dutchess county, the only son of the late Ralph Rockwell and his first wife, Elizabeth Broadhurst.

It seems quite in the natural order of things that Mr. Rockwell should be engaged in the silk business, his father having been prominent in that line of work, while his ancestors on the mother's side were even more closely identified with that industry, being among its earliest promoters in this country. John Broadhurst, Mrs. Rockwell's father, wove the first piece of broad silk goods ever made in America, and her brothers were masters of every detail of the art of silk manufacturing as it was carried on in their day, having perfected their knowledge in the great silk mills of Macclesfield, England. But, if these pioneers should to-day visit the extensive warp spinning works at Matteawan, they would find much to interest them while examining its highly improved machinery so delicately adjusted that the breaking of a single fibre of silk stops the "take up." Formerly both warp and filling were spun at this establishment, but now its 16,000 spindles are devoted exclusively to the making of warp, and turn out about 33,600,000 yards per day.

Arthur V. Rockwell, the presiding genius of this busy place, a courteous yet business-like young man, was educated at Poughkeepsie, graduating from the high school in 1884, and from the Eastman Business College a year later. He then engaged in the silk-throwing business with his father, who was a partner in the firm of J. Silbermann & Co., at Poughkeepsie, and in 1890, when the father moved to Matteawan and established the present plant, in partnership with John Cummings, our subject took charge of his interests in Poughkeepsie. In 1892 he also moved to Matteawan, took Mr. Cummings' interest in the firm, and has since remained there, carrying on the business for the estate since his father's death, December 27, 1894. He married Miss Susie Van Dyne, daughter of William H. and Anna C. (Brevoort) Van Dyne, of Poughkeepsie. They are members of the First M. E. Church of Matteawan, and are prominent in social life. Mr. Rockwell is a Republican in politics, and he belongs to the Matteawan Club, the Hudson River Lodge No. 57, K. of P., and is president of the Beacon Engine Co., of Matteawan.

The late Ralph Rockwell was born September 27, 1837, in the town of South Windsor, Conn., and at an early age engaged in the woolen business at South Manchester, Conn., remaining three years. He then began his long experience as a silk manufacturer, entering the factory of Cheney Bros., well-known pioneers in this business, where he spent seven years learning the trade in all its branches. On leaving them he went to Yonkers as superintendent of G. B. Skinner's mills, and after six years there he moved to Paterson, N. J. the "Lyons of America," and, with William S. Archer as a partner, purchased the factory known as the Benson Mills, now one of the old landmarks of this business. He sold his interest in this plant in the following year, and for some time occupied the famous old "Reel Mill" at Poughkeepsie; but the failure of the water power there led to his removal to Hart's Village, in 1860, where he took the factory owned by Abraham Swift at the Upper Pond. The death of his first wife occurred Feb. 19, 1866, and shortly afterward Mr. Rockwell returned to Yonkers and embarked in business there, remaining about six years. While there he married Miss Clara J. Du Bois, who survives him. On leaving Yonkers he resumed business at Paterson, and after four years returned to New York City, and established for J. Silbermann a factory for "silk throwing on Tenth avenue, which was transferred to Poughkeepsie four years later. The partnership with Mr. Cummings, referred to above, was succeeded by the firm of Rockwell & Silbermann, which continued until the death of the senior member; but for some years previous the active management of the works devolved upon our subject, his father retiring to an estate at Millbrook, where he died of heart disease Thu-day afternoon, December 27, 1894, at the age of fifty-seven years.

A. W. [unclear]

Though not lacking in public spirit, Mr. Rockwell never sought public office, and was best pleased when he could remain quietly at home. His business associates speak highly of his fairness and liberality, and say that he took more pleasure in paying them than in collecting debts. His circle of acquaintances in this vicinity was not large, but those who knew him best speak most highly of his excellent qualities of head and heart. As a friend, neighbor and citizen, his death was deeply mourned. He was a Master Mason, a charter member of Manchester Lodge, at South Manchester, Conn., and was one of the oldest members of the fraternity in the State of Connecticut. His remains now rest in the cemetery at Wapping, Conn., his birthplace.

Russell Rockwell, our subject's grandfather, was a prominent resident of Windsor, Conn., the owner of a sawmill, and a pioneer in the cultivation of tobacco in that section. At one time he had the option of purchasing, for $300, the entire site of the present village of Rockville, Conn., including the remarkable water power at that point, a property now worth millions of dollars.

WILLIAM K. ROY, the popular postmaster of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, and one of the most prominent citizens of that village, was born there December 21, 1853.

James Roy, the father of our subject, was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1816, learned the business of calico printing, and became foreman of his father's works, when only a boy. When eighteen years old he came to America, and for a short time lived at Stockport, N. Y., being foreman engraver in the print works at that place. In 1837, he removed to Wappingers Falls, and took a position in the print works there, retaining same for nearly ten years. In 1848 he opened a drug store, which he carried on until his death, which occurred in 1868. James Roy was married May 25, 1843, to Susanna Darling, who was born at Cumberland Hill, Mendon, Mass., in 1818. She was the daughter of Seth Darling, a native of Cumberland, Mass., and Susanna Clark, who was also born in Massachusetts, on both sides the families were of English descent.

The Clarks came to America at a very early period and settled in Rhode Island, where our subject's mother spent a part of her childhood on the old homestead. When she was eight years old her parents removed to Fall River, Mass., where she grew to womanhood.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Roy came to Dutchess county, and settled at Wappingers Falls, where they reared a family of eight children, of these, James S. married Carrie A. Orr, and has two children; Emma Darling married Edward Griffith, of Newport, R. I.; William K., the subject of this sketch; Albert M., who is in the drug business with his brother in Wappingers Falls (he graduated with honors in the class of 1885 from the College of Pharmacy, New York City, taking two prizes); Elizabeth Clark married George H. Kelley, of Newport, R. I., a descendant of one of the old and leading families of that State. Three other children died in infancy. Since the death of her husband Mrs. Roy has conducted the drug business in which he was engaged, and has made a great success of it. She is thoroughly conversant with all its details, and so high does she stand in the estimation of medical men, that when the State Board of Pharmacy was organized, she was sent a certificate authorizing her to practice pharmacy without taking an examination. She is one of the best known business women in Dutchess county, and possesses unusual ability in that direction, besides being a lady of refinement and culture.

Mr. Roy took an active part in all matters of public interest, especially in the cause of education. He was instrumental in building up the present excellent school system in the county, and was one of the principal promoters in the establishment of the high school; he was one of the small number who secured the ground and laid out the beautiful cemetery at Wappingers Falls, and was the secretary and treasurer of the association up to the time of his death. In politics he was a Democrat, and in all the relations of life proved himself a most loyal and honorable man, whose influence will be felt many years to come.

William K. Roy was graduated from the Union Free School No. 1, Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, in 1870, and in 1872 entered Cornell University, taking two courses, those of civil engineering and chemistry, and was graduated with high honors in the class of '76. During the Centennial at Philadelphia, in 1876, he was in charge of some of the chemical exhibits. Of late years he has been connected with his brothers in the drug business. Mr. Roy is a Democrat in his political belief, and has held a number of responsible offices. He was town clerk for two terms in the town of Poughkeepsie; was supervisor for one term in 1887; was clerk of the village board two years; and was made postmaster at Wappingers Falls in May, 1887. This position he held until July, 1892, when he resigned to become Index Clerk of the State Assembly at Albany, serving in that capacity for two years. On January 30, 1896, he was again appointed postmaster, and is now filling that office to the satisfaction of the public and with honor to himself; he has made many improvements in the arrangements and handling of the mails.

Mr. Roy has always taken much interest in everything pertaining to the growth and welfare of his community. He was one of those instrumental in building the bridge across the river at Wappingers Falls; was influential in getting the electric road built, and is a director in the company. He is also secretary of the board of park commissioners, and was a prominent factor in having the park legally located in the village. For the past twenty years he has been a member of the Democratic County Committee, and for ten years was one of the executive board, at present its secretary. He is one of the directors and a member of the executive committee of the Wappingers Falls Savings Bank, and is trustee and secretary of the board of the Grinnell Library in that village. No man is more closely identified with the best interests of the place, and none is held in higher esteem than Mr. Roy.

James S. Roy, the eldest brother of our subject, has efficiently managed the drug business since the death of his father, in 1867, and has been prominent in the public affairs of Wappingers Falls. He was secretary of the board of health, and chairman of the board of highway commissioners. Mr. Roy, after serving several terms as village trustee, was elected president of the village, and is now serving his seventh consecutive term as village president. The good roads of the town are a monument to his zeal in this direction; the purchase and embellishment of the beautiful village park was mainly effected through his efforts; he has also been treasurer of the village; is a trustee and first vice-president of the Wappingers Falls Savings Bank, and a member of its funding committee, and has held other minor offices.

These sons of a worthy father have followed in his footsteps, and none are more deserving of a place in this record of the county.

WILLARD W. HICKS. On the 11th of November, 1621, the ship "Fortune" arrived at Plymouth, Mass., from London. She followed the "Mayflower," bringing over the parts of families left behind by those who came in that famous vessel the year before. In the "Fortune" with this second body of Puritans came Robert Hicks, the ancestor of the family in America. He was a leather-dresser from Bermondsey street, Southwark, London. His father, James Hicks, was lineally descended from Elias Hicks, who was knighted by Edward the Black Prince on the battlefield of Poitiers, September 9, 1356, for bravery in capturing a set of colors from the French.

Margaret, the wife of Robert Hicks, and her children, came over in the ship "Ann," which arrived at Plymouth during the latter part of June, 1622. This family settled in Duxbury, Mass.; but two of the sons, John and Stephen, subsequently (about 1642) came to Long Island. In October, 1645, Gov. Kieft granted a patent to Thomas Farrington, John Hicks and others for the township of Flushing, Long Island. John Hicks seems to have taken a leading part in the affairs of the settlement, and was appointed at various times to fill the most important offices. His name, also that of his son Thomas, appears in connection with almost every public measure for many years.

Robert Hicks married (first) Elizabeth Morgan, and had the following children: Elizabeth, Thomas, John, Stephen. For his second wife he married Margaret Winslow, and had children, viz: Samuel, Ephraim, Lydia, Phoebe. His son, John Hicks, and the third child of his first marriage, married Rachel Starr, and had three children: Thomas, Hannah and Elizabeth. Their son, Thomas Hicks, married May Washburn, and had two children: Thomas and Jacob. He married, for his second wife Mary Doughty, and had the following children: Isaac, William, Stephen, John, Charles Benjamin,¹ Phebe, Charity, Mary and Elizabeth.

Jacob Hicks, the second child of the first union, married Hannah Morgan, and had the following children: Samuel, Stephen, Thomas:

Joseph, Jacob, Benjamin,² Elizabeth, John, Sarah and Hannah. Their son, Joseph Hicks, married (first) Elizabeth Desler, and had the following children: Mordecai, Thomas, Bernard, Elizabeth. For his second wife he married Catharine Filkins, and has the following children: Isaac, Benjamin,³ Catharine, John, Joseph, Abraham, Sarah, Samuel and Stephen.—Benjamin Hicks³ married Deborah Doty, and had the following children: Elias, Joseph, Benjamin,⁴ David, Amy, Elizabeth, Sarah, Deborah, and Annie.—Benjamin Hicks⁴ married Hannah Couse, and had the following children: Samuel, Ury, George, Annie, Edward, Asa, Zadiann, Perry, Elizabeth, Catharine, and Benjamin.⁵—Samuel Hicks married Eliza Ann Link, and had the following children: Emily, Willard W. (our subject), Esther, Jasper, Irving, and Samuel E.—Willard W. Hicks married Fannie H. Smith, daughter of Egbert Smith, a well-known citizen of Pine Plains, and has had two children: Iduma E. and Emma Z.

Our subject is one of the leading residents of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, and was born May 18, 1844, in the town of Milan, near Fayetteville. Until the age of eighteen he attended the district schools of that neighborhood, and then spent one term at the Little Nine Partners School at Millbrook. At nineteen he taught a term of four months in the Bartlett district, town of Milan, also a winter term in his home district, and the following year he spent nearly two terms as a student at Charlotteville, Schoharie county, to further prepare himself for the work of teaching. In this calling he was very successful, having natural talent and inclination for it, and he became known as one of the leading educators of the locality. He taught three successive terms at home, several years in the German district, two terms in the Carroll district, in the town of Stanford, and one in Mt. Pleasant district, but he has also given his attention to other pursuits. In the summers of 1865 and 1866 he was engaged in carpentering, and he has followed this trade intermittently since that time. Since 1873, the year of his marriage, he has owned and cultivated a farm of 133 acres in the western part of the town of Pine Plains, to which he added ninety-six acres more in 1883. He is quite extensively engaged as a dealer in sheep and cattle, Michigan sheep being his preference on account of their thrift, hardiness, quiet and orderly inclinations. From that State he has brought many car-loads to his locality, where at all times he finds a ready market. He is also engaged somewhat as an auctioneer, and has the credit of succeeding in securing first-class prices for goods which he sells. He says his motto is "Better wear out than rust out," and that he has no affinity with idleness or inactivity—"God helps him who helps himself."

Mr. Hicks is a director in the Farmers Mutual Insurance Company, of Milan, Pine Plains and Stanford townships. As a well-read man, versed in legal forms, he is often engaged by his neighbors to draw up contracts, leases, deeds, mortgages, wills, and other papers, and, as may well be supposed, he is a very busy man. Enterprising in private business he is no less so in public affairs; and, having in mind the difficulties with which he contended in gaining his education, he has been especially active in the interests of the local schools, serving as trustee for a number of years. On national questions he has always been a staunch supporter of the Democratic party, but in local matters he votes independently, choosing the best man. He has been town assessor for five years. He and his wife are leading members of the Christian Church of West Pine Plains, in which Mr. Hicks holds the office of deacon.

MRS. MARY J. (VELIE) TRAVER. The name of Velie is a reminder of the early days to any one familiar with the history of the development of Dutchess county, the ancestors of this respected Holland-Dutch family having been pioneer settlers in the town of Lagrange. Minard B. Velie, the grandfather of the lady whose name appears at the opening of this sketch, was born and educated in that town, and at an early age engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he continued throughout his life. He married Miss Mary Baldwin, and had seven children: Isaac, who married Pamelie Wheeler; Baltus, who remained single; Mary A., who never married; Richard, our subject's father; Susan (Mrs. Elias Tompkins); Carrie, the wife of Peter Pells; and Phoebe (Mrs. John Losee).

Richard Velie was born in the town of Lagrange, and after receiving an education in the common schools of that town, he engaged in farming, as had his father before him. His wife, Rebecca Traver, was a daughter of David and Catherine (Pells) Traver, who were prominent among the agricultural residents of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county. Of their two children, our subject was the elder. The younger, Phœbe R., was born and educated in the town of Unionvale, and has never married.

Mrs. Mary J. Traver was also a native of the town of Unionvale, and her education was obtained in the common schools of that locality. She married (first) Albert Ingraham, a farmer of the same locality. They had no children. By a second marriage, to Herbert L. Traver, also a farmer and well-known citizen of Unionvale, she has one son, Arthur E.

Another branch of the Velie family in this section traces its descent from William Velie, who lived and died in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, where his son, Baltus, was born February 19, 1785. The latter also passed his life in that town and died there May 25, 1871. His early years were spent upon his father's farm with the common-school advantages of that time, and later he learned the details of tanning and shoemaking at Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, but his main business throughout his active career was agriculture. He owned an excellent farm, upon which he built a comfortable residence and other buildings. He was a self-made man and a good citizen, taking a hearty interest in public questions; the Whig party received his support until the Republican organization was formed, when he became one of its steadfast adherents. He was married at Pleasant Valley to Miss Nancy Losee, a lady of French descent, who was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church. Ten of the fourteen children of this union have joined the silent majority, and their names with dates of birth and death are as follows: Simon, July 12, 1808—November 4, 1876; Hepsibeth, April 5, 1807—March 14, 1867; Egbert, December 12, 1809, died in childhood; Zacheus, March 12, 1811—June 29, 1885; Eliza Ann, March 21, 1813—July 15, 1849, (married John Pells); Catherine, June 4, 1815—November 16, 1851, (married Jacob Baker); Jacob O., February 26, 1817—1829; Mary Rebecca, August 26, 1819—August 2, 1869; Alonzo B., July 8, 1822—February 26, 1896; Isaac, January 5, 1825—October 16, 1829. Four of the family are still living: William Morris, December 31, 1826, resides on Main street, Poughkeepsie; William J., May 17, 1829; Susan Jeannette, March 29, 1831, is mentioned below, and George Edward, September 28, 1833, lives at Poughkeepsie.

Susan J. Velie was married January 28, 1857, to John Henry Brinkerhoff, who was born in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, in September, 1835, son of John H. Brinkerhoff, a prominent agriculturist residing in Dow Point. Mr. Brinkerhoff's boyhood was spent in his native town, and on learning the carpenter's trade he settled in business there, remaining until 1869, when he moved with his family to Lagrange, where they lived for several years. The only son, Clarence V., was educated at Leslie's private school at Poughkeepsie, and became a pharmacist in that city, first with Strickler & Swartz, and later with A. M. Doty. On January 28, 1891, he wedded Miss Stella Van Wyck, daughter of Abram C. Van Wyck, and granddaughter of James Van Wyck, of Unionvale. Two children were born of this union: George, March 11, 1892; and Frank Raymond, January 14, 1894.

JOHN REDMAN, an enterprising and prosperous business man of Fishkill-on-Hudson, is one of the leading plumbers of the county, and a member of the New York State Master Plumbers' Association, also of the National Plumbers' Association. His extensive establishment at Fishkill contains a show room fitted up with all the latest appliances for gas, steam, and hot water plumbing, and for arrangement and workmanship it will compare favorably with any in the United States.

Robert Redman, our subject's father, was a native of Bradford, Yorkshire, England, and followed the occupation of a plumber. He married Rhoda Jennings, who was a descendant on the maternal side of an old and well-known family, the Ogdens. To their union were born two children: Susanna, who married John Horrocks, and resided in Fishkill where she died in November, 1895; and John, our subject. The father died in 1842.

John Redman, our subject, was born in Bradford, Yorkshire, England, in 1839, and was baptized in Haworth Church by Charlotte Brontë's father. He was left fatherless at the age of three years, and received but little schooling, his attendance being limited to half-days from his ninth to his twelfth year, the other half of his time being spent in working in a factory. From twelve to fifteen he was employed full time in a woolen-factor; and then he began to learn the plumbing business, receiving seventy-five cents per week during his apprenticeship. He worked at his trade in different shops until 1870, when he came to America, and, in 1871, he opened a shop in Fishkill, which he carried on with gratifying success. In 1895 he built his present show room, with a workshop adjoining show room, that are considered models in construction, fitting and arrangement.

Joe Redman

In 1864 Mr. Redman married Miss Susan Taylor, daughter of John and Jemima Taylor. Their only daughter, Rhoda, married Dr. James Richard English, of Matteawan. The family are all members of the Episcopal Church, and take a leading part in the social life of the locality. Mr. Redman votes the Republican ticket, but is not an active political worker. He is interested in fraternal society work, and is a member of the K. of P. Our subject is the only Redman of his branch of the family living. In 1880 he made an extended tour throughout England, visiting among other places the scenes of his childhood. In 1881 his wife and daughter (the latter being but eight years of age) made a similar tour.

DR. JAMES RICHARD ENGLISH, our subject's son-in-law, one of the leading physicians and surgeons of Fishkill, was born August 27, 1865, at Constableville, Lewis Co., N. Y., the son of Dr. R. S. English and his wife Margaret (Gormully). He was the youngest of four children, the others being John Bernard, Gustavus Pierce, and Alice E. His academic education was obtained in the public schools of his native town, and after graduating from the high school he began the study of medicine at the Long Island College and Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y., from which he was graduated in 1892. He began the practice of his profession at Fishkill-on-Hudson, and has already established a large and lucrative business. In politics he is neutral. Socially he and his wife are prominent, and he is a member of the I. O. O. F., the R. A., and I. O. F., of the home lodge of which latter organization he is a physician.

GEORGE HUF CUT has been a leading and prominent citizen of Dover Plains, Dutchess county. His father, who was a lawyer and surrogate, practiced his profession at Dover Plains for many years; was also a politician of ability, and a leader in his party. He was honored with a number of town offices, and was a prominent worker in Masonic circles, taking a great interest in that order.

Our subject was born at Dover Plains, and in early life entered upon a mercantile career, engaging in that business for some years. Later he conducted the mill of his father in the town of Dover, but at the latter's death the plant was sold to a Mr. Reiner. He has been called upon to serve in several local offices, including that of assessor of his township. Socially, he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is affable and pleasant in manner, winning friends wherever he goes. The house in which the family lived for years was burned to the ground in March, 1897.

Mr. Hufcut was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Flinn, who was born and educated in New York City, and they have become the parents of two children: William M., and Sara B. Her father, John Flinn, was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and belonged to the nobility of that country, his father being a titled gentleman and one of the large land owners there. The son was highly educated in his native city, and had in his own right a large income after he had reached man's estate. Owing to his love of adventure, he with his valet and fortune, embarked for the United States without the knowledge of his family. He located in New York City, where he established himself in the crockery and glassware business on an extensive scale. This venture proved very successful, and after conducting the business for a number of years, he laid aside business cares, and lived a retired life. Mr. Flinn married Miss Sarah Powell, daughter of William Powell, a prominent and wealthy lawyer of England, and to them were born six children: Morris R., Charles B. and John I., all of whom died in infancy; Mary T., who became the wife of George Terry, of Boston, Mass.; Sarah, who died in infancy; and Jennie A., the estimable wife of our subject.

PETER V. W. MONTFORT, a leading agriculturist of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, is the owner of one of the choicest farms in that vicinity, a tract of 450 acres, which has been in the possession of his family for more than a century. He is a descendant of two of the oldest and most distinguished families in the county. On the paternal side, his great-great-grandfather, Peter Montfort, was a native of Holland, coming to America in Colonial times with three sons, one of whom located on Long Island, and the other in New Jersey. Our subject's great-grandfather, Peter Montfort, who about 1735 settled in Fishkill, Dutchess county, upon land of which the present homestead is a part (it being then known as the Verplank Patent), was born in 1711 and died in 1791. The farm consisted of 370 acres, and he built and occupied the stone house still standing. He had five children: Mary, who married Albert Montfort, from Long Island; Peter, who will presently be spoken of; Magdalene, who married Cornelius Van Wyck; Jacobus, married to Ruth Van Voorhis; and Jeanette, wife of Major Fort.

Peter Montfort, grandfather of our subject, was born December 14, 1760, on the homestead just referred to, and passed his entire business life as a farmer. At the age of sixteen he served in the Revolutionary war, and our subject has the musket which he carried at that time, and a fowling piece which in those days cost a hundred bushels of wheat, rated at $3 per bushel. For a short time after the close of that struggle grandfather Montfort lived near Harlem, where he married Susan Waldron. Returning home after his father's death to his half of the farm, he there built a residence on the site of the one now occupied by our subject, and which was burned in 1860, and he also added ninety acres to the farm. He died in 1824. His brother Jacobus lived in the original stone house until 1825; he had five sons: Cornelius, Elias, Peter J., James and Abraham.

Peter P. Montfort, our subject's father, was the only son of his parents, and was born at the old homestead November 10, 1795. After the death of Jacobus Montfort, his uncle, he bought the stone-house part of the farm. Agriculture was his principal occupation throughout his life; but he was also engaged for some time in boating and in mercantile business. He was a man of great force of character, active in local affairs as a member of the Whig party, and at his death, February 26, 1854, he was a member of the State Legislature. His wife, Maria Du Bois, to whom he was married November 26, 1817, was a native of Fishkill, born April 22, 1798. She was a daughter of Garret Du Bois, and a granddaughter of Christian Du Bois, both in their time leading residents of Fishkill, the family being descended from the old Huguenot stock which has been represented by so many able and prosperous citizens in Dutchess and Ulster counties. She died October 13, 1836, and of the family of four children our subject is the only survivor. Susan, born July 1, 1819, married George Brinkerhoff, and both died at an early age; Garret, the twin brother of our subject, died at the age of thirteen; and Hannah, born May 13, 1825, died in September, 1855.

The subject of our sketch, the second child of this union, was born January 19, 1821, and has always lived at the old farm. On December 27, 1843, he was united in marriage to Julia A. Stockholm, daughter of John C. Stockholm, a native of Dutchess county, and a prominent farmer of the town of Fishkill, and his wife, Eliza Underhill, who was from Eastchester, Westchester county. Mrs. Montfort died November 5, 1871, leaving seven children, all of whom are still living: John P. is a traveling man, and resides in New Paltz, Ulster county; Charles D. B. is a farmer in the town of Wappinger; Maria L. is at home; Eliza is the wife of Jeremiah Fowler, of Providence, R. I.; Meta married George White, of the town of Wappinger; Julia A. married Milo J. White, a lawyer, of Mt. Vernon, and Eugene is a farmer in the town of Wappinger.

Mr. Montfort's time has been mainly employed in the supervision of his farm, upon which he raises a variety of crops. He has always been prominent in local affairs, and although he has never sought political office is an influential member of the Republican party. The Montforts have always been zealous supporters of the Reformed Dutch Church, and their influence has been a helpful factor in every line of progress.

MRS. MARY LEE is the widow of Warren Lee, who, prior to his death at Dove Plains, Dutchess county, a few years ago, was one of the well-esteemed and earnest-hearted men of that village whose influence always count for social well-being and advancement in the community in which they live. He was unassuming in manner, but was called by his fellow-citizens to serve in various local offices among which were those of commissioner highways for three terms and collector for two terms.

Mr. Lee was a native of Connecticut, where he was born in 1820. His parents were William and Mahetable (Ward) Lee, who were descendants of New England people. Ward Lee was a boy, in his early "teens," when he left his native State and settled in the town of Dover, Dutchess county. He was the eldest of six children, as follows: Ward, Egbert, Jane, Louise, Emily and Emiline (twins). He was married at South Dover, November 7, 1848, to Miss Mary Cutter, who was born at Dover Furnace, and is the daughter of Calvin and Kesiah (Varney) Cutter, of American ancestry for generations. Four children were born to Ward and Mary (Cutter) Lee, namely: Adelia Ann, born July 14, 1849; Emily S., who was born July 1, 1850, married Alvin Maray, and has since died, her husband surviving; William, born November 17, 1851 (now deceased); and Angeline K., born January 26, 1853. By trade Mr. Lee was a carpenter, and he followed this calling through life. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party. He died August 12, 1888, aged sixty-eight years, and was buried at South Dover. Mrs. Mary Lee, his widow, survives him, and is now living at Dover Plains in a pleasant home which is her own property, and among friends whom she has known almost from her childhood.

MRS. MARY FLAGLER FOOTE, now a resident of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, spends a portion of the season at her residence at Green Haven, town of Beekman. The property owned by her is a portion of the large tract of land owned by her great-great-grandfather, Joshua Carman, who came from Long Island and settled here, being a large land owner and prominent in the early history of Dutchess county.

Her great-grandfather, Capt. Cornelius Van Wyck, married Sarah Carman, and lived at Hopewell, Dutchess county. He served with distinction in the Revolutionary war, and was killed in the battle of White Plains, October 31, 1776. Her other great-grandfather, Joseph Doughty, was born in England in 1744. He came to this country when a boy with his mother (then a widow), and settled on Long Island. His mother, for her second husband, married John Carman, and moved to Green Haven, town of Beekman. Joseph Doughty, married Psyche Wiltsie, of Fishkill, and paid £100 for the right to settle on a tract of land adjoining the Carman estate. He had the honor of entertaining Gen. La Fayette when on his travels through Beekman about the year 1824. Her grandfather, William Doughty, married a widow, Sarah Van Wyck Vanderburgh, and was a highly respected citizen of his time. The above are ancestors on her mother's side.

On her father's side, her grandfather, Zachariah Flagler, was born in the town of Beekman. His first wife was a Miss Wilkinson, by whom he had one daughter, Mary. His second wife, Catherine Collins, was a native of the town of Unionvale, and to them were born ten children: Collins, John, Zachariah, David, Franklin, Enoch, Philip, Shadrach, and George and Gilbert (twins). Religiously the family were members of the Society of Friends.

Gilbert Flagler, the father of Mrs. Foote, was also a native of the town of Beekman. He married Psyche Doughty, daughter of William Doughty, and after his marriage located on a farm near Green Haven. To them were born five children: Mary, Martha R., who is the widow of John Peters, and resides in Fishkill village, Dutchess county; Theodore V. W. (now deceased) married Helen Jones; Henry died unmarried; and Sarah died in infancy. Mr. Flagler was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, dying in that faith in 1873. His widow passed away in 1894 at the ripe old age of eight-six years. They had many warm friends, and were held in high esteem in the locality which was so long their home.

Mary Flagler was married September 10, 1851, from her home in the town of Beekman, to George Benton Foote, of New Haven, Conn. Mr. Foote was a merchant in New York City for a number of years, engaged in the importing of fine cloth. The latter part of his life was passed in the town of Beekman, where he died December 11, 1871. Two sons were born to them: Gilbert F. and George B., Jr.

Gilbert Flagler Foote married Clara Williams, of Poughkeepsie, December 5, 1893, and to them two children were born: Andrew Giraud, February 2, 1895; and Gilbert Flagler, Jr., September 1, 1896.

George Benton Foote, Jr., married Ida Williams, of Poughkeepsie, June 14, 1894, a sister of Clara Williams, and daughter of Orren

A. and Josephine Giraud Williams, both families being prominently known in Poughkeepsie society.

All of Mary Flagler Foote's ancestral families have been prominent in the history of Beekman and Dutchess county. Mrs. Foote merits and receives the esteem of all who know her, and is beloved by all with whom she comes in contact for her noble traits of character.

MRS. MARY H. ROSS, like many of the prominent and highly respected citizens of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, comes of an honored family that was early established in Connecticut. There her paternal grandfather, Josiah Hungerford, was born, on September 15, 1774, in the town of New Milford, Litchfield county. On the completion of his literary studies he began harness and saddle making, which he continued to follow through life. He married Miss Hannah Miles, who was born November 18, 1779, and to them was born a son, Abner G., the father of Mrs. Ross. The wife and mother died September 12, 1805, and Mr. Hungerford was again married, his second union being with Miss Mary Miles, a sister of his first wife; she was born August 19, 1786. His death occurred December 25, 1852, and that of his wife, Mary Miles Hungerford, March 5, 1829. They had two sons: (1) Averil, born February 14, 1808, in the town of New Milford, Litchfield county, married and had one child that died in infancy; his second wife bore the maiden name of Cornelia Demorest; his death occurred December 28, 1878, and that of his second wife, December 27, 1879. (2) Fred G., born October 18, 1812, married Miss Mary M. Freer, and they had one daughter, Mary Frances, who married George Neilson, a prominent lawyer of New York City, and died one year later; Fred G. died February 26, 1881.

Abner G. Hungerford, the father of Mrs. Ross, was also born in the town of New Milford, Litchfield Co., Conn., February 21, 1805, and in the district school near his home acquired his education. Learning the harness maker's trade, he followed that occupation during early life, but later turned his attention to farming. As early as 1830 he removed from Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, to a farm which he had purchased in the town of Dover. On May 7, 1828, he was joined in marriage with Miss Maria Sabin, born June 10, 1803, daughter of Jephtha and Anna Sabin. Her father was a harness maker of Brookfield, Conn. Jephtha Sabin was born January 5, 1770, and on March 17, 1794, married Anna Starr, who was born April 23, 1773; his death occurred June 26, 1838, and that of his wife January 24, 1860. The death of Abner G. Hungerford occurred October 4, 1892, and that of his wife, December 9, 1888.

Mrs. Ross, the only child of her parents, was born in the town of Dover, July 20, 1833. During her girlhood she attended the public schools of the locality, where she acquired a good education. She was united in marriage with Duncan Ross, whose birth occurred in the same township, March 8, 1827. In his native county he always followed farming and butchering, but at one time, for seven years, had charge of stables at the Union Stock yards, a Chicago. He departed this life September 23, 1883. In politics he was a Republican.

ALFRED E. HALL, one of the most valued and reliable citizens of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, purchased the Jacob Rundall farm, between Amenia and Wasic, in 1889, a most beautiful place, where he has since resided, and during the summer months he keeps boarders, easily accommodating twenty. Mr. Hall was born in Berkshire county, Mass., near Monterey, November 21, 1854, and for several generations the family have made their homes in that State. Luke Hall, his great-grandfather, emigrated from England to New London, Conn., but later became a resident of Marlboro, Mass. The grandfather, George Hall, was born at New Marlboro, and for a companion and helper on life's journey chose Miss Cynthia Fargo.

Their third son, William A. Hall, is the father of our subject, and is still living at Monterey, Mass. His educational privileges were such as the common schools afforded, and as a young man he worked at the carpenter's trade. However, he later turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and also speculated in timber. He is a devoted member of the Congregational Church, and in politics is a stalwart Republican, always supporting the candidates offered by that party. He was united in marriage with Miss Fannie E. Clark of Sheffield, Mass., and they became the pr-ents of three sons—Alfred E., William B. and Frank—and one daughter—Georgia A.

DUNCAN ROSS.

Until eighteen years of age Alfred E. Hall remained at home, attending the common schools of Monterey, and then became a student in the Connecticut Literary Institute, at Suffield, Conn., taking a three-years' course. The following two years he passed at home, and was then for the same length of time foreman of a farm at Great Barrington, Mass. Subsequently he worked on a farm on shares at Kent, Conn., for two years, whence he came to Dutchess county, and operated the farm of George W. Ketcham, at Dover Plains, for six years, since which time he has resided in his present place. In connection with the cultivation and improvement of his land, he also handles agricultural implements for D. M. Osborne & Co., in which he has built up a good trade.

At Monterey, in 1881, Mr. Hall was married to Miss Minnie V. Langdon, daughter of Chauncey D. Langdon, and they now have four children: Mary, Laura, Chauncey and William. On April 15, 1895, Mr. Hall received the appointment of county deputy of the patrons of Husbandry, and during the winter of 1895-6 he organized five granges in the county. Although his residence here is of comparatively short duration, he takes an active interest in the public affairs of the locality, and to all improvements of a substantial nature he gives a generous aid. Like his father, he also supports the Republican party, and his religious belief is a Presbyterian, holding membership in the Church at Amenia, of which he is an elder, and one of the trustees.

N. BULLIS. No country has afforded greater opportunities for the poor man than our own; it is, indeed, the poor man's country. Here, an industrious, frugal man has a chance to accumulate wealth. Many fail to do so, but the best of our population lay aside some of their earnings, and soon find themselves in the possession of a handsome property; among them is the gentleman whose name introduces this article. He is a native of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and now makes his home at Bangall.

His father, David Bullis, was the only child of Thomas Bullis, and always resided in the town of Stanford, where he engaged in farming. There his death occurred in 1845, at the age of fifty years. Politically he was identified with the Whig party. By his marriage with Deborah Reed he became the father of the following children: Thomas has now passed away; Jane, deceased, was the wife of Robert Hoffman; Peter, deceased, married Permelia Carroll; Julia is the wife of Edward Walters, of McIntyre, Dutchess county; John N. is next in order of birth; and George W., deceased, married Emma Denozell.

During his boyhood John N. Bullis attended the district schools of the town of Stanford, and as his parents both died when he was quite small, he was early thrown upon his own resources, being compelled to seek his own livelihood while still quite young. He worked by the month for various farmers, his first employer being Stephen G. Guernsey, Sr., and was thus engaged until seventeen years of age, when he began clerking in the store of Moses Denney, at Hull's Mills. At the end of eight months, however, he went to Stissing, where he conducted a store on shares for two years, and for the following seven years clerked for N. Halsted and G. G. Sharpenstein, at Bangall. Going to Poughkeepsie, he was there engaged in the spring-bed business with E. L. Bushnell for two years, and for the same length of time he was in the employ of Arnold Constable & Co., of New York City. Purchasing a store at Bangall, he conducted the same for seven years with good success, but at the end of that time sold out the stock and has since rented the building. He also purchased his present residence there.

On December 6, 1858, Mr. Bullis was married to Mary Husted, daughter of Henry D. Husted, of Washington Hollow, Dutchess county. Three children were born to them: Henry D., who died at the age of nine and a half years; May, who died at the age of four months; and John N. Mr. Bullis has now retired from the active labors of life, and is spending his later days in the ease and comfort to which he is justly entitled. Politically he affiliates with the Republican party.

ALBERT L. RIDER, the efficient and popular postmaster at Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and one of the most prominent citizens of that locality, was born July 11, 1842, at Westkill, Greene county.

The American branch of this family originated with three brothers who came from Holland and located in Connecticut, from whence some of their descendants came to New York State. Our subject's father, Lewis Rider, was a native of Schoharie county, born March 16, 1808. He married Celia La Ment, a lady of French descent, but a native of Westkill, where Mr. Rider engaged in the tanning business. In 1844 he moved to Poland, Herkimer county, and a few years later went to Florence, Oneida county, continuing the same business, which he followed in all forty-five years. In 1871 he and his wife came to Rhinebeck, and for some years he was engaged in contracting in partnership with a son-in-law, John O'Brien, and contracted the R. & C. R. R., and many miles of the D. & H. canal, but he afterward retired from active business and died November 15, 1896, at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. He held a prominent place in every community in which he was known, and represented the town of Florence in the board of supervisors of Oneida county for many years, and in 1851 he was elected from Florence (Third Assembly District), to the Assembly on the Democratic ticket. Of six children only two are now living. George has been for some years employed in developing his father's mining interests in California, but is now at home; Adelbert died at the age of four years; Albert L. is the subject of our sketch; Sarah married John O'Brien, mentioned above, and died in 1886; John, Lucy and Elijah died in infancy.

Albert L. Rider received his early education in the academy at Mexico, Otsego county, and the Walworth Commercial College, at Rome, N. Y., and then entered the tanning business with his father, carrying it on until 1875; in 1867-1868 was supervisor from Florence, Oneida county, when he came to Rhinebeck. After a short time he went to Kingston as agent of the American Express Co.; but he soon became interested in organizing a company to build the "Grand Hotel" in the Catskill Mountains, and was engaged for two years in its construction. He then began to contract for different important enterprises, among which may be noted especially the Catskill to Burden Iron Mine railroad, Utica & Binghampton and several others; the dredging of a part of the D. & H. canal, the building of one and one-half miles of aqueduct at Yonkers, and the Sodam dam at Brewsters, which was the largest of its kind in the country at the time.

In 1895 he returned to Rhinebeck to reside, and he has since identified himself with the best interests of the town. He was married February 9, 1864, to Cynthia Comstock, a daughter of Abner Comstock, a leading farmer of Williamstown, Oswego county. Her family is of English origin, the first of the American line settling in Connecticut, and among their descendants are some of the most prominent residents of New York City. Two children were born of this union: Sarah Mosella and Celia Alberta, both at home.

Mr. Rider is an influential counsellor in the Democratic party in his vicinity, and is active in all local affairs lending his aid to any beneficial measure. In 1867-68 he was supervisor from Florence, Oneida county. On May 1, 1894, he was installed as postmaster of his town and has since discharged the duties of the office with signal success.

CHARLES C. GARDNER, now one of the most progressive, energetic and successful farmers of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, is a native of Connecticut, where the family was founded at an early day. Thomas Gardner, his grandfather, was born in New Fairfield, Fairfield Co., Conn., and after finishing his literary course in the common school of that locality, he learned the tanner's trade which he followed throughout life. He married Miss Johanna Pepper, and to them were born eight children: Seth, who married Poll Bullard; Michael, who married Anna Davis Humphrey, who married Ruth Morris; Thomas, who married Jane Morris; Lois, who married Allen Joyce; Zuba, who married Francis Sturges; Ann, who married Benjamin Welman; and Hannah, who died in infancy. After the death of his first wife, Thomas Gardner wedded Hannah Chase, daughter of Gideon Chase, and they had three children: Gideon, who died when young; Franklin, who married Christina Eggleston; and Mary, who married Milan Steddel.

Michael Gardner (the father of our subject) who passed away May 16, 1884, at the age of seventy years, was born in the town of New Fairfield, Fairfield Co., Conn., where he attended the common schools and was reared on farm life. The first land which he owned was in the town of Sherman, that county, where he made his home for twenty-five years, at hen purchased a farm in South Dover, Dutchess county. During the old training days he served as a drummer in the militia.

On October 15, 1837, he married Miss Anna Davis, whose grandfather, Stephen Davis, was a native of England, whence at an early day he came to New Fairfield, Conn., where he engaged in farming. He married Miss Hannah Leach, and to them were born eight children: William, who married Sallie Quimby; Daniel, the father of Mrs. Gardner; Paul, who married Miss Morehouse; Lucy, who married Holman Marsh; Rilla, who married Eli Brush; and three who died when young. Daniel Davis was born May 6, 1797, in New Fairfield, was there educated and engaged in farming. His death occurred February 5, 1835. He had married Miss Mermelia Lodge, who was born January 16, 1797, and died October 23, 1887, when over ninety years of age. To them were born four children, Mrs. Gardner being the eldest. The others are as follows: Miner, who was born in Connecticut, engaged in farming, and married Miss Mary Osborn, by whom he had three sons—Stephen, who died at the age of fourteen years; Charles and Marshall. Julia, also born in Connecticut, married Daniel Whaley, and had three children—Daniel and Leander, who died in infancy; and Gertrude, who married Theodore Carter. Flora, born in Connecticut, married George Abbot, and had six children—Mermelia, who died in infancy; Emeline, who married Thomas Hoyt; Henry, who married Laura De Camp; Julia, who married John Allop; Hannah, who married Myron Knapp; and Stephen, who married Cora Roberts.

To the parents of our subject were born five children: (1) Edward D., born in 1842, was educated in the public schools, and learned the trade of tinsmith, at which he worked during the greater part of his life. Specially, he was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He married Miss Ecta Brewer, and, as they had no children of their own, adopted two sons, Howard and Taylor Gardner. He died very suddenly on the 21st of November, 1893. (2) George K. was born in 1845, at Sherman, Conn., where he acquired his education, and is now following farming in the West. He wedded Miss Mary Wilbur, of Schenectady, N. Y., and they have two children—Eliza, who was born May 1, 1879, and died at the age of five years; and Nellie C., born November 14, 1885. (3)

Charles C., subject of this review, is next in order of birth. (4) Martha, born at Sherman, Conn., in 1840, married William F. Wildman, a farmer of Brookfield, Conn., and had two children—Carrie Bell, who was born June 8, 1868, and married Charles Jackson, but died at the age of twenty years; and Ray Clifford, born March 23, 1882. (5) Lydia, born in 1843, married Stephen A. Barnum, a carriage trimmer of New Fairfield, Conn., and they had eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows—Effie Arminta, March 4, 1862; Charles E., November 21, 1863; Anna E., November 14, 1865; Emma P., April 1, 1868; Mary J., February 5, 1870; Julia G., March 5, 1872; Lottie M., May 17, 1874; Hattie E., February 5, 1876; Stephen D., September 18, 1879; Grace L., May 1, 1882; and Kittie M., September 21, 1883.

Charles C. Gardner was born in the town of Sherman, Fairfield Co., Conn., in 1847, and during his boyhood and youth he pursued his studies in the common schools of his native place. As a life work he chose the occupation of farming, which he has always followed very successfully. He has served as collector of the town and on the board of excise of the town of Dover, and has held other minor offices. His political support is always given the Republican party, and, socially, he holds membership with Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M. He has made many friends since coming to the county, and has the highest regard of all who know him. He was united in marriage with Miss Kate Dennis, and they have one son, Chester C., born September 3, 1883.

Robert Dennis, the grandfather of Mrs. Gardner, was a native of the town of Union Vale, Dutchess county, where on reaching maturity he followed farming and married a Miss Rozell. Mrs. Gardner's father, Lewis Dennis, was born in the same township, in 1837, was there educated and also engaged in farming. He wedded Miss Mary Stillwell, of Union Vale, and they became the parents of five children: George married Ida Sweet, by whom he has two children—Mary and Sarah; Royal married Kate Oliver; Phœbe married Isaac Vermilyea, by whom she has three children—Irving, Grace and Arthur; Nathaniel married Angeline Van Scay, by whom he has five children—George, Mary, Emma, Lewis and Edna; and Kate, the wife of our subject, completes the family.

MISS MARGARET B. MONAHAN. It is said that in the Hebrew language there is no word which corresponds to our word "charity", but that a term is used instead which signifies justice. In this distinction, with its deep lessons, the philosopher may see one reason, if not the reason, for the close union and general prosperity of that wonderful race. With such an idea of helpfulness, a Hebrew who sees another in need says to himself, "There is something wrong that this my brother, my sister, should be in want in this beautiful world. It is my duty to right this injustice as far as I can, and so help to establish that order of things which will make such a deplorable evil no longer possible." And so he does not carelessly deal out a few dimes or dollars in self-righteous satisfaction, and dismiss the matter from his mind; but he interests himself in the case as if it were his own, devoting his wisdom, his experience, and influence to the task, and gives that friendly, practical assistance which he would wish for were he in the same plight.

What a different world this would be if such a conception of our duties to each other were to prevail! Here and there we see instances of it, and their quiet but effective work contrasts nobly with that of some of our loudly-advertised charities although their beneficent influences may attract little or no attention.

Miss Margaret B. Monahan, whose mind, prompted by the kindly impulses of her charitable nature, originated the plan of giving a cultured rest to the weary working-girl, was born in New York City, the daughter of Thomas and Mary A. (Beers) Monahan, both of whom were natives of the same city. She was educated at a private school.

John Monahan, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Banbridge, in the linen district of Ireland, and was there married to Miss Mary Campbell, also a native of that place, and they early came to this country. He had received a good education in the "Emerald Isle," and on arriving in New York taught school for a time. Several years later he moved to English Neighborhood, N. J., now called Fairview, where he engaged in farming, and where, also, his death occurred. To him and his wife were born the following children: Arthur, Hugh, Thomas, all three deceased; William (retired), now living in Brooklyn; Catherine, deceased, unmarried; and John, a retired merchant of New York, never married.

Thomas Monahan was born in New York City August 27, 1813. When he was fifteen years of age he began to fight the battle of life alone, by entering the employ of Cyreneus Beers, a commission merchant of New York City. In this place he remained ten years, or until 1838, when he started out in the same business for himself. On March 15, 1848, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary A. Beers, one of the thirteen children of his former employer. On her mother's side she was a descendant of an old Dutch family, Van Antwerp, well known in the early days of the Dutch colonies. Her father was a native of Newtown, Conn., coming to New York when quite young, and by industry laying the foundation of the fortune that made him one of the foremost business men of his day in New York.

Thomas Monahan continued in the commission business until 1858, when his natural abilities as a financier were publicly recognized by his election to the presidency of the Fulton National Bank, New York City, which position he held until his death, May 13, 1886, followed November 28, 1890, by his faithful and devoted wife. The union of this worthy couple was graced by two children—one whom died in infancy, and Margaret B. M. Monahan was the architect of his own fortune accumulating his property by slow and conservative methods rather than by speculation. He was a man of quiet, retiring disposition, but ever ready to aid in anything for the general good of the community. In early days he was a member of the old Volunteer Fire Department, of New York, and was one of those who fought the great fire of 1835. He united with no Church, but his wife belonged to the Duane Street Presbyterian Church, now Dr. Johnson Hall's.

After Mr. Monahan's death, his wife and daughter continued to be residents of New York City until 1890. At that time they purchased a farm at Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, intending to make it their summer home, but after Mrs. Monahan's death, in the following November, her daughter decided to live there permanently.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Monahan were much interested in the life of working girls in New York, and were in cordial sympathy with their daughter's work among them; so, when in June, 1893, Miss Monahan rented a small, little, century-old cottage near her own place.

Thos Monahan
11

Broadfields, and opened it to a small party of working girls from New York, it was but the carrying out of long-talked-of, and much-cherished, plans. The invigorating air, the charming views of hill and valley and open skies, the drives and picnics, the refinements of that delightful home, and, above all, the cordial friendship of their hostess, were a revelation to these over-worked and under-paid girls whose lives were clouded by the experiences of the dreary tenement houses and noisy workshop. Heroic in spirit these girls are, working uncomplainingly year in and year out, many of them supporting some helpless relative, and who can estimate the benefit that this bright experience gave them? The good work thus begun could not be abandoned by one who had the heart to begin it at all. The house rented was the summer residence of Mrs. E. M. Scott, a well-known New York artist, who was then abroad; but, as she intended to occupy it on her return, other quarters had to be provided. A house was, therefore, built for the exclusive use of the girls; and every summer "Hill Hope", as it is called, holds group after group who come to stay two weeks or more and then return to their weary routine. The invitations have thus far been extended through the New York City Mission; but all the expenses connected with the outing are met by the hostess, except the railroad fares, which are paid by the Tribune Fresh Air Fund at the City Mission. The guests at Hill Hope write their names in the visitors' book, with their occupations—a strange and motley list, including the making of fishing tackle, hat frames, rubber coats, perfumes, casket lining, dresses and underwear, and embroidery, polishing jewelry, filling salt bags, washing (by a girl of fourteen), barbing button-holes, ten thousand a day. One girl stirs, constantly, a steaming cauldron at a wholesale chemist's, watching lest it boil up and explode. "It did twice last year," said the girl, "and hurt a lot of people, but that." She added, "was before I came."

There is no matron at Hill Hope; the "house mother," as the girls love to call her, is an experienced trained nurse, and associated with her is some younger lady, who, being free from household responsibilities, has leisure to devote herself to the girls, and her constant though unobtrusive presence among them does away with the most objectionable feature of the ordinary vacation home. The King's daughters, of Quaker Hill, are more than kind to their sisters, taking them into their hearts as well as their Circle.

About eighty girls are usually entertained, in all, and many more such homes could be filled with those who are equally needy. Miss Monahan has plans, or rather hopes, for the enlargement of the work, in time, to include industrial training. Perhaps a better idea cannot be given of the present scope of the enterprise than by some extracts from a report made in 1893:

Beautiful for situation is Hill Hope. Eight hundred feet above the Harlem Valley, and 1,500 feet above sea level, it stands facing the sunset, with the beauty of the Shawangunk Mountains before it and the lovely fertile valley at its feet. A good garden supplies fresh vegetables and berries, while the Jersey milk, eggs, butter and home-cured hams come from Broadfields, the farm of which Hill Hope is an offshoot.

Over the ninety acres of this farm, including a bit of woodland divided by a pebbly brook, the girls have free range to come and go as they please. During haying season the fields are alive with girls; they run after the mower, toss the hay, ride the ropes, and come home on the loads of fragrant hay, driving the horses and chattering to "Chris" in his native German.

The daily routine at Hill Hope is very simple. An hour each morning is devoted to care of rooms and other housework, and arranging flowers for the table; half an hour at noon, the same at night. Every Saturday a thorough cleansing of rooms takes place, in anticipation of the incoming party of girls in the afternoon; this completes the work required. Family worship morning and evening; and who among the girls but will recall the pleasant little talks and the prayers offered at this time? For evenings and rainy days there are books and music, games, quiet and noisy, without end, with croquet, bean-bags, etc., and hammocks and lounging chairs for the long summer evenings. They enjoy even the chill rainy days, because they offer an excuse for a wood fire in the fireplace in the dining room. An occasional candy-pull, also, enlivens the wet days. Many of these girls have never been in the country before; very many see cows milked and horses groomed for the first time; and the hay-scented barn, at milking time, with the long rows of soft-eyed Jersey cattle, and the farmer and his assistants answering questions, is an inexhaustible fund of amusement. Each set walks to the old Quaker Meeting House, a relic of ante-Revolutionary days, and listens to the thrilling stories of events which happened "on the spot;" and they often walk to the post office, where a gentle Quaker lady and her daughter entertain them, bringing out Quaker bonnets many years old, and relating their history.

Then there are picnic days, when "Chris" and the horses arrive early, and all are off for a drive through shady woods to the lake, a long day of boating, fishing and lunching in the woods, and at sunset a drive home "over the hills." Through the kindness of a gentleman, whose lovely home crowns the hill, the freedom of the lake was one year extended to Hill Hope; boats, fishing tackle, bathing suits, ice, lemonade, etc., being freely tendered to the girls at any time. Through the kindness of another gentleman from a distance, an outing fund was provided, so the girls might have driving when the home teams were not available. A lady has devoted many afternoons and evenings to our girls, reading and walking with them, taking tea in the woods, and making barn picnics for them. Many of the summer residents have shown thoughtful kindness by sending in quantities of fresh vegetables; and, once, the girls were invited to one of the finest gardens in the place to pull all the flowers they wished. Said one pallid, sickly-looking girl: "I never saw a sweet pea growing before." She and her companions gathered almost a bushel that morning, and in the afternoon assisted the King's Daughters Circle to arrange them to send to the New York Flower Mission.

Another set were invited by the manager of the "Dutcher House," in Pawling, to hear the band play. After a drive of six miles and an hour spent in rambling through the hotel grounds, they were served with ices in the music room.

One lovely September afternoon another set was asked by a lady, owner of a beautiful summer residence, to take tea at her home, and there charmingly entertained for two hours; after which they went, also by invitation, to walk through the garden and grounds of the gentleman who gave them the use of the lake, and whose wife has taught the successive parties of girls faithfully in the Sunday-school all summer, winning the heart of every one of them by her sweet graciousness of manner and her earnest teachings. Who can estimate the influence of this simple, kindly hospitality and friendliness upon the toilsome, cramped lives of our poor girls, except, indeed, He who spoke the "Inasmuch"?

GEORGE H. CRAMER, the proprietor of a well-known meat market at Red Hook, Dutchess county, is a representative of several of the oldest families of the vicinity. His ancestors on the paternal side settled here at an early date and bought land which succeeding generations cultivated. His grandfather, George Cramer, married Miss Allendorf, of Red Hook, and had seven children: Frederick, George, Henry A., Gettie, Lydia, Caroline and Bailey.

Henry A. Cramer, our subject's father, was born in 1804, was educated in the schools of Red Hook, and, like his forefathers, became a farmer. He married Miss Catherine Waldorph, and to their union were born the following children: Balinda A., in 1827; John V. R., in 1830; George H., in 1834; James A., in 1836; and William C., in 1845. The mother died in 1895, at the age of eighty-three years; the father in 1880. Our subject's mother was a descendant of another pioneer family which has taken a prominent part in the history of that locality. The old house, which has been the home of the family for generations, is still standing, a landmark which is looked upon with interest at this day. Mrs. Cramer's father, John Waldorph, was an influential man of his time. He succeeded to the fertile acres which composed the family estate, and early in life married Miss Regina Benner, a daughter of Peter Benner, a leading farmer of Red Hook. Seven children were born of this union: William, John, Christopher, David, Maria, Catherine and Elizabeth.

George H. Cramer, our subject, attended the schools of his native place during his youth, and assisted his father upon the farm. He was married in October, 1862, to Miss Sarah C. Allendorf, a daughter of Philip Allendorf, a well-known resident of Red Hook, and one child blessed this union: Emma A., born October 30, 1866, who married Dr. William E. Traver, a promising young dentist of Red Hook. In 1876 Mr. Cramer gave up agricultural pursuits to engage in the meat trade in partnership with Philip Stickel. A year later, a brother-in-law, P. A. Allendorf, succeeded Mr. Stickel, but three years afterward he died and Clarence Shook took his interest, continuing for ten years, when C. N. Hicks, then an employe of the firm, purchased his share. Two years afterward Mr. Cramer bought out Mr. Hicks and has since conducted the business in his own name, his energy and fine business ability assuring his continued success.

WILLIAM A. SHOOK, of "Ardmore" farm, the well-known horticulturist and dairyman, whose large and admirably-conducted farm near Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, is considered a model of its kind, one of the most progressive citizens of the county.

His family has been prominent in the vicinity of Red Hook, Dutchess county, for several generations, and many of the name still reside there, among them being Sherida Shook, a second cousin of our subject.

John Shook, our subject's grandfather, native of Red Hook, was a leading agriculturist in his day, and an influential Democrat. He married Miss Nellie Shoemaker, and they reared a family of ten children, as follows: Christina, Maria, Helen, Cornelia, Aaron, Archibald, John, Walter, Alexander and Catherine. The parents were both members of the Lutheran Church. Aaron Shook, the father of our subject, grew to manhood at the old homestead, and married Miss Catherine Cramer, a descendant of an old Holland family, a daughter of Frederick Cramer, a leading carpenter of Red Hook. They settled on a farm there, and seven children were born to them: Lucetta, now the widow of Sylvester Teator, a farmer; Cornelia, the wife of Charles Schryver, a harness maker by trade; Helen, who married Robert W. Lewis, a farmer; William A., our subject; Gordon L., a farmer by occupation (now deceased); Lydia E., who is at home; and Frederick, a resident of Rhinebeck. Aaron Shook died at the old home in 1884, his wife some five years later. He was an active worker in local affairs, and in the Democratic party, and held the offices of collector and poor master.

William A. Shook, our subject, was born April 24, 1837, and spent his early years at the old homestead. In 1862 he married Miss Sarah D. Stickle, a daughter of Stephen P. Stickle, and granddaughter of Halley Stickle, both of whom were natives of Columbia county, N. Y. Her mother, Elizabeth (Couse) Stickle, was also born in that county, and both families traced their lineage to early Holland-Dutch settlers. Mr. and Mrs. Shook made their first home upon a farm in Red Hook, but in 1889 they moved to their present home, "Ardmore" farm, a fine estate of 400 acres. Since that time Mr. Shook has made many improvements. His specialties are fruit, bottled milk and cream, and garden produce, and he has about fifty cows, mostly Jerseys, besides other cattle. Among his extensive orchards there are 4,000 peach trees.

Mr. and Mrs. Shook have three sons: Frank B., manager of "Ardmore" farm, who married Miss Louise R. Hendricks; Edgar A., who married Miss Mary Scofield, and lives in the village of Fishkill; and Alfred E., at home.

ROBERT M. GREENE, a prominent horticulturist of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born December 23, 1827, in the town of Milan. His family is of English extraction, and the first to come to America were Quakers in religious faith, and settled at an early period in Rhode Island—a natural refuge of the persecuted for conscience sake. His grandfather, Tobias Greene, was a native of that State, and passed his life there.

John R. Greene, our subject's father, was born near Providence, R. I., April 16, 1788, and in early manhood came to Dutchess county, where he married Sabrina Martin, a lady of English descent, born April 8, 1793, a daughter of George Martin, a leading farmer of the town of Milan. After his marriage he settled upon a farm in the same town, where he remained a number of years, removing later to a farm in the town of Rhinebeck. He was a Democrat of the old-fashioned sort, and he and his wife belonged to the Christian Church, and were among the leaders in their vicinity in many of the progressive movements of their time. They had thirteen children: Mahala, who married (first) Mr. Hicks, and (second) Mr. Platt; Sarah J., the wife of Peter Welch, a farmer; Emeline, who married William C. Rikert, a butcher; Margaret A., the wife of Edward Knickerbocker, of Albany, who was, in early life, a teacher, but later on was a lumberman; Martin T., a retired merchant, of Kane county, Ill.; George N., who died in childhood; John, who was a farmer in the town of Clinton; Elizabeth, who married Andrew J. Fish, a retired mechanic, in Iowa; Robert M., our subject; Theron, who died in infancy; Martha, who married (first) Mr. H. Gray, and (later) Mr. Foster, of Hiawatha, Kans.; Walter N. (deceased), a lumber merchant at Burlington, Vt.; and Edmund, a wagon maker in the State of Washington. The father of this family died in 1867, his wife July 2, 1882.

The subject of our sketch was seven years of age when he came with his parents to his present home, where he has now lived for sixty-two years. He was married November 5, 1851, to Ann Eliza Vail, a native of the town of Stanford, born April 10, 1829, and a daughter of Aaron Vail, a leading farmer there. They have had seven children: Evelyn, the wife of H. J. Lown, a farmer of Rhinebeck; Alice; Bertha; Hubert, a resident of the same township, and married to Miss Susie Harris; Delbert, who married Bertha V. L'Hommedieu; Fanny; and Anabel, who married Reuben F. L'Hommedieu November 25, 1896.

Mr. Greene's farm comprises 138 acres devoted to fruit raising, in which he has made a marked success. In politics he is a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but he takes no active share in political work.

BENJAMIN H. FRY, a wide-awake, energetic and progressive business man of Amenia, Dutchess county, was born in that village April 2, 1851. His father, Simeon Fry, was a native of Winchendon, Mass., born in 1817, and on reaching manhood was married to Miss Phebe Harris, of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, whose death occurred in 1852. In 1846 the father established the tin and stove business in Amenia, which he successfully conducted until 1870, when the management was turned over to our subject, who ten years later, on the death of his father, assumed full control of the business. Politically, he was first a Whig, and later supported the Republican party, while socially he was identified with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M.

Mr. Fry, of this sketch, was an only child, and his boyhood and youth were spent in attendance at the district schools and the Amenia Seminary, where he completed his literary course. At the age of seventeen he left the schoolroom to learn the tinner's trade with his father. In February, 1876, he was married in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, the lady of his choice being Miss Ida B. Warner, daughter of Frederick Warner, and to them have been born four children: Clara, Louie, Helen, and Florence.

The Amenia Foundry was established by Mr. Fry in 1890 for the manufacture of general castings, making a specialty of sash weights, since which time the foundry has been in continuous operation, producing 1,500 tons of castings per year. As a manufactory of sash weights it ranks as one of the best in the country.

In connection with the foundry, Mr. Fry also has the largest and best-equipped tin and stove store on the line of the Harlem railroad. There a specialty is made of the manufacture of copper wash boilers, making 7,000 a year, for which he has a large wholesale trade throughout the Eastern States as far north as Portland, Maine. He employs forty men and eight teams, with a pay-roll of $1,500 per month. Although one of the infant industries of the county, it seeks not the protection of a high protective tariff, but owes its success to the untiring perseverance and able management of Mr. Fry. The Amenia Foundry is one of the few enterprises which furnish the life and prosperity of the village of Amenia. In 1895 our subject established a similar foundry at Waterbury, Conn., in connection with Julius Benedict, one of the oldest manufacturers of sash weights in this country, and they there employ from twenty to thirty men.

The different industries with which Mr. Fry has been connected have been crowned with success. Many of the men employed in the foundry when started are there at the present time, some of them having been with Mr. Fry for a quarter of a century, which fact speaks well for the judgment of the employer and the capabilities of the employes. From the time of the establishment of the business, in 1846, up to the present time, a period of fifty years, a Saturday pay-day has never been missed, at which time the men find the cashier as free to give as they to receive. The fact that Mr. Fry is at the head is a guarantee for the prosperity and success of any enterprise, and we take pleasure in expressing our admiration for his remarkable business ability.

Socially, Mr. Fry affiliates with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., of which he has been master, and is also connected with Poughkeepsie Chapter, Council and Commandery, and Mecca Temple of Mystic Shrine in New York City. He is president of the Amenia Water Company, of which he is one-third owner.

ALBERT W. CORBIN (deceased). On the 4th of August, 1893, there passed away at his home, in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, the subject of this sketch, whose life of quiet and consistent usefulness had endeared him to a large circle of friends. Although by choice he followed the peaceful life of agriculture, he took a helpful part in the various local enterprises which marked the social, religious and educational advance of the community, and his sympathies were always given to the side of progress.

Born in Patterson, Putnam Co., N. Y. Mr. Corbin was reared in Dutchess county, and as he reached manhood's estate he identified himself completely with the interests of this locality. His family was already well known here, his grandfather, Jabez Corbin, having come to the town of Pawling in the latter part of the last century, from Long Island, where the first ancestor of the American branch had settled at an early period on his arrival from England. Jabez Corbin probably located at Quaker Hill. He married Lucy Cheeseman, and reared a family of eight children—Isaac, our subject's father; William, a blacksmith at Johnsville; George, a carpenter at Sherman, Conn.; Thomas, who lived near Fishkill; Benjamin, farmer in Pennsylvania; Tallman, who also went to Pennsylvania; Lawrence, a resident of Putnam county; and Sarah, who married Harry Case, of Matteawan.

Isaac Corbin was born at Quaker Hill November 10, 1790, and in early manhood lived for a time at Patterson, but in 1823 returned to his native county and establish his home in the village of Pawling, in the house occupied later by James Ferris. He was a blacksmith by trade, his shop being located just south of the Baptist church, and his industry and successful management gained for him a fine competence. At one time he owned all that portion of the village site which lies west of the railroad. He wielded great influence in local affairs, and was a strong supporter of the Democratic party. His wife, Martha (Haynes), was born January 8, 1796, a daughter of Archibald Haynes, a well-known resident of Patterson. They had four children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Jane, February 17, 1817, married John Ferris; Emeline, October 8, 1819, married Sheldon Haynes; Albert W., August 27, 1821; and Helen M., December 11, 1825, married Henry W. Wright, of Beekman, and is now the only surviving member of the family. The father died February 10, 1878, the mother on October 28, 1882.

Albert W. Corbin

Albert W. Corbin attended the district schools of the town of Pawling, and a select school at Quaker Hill conducted by Serenus Jones; but although his advantages were the best which the time and the locality afforded, he was in a large degree self-educated, his reading in later years being unusually broad in scope, history being his favorite study. He learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, but did not follow it, preferring agriculture. He began by working a farm east of the village, in shares, and gradually acquired large tracts of farming land, among them the Howland farm, upon which he made his home, the Stockholm farm, the Cook farm, and the one hereon Mrs. Corbin now resides, making him one of the most extensive real-estate holders in the town. He also at one time owned the ore bed at the top of the mountain, and was a stockholder in the lower ore bed, of which he was superintendent for some years. He was an excellent business man, cautious, yet enterprising, and of unquestioned integrity, and his advice was asked and followed in many important enterprises. He was one of the original incorporators of the Savings Bank at Pawling, of which institution he held the office of trustee until the time of his death; and he was often called upon to assist in the settlement of estates. Possessing much public spirit, he took a generous interest in local affairs, and was a leader in the Republican organization of his town, serving for several terms as assessor, and for five terms in succession as township supervisor.

In 1842 Mr. Corbin married Miss Julia A. Beardsley, a lady of English descent, and the daughter of Lewis Beardsley, a prominent resident of New Fairfield, Conn. Two children came of this union, viz.: Isaac L., born October 5, 1849; and Anna E., born January 12, 1851, now the wife of Edwin B. Dodge, a leading citizen of Pawling. Lewis Beardsley, father of Mrs. Corbin, was born January 17, 1798, in New Fairfield, Conn., and November 10, 1817, married Paulina Barnum, by whom he had five children: (1) Eliza married William H. Wright, and had nine children: William H., John L., Thomas E., George W., Harriet E., Paulina, Albert W., Daniel B., and Albert D.; (2) Julia A. (Mrs. Corbin) comes next; (3) Daniel H. married Mary Lindley, and had three children: Huldah A., Alice and Lewis D.; (4) Huldah deceased when eighteen; (5) Paulina married Orris Haynes, and had two children: Lewis I., and Mary (deceased.) The mother of this family died October 7, 1832, and February 17, 1833, Mr. Beardsley wedded Miss Harriet Barnum (a sister of his first wife), and one child was born to them, named Hannah; her mother died in 1886. Mr. Beardsley passed from earth April 24, 1843, a member of the Presbyterian Church. By occupation Mr. Beardsley in his younger days was a farmer, later a speculator and merchant for some ten years, also bought and sold cattle.

Edwin B. Dodge, son-in-law of Mrs. Corbin, was born August 18, 1851, in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, a son of John B. and Julia (Allen) Dodge, farming people, the other children in the family being Charles S., Priscilla F. and Ida A. The father of these died in 1861; the mother is yet living. Edwin was married February 12, 1874, and they had two children: Essie A., born September 2, 1876, died September 24, 1877; and Albert E., born November 11, 1878, at present holding a lucrative position in the general passenger agent's office New York Central & Hudson River R. R., city.

Edwin B. Dodge has served as collector of taxes, commissioner of public works, elected twice supervisor from Pawling, was nominated for member of Assembly in the First district of Dutchess county, but declined the nomination; is also a composer of religious, comic, and sentimental music.

Isaac L. Corbin, eldest child of Albert W. and Julia A. Corbin, married Jennie Sherman, June 14, 1871, and three children came of this union: Albert I., born November 6, 1872; Annie Maud, February 12, 1875, died April 23, 1875; Charles L., born March 3, 1876. The mother of these children died May 2, 1882, and Isaac L., in June, 1883, married for his second wife Mary F. Allison, of Canada. The children by this marriage are six in number: Willie A., born April 4, 1884; Frank B., born September 11, 1885; Cecil I., born June 12, 1887; Ethel B., born May 11, 1889; Lewis D., born April 21, 1891; Clement W., born April 27, 1896.

I. L. Corbin has large farming interests in Pawling, has always confined himself to agricultural pursuits, and is a conceded authority on up-to-date farming.

CHARLES H. SLOCUM, a traveling salesman for the wholesale grocery house of Wright, Depew & Co., Nos. 103-105 Murray street, New York City, was born in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, in 1860, and is about eight generations removed from Roscom Slocum, the founder of the family in the New World. He was a wealthy planter, and his wife, a Miss Fitzgerald, belonged to a prominent and well-to-do Irish family; she ran away from home, and her future husband paid her passage in cattle.

Hiram Slocum, the father of our subject, was born in 1834, in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, where the birth of his father, Pardon Slocum, also occurred, and there the latter devoted his life to agricultural pursuits. Hiram Slocum's mother died when he was an infant, and he was reared by an uncle living near Cornwall Bridge, Litchfield Co., Conn., where he received only a limited district-school education. At the age of nineteen years he started out in life for himself, coming to Dover, where he engaged in shoemaking for a time. There he wedded Mary Olivett, by whom he has five sons: William E., of Poughquag; Hiram, a builder of the same place; Charles H., of this sketch; and Henry D. and Fred, also of Poughquag. After his marriage the father turned his attention to agricultural pursuits in the town of Dover, where he remained until 1867, when he removed to his present farm in the town of Beekman. He is a self-made man, his possessions being the result of his diligence, enterprise and perseverance, and he well deserves the success that has come to him. In politics he is a Democrat, and religiously his wife is an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In the town of Beekman, Charles H. Slocum attended the district schools, and after completing his education clerked in the store of H. Colwell for two years. At the age of nineteen years he bought out his employer and conducted the business from March, 1880, until November 10, 1894, when his property was destroyed by fire, but he rebuilt the store which he now rents to S. L. Davis & Dibble. Since June, 1895, he has been on the road in the wholesale grocery business as the outside financial agent for the firm. He was at one time treasurer and manager of the American Electric Light Company. As a business man he is winning success, and his unabating energy and diligence are important factors in his prosperity.

At South Amenia Mr. Slocum was married to Miss Ella M. Odell, daughter of George W. Odell, and to them have been born two children: Blanche and Russell. Like his father our subject also supports the Democratic party; was supervisor of the town of Beekman in 1885, being the youngest member of the board; and in the fall of 1886 was nominated as a member of the General Assembly, but declined the honor. Since 1884 he served postmaster of Poughquag except when Benjamin Harrison was filling the President chair, and in both public and private life he has ever discharged his duties in a prompt and efficient manner. Socially he is connected with Hopewell Lodge No. 596, F. & A. M. and holds membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Poughquag. Although he sustained a heavy loss at the time he was burned out, he was able to pay all his creditors one hundred cents on the dollar. All will know him and esteem him for his sterling worth, his unimpeachable integrity and his upright life.

CHARLES B. MORGAN, one of the highly respected citizens and leading business men of Amenia, was born at his present residence in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, June 28, 1852, and is a son of George Morgan, whose birth also occurred on the old homestead, June 14, 1823. There William Morgan the grandfather, had located on coming from Redding, Conn., in 1806. On June 3, 1805, he married Miss Polly Wood, who was born September 8, 1786, and died October 2, 1876. In their family were eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Nelson, September 1, 1806; Caroline, September 20, 1808; Evaline, October 10, 1810; an infant son, October 8, 1812; Russell, December 8, 1813; Amanda, July 18, 1816; Minerva, November 18, 1818; Benson W., March 25, 1821; George, June 14, 1823; Mariette, September 15, 1826; and Andrew J., December 12, 1827; all are now deceased except Amanda and Mariette.

The grandfather, who was of Welsh descent, was born November 26, 1782, and in early life learned the carpenter's trade. He and his wife migrated on horseback to Dutchess county in 1806, having scarcely enough money at that time to pay for the one acre of ground which he purchased in the town of Amenia. Here he established the manufacture of grain cradles, which is now carried on by our subject, and also engaged in the manufacture of coffins. He was entirely a self-made man and became quite well-to-do, leaving a good property at his death, which occurred January 21, 1859.

George Morgan, the father, spent his boyhood days in Amenia, attending the district schools, and with his father learned cradle-making, which he continued to follow throughout life, having a good trade in the Hudson Valley and in western Connecticut. A capable business man, he deserved the success which rewarded his efforts; in politics was a Democrat, and was a member of the old militia. At Hudson, N. Y., he was married November 18, 1848, to Laura B. Hood, a daughter of Samuel Hood, and to them were born two sons: Charles B., of this sketch; and William, who was born June 27, 1850, and died March 30, 1852. The death of the mother occurred May 1891, and the father passed away October 1894.

After attending the public schools, our subject entered the Amenia Seminary, where he completed his literary education. He then learned the trade of cradle-making, which his grandfather and father followed, and since 1899 has had complete charge of the business, which he is now successfully conducting. In the year 1896 he also manufactured cider from 1,000 bushels of apples, and also evaporated over 5,000 bushels, thus using over 17,000 bushels, and is engaged in farming to a small extent. Politically, he follows in the footsteps of his father, supporting the Democratic party, and is now serving as school trustee in his district.

At Smithfield, in the town of Amenia, October 9, 1874, Mr. Morgan was married to Miss Cora Van Hovenburg, daughter of John Van Hovenburg, and they have two children: Clara Belle and Harry B. The family holds an enviable position in social circles, and has many friends throughout the community.

CHARLES A. FLINT. The name Flint was given to a minor Saxon god represented by a great flint stone. It appears in old Colonial records as Fflint, Fflynt, Flinte and Flynt, and the latter form should have been retained by the family. The first to come to America were Thomas and William Flint, who became early settlers of Salem, Mass., probably locating there before 1638. The former, from whom our subject is descended, purchased 150 acres of meadow and pasture land from John Pickering, in 1654, and in 1662 bought fifty acres from Robert Goodall. That farm is still in the possession of his descendants. By his marriage with Anne Sutherick he had six children—Thomas; Elizabeth, born in 1650; George, who was born in 1652, and died in 1720; John; Anna, who was born in 1657, and died in 1663; and Joseph, born in 1662. The father died April 15, 1663, and the mother on March 20, 1673.

John Flint, the fourth in order of birth, was born in 1655, was made a freeman of Salem in 1690, and died in 1730. He took up arms in defense of the colonists during King Phillip's war. His wife was Elizabeth Putnam, and to them nine children were born: Samuel, John, Hannah, Stephen, Joshua, Joseph, Lydia, Sarah and Elizabeth.

Joshua Flint, the fifth child of John, was born October 28, 1689, and in 1716 removed to Windham, Conn. He lost his life at sea. Twelve children were born of his marriage with Miss Deborah Ingalls: Sarah, Mary, Joshua, James, Asher, Bartholomew, Huldah, Elizabeth, Abner, Eliphalet, Aikelas and Theodora.

Asher Flint, of this family, was born at Windham, Conn., June 6, 1724, and the year 1771 witnessed his removal to Willington, that State. On August 20, 1752, he was married to Sarah Bingham, who died in 1754, at the age of twenty-two years. Later he married Lucy Kimball, whose death occurred October 20, 1800, and he passed away in January, 1803. In his family were the following children: Jabez, Lucy, Aaron, Sarah, Elisha, Enoch and Asher.

Jabez Flint, the eldest, was born May 2, 1756, at Windham, and when the colonists took up arms against the mother country he joined their forces, faithfully serving in the Revolutionary war. He was the grandfather of our subject, and was the first of the family to migrate to Dutchess county, locating in the town of Amenia about 1782, and erecting the present residence of Charles A. Flint in the summer of 1815. There his death occurred March 28, 1844. He was married May 16, 1782, the lady of his choice being Mrs. Elizabeth Merritt Willson, who died August 28, 1790, and on May 10, 1792, he was again married, his second union being with Elizabeth Paine. He was an Old-line Whig in politics, and ably served as justice of the peace from 1797 until 1812. His family included nine children, namely: Merritt P., Maurice Kimball, Alfred, Philip, Eliza M., Mary Paine, Edward, Augustus and Jane Maria.

Augustus Flint, the father of our subject, was born March 28, 1807, and acquired his education in the district schools of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county. After he had attained two years of maturity he served as colonel in the State militia, and was a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, dying in that faith October 29, 1881. He first wedded Catherine J. Bockee, who was born in 1811, and died April 9, 1843, leaving three children: George Peters, who was born August 29, 1836, and died at Camp Douglas, Chicago, October 27, 1862; Jacob Bockee, who was born December 12, 1838, and died in 1844; and Martha B., born August 8, 1841. For his second wife, Augustus Flint chose Julia Lord, their wedding being celebrated March 4, 1847. Her birth occurred April 10, 1814, and she survived her husband until November 16, 1895.

Charles Augustus Flint, of this review, was the only child born of the second union, his birth taking place at his present residence, December 20, 1847. He spent his early life in much the usual manner of farmer boys, acquiring his primary education in the schools near his home, was later a student in the Amenia Seminary, and completed his literary training by a course at Fort Edward Collegiate Institute in Washington county, N. Y. On laying aside his text books he returned to the old homestead, where his entire life has been passed.

On October 6, 1880, Mr. Flint was married to Matilda P. Hall, who was born November 20, 1848, and they have four children: Gilbert A., born March 27, 1883; Julia Minerva, born February 5, 1885; Charles Hall, born March 8, 1887; and Dorothy Lord, born November 4, 1893. Mr. Flint is an advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and displays his allegiance thereto by casting his ballot for its nominees, while religiously he is an earnest member of the Presbyterian Church at Smithfield. He is public-spirited and progressive, devoted to the welfare of the community, and his standing among his fellowmen is high.

WILLIAM J. STORM, of Stormville, Dutchess county, is the senior member of the firm of W. J. and W. B. Storm, dealers in flour, feed, coal, lumber, builders' materials, and other commodities. In addition to the management of his extensive trade, he owns and conducts a farm of 330 acres in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, the old homestead of his family.

The family, of which he is a member, in this country dates back to Derrick Storm, who came to America in 1662 from the Mayoralty of Borch, Holland, and, being both intelligent and well-educated, speedily arose to prominence, being secretary of Brooklyn in 1670, town clerk of Flatbush, and clerk of sessions in Orange county, from 1691 to 1703. He also filled the important office of school master in different places. He owned land and paid taxes when Peter Stuyvesant was Governor of New Amsterdam. He and his wife, Maria Pieters, reared a family of four children: Goris Peter, David and Maria. Goris married Angeltey Van Lyck, daughter of Thomas Van Lyck, of New Utrecht, and had two sons—Derrick, born in 1695, and Thomas T., our subject's great-great-grandfather, who was born in 1697. He purchased a large tract of land from Col. Phillips, of the Manor of Philipsburg, in Westchester county, N. Y., and settled at Tarrytown, where many of the descendants now live, and where he was buried. His wife's name was Annie ———, and the nine children were Thomas, Jacob, Garrett, Goris, Abraham, John, Isaac, Catherine and Angeltey. Two of the sons died in early manhood, leaving children. In a will dated June 17, 1763, now on record in the surrogate's office in New York City, he makes division of a large amount of property. The will was made and executed in Dutchess county, where he was probably visiting his children, and it was probated before Bartholomew Cronnett, in Dutchess county, January 15, 1770. To his grandson, Abraham, son of Isaac, he gave one hundred pounds, and to his granddaughters, Christina and Anna, forty pounds. To his sons, Garrett and Goris, he gave the lands which he had purchased from Madame Brett, in Rombout Precinct, lying on the north side of the Fishkill, and containing 406 acres, of which Garrett received 204 acres and Goris 202. This was known as the "first purchase." To his son Abraham he gave, with the exception of ten acres, the lands of his "second purchase," lying south of the Fishkill, and to Isaac he gave his improved estate at Phillips Manor. Later these two exchanged possessions, and Isaac came to Fishkill. The fact is especially worthy of note that now, after a period of more than one hundred and fifty years, these lands still remain almost intact, in the hands of the descendants.

Wm. J. Storm

Isaac Storm, great-grandfather of William J., married Elizabeth Locy, and their son Abraham (grandfather of William J.), who was born October 1, 1772, married Sarah Vincent, daughter of Philip and Catherine (Haleck) Vincent, and had five children: Isaac, William, John V., Charlotte and Elizabeth.

John V. Storm (father of William J.), now the only survivor of this family, was born November 24, 1800, and was educated in the district schools of Stormville. His manhood has been passed mainly in the management of the ancestral estate, which is beautifully situated, surrounded by primeval forests, and commanding a view of Nicopee and the Beacon Heights, of the Highlands, in the distance. Under his hands the property has assumed new beauty and fertility until even the passing sanger is attracted by its appearance. His stables have always held some of the best horses in the country, and his fields have been covered with waving crops of the finest grain ever grown in the rich and productive valley of the Fishkill. He has held, too, various positions of trust and responsibility; for many years he was a civil magistrate, and also supervisor of the town, and at the organization of the Fishkill Savings Bank he was chosen a director and the first president of that institution.

On December 4, 1839, John V. Storm was united in wedlock with Miss Jeannette E. Wooley, a lady of English descent, and daughter of William Wooley, a leading farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. She died in June, 1886, leaving three sons and four daughters. The eldest, Abraham J., a civil engineer and extensive land-holder, besides being largely interested in the cattle business in Texas, was married October 29, 1878, to Miss Kate Fowler. Joseph H., the owner of a fine farm at Green Haven, Dutchess county, was married September 4, 1867, to Miss Sophia Sheldon, and has two children — Wilson and Jeannette. William J. is the subject proper of this sketch. Of the four daughters the eldest, Sarah Frances, was married June 7, 1876, to Sylvester Southard, of Fishkill, and has one daughter — Jane Wooley Southard. Elizabeth B. was married January 24, 1873, to Charles A. Storm, of Hopewell. Helen and Cornelia Storm (twins) are at home.

The reminiscences of Mr. Storm, the patriarch, would make an interesting book. He takes an especial delight in talking over the incidents of the more primitive conditions in which his youth was spent. When he was about eighteen years old he and his father drove to Kingston to get a load of shingles, crossing the ice at Rhinecliff, and by starting at 2 A. M., they made the entire distance, eighty miles, in one day, arriving home before midnight. Fortunately his advancing years have not brought with them the usual tokens of old age, and with the exception of impaired eyesight his health is excellent and his faculties undimmed. His mind is clear, and his memories of the past make his conversation most interesting to his hearers of later generations. He is an honored resident of Fishkill village, Dutchess county.

William J. Storm, the subject proper of these lines, was born July 9, 1845, and received his first instruction in the school of District No. 5; later he attended Dutchess Academy and the Albany High School, and at nineteen returned home to engage in farming. In 1872 he married Miss Isabel Harpel, a native of New York City, and a daughter of George M. Harpel. Shortly after his marriage he settled at the old homestead, and in 1873 he purchased the estate from his father. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Storm: G. Harpel, who was with G. A. Benedict, in New York City, and Ethel M., William R. and Isabel M., all three at home.

Mr. Storm does not make a specialty of any particular branch of agriculture, raising a variety of crops and stock. On his farm is a beautiful lake of about twenty-five acres in extent, that is fed by bubbling springs, but has no visible outlet. On the banks of this lake is situated a creamery from which is sent forth 115 cans of milk daily. In 1885 he carried on lumber and coal business on commission for another party, and in 1895 he formed a partnership with W. B. Storm. The firm has a fine office and well-managed yards, and does an extensive and lucrative business. A Democrat in principle, Mr. Storm gives his influence to his party in a quiet way, and has never sought office. His parents were adherents of the Reformed Church, and he and his wife are now among the leading members of that denomination in their vicinity.

JSACKETT ALLING is a prominent and influential agriculturist of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county. Asa Alling, his grandfather, came to Dutchess county from New Haven, Conn., at an early date, and located near Hunns Lake, in the town of Stanford, where he was engaged in farming during the remainder of his life. He married Jemima Purdy, by whom he had five children: Stephen, Sally, Anna, Rhoda and Asa, the last named being the father of our subject.

Upon the homestead in the town of Stanford Asa Alling was born in 1789, and there he spent his entire life. In 1812 he was united in marriage with Cornelia Sackett, the eldest daughter of Jehiel Sackett, of the town of Stanford, and to them were born four children: Emily (deceased) was the wife of Jordan Phillips, of Hudson, N. Y.; Samantha E. was the wife of Jeremiah W. Payne, of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county; J. Sackett is the next in order of birth; and Laura H. is the widow of William D. Humphrey, of Jackson Corners. After the death of his first wife Mr. Alling wedded Mary Thompson, daughter of Asa A. Thompson, and to them were born two children: John T., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Cornelia S., widow of G. F. Butts, formerly of Stanford. The latter gave his allegiance to the Democratic party, and served as supervisor and justice of the peace, while, religiously, he held membership with the Baptist Church.

J. Sackett Alling, the subject of this sketch, spent his boyhood days upon the home farm, attending the district schools of the neighborhood, and later was a student in Amenia Seminary and the Jacob Willets Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He was born May 17, 1822, and remained a member of the parental household until twenty years of age, working on the farm during the summer months, while during the winter season he taught school. In 1845 he went to New York City, where he was engaged in the carpet business some twenty years, when he returned to the old homestead, of which he purchased 170 acres, and has since lived upon that place.

In 1855, in New York City, Mr. Alling married Miss Ann Eliza Bertine, who was born in 1835 in that city, of Huguenot ancestry. This worthy couple became the parents of nine children: Charles Sumner, who died at Seward, Neb., in 1893; Frank P., of Bangall Dutchess county; Robert B., a lawyer of New York City; Samuel D. (deceased); Jehiel S. of Great Falls, Mont.; Newton D., who is connected with the Nassau Bank, New York City; Asa A., of the legal firm of Kennessey, Crain & Alling, corner of South William and Beaver streets, New York City; Lewis W. bookkeeper for the above firm; and Mary, who died in childhood. Although Mr. Alling has reached the age of seventy-five years, he is still well-preserved and quite active. He has always been successful in his business undertakings, and by his fair and honorable dealing has won the esteem and regard of all with whom he has come in contact. Politically, he is a member of the Democratic party, and adheres closely to the lines drawn by that organization.

CHARLES C. ANDREWS. The subject of this narrative is one of the leading agriculturists of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and has contributed his quota toward advancing the interests of the locality. His grandfather, Thomas Andrews, also engaged in farming in the same town, and at an early date carried the mail through this section of the county. He married a Miss Cline.

Philip S. Andrews, a native of the town of Unionvale, was the father of our subject. There he secured his education, and early began to assist in the labors of the farm. As a life work he has since followed that occupation, and has served his fellow citizens as overseer of the town. He married Miss Cornelia Krom, daughter of Lucas Krom, of Ulster county, N. Y., and by their marriage they had six children: Charles C., of this sketch; Mary E.; Kromaline, who married Amelia Sheldon; Anna M., wife of Eliphus Delamiter; James Emmet, who married Josephine Woodward; and Isaac, who married Carrie VanBlack.

Charles C. Andrews was born in the town of Unionvale, in 1850, and, after there completing his elementary education, took a course of study at Poughkeepsie. After completing his education, he went to California, where he remained for five years greatly enjoying the delightful climate. On April 4, 1878, he married Miss Minnie M. Vincent, daughter of John W. Vincent, and they have four children—Bessie M., Gordon Schuyler, Mabel R. and Norman C. Since his marriage he has followed agricultural pursuits exclusively with most gratifying results. Their pleasant home is the center of attraction to a large circle of friends and acquaintances, whose esteem and confidence they have won by their cordial manners, kind acts and hearty sympathy with all.

Jonathan J. Vincent, the grandfather of Mrs. Andrews, spent his entire life in the town of Unionvale, and married Miss Loretta Williams, daughter of Squire Williams, a surveyor of that town, and they became the parents of seven children—Elizabeth, who married Reuben L. Cole; Rebecca, who married Dr. David Knapp; John, who married Rhoda Butler, and they became the parents of Mrs. Andrews; Gilbert, who married Kate Ule, and after her death wedded Eliza Ham; Lewis; Michael, who married Estella O'Neil; and Mary A., who married Orin Able.

FREDERICK J. CORNWELL, of Rhinecliff, Dutchess county, is a self-made man, one who, without any extraordinary family or pecuniary advantages at the commencement of life, has battled earnestly and energetically, and by indomitable courage and integrity has achieved both character and success in business. By sheer force of will and untiring effort he has worked his way upward, and is now at the head of the largest general store in his village.

Mr. Cornwell is a native of Dutchess county, born October 5, 1852, at Rock City, in the town of Milan, and is the son of James B. Cornwell, who was born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, in 1820. The family is of English descent, being founded on this side of the Atlantic by three brothers who located on Nantucket Island, and on separating took the names of Conell, Cornwall and Cornwell. William Cornwell, the grandfather of our subject, was a son of the latter. He was a farmer by occupation, and lived for many years in the town of Milan, Dutchess county. He was married to a Miss Bernard, and to them were born four children: Reuben, James B., Eliza (wife of Walter Crandall), and Amy.

When a young man the father of our subject learned the wagonmaker's trade in LaFayetteville, Dutchess county, and for many years followed that occupation at Rock City. He was an expert workman, and had the respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. He married Helen Emeline Cramer, daughter of Frederick Cramer, and they became the parents of five children: Frances, wife of Henry D. Ostrom, a merchant of Rock City; Julius W., of Wurtemberg, N. Y.; Frederick James, subject of this sketch; Charles Bernard, of Fonda, N. Y., where he is engaged in book-keeping; and Byron H., a painter and paper hanger, of Troy, N. Y. Members of the family belong to the Friends and New Light Churches. The father was called from this earth in 1872, but his wife still survives him.

Although Frederick J. Cornwell received but a limited education in the common schools of Rock City, which he was compelled to leave at the age of fourteen years, he has become a well-informed man by reading in subsequent years. On leaving the school room he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, H. D. Ostrom, with whom he remained eight years, and August 23, 1875, he came to Rhinecliff, where he established a general store, in partnership with Mr. Ostrom. At the end of a year and a half he removed his stock to another store building, where he remained for four and one-half years, and in April, 1882, came to his present site. He is a careful, conservative business man, and well deserves the success which has come to him, as he gives the closest attention to his affairs.

On August 17, 1875, Mr. Cornwell was married to Miss Cora Fero, daughter of Eli Fero, of Rock City, and to them has been born a daughter, Edna B. They also have an adopted son, Fred R., a son of Mrs. Cornwell's brother. Our subject casts his ballot with the Republican party, but takes no active part in political affairs as his business occupies his entire time. He has served as postmaster of Rhinecliff, for three and one-half years under President Harrison, and four years under President Cleveland, and is still serving as postmaster under President McKinley. For two terms he was one of the assessors of his township. He is an active member of the Methodist Church, of Rhinecliff, of which he has served as trustee and steward for many years.

JOHAN H. DRAPER, a worthy representative of the commercial interests of Poughquag, Dutchess county, where he has engaged in merchandising for twenty-three years, belongs to that class of American citizens who take advantage of surrounding opportunities, and working their way upward have attained a competence. In the spring of 1873 he arrived in Poughquag, where he purchased the store of Daniel F. Brill, which he has since conducted with good success, and in the spring of 1889 erected his present building.

George W. Draper, his father, was born about 1816, in the town of Dover, where he acquired his education in the district schools, and was bound out to Ephraim Cronkright, a farmer of that township; but he bought his time and began work for Elihu Hoag. Having secured a little money he entered Jacob Willet's boarding school, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county; and after completing his education he engaged in teaching in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and continued for twenty-four consecutive years, becoming one of the most able instructors in the county. He also served as school commissioner for three terms. In Unionvale he was united in marriage with Ruth E. Hall, who died in April, 1867, and his death occurred twenty years later. In their family were three children: Maria C., wife of Gilbert H. Purdy, of Poughkeepsie; Angeline, who died in infancy; and John H. The father belonged to Shekomeko Lodge, F. & A. M., of Washington Hollow, and in politics was a Democrat until the war of the Rebellion, when he joined the Republican party.

John H. Draper, our subject, was born in the town of Unionvale January 4, 1849, and his literary education was obtained under the able instruction of his father. For one term, in 1865-66, he attended Bryant & Stratton Business College, at Poughkeepsie. He began his business career as a clerk in the store of David D. Vincent, of Unionvale, where he remained during 1864 and 1865, and in the summer of 1866 was employed in the drug store of Wood & Tittamer, of Poughkeepsie, while in the following fall he was engaged in teaching in the town of Unionvale. He next operated the home farm in that town until 1873, during which time he served as school trustee, and was elected justice of the peace in 1872. Since leaving the farm he has carried on his present business, and he well deserves the liberal patronage accorded him. Besides his store, in which he carries a stock of $10,000, he does an extensive business.

In 1870, in the town of Beekman, Mr. Draper was married to Miss Jane Noxon, daughter of Alfred and Deborah (Ganung) Noxon, farming people of Delaware county, who had a family of three children: Elizabeth, William and Jane (Mrs. Draper). The mother of this family died in 1878, the father is yet living. Mr. and Mrs. Draper have two children: Fred and Elizabeth, both at home. Politically, Mr. Draper is an ardent Republican, and is a public-spirited, progressive citizen, deeply interested in all that pertains to the welfare and advancement of the town and county with which he is identified. In 1875 and 1878 he served as supervisor, and at the present time is the efficient town clerk, having been elected in 1894 and again in 1896. For the past four years he has been a member of the county committee. During Harrison's administration he served as postmaster.

MILES BUCKLEY. The Buckley family, of Wassaic, Dutchess county, is remarkable one, whose history is as honorable as it is unique. Joseph Buckley, the grandfather, was born in England in 1792, at which time only ten years of age was brought to America by his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs.

John W. Drooper

Hinchcliff. In the district schools of Amenia, Dutchess county, he acquired his education, and during his youth learned the weaver's trade, at which he worked for many years. His death occurred in 1864. He was united in marriage with Miss Julia Chapman, daughter of Robert Chapman, of Sharon, Conn., and to them were born eight children: Henry, Benjamin, Betsy, Robert, Joseph, Sarah, Seymour and Miles, all now deceased with the exception of Betsy, who is the wife of Charles Hall, of Cornwall Bridge, Connecticut.

Benjamin Buckley was born in the town of Amenia, November 20, 1812, and was there reared, attending the district schools of the neighborhood. When a young man he went to Ohio, where he lived for three years, and on his return east located in New York City, where he learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for some time at Sharon, Conn. There, at the age of twenty years, he was married to Miss Sally Ingraham, by whom he had one daughter, Julia, who was born May 3, 1834, and is now the wife of Gilbert Lake, of Sharon. After a six-years' residence at that place the father removed to Amenia, Dutchess county, where the death of his first wife occurred. At Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., June 24, 1840, by Rev. B. F. Wiles, Benjamin Buckley was married to Harriet Lewis, daughter of Hezekiah Lewis, of Amenia. Twelve children—ten sons and two daughters—blessed this union, namely: Seymour, born March 24, 1841, lives at Amenia; Albert, born June 15, 1842, resides at Dundee, Ill.; Louisa L., born February 8, 1844, is the wife of George Berch, of Wassaic; Lewis, born March 29, 1845, also lives in Wassaic; Henry, born January 10, 1847, is a carpenter at South Dover, Dutchess county; Elijah S., born June 13, 1848, makes his home at New Berlin, N. Y.; Benjamin Franklin, born September 17, 1849, resides in Elgin, Ill.; Charles, born February 27, 1851, is a resident of Wassaic; Miles, born December 16, 1852, also lives in Wassaic, N. Y.; Edward, born June 1, 1854, also lives in Wassaic; Catharine, born September 10, 1855, died May 26, 1865; and Norman R., born September 5, 1856, is living at Dundee, Ill. The children were all born within the space of fifteen years, and received the most earnest, sensible names. Elijah, Charles, Edward, Lewis, Albert and Norman are all in the employ of the New York Condensed Milk Co. They are now married, and are thrifty, enterprising citizens, owning comfortable homes of their own.

For three years after his second marriage, Benjamin Buckley continued to make his home at Amenia, and then removed to Ellsworth, Conn., where he lived for eight years, at the end of which time he located in the village of Amenia, there passing the following four years. After six months then passed at Sharon, Conn., he removed to Wassaic, where most of the family have since resided. His death occurred March 6, 1893, at the ripe old age of eighty-one years. He was a Republican in politics, and an honored veteran of the Civil war. The war record of the family is one of which they may be justly proud, four of its members entering the Union army to defend the country in its hour of peril. Although over fifty years of age, the father enlisted in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I., in which he faithfully served until the close of the war; while of his sons, Seymour was a member of the 13th Connecticut; Albert, of the 48th New York, and Lewis of the 2nd Massachusetts regiment.

The mother died June 13, 1896, at the age of eighty years, while she looked to be not over sixty. She was the daughter of Hezekiah and Lydia (Perry) Lewis (the former a native of Connecticut, the latter of Amenia, Dutchess county), and was the third in a family of six children, all now deceased. They were Sarah, wife of John Church; Louisa, wife of Calvin Day; Abigail, wife of Norman Bates; Lydia Ann (unmarried); and Catherine, wife of William McArthur. Her father, who was a soldier in the war of 1812, always lived in the town of Amenia, where he followed the trade of a carpenter. Her grandfather, Joseph Lewis, was a resident of Great Barrington, Mass., and a Revolutionary soldier, faithfully serving throughout the entire struggle for independence.

VIRGIL G. WINANS, one of the most energetic and enterprising agriculturists of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he operates a good farm, is a native of the county, born in Pine Plains, February 15, 1867, the only son of Seymour and Caroline A. (Guernsey) Winans. He obtained his early education in the district schools near his home, later attending the Seymour Smith Institute, in the village of Pine Plains.

Mr. Winans began life for himself, in 1888, on the Desault Guernsey farm, where he has since resided, and has placed the land under a high state of cultivation. On June 7, 1893, he was united in marriage with Miss Susie Conklin, a daughter of Isaac P. Conklin, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county. Mr. Winans is a prominent member of Stanford Grange. Although yet a young man, he is rapidly growing into the esteem and respect of his neighbors, and bids fair, in the near future, to assume a prominent and influential position in the community.

Calvin P. Guernsey, his maternal grandfather, was born in the town of Stanford, November 1, 1811, and was a son of Ezekiel Guernsey. His boyhood days were spent upon the home farm, near Hunns Lake, and in the district schools of the neighborhood he secured his education. He studied medicine with Dr. Haight, in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and also with Dr. Peter Guernsey, of New York City. After practicing for some time at Clinton Corners he removed to Schultsville, Dutchess county, but finally returned to the town of Clinton, where he continued in successful practice up to his death, which occurred December 3, 1855.

On October 30, 1839, in the town of Clinton, Dr. Guernsey was married to Miss Louisa A. Arnold, who was born May 5, 1822, and died December 4, 1853. They became the parents of two children, namely: Welcome A., who was born March 4, 1841, married Laura Morris, of New York City, and died January 22, 1867; and Caroline A. (mother of our subject), who was born June 29, 1846, and, December 7, 1864, became the wife of Seymour Winans. Since 1860 she has been a faithful member of the Baptist Church, and is a most estimable lady. Her mother was the daughter of Welcome Arnold, who was born September 11, 1783, and died October 2, 1881. He wedded Mary Rowe, by whom he had three children (all now deceased), namely: Archibald H. R., Melinda, and Louise. The mother was born November 27, 1788, and departed this life March 24, 1876.

GEORGE HENRY SWIFT, one of the representative and highly respected business men and farmers of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, is descended from William Swift, who came from England in the great Boston immigration of 1630-1631. He was born in the county of Essex, England, and on his arrival in Massachusetts located at Watertown. In 1637, however, he sold his possessions there, and removed to Sandwich Mass., on the cape, where he purchased the largest farm in the locality, which is to-day still owned and occupied by his lineal descendants. In his family were three children: William, Hannah and Esther.

William Swift, the son, was born in England, and accompanied his father to America. He married Miss Ruth —, by whom he had eleven children: Hannah, William, Jireh Josiah, Temperance, Esther, Dinah, Ephraim Samuel, Ruth and Mary. Ephraim Swift was born at Sandwich, June 6, 1656, and died in January, 1742. By occupation he was a carpenter and cooper. He married Miss Sara —, who died in August, 1734, and to them were born seven children: Elizabeth, Johann Samuel, Ephraim, Sarah, Hannah and Moses. Samuel Swift, the third son, was born at Sandwich, Mass., April 9, 1686, and by trade became a carpenter and blacksmith, which pursuits he followed up to his death in December, 1757. At Falmouth, Mass., December 24, 1712, he had married Miss Ruth Hatch and they became the parents of nine children: Ephraim, Manasseh, Judah, Reuben, Moses, Mary, Joanna, Joan and Lydia.

Judah Swift, the third child of the above family, was born at Sandwich, September 1716, and December 14, 1738, was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Morton, of Falmouth, Mass., where they continued to reside until 1769. In that year they became residents of Dutchess county, traveling the entire distance to Amenia with an ox-team. Mr. Swift there purchased what is now known as the Barlow farm; but desiring a larger tract he exchanged it for the farm now owned by Nathan W. Smith. He became one of the most extensive land owners of the county, owning at the time of his death (January 1, 1807) 1,800 acres of valuable land. Politically he was a Tory. In his family were eight children: Lois, Samuel, Nathaniel, Moses, Rebecca, Seth, Elizabeth and Moses.

Seth Swift, the sixth of the family, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born at Falmouth, Mass., March 16, 1757, and died November 12, 1823. He erected a house upon a portion of his father's vast estate, and then continued to carry on agricultural pursuits until his death. In 1782 he wedded Mary We by whom he had six children: Henry, Moses, E. Morton, Ann W., Maria and Thomas.

Henry Swift, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Amenia February 5, 1784, and, after attending the district school near his home, entered Yale College, where he graduated in 1804. He then studied law with Van Ness & Livingston, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and was admitted to the bar in 1807. He began the practice of his chosen profession at Washington Four Corners, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he remained until December, 1816, at which time he removed his office to the three-story brick building opposite the Farmers' and Manufacturers' Bank, Poughkeepsie, there successfully engaging in practice until his death, November 5, 1866. From 1841 until called from this life he resided in the house now occupied by Dr. A. P. Van Gieson, on Cannon street. Socially, he was identified with the Masonic fraternity, and held a high position in the regard of his fellow citizens. At Poughkeepsie, July 23, 1807, he married Rebecca Warner, who was born there June 26, 1785, a daughter of Thomas and Pida Warner, and died October 7, 1855. In their family were the following children: Charles Wells, born June 27, 1812, died November 19, 1877; Maria, born September 22, 1814, died June 2, 1841; John Morton, born September 18, 1816, died April 3, 1887; George Henry, of this sketch, is next in order of birth; Frances, born November 29, 1821, died November 13, 1887, and James Harvey, born April 23, 1825, died September 27, 1889.

George Henry Swift, the only one of his father's family now living, was born at the family residence on Market street in Poughkeepsie, February 8, 1820, and acquired his early education at the Dutchess County Academy, and at Judge Hall's private school, Ellington, Conn., while he completed his literary course at Yale College, entering in 1837 and graduating in 1840. Returning to Poughkeepsie, he began the study of law in the office of his father, and was admitted to the bar at Uca, N. Y., in 1843. He at once began the practice of his profession at Poughkeepsie in connection with his father and brother, Charles W., and there remained until the spring of 1846, when he sold out to them and came to the town of Amenia, for one year making his home with his brother John. He then purchased the farm on which he has since lived, devoting his attention mainly to agricultural pursuits, though he still engages in the practice of law to a limited extent. He is now president of and attorney for the First National Bank of Amenia. A conscientious, earnest Christian gentleman, he has for many years served as local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Amenia Union, and in all the relations of life he has faithfully discharged his duties to himself, his neighbor and his country.

On January 28, 1844, at Poughkeepsie, Mr. Swift married Emily Eddy Babcock, daughter of Elder Rufus Babcock, pastor of Lafayette Place Baptist Church, and they had one son, Rufus Eddy, who was born October 25, 1844, and died July 3, 1870. The wife and mother departed this life November 5, 1844. At Amenia, March 17, 1847, Mr. Swift was again married, his second union being with Pamela Forrest Paine, daughter of Harvey and Hannah Paine, of that place. Six children graced this union: Emily Eddy, born January 21, 1848, died June 20, 1855; Elizabeth R., born July 23, 1849, is the wife of Samuel L. Brengle, of New York City, a major in the Salvation Army, and they have two children—George S. and Elizabeth S.; George P., born March 26, 1851, died November 19, 1864; Harvey W., born July 23, 1855, died December 10, 1864; Maria R., born May 12, 1860, died November 29, 1864, and Susan F., born July 10, 1862, graduated at Vassar in 1883, and is now a brigadier in the Salvation Army, and stationed at National headquarters, New York City. The mother of this family passed away June 20, 1896.

Politically, Mr. Swift is a Republican, and in 1854, at Washington Hollow, he took a prominent part in the mass meeting that organized the Republican party in Dutchess county, and he has ever been one of its active supporters. He has efficiently served as supervisor and clerk, but has never been an office-seeker.

NATHAN SMITH, a reliable and energetic business man of Dutchess county, is now successfully conducting a general store at Amenia Union, where since 1891 he has efficiently served as postmaster. A native of the county, he was born in the town of Amenia, April 21, 1848, and is a son of John H. and Maria (Reed) Smith. His father, who was a well-known wagon maker of Amenia, traces his ancestry back to Nehemiah Smith, who came to this country from England some time before 1637. He married Annie Bourne, and their only son, who also bore the name of Nehemiah, married Lydia Winchester. Their son Nehemiah married Dorothy Wheeler, by whom he had twelve children, the seventh being Isaac, who wedded Esther Denison. Of their family of eleven children, William was the ninth in order of birth. He married Sarah Smith, and to them were born eleven children, Nathan Smith, the seventh, being the grandfather of our subject. By his marriage with Nancy Waterman, he had five children, of whom John H. was the youngest.

At the public schools of Wassaic, our subject acquired his education, and at the age of eighteen years he began working on the farm of Homer Hitchcock. The following winter he passed at Schenectady, N. Y., after which he returned to Dutchess county and was employed on the farm of his uncle, Nathan W. Smith, for a year. Subsequently he clerked for two and a half years for Oliver Chamberlain, and was again with his uncle Nathan for three years. Four years later he spent in farming at Cornwall Bridge, Conn. In 1872 he married Miss Josephine L. Hufcut, a daughter of William Hufcut, of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and by her had one daughter, Josephine. The wife and mother was called to her final rest in 1875, and in the spring of 1877 Mr. Smith was married at Amenia to Miss Sarah Barrett, and they have one son, Nathan Collins.

After his second marriage, Mr. Smith went to Poughkeepsie township, Dutchess county, where for two years he operated the farm of Lawyer Weeks, and on his return to Amenia town he conducted his uncle's farm for two years. He was next superintendent of D. H. Sherman's farm for a year, and the following four years he rented land of W. A. Sherman. On leaving that place he purchased the Jacob Rundall farm, between Amenia and Wassaic, where he made his home for three years, and at the end of that time sold out to A. E. Hall. In the spring of 1889, he purchased of A. D. Buckley the old Lambert store at Amenia Union, and has since engaged in general merchandising at that place, carrying a large and well-selected stock. His courteous treatment of his customers, and his systematic methods of doing business, have won for himself a liberal patronage, so that he now enjoys a lucrative trade. Politically, he supports the men and measures of the Republican party, and is prominently connected with Webatuck Grange, while in religious belief he is a Baptist, being a leading member of the Church of that denomination at Amenia.

WRIGHT DEVINE, the efficient postmaster of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, who, in relation to the village, has largely promoted its interests and supported all measures calculated to prove of public benefit, was born December 13, 1838, in the locality.

In the early Colonial days there came from Holland to America the founder of the family in the New World. He was the great-grandfather of our subject, and his son, the grandfather, Abram Devine, was born in New Jersey. The latter married Ann Devine, and located on a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley, where he reared a family of seven children, as follows: Daniel, a farmer of Pleasant Valley; Abel, who carried on agricultural pursuits in the town of Washington; Jonathan, father of our subject; Joshua, also a farmer of Washington; Phoebe, who married Abram Van Vlack, a farmer of Dutchess county; Nancy, who married William Welling, of Dutchess county; Joel, a physician of Poughkeepsie. Grandfather Devine made farming his lifework and died on the old homestead in 1850, a lifelong Democrat, his wife passing away some years previous.

Jonathan Devine, the father of our subject, was born and reared on the old home place and became a shoemaker by trade. In 1838 he married Catherine Van Vlack, a native of Dutchess county, and a daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Van Vlack, the former of whom was also descended from Holland ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Devine took up their residence upon a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley and reared a family of ten children: Abram and Albert, who follow farming in Pleasant Valley; Mary E., deceased; Sarah J.; Bartlett, who operates the old homestead; Reuben C., a farmer of Lagrange township; Erastus and Theodore, both deceased; Anna E., wife of C. Drake, a merchant of Pleasant Valley; and Wright. The father died October 3, 1881, the age of eighty-four, the mother on October 29, 1890, aged eighty-one years. He was a Democrat in politics, and for thirty years served acceptably as justice of the peace, discharging his duties in a highly creditable and satisfactory manner.

Wright Dering

Throughout his life Wright Devine, our subject, has lived in Pleasant Valley. Farm work and study in the public schools occupied most of his time during childhood, and after leaving the district school he engaged in teaching in the town of Lagrange for one year. He afterward continued his education in the Nine Partners School, and later resumed teaching, after which he was employed as a salesman in a general mercantile store at Four Corners. His next service was in the employ of a fire insurance company, which he represented in Ulster county. He is now serving as postmaster of Pleasant Valley, to which position he was appointed by President Cleveland, and his administration of the affairs of the office commends him to the respect and confidence of all. He has been justice of the peace some twelve years, and town clerk for several years. Mr. Devine was married September 10, 1866, to Miss Julia M. Way, daughter of James Way, a carpenter, and they have two children: Grace E. and Seward W. The mother died in 1893, a devout member of St. Paul's Church.

In the spring of 1867 Mr. Devine, in connection with his brother Albert, purchased his present store, and after a partnership of two years became sole proprietor. He is an enterprising, progressive merchant, and his large and carefully selected stock receives the patronage of the public in a liberal degree. Mr. Devine is never too busy to devote a portion of his time to the public welfare. He was largely instrumental in building the sidewalks in Pleasant Valley village, and is interested in all that pertains to the upbuilding of the community. In religious faith he attends St. Paul's Church, of which he is vestryman and treasurer. Socially, he is a member of the order of F. & A. M., and for two years was master of Shekomeko Lodge No. 458, and he is now treasurer of that lodge. His innate nobility of character, and his devotion to every noble principle, have made him one of the most highly esteemed residents of Pleasant Valley.

EDWIN BROWN, a well-known artist, residing near Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, draws much of the inspiration for his beautiful landscapes in the picturesque scenery which surrounds his home. His farm had been in the possession of his family for several generations.

Bastian Brown, great-grandfather of our subject, and who was one of three brothers who came from Holland about 1730, leased a large tract of land from Col. Beekman soon after his arrival, and a portion of it comprises Mr. Brown's present estate. Bastian Brown married Margaret Schultz, and had three children: Peter (our subject's grandfather), Eleanor, and John. Peter Brown married Eleanor Paulding, and settled at the old homestead. Six children were born of this union: Sebastian (our subject's father), John (who died in childhood), Margaret (Mrs. Camp, of Newark, N. J.), William and Edwin (who never married), and Abigail (who married James Clearman, of New York).

Sebastian Brown was born at the old farm in 1795. He married Eliza Bard, a daughter of Anthony Bard, a prominent butcher of Rhinebeck. He was a native of Germany, and the name of the family was originally Barth. For some years after their marriage our subject's parents lived upon a farm in Hyde Park, but in 1844 they returned to the old homestead, where they spent their remaining years. They had eight children: Peter, a painter in Rhinebeck; Helen (deceased), formerly the wife of Harry Wheeler, a carpenter; Emily, who married Levi Baker, a merchant; Eliza (deceased); Lewis, a carpenter (now deceased); Edwin, our subject; John C., a resident of Rhinebeck; and Henry H., who lives in Philadelphia. The mother of our subject died September 1, 1850, the father on October 21, 1883. He had been a Whig in his younger days, later becoming an adherent of the Republican party, and still later voting the Prohibition ticket.

The subject of this sketch was born December 21, 1833, in the town of Hyde Park, and he was eleven years old when his parents moved to the homestead, where he has since resided. He was married, July 7, 1863, to Miss Geraldine F. Pultz, a daughter of the late Philip Pultz, a prosperous butcher of the town of Rhinebeck. They have had five children: Nettie married David L. Parliman; Emily is at home; Charles H. married Augusta Pless, and lives in New York; Robert B. is at home; and Mabel died in childhood. The early generations of his family adhered to the Reformed Dutch Church, but our subject and his wife are members of the Methodist Church. In every movement for the educational or social improvement of the community they take deep interest, and they are prominent supporters of the temperance cause, Mr. Brown giving his vote of late years to the Prohibition party.

JOHAN L. HAMMOND, an honored and worthy representative of one of the pioneer families of Dutchess county, is a true type of the energetic and progressive farmers of the present day. He is a native of the county, his birth having taken place in the town of Northeast, August 7, 1850, and he is a son of James Hammond, who was born in the town of Washington, January 31, 1810.

Benjamin Hammond, paternal grandfather of our subject, was of English lineage, and became a leading farmer of the town of Washington. By his marriage with Anna Fitch, he had six children, namely: Cyrus, a farmer of Washington town; John, who also engaged in farming in that township, but died in Niagara county, N. Y.; Isaac, who was a harness maker of this locality, and died unmarried; James, the father of our subject; Andrew B., also an agriculturist of Washington town; and Lydia, wife of Nathaniel Lockwood, a farmer of the same township.

After reaching man's estate James Hammond married Lucinda B. Washburn, a native of Erie county, N. Y., and a daughter of Solomon Washburn, who was of English descent, and a blacksmith by trade. They began their domestic life upon a farm in the town of Northeast, where they reared their four children, who in order of birth are as follows: Anna M. is the wife of Calvin Bryan, a farmer of the town of Northeast; Henry C. died unmarried in 1872; James E. spent his life on Wall street, New York, and died in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county; and John L. is the subject of this review. Throughout his entire life the father carried on the occupation of farming, and was quite prominent in political circles, being a leader in the Republican party in his community. In 1847-48 he was a member of the General Assembly of New York, and he held many minor offices, being sheriff of Dutchess county in 1859-60-61. Religiously he was a member of the Friends Church, to which his widow also belongs. His death occurred in 1867.

Our subject received the benefits of a good common-school education, and was otherwise fitted for the battle of life. On attaining his majority he left the parental roof, going to Buffalo, N. Y., where for two years he was employed by R. L. Howard in the Howard Iron Works; in 1872, however, he returned to the farm in the town of Northeast, where he remained until 1883, when he removed to his present farm. It comprises 170 acres of rich and arable land, and besides general farming he is also extensively engaged in the dairy business, which proves to him a profitable source of income.

Mr. Hammond was married, in 1877, to Miss Josephine M. Bertine, who was born in New York City, a daughter of Robert and Mary Bertine. The family is of French origin. Two sons have been born of this union: James E. and Robert B. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond are members in good standing of the Reformed Church, and number their friends by the score in that locality. He uniformly votes the Republican ticket, and has materially assisted in the progress and development of the country around him.

CHARLES J. VAN WYCK, a leading undertaker of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, is a worthy representative of a family that has long been identified with the interests of the county. He is descended from Cornelius Van Wyck, who was born and educated in the town of Beekman, and when the Revolution broke out he entered the Continental army and was made captain of his company. At the time of his enlistment, in 1776, he was living at Green Haven, Dutchess county. He proved a brave and fearless officer, and was killed at the battle of White Plains. As an occupation he followed farming and milling throughout life. In his family were two children: Theodorus, the great grandfather of our subject; and Sarah, who married William Doughty.

Theodorus Van Wyck was also a native of the town of Beekman, in early life followed farming, but later turned his attention to horse keeping and milling. He married Miss Claris Vanderburgh, daughter of George and — (Clarke) Vanderburgh, of the town of Beekman, and to them were born eight children: Robert, the grandfather of our subject; James, who married Ann Cline; Cornelius; George, who married Jane A. Scriber; Gilbert, who married Rebecca White; Almira, who became the wife of G. Washington Waite; Caroline, who wedded Robert Miller; and Clarissa, who married William Miller.

Robert Van Wyck was born in the town of Beekman in 1800, was there educated and learned the carpenter's trade, at which he worked until 1828, when he took up the occupation of farming. He became a Republican in politics, and was called upon to fill some minor offices in his locality. He married Miss Caroline Van Sicklin, daughter of Court and Sarah (Van Wyck) Van Sicklin, and they became the parents of seven children: John S., the father of our subject; Sarah A., who married Joseph Vincent; William, who married Catharine Lawrence; Mary, who first married Gilbert J. Vincent, and after his death wedded Benjamin Shelley; Caroline, who married Charles White; Clarissa, who married Oliver Lawrence; and Phœbe, who married John L. Wright.

The birth of John S. Van Wyck took place on Pearl street, in New York City, in 1827, but he was educated in Dutchess county, and starting out in life he engaged in the butchering business. Later he has been employed in milling, hotel keeping and farming. He has taken a prominent part in public affairs, always supporting the Republican party by his ballot, and has efficiently served as supervisor, town clerk, assessor, poor master, and in many other town offices, but is now living retired. Socially, he is connected with the Hopewell Lodge No. 596, F. & A. M. In 1848 he married Miss Mary E. Brill, daughter of Cornell Hill, and to them were born three children: Cornell B. married Lottie Morris, and had six children—Sarah, Eddie, Georgiana, Edith, Herbert and Ida; Sarah A. married James Ariance, and has two children—Frank and Elizabeth; and Frank Van Wyck died when young. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Van Wyck wedded Miss Mary A. Duncan, daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Gardner) Duncan, and five children graced their union: Carrie, who died in childhood; DeWitt C., who married Alice Vincent, and has two children—Ida and Annie M.; Charles J., subject of this review; John G.; and Ida, now the wife of William A. Ross, by whom she has two children—Viola and Inez.

Charles J. Van Wyck was born in the town of Beekman, and acquired a good education in the schools of Beekman, and at Poughkeepsie. He began his business career as a farmer, later was for three years in the employ of Mr. Ostrander, an undertaker of Poughkeepsie, and since that time has engaged in the undertaking business on his own account in the town of Uniondale. He is a popular and highly respected citizen, one who easily makes friends, and has the happy faculty of retaining them. He married Miss Lillie E. Knapp, daughter of George J. Knapp, a farmer and miller of the town of Beekman, and to them has been born a son, Charles G.

John Knapp, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Van Wyck, was a native of England, where he was reared and educated, and on coming to the United States located in Putnam county, N. Y., there carrying on the occupation of farming. By his marriage with Nancy Shaw he had eight children: John, Isaac, Israel, Michael, William, Enoch, Lizzie and Denia.

William Knapp, the grandfather, was born in Putnam county, and there followed farming throughout life. He married Statia Jewell, and nine children were born to them, namely: Clarissa A., who married John R. Knapp; Phœbe, who married a Mr. Belknapp; Hannah, who married Charles Van Dine; William, who died in infancy; Nancy, who married William Ellis; George J., the father of Mrs. Van Wyck; Catherine, who first married a Mr. Stricklin, and after his death wedded Henry Bush; Emma, who married Oscar Budd; and Robert D., who remained single.

In Putnam county, N. Y., George J. Knapp was born in 1842, and received his education at Cortlandville, N. Y. The principal part of his life has been devoted to agricultural pursuits, but he is now engaged in milling. He was united in marriage with Miss Sarah E. Warner, and their only child is now Mrs. Lillie E. Van Wyck, who was born in 1869. The mother was born in New Milford, Conn., and the parents now make their home in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county.

Thomas Simpson, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Van Wyck, of the maternal side, was a native of Dutchess county, and in early life learned the shoemaker's trade, which he continued to follow. He also was a Revolutionary soldier. He married Miss Sarah Whaley, and to them were born the following children: Isaac; Brunson, who married Clarissa Pendly; Peter; George, who married Catharine Seymour; William H., who married Mary Pattie;

Neilson; John; Abel, who married Rachel Clarkson; Hannah; and Cornelia, who died in infancy. Of this family Hannah Simpson was born and educated in Dutchess county, and on reaching womanhood married Rozell Warner, a miller of Dutchess county, by whom she had six children—Harriet; Isaac S., who married Sarah Lee; John S. (deceased); Thomas S., who married Lillie Blithman; Armette A., who became the wife of Henry Canaday, and Sarah E., the mother of Mrs. Van Wyck.

MRS. RUHAMER W. PULVER BIRD, who is prominently identified with the best social circles of the town of Stanford, where she resides on a fine estate near Shekomeko, is a member of a family which has long been held in high esteem in this locality.

Her grandfather, William W. Pulver, a German by birth, was a leading agriculturist of his day in the town of Pine Plains, Pulver's Corners being named in his honor. He was married there to Christina Millais, by whom he had eleven children: John, William, Henry, Levi, Peter, Jacob, Catherine, Mary, Herman, Anthony and Esther. Henry Pulver, Mrs. Bird's father, was born January 13, 1806, and passed his early life at Pulver's Corners, where he attended the district schools, and later pursued more advanced studies under tutors at home. He was married June 7, 1829, to Jane Eliza Cook, a descendant of one of the old families of Amenia, born November 23, 1808, daughter of Lewis Cook, and granddaughter of Col. Cook, who once kept the "Pratt House" at that place. Six children were born of this union, whose names with dates of birth are as follows; Ruhamer W. (Mrs. Bird), February 28, 1830; Frances S., April 10, 1831, the wife of Orrin Wakeman, of Millerton; Mary J., December 20, 1832, who married Myron H. Sherman, of Beekman, N. Y., and died November 17, 1882; Henrietta P., March 26, 1834, the wife of L. L. Barton, of Coleman Station; E. Maria, November 28, 1839, who married Collins Sheldon, of Millerton, and Delie A., June 3, 1845, who died May 24, 1879. Soon after his marriage Mr. Pulver settled upon a farm at Livingston Manor, Columbia county, where he remained until 1839, when he came back to his native county and located permanently upon the homestead now occupied by Mrs. Bird, her present beautiful residence being erected by him. He was prominent in local affairs, and, although never an office-seeker, he took great interest in political questions, first as a Whig and then as a Republican, and he was a member of the M. Church at Bangall, the family, of the Presbyterian Church at Smithfield. His wife passed from earth August 21, 1880, and he survived her until July 19, 1894.

On February 17, 1858, the subject of our sketch was married to the late Virgil Bird, a member of an old New England family, whose interesting genealogical record is given below. He was born at Salisbury, Conn., May 31, 1815, but was educated at the Nine Partner Boarding School, in the town of Washington Dutchess county. He became a carpenter and joiner, and followed that trade until 1849 when he went to California and spent three years in mining. Returning to Dutchess county, he engaged in the cattle business at Amenia but after his marriage he moved to Binghampton, where he resided until 1866. The following fifteen years were passed at Salisbury Conn., and in 1881 he came back to this county, and spent his remaining days in the town of Stanford, where he died March 27, 1895. He was a man of many admirable qualities of character, and was held in the highest regard by all who knew him. In politics he was a Democrat; but he made no effort to secure personal advancement in public life. Of the eight children of Mr. and Mrs. Bird, but two survive: Cora C. married Myron H. Gillette, of Ansonia, Conn.; Henry P. married Daisy Wedge, of Nauguetuck, Conn.; James I. married Grace Scott, of Danbury, Conn.; Jennie P. is at home; Virgil B. lives at Ansonia Conn.; Ruey W. died July 4, 1892, age twenty-two years; Isaac B. is at home; and Salome T. died in infancy.

The subjoined sketch of the Bird family was written by Rev. Isaac Bird, in 1855, and was intended to show mainly the male descendants of the original ancestor of the American line, omitting, especially in the early generations, the names of the daughters and such of the sons as left no issue that has survived to the present day. The records cover eleven generations, as follows: (I)—Thomas Bird, first known at Hartford 1644, died about 1660, leaving legacies to two sons—Joseph and James Bird—and two daughters—Mrs. North and Mrs. Scott.

(II)—Joseph and James Bird are found among the first settlers and proprietors of Farmington, about 1660, and both, with their wives, were members of the Church. Joseph had eight children—five sons and three daughters—and died in 1695. James married Lydia Steele, and died in 1708, leaving one son and six daughters, all married.

Virgil Bird

(III)—Joseph, son of Joseph, married Mary Steele, had three sons and two daughters, and died in 1729. Thomas, son of James, lived in that part of Farmington afterward called Northington (now Avon), of "Shady Side" memory. He united with the Church in 1691, married Mary Woodford, July 3, 1693, had three sons and five daughters, and died 1725.

(IV)—Samuel, son of Joseph, son of Joseph (2), married Eunice Wadsworth, February 13, 1730, had three sons and four daughters. John, Joseph and Jonathan, sons of Thomas, of Avon. The two former were among the first settlers and proprietors of Litchfield, and Joseph, of Salisbury, also—John was born 1695, married his second wife, Mary Atwood, June 20, 1728, by whom he had six sons and two daughters. He died about 1750. His wife lived till 1794, and died at Bethlehem, aged ninety-two. Joseph was born December 27, 1696, went to Litchfield in 1718 or 1719, married (1721) Dorcas Norton, daughter of John Norton, Jr., and of Ruth Moore, his wife (who was a daughter of Deacon Isaac Moore), all of Farmington; removed to Salisbury, 1748, lost his wife, Dorcas, in 1750; married widow Eldredge, 1752, by whom he had one daughter. He died 1754. He had seven sons and three daughters—Jonathan was born December 28, 1699, married Hannah Thomson 1732, had three sons and four daughters, died in Kensington, 1748, worth 1,600 pounds.

(V)—Joseph, son of Samuel, was born 1736, had three wives and many children. Sons of John, Joseph and Jonathan: (1) Of John—Seth, Ebenezer, Atwood and Jonathan. Seth was born January 4, 1733, married second wife, Hannah Sheldon, February 8, 1768, one surviving son; died 1805 at Litchfield, South Farms. He was a physician of considerable eminence. Ebenezer was born 1739, married about 1773, died Bethlehem 1789, left four sons—Amos, David, Ebenezer and Daniel. Atwood, born about 1741, was married twice, died Verona, N. Y.—a man remarkable for his integrity. He had one son by first wife; had eight children by his second. One by the name of Chauncey was supposed, in 1855, to be still living. Jonathan, born 1743, married Amy Humphrey about 1777; had two sons and four daughters; died 1786, in Simsbury, Conn., aged forty-three. Was a physician. The daughter left children by the names of Bodwell, Everett and Goodwin. (2) Sons of Joseph (V)—James (VI), Joseph and Amos. James (VI) was born in Litchfield, 1722; married Abigail Gridley, of Kensington, 1750; had two sons and three daughters; died in Salisbury, September 28, 1794, aged seventy-two; his wife died 1815, aged eighty-four. Of his three daughters, Dorcas married Col. Noah Lee, of Castleton, Vt.; Abigail married D. McIntosh; and Eunice, (first) J. Lord, (second) William Mather, a physician of Torrington, Conn. All have numerous descendants. Joseph, born in Litchfield, June 18, 1733; married Huldah Sprague; had six sons and six daughters intermarried respectively with Messrs. Garfield, Herrick, Chapin, Fowler and Curtis. Amos was born in Litchfield, May 13, 1741; married Hannah Swift, of Salisbury; died greatly respected, in Castleton, Vt., 1773, leaving a young daughter, Dorcas, who married William Holabird, of Canaan, Conn. (3) Son of Jonathan—Jonathan born Avon, 1747; graduated Yale college, 1768; married ——— Hogeboom; lost son and wife early; died 1813 in Hebron, Conn., was a preacher and physician.

(VI)—Benjamin (son of Joseph, of Samuel) was born October 23, 1780; married Deborah Carrington, 1801; had two sons and three daughters. The daughters married, respectively, Messrs. Cloyes, Hammond and Lewis. Benjamin still lives. His residence is in Plainville, Conn. (II) Grandsons of John, of Litchfield—(1) John of Seth; born Litchfield, 1769; graduated Yale College, 1786; married (first) Eunice, daughter of Col. Joshua Porter, of Salisbury, (second) Sally Buell, of Litchfield; had two sons; died Troy, N. Y., 1806, aged thirty-seven. He was a lawyer and politician. (2) Sons of Ebenezer, of John, viz.: Amos, David, Ebenezer and Daniel. Amos was born Bethlehem, June 13, 1774; married Miss Cook, of Wallingford, 1797; now (1855) living in New Haven, Vt.; has had three sons and six daughters; one son living; the daughters married into the names of Ballou, Washburn and Hinman. David born in Bethlehem 1776; married Elizabeth Church about 1797; both died in 1849, aged seventy-three. They had ten children: Three of the daughters took the names of Gaylord, Thompson and Loomis. Ebenezer was born June 6, 1778, married Lois Barber, 1806; had five sons, among whom were Daniel, Ebenezer M. and Newton, and six daughters. Four of the latter married Thompson, Eddy, Gregory and Crowley, Ebenezer lives in Victory, Cayuga Co., N. Y. Daniel, supposed in 1855 to be still living near his children at Prairie Ronde, Kalamazoo Co., Mich., has two sons and three daughters. One of the daughters married W. B. Austin, of New York. (3) Son of Atwood, viz.: Chauncey married in Farmington, resided a while in Litchfield; afterward removed his family to some part of Onondaga county, N. Y., and in 1838 to Michigan. (Another son of Atwood married in Farmington, and lived in Cincinnati, where he died. He was wealthy, and left a son supposed to be living in 1855 in New York City.) (4) Son of Jonathan, of John, viz.: Jonathan, born Simsbury, 1775; married Betsey Grinnell, of Greenfield, Mass.; had three sons and one daughter; died Greenfield, Mass., 1813, aged thirty-seven.

The grandsons of Joseph (V) of Litchfield and Salisbury. (1) The two sons of James (VI), viz.: Thomas and Isaac (VII).—Thomas, son of James, was born Salisbury, April 22, 1754; married Betsey Chamberlin, 1777, of South Canaan, Conn.; had five sons and three daughters. The daughters married Messrs. Dibble, Rockwell and Collamer, of Sandy Hill, N. Y. Isaac, brother of Thomas; born May 5, 1757; married Rhoda Selleck, of Salisbury, February 28, 1780; had four sons and three daughters. He died Salisbury, January 16, 1829. His daughters married Messrs. Covey, of Penfield, N. Y., Wheeler, of Salisbury, Conn., and Reed, of Bethany, Penn., respectively.

(2) Three sons of Joseph, of Tyringham, Mass.—(1) Moore was born October 22, 1756; married Delavergne, of Amenia, N. Y.; had four sons and two daughters; died in Amenia. His daughter, Julia, married Hiram Brown. (2) Joseph was born August 8, 1759; married Cynthia Binney; had five sons and four daughters. He is still living in Bristol, Vt. His daughters married into the names of Keeler, Foote and Eastman. (3) Nathaniel was born in Salisbury, 1761; married Hannah Ballard; lived in North Marlboro; removed to Westfield, N. Y., 1816; had five sons and six or seven daughters. He died at his daughter Foster's house, near Buffalo, while on a visit. His daughters married into families named—Macomber, Foster, Sessions and Heminway, respectively.

(VII)—(1) Son of Benjamin—George, born March 10, 1802; married first Elizabeth Stanley, of Plainville, second Miranda Munson, of Plymouth; resides New Haven, Conn., has daughter, Sarah Ely, and a son, Norton Stanley. (2) Great-grandsons of John of Litchfield.—(1) Sons of John, of Troy, son of Dr. Seth, of Litchfield, viz: John Herman, born 1790; was killed on board the frigate "President" by a ball from the "Belvidere," June 23, 1812. William A., born 1797; has two sons and two daughters; resides at Black Rock, near Buffalo, N. Y. (2) Sons of Amos, David, Ebenezer and Daniel of Generation VI.—Canfield, son of Amos, of New Haven, Vt. born February, 1803; married Elizabeth Washburn, of Leominster, N. H., December 30, 1828; has three sons and four daughters; resides in New Haven, Vt.—Harmon, son of David, of Bethlehem, Conn.; born August, 1798; married November, 1823; one son, James.—Joshua, of David; born May 21, 1800; married Carol Jackson September 5, 1822; children—five sons and three daughters; reside in Bethlehem, Conn.—David, of David, born March 11, 1804; married Miss Phelps about 1835; one son and one daughter; resides in Winchester, Conn.—Daniel, son of Ebenezer of Victory; born March 20, 1819; married Mary Thompson, August, 1840.—Ebenezer M., do.; born October 25, 1821; married Elizabeth Barney, 1846.—Newton L., do.; born December 4, 1826; married Mary Ann Martin, August, 1845.—Sons of Daniel, of Michigan; two in number; names unknown; reside in Prairie Ronde, in Michigan. (3) Sons of Chauncey unknown. (4) Sons of Jonathan, son of Dr. Jonathan, of Simsbury; these are George Jonathan and Edward, residing in Belleville New Jersey.

The great-grandsons of Joseph, of Litchfield and Salisbury: (1) Son of Thomas, son of James, of Salisbury; Orren, born in 1794, died 1824, Sandy Hill, left one son. (2) Sons of Isaac (VII) of James: James (VIII), born January 27, 1785; married Susan Dauchy; five sons and five daughters; died in Kirkwood, N. Y. January 25, 1865. His daughters are all married. Isaac, born June 19, 1793, graduate Yale College, 1816; a minister; married Ann Parker, of New Hampshire, November, 1822; ten children—six living, two sons and four daughters; resides in Hartford, Conn.; died Great Barrington, Mass., May or June, 1876, at the Sedgewick Institute, of which he and his son, James Bird, A. M., were successful principals many years previous to, and at the time of, his death.

(3) Sons of Moore, of Amenia, N. Y.: Augustus, removed to West Michigan, near Kalamazoo; died leaving a family; Henry resides in Amenia with a family; has two sons married.

(4) Sons of Joseph, of New Haven, Vt.: Thomas had two sons and four daughters; died Canton, N. Y.—Gustavus A., born about 1791; graduated Middleton College, 1812; had one son and two daughters; died in Missouri. One daughter, Jane, married Lorenzo D., son of Nath. Bird, of Westfield. Frederic A. had eight sons and one daughter. The daughter married H. Dorrance, Rutland, Vt. The surviving sons are Roderick D., Myron L., Charles L., Edwin, Riley and Dr. Amos, supposed without family. Anson is in New Haven, Vt.; has two sons, James and Joseph.

(5) Sons of Nathaniel, of Joseph, of Tyringham, Mass.: Amos, went from N. Marlboro Westfield, N. Y., 1812; married Mary Griffith, 1814; died 1823. Surviving children—two sons and one daughter. Frederick married Lovisa Warren about 1823; died 1844; left seven children; two sons in California; a married daughter and the remaining children with their mother at Warrenville. Ira R. was married, 1834, to Caroline Beecher, niece of Dr. Lyman Beecher; died 1841; two surviving children—Lorenzo D., born 1813; graduated Yale College, 1839; went to Missouri, 1842; married Jane, daughter of Gustavus Bird, of St. Genevieve, Mo., practicing law in Weston, about 400 miles up the Missouri river. Charles Lee, born 1816; married Ellen Kent; has one son; has lately gone to California with his family.

(VIII)—(1) Children of George, of New Haven, Conn.: Susan E., Norton S., and perhaps others. Two children of William A., of Black Rock: John H., a physician in Chicago; another son educated at Union College. Two other children, daughters. (3) Children of Canfield, of Vermont: Julia, born in New Haven, July 6, 1830; Amos Cook, born October 14, 1832; Ellen Sophia, born December 1, 1834; James ———, born in Richland, Nch., February 16, 1837; Elijah Washburn, born in New Haven, September 30, 1840; Emma Melinda, June 26, 1845; Mary Elizabeth, November 16, 1848. (4) Son of Harmon, of Bethlehem: James. (5) Children of Joshua, of Bethlehem: Andrew Jackson, born November 28, 1823, died in 1824; Theodore, June 8, 1825, married Eliza, daughter of Rev. F. Harrison, October 9, 1849; Elizabeth Mary, born October 9, 1826; Samuel Jackson, born August 7, 1828; David, died young; Stanton, born July 3, 1833; Caroline Martha, born October 19, 1837; Sarah Imogene, born June 26, 1840.—Son of David, of Winchester, Sterling.

(6) Grandchildren of Daniel, of Michigan. (7) Grandchildren of Chauncey, who moved from Litchfield to Onondaga and to Michigan.

(8) Son of Orren, of Sandy Hill. (9) Henry, of Isaac, of Salisbury, has a widow remaining, and a daughter married E. N. Hart, of Stillwater, N. Y. (10) Children of Augustus and Henry, sons of Moore, of Amenia, N. Y.; the former are in Michigan, the latter in Amenia.

(11) Children of Thomas, son of Joseph, of Bristol, Vt.: One son, Joseph, and four daughters, now living near Canton, N. Y. (12) Children of Gustavus A., of St. Genevieve:

One son and two daughters; one of these daughters married Lorenzo D. Bird, son of Nathaniel. (13) Children of Frederick A.:

Eight sons and one daughter, viz.: Rhoderick D., of Waynesburg, Greene Co., Penn. (who has a son and daughter), Myron L., Charles L., and as before mentioned M. L. and C. L., have gone to California. (14) Children of Anson, viz.: James, and Joseph, New Haven, Vt. (15) Children of Amos, of Nathaniel, of Westfield, viz.: Philander, merchant, Roscoe, Ill.; Nelson, of Chautauqua county, a farmer.

His daughter married ——— Boilvin, of Peoria. (16) Children of Frederick: Byron B., and Edwin, in California; Ellen D., married to a physician—with Henry and three daughters all in Warrenville, Ill. (17) Children of Ira R.:

Two only survive, viz.: Franklin (a printer), western Missouri, and William went to California and China.

(IX)—Children of James, son of Isaac, of Salisbury: Ripley, Virgil, Henrietta married B. Cook, Annis married Eliza Leach, Isaac, Célestia married John Leach, James, Sarah married J. Woodruff, Marion married M. Langdon, George, all born in Salisbury. The family homestead is now in Conklin, near Binghamton, N. Y. (10) Children of Isaac, son of Isaac, viz.: William, born on the island of Malta, August, 1823; graduated Dartmouth College, 1844, married Sarah F. Gordon, of Exeter, N. H., February, 1853, resides near Beirut, Syria; Emily Ann, born Beirut, 1825; married Rev. H. J. Van Lennep, of Constantinople, Turkey, April, 1850; James, born Beirut, 1826; Martha Jane, born Malta; Mary E., born Beirut; Caroline, born in Smyrna. (IX) It will be seen from the foregoing that a few representatives of the ninth generation had begun to appear at the time of the preparation of the record, among them Virgil Bird, the second son of James, of Salisbury. (X) The children of Virgil and Ruhamer Bird. (XI) The children of Cora C. and Myron E. Gillette: Eva May, December 20, 1883. (2) Children of Henry P. and Daisy Bird (none). (3) Children of James E. and Grace Bird: Isaac Knox, born July 20, 1896.

Of the other branches of the family the record, rapidly widening, is not yet written. Of the early ancestors, a few incidents of more than ordinary importance should be noted here. The name of Thomas Bird appears in different records of Massachusetts, and some have suggested that Thomas B., of Scituate, and of Dorchester, Mass., of 1642, might be the same man with our ancestor of Hartford. But the Dorchester Birds seem to have been of a separate origin. Of that family are many of the Birds in Boston and New York, and of the same was the Rev. Samuel Bird, a pastor of one of the New Haven churches, just before the Revolution, and who, though he did not graduate, was educated at Cambridge, in the class of 1744, leaving college a little before the commencement that year. Thomas Bird came to Hartford some ten years after its first settlement, and was proprietor only of a small homestead south of the city limits, and of a parcel of land of about fourteen acres, constituting, as the records say, "an island in the great river over against the Landing." Whether he removed with his sons to Farmington, or remained and died in Hartford, is unknown. It is remarkable how the male descendants of Joseph, son of Thomas, have been, in the providence of God, removed. He appears to have but three of these representatives remaining now alive, one in the VI Generation, one in the VII, and one in the VIII.

Thomas (Generation III) was the only male heir of his father, and was possessed of an estate valued at 550 pounds, a sum which constituted riches in those days. As Noah occupied the place of the second great head of the Human family, so this second Thomas Bird stands as the great second head of nearly all the families of Birds.

John and Joseph (Generation IV), sons of Thomas, seem to have been men of unusual enterprise. They were pioneers in the settlement of Litchfield, and were among the chief town officers. The two home lots of land, that fell to them in the town, are still pointed out S. S. E. of the present village, they being designated on a map published within a few years, with a pamphlet, by G. C. Woodruff Esq., of Litchfield. John went on in speculation in lands farther west. He was one of the company known by the name of The Little Nine Partners, who purchased lands extending from the Connecticut line to the North river. This company became involved, and unable to meet the demands of their creditors, and John overcome by his disappointments, died, it is said, in a state of mental derangement. He built a stone house in Dover on land, probably which he owned as one of the company, the house which is supposed to be still standing. Joseph must have obtained some addition to his means by his marriage. Deacon Isaac Moore, one of the wealthiest farmers in Farmington, had four children, all daughters. Ruth was married to John Norton, Jr., son of a very respectable settler, lately come from Branford. Dorcas, the youngest daughter of this connection, became the wife of Joseph Bird. She was sister of Thomas, father of Lot Norton, the elder, of Salisbury. Joseph in ten years, while in Litchfield, was chosen nine times to the General Court or State Legislature, and was at his death a justice of the Quorum. His grave in Salisbury is marked by a tombstone of Italian marble, lately erected by the children of his grandson Isaac.

Dr. Seth Bird (of the V Generation) was one of the most skillful physicians of his time. It is said of him that he lived on very intimate and friendly terms with one of the neighboring physicians, so that they were in the habit of generously recommending to each other, their own patients, whenever one thought the other to be more skillful in the cure of any particular complaint. He has a marble monument in the cemetery of Litchfield, S. Farms, erected in his memory by his son John.

Jonathan Bird, of Simsbury, brother of Seth, was a physician, and, as it appears, a Freemason. There is said to be extant an eulogy on his character, prepared after his death, and on his tombstone is this inscription:

In memory of Dr. Jonathan Bird, who (after exhibiting a striking example of Philosophic Patience and Fortitude through a distressing illness) departed this life on the 17th of December, A. D., 1786, in the forty-third year of his age.

FAITH. HOPE. CHARITY.

*Stop, brother, and impart a generous sigh,
O'er one in prime called to resign his breath;
Since all your social band this scene must try,
Square all your work before the hour of death.*

Jonathan, son of Jonathan, son of Thomas, was educated at Yale College, graduated 1768; he studied for the ministry, and became a preacher about 1773, though he never was ordained, and of course is never called by the name of "Reverend." His brethren in the ministry called him a good preacher, and it is related of him, that, happening late in life to be in Boston, Dr. Griffin took him and would have him preach to his people. He addressed them a number of times in the course of a week, and they were so well pleased and so much profited that they presented him with a new suit of clothes. He was a sound theologian, but not an awakening, animated speaker. He was embarrassed by deafness, so that, after reaching a while, he betook himself to the practice of medicine. Near the close of his life he prepared a few of his sermons for the press, which, under the direction of Rev. Dr. Bassett, of Hebron, appeared, in a small volume, after his decease. He had had two or three occasional sermons published previously, and was the author of an article in the Boston anoplist, on Infidelity, it being the substance of a letter actually written and sent to one of his nieces in Hartford in 1811. [See Panoplist, February, 1873.] His place of residence, at the time he died, was Conway, Mass., but his death occurred in the family of his friend, Rev. Dr. Bassett, at whose house it happened to be on a visit when he was overtaken by his last illness. He had lost both his brothers and his only son, and with him expired his father's male branch of the family.

It seems a matter of some doubt whether there was not another son of John Bird belonging to this IV Generation, whose name is doubtful, and does not appear in this sketch. The following are the words of William A.

Bird, Esq., of Black Rock, son of John and grandson of Dr. Seth, of Litchfield: "In relation to the brother of my grandfather, who went to Philadelphia, my mother knew very well that such a brother resided there. William, I think his name was. Dr. Seth, she told me, once went to see him, and my father once met a son of his in New York, when he was in the Legislature in New York, say in 1796." May not this be the same case as that mentioned by Gen. David B., of Bethlehem, who says that Atwood B. had a son (name unknown), who went to Cincinnati [Philadelphia?], became rich and died, and has a son now living in New York? Of the Generation just spoken of was Amos, son of Joseph, whose short life may merit a few special remarks. He is spoken of as a man of great enterprise, and was the leader in commencing the settlement of the town of Castleton, in Vermont, near which a prominent mountain still bears and perpetuates his name. The settlement was yet in its infancy when it pleased the Lord to remove him, and the first products of the first sawmill, which he had erected there, were made use of for his coffin. On a new monument, lately placed over his remains, were the following inscriptions:

(In front.)

*Erected October 19, 1842, to the memory of Col. Amos Bird,
By citizens of Castleton, and friends, as a tribute of respect to a worthy man.
Born at Litchfield, Conn., and died September 16, 1772, aged 30 years.*

(On one side.)

Col. Bird was the first white man who asserted dominion in Castleton, where he arrived in January, 1766. He was the first possessor of the soil for civilization, and the first called to resign it, leaving the fruits of his bold enterprise to others.

(On the east side.)

The mortal remains of Col. Bird were first interred by his direction, near his dwelling in the valley of Bird Creek, and after seventy years disinterred and here entombed to wait the summons that awakes the dead.

It may be added here that the settlement of the town was continued by Noah (afterward Col.) Lee, who married Bird's niece, a daughter of James, and who had accompanied him in his enterprise. Lee entered into the war of the Revolution, which broke out about this time, and there continued to its close. At his own expense he raised a company of "Green Mountain Boys," and acted for a time in concert with Ethan Allen. He was afterward at the battles of Trenton, Princeton and Germantown, and witnessed the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. He died at Castleton, 1840, aged ninety-six years, leaving a large number of descendants.

John B., of the Sixth Generation, son of Dr. Seth, was the second of the descendants of Thomas, of Hartford, who was educated at college. He read law, it is believed, in Salisbury, Conn., where he had relatives. After this he resided in Litchfield for a time, and then removed to Troy, where he was chosen repeatedly to the State Legislature, and afterward to Congress. He died suddenly at the early age of thirty-seven. He is universally spoken of, by those who knew him, as a man of extraordinary powers of mind.

Chauncey, son of Atwood, had the reputation among his Litchfield neighbors of possessing very eminent natural gifts, not falling, if any, in this respect, much behind his cousin John. But Chauncey had not the advantages of education enjoyed by John, and his line of life was not such as to bring him before the public. Of his later history we have very little information. He is supposed to be still alive, and somewhere in the State of Michigan.

Isaac, son of James, enlisted about the age of eighteen under Col. Burrall, of Canaan, in the Revolutionary army of the North against the Canadas. The smallpox having broken out in the army, he was among the number that had to be inoculated. In connection with this disease he was seized with remarkable swellings, which greatly debilitated him, and in this condition, by a reverse in the fortunes of the army, he was left, with many other sick men, to shift for himself, and he resolved to attempt finding his way to his sister's (Mrs. Noah Lee's) in Castleton. This he succeeded in accomplishing, and after begging his bread through many weary days and nights of travel, he at length presented himself at the door of the log cabin, in the complete habit and condition of a common mendicant. Here, however, he had all the aid which a sister's care, in a new settlement, could offer; but his recovery was too slow and too imperfect to enable him to return to the army. Joseph, son of Joseph, of Tyringham, with one exception was, in 1855, the only living representative of the Generation to which he belonged. He was one of those men to whom we owe so much for having, at the expense of great suffering, and hazard of life, defended our liberties and achieved our national independence. He enlisted in the army in 1776 and spent the summer at Ticonderoga, and in autumn, in company with others, was discharged. He soon after enlisted for three years, or during the war, and went during the campaign of 1777 as an attendant of Dr. Binney, of Tyringham whose daughter he afterward married. He was in the field at the various battles with Burgoyne. When Gen. Frazier was killed and Maj. Ackland wounded and taken prisoner, the latter was brought to Joseph Bird's tent, and there it was that Lady Harriet, whose character Burgoyne himself has given so affecting a description, came and nursed him. After the surrender of Burgoyne, the soldiers of the Northern army were sent to unite with forces of Washington at Valley Forge, and Bird went with them. When Gen. Clinton commenced his march from Philadelphia toward New York, the Americans moved also to attack him in the rear. The account that follows is in the language of Roderick I. Bird, of Waynesburg, Penn., grandson of Joseph. "My grandfather," he says, "was sent with a detachment of 2,000 men on the east road, and another detachment of 2,000 men was sent on the west road to harass the enemy until the main army arrived. On Saturday June 27, Gen. Lee joined us at Monmouth with 2,000 men, and orders to attack Clinton's army. At that point, our army retreated. The British followed until Washington came and commanded to file to the right and let the British pass. My grandfather was with the left wing. During this period the cannon began to boom on both sides, which lasted from one and a half to two hours. Grandfather says he caught a number of cannon balls in his camp-kettle as they rolled upon the ground. The first that he saw coming in that way a young soldier put out his foot to stop, which dislocated his ankle. About 1 o'clock the British right wing undertook to flank our left. Col. Selby called for volunteers to turn it. Grandfather went with others and turned it, and charged and drove them back. In this charge he received a wound. The contending parties were not more than one or two rods apart. He was shot through the left arm, the ball breaking the bone and leaving a detached fragment of about one inch in length. The ball then penetrated his left side, and remains there to this day. He says he well remembers his sensations when the ball hit him.

It beat his breath from him, and he staggered while and fell. When he came to he was lying with his face upward exposed to the rays of the burning sun; he supposed he had simply fallen asleep, but soon found that he was wounded. That night he was taken with others to Monmouth church, where his wound was dressed. He was then carried to Elizabethtown, where he was left, through a dreary night, in a barn, having for his companions the wounded and dying. He suffered most for want of water, and they had no light. The next day they were taken in wagons to Princeton College, where he remained, having the best treatment." He was considered unfit to resume the duties of the army until October, 1780, when he rejoined his regiment at West Point, and was subsequently employed, without any very important military occurrence, in protecting the inhabitants of the Mohawk Valley from the incursions of the British and Indians.

Benjamin Bird, of Connecticut, and Joseph Bird, of Vermont, are now the only living members of the Generation VI; the one descended from the elder of the two sons of Thomas, of Hartford, the other from the younger.

It is worthy of remark, that while the living male members of the family, who stand as guardians of the name, scarcely exceed, if they even reach, the number of fifty; the descendants of the female lines probably far exceed a thousand. As we look back upon these several past generations that have risen and fallen in quick succession, we are forcibly reminded of the rapid flight of time and the shortness of life. "We have here no continuing city." The generations of men have been aptly compared to the waves of the sea. They rise and roll on each urging his predecessor forward, till, one after another, they dash upon the shore and disappear. We ourselves are pressed on by the resistless tide behind, and there is no hope for us more than for others. But there is a sea, and there is a shore, where no surging and dashing and disappearing exist—where the generations of all ages mingle in harmony and rest, and if our days are but spent in "Wisdom's ways,"

They'll waft us safely o'er
This life's tempestuous sea,
And soon we'll reach the peaceful shore
Of blest eternity.

PATRICK ROGERS is numbered among the stalwart and substantial citizens of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, who are of alien birth. He is a native of County Cavan, Ireland, where he secured his education, and there followed farming until emigrating to the United States in 1846. He is the son of Peter Rogers, whose birth also occurred on the Emerald Isle, and his mother bore the maiden name of Miss Mary Riley. In their family were six children: John; Hugh and Peter, who never married; Patrick; Mary, who became the wife of James McCarty; and Ann, who married John Clark.

On reaching the New World, our subject located in New York City, where he married Miss Margaret Rogers, also of Ireland, who came to America in 1863. From that city they removed to their farm in the town of Dover, where they now reside. They have been blessed with seven children: John, born October 9, 1864, married Kate Sheehan; Patrick, born July 4, 1867, married Mattie Kinzie, by whom he has one son, Hall; Peter, born April 1, 1869, wedded Mary Hacy; Mary, born April 6, 1871, is the wife of John Bridgeford, by whom she has one child, Leo; Margaret, born May 15, 1874, Catharine, born September 12, 1878, and Thomas, born January 10, 1883, are all at home.

Charles Rogers, the grandfather of the wife of our subject, was born, reared and educated in Ireland, where he followed weaving in connection with agricultural pursuits. In his family were five children: Philip, who married Catharine Lynch; Lawrence, who married Margaret McCall; Thomas, who married Mary Lynch; John, the father of Mrs. Patrick Rogers; and Patrick, who married Elizabeth Riley.

John Rogers, like his ancestors, was born and educated on the Emerald Isle, where, during manhood, he carried on the pursuit of farming. He married Miss Ann Martin, daughter of Patrick and Ann Martin, of the same country, and seven children were born to them: Patrick, who married Catharine McBrean; Thomas, who also married a Catharine Mc-

Brean, no relative, however, of his brother's wife; Mary, who remained single; Catharine, who married Philip McBrean; Ann, who married Patrick Boyle; Margaret, who married Patrick Rogers, subject of this sketch; and John, who married Mary Coonie.

CHARLES H. SHURTER, a public-spirited and enterprising citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, whose place of business is located at No. 368 Main street, is engaged in plumbing and gas fitting, and also deals in hardware and house-furnishing goods. He is carrying on a successful and well-established business, occupying an important place among the various industries of that thriving city, and conducted on strictly honest principles. He is looked up to as a useful and honorable citizen, one who takes a commendable interest in the welfare and progress of his city and county.

Mr. Shurter was born March 28, 1836, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and is a son of Isaac H. Shurter, whose birth occurred in Fishkill, Dutchess county. His great-grandfather came to the New World from Holland, and located upon a farm in Ulster county, N. Y., where Frederick Shurter, the grandfather of our subject, was born. After his marriage the latter located in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he followed farming, and reared his five children.

In early life Isaac H. Shurter learned the shoemaker's trade, and in the town of Fishkill was united in marriage with Miss Clorinda Wheeler, a native of that township, born of French descent. The young couple removed to Poughkeepsie in 1832, where for about five years the father engaged in the grocery business, and then began boot making, in which line he continued for a number of years. He was called from life in 1875, his wife in 1872. They were conscientious, earnest Christians, and for about thirty-five years had been members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. During his later years the father was an ardent Republican.

Charles H. Shurter attended the first free school ever held in Poughkeepsie, and after finishing his education, about the year 1850, began to learn the tinsmith's trade, which occupation he followed until 1876. At that time he formed a partnership with George H. Briggs in the hardware trade, being located at No. 368 Main street, where he still carries on business. In 1868 he married Miss Mary Kidney, a native of Poughkeepsie, and a daughter of Charles and Maria Kidney, the former of whom was a leading liveryman of Poughkeepsie, and belonged to a family that was early established in Dutchess county. In January, 1892, our subject was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, a most estimable lady.

Politically, Mr. Shurter votes the straight Democratic ticket, and he is now a member of the water board of Poughkeepsie. He was one of the seven men who organized the O. H. Booth Fire Company, in 1853, since which time he has been actively connected with it, and has held all the positions in the same, being foreman eight years, chief of the fire department three years, and twenty years a representative of the company, which position he still holds. He is a member of the Order of American Firemen, was the first president of the local organization, and is now past president. For twenty-nine years he has been trustee of the local lodge of the I. O. O. F. is a member of the Encampment, and also belongs to the Sons of Temperance. To Trinity Church he and his faithful wife were liberal contributors.

CHAPPELL ROBINSON, a well-known agriculturist of the town of Stanford Dutchess county, started in life with nothing save his own indomitable energy, and his accumulation of this world's goods is attributable to his good judgment, perseverance and industry. His word in business transactions is considered as good as his bond, and he is justly recognized as one of the energetic and representative citizens of Stanford.

In the town of Kent, Putnam Co., N. Y. our subject was born November 23, 1810. There his grandfather, Chappell Robinson with two brothers, had located at an early day, and he continued to make the town of Kent his home until late in life, when he removed to Tompkins county, where his death occurred. By occupation he was a farmer. He wedded Miss Mary Sprague, by whom he had five children: Stephen, Sabins, Squibb, Mary and Eli.

Stephen Robinson, the father of our subject, was also a native of the town of Kent Putnam county, where his education was acquired in the common schools, and he then married Martha Kelly, daughter of Seth Kel-

Chas H. Hurter

To them were born thirteen children, namely: Chappell, Seth Kelly, Osborn, Enos, Emily, Zillah, Jarvis, Ada, Nathaniel, Priscilla, Robert, Catherine and William. The father engaged in farming in his native township until 1836, when he removed to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he followed the same pursuit for several years. The following twelve years were passed at Lithgow, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, after which he returned to Stanford town, where he died in February, 1876, at the ripe old age of eighty years. He had served as a soldier in the war of 1812, and was a faithful Republican in politics.

The early life of our subject was passed upon the home farm in the town of Kent, where he attended the district schools, and he remained a member of his father's household until he attained his majority, when he started out for himself as a farm hand, working in that way some three years. On December 13, 1845, he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Bunnel, a daughter of Levi and Lois (Mosher) Bunnel, the former of whom was a native of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, and was descended from Connecticut Yankees. To our subject and his wife were born four children, namely: Charles H. and Enos, who died in infancy; Henrietta, who became the wife of Seth K. Winans; and Ida, who married Almon Harrison. Mr. Robinson began his domestic life upon a farm near Stanfordville, where he lived until March, 1880, since which time he has resided upon his present farm. His time and attention have always been devoted to general farming, and he has met with a well-deserved success in his undertakings. During the three years he was employed by others, when a young man, he never lost but seven days time, six being spent in training (or he would have been fined) and the other in attending a political celebration at Poughkeepsie. His political allegiance is always unfalteringly given the Republican party, and he has been called upon to serve as assessor of the town of Stanford. As a citizen of the community in which he has so long made his home, Mr. Robinson is highly respected, enjoying the confidence of his neighbors and a wide circle of friends. Since 1840 he has been an active member of the Baptist Church at Bangall, in which he has served as trustee and deacon, and has also been superintendent of the Sunday-school.

GEORGE E. PARKS, owner and proprietor of a general mercantile store at Hibernia, in the town of Clinton, is one of the promising young business men of Dutchess county, where his entire life has been passed. His father, Richard J. Parks, was born in London, England, June 22, 1833, and is the eldest in a family of eight children born to Richard and Hannah Parks, also natives of that wonderful city. By trade the grandfather was a shoemaker, and when his eldest son was eighteen years of age he emigrated with his family to America, making his first home at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He later became a resident of Highland, where his wife died, and he passed away while in Poughkeepsie. After coming to the New World he continued to follow his trade of shoemaking.

In the schools of London the father of our subject obtained his literary education, and on coming to Dutchess county began working on a farm in the town of Washington. Later he purchased land in the town of Stanford, which he operated for twenty years, on the expiration of which he sold out and returned to the town of Washington. For thirteen years he was engaged in farming there, and he is now living in the town of Millbrook, Dutchess county. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is highly respected by all who know him. In Washington town he was united in marriage with Hannah Smith, and to them were born four children: George E., Charles (who died at the age of ten years), Sarah and Robert.

The birth of George E. Parks occurred June 20, 1860, in the town of Stanford, where his early life was passed in an uneventful manner, the greater part of the time being spent in the school room or in aiding his father in the work of the farm. He remained under the parental roof until twenty years of age, when he took up the profession of teaching, which he followed for twelve years, his first school being near Bangall; was then employed at Stanfordville, Hibernia, Pleasant Valley, Salt Point and Clinton Hollow. In December, 1894, he started in his present business, in which he is meeting with well-deserved success, having secured a large and lucrative trade. He is also serving as deputy postmaster of Hibernia.

In the town of Stanford, December 24, 1884, Mr. Parks was joined in wedlock with Miss Carrie E. Vail, a daughter of George Vail, and two children bless their union: Charles E., born April 19, 1886; and Roy I., born July 17, 1887. Socially, Mr. Parks holds membership with the Knights of Pythias lodge No. 143, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He has made a very successful start in life, and by his systematic methods of conducting his business, his strict attention to it in all its details, and his thorough, upright dealings, have already made him an honorable record in the business world.

ALFRED VAN WEY, one of the enterprising and wide-awake citizens of Barrytown, Dutchess county, has held his present position in the employ of the New York Central Railroad Company for thirteen years. He is descended from one of the early families of Ulster county, N. Y., where his paternal grandparents, Henry and Cornelia Van Wey, were both born. In their family of five children were Mary, Cornelia and De Witt. The maternal grandparents, Zacharia and Gertrude (Near) Cole, were natives of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and in their family were thirteen children, namely: Jacob married Catherine Hapeman; Frederick married Sarah Aldridge; Edward L. married Eliza Traver; Simon married Julia Broadhead; George W. married Catherine Straut; Eliza married John McCurdy; Catherine married Charles Riggins; Susan married Henry Batcher; Lydia married Alfred Plass; Sarah married John Van Etten; Lucy remained single; Delia was the mother of our subject; and Margaret married Frank Stickle.

De Witt Van Wey, the father of Alfred, was born in the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and by trade was a wagonmaker, which occupation he followed throughout most of his life. He died in 1890. He had married Delia Cole, who was also a native of the town of Rhinebeck, and was there educated. Two children were born to them: Alfred, the subject of this review; and Charles, who wedded Hattie Traver, by whom he has four children—Ralph, Charles, Marion and Minnie.

Alfred Van Wey was united in marriage with Anna Albers, who was born in New York City in 1857, and in its public schools acquired a fair education. Two children have come to bless their union: Mildred, born in 1884; and Clara, born in 1885. Mrs. Van Wey is the daughter of Christian Albers, who was born in Germany. He was an engineer, and on emi-grating to the United States first located in New York City, where he married Maria Wulpin, also a native of the Fatherland, who had come to this country for that purpose. They became the parents of five children: Anna, wife of our subject; John; Mary, who became the wife of Thomas Quillen; Lewis, who married Emma Daily; and Herman, who died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Wey are pleasant, intelligent people, and well deserve the esteem and respect of those among whom they make their home. Socially, he is prominently identified with Christian Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Red Hook, and is also a member of Shiloh Encampment of the same place. He is a progressive and public-spirited citizen, taking commendable interest in the advancement and upbuilding of his town and county.

LOUIS SCHAFER, a well-known business man of Dover Plains, Dutchess county where he has been for many years engaged in the shoe trade, was born February 1, 1844, in Brunswick, Germany, which has been the home of his ancestors for many generations.

William Schafer, father of our subject, was born there, and received a good education in the public schools, and after learning the shoemaker's trade engaged in business there. He married Fraulein Sophia Schrieber, and had six children: William, who married Sophia ———; Henry, who died in the U. S. army; Louis, our subject; Charlotte, who married Anna, who died in infancy; and Sophia, who died at the age of twenty-three.

Our subject's early educational opportunities were excellent, and he improved them well during boyhood. He learned the shoemaker's trade with his father, but his business career was interrupted by a compulsory service of three years in the German army. At the end of his term he obtained a pass and came to the United States, locating in Brooklyn, N. Y. where he followed his trade for three years. In 1872 he moved to Dover Plains, and established his present prosperous business. He has always been a Republican in politics, but has never aspired to office, and he is a prominent member of the Baptist Church at Dover Plains. In 1872 he was married to Miss Catherine Miller, and has two children: Albert, born November 10, 1875, and Lizzie, born December 16, 1879.

Antonie Miller, Mrs. Schafer's father, is a native of Reichshoffen, Alsace-Lorraine (then a part of France), and was educated there. He was for some time engaged in farming, later becoming a tavern-keeper there. His wife was Catherine Bruner, daughter of Michael and Barbara Bruner, well-to-do farmers of Reichshoffen, and they had four children: Catherine (Mrs. Schafer); Philomane, who married George Durrenburger; Louis, who died at the age of twenty-three years; and Annie, the wife of Mr. Mower.

HENRY J. YEOMANS is a wide-awake and progressive citizen of the town of Unionvale, where he is successfully engaged in the operation of his farm. He is a native of Greene county, N. Y., born in Cairo township, August 22, 1847, and is a son of William Ira Yeomans, whose birth occurred in the same place in 1817. There the father attended the common schools, and after reaching years of maturity turned his attention to farming. On November 25, 1846, he married Miss Mary Haight, daughter of John and Sarah Haight, farming people of Dutchess county. Four children were born of this union, but with the exception of our subject all died when young. They were John H., born August 31, 1849; Charles W., born May 7, 1852; and Sarah Lucinda, born December 30, 1854. The wife and mother died in June, 1863, and later the father married Mrs. Harriet M. Green.

William Yeomans, the grandfather of our subject, was also a native of Greene county, received a district-school education and from early life engaged in farming. He married Miss Lucinda Blackmer, and they had nine children: Leonard; Elisha; George, who married Eliza Haight; Henry, who died unmarried; William I.; Hannah, who married Isaac Place; Anis, who married Cornell White; Catharine, who married John Hill; and Almira, who married Emmer Haight.

The advantages of our subject for securing a education were such as the public schools of his native county afforded, and on starting out in life for himself he engaged in mercantile business. Later he purchased the farm of ninety-four acres, of Mary Taber, on which he has since resided, and now has the place under a high state of cultivation and well-improved with all modern conveniences. He is a man of good financial ability and excellent judgment, and since becoming a resident of Unionvale has won the respect and confidence of the community, and occupies a leading position among its influential citizens.

Mr. Yeomans was united in marriage November 4, 1868, with Miss Mary Jane Wilber, who was born in 1849, at Duanesburgh, Schoharie county, N. Y. Eleven children blessed their union, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: William H., March 31, 1872; George D., October 23, 1873; Sarah Eliza, October 14, 1875; Charles E., July 20, 1877; Bradford W., May 14, 1879; Edwin J., January 16, 1881; Ester D., April 4, 1883; Theron J., September 21, 1885; Lizzie V., February 28, 1888; Lena M., November 21, 1891; and Florence, June 4, 1893. All are still living with the exception of Charles E. William H., the eldest son, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, was educated in the district schools, and is now carrying on farming. On November 28, 1893, he married Miss LaNeta Colwell.

Benjamin Wilber, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Yeomans, was a native of Dartmouth, R. I., but became a resident of Schoharie county, this State, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he made his life work. In 1799 he married Miss Mary Wilber, of Dutchess county, who though of the same name was no relative. They became the parents of seven children: Nathaniel (the grandfather of Mrs. Yeomans), Alanson, Briggs, Benjamin, Joseph, Rachel and Rhoda.

The birth of Nathaniel Wilber occurred in Schoharie county, June 1, 1800, and there he received his education. In early life he engaged in farming, but later carried on the meat business. In 1818 he wedded Rachel Bradford, who was born in Stanford in 1797, and by her he had six children: David, Bradford, Benjamin, Julius, Nathaniel and Sarah A.

David Wilber, the father of Mrs. Yeomans, was born in Schoharie county, in 1823, and after finishing his education learned the carpenter's trade, at which he was employed throughout the principal part of his life. For his first wife he married Miss Eliza N. Hoag, a daughter of Enoch and Mary (Norton) Hoag, farming people of Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, and the only child born of this union was Mary Jane, the wife of our subject. The wife and mother died in 1850, and later Mr. Wilber married Miss Monemia Levey, daughter of Philip and Monemia Levey.

Of the nine children by the second marriage of Mr. Wilber, Rosa, born in 1871, died in infancy, and another died in infancy unnamed. The others are as follows: (1) Charles E., born March 30, 1853, in Duanesburgh township, Schenectady county, is a carpenter and wagon maker by trade; on November 4, 1882, he married Miss Sarah J. Van Pelt, daughter of Alexander Van Pelt, and they had five children—Mary, Avan (deceased), Pearl, Roscoe (deceased) and Rosie. (2) Julius R., born in Schoharie county, June 22, 1856, is a conductor in the employ of the Albany & Susquehanna Railroad Company; he was married February 22, 1883, to Jennie Donahue, and they have three children—Nina, Ivy and Raymond. (3) William J., born January 1, 1858, died at the age of twenty-one years. (4) Bradford B., born in Schoharie county, August 11, 1859, married Minnie Van Steenburgh, of Dutchess county, by whom he has a daughter, Hazel; he is engaged in merchandising. (5) Edwin P., born in Schenectady county, September 22, 1861, is on a ranch in Meeker, Colo.; he married Mollie Watson, and has three children—Frank (deceased), Ella, and one whose name is not given. (6) Agnes, born in Schenectady county, November 7, 1863, is the wife of William Showers, who is at the head of the electric works at Schenectady, and they have two children—Flossie and Edna. (7) Ella M., born in Schoharie county, November 24, 1865, is the wife of Frank Watson, a carpenter of Meeker, Colo., and they have one child—Everett.

HYMAN B. ROSA. The well-known firm of H. B. Rosa & Son, of Fishkill and Matteawan, undertakers and dealers in furniture, is one of the oldest business concerns of that locality, having been founded in 1827 by the father of the subject of our sketch, John H. Rosa, who was a prominent citizen of Fishkill during the early part of this century. The home of the family had previously been at Hurley, Ulster county, where our subject's grandfather, Hyman Rosa, a son of Jacob Rosa, was a leading resident of his day. He and his wife, Rebecca Sleight, reared there a family of six children: Jacob, Jane, Maria, John H., Caleb Merritt and Newkirk. John H. Rosa married Margaret Crispell, and settled in Fishkill, where he at once engaged in business.

They had a family of seven children: Abram Gaasbeck, Hyman B., Jane Ann, Sarah C. Theodore A., John C. and Mary D.

Hyman B. Rosa was born in Fishkill village, January 26, 1829, and after attending the public schools of that place until the age of fifteen, he began to help his father in the store, acquiring there a complete knowledge of the business. In 1857 he was taken into partnership, and at the death of his father, in 1860, he became sole proprietor, and continued alone until his son, Frederic L., was ready to take a place in the firm. Since that time the business has been greatly enlarged, a branch at Matteawan having been established under the charge of his junior partner.

Mr. Rosa married Miss Sarah B. Southard, daughter of Richard and Elizabeth Southard, and their union was blessed with four children: Margaret C., Frank (who died at the age of eight years), Laura and Frederic L. The family are leading members of the Reformed Dutch Church, at Fishkill Village, and Mr. Rosa has taken an influential part in many local movements, giving his support to the Republican party on all political issues.

FREDERIC L. ROSA, who has already given evidence in his business career of the possession of that inherited ability, foresight and energy which has built up in past years the success of the firm of H. B. Rosa & Son, was born in Fishkill Village, March 15, 1867, and received his education in the public schools there. At the age of sixteen he entered the store as a clerk, and in 1888 became partner. The wide acquaintance and high reputation which his firm has enjoyed for more than half a century justified the establishment of the branch store at Matteawan, which was opened in October, 1894, and has since been carried on under his supervision. He also has full charge of their large undertaking business in Matteawan and Fishkill Landing, and has the finest hearses and other paraphernalia to be found in the county.

In June, 1893, F. L. Rosa married Miss Effie B. Coldwell, daughter of Samuel A. and Rebecca (Tompkins) Coldwell, and they reside at Fishkill Landing, in a pleasant home at the corner of Church street and Cottage place. They are prominent in the Reformed Dutch Church of that locality. Mr. Rosa is an active member of the K. of P., holding, at the present time, the office of prelate in Melzing Lodge No. 304; also a member of Evergreen

odge No. 131, I. O. O. F., and of the Lewis ompkins Hose Company. In politics he ad-eres to the Republican party.

GEORGE FEROE. Few men are more prominent in the enterprising village of Tivoli than this gentleman. He has been an important factor in business circles, and his popularity is well deserved, as in him are embraced the characteristics of an unbending integrity, unabated energy and industry that never flags. He is public-spirited, and thoroughly interested in whatever tends to promote the moral, intellectual and material welfare of the community.

Mr. Feroe was born in the town of Red Hook, October 14, 1825, and is a son of Henry Feroe, also a native of that town. The birth of the paternal grandfather occurred in France, and on emigrating to this country he located in the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he engaged in farming and reared his two children: Henry; and Betsy, who became the wife of Jacob Van Steenburgh, a farmer of the same township. The grandfather was a faithful member of the Reformed Dutch Church.

Although reared to agricultural pursuits,
Henry Feroe learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed exclusively through life. He was united in marriage with Maria Lasher, a native of the town of Red Hook, and of Holland descent. Her father, Sebastian Lasher, followed the occupation of farming. After this marriage the young couple located upon a farm in their native township, where they reared their family of eleven children: John is a retired carpenter of Tivoli; William (deceased) was a shoemaker by trade; Peter is also a carpenter of Tivoli; Betsie (deceased) was the wife of John Huffman, a shoemaker;
Edward is a carpenter of Fishkill, N. Y.; Luene and Robert died unmarried; Margaret married Stephen Clum, a carpenter; Matilda is the widow of Mr. Leason, an undertaker; Cecelia, who married Eli Best, a farmer, now makes her home in Tivoli; and George, of this family, is the eighth in order of birth. The parents, who were consistent members of the Reformed Dutch Church, have both departed this life.

Our subject remained upon the home farm until reaching his majority when he went to Tivoli, where he worked by the day. In 1843

he married Miss Sarah J. Simonson, a native of Red Hook town, and a daughter of James and Julia Simonson, the former a merchant.
The following year Mr. Feroe started westward, going by steamboat to Albany, thence up the Erie canal to Buffalo, from there to Toledo, Ohio, and then up the Maumee river to Logansport, Ind., but did not long remain there, returning to Red Hook in the fall.
After working at the carpenter's trade for some time he went to New Jersey, where he engaged in farming for four years, and for two years followed the same occupation in Michigan. Returning to New Jersey, he was there employed at painting and carpentering for some time, and in the city of Newark for four years followed gardening. His next home was near Peoria, Ill., where he engaged in agricultural pursuits some four years, after which he followed the same occupation in Michigan for thirteen years. In 1863, however, he returned to Tivoli, purchasing his present place, and has here since made his home. In connection with landscape gardening he is also engaged in the cooperage business, and in 1893 made 60,- 000 fruit barrels, one-half of the whole amount manufactured in Dutchess county.

Five children were born to our subject and his wife, two of whom died in infancy, and Adda passing away in 1893. Those living are Clarence, a resident of Tivoli; and Emma, wife of Montgomery Queen, who also lives in Tivoli. The mother's death occurred May 18, 1876. The present wife of our subject was Mary L. Moore, of Dutchess county, whom he married in 1876. They contribute liberally to the support of St. Paul's Church, and hold a high position in the social circles of the community. Although not very active in politics,
Mr. Feroe keeps himself well informed on current events, and uniformly votes the Republican ticket.

LEGBERT WOODIN, who is pleasantly located in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, is operating successfully as a farmer, and, although now over eighty-one years of age, is still numbered among the industrious and enterprising men of the county. He is a native son of Dutchess county, born in the town of Pawling, July 24, 1815, and here his entire life has been passed, his boyhood being spent in the place of his birth, but for thirty-five years he has resided upon his present farm in the town of Beekman. Active and energetic, he has not laid aside his business cares; in the spring of 1896 he planted a large field of corn.

Solomon Woodin, his father, was also born in the town of Pawling, and was the eldest in the family of seven children belonging to Amos and Lucretia (Millard) Woodin, residents of that township. There the father was reared, and was married to Miss Annie Franklin. In 1845 they removed to Beekman town, where he carried on farming and where their deaths occurred. Thirteen children were born to them: Ransom, Esther, Ira, Milton, Sarah, Amos, Federal, Lucretia, Egbert, Henry, Benjamin, Ruth and Chauncey. All are now deceased with the exception of Sarah, Federal, Egbert, Henry and Ruth.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed in the town of Pawling, but he was married in the town of Beekman, in 1833, to Miss Mary Millard, and they have three children: Elizabeth, the wife of Dr. John H. Doughty, of Matteawan, Dutchess county; Matilda, widow of W. H. Wright, and Robert, of Ann Arbor, Mich. Since 1838 Mr. Woodin has been a resident of the town of Beekman, and has been prominently identified with its affairs. He was first a Whig in politics, and now votes the Republican ticket; he has most acceptably filled the offices of collector and overseer of the poor. For over forty years he has held membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Poughquag, in which he is now serving as steward, and is a most consistent and earnest Christian.

JACKSON HUSTED, who occupies a fine and well-improved farm in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, is numbered among its prominent farmers, who from a small beginning has built up one of the best homesteads within its borders. The residence and its surroundings are highly creditable to the proprietor, and indicate him to be a man of industry and energy, one who has kept his eyes open on what is going on in the world around him, and availed himself of the most approved methods of carrying on agriculture.

Mr. Husted was born in October, 1828, in Saratoga county, N. Y., where his grandfather had made a settlement at an early day. The latter was a native of England, and on coming to the United States made his first home in Maine, whence he removed to Saratoga county. There the father of our subject, Louis Husted, was also born and reared, and on reaching man's estate wedded Phœbe Jackson, by whom he had four children: Walter W. (deceased), Jackson, subject of this review; Mary Ann, widow of John Robinson; and Phœbe Jane, wife of John H. Miller. The father continued to carry on agricultural pursuits in his native county until 1831, when he brought his family to Dutchess county, locating upon a farm in the town of Stanford, where his death occurred about 1855, and his wife survived him but a few years. He was a sincere Christian, and a member of the Baptist Church.

Being only three years of age at the time of his arrival in Dutchess county, Jackson Husted was here reared, attending the common schools of the town of Stanford during the winter terms, and assisting his father on the farm during the seasons of sowing and reaping. On starting out in life for himself he engaged in farming in the town of Stanford but later removed to Washington town, where he farmed for sixteen years, and the following two years were passed in Pleasant Valley town Dutchess county. In 1881 he located upon his present farm in the town of Clinton, to the cultivation and improvement of which he has since devoted his attention.

In Stanford town Mr. Husted was united in marriage with Mary Elizabeth Haight, daughter of George Haight, and to them have been born three children: Sarah H. is the wife of Jordan Cornelius, of LaFayetteville, town of Milan, Dutchess county; GEORGE L. was married in the town of Washington, September 9, 1879, to Annie M. Sissons, and they now make their home in Clinton town; and Judson is a resident of Stanford town. Mr. Husted, politically, votes with the Republican party, and he is a man worthy of the regard which he is held by all.

LEONARD L. MOREY has for the last thirty-two years been successfully operating on a fine farm in the town of Stanford Dutchess county, with most excellent results. The place, with its tasteful and substantial buildings, and its general air of thrift and comfort, forms one of the most attractive spots in the landscape of the township. As a citizen and business man, Mr. Morey stands high in the esteem of his neighbors. He is a nat-

Dutchess county, born in the town of Washington January 17, 1825.

John Morey, grandfather of Leonard L., was born about 1767, in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, where throughout life he carried on agricultural pursuits. He was a conscientious, Christian man, and a faithful member of the Reformed Church. He married Catherine Dean, who was born about 1770, and to them were born four children: Elizabeth, Isaac, Margaret and John.

Isaac Morey, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Lagrange March 4, 1798, and there spent his early days. On reaching manhood he was married in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, to Miss Maria Pells, daughter of Evert and Deborah (Lewis) Pells, and they became the parents of five children: Evert P., Leonard Lewis, Deborah, Mary and John. Leonard Lewis, grandfather of Mrs. Isaac Morey, was the first judge of Dutchess county. For about five years after his marriage Isaac Morey engaged in the cultivation of land in the town of Washington, at the end of which time he came to Stanford town, where he followed farming during the remainder of his life. In political sentiment he was first a Whig and later a Republican, while in matters of religion he held membership with the Methodist Episcopal Church of Bangall, N. Y. He lived to an advanced age, dying in March, 1877; his wife passed away December 20, 1883, at the age of eighty-one years.

The early life of our subject was spent in the manner of most farmers' sons, his education being carried on in the district schools of the town of Stanford. He continued to assist in the care and cultivation of the home farm for five years after his marriage, October 17, 1850, in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, to Miss Elizabeth L. Hicks. This estimable lady, who was the daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Couse) Hicks, was born August 11, 1830, and died December 20, 1887, leaving many friends as well as her immediate family to mourn her death. One child came from this union: Ida J., born October 26, 1854, died January 6, 1874, to Philip Dorland, from whom she has two children: Anita, now the wife of Emmer Haight, and has one child Ruth A., born November 29, 1895; and John. The entire life of Mr. Morey has been devoted to farming in the town of Stanford, and there are few men in the community more widely or favorably known, or who have a larger list of warm friends. In politics he is identified with the Republican party, and is a strong believer in its principles.

JOHNS HOPKINS, one of the enterprising, energetic and industrious citizens of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, conducts a drug store there, and has done much toward promoting the welfare of the place. By close application to his business and good management he has built up an excellent trade.

Mr. Hopkins is a native of Dutchess county, his birth having occurred in the town of Lagrange, July 8, 1845, and he is a son of William H. Hopkins, who was born in Putnam county, N. Y. His paternal grandfather, William G. Hopkins, was also a native of Putnam county, and was one of the leading physicians of Peekskill, N. Y. He married Elizabeth Frost, of Croton Landing, N. Y., and to them were born two sons and two daughters, namely: William H.; Calista, who became the wife of Reuben Baldwin, of Mahopac, Putnam county; Phœbe Jane; and Alonzo (deceased), who was a farmer in Illinois. The grandfather died in 1870.

The father of our subject was educated at Yale College, and began the study of medicine with his father, afterward graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York City. About 1838 he began practice for himself at Sprout Creek, N. Y., traveling round to see his patients on horseback, with his saddle bags. In 1868 he removed to Providence, R. I., where he also followed his profession, to some extent, until coming to Hyde Park, two years later. Prior to 1885 he engaged in general practice, but from that time until his death, May 23, 1890, he did mostly an office practice, and was one of the leading allopathic physicians of the community, receiving a liberal patronage from all the surrounding country. As a private citizen he took quite an active interest in politics, voting with the Republican party, and for a number of years served as postmaster at Hyde Park. He held membership with St. James Episcopal Church, of which he was a vestryman, and was serving as treasurer of same at the time of his death, while early in life he belonged to the Masonic fraternity. He was an intelligent, cultured gentleman, thoroughly conversant with his profession, and kept well-informed on matters of general interest. Dr. Hopkins married Jemima Van Benschoten, daughter of Elias Van Benschoten, of Lagrange town, and they became the parents of five children: Harriet (now deceased); Elias, freight agent for the West Shore railroad at Brooklyn, N. Y.; John, subject of this review; William G., who is engaged in the manufacture of jewelry at Providence, R. I.; and Elizabeth, who died at the age of twelve years.

John Hopkins, the subject proper of these lines, attended the Poughkeepsie Academy, finishing his literary training at the age of sixteen, and in 1861 entered the drug store of Wood & Tittamer, where he remained some eight years, during which time he thoroughly learned the trade. Going to Providence, R. I., in 1869, he there engaged in the drug business for two years, after which, for one year, he was a member of the firm of Hopkins & Arnold, conducting their store where Charles E. Bowne is now located. Selling out to Charles Mitchell, he entered the drug store of his father, at Hyde Park, and in 1893 purchased the establishment, which is one of the oldest stores of the kind in the village. Politically, Mr. Hopkins is a stalwart Republican, strongly endorsing the course of that party, and takes quite an active interest in public affairs, being treasurer of his School and Fire districts.

TIMOTHY HERRICK is a prominent and well-known agriculturist of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, and the capable superintendent of the extensive farm of the late William B. Dinsmore, known as "The Locusts." He traces his ancestry in this country back to Henric Herrick, who was born in England in 1604, and became one of the three original ancestors of the Herrick family in America. He was the fifth son of Sir William Herrick, who was born in 1557, and lived at Beau Manor, in Leicestershire, England. His father was John Eyrick (or Heyrick), who was born in 1513, in the same county, and was a son of Thomas Eyrick, of Houghton. The latter's father, Robert Eyrick, was born at Houghton about 1450, and was a lineal descendant of Erick the Forester, who was a Danish chief, and one of the invaders of England during the reign of Alfred, the Saxon King of Britain, by whom he was overcome and compelled to settle in East Anglia, in which is that part of England now called Leicestershire, and where his descendants still reside in great affluence.

Joseph Herrick, of Cherry Hill, Mass., was the son of Henric Herrick, the founder of the family in the New World, and was born at Salem, in 1645. Of him Upham's "Salem Witchcraft" says: "He was a man of great firmness and dignity of character, and, in addition to the care and management of his large farm, was engaged in foreign commerce. As he bore the title of Governor, he had probably been at one time in command of a military post or district, or perhaps at the West India Colony. He was the acting constable of Salem, and as such concerned in the early proceedings connected with the witchcraft prosecutions. For a while he was under the delusion; but his strong and enlightened mind soon led him out of it. He was one of the petitioners in behalf of an accused person, when intercession by any for any was highly dangerous; and he was a leader in the party that rose against the fanaticism, and vindicated the character of its victims." His son John was born January 25, 1670, and was the father of Josiah, born February 6, 1704. The next in direct line also bore the name of Josiah Herrick. He was born November 10, 1733, and became the father of Joseph Herrick, of Beverly, Mass., who was born November 3, 1775. The father of our subject, Nathaniel Brown Herrick, was the latter's son, born at Beverly, Mass., April 23, 1813, and removed to Antrim, N. H., at the age of six years, with his parents.

Timothy Herrick, the subject of this review, was born at Antrim, N. H., October 19, 1836, and during his boyhood he supplemented the knowledge acquired in the common school by a two-terms' attendance at an academy at Francistown, N. H., securing an excellent education for those times. He has always been much of a student, and has made a special study of agriculture in all departments. At the age of seventeen years he completed his literary education, but continued working upon his father's farm under that gentleman's noble instructions, who instilled into his son the thorough-going business principles. In the winter of 1856-57 he was employed by Esquire Dod (of Bennington, N. H.), an uncle of William B. Dinsmore, and upon the former's recommendation he became superintendent of "The Locusts" for Mr. Dinsmore. The farm then consisted of only 100 acres, and he had 1.

Yours Truly
Timothy Herrick
TH

two men under him; but it has gradually grown until it now comprises over 1,000 acres, and it is now necessary to employ forty men in its cultivation and improvement. For the last forty years Mr. Herrick has had entire control of the place, conducting it exactly as if it were his own, and its interests have ever been forwarded in his hands. He possesses great executive ability, and is the peer of any in his life endeavor. The place well indicates his able management, industry and progressive spirit.

In 1858, Mr. Herrick wedded Elizabeth Muldoon, daughter of John Muldoon, of New York City, and they have become the parents of five children: (1) George A., born July 20, 1859, is an engineer on the Hudson River railroad, with residence at Croton, N. Y. (2) Mary Elizabeth, born July 16, 1861, married Eugene V. Daly; after graduating at a female medical college, she practiced her profession in New York City for twelve years, during which time she became well known; she is quite talented, and is very popular among her acquaintances. (3) Luella J., born August 26, 1864, the wife of Dr. Barker, of Woodside, Long Island. (4) John J., born April 5, 1866, is a graduate of Cornell University, and is now superintendent of the Department of Docks in New York City. (5) Albert E., born January 19, 1869, is connected with the National Ice Co., of New York City.

In politics, Mr. Herrick is a strong adherent of the doctrines of the Democratic party, and takes considerable interest in local affairs. In 1871-72, and again in 1884-85, he served as supervisor of the town of Hyde Park, and has frequently been urged to accept other offices in the county. He is prominently connected with the Masonic order, belonging to Rhinebeck Lodge No. 432, F. & A. M., at Rhinebeck; the Royal Arch Chapter No. 45, at Kingston, N. Y., and of the Knights Templar, at Poughkeepsie.

HENRY S. MARSHALL, an enterprising and progressive agriculturist of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, is of pioneer stock, his ancestors in more than one line of descent having been early residents of the county.

His grandfather, Henry S. Marshall, was born in Pleasant Valley, and married Sarah Gifford, a native of Stanford, by whom he had six children: Susan, Ann, John Gifford, Theodore, Caroline and Edward H., none of whom are now living, except Edward H. Marshall, of Millbrook. He is a leading farmer of the town of Hyde Park, and a well-known auctioneer; he is a Hicksite Quaker in religious faith, and in politics a Democrat.

John Gifford Marshall, our subject's father, was born in the town of Hyde Park, July 16, 1824, and died there March 8, 1892, having always lived at the old homestead, following agriculture as an occupation. His education was carefully supervised at home in early boyhood, and later he entered Jacob Willett's Boarding School in the town of Washington. Like his ancestors, he was a member of the Society of Friends. He was married in Hyde Park to Phoebe Jane Marshall, daughter of Henry B. Marshall, a prominent resident of that town. Of the three children of this union our subject was the youngest; the others are: (1) Leonora married Oliver H. Drew; (2) Theodore, deceased, married Anna Foreman.

Henry S. Marshall was born April 6, 1861, in the town of Hyde Park, and was reared at the old homestead. He attended the public schools there for some time, and was then sent to Gideon Frost's school on Long Island, and De Garmo Institute at Rhinebeck. He married Miss Vernie Smith, daughter of George P. Smith, a leading citizen of Clinton Corners, and has three children: Atherton G., Gifford H. and George S. Mr. Marshall has been engaged in farming in Hyde Park and the town of Washington since he first began in business for himself. He is active and influential in local affairs, and at present holds the office of school director at Clinton Corners.

JOHN H. ENSIGN, a well-known resident of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is one of the most valued employes of the Harlem Railroad Company, having been in their service for a quarter of a century. He was born in Dover Plains in 1845, and after attending the schools of that place during boyhood entered the employ of the railroad company as brakeman, and his faithful discharge of his duties soon led to his promotion to the position of conductor. He is actively interested in local affairs, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Lodge No. 666, of Dover. In 1882 he married Miss Ida Vincent, of Dover, and they have one son, John O. Ensign, born in 1885.

The Ensign family is of New England origin, and our subject's grandfather, Asa Ensign, was born and educated in Massachusetts. He was a blacksmith by trade, and came in early manhood to Dutchess county, locating in the town of Dover, where he and his wife, Catherine, reared a family of six children: John, our subject's father; Samuel, who married (first) Julia Orton, and (second) Adelia Hubbel; Stillman, who married Amy Sherman; Eliza and Maria, who never married; and Sarah, the wife of Harrison Sherman.

John Ensign was born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, in 1800, and on leaving school he learned the carpenter's trade. He then engaged in contracting and building, and followed this business throughout his life. He married Miss Almira Manchester, daughter of Stephen Manchester (a well-known blacksmith of Dover) and his wife Elizabeth. Five children were born of this union: Eliza, who is not married; Emily, the wife of John E. Benson; Mary, who died at twenty-six years of age; John H., our subject; and Catherine, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Ensign is a descendant of one of the old families of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, her grandfather, Jonathan Vincent, having been a native of that locality. He married Miss Martha Duncan, and settled upon a farm there, where their eight children were born and reared. William married Ann Eggleston; Allen, Mrs. Ensign's father, is mentioned below; Isaac married (first) Jane A. Beers, and (second) Imogene Butts; George married Amanda Coolie; Leonard and Edgar are not married; E. Ann married William Colby; and Amanda was the wife of Oscar Wilcox. Allen Vincent grew to manhood in the town of Dover, and engaged in agriculture. His wife was Miss Mary Stage, daughter of David and Mary Stage, prominent residents of Dover Plains. Mrs. Ensign was the eldest of six children. Of the others, Addie married George Vincent; Mary—Martin Wilcox; Martha—William Brown; Augusta—Fred Wilcox; Daisy is not married.

JOHAN A. FRALEIGH. The name of this gentleman is well and favorably known throughout the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he is prosperously engaged in farming. The family have long been residents of that locality, of which Peter Fraleigh (2), (a son of Peter Fraleigh (1)), the grandfather of our subject, was a native (born February 25, 1772, died October 8, 1853), and there he followed agricultural pursuits throughout life. He was twice married, his first union being with a Miss Teator, by whom he had two children, both now deceased; Katie, who became the wife of William Feller; and Peter, who married Lany Link. After the death of his first wife, Mr. Fraleigh wedded Mrs. Catherine (Coon) Cooper, a widow.

The only child born of the latter union was George W. Fraleigh, the father of our subject, whose birth occurred in the town of Red Hook June 6, 1816. After completing his education he took up farming, and made that occupation his life work. In the old training days he was a member of a company of cavalry; in early life held a number of township offices, and was a stalwart Republican in politics. He was united in marriage November 28, 1833, with Miss Regina Waldorf (who was born April 23, 1820), a daughter of Capt. William Waldorf, and five children were born to them: Peter W., who married Helen Crandall, and is now deceased; John A., subject of this sketch; Monroe, who married Gertrude Martin Rosalie; and Philip E., who wedded Phoebe K. Conklin. The father of these died June 15, 1866, the mother on December 28, 1870, and they are both buried in the M. E. cemetery at Red Hook.

Our subject was born in the town where he still makes his home, and was there educated. Reared beneath the parental roof-tree, he remained with his father and mother, assisting in the manual labor incident to the life of an agriculturist, until 1869, when he secured a position in the New York post office under Postmaster James, being appointed by Governor Fenton. After leaving that employment he returned to the town of Red Hook and assumed the management of his father's farm, which he purchased after the latter's death in 1871. He has since conducted the farm with remarkable success, and is one of the reliable and most esteemed members of the community. He makes a specialty of dairy and fruit raising, and by the exercise of industry and excellent management his efforts have been rewarded with a well-merited success. In 1870, Mr. Fraleigh was united in marriage with Miss Irene Curtis, daughter of John Curtis of Red Hook, and three children now grace the union: Curtis, born June 24, 1872; Rosalie, born May 5, 1875; and Herbert E., born 2-ember 27, 1877. Of these, Curtis is a clerk in the hardware store of P. E. Fraleigh, at Red Hook; Rosalie M. is receiving her education at Dr. Clark's, Tivoli, and at Mrs. Currie's, Albany; and Herbert E. is attending Moody's school at Mt. Hermon, preparing himself for the study of civil engineering. Mrs. Fraleigh was born September 2, 1845, in the town of Red Hook, and received her education at the Stocking Academy (afterward known as the De Garmo Classical Institute), Rhinebeck. Her father, John Curtis, was a native of Rhinebeck, born February 17, 1818, married Jane B. Beaumont, a native of Yorkshire, England, and to them were born eight children, to wit: LeGrand, in the Hudson River Hospital; Edwin S., a captain in the U. S. regular army, having joined in 1861; Irene (Mrs. John A. Fraleigh); Florence, married to Willis (all three deceased); Herbert, of Red Hook; and J. Canfield (deceased). Mrs. Fraleigh's grandfather, LeGrand Curtis, was a native of Trumbull, Conn., and was a son of Capt. John Curtis, who was a captain in the Light Horse during the Revolutionary war, and is interred at Barrytown, in Dutchess county.

LATHROP BARRETT, one of the most progressive and enterprising agriculturists of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, and the owner of a fine farm near Coleman Station, was born in that vicinity August 30, 1858. His grandfather, the late E. Lathrop Barrett, a native of Norwich, Conn., came to Dutchess county in early manhood, locating first at Pine Plains, and later in the town of Northeast. He was a carpenter by trade, but after purchasing a tract of 120 acres of land in Northeast, he devoted his time to its cultivation, and became noted for his successful management. He married Rhoda Dakin, daughter of Caleb Dakin, and a descendant of one of the earliest settlers of the town. He died in 1857, and his wife in 1860. They had five children: Sarah Louise, Dakin, Edward L., Myron, and Oliver, our subject's father. During his boyhood the subject of this sketch attended the district schools near his home, and a private school in Sharon, Conn., later studying for one year in Cazenovia Seminary, a Methodist institution at Cazenovia, N. Y., receiving a good English education. As he has always been a reader, he has acquired a large fund of information on subjects of general interest. At nineteen years of age he returned home, where he remained for some time, but on June 16, 1881, he entered the service of the Harlem Railroad Co., as agent at Coleman Station, having the entire charge of their interests there. He remained twelve years without interruption, with the exception of a six-months' leave of absence.

He married Miss Alice N. Clark, a member of one of the oldest families of Northeast, and a daughter of Philo W. Clark, a well-known farmer there. They have one son, Raymond Lathrop, born June 21, 1894, and one daughter, Louisa Alice, born April 16, 1896. In 1892 Mr. Barrett purchased Mr. Clark's farm of 215 acres, and January 16, 1893, he resigned his position with the railroad company to engage in agriculture. He gives especial attention to horticulture, and has a fine orchard upon the estate. As a careful yet progressive manager he has been successful in his enterprise. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has never done any political work, although in local affairs, which do not involve any partisan issues, he has at times been a prominent helper. He and his wife are active members of the Presbyterian Church, and he is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Webatuck Lodge, of Millerton, in which he has held all the offices, Poughkeepsie Chapter No. 172, and Commandery No. 43.

ISAAC CORBIN. Among the pleasant rural homes of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, is that of Mr. Corbin, a prosperous agriculturist and one of the leading citizens of the town. His present wife, whose maiden name was Mary F. Allison, was born in Hastings county, Canada, Aug. 29, 1860, and received her education in the common schools of her native country. Their marriage took place in 1883. By his first marriage, to Miss Jennie Sherman, Mr. Corbin had three children: Albert J., born November 6, 1872; Anna M., February 12, 1875; and Charles L., March 3, 1876; and there are six children of the second union: William, born April 4, 1884; B. Frank, September 11, 1885; I. Cecil, June 12, 1887; Ethel B., May 11, 1889; D. Lewis, April 21, 1891; and Clement, April 27, 1896.

The Allison family has been identified with Prince Edward county, Canada, from a very early period. Mrs. Corbin's grandfather, John Allison, was born in New Jersey and educated there, and served in the British army in the Revolutionary war. On his return home he purchased land there and followed farming and weaving throughout the remaining years of his life. He married Miss Ann Sprague, and had eight children, of whom Benjamin I., Mrs. Corbin's father, was the first. Of the others, Henry B. married Delanie Schamerhorn; David wedded Jane Smith; Joseph—Catherine Wood; Phœbe—Griffin Howell; Betsy—Myron Wood; Catherine died in infancy; and Sophia married Samuel Parks.

Benjamin I. Allison was born at the old home in Canada in 1817, and after availing himself of the educational privileges afforded in the common schools of his native place, became a farmer there. He was a great sportsman, and was much interested in political questions, espousing the liberal side, but he never aspired to public office. He married Miss Eliza H. Greeley, daughter of Jonathan and Harriet (Roblin) Greeley, the former of whom was a well-known surveyor and farmer. Twelve children were born of this union, all of whom were educated in the schools of Hastings county: (1) Absalom G. has been a train dispatcher on the Grand Trunk railroad in Canada for over thirty years. He married Miss Nancy Simpkins, and has had five children: Maude, who married Ned Dickson, and has two daughters—Florence and Nettie; Florence, who married Kep C. Lyons, and has one daughter—Grace; Arthur; Claude; and Emma. (2) John S., a farmer in Pennsylvania, married Miss Mary Wilson, and has had four children: Benjamin, William, Fred and Maggie. (3) Jonathan, a farmer in Canada, married Miss Sarah Prentice, and has had five children: May, Olive, Flossie, Pearl and Lena. (4) Harriet married William Toppings, and has had four children: James, Jonathan, Eva and Laura. (5) William H. has been train dispatcher on the Credit Valley & Canadian Pacific railroad for eighteen years. He married Miss Georgiana Cole, and has one son, Cecil. (6) Benjamin R., a speculator in Canada, married Miss Kate Hazzel, and has one daughter, Gertrude. (7) Phœbe E. married James Ferris, and has had three children: Allison, Bessie and Greeley. (8) Sarah C. married Charles Baker, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and has seven children: Dufferin, Horace, Robert, Elma, Victoria, Ruth and Florence. (9) Eva H. married John Noble, of St. Paul, Minn., and has had five children: Frank, Clara Benjamin, Mabel and Marion. (10) Mary F. is the wife of Isaac Corbin. (11) Martha N. married Benjamin Frank Burr. (12) Joseph C. died in infancy.

JOHNSON WHITEHOUSE (deceased) was born July 19, 1817, at Gonic, a village near Rochester, N. H., and was of French and English descent. His father, who was a farmer, gave his son the best education which the neighborhood afforded, but the young man developed an early desire for a wider field and when scarcely more than sixteen years old went to New York, which has been so aptly termed the "City of Opportunity," and never made better use of the city's opportunity. Entering a jobbing house in boots and shoes utterly without experience, he in a very few years thoroughly mastered the business, outstripping many older employes. He went to live in Brooklyn, and in 1838, when but twenty-one, married Fanny Smith, later buying a house and establishing his home in Clinton avenue. In the meantime he started in the boot-and-shoe business in Brooklyn for himself, as head of the firm of Whitehouse & Co. His success was marked, and his advancement rapid. Among other remunerative contracts which he had during the next few years was one on Randall's Island.

In 1863, having sold his Brooklyn business Mr. Whitehouse removed to Poughkeepsie and built an immense shoe factory, which he conducted with increasing success until his death, often employing as high as five hundred operatives. His close attention to business, indomitable energy, skill in adapting himself to the needs of the times, prudence and upright character brought their logical rewards, and he amassed a large fortune. Interests outside his business attracted his serious attention but once. In 1872 he consented to become a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket in the district comprising the counties of Dutchess, Putnam and Columbia, a district supposed to be hopelessly Republican. In this campaign Mr. Whitehouse brought to the same energy and sagacity which had marked his business career, and though skilled and experienced politicians were pitted against him he was elected by nearly a thousand majority, defeating John H. Ketcham. The campaign was an exciting and memorable one, and still spoken of as a remarkable instance of what a trained business man may accomplish in politics when so disposed. Two years later he was re-elected, but declined a third nomination. His terms in Congress were marked by hard and honest work, and were satisfactory to his constituents.

C. M. Lincoln

On moving to Poughkeepsie Mr. Whitehouse bought a large estate on the edge of town and established a country home, the beautifying and enlarging of which became his pride. This estate adjoined "Springside," the home of Matthew Vassar. In 1868 "Springside" was annexed and incorporated with the Whitehouse property. Mr. Whitehouse was a stockholder in various financial institutions, and the largest stockholder and managing director of the Ninth National Bank, of New York. During the Civil war he was loyal to the Union and active in promoting its cause, and became a member of the Union League Club.

Mr. Whitehouse may probably best be described as a typical American in the best sense of the term. No trait of his character was more marked than his independence and self-reliance. He made up his mind on a given subject carefully, and from a thorough understanding of all its details, and then acted with the full courage of his convictions. Loyalty to his friends was another of his marked characteristics. He died at Poughkeepsie August 24, 1881; his wife passed away January 13, 1893. Of their six children, John S., Spencer S., William, Fanny A., and James H. are deceased, leaving Mary Josephine, wife of EUGENE N. HOWELL, as the only surviving child. She, with her husband and son, John Whitehouse Howell, reside during the summer months at Poughkeepsie, on the old Whitehouse estate.

FRANK BENTLEY WILBUR, an experienced farmer and most genial and companionable gentleman, has made his home on his present fine farm in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, since 1869. He is a man of great energy and perseverance, and has effected many improvements on his place since taking possession. He is recognized as a valued addition to the community, a man possessed of excellent judgment, and giving his support and encouragement to those enterprises calculated for the general welfare.

His grandfather, Samuel Wilbur, who was a native of Milan town, Dutchess county, married Elizabeth Hicks, by whom he had eight children: George, Hiram, Ephraim, Benjamin (father of our subject), Jephtha, Cynthia, Mary and Phœbe, all now deceased save Hiram and Phœbe. The family is of English origin, and was founded in this country at an early day. The grandfather of our subject spent most of his life engaged in farming in Pine Plains, where he was a well-known and highly-respected citizen. His political support was given to the Whig party.

Benjamin Wilbur, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Pine Plains January 17, 1815, and, after completing his education in the common schools, taught there for several years. On December 10, 1842, in his native township, he was united in marriage with Miss Antoinette Bentley, a daughter of Hiram Bentley, of Pine Plains, and to them were born four children: Frank Bentley, subject of this review; Emma V., who was born January 9, 1846, and is now the wife of Charles L. Carrol, of Pine Plains; Guliette, who was born September 9, 1855, and died December 24, 1859, and Cora L., who was born March 1, 1859, and died on the 28th of December following. After his marriage the father located upon a farm in Pine Plains town, where he followed agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred July 23, 1893. He took a leading part in the affairs of the township, served his fellow citizens in the offices of assessor and commissioner, and was prominently identified with all public interests. Politically he was an ardent Republican in later years, and previous to the organization of that party supported the Whig candidates. He was a faithful member of the Christian Church at Pine Plains, in which, for many years, he served as deacon. His loving wife died July 12, 1893, only a few days previous to his death.

Frank B. Wilbur remained at home until his marriage, assisting his father in the operation of the farm during the summer months, while in the winters, during his boyhood days, he attended the district schools, where he acquired a practical education, and was thus fitted for the responsible duties of life. In the town of Stanford, October 19, 1869, he married Miss Mary B. Sackett, daughter of Phineas K. Sackett, of that township, and they have become the parents of three children, namely:

Nina B., who was born March 12, 1871, and who was married June 20, 1894, to Henry E. Cornelius, of Stanford town (they have two children: Elinor, born April 26, 1895, and Mary, born December 29, 1896); Mae S., born October 9, 1873, and Effie G., born October 7, 1878. On July 17, 1895, Mr. Wilbur was called upon to mourn the loss of his estimable wife, who had ever been a faithful companion and helpmeet to him.

Politically our subject is a staunch adherent of the doctrines formulated by the Republican party, finding in that organization what to him seem the principles most calculated to perpetuate our form of popular government. He is one of the prominent and representative men of his township, looked up to and esteemed by the entire community.

JOHN GOLLENBECK. Among the most enterprising citizens of this country are those who were born in Germany, and who have brought to this fertile and productive land the thrift and economy of the Old World. Among these there is no figure that stands out more prominently in the history of Dutchess county than the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch, and who is now a leading farmer in the town of Unionvale.

His paternal grandfather, John Wiseman, was born in Liebstadt, Prussia, and was a farmer by occupation. He wedded Miss Maria Linman, and to them were born six children: Stephen, Harry, John, Katie, Elizabeth and Mary. Stephen Wiseman, the father of our subject, was a native of the same place, was there educated and learned the wagon-maker's trade, at which he worked most of his life. His employer left his business to him, provided he would take his name, which was Gollenbeck. This he assumed, and took control of the property. He was united in marriage with Miss Maria Scheroff, and they had four children: John, William, Frank and Maria.

John Gollenbeck, our subject, was born in Westphalia, Germany, in 1825, and in the place of his nativity attended school. In the old country he also learned the wagon-maker's trade, at which he worked until crossing the Atlantic to America in 1855. He at first located in New York City, where he worked at his trade for thirteen months, but at the end of that time came to the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and turned his attention to farming. During the dark days of the Rebellion, he resolved to aid his adopted country in preserving the Union, and at Poughkeepsie enlisted in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I., with which he faithfully served until hostilities had ceased. He now holds membership with Hamlin Post, G. A. R.

Mr. Gollenbeck was married to Miss Antoinette Austin, daughter of Irving Austin, a laborer of Dutchess county, and they have two children: Mattie and William. Mattie is the wife of Obed Hewett, a butcher, carpenter and farmer of Arthursburg, Dutchess county and they have six children: Robert, Ephraim, Judson, Lehman, Mabel and Florence. William was born, reared and educated in the town of Unionvale, where he is now carrying on farming.

J. Austin, the grandfather of Mrs. Gollenbeck, was one of the Revolutionary heroes. He was a native of Dutchess county, and a farmer by occupation. By his marriage with Miss Sallie A. McIntyre he had five children: Sallie, who married Joseph Bowman; John, who died when young; Irving, the father of Mrs. Gollenbeck; Jane, who married Jacob Rozell, and Mary, who became the wife of Clark Duncan. Irving Austin was born in Dutchess county in 1803, received a common school education, and during his youth learned the shoemaker's trade, but the principal part of his life was devoted to general farming. He married Miss Ann Sweet, daughter of Uriah Sweet, a collier, of Dutchess county and they became the parents of seven children: Almira, who married George Van Cort; Lavina, who married John Rosterhaut; Sara A., who married Romaine Stevens; Amelia George, who married Emily Dennis; Henry, who married Hannah Cooper; and Antoinette, the honored wife of our subject.

GEORGE W. RYMPH. This gentleman occupies no unimportant position among the leading citizens of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county. He is a native of Ulster county, N. Y., born in the town of Gardiner near Tuthill, July 19, 1839, and is a son of James Rymph, whose birth occurred at the old Rymph homestead on the Hyde Park road in this county. The family name was originally spelled Rim, and the great-grandfather, George Rymph, who was a native of Witteberg, Germany, came to this country with t Cookinghams, who settled at Wurtemberg. He arrived a few years prior to 1769, when the house on the old homestead was built, and the farm, consisting of 215 acres, was purchased of Dr. John and Susanna Bard, the Doctor being one of the Great Nine Partners. Mr. Rymph, being a thrifty and enterprising man, added to his land until at the time of his death he had 600 acres, and was one of the prosperous and prominent citizens of the locality. His sons were George, Abram, Luke, James and John, and, of his three daughters, one married a Mr. Buckingham, of Catskill, N. Y., and another married a Mr. Beeman. George married and went west, but the other four sons remained upon the old homestead in the town of Hyde Park, where they were held in the highest regard. Slavery was still tolerated at that time in this section, and the family owned a few slaves. With the exception of John Rymph, the grandfather of our subject, the other sons that remained on the homestead did not marry. He wedded Wyenna Hasbrouck, who belonged to one of the old Hugenot families of Ulster county, and to them were born the following children: James; John; William George; David; Edward L.; Maria, who became the wife of Abram S. DuBois; Margaret, who married Benjamin L. Hasbrouck; Sarah, who wedded Jacob Chambers, of Ithaca, Tompkins Co., N. Y., brother of Mr. George Chambers, of Stone Ridge, Ulster Co., N. Y.; Rachel, who married John P. Chrysler, of Hyde Park; and Susan. All of his family lived to quite advanced ages. In early life their father was a captain and boatman on the Hudson river, but after his marriage his time was devoted to agricultural pursuits upon the old homestead farm.

James Rymph, the father of our subject, was joined in wedlock with Hannah Budd, daughter of James Budd, of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and the aunt of Gov. James H. Budd, the only Democratic Governor elected in California; and the sister of Joseph H. Budd, a justice of the supreme court of that State. To this worthy couple were born six children, three sons and three daughters—Ellen, who died in infancy; George, of this review; Jane, who died unmarried; John J., living in Clinton, Dutchess county; Mary A., twin sister of John, who died unmarried; and Albert J., who is living in Harper Co., Kans. During the first two or three years of his married life the father lived in what is now Gardiner, and then purchased a farm in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, where he spent his remaining years. For that farm of 148 acres he went $7,000 in debt, but so well did he succeed in his business undertakings that at the time of his death he had two other farms, was director in the City National Bank, and one of the original stockholders in both the Rhinebeck Bank and the City National Bank of Poughkeepsie, all of which property was the result of his own untiring efforts and perseverance. He was originally a Democrat in politics, but at the time of the Civil war he joined the Republican party, and was ever afterward one of its stalwart supporters. He was a well-read, intelligent man, a member in good standing of the Presbyterian Church at Pleasant Plains, in the work of which he took an active part, and was a leading citizen of the community. His earthly career was ended in 1884.

Mr. Rymph, whose name introduces this sketch, was educated in a private seminary and the Dutchess County Academy (the latter of which he attended a part of two years), and is well informed on the current events of the day. On leaving the school-room he returned to his father's farm, where he remained until 1883, giving his attention to its management and also to the one his father had given to him. In the spring of 1884 he removed to the latter place, on the Hyde Park road, then comprising 165 acres, to which by purchase he added fifty acres, making the original 215 acres which belonged to his great-grandfather, George Rymph.

In December, 1883, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Rymph and Miss Estelle Pearsall, of the town of Hyde Park, daughter of Samuel H. Pearsall, and they have two sons and one daughter,—George H., James G. B., and Marguerite E. Reared in the Republican party, our subject has always adhered to its principles, but at local elections usually votes independent of party ties, supporting the man whom he thinks best qualified to fill the position. In 1875 he was elected assessor of his town, and in the spring of 1894 was elected justice of the peace for a period of four years. Socially, he is connected with Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 266, F. & A. M.; religiously, he is identified with the Reformed Dutch Church, which he attends. He is at present serving as secretary and treasurer of the Farmers Town Co-operative Insurance Company, of the town of Hyde Park, and is one of the stockholders of the Huguenot Bank of New Paltz, Ulster Co., N. Y. He has aided in the advancement of his town and county in many ways, and is uniformly the friend of progress and education.

FRANK HERRICK, an enterprising and prosperous merchant of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born February 2, 1852, in the town of Pine Plains, where his family has long been prominent.

He is a great-grandson of Ephraim Herrick, who had a son Ephraim Herrick (2), whose son, John A. Herrick, our subject's father, was born in 1817, and became one of the leading citizens of Pine Plains. He followed farming during his active life, but is now passing his declining years in retirement in the village of Rhinebeck. His fine mental ability and high character have made him deservedly popular among a wide circle of acquaintances, and he has often been called upon to fill positions of trust, and was supervisor of the town of Pine Plains for eight years, and for a long period was assessor and commissioner of highways. Politically he was a Democrat, and has given much of his attention to the interests of his party in his locality. He married Miss Margaret Sherwood, daughter of Isaac Sherwood, a well-known resident of Milan. Of their three children, our subject is the second; the others are: Louisa, the eldest, married John D. Hedges, of Milan; and Minerva married Charles Ferris, formerly of Milan, now of Rhinebeck.

Frank Herrick received a good English education in his youth, attending the district schools near his home for some years, and later the seminary at Amenia, and as he possesses an active mind, and is of an investigating turn, he has since gained much information by reading and observation. On leaving school he began to learn the practical details of mercantile life in "Dibble's Store" at Pine Plains, where he clerked for one year, then, in 1875, went to Rhinebeck as a clerk for his uncles, I. & P. Sherwood, leading grocers of that town, and on the death of the senior partner, in 1881, he was taken into the firm, which became Sherwood & Herrick. In 1892 Mr. Sherwood retired and Mr. Herrick removed to his present stand, and added coal and lumber to his stock, an enterprise which has been justified by its success. He has one of the most complete stores in the locality, it being admirably adapted in every way to the demands of the business, wholesale and retail. His extensive trade is, perhaps, the largest in volume of any store in the town, is evidence of the confidence and esteem in which he is held throughout the community.

He is public-spirited; in politics a Democrat, and always ready to forward any measure for local improvement, but he has not been active in political work, as his business interests demanded his exclusive attention. In 1884 he was married to Miss Sarah Reed, a daughter of Thomas Reed, a leading citizen of Rhinebeck; she was born December 3, 1858, in Saugerties, Ulster county, and educated in the De Garmo Institute at Rhinebeck. [For history of her ancestry see sketch of Thomas Reed, elsewhere in this volume.] Mr. and Mrs. Herrick are active members of the Baptist Church, in which he is an official. He belongs to the Relief Hook and Ladder Co. and served as foreman for several years.

NATHAN W. SMITH, residing upon a valuable farm in the town of Amenia presents in his life a splendid example of hard labor, close application to business, and perseverance. He commenced life at the foot of the ladder, but by his own well-directed effort he is now able to take life easily and comfortably, in the enjoyment of the fruits of his early industry.

Mr. Smith was born on the old family homestead at North Lyme, Conn., January 12, 1818, and is a son of Nathan and Nancy (Waterman) Smith, in whose family were five children, the others being: Sarah M., who became the wife of Columbus Reed; Gilbert B.; Nancy L. and John H. His father was born at the same place, November 12, 1788, and was four times married, his first wife being the mother of our subject; they were married in 1810, and she died July 2, 1824. After her death he married Hannah Stark, by whom he had two children—Fitch C. and Henry. His third wife was Nancy Baker, widow of Mathias Baker, and daughter of Deacon Ephalet Hillyard, and after her death he married Mary Gallup. At one time he was captain of a sloop, but the greater part of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits at Sale, Conn. He lived to a ripe old age, dying March 26, 1886. For many years he served as deacon in the Baptist Church at North

Esther J. Smith

N.W. Smith

Lyme, Conn.; was one of his country's defenders in the war of 1812, and was always an upright, honorable man, who had the confidence and esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

Our subject can trace his ancestry back to Nehemiah (1) Smith, who landed in Massachusetts prior to 1637, and was prominently connected with the early history of Connecticut. In his family of nine children there was only one son, Nehemiah (2), who for several years served as a member of the General Assembly at Hartford. His son, Nehemiah (3), was a farmer of New London county, Conn., and was the father of Isaac Smith, in whose family was William Smith, the grandfather of our subject. The latter, who was a farmer in New London county, married Sarah Smith, a daughter of Nathan and Elizabeth Smith, and to them were born twelve children: William, Sarah, Elizabeth, Gurdon, John D., Edward, Nathan, Phebe, Charlotte, Lucy, Almira and Ansyl.

N. W. Smith, whose name introduces this sketch, attended the district schools near his boyhood home at North Lyme, Conn., and completed his education at Essex Academy. For two years he then clerked in a general store at North Lyme, later was similarly employed at Hamburg, Conn., for a year, after which he went to Saratoga county, N. Y., where he worked on a farm for a season. By stage and steamboat he then came to the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, to visit his sister, Mrs. Columbus Reed, and subsequently was employed by Noah Gridley on a farm at Vassaic, where he remained two years. For the same length of time he worked for Mrs. Jacob Rundall, after which he went to Chicago by way of canal, railroad and Great Lakes, but after a short time spent in that city he returned to Dutchess county, and for three years was in the employ of William A. Benton, of Leedsville.

In January, 1847, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Miss Adeline E. Holly, who died in October, 1848. To them had been born one son, John Holly, who died in infancy. In the town of Washington, Dutchess county, on February 4, 1850, he was again married, his second union being with Esther J. Odell (born in 1828), one of the four children of Peter and Sarah Odell, of Jefferson county, the others being George, Levi and Elizabeth. In 1847, Mr. Smith removed to Northeast town, where for two years he engaged in farming, but the following year he passed as a clerk in the store of Columbus Reed, at Vassaic. He was again on the farm of Jacob Rundall for three years, and for seventeen years operated the Noah Gridley farm. In 1870 he removed to his present place south of South Amenia, a farm consisting of 400 acres, which he purchased for $30,000, but mortgaged it for $20,000, and also bought several thousand dollars worth of stock. Three years later he sold 115 acres for $8,500. So well did he succeed in this undertaking that by 1883 the place was free from indebtedness, and was yielding a handsome return for the care and the labor expended upon it. His achievement was all the more remarkable as the man who had previously lived upon the place declared he could not make a living there. Industry, perseverance and energy are numbered among his chief characteristics, and as he has been dependent upon his own resources from boyhood, his success is but the just reward of his own unaided efforts.

At the age of seventeen years, Mr. Smith united with the Baptist Church at Lyme, Conn., and now holds membership with the Church at Amenia, of which he is a deacon. His father and grandfather before him held the same position in the churches to which they belonged. Since the organization of the Republican party, he has been one of its most earnest advocates.

BEVERLY W. HOWARD. The subject of this sketch stands second to none among the well-to-do farmers of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, whose record it has been deemed wise to preserve in this manner for the perusal of the coming generation. As a judicious tiller of the soil he has met with success, and as a man and citizen holds a good position among his neighbors. He belongs to a family long prominent in the history of Maryland, where the founder of the family in the New World (who was from England) located at an early day. He was born in the city of Baltimore on April 21, 1850.

His grandfather, Samuel Howard, was born in Baltimore county, Md., in 1785, where his early life was passed. He was a man of leisure, as he was possessed of considerable wealth. By his marriage with Miss Ariana Cole, also a native of Baltimore county, he became the father of eight children, as follows: Abram, deceased, was a farmer of Muskingum county, Ohio; George W. is the father of our subject; Samuel and John died in childhood; Eliza became the wife of James Fulton, a merchant, but both are now deceased; Celia is the widow of William L. Rieman, a merchant of Baltimore; Sarah married Eli Beckwith, a real-estate dealer of Cleveland, Ohio, and both have now passed away; and Anna is the widow of Luther Norris, a merchant of Westminster, Md. The parents of this family were Methodists in religious belief. The grandfather spent his last days in Muskingum county, Ohio.

George W. Howard, the father of our subject, was born in Maryland, October 12, 1810, and after reaching man's estate was for fifty years a wholesale dry-goods merchant of Baltimore. In later life he wrote a book of that city, entitled "The Monumental City." He was quite a prominent man, widely and favorably known. His political support was given the Democratic party. His death occurred in Baltimore, on November 26, 1888, but his wife is still living. In that city he had married Carrie Foreman, a daughter of Arthur Foreman, who was engaged in milling. They became the parents of two children: Ella and Beverly W. The former wedded Henry J. Davison, a civil engineer of New York City, who became very wealthy; he had learned his trade in the Novelty Iron Works of that city, after which he became connected with the gas business, also engaged in the building of steamboats, and in this way secured a fortune, so that at his death, which occurred July 12, 1890, he left a large estate. His wife had died July 12, 1878. In their family were four children—George Howard, Clarence B., Carrie Theresa and Ella C.

The boyhood and youth of Beverly W. Howard were passed in Baltimore, Md., and in 1873 he came to Mabbettsville, Dutchess county, where he purchased his present farm of 213 acres of valuable land, now under a good state of cultivation, so that it compares favorably with other fine farms of the locality.

On October 8, 1878, Mr. Howard was married to Miss Laura H. Coffin, a daughter of R. G. Coffin, and their union has been blessed by the advent of eight children, namely: Samuel B., born November 27, 1879; an infant, who was born January 21, 1882, and died March 10, following; Robert C., born March 21, 1883; Henry D. born August 29, 1885; Ella T., born September 4, 1888; Marjetta B., born December 5, 1890; Evlyn, born May 5, 1893; and Clarence K., born September 2, 1895. Mr. Howard takes an intelligent and earnest interest in public affairs, actively promoting any scheme that will benefit the community, and is eminently worthy the trust and regard in which he is held by his fellow citizens. He uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party.

CHARLES ALBERT CLINE, of the well-known firm of Cline Brothers, of Miller-ton, Dutchess county, leading commission dealers in wholesale dressed beef, was born November 22, 1857, in the town of Amenia. He is of Holland-Dutch descent, the family name being originally Klein, then Kline and later Cline. His great-grandfather was John Cline, of Amenia, and his grandfather, Philo Cline, was born in Amenia, Dutchess county, with his three brothers. All four settled in the Oblong valley, and all left descendants who are now living in Dutchess county. Philo Cline was engaged in mercantile business and in conducting a hotel for some time, and he also owned large tracts of land in the town. His good education and naturally powerful intellect, united with perfect integrity and impartiality, gave him great influence in the community, and he was often called upon to settle disputes, both unofficially and in his capacity as justice of the peace. He was often employed to conduct cases in court, and sometimes was chosen to plead both sides. Politically, he was first a Whig and later a Republican, and in religion he held liberal and tolerant views. He died in 1864, and his wife, Harriet Swift, daughter of Moses Swift, departed this life in 1861. They had two sons: Albert, our subject's father; and Franklin, born in 1833, who is now a farmer in the town of Amenia.

Albert Cline was born March 3, 1828, and in early manhood was a miller at South Amenia. Since 1863, he has been a successful farmer there, also having a fine farm of 350 acres which he inherited. He has made many improvements, and is regarded as one of the leading agriculturists of that locality. In public affairs he is active, giving his influence to the support of the Republican party, and has held a number of local offices, including that of supervisor. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and is progressive and broad in his views on all the questions of the day. He married Eliza Reed, adopted daughter of Philo Reed, of Amenia. She died in 1872, leaving four children: Hattie, who married Frank Baylis, of Amenia; Philo R., of the firm of Cline Brothers; Charles Albert; and Maria, who married Walter A. Sherman.

The subject of our sketch received his elementary education in the district schools near his home, and later attended Dover Plains Academy, and Fort Edward Institute, at Fort Edward, N. Y., for three years, being compelled because of ill health to leave before completing his course. Returning home in 1876, he conducted the farm on shares for one year, and then moved to Millerton, and became bookkeeper for the East St. Louis Beef Company. A year later, when Nelson Morris bought out the company, Mr. Cline and his brother were made their agents, and for the last five years they have been in the commission business under the firm name of Cline Brothers. They supply a large section of the surrounding territory, including many points in western Connecticut, and for a long distance up and down the Harlem railroad, and by their energy and enterprise they have accumulated a fine property. On March 20, 1888, Mr. Cline was married to Miss Cornelia F. Sherman, daughter of Samuel W. Sherman, and they have one son, Charles Sherman Cline. As a citizen Mr. Cline has shown great public spirit, and is a leader among the younger men of the town. He has always been a Republican, and takes an active share in party work. In 1894 he was elected supervisor for a term of two years, and performed his duties so ably that he was re-nominated in 1896.

FREDERIC BOSTWICK, who since the age of twenty years has been connected with banking interests, was born in the village of Pine Plains, on September 8, 1849, and is a son of Reuben Bostwick. On the paternal side he traces his lineage in an unbroken line to Arthur Bostwick, who was born in Tarpaly parish, Cheshire, England, in 1603. He had two sons: Arthur, born in 1636, and John, born in 1638. The children of the latter were: John, Zachariah, Joseph, Mary, Elizabeth and Isaac. John, the first of this family, was born in 1667, and became the father of the following children: John, Robert, Ebenezer, Joseph, Nathaniel, Lemuel, Daniel and Mary. In the family of Nathaniel Bostwick, who was born in 1699, were eleven children, namely: Arthur, Sarah, Lois, Reuben, Zadock, Abigail, Elijah, Gideon, Eunice, Tamer and Ichabod. Reuben, of this family, was born in 1734, and he had three children: Benjamin R., Mabel and Electa. The only son, Benjamin R., was born in 1762, and in his family were the following children: Lodema, Almon R., Reuben W., Charles B., William H. and Horatio N. Reuben W. Bostwick, of this family, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born in 1788, and had four children: Reuben, Eliza Ann, William and Jerusha. Reuben, the father of our subject, was born in 1823, and in his family were seven children: Frederic, William, Ida; Hattie, Walter, Walker and J. Hunting.

Our subject was educated at Poughkeepsie, at the College Hill Military Academy, which was then conducted by Otis Bisbee, and there continued his studies for three years. After his graduation from that institution he returned to his home at Pine Plains, and at the age of twenty years entered the Stissing National Bank, being appointed cashier in 1870, succeeding his father in that position. William S. Eno was at that time president of the bank. He continued to serve as cashier until 1889, when he resigned in order to accept the appointment of National Bank Examiner, tendered him during President Harrison's administration. He had charge of three counties in New York—Columbia, Dutchess and Westchester. Later he went to Massachusetts, where he examined banks for nearly a year, and was then detailed for the same business in what is known as the Southern District of New York, comprising the counties of Rockland, Orange, Ulster, Greene, Delaware, Oneida, Erie, a part of Albany county, and the counties bordering along the Pennsylvania line. For a year after the expiration of his term he was still retained in the office, which fact clearly indicates the capable manner in which he filled the position.

In his political views Mr. Bostwick has always been a strong Republican, taking a deep interest in the success of his party, and is now serving as county committeeman. He has personally promoted many of the local enterprises of a public nature in Pine Plains, and is one of its most popular and influential citizens. He attends the Presbyterian Church, to which his family all belong, and socially is a prominent member of the Dutchess Club, of Poughkeepsie.

JOHAN M. HASKINS, a well-known resident of Amenia, Dutchess county, is now living retired from active labor and in the enjoyment of all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. A native of Dutchess county, his birth occurred February 14, 1824, in the town of Washington. His father, Alexander Haskins, was born on Long Island, but, when a young man of about twenty years, located in the town of Washington, where he engaged in farming until 1826, when he removed to the town of Amenia, there following the same occupation. Politically he was a decided Democrat. He married Miss Deborah Masten, a native of the town of Milan, Dutchess county, and their family consisted of four children: Phebe, Levi and Ezekiel, all deceased, and John Masten, of this review. The father's death occurred August 7, 1848, and the mother was called from this life in 1857.

At the age of two years our subject was brought by his parents to the town of Amenia, where he attended school until the age of ten years, when he started out in life for himself. For six years he worked in the Gridley Iron Mine at Amenia, but on the expiration of that time, on account of his father's failing health, he returned to the old home, caring for his parents until they crossed the dark river of death. Subsequently Mr. Haskins engaged in teaming for a few years before the railroad was constructed, and in 1858 entered the Manhattan Iron Mine at Sharon Station, Dutchess county, where he remained for eight years. He then again entered the service of the Gridley mine at Amenia, where for the long period of twenty-one years he capably served as superintendent, but has now laid aside all business cares.

At Pine Plains, Dutchess county, July 31, 1850, Mr. Haskins was married to Miss Mary M. Platt, who was a daughter of Hiram and Matilda Platt, and died August 4, 1884. To them were born four sons—William and George W., deceased; one who died in infancy, and John M., Jr. Since 1868 Mr. Haskins has been identified with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and he is a highly-respected and honored citizen of the community. He was first a Whig in politics, but since the dissolution of that party he has been an active Republican, supporting the principles of his party with all the force of his convictions, and in 1894 and 1895 was a member of the excise board.

DAVID BRYAN, a well-known and prosperous agriculturist of the town of Amenia is a worthy representative of a family that for a century and a half has been prominently identified with the best interests of Dutchess county.

The first of the family of whom there is any record was Alexander Bryan, who lived in Connecticut, where his death occurred in 1760. In his family were two sons and one daughter namely: Elijah, Ezra and Sarah. Ezra Bryan the second in this family, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born November 30, 1740, and at the age of twenty-one was married, in Newtown, Conn., to Sarah Peck. From there the young couple made their way on horseback to the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, where Mr. Bryan took up a farm of 400 acres, and cultivated it in connection with his trade of cabinet making. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and through his loyalty to the Colonial government lost the bulk of his property in supporting the Revolutionary cause. He died while on his way to meeting, July 7, 1825.

Amos Bryan, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Northeast (formerly Amenia), January 31, 1779, and was the youngest in the family of five children. His education was obtained in the district schools of his native town, and on reaching manhood he purchased 150 acres of the old homestead from the other heirs, which he operated. He also carried on the fanning-mill business, and, together with Calvin Chamberlain, originated the "Chamberlain Plow". He took quite a prominent part in public affairs, serving as assessor in 1840, and also as supervisor and justice of the peace. By birthright he was Quaker, and died in that faith April 12, 1866. In the town of Northeast, Dutchess Co. N. Y., on October 14, 1804, Amos Bryan was married to Betsey Finch, who was born October 5, 1781, and died May 24, 1863. The family consisted of nine children: Laura, born in 1805, died in 1831; Ward W., born April 12, 1807, died December 14, 1863; Eliza, born March 16, 1810, became the wife of Henisson, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and died September 3, 1884; Ezra, born March 4, 1812, died March 22, 1876; Isaac, born August 25, 1815, died September 4, 1885; James, born November 27, 1817, died March 16, 1839; David is next in order of birth; Mary, born December 9, 1822, died November 1, 1853; and Sarah, born April 10, 1825, died April 15, 1872.

David Bryan

The birth of David Bryan occurred at the family homestead in the town of Northeast, September 22, 1819. He began his education at the district schools, and the knowledge there acquired was supplemented by a term's attendance at the Peekskill Military Academy and by a course in the Banks boarding schools at Dover Plains, Dutchess county. He remained on the home farm and carried on the farming-mill business until 1860. Removing to the "Square" in the town of Northeast, he bought the farm of Judge Smith, comprising 44 acres, where he lived until the fall of 1884, when he came to his present place in the town of Amenia.

On October 21, 1854, Mr. Bryan was united in marriage with Miss Annvennette L. Sackett, a daughter of Phineas K. Sackett. Her death occurred July 21, 1858, and at Astoria, Long Island, March 20, 1867, he was again married, this time to Miss Cornelia T. Willson (daughter of John H. Willson), by whom he had one son, Frederick, born August 23, 1868, and died June 26, 1872. In his political views Mr. Bryan coincides with the Republican party, whose ticket he usually supports, and previous to the organization of the party he was a Whig. He has ever taken a commendable interest in the upbuilding and prosperity of his native county, and by his fellow-citizens has been called upon to serve in several positions, including those of supervisor, assessor and justice of the peace in the town of Northeast. He is a stockholder and at present a director in the First National Bank of Amenia.

PETER W. FUNK. Prominent among the leading citizens of Barrytown, Dutchess county, is the gentleman whose name stands at the beginning of this biographical notice. He is a native of Columbia county, N. Y., born in the town of Clermont, January 23, 1814, and is of Holland origin.

David Funk, his grandfather, was born in Holland, and was a member of the British army until coming to the United States. Locating in Columbia county, N. Y., he there followed his trade of shoemaking. He married Miss Betsy Olmstead, also of Holland, and to them were born eight children: Jacob, John, Edward, Alexander, Andrew, Margaret, Deborah, and a daughter that died in infancy.

The birth of Alexander Funk, the father of our subject, occurred in the town of Clermont, Columbia county, in 1818; there he received a common-school education, and followed farming through the greater part of his life. He wedded Miss Nancy Plass, a daughter of Peter Plass, a farmer of the town of Clermont, and they became the parents of nine children, of whom our subject is the eldest; Edward married Mary Van Tassel; John married Dora Brazie; David married Mary Lasher; Winfield married Alice Buck; Alonzo married Jennie Vandemark; Frank died in infancy; Mary E. was three times married, her first union being with Alexander Palmetier, the second Martin Drum, and the third Hiram Dutcher; and Catherine died in infancy.

In the common schools of his native county, Mr. Funk, of this review, acquired his education, and after leaving the school-room he worked at farming, but was rudely awakened from his quiet dreams of the future, by the dark cloud of war that overshadowed our beloved country. On August 28, 1862, his patriotism having been aroused, he enlisted in the 150th N. Y. V. I., which was raised in Dutchess county, and participated in many of the famous battles of the war, including Gettysburg, Buzzards Roost (which was fought May 14, 1863), Resaca (on the 15th), Culps Farm (on the 22d), and Dallas (on the 25th of the same month), and Peach Tree Creek (on the 20th and 22d of June following). The following winter the regiment was quartered at Savannah, Ga., and the following spring was in two important engagements, one at Averysboro and the other at Bentonville, N. C. He was with Sherman on his celebrated march to the sea, participating in the capture of Atlanta and Savannah, and was in the last engagements of the war. He had entered the service as a private, but for meritorious conduct had been promoted to the non-commissioned office of corporal, and after the close of hostilities was honorably discharged in June, 1865.

Mr. Funk was united in marriage with Miss Delia Houghtaling, daughter of Jeremiah Houghtaling, of the town of Milan, Dutchess county. They now have a pleasant home in Barrytown, where our subject is employed as clerk in a mercantile house. He is a prominent member of Christian Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Red Hook, which he joined in 1894, and has filled several chairs of importance in that order. He is also a charter member of Shiloh Encampment, of the same place, and a member of the Odd Fellows Mutual Benefit Association of Dutchess county, with headquarters at Poughkeepsie. He keeps up his acquaintance with his army comrades by his connection with Armstrong Post No. 104, G. A. R., of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county. He has manifested the same loyalty in days of peace as in days of war, and all who know him have for him the highest regard.

ISAAK SWIFT belongs to a family that for many generations have resided in this country and taken a prominent part in its history. He traces his origin back to William Swift, who was born in England in 1634 and died in that country in 1705. He was followed by his son William, who was born in 1654, and died in 1701. The next is Benjamin Swift, whose birth occurred in West Falmouth, Mass. He wedded Mary Gifford, and died in 1775. Their third son, Zebulon, wedded Rebecca Wing, of Falmouth, and Abraham, their third son, who was united in marriage with Johanna Sisson, became the grandfather of our subject.

The earliest recollections of Isaac Swift are of the old home farm where his birth took place November 19, 1822, and he there early became familiar with the duties which fall to the lot of an agriculturist. On reaching manhood he continued the cultivation and improvement of that place until April, 1881, when he disposed of the same, and has since lived retired, enjoying the fruits of his former toil.

Mr. Swift was married to Miss Lydia H. Almy, a native of Vermont, and a daughter of Obediah and Rhoda (Barrett) Almy, who were the parents of six children, namely: Helen, Lydia, Rhoda, Margaret, Stephen and James. On both the paternal and maternal sides Mrs. Swift was of English origin, and the families were all members of the Society of Friends. She died November 12, 1857, leaving two children: Charles I., a contractor and builder of Millbrook, Dutchess county; and Henrietta, wife of W. L. Swift, editor of the "Round Table," of Millbrook. On January 5, 1857, our subject was united in marriage with Rhoda A. Almy, a sister of his former wife.

As a farmer, Mr. Swift was quite successful, always fair and honorable in all his dealings, and has the confidence and respect of all who know him. He is a progressive, enterprising citizen, taking a deep interest in everything for the advancement of his town and county. He uniformly casts his vote with the Republican party, and he and his estimable wife are members of the Friends Church.

JAMES H. WRIGHT. This highly respected citizen of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, has resided upon his present farm since 1853, and is successfully engaged in general agriculture. His early ancestors emigrated from England to this country, and his grandfather, John Wright, was a native of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he devoted his whole life to agricultural pursuits. In his family were twelve children, as follows: Polly, Susan, Lydia, Ruth, Isaac I., John, Aaron, Esther, Dena, Peter, Freeloze and Harvey.

Isaac I. Wright, the father of our subject, was also born in the town of Fishkill, where he later attended school, and learned the carpenter's, wagonmaker's and blacksmith's trade. In 1836 he came to the town of Stanford, locating on a farm near McIntyre Station, where he operated for a number of years. The latter part of his life, however, was spent at Bangall, where he died in 1871, at the ripe old age of eighty-two years. He was a self-made man, having made all his possessions by his own industry, diligence and economy, and is entitled to high praise for his commendable activity. He was a member of the Baptist Church at Bangall, and in politics was first a Whig, later a Republican. He was married in the town of Fishkill to Jennett Howe, daughter of Libbens Howe, and they became parents of the following children: Margaret and Hannah Maria (both deceased); Yvonne (deceased); James Harvey, subject of this sketch; John (deceased). Lucy Ann, wife of Joel Williams; Rebecca, wife of Clark Guisey; Phoebe, wife of Eli Wright; and George, of Mount Ross, Milan.

The birth of our subject occurred April 18, 1820, in the town of East Fishkill, where he began his education, later continuing his studies es in the town of Stanford, and at the Jacob Willets Boarding School in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He grew to man's estate upon his father's farm, and as soon as old enough assisted in its cultivation until his marriage, gaining a good practical knowledge of the business under the wise guidance of his father.

In the town of Stanford, December 5, 1853, Mr. Wright was married to Mary A. Humphrey, daughter of John and Clarissa Humphrey, of that township. To them were born six children, in order of birth as follows: (1) John H. married Ella Vandewater, December 21, 1880, and they have three children—Ralph, Maud and Roy. (2) Clara, of Yonkers, is the wife of Franklin Talmadge, by whom she has two children—Mabel and Marian. (3) Isaac I. is deceased. (4) Charles W., who makes his home at Clinton Corners, Dutchess county, married Della Stewart, and they have three children—Harold and Edith (twins) and Ethel. (5) Ira is the next in order of birth. (6) Nettie, the youngest, is also deceased.

Mr. Wright is a keen, practical man, well fitted with mental vigor. His genial manners and sturdy integrity have won him a host of friends, and he is highly regarded by all with whom he comes in contact. He is a sincere and earnest Christian, a member of the Baptist Church for fifty-four years. He united with the Church in 1842, and served the same for several years as chorister and superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and trustee; was elected clerk of the Church in 1874, and still continues as clerk; and later was elected deacon of said Church. On account of his views on the temperance question, he is a staunch supporter of the Prohibition party.

DWIGHT ABEL. Jacob Abel, grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, where he passed his days in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Margaret Uhl, by whom he had three children: William W., John U. and Mary.

William W. Abel, father of our subject, was born March 1, 1814, in the town of Unionvale, and during his boyhood attended the North Partners School, after which he taught school for a time. Later he followed agricultural pursuits exclusively, becoming one of the most extensive farmers in his township. He took an active interest in political matters, always voting with the Whig or Republican party, and held a number of township offices, including those of supervisor, justice of the peace and revenue collector. He was twice married, first time to Helen Cornell, by whom he had two children: Evaline and Mary, the last named dying at the age of twelve years. Evaline married Henry Brill, of Beekman, N. Y., and two children were born to them: Theodore R., who married Miss Emma Hicok, and Nellie C. For his second wife William W. Abel wedded Miss Mary Jane Austin, daughter of Beriah and Sarah (Waite) Austin, and four children were born to them: Orlin B., Dwight, H. Clay and John Jacob. Of these Orlin B. is more fully spoken of elsewhere; H. Clay was born in the town of Unionvale, and received a good common-school education, after which he followed the profession of teaching. He is now engaged in mercantile business at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county. Socially, he affiliates with the F. & A. M. He married Miss Maggie Traver, by whom he had two children, William C. and Melburn T., and after her death he wedded Miss Mary Manning.

Dwight Abel was born in 1846 in the town of Unionvale, where his entire life has been passed. His elementary education was received at the schools of the neighborhood of his boyhood home, and later he pursued his studies at Charlotteville, Schoharie Co., N. Y. He early began to assist in the labors of the home farm, and has since devoted his time and attention to rural pursuits with excellent results. Politically, he is identified with the Republican party, but has never aspired to public office. He is enterprising and public-spirited. On December 18, 1867, he married Miss Adaline E. Coe, daughter of Reuben L. Coe, of Unionvale, and they became the parents of three children: Charles H., born January 27, 1869, and who died at the age of twenty-one years; Walter J., born April 25, 1872; and Jennie L., born February 25, 1887. The second son, Walter J. Abel, was born in the town of Unionvale, in 1872, attended the Claverack College, and is now engaged in farming in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county. He married Miss Anna C. Hyzer, daughter of Abram Hyzer, an agriculturist of that township, and their union has been blessed with one child, Edwin Dwight, born January 11, 1896.

EDWARD M. SMITH. In Munsel's "American Ancestry, giving the name and descent of the male line of Americans whose ancestors settled in the United States previous to the Declaration of Independence," we have the genealogy of Edward M. Smith, the author of the History of Rhinebeck, as follows:

Edward Martin Smith, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., born at Red Hook, N. Y., March 29, 1817, the eleventh of thirteen children, left home at the age of twelve to work on uncle's farm; tailor's apprentice 1833-1838; journeyman tailor in Rhinebeck 1838-1840; master tailor from last date; co-founder of the Rhinebeck Gazette 1846; merchant tailor 1850; president of the village 1875; president of the school board 1881-1889; author of the History of Rhinebeck 1881; married September 13, 1842, Mary Elizabeth Davis, daughter of Jabez Davis, of Shropshire, England.

Son of Philip Smith, born June 27, 1773; died at Milan, N. Y., December 13, 1851; farmer; spoke German, Dutch and English with equal fluency; possessed much mechanical skill and ingenuity; married December 4, 1796, Anna Coopernail, daughter of William Coopernail, of the Mohawk Valley, descendant from Jan Van Koppenol, who came to America in 1659.

Son of Johannes Schmidt, born in Rhinebeck, March 30, 1730; died April 18, 1813; married February 3, 1761, Elizabeth Sipperley, born August 12, 1741; died March 25, 1804; daughter of Frederick Sipperley and Catharine Wegeler, daughter of Hans Michael Wegeler, one of the Palatine founders of the town of Rhinebeck; married August 15, 1727.

Son of Zacharias Schmidt, born in Germany; was clerk, fore-reader, deacon, elder and treasurer of the Reformed German Church; located on part of his farm three miles north of the present village of Rhinebeck; married about 1728 Anna Maria, daughter of Valentin Bäuder, who with his wife, Anna Margaretha Stopplebeen, came to America in 1710 on the ship "Midfort," Capt. Fowles, with the Rev. Joshua Kocherthal and other Protestant religious refugees from the Palatinate on the Rhine.

At the death of his father, Philip Smith, the only one of four sons who remained a farmer and at home at maturity, became the owner of the homestead, with the farm-stock and three slaves, Tom and Flore and their son Tobe. As the older sons of the family were approaching manhood, Tom, an intelligent negro, made up his mind that his master could do very well without him, and besought him very earnestly, to sell him to Peter Van Berthuysen, who had expressed a wish to own him; which, after much hesitation, he finally did. Before Tom had been a fortnight on the premises of his new master he absconded without leaving a clue to his destination behind him.

After 1827, when New York had freed her slaves by an act of the Legislature, Tom came into the State from Massachusetts with a good team of horses and a wagon, his own property, with which he was earning his living as a teamster. He was on his way to the Hudson river for a load of merchandise, and sought out his old master, then living in the town of Milan, to tell him that when he inquired of him to sell him he had fully made up his mind to run away, but preferred to do so from a new rather than his old master, to whom and his family he had become greatly attached and that he was quite as eager that he should obtain a good price for him as he was that he should sell him.

Tobe had long been given away, a marriage present to a daughter of the family; Flore had gone away, the wife of a decent negro, able to support her; at his death she found home with her son, Tobias, her only offspring who earned his living mainly by fishing and fiddling. Old and tottering, she walked for miles to be present at her old mistress' funeral.

In 1822 Philip Smith sold the leasehold of the old Red Hook home, and took his family of twelve children to a larger farm in Columbia county, N. Y., under a Livingston Lease, where the thirteenth child was soon added to the family. Here the older children so found it necessary to look beyond the farm for a livelihood, and drifted away to various occupations. Before 1830 this farm was also disposed of, and what was left of the family became the owners in fee of a small farm in the town of Milan. Here the father died, December 13, 1831, his children all living, and at his funeral; the mother October 26, 1864, her thirteen children all living and at her funeral the youngest forty-one years old, who is now and has been for several terms, a justice of the peace in Germantown, Columbia Co., N. Y. The grandfather, Johannes Schmidt, served as a soldier in the French and Indian war; was an "Associator" at the outbreak of the Relution, and did what he could for the freedom and independence of his country.

E. M. Smith.

On May 2, 1896, the semi-centennial of the Rhinebeck Gazette, the present editor and proprietor published what follows about its founder and his History of Rhinebeck:

When Mr. Smith disposed of the Gazette establishment, and ceased to be its editor, he did not wholly abandon his literary work. The following item copied from Mason's Illustrated History of Dutchess County, published in 1882, gives due credit to what he has since done in the literary line:

"During his residence of forty-three years in Rhinebeck, Mr. Smith has collected from various sources the material included in his history of this old town. It is a work of years, in the preparation of which much time, labor and money have been expended, and to which, through the kindness of the author, we are indebted for nearly all the data relating to Rhinebeck. His work, more complete in its minutiae than can be any history of the county at large, may be justly regarded as a valuable contribution to the historical data of the county and State. Mr. Smith's History of Rhinebeck was published in 1881, mainly for subscribers, and the entire edition was exhausted in a few months. No copies are to be had now, for love or money.' Persisting in his researches, we are glad that he is now in possession of facts related to the history of the town and its early settlers that will enable him to revise, correct and greatly enhance the interest of the work, and that he is accordingly employing some of his leisure time in re-writing and enlarging it. Having entered the eightieth year of his age, Mr. Smith will hardly resume the task of its republication. We hope some one will secure the manuscript, and in due time offer it to the people."

GEORGE W. CRONK. Prominent among the successful and enterprising farmers of Dutchess county may be found the subject of this biographical sketch, whose home is situated in the town of Unionvale, and who is considered one of the most industrious and worthy citizens of this part of the county. Here his entire life has been passed, his birth having occurred in the town of Amenia, in 1818, while his education was obtained in the schools of Lagrange and Fishkill town. His paternal grandfather, Jacob Cronk, was a native of Holland, and on coming to the New World located in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, about eight miles from Poughkeepsie, and there engaged in farming.

Timothy Cronk, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Hyde Park, in 1748. He became a resident of the town of Fishkill, where he worked at his trade of coopering, and was a faithful soldier in the war of 1812. He was twice married, by his first union having three children: Hiram, Samuel and Rhoda. By his second wife he wedded Deborah A. Brown, and to them were born five children:

Sarah, who married Saxon Raymond; Harrison, who was killed in war; Henry, who died unmarried; Nelson, who married Harriet Marshall; and George, our subject.

During his youth George Cronk learned the weaver's trade, at which he worked for nine years, later for ten years was in the milling business, and then turned his attention to carpentering and masonry. For the past thirty years, however, he has devoted his attention exclusively to his farming interest, and though enterprising and public-spirited, has never cared for office. He married Miss Emeline Howard, who was born April 26, 1824, in the town of Dover, and was there educated in its common schools.

Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cronk, namely: (1) Mary, born August 10, 1843, married George Hillker, a farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie, and they have one son, George Henry, now an operator on an elevated railroad in New York City. (2) George H., born October 18, 1845, who engaged in farming after completing his education. At the age of twenty-one years he enlisted at Poughkeepsie in the 150th N. Y. V. I., and served until the close of the war, being in the battle of Petersburg, and also at Appomatox when Lee surrendered. He holds membership in the Grand Army of the Republic. Carpentering is now his occupation. He married Annie Harrington, and they have had four children—George B., who married Agnes Salter; Julia A., who married William E. Ostram; William, who died at the age of eleven years; and Herbert. (3) Helen A., born April 3, 1848, died May 18, 1849. (4) Albert, born June 15, 1850, went to California as overseer of a farm for Governor Stanford, and later was inspector in gold mines. He married Sarah S. Perry, of that State, and died May 15, 1884. (5) William B., born August 20, 1852, died July 8, 1874. (6) Emma, born November 27, 1854, married James P. Organ, a farmer of Noxon, Dutchess county, and they have two sons—Floyd and William. (7) Martha, born July 26, 1858, married Harvey Van Dewater, formerly a farmer, but now engaged in merchandising at New Hackensack, N. Y. (8) John, born October 23, 1860, is by trade a carpenter, but is also engaged in farming in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He married Ella Bostwick, an adopted daughter of Henry Bostwick. (9) Charles E., born May 30, 1862, is an architect of Herkimer, N. Y., and is now finishing the plans for ex-President Harrison's summer residence in the Adirondack Mountains. He married Elizabeth Risedorf. (10) Sarah E., born October 23, 1864, completes the family. On April 28, 1897, she married John E. Forshay, a carpenter by trade, of New York City. They were all born and educated in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county.

Zebanah Howard, the grandfather of Mrs. Cronk, was a native of the town of Dover, and engaged in farming from youth until his death, conducting a good farm which he owned on Chestnut Ridge. In religious belief he was a Friend. By his marriage with Miss Lydia ——— he had the following children: John, Charles, Sylvester, Valirie, Pontius, Edward and Silas.

The birth of Silas Howard, the father of Mrs. Cronk, occurred in the town of Amenia, but most of his life was passed in Fishkill town, and throughout his life he followed the profession of teaching, being one of the able instructors of the county. By birthright he was a member of the Society of Friends. He was united in marriage with Miss Amelia Cash, daughter of David and Amelia Cash, farming people of Columbia county, N. Y. They became the parents of nine children, namely: William, born August 15, 1809, married Paulina Storms; Rachel, born May 28, 1811, married Isaac Harrington; Aaron, born March 26, 1813, married Harriet Sweet; David, born February 21, 1815, married Caroline Sweet; Silas, born December 21, 1816, married Catharine Odell; Asa, born September 24, 1819, married Jane Northrop; Lydia, born August 29, 1821, married John Ulrich; Emeline, wife of our subject, is next in order of birth; and Elizabeth, born February 28, 1828, married Joseph Martin.

JOHAN W. PULVER, a well-known business man of Millerton, Dutchess county, and the proprietor of extensive bottling works, was born July 23, 1830, at Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where his ancestors were among the pioneer settlers. His grandfather, David Pulver, was a native of the same place, and became a successful farmer there, owning a tract of land near the old post road between Upper and Lower Red Hook, now belonging to Mr. Coons. David Pulver was a substantial citizen, influential in local matters, and prosperous in business. In addition to his farming, he engaged largely in the breeding of running horses. He died in 1842, and his wife, formerly Catherine Simmons, died in Red Hook, in 1836. They had seven children: David, Henry, Peter and Zachariah (twins) Anna (Mrs. William Fredenburgh), Peggy (Mrs. John Witherwax), and one who died in infancy.

Zachariah Pulver, our subject's father, was born at the old home at Red Hook, in 1793, and lived there until 1835, following farming as an occupation. He and his brother, Peter, made their home together for sixty years, and married two sisters, the daughters of Philip Teeter, a leading citizen of the town of Milan, and a descendent of a German family. Peter's wife's name was Maria, and Zachariah's wife's name was Catherine. A few years after marriage they moved to Columbia county, and bought a farm of 209 acres in the town of Chatham, adding to it later until the farm contained about 300 acres. Zachariah Pulver was a strong Democrat, and a leading official of the Lutheran Church, of which this family have been members from early times. He died in 1873, his wife surviving him fourteen years. They had five children, of whom two are now living. Mary died in infancy; Catherine at the age of three, and David Henry in 1874. The survivors are John W., our subject; and Elizabeth A., who married Lewis Smith, of Chatham, New York.

The subject of our sketch received a good English education in the district schools of the town of Chatham, and was especially noted for his ability as a mathematician, being considered the best in Columbia county. His brother David also possessed the same powers to a unusual degree. Mr. Pulver left school at the age of sixteen, but he has been an unwearying reader and is well informed upon general topics. He remained at home until he was twenty-two years old, and then took charge of a farm belonging to his father, in Rensselaer county, and three years later he moved to another at the head of North Chatham Village, where he remained eleven years. He then sold out to his brother and removed to Nassau, Rensselaer county, and engaged in the milling business at a rented mill. Later he bought the property and formed a partnership with Mr. Davis, the owner; but this venture proved unfortunate and he sold his interest to Mr. Davis before a year had elapsed. The following year he was in partnership with E. M. Crum in the mo ng-machine business, and on disposing of his share in that he bought a store and followed the business alone. In 1871 he moved to Amenia, and engaged in his present employment of bottling during the summer season, and cutting pork and making sausage in winter. This establishment was removed to Millerton in 1877, and has since commanded the largest business of the sort in this locality.

Mr. Pulver is one of the leading men of the town of Northeast, an unwavering Democrat and an earnest worker for local improvements. He was supervisor in 1888 and 1889, and in 1890 was defeated by only one vote. In 1852 he was married to Miss Abbie Middlebrook, daughter of Aaron Middlebrook, and has had six children: Luella, who married Collins Barton, of Northeast town; Elzada; Elmer; Anna M.; George; and Andrew, the proprietor of the "Millerton House". Of this family the eldest and the youngest are the only survivors. Mr. Pulver and his wife have been prominent members of the Presbyterian Church for many years, and he also belongs to Webatuck Lodge No. 10, F. & A. M.

VAN NESS DUTCHER is a prominent citizen and a worthy representative of one of the honored pioneer families of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. Cornelius Dutcher, his grandfather, was numbered among the first settlers of the township, where throughout his life he followed agricultural pursuits. In his family were ten children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Simeon, April 2, 1772; Gabriel, July 11, 1773; Cornelius, March 15, 1775; Priscilla, December 27, 1776; Pier, July 20, 1779; Wheaton, October 20, 1781; Joshua, May 12, 1784; Ruleff, June 25, 1786; Betsy, March 19, 1788; and Sylva, April 1, 1792.

The birth of Joshua Dutcher, the father of the subject, occurred in the town of Dover. He acquired his education in the common schools and followed farming. He was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Carrington, daughter of Daniel and Thankful Carrington, agriculturists, of Connecticut. Three children were reared this union, namely: (1) Jennette, born July 9, 1821, married Aaron Butts, a policeman of New York City, and they had three children—Cora; Blendina, married to J. G. Sulam, of New York City; and Joshua, who married Josephine Way, of Mabbettsville, and had one child, Laura Jennette, that was left an orphan at an early age, its father and mother both dying. (2) J. Van Ness is next in order of birth. (3) Elizabeth, born February 25, 1826, became the wife of James Fry, a farmer, of the town of Dover, and to them was born a son, Frank, who married Miss Emma J. Wing, and has two children.

J. Van Ness Dutcher was born January 31, 1823, in the town of Dover, where on reaching a sufficient age he attended the public schools, and, like his ancestors, has devoted his time and energies to the cultivation of the soil. He is public-spirited and progressive, taking a genuine interest in the enterprises set on foot for the advancement and welfare of his native county.

Mr. Dutcher was united in marriage with Miss Harriet M. Benson, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Benson, farming people of the town of Dover. Five children came of this union: (1) Mary Estella, born in February, 1863, is the wife of Alfred Still, a carpenter of White Plains, Dutchess county, and they have one child—Ida F., born July 26, 1883. (2) Bertha E., born October 22, 1867, is the wife of George Cutler, a postal clerk of New York City, and they have one child—Ethel, born November 26, 1891. (3) Harriet V., born January 13, 1871, is the wife of Elmer Dutcher, an agriculturist, and they have one child—Mabel, born September 10, 1895. (4) Van Ness, born April 2, 1874, a farmer by occupation, married Amelia Rozell, daughter of Obed Rozell, by whom he has one child—Mary, born February 15, 1895. (5) Cora, born October 27, 1876, completes the family.

JOHN CORNELL SHEAR was for many years one of the most prominent and influential citizens of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county. He was born in that township, October 12, 1811, and is the son of John C. and Margaret (Cornell) Shear, the former born November 21, 1776, and the latter August 25, 1781. The parental household included six children: Anna, born October 31, 1800, died January 8, 1891; Catherine E., born April 8, 1803, died in December, 1888; Israel J., born February 26, 1806, died July 7, 1821; John Cornell, subject of this review; Abraham, born October 8, 1815; and Sarah, born December 3, 1818. The father owned and operated a farm in the town of Lagrange, where his death occurred August 14, 1825, and his wife, who long survived him, passed away November 25, 1868.

The educational advantages of our subject were good for that early day, as he supplemented the knowledge acquired in the district schools of his native township by a course in the Jacob Willets Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He also early became familiar with the labors of the farm, and in connection with his brother Abraham operated land in Lagrange town until 1888, when their interests were separated, and our subject removed to his present farm in the same township. He has always been an energetic, progressive man, and secured through his efforts a handsome competence.

On April 27, 1876, Mr. Shear was united in marriage with Catherine L. Pierce, who is of French ancestry, and a daughter of Caleb Pierce, of Fishkill, Dutchess county. One child blessed this union, Anna. Mr. Shear is recognized as one of the valuable members of the community, giving his support and encouragement to those enterprises calculated for the general welfare, and has ever been held in the highest respect and esteem by his fellow citizens. While engaged in active business, he was one of the most noted stock-raisers of Dutchess county, giving special attention to the raising of cattle and sheep. On February 16, 1874, he sold in the New York market a couple of "Durhams," weighing 4,616 pounds, for $450. His sheep were of the Southdown and Cotswold breeds, for which he received first premium at the county fair held at Poughkeepsie.

Johannes Shear, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born in 1718, in Germany, and came to America in 1751. His son, John C. Shear, grandfather of our subject, was born in America, in 1751.

JOHN WOODBURY PUTNAM (deceased). The thanks of a grateful nation are due to the heroes who, in their country's hour of peril, went forth in defense of the Union, and beneath the burning rays of the Southern sun displayed their loyalty to the "flag of the free heart's hope and home." The gentleman whose name introduces this review belonged to that noble army that proved the country's salvation, and he well deserves a place on the pages of its history.

The earliest ancestors of the Putnam family in this land was John Putnam, who, 1634, came to America from Buckinghamshire, England, bringing his wife, Priscilla, and his three sons—Thomas, Nathaniel and John. The sons grew to manhood in Salem, Mass., and became the owners of large estates. In 1681 the three paid one-seventh of the total tax to Church levied on the ninety-four tax payers in Salem village. Thomas Putnam was twice married, his second wife being Mary Veren, the daughter of a large ship owner. In the family of Thomas Putnam was a daughter who was one of those accused of witchcraft in 1692, and only saved her life by fleeing into the wilderness until the search was given up. His son, Joseph, born in 1670, married, in 1690, Elizabeth, daughter of Israel Porter, and among their eleven or twelve children was Israel Putnam, well-known and endeared to every American for his gallant services during the Revolutionary war—a general who "dared to lead where any dared to follow." He was born July 7, 1718, and died May 19, 1790. His wife was Hannah Pope, a sister of John Pope with whom, in 1739, Israel Putnam bought a large tract of land in Connecticut. David, lineal descendant, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Massachusetts; but his active business life was spent in farming in New Hampshire. He, too, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and fought atunker Hill. By his marriage with Miss Phœbe Woodbury he had a family of six children—three sons and three daughters—of whom John Putnam, the father of our subject, was the youngest. The latter was born and reared in the Old Granite State, and remained upon the home farm, in Croydon, Sullivan county, dying in that town in 1885. He married Almira French, whose death occurred in 1862. Seven children were born to them: James, Universalist minister, who for fifteen years preached at Danvers, Mass., and was the father of two children—Eliza and James H.; Lucy, widow of the late T. C. Eastman, a successful cattle dealer of New York City; John W., this review; Franklin (deceased), who was an attorney at Kansas City, Mo.; Ellen (deceased) Nathaniel French, formerly an Episcopal minister, and who died at Salt Lake City, leaving four children—Graham, an attorney at Sa-

J. W. Putnam

Lake City, married and has one son, John; John F. (deceased), Louisa and Ella; and George F., a banker and attorney at Kansas City, Missouri.

On April 6, 1825, in Croydon, Sullivan Co., N. H., John Woodbury Putnam was born, and in the district schools and academy he secured a good practical education. He was married in his native town to Laura S. Hall, a daughter of Carlton and Rhoda (Foster) Hall, and they became the parents of three children: Minnie, now the wife of Howard Kinney, a farmer in Stanford township, by whom she has two children—Laura and Roswell P.; Katharine B., wife of Harry B. Conklin, traveling salesman for the American Brush and Broom Co., of New York; and Drury W., deceased.

Carlton Hall, the father of Mrs. Putnam, was the son of James and Hulda (Cooper) Hall, the former of whom was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and the latter a descendant of Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Carlton Hall, a farmer and cattle dealer by occupation, married Rhoda Foster, by whom he had three children: Carlton F. died when about fifty years old, leaving three children; Mary Ann died at the age of ten years; and Mrs. Putnam. The mother died in 1838; the father on April 28, 1856. The Halls were descended from Edward Hall, who came from England to Duxbury, Mass., in 1636.

After his marriage Mr. Putnam lived upon a farm in Croydon, Sullivan Co., N. H., where he resided thirteen years previous to his coming to Amenia, N. Y. Before his marriage he had taught school winters, and assisted his father on the farm summers. In 1861, when the news spread throughout the North that Sumter had been fired upon, the martial spirit that had animated the breast of the much-loved "Old Put" stirred the pulses of this younger generation, and John Woodbury Putnam enrolled his name as a member of the 6th N. H. V. I., commanded by Gen. Burnside, and was commissioned captain of Company G, which he had enlisted in his own county; but while in the swamps of North Carolina, he contracted typhoid pneumonia, and in 1863 was honorably discharged and returned home. He participated in a number of skirmishes, and in the battles of Roanoke Island and Falmouth, Va. at the latter of which he was slightly wounded. In February, 1866, he came to Amenia, Dutchess county, and made it his home until his death, which occurred February 5, 1897.

In politics Mr. Putnam was an earnest advocate of the principles of Democracy; served his town as supervisor, assessor and commissioner, and was frequently called upon to preside at Democratic conventions. He once ran for Assembly in the First District of Dutchess county, and his great personal popularity nearly overcame the heavy normal majority. Fraternally, he is connected with Mt. Vernon Lodge, F. & A. M., at Newport, N. H. He was a man of strong convictions of his own, and knew how to respect the opinions of others; quiet and reserved in manner, a true friend, and in all the relations of life he discharged his duties with loyalty and fidelity. A man whose word was as good as a bond, who made no boast of his religion, but practiced it in his every-day life.

ROBERT D. BUTLER, a well-known agriculturist residing near Chestnut Ridge, Dutchess county, is one of the most active and influential workers in local affairs in that locality. He is a native of Dutchess county, born and reared in the town of Unionvale, and he began his business career in Dover town in early manhood as a merchant. After some years in that calling, he engaged in agriculture at his present farm. Politically he has always been a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, and he has held various township offices. He is actively interested in the Masonic order, being a member of Dover Lodge No. 666, of Dover Plains, with the rank of Master Mason. His life has so far been spent in single blessedness.

The first ancestor of his family to come to America was his great-grandfather, Samuel Butler, a native of England, who located in Rhode Island for a time, and then moved to a farm in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, where his last years were spent. His son, Daniel Butler, married Mary Hoxsie, and had five children: (1) Allen married Sarah Crouse; (2) Samuel, Eliza Fowler; (3) Peter, Mary Haight; (4) Elizabeth died in early youth; and (5) Joseph married Amy Wolley.

Peter Butler, our subject's father, was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, December 10, 1799, and was educated in the common schools of that section. He learned the carpenter's trade and worked at it until his marriage, when he engaged in farming. This occupation he followed for many years successfully, and he became a leading citizen of his locality, and was one of the strongest adherents of the Republican party there. His wife was Miss Mary Haight, daughter of Robert and Phœbe Haight, of the town of Washington; seven children were born at the old homestead in Unionvale, and received the best education that the common schools of that neighborhood afforded. (1) Elizabeth has taught school for some time in Dover, and is regarded as one of the most successful educators of that town. She and her sister Julia, the second in order of birth, have, like their brother Robert, the third child and first son, chosen to remain unmarried. (4) Joseph H. engaged in farming, but some years later learned the blacksmith's trade and opened a shop at New Milford, N. Y., where he now resides. He married Maria Underhill, and has seven children: Peter, John, Minnie, Ella, Joseph, Irene and Frank, none of whom is married except Peter, who wedded Hattie Gray and has two children—Townsend and Oscar. (5) Benjamin F., a farmer by occupation, is now married. (6) Rhoda J. married John Vincent, a prominent resident of Poughkeepsie, who for some time held the offices of justice of the peace and county clerk. They had four children born and educated in Poughkeepsie. (a) Ella married Obed Vincent, a farmer of Dover, and has one child, Hazel. (b) Minnie married Charles Andrews, a farmer in the towns of Lagrange and Unionvale, and has four children: Bessie, Gordon, Mabel and Norman. (c) Walter and (d) Elisha V. are not married. (7) Peter died at the age of fourteen.

On the maternal side Mr. Butler is a descendant of the Haight family, which has long been prominent in Dutchess county. His grandfather, Robert Haight, was born and reared in the town of Washington, and established himself in business at Mabbettsville as a merchant and hotel keeper. He and his wife, Phœbe (Tripp), reared a family of ten children: Concerning (1) Seneca, (2) Edward, and (3) Josiah, no particulars are given. (4) Morris married Miss Howell, and had three children: Theron, Julia and Alvira. (5) Neilson married Miss Hoffman, and had five children—Milton, Robert, Abraham, Hoffman and Edward. (6) Deborah, who was born in the town of Washington, married Dr. Benjamin

S. Wilbur, a leading physician and surgeon of Pine Plains, and they have nine children: Robert, William, Francis, Benjamin, Theron (married), Kate (Mrs. Fred Lewis), Charles, Maggie (Mrs. Williams), and Henry, who is not married, is a physician and surgeon in Pine Plains. (7) Julia was born in Mabbettsville, and married Jacob Sparks. Two sons were born to them—Homer and Cornelius—who, at the breaking out of the Civil war, entered the army with their father, and all three lost their lives in defense of the Union. Mrs. Sparks married a second husband, Henry Davis, a carpenter in Poughkeepsie, and they have one daughter, Lizzie, now the wife of John Propson, of Poughkeepsie, and the mother of five children. (8) Mary married Peter Butler, our subject's father. (9) Elizabeth married Cornelius Lamoreaux; and (10) Milton married Miss Howell.

ANDREW C. SMITH, a leading merchant of Bangall, Dutchess county, was born July 26, 1865, in the town of Pleasant Valley, where his ancestors were among the early settlers. The late William S. Smith, his father, was a lifelong resident of that town, and he and his wife, formerly Loretta Husted, had been active members of the M. E. Church for many years previous to their death. They had five children: Egbert and Mary (both deceased), Jane (who married Daniel Albertson), William, and Andrew C.

Our subject spent his boyhood days in his native town, attending the district school, and later engaged in clerking as the best possible training for a mercantile career. After one year at Salisbury, Conn., one at Cold Spring N. Y., and three in Bangall, he opened his present store, where he carries a line of general merchandise, his fine business ability and high character winning for him a constantly growing trade. He was married December 4, 1892, to Miss Martha D. Millis, a daughter of William Millis, a well-known resident of Bangall.

In politics he is a Democrat, and he is among the foremost among the younger local workers. In 1893 he was elected clerk of the town of Stanford, and has since filled the position with marked satisfaction to the public. Socially, he belongs to the K. of P., Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 43.

AUGUSTUS HOLDRIDGE, one of the leading and representative citizens of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is now connected with G. D. Chapman, in the firm of C. E. Buckley & Co., manufacturers of the Buckley water device. The Holdridge family has long been prominently identified with the interests of Dutchess county. Dr. Augustus Holdridge, the grandfather of our subject, was a well-known physician practicing in Uniondale and Beekman towns. He was born at Spencertown, Columbia Co., N. Y., and was very prominent in Masonic circles; the apron which he wore at his lodge is still in the possession of the family. He had six children, namely: Standish; Myron, the father of our subject; Peter, who married Mrs. Margaret Friday; Mrs. Elsie Sweet; Harriet, who married James Hamblin; and Betsy, who died in 1896. The last named was the wife of Seymour Tomlinson, proprietor of a hotel at Washington Hollow, Dutchess county, who died in 1856. Until recently the county fair was held upon his land.

Myron Holdridge, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, in 1806, was there educated, and followed farming. He held membership with Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., and was the oldest member of the Sons of Temperance in the community, being a charter member of the lodge to which he belonged. He was Democratic in politics, and at one time he was elected coroner, but would not qualify, as he cared nothing for public office. He died October 30, 1889. He married Miss Lucina Tilson, a daughter of Daniel and Lucy (Salisbury) Tilson, of Deerfield, Oneida Co., N. Y., who removed to Dover Plains when she was two years old. Her father was three times married, his first union being with a Miss Wilbur, by whom he had two sons, Peter and Wilbur. By his second wife, Lucy, he had two daughters, Lucina and Mary. His third wife, who bore the maiden name of Abigail Foss, was the sister of Rev. Job Foss, a Baptist minister of Dutchess county. Mrs. Holdridge died May 31, 1895.

Augustus Holdridge, the subject of this sketch, who is an only child, was born at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, January 5, 1835, and there received his literary training. He followed farming until 1869, when he turned his attention to railroad work, at first being employed on the Harlem road, but later was with the Long Island Railroad Co. for about sixteen years as conductor. Like his father and grandfather before him, he is identified with the Masonic fraternity, having joined Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., in 1868, but is now connected with Peconic Lodge, of Greenport, Long Island. Like his father, he is a Democrat.

Mr. Holdridge was united in marriage, September 8, 1870, with Miss Ruth Rosalie Gidley, who was born at Hanover, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., December 3, 1848, and they have become the parents of six children, namely: Grace, born July 9, 1872; Myron T., who was born December 9, 1874, and died September 28, 1875; Augustus, born October 16, 1876; Harvey G., born October 4, 1880; Frank H., born June 11, 1884; and Henry E., born August 20, 1889.

Jonathan Gidley, the grandfather of Mrs. Holdridge, was born and educated in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, and was a farmer by occupation. His political support was given the Democratic party. He wedded Miss Mary Hall, and to them were born nine children: Elizabeth, who married John A. VanVlack; Waite, who married Richard Ferguson; Mrs. Ruth Moe; Mrs. Polly Morey; Rebecca, who died unmarried; Henry, who wedded Mary Kelley; Hall, who married Currence A. Daton; Jonathan, who married Jane Kelley; and Timothy.

Timothy Gidley, the father of Mrs. Holdridge, was a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Lagrange, August 27, 1806, and, like his father, engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was a staunch Democrat in politics, but cared nothing for the honors or emoluments of public office. A great Church worker, he always took part in the progress of the Methodist Church, of which he was a prominent member in Chautauqua county, where he removed soon after his marriage, which occurred August 27, 1831, Miss Mary Christie becoming his wife. She was the daughter of Leonard and Ruth Christie, of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county. By this union there were six children, all born in Hanover township, Chautauqua county. Catherine R., born October 4, 1835, died unmarried at the age of twenty-seven years; Hall, born August 27, 1838, a carpenter by trade, married Miss Lucinda E. Smith, daughter of Daniel C. and Cordelia Smith, agriculturists of Hanover township; Henry R., born October 10, 1840, also a farmer, married Miss Ella D. Kewley, daughter of John and Dorcas Kewley, farmers of Hanover township; Mary A., born November 16, 1843, died September 29, 1844; Harvey J., born November 22, 1846, engaged in merchandising in Dunkirk, N. Y., and married Miss Nettie M. Ellis, daughter of Frank and Abi Ellis, of Forestville, N. Y., by whom he has one son, Ellis Harvey, born June 28, 1885; Ruth Rosalie, the wife of our subject, completes the family.

L EONARD D. HALL. There is probably no man in the town of Beekman more widely or favorably known than this gentleman, who is now a resident of Poughquag. In that town he was born December 28, 1811, and is the grandson of William Hall, a native of Rhode Island, who became one of the earliest settlers of the town of Beekman, where he followed farming throughout life, dying in 1822.

Our subject's maternal grandmother was a daughter of Simeon Draper, a native of Massachusetts, who prior to the Revolutionary war, with thirty-five others, bought near where is now Wilkesbarre, Penn., seventeen townships of land. He died there, however, very soon after his settlement on the place, and later the family were driven away by the Indians. Many years afterward our subject, then a lad of seventeen summers, accompanied by his mother, drove with a team from Unionvale, Dutchess county, over to this property with the intention of trying to recover at least a portion of it; but as the records had been destroyed nothing could be done. Mr. Hall says the trip was an arduous one, occupying some two weeks, and adds that it was the only time he ever felt homesick.

Israel Hall, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, the second son in the family of ten children of William and Mary (Vail) Hall, and his education was secured at the district schools of the neighborhood. He married Catherine Albro, a native of Rhode Island, and a daughter of Benjamin and Eleanor (Draper) Albro, and nine children blessed their union, as follows: Amy, who died unmarried at the age of eighty-eight years; Eleanor, widow of Isaac Northrup; Mary and Leonard D. (twins), the former being the wife of John Townsend; Margaret, living at Unionvale, on the old homestead;

Maria Ann and Draper, both deceased; Rutsen S., a prosperous farmer, living on the old homestead in Unionvale; and Richard V., deceased. With the exception of two years passed in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, Israel Hall devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits in the town of Beekman. In the war of the Rebellion he had been commissioned a lieutenant, and received 160 acres of land from the government for his services. In politics he was an Old-line Whig.

Leonard D. Hall, the subject of our sketch, received a liberal education at the district schools of his native place, and remained under the parental roof until he was thirty-seven years of age. After he became of age he received $100 a year for his time, his father giving his note for the same, which note our subject deposited in a crack in the old house where it remained one year, and was then paid. In the fall of 1849 Mr. Hall was married to Maria Lossing, a cousin of Benson J. Lossing the historian. In the fall of 1884, she was called from earth, and February 4, 1886, Mr. Hall married Harriet Eliza Hurd, daughter of Benjamin D. and Mary (Campbell) Hurd, both natives of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, where they passed their entire lives, the father dying June 16, 1872, in the seventy-eighth year of his age, the mother passing away January 7, 1882, at the age of eighty-one. They were highly respected farming people, and Mr. Hurd was a staunch Republican in his political preference. They had a family of seven children, as follows: Archibald C., who, when twenty years old, died January 18, 1842, in Cuba, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health; William T., who married Mary Cook, and had three children (he died June 26, 1854); Harriet Eliza (Mrs. Leonard D. Hall); Mary Jane, who married Thomas Brill, and died in June, 1893, leaving five children; Edgar I., a farmer in the town of Pawling, who married Carolin Howard, and has four children; Eustacia A. who married Gerome Dodge (now deceased) and had one daughter, Effie, who died when eight years old; and Julia G., who married James Longhead (now deceased), and lives in Pawling with her only child, Robert. To our subject and his wife have been born no children.

On leaving the old home, Mr. Hall began the operation of a 480-acre farm in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, on shares, wor ing in that way some four years, and the following eight years were passed upon a farm of 700 acres in the town of Pawling, which belonged to James Hooker, of Poughkeepsie. Returning to the town of Beekman he purchased 160 acres, on which he made his home for thirteen years, when he disposed of the same, and for three years boarded at Poughkeepsie. On the expiration of that period he bought his present residence at Poughquag, where he has since lived.

Leonard D. Hall

Mr. Hall has made his own way in the world, the money he earned from his father, as before related, being the sole pecuniary foundation of his prosperity. His boyhood ambition was to become comfortably well off and independent, and his expectations have been realized, for to-day he is a man of wealth, made so, not by speculation, but by industry and good management. He relates many interesting tales of adventure which his ancestors had with the Indians, one being about Amos Spafford, a distant relative, lying concealed for many days in the swamps in order to avoid capture by the Indians, at which time the rest of the family escaped. Mr. Hall has always voted the Republican ticket, and never had a desire to change; he has never cared for political preferment, though at one time he served as commissioner of highways in the town of Beekman. He has never united with any religious denomination, but is liberal of his means in support of the M. E. Church, of which his wife is a member, while he believes in God and humanity. This honored couple have the esteem and friendship of all who know them—young and old, rich and poor—and their hospitable home is always open to the reception of their numerous friends. Mr. Hall attributes his prosperity to hard work, honesty and sound judgment.

WILLIAM BURNAP JORDAN, a well-known and reliable agriculturist of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, is a native of the same, having been born there December 4, 1848, and is a son of Josephus D. Jordan, who was born in Hillsdale township, Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1808. The family came from Belfast, Ireland.

Major William Jordan, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born at North Castle, Westchester Co., N. Y., September 22, 1751, and obtained his title while serving as a soldier in the war for independence. By occupation he was a farmer, a pursuit he followed the greater part of his life in Columbia county. By his marriage with Ruth Ferris, of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, he had eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: John, 1774; William, 1777; Rebecca, 1781; Benjamin, 1783; Abram, 1785; Nancy, 1787; Ambrose, 1789; Daniel Gano, 1791; Lucy, 1793; Hannah, 1796; and Asa Allen, 1798. Of this family, Ambrose became a prominent and leading lawyer, having a State-wide reputation.

The birth of William Jordan, Jr., the grandfather of our subject, occurred in Hillsdale township, Columbia county, and in 1803 he was married to Rhoda Allen, who was born in 1782, the wedding being celebrated at the old Allen homestead, which has been in the possession of the family for over a century and a half. He was a captain in the war of 1812. The names and dates of birth of their children are as follows: Hanna J., 1805; Moors, 1806; Josephus Dunham, 1808; Ambrose Latting, 1809; Ruth, 1811; Cornelia Allen, 1813; Polly Hoffman, 1814; Sally Ann, 1816; James Philip, 1818; Harriet Tuttle, 1820; Mathias Bragden Talmadge, 1821; Jane Elizabeth, 1823; and William Howard Allen, 1826.

Josephus D. Jordan received an academic education at Claverack, Columbia county, and later studied law with his uncle, Ambrose L. Jordan. After his admission to the bar he practiced his profession at Hudson, N. Y., for a number of years, and later at various places in Columbia and Dutchess counties. He was one of the leading attorneys of his time, was a well-read man, understood civil engineering, and was much interested in music, in which he was well educated. In religious belief he was a Presbyterian; politically, he supported the Republican party. On January 13, 1844, Josephus D. Jordan was married, by Rev. W. N. Sayre, to Mary Elizabeth Knickerbocker, who was born at Poughkeepsie, October 19, 1819, a daughter of John Knickerbocker. Three children graced this union, namely: Mary Burnap, born in 1846, died unmarried; William B., subject of this sketch; and Laura Alling, born in 1852, who became the wife of L. O. Pitcher, of New York City, but is now deceased. The mother of these children died in 1867, the father in 1885.

William Burnap Jordan completed his education by one year's attendance at the academy conducted by Mr. Bisbee, known as the Poughkeepsie Military Institute, and since leaving the school-room, at the age of nineteen years, he has been engaged in the operation of his fine farm of 150 acres, one of the best in the town of Pine Plains. Being quite a reader, he is well informed on the current literature of the day. Public-spirited and progressive, he has always taken quite an interest in local affairs, and is a strong Republican in politics. From 1878 until 1880 he served as supervisor, and during that time was on the equalization committee, the district attorney committee, and the committee on the county treasurer's accounts, and the physician's and coroner's accounts. With the Presbyterian Church he and Mrs. Jordan hold membership, and he has served as elder and trustee in same. On December 28, 1876, Mr. Jordan was united in marriage with Miss Mary Elizabeth Harris, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and three children have been born to them, as follows: Mary Elizabeth, born in 1877, a graduate of Seymour Smith's Academy in the town of Pine Plains, class of '95, and at present teaching school in her home town; Cyrus Victor, born in 1880, also a graduate of Seymour Smith Academy, class of '95, and now attending college in New York City; and William Burnap, born in 1885. The mother of these died in 1889, and in 1894 Mr. Jordan wedded her half-sister Myra.

Israel Harris, the grandfather of Mrs. Jordan, was a son of John Harris, who came from Lynn, Mass., and founded the Pine Plains branch of the family in Dutchess county. His children were: William and John, who became residents of Onondaga county, N. Y.; Victor and Myron, who in 1849 removed to Grand Rapids, Mich., where they became extensively engaged in the lumber business; Eunice, the wife of Henry Akin, of Fort Collins, Colo.; Mary, wife of William Herrick, of Salt Point, N. Y.; and Silas, who made his home in Grand Rapids, Mich. Of these, Myron was a member of the House of Representatives of Michigan; Silas served as speaker of the same body, and Victor was a State senator.

Myron Harris, the father of Mrs. Jordan, was born in Dutchess county, in 1820. He married Mary Gleason, by whom he had children as follows: Mary Elizabeth, first wife of William B. Jordan (she graduated from Oak Hill Seminary, New Haven, Conn.); and Mattie Gleason, who married C. B. Bogue. For his second wife Mr. Harris wedded Miriam Carpenter, daughter of Benjamin Carpenter, of Lansing, Mich., and by her he had four children, viz.: Abbie, who died unmarried; Myra, second wife of W. B. Jordan (she graduated from Seymour Smith Academy); Lucy Carpenter, wife of George Strayer, of Denver, Colo.; and I. Victoria, of Fort Collins. The father of this interesting family was one of the prominent Democrats of Michigan, and continued to make his home at Grand Rapids up to his death in 1880.

JAMES H. HAIGHT, a prominent miller of Stanfordville, Dutchess county, was born December 9, 1851, in the town of Washington. He is of Puritan ancestry, being of the eighth generation in direct descent from Simon Hayt (or Haight), who came from England in 1829 and located first at Salem, Mass. He was one of a party to leave that town and settle at Charlestown, Mass., where, previous to their coming, there was but one white family. From Charlestown he went to Dorchester, where his name appears about 1630, and from there to Scituate and later to Windsor Conn., his name appearing there in 1640. He afterward moved to Fairfield, and then, about 1649, to Stanford, Conn., where he died. He had two sons—Benjamin and Moses. The latter was born before 1637, and came from Fairfield, Conn., to East Chester, N. Y., in 1665. He married, and reared one child, Moses, who was born before 1662, and lived in East Chester. He married, and had several children, among them a son, Moses, who was born in East Chester, October 28, 1696. He was a farmer by occupation, and moved, in early manhood, to Crum Elbow, being the first Quaker to come to this locality. He married and reared a family, among whom was a son, Joseph, born in Dutchess county, who married and had eight children—Joseph, Jonathan, Obadiah, Rachel, Reuben, Amos, David and Daniel. Reuben was born in Washington township, January 17, 1758. He married Miriam Mary Haight, and reared a family of eleven children, whose names with dates of birth and death are as follows: Stephen, January 17, 1788, died September 15, 1851; Silas R., February 4, 1790, died January 18, 1848; Jonathan, April 27, 1792, died November 13, 1877; David, February 3, 1794, died March 31, 1795.

David (2), October 17, 1795, died March 23, 1800; Daniel, August 24, 1797, died in August, 1860; Sarah, July 10, 1799, died October 19, 1839; Phœbe, August 9, 1801, died January 17, 1885; Walter, April 26, 1803, died May 27, 1879; Joseph, May 31, 1805, died December 7, 1851, and John R., June 17, 1808.

Silas R. Haight, our subject's grandfather, was born in the town of Washington. He married Lydia Congdon, a native of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, where her ancestors were among the early settlers, her great-grandfather, James Congdon, coming from Rhode Island. His son Ephraim, her grandfather, and James Congdon, her father, were leading farmers in their day. After their marriage Silas Haight and his wife moved to a farm in Pleasant Valley, where they lived eleven years, and then came to the town of Washington to spend their last days. They had three children: James, who died in childhood; Reuben S., our subject's father; and Phœbe J., who married John Clement, a farmer of Washington. Silas Haight was a Democrat in politics, and he and his wife were both Quakers in religious faith. His wife survived him thirteen years, dying December 25, 1861.

Reuben S. Haight was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, January 24, 1828, and moved to a farm in the town of Washington with his parents in 1835. He married September 11, 1849, Marie Antoinette Howard, a lady of English descent, who was born in Ontario county, daughter of James Howard, a native of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. Her uncle, Thomas Howard, was a farmer in Washington. Reuben Haight and his wife lived on a farm north of Millbrook for seven years, and in April, 1866, after one year on a farm near Washington Hollow, and eight in the town of Washington, Mr. Haight bought a gristmill at Millbrook, and has since resided there. He is one of the leading citizens of the place, and a Republican in politics, and he and his wife are members of the Reformed Church, in which he has been an elder for several years. They have six children: Laura, who married Thorn Devel, a farmer of Washington; James H., our subject; Gertrude, the wife of Albert F. Smith, a lumber dealer in Millbrook; Lucy, who lives at home; and Howard and Jay, who conduct a feed store at Millbrook.

James H. Haight, the subject proper of our sketch, attended the district schools of the town of Washington, and later the Nine Partners Boarding School, mastering his studies with characteristic energy. Until he was twenty-one he worked in his father's mills, and in the spring of 1873 he started in the same business near Stanfordville, although at that time he had no capital, and paid interest on all the money invested. Of this he has made a success, and his proved ability, judgment and enterprise give him a high rank in business circles. He was married on June 14, 1876, to Miss Georgia A. Thorne—daughter of Dr. John S. Thorne, of Millbrook, and has two children: Francis T. and Thorne.

Politically, he is a staunch Republican, but he is not a politician in any sense and has not held office. He is, however, prominent in local affairs, and a leading supporter of every movement for the welfare of the community.

WILLIAM TOMPKINS, who was called from this earth January 23, 1894, was one of the well-known and highly respected native citizens of Dutchess county, his birth having occurred in the town of Pine Plains March 9, 1810, and was a son of Thomas and Judith (Acker) Tompkins. His father, who was born in Westchester county, N. Y., in 1778, devoted his entire life to agriculture in that county and in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county. He passed away November 23, 1854. His household included five children, namely: John, deceased; Stephen; William; Jemima, deceased wife of Smith Acker; and Thomas, deceased.

At the age of six years William Tompkins accompanied his parents to Westchester county, where he attended school and was reared to rural life. He contributed his share to the cultivation and improvement of the old homestead, and later secured employment on the sloops running from Sing Sing to New York City. He served as foreman on the construction when the aqueduct was being built to New York, but most of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuit, in which he was very successful.

In the town of Mount Pleasant, Westchester county, December 20, 1837, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Tompkins and Miss Jane Merritt, daughter of John Merritt, and they became the parents of three children, as follows: Ophelia was born June 5, 1839, married Arthur Sherman, January, 1865, and had one child, Jennie Sherman; Uriah W., an attorney of New York City, was born December 12, 1840, married Hattie Coons (she died leaving three sons—Harry L., William C. and Frank W.); Emmet, of Staatsburg, Dutchess county, was born October 23, 1842, and married Henrietta Kipp, by whom he had the following children: William (deceased), Luella, and Sanford (deceased).

After his marriage, Mr. Tompkins removed to the town of Pine Plains, where he engaged in farming until 1870, when he went to Rhinebeck, and there lived for five years. On the expiration of that period he went to Clinton Corners, where his remaining years were passed in retirement. He was one of the self-made men of the county, having commenced life without capital other than his strong hands and resolute will, and attained to a fine position, socially and financially, among his fellow citizens. He was a man of indomitable energy and perseverance, and in early life was an untiring worker, so that he secured a comfortable competence, which enabled him to lay aside business cares and rest in the enjoyment of his former toil. In his religious views he held to the faith of the Society of Friends, and his death was widely and sincerely mourned. In politics he was an earnest Republican.

WILLET TITUS. In the year 1635, on the third of April, the good ship "Hopewell", William Burdick, master, sailed from London, England, for Massachusetts. With her came Robert Titus (1), husbandman, of St. Katherines, aged thirty-five, and his two children—John (aged eight years) and Edmund (aged five years). This family at first located in Boston, but soon moved to Weymouth, and from there to Rehoboth, where four children were born, namely: Samuel, Susannah, Abiel and Content. About 1654, the entire family, except the eldest son, John, went to Long Island, and took up land in Huntington, Suffolk county. The second son had previously (about 1650) settled in Westbury, L. I., where he had acquired a large tract of land, and erected the house in which his descendants still reside. Edmund and his wife were Quakers, and most of his descendants still hold to that faith. Robert Titus (1) married Hannah—and had children: John, Edmund (2), Samuel, Susannah, Abiel, Content. Of these, Edmund (2), married Martha Washburn, and had eleven children, as follows: Samuel, Phœbe, Martha, Mary, Hannah, Jane, John (3), Peter, Silas, Patience and Temperance. Of these, John (3) married Sarah Williams, and the following were born to them: Mary, John (4), Philadelphia, Jacob, William, Sarah. He married (second) Mary Smith, and had one child, Richard. Of these, John (4) married (first) Sarah Pearsall, and they had six children: Henry, Mary, James (5), Elizabeth, Sarah, Jonathan. He married (second) Phœbe Thomas, and had no issue. Of these, James (5) married Ann Cook, and they had: Martha, John, Joshua, Willett (6), Sarah. Of these, Willett (6) married Ruth Stratton, and the following children were born to them: Elizabeth, Anne, James, Jonathan (7), Sarah, John, Mary. Of these, Jonathan (7) married Nellie Roosa, and had the following issue: Willet, Ann, Peter, Jonathan (8), Catherine, Richard, Mary, William, Sarah, John, Andrew J., Henry B. Of these, Jonathan (8) married Helen Hasbrouck, and children as follows were born: Willet (9), Joseph H., Henry T., Sarah Jane, Nellie. (Of these, Sarah Jane married William A. Wright, and the following were the issue: Florence Fraternity, Mabel, Helen Hasbrouck, Jennie M., William, Titus, Mary, Adna Damerel).

Willet (9) Titus, our subject, was born July 3, 1844, in the town of Shawangunk, Ulster Co., N. Y., attended the public schools of his native place, and then for three years studied at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill. He was much interested in mathematics and philosophy, and gave particular attention to those branches of study. After his mother's death he went to High Falls, and lived one year with his uncle, James H. Van Demark; then was apprenticed for four years to L. B. Van Wagoner, of Kingston, to learn the carpenter's trade. For Mr. Van Wagoner he worked a few months after serving his apprenticeship and in the spring of 1866 went to Newburg where he remained a while, then returning to Mr. Van Wagoner, continued with him until July, 1867, at which time he went to Red Hook and built a house and barn for William H. Teator. In Red Hook he remained about a year, and August 3, 1868, came to Poughkeepsie, where he was engaged in journeyman work until 1875, in which year he commenced his present business of contractor and builder. He is one of the oldest contractors in the city and has built up a large and lucrative business employing not less than fifteen men in the winter.

Walter Titus

ter and as many as fifty men in the summer. In connection with Mr. Rounds our subject built the Vassar Hospital. He has also built the library and rectory at Wappingers Falls (for $25,000); Archibald Rogers' stables (for $43,000); State Hospital, section E, and Doctors' residence and attendance house; the dormitory at Vassar College, and four cottages at the same place; Mrs. Jackman's residence (for $23,000); the Thorn memorial school at Millbrook (for $80,000); and the private residences of I. R. Adriance and William Adriance. Mr. Titus has built many of the largest buildings in the city and county. He also had the contracts for the building of Recitation hall at Vassar College, and the Adriance Library.

Our subject was married April 17, 1872, to Miss Sophia Leslie, a native of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and they had one son, Harry Leslie, who died at the age of nineteen years. In politics Mr. Titus was a Democrat, but in local matters votes independently; in religious faith he is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; socially he is affiliated with Triune Lodge No. 2, and belongs to all the branch lodges, chapters and commanderies, being a past officer in the order. He has always been a public-spirited man, is an extensive reader, well informed on all current topics, is a typical self-made man, and in business one of the most successful.

Jonathan Titus, the father of our subject, was born in Shawangunk, November 20, 1821. He followed the occupation of a farmer until 1868, when he engaged in the lumber business in Galesburg, Ill., together with the carpenter trade, in which he continued until 1874, when he retired. He married Miss Helen Hasbrouck, who died in November, 1860. Jonathan survives her.

Jonathan (7) Titus, grandfather of our subject, was also a native of Shawangunk; was a farmer, and spent his entire life in Ulster county. The members of the Titus family have generally been Democrats in their political views, and, although stanch citizens, have not been active in such matters. They have always been members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and fairly active in Church work.

GEORGE T. CHAPMAN, the senior member of the well-known firm of George T. Chapman & Co., of Pawling, Dutchess county, is one of the leading citizens of that town.

He was born April 26, 1858, in Dover Plains, Dutchess county, the grandson of Wooster Chapman, and son of Hiram W. Chapman, who first saw the light in the town of Dover in 1829, and was for many years successfully engaged in mercantile business in Dutchess county. He had a store in Dover Plains for nearly a quarter of a century, with three or four different partners, and for more than twenty years of the time he was postmaster there. His home, however, was in Dover, whence he removed to Amenia in 1865, where he owned a large farm, and after closing out his business at Dover Plains he spent twelve years in agricultural pursuits. In 1877 he moved to Pawling, N. Y., bought out the assignments of Ballard & Peck, and continued in mercantile business until his death in 1882. He was the principal merchant in Dover Plains, and possessing great energy and natural ability, accumulated a fine property. He was a Democrat, though not very active in politics; while in Amenia, he attended the Presbyterian Church, but in Pawling he attended the Methodist Church. He married Cordelia Sheldon, daughter of Theodorus B. Sheldon, also of Dover, and a well-known farmer and blacksmith in that place. To this union were born three children: Allie T., who married William H. Arnold; George T., our subject; and William T., who was postmaster under President Harrison for four years, and is now deputy postmaster.

George T. Chapman was educated mainly in Amenia Seminary, and also attended school at Fort Edward, N. Y., for over a year. On leaving school, at the age of nineteen, he engaged in farming in South Amenia for two years; in 1877 went to Pawling with his father and was with him as clerk until the latter's death. At that time (1882) Mr. Chapman became the head of the firm of George T. Chapman & Co., the "Co." being the brother, William T., and his mother. In 1889 he bought out his brother's interest, and since that time Mr. Chapman and his mother have been sole owners. Mr. Chapman has enlarged the stock and greatly increased the business, and is regarded as one of the successful men of his locality. He has always been a Democrat in politics, and has taken quite an interest, in an unofficial way, in the success of his party. On August 30, 1894, he was commissioned postmaster by President Cleveland, and later he was appointed by the President, the Senate confirming the nomination on December 11, 1894. He inclines toward the Methodist faith, contributing to that Church, and in many ways he has shown his loyalty to the best interests of the town.

In 1882 Mr. Chapman married Miss Sarah White, daughter of Sewell and Nancy (Emeigh) White, of Pawling, N. Y., and to them have been born four children: Mary Louise, Ella Cordelia, Grace Sophia and George T., Jr.

JAMES R. KERLEY. No man, probably, in Dutchess county is more worthy of representation in a work of this kind than he whose name introduces this sketch. He has been identified with the agricultural interests of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, most of his life, and there owns a fine farm of 100 acres of land, equipped with good and substantial buildings. The estate is one of the most valuable in that section of the county, and indicates in all its appointments the supervision of a man of intelligence and sound judgment.

Our subject was born December 29, 1829, at Tivoli, Dutchess county, and is a son of James Kerley, who was born in the town of Red Hook. His great-grandfather came to the United States from Scotland, and here married a lady who was a native of Holland. The birth of their son, James Kerley, occurred in Vermont, and when he had reached man's estate he removed to Dutchess county, N. Y., and wedded a Miss Miller, by whom he had four children: Catherine, who became the wife of Michael Leonard, a merchant of Columbia county, N. Y.; John, a farmer of Red Hook town; James, the father of our subject; and Hannah, wife of Edwin Greene, who was a farmer of Dutchess county and represented his district in the General Assembly.

The father of our subject grew to manhood upon the farm in Red Hook town, where his parents had located soon after their marriage. He married Miss Sarah A. Graves, a native of Columbia county, where her father, Titus Graves, engaged in farming. After their marriage they made their home at Tivoli, where the father engaged in merchandising until his death, in 1830. His wife died in 1874. Their family consisted of two sons: John D., a physician and farmer of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county; and James R.

Our subject was but three months old when his father died, and upon a farm he passed his childhood days, attending the district schools of the locality, finishing his education at the Hudson Academy, after which he returned to the farm. In September, 1854, he married Eliza K. Pitcher, who was born in the town of Red Hook, a daughter of Abram Pitcher, whose ancestors came from Holland. In 1890 he was called upon to mourn the death of his wife, who was a most estimable lady. Six children graced their union: R. D., a farmer of Red Hook town; Abram P., a chemist and druggist of New York City; James E., a painter; Charles G., a physician of New York; John G., an agriculturist of Red Hook town; and Mary E.

On October 1, 1862, Mr. Kerley was appointed Deputy Internal Revenue Collector for his district, which position he held for twenty-one years, during which time he also engaged in the insurance business, and continued the operation of his land. Since that period, however, he has devoted his time exclusively to the cultivation of his farm. He is an active, enterprising citizen, taking a lively interest in Church and educational matters, and is one of the stockholders of the academy at Red Hook. In politics he is a staunch Republican.

MATTHEW J. CASHIN is a prominent and enterprising merchant of Wappingers Falls, where he has built up a fine grocery trade by honest dealing, courteous treatment of his customers, and by carrying the best stock that the markets afford. He is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Poughkeepsie, December 11, 1859. The birth of his father, James Cashin, occurred in County Kilkenny, Ireland, and when a young man he bade adieu to the friends and scenes of his youth, and sailed for America, locating in the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, where he here carried on agricultural pursuits up to the time of his death. Here he wedded Catherine Harold, also a native of the Emerald Isle, and to them were born six children: Matthew J., Thomas J., John F., William H., Edward C., and a daughter who died in infancy. The mother is still living. The father was a devout member of the Catholic Church, and was a stalwart supporter of the Democratic party.

Mr. Cashin, whose name introduces this record, was reared upon the home farm, where he was trained to habits of usefulness, and after his education was completed in the district schools, he and his brother Thomas carried on the retail milk business, started in the year 1876 by their father, carrying on that enterprise until April 1, 1886, when our subject sold out to his brother, and established his present grocery store.

On October 31, 1883, Mr. Cashin was united in marriage with Miss Margaret E. Burns, who was born at Wappingers Falls, and is the daughter of Peter Burns, a native of Ireland. A family of four children have been born to this worthy couple: Katie, James, Mary and Joseph. The parents are communicants of the Catholic Church, and are highly respected people. In his political views Mr. Cashin coincides with the principles of the Democratic party, taking an active interest in the local campaigns of that organization, and was trustee of the village for one year, after which he resigned, preferring to give his entire attention to his business interests.

JOHN R. SCHULTZ, a prominent agriculturist and dairyman of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born April 26, 1849, on a farm which has been in the possession of his family seventy-three years.

His great-grandfather, Peter Schultz, a native of Holland, came to America soon after the Revolutionary war, and located in the town of Rhinebeck. His son Abram, our subject's grandfather, made his home upon this farm throughout his life. He married Miss Hell, and had four children: Margaret, who married Edgar Ratcliff, a butcher at Yonkers; Julia, who married James Schryver, also a butcher at Yonkers; Richard, our subject's father, and one who died in childhood. Richard Schultz was born October 4, 1819, and always lived on the old homestead. He was a leading farmer of the vicinity, a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Reformed Dutch church. He married Frances Rowe, a daughter of William M. Rowe, a well-known farmer of the town of Milan. She was a member of the M. E. Church from her childhood to her death, which occurred February 13, 1895, her husband surviving her only a few months, dying May 21 of that year. They had five children, of whom our subject is the eldest. William M. is a farmer on the old homestead; Edwin resides in New York City; David E. died in Rhinebeck March 23, 1857, and Julia F. married Herman Brown, of Dutchess county, a traveling salesman by occupation.

John R. Schultz grew to manhood on the old home, and December 15, 1869, he married Sarah A. Cronk, a lady of Welsh descent, the daughter of Nathaniel T. and Aurilla (Hall) Cronk, both of whom were natives of Westchester county, where Mr. Cronk's father settled on his arrival in this country from Wales. Four children were born of this marriage: Carrie L., the wife of William B. Traver, of Hudson, N. Y.; Hattie F., who is at home; Harry R., who died December 12, 1883, and Edwin B., now at home.

In his specialty of dairying Mr. Schultz is among the leaders of his locality, as was his father before him. For eighteen years he has sold milk in Rhinebeck at retail, but previous to that he wholesaled it. His farm of eighty acres is a beautiful one, commanding a fine view of the Hudson. He and his wife are ready sympathizers with all progressive movements in their vicinity, and they contribute to the M. E. Church. Politically he is a Democrat, and an influential one; his intelligence and public-spirit making his judgment valuable, he has been commissioner of the town of Rhinebeck for nine years.

HAMILTON PRAY, who is at the head of one of the important industries of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, was there born in 1844, and was educated in the schools of Amenia. On starting out in life for himself, he first engaged in farming, but later turned his attention to blacksmithing. In 1890 he invented and patented an ice plow, which has completely revolutionized the ice trade in this country, and at once sprang into public favor. It is designed for horse power, and he established a factory at North Clove, in the town of Unionvale, which he has run to its utmost capacity. In 1892 he took out other patents on the improvements in the plow, which is one of the most important inventions perfected in Dutchess county, and has lessened the price of ice plows throughout the entire country. Mr. Pray can safely be called the father of the two cutter beams, known as a marker and cutter beam combined. He is justly entitled to a place among the leading inventors of the county, and has more than ordinary ability as a business man. He is a wide-awake, progressive citizen, fully abreast with the times in every particular, and his career has been one of honorable activity.

Andrew Pray, the grandfather of Hamilton Pray, was a resident of the town of Dover, and was a member of Assembly from there. He married Mary Duncan, and had ten children: (1) Amy, who married Edward Ward, and had nine children, Andrew, Thaddeus, Mary, Frank, Hannah, Louisa, Sarah, Henry and Edward; (2) Hannah, never married; (3) Sarah, who married William Ross, and had six children, John, Mary, Delia, Andrew, Washington and Duncan; (4) David, who married Sarah Stephens, and had two children, Richard and Mary; (5) Mary, who married Josiah Dickerson, and had three children, William H., Wilhemina and Estella; (6) Martha, who married Isaac Stephens, and had two children, Mary and Henry; (7) Albert, who married Margaret B. Wyman, and had six children, Hamilton (subject of this sketch), Mary L., Emma P., Blanche, Andrew and Albertine; (8) George, who married Nancy Baker, and had five children, Elias, Lavinia, Martha, George and Seward; (9) Andrew, and (10) John, who never married.

David Wyman, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a resident of the town of Clinton, and a mechanic. He married Lorana Lapham, and had nine children, namely: Loranda, who married David Donald; Lapham, who married Susan Woolsey, and had eleven children, Lorana, Holmes, Henry, Jane, Loranda, Lorenzo, Alice, Frank, Clifford, Nelson and Charles; John, who never married; Tacy, who married Jacob Rider, and had one child, Wyman; David never married; Phebe, who married Albert Bullard; Solon, who married Mary Woolsey, and had two children, Dick and Don; Harris, who married Elizabeth Tompkins, and had one child, George; and Margaret, who married Albert Pray.

Hamilton Pray was united in marriage with Miss Sarah E. Gregory, who was born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and was educated at the Clove, in Unionvale town. Five children were born to them, namely: Albert G., born in 1878; Mary L., born in 1880; William H., born in 1884; Andrew G., who was born in 1885 and died in infancy; and David H., who was born in 1895, and also died in infancy.

Philo Gregory, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Pray, was a native of New London, Conn., and a farmer by occupation. He had two sons, Samuel and Philo. The former was born and educated in the town of Unionvale Dutchess county, and followed agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Ann Burton, a daughter of Daniel and Naomi Burton, and to them were born six children: Elizabeth, who became the wife of Orville Le Due; Silas, who first married Eliza Sheldon, and after her death wedded Phœbe Emigh; Sarah, who remained single; William, the father of Mrs. Pray; Naomi, who married Charles Brazer; and Charles, who married Lydia Thayer.

William Gregory is a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and throughout life was engaged in farming and mining. Socially he holds membership in the Masonic Lodge at Shekomeko. He was joined in wedlock with Miss Lucy J. Lee, a daughter of Lyman and Harriet (Soule) Lee, farming people of the town of Dover. Five children graced this union, namely: Mary L., born in Dover town, in 1851, wedded Theodore Nickerson and had two children, Ella and Willie; Sarah E., born in 1853, wife of the subject of this sketch; Harriet A., born in 1855, married Adelbert Terwilliger, and has three children Leander, Frank and Effie; George L., born in 1866, engaged in farming, and married to Lillie Babcock; Carrie, born in 1869, the wife of John P. Ham, by whom she has one daughter, Mary.

On the maternal side, Mrs. Pray traces her ancestry back to John Lee, a native of Connecticut. His son, Hezekiah Lee, was born reared and educated in Connecticut, and was a farmer by occupation. He served his country in the war of 1812. By his marriage with Miss Jane Wilson, he had the following children—Peter; Reuben; Lyman, the grandfather of Mrs. Pray; Sallie, who married Job Chamberlain; Rosanna, who married Isaac Jordan; Betsy, who first married a Mr. Boswick, and after his death wedded Jason Cross; Lucy, who married John Benson; Jeannett, who married William Atkins; and Jennie, who married Smith Perry.

Lyman Lee was a native of Kent, Conn. and was also an agriculturist. He married Miss Harriet Soule, a daughter of Henry and Abigail (Benson) Soule, and they became the parents of ten children, as follows: Susan, who married Austin Frink, a farmer, by whom she had five children, George, Arthur, Albert, Henrietta and Harriet; Lucy, the mother of Mrs. Pray; Frances, who married Isaac Gregory; Hannah, who married Lyman Benson and has three children, John, Hattie and Elmer; Senaca never married; Henry, a railroad employe, who married Sarah Raymond, and had three children, Edwin, George and Clara; Hezekiah never married; Harriet, who married Peter Sliter, and has three children, Ella, George and Mary; George remained single; Josephine, who married Charles Sherwood, and has five children, Frankie (who married Earnest Buckley), Fred, Bertha (who married Bert Spencer), Anna, and Maude.

JOHN D. HOWARD, who is now living retired from active life in his pleasant home in Poughkeepsie, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, September 22, 1835.

Edward Howard, the paternal great-grandfather of our subject, was born December 24, 1724, and was one of the early settlers of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. He married Phœbe Hart, who was born May 3, 1735, and the names and dates of birth of their children are as follows: Stephen, May 26, 1753; Matthew, September —, 1754; Ruth, February 1, 1756; Mary, November 8, 1757; Richard, March 13, 1760; Sarah, September 20, 1761; Edward, April 26, 1763; Patience, November 8, 1764; Phœbe, December 8, 1767; Thomas, May 14, 1770; Benjamin, June 14, 1773; John, December 21, 1774; William, March 6, 1777. All the members of his family married. The father died October 1801, and the mother on August 4, 1804.

Thomas Howard, grandfather of our subject, was born in Pawling, and married a Miss Haynes. Their children were as follows: Thomas, Patience, Anna, Lucy, Jane, Laura, Sophia, and James (the father of our subject).

James Howard was born September 2, 1804, in Pawling. On October 24, 1827, he was married to Ann Dodge, who was born August 24, 1806, also in Pawling. In 1847 they removed to Lagrange, where they spent the remainder of their lives, the father dying October 29, 1890, and the mother about 1879. Their children were: Marie Antoinette, born March 26, 1829, married September 11, 1849, to Reuben S. Haight; Lucy Ann, born July 16, 1830, died January 26, 1863; Frances Helen, born January 1, 1832, was married August 25, 1863, to Dodge P. Blackstone; Caroline Augusta, born October 23, 1833, married E. Irving Hurd, April 28, 1859; John Dodge, born September 22, 1835, married Adeline B. Barnes, October 24, 1861; Thomas N., born July 19, 1839, died May 13, 1851; Jay, born March 11, 1848, was married in the year 1871, to Ruth A. Halleck; Sarah Jane, born September 10, 1841, died December 22, 1858; Laura, born August 7, 1844, died September 10, 1854; Zenobia, born January 7, 1845, died February 8, 1851. One of these sons, Jay, remained upon the farm in Lagrange with his father until the latter's death, they being associated in their work for nearly fifty years. Jay Howard was married in Stamford, N. Y., in 1871, to Miss Ruth A., daughter of Samuel Halleck. She died October 26, 1874, leaving three children: Frank, Kathryn and Ruth A., all of whom are at home with their father.

John D. Howard, the subject of this sketch, received a good common-school education in the schools of Lagrange; and at the Nine Partners School, also attending a private school in Washington township. On October 24, 1861, in Lagrange, he was married to Adeline B., daughter of William Barnes. The children born of this union are: Sophia, who married Nicholas Flagler, and has two children—Ethel and Sophie; James, who married Ella Ackerman, and has two children—John and Willard D.; Lucy, who married Charles Stark, and has two children—Howard and James; Annie, who married Henry Taylor; Sally, Mary and Adeline. Of these, Sally was a professional nurse, and for three years was superintendent of nurses at the Womans Hospital, corner of Forty-ninth street and Fourth avenue, New York; she was married in February, 1897, to Dr. Burch, of the city of Washington, and resides there. Sophia, Lucy and Annie were for a time teachers in Dutchess county, the last named being a graduate of Linden Hall, Poughkeepsie.

Mr. Howard has spent the greater portion of his life in agricultural pursuits, but in 1890 left his farm in charge of his son, and went to West Superior, Wis., where he remained two years. Since his return he has made his home in Poughkeepsie, and is not now engaged in any active employment. His wife departed this life June 14, 1886. Mr. Howard has been a Republican ever since the formation of the party, and has worked for its interests. He was supervisor of the town of Lagrange for three terms, and has always been an enterprising, public-spirited man.

HENRY VAN BENSCHOTEN. The subject of this sketch, one of the most prominent agriculturists of Dutchess county, was born on the old homestead in the town of Lagrange, June 6, 1822.

Elias T., father of our subject, was also born on the old homestead, December 27, 1783. He married Miss Cynthia Velie, September 10, 1807. She was born October 5, 1786. Their children were: John E., born December 5, 1808, died March 6, 1873; Philip, born February 10, 1811, married on February 20, 1840, to Miss Hannah Thorn, and they had one child, Thorn, born February 17, 1841; Sarah, born January 21, 1813, died February 13, 1830; Harriet, born February 23, 1815, became the wife of Aris I. Vanderbilt October 19, 1841, and died June 13, 1869; Eliza, born March 3, 1818, married J. Harry Pettit, September 4, 1844, and died January 8, 1893; Jemima, born November 29, 1819, married Dr. W. H. Hopkins February 5, 1840; Henry, born June 6, 1822, married Miss Mary Jane Ver Valen December 9, 1857; Cynthia, born May 9, 1824, married David H. Mulford October 22, 1857; Elias, born August 15, 1826, married Cornelia Harris December 9, 1857, and for his second wife Sarah L. Wooster, January 6, 1875; Jane, born in August, 1828, died December 19, 1866.

Mr. Van Benschoten was well known and highly respected. Tall, erect, and remarkably active, physically he was a type of man with whom we associate the stirring events of the early history of the country. He was an excellent citizen and neighbor, and his uniform, genial temperament made his presence always attractive in the social circle. By his industry and business capacity he acquired a handsome competence, and became one of the largest land owners in his section of the country. His entire life was spent on the old home in Lagrange, and he was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Tunis Van Benschoten, the grandfather, was born October 9, 1755, and was married August 23, 1775, to Miss Elizabeth Van Derburgh, who was born October 13, 1759. He departed this life December 23, 1835, and his wife December 31, 1819. Their children were as follows: Jemima, born July 13, 1777, became the wife of Oliver Green; Henry, born August 30, 1778, married Miss Mary Jackson and died September 25, 1832; Elias T.; Sarah, born January 8, —, died September 1803. Tunis was an elder in the Hackensack Church. He owned the first one-horse pleasure wagon in Lagrange. He was born upon the old homestead now owned by our subject.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject was Elias Van Banschoten, as the name was first spelled. His son, Elias, Jr., owned the place, which was deeded to him by his father in 1738, through Gideon Ver Vealin, great grandfather of Mrs. Van Benschoten. The deed is now held by our subject.

The children of Dr. W. H. and Jemima Hopkins were: Harriet, born May 18, 1840, married Richard Titus; Elias, born September 3, 1843, married Miss Emily Field; John, born July 8, 1845; Elizabeth, born May 16, 1846, died in infancy; William, born February 2, 1850, married Miss Ida Sayles. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Pettit: Sara, born June 30, 1845, married James O. Conkling; James, October 4, 1846, married Miss Eliza Flagler; Cynthia, January 27, 1849; John H., born November 10, 1850, married Miss Maria Bacon; Janie, January 26, 1862. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Benschoten were: Anna, born February 19, 1859, married Dr. Witt Bergen September 16, 1885; Louis, born March 25, 1861, married the Rev. Joseph Paige Davis, who is deceased; Elias, April 1, 1867; John E., July 27, 1870. Mr. and Mrs. Mulford had one child, Hattie, who married John Hackett. She was born October 25, 1857.

Henry Van Benschoten spent his boyhood days on the old homestead, and attended the district schools. He has held the offices of town clerk, assessor and supervisor, elected on the Democratic ticket. He was appointed by the Legislature town auditor in 1860.

GEORGE C. PAYNE, a valiant member of the Union army during the Civil war, is now one of the prominent and representative business men of the town of Stanford, where he is successfully engaged as a wholesale and retail butcher. He was born in that town on January 7, 1841.

The birth of his father, Samuel Payne, curred July 8, 1799, and in Putnam county, N. Y., on September 18, 1822, he married Miss Ann Hager, who was of German ancestry. She was born May 4, 1803, and died May 5, 1879. Seven children were born of this union: (1) Rachel O., born September 10, 1824, became the wife of David L. Thompson. (2) Anthony H., born December 28, 1826, makes his home in Brooklyn, N. Y. (3) Warren C., born May 31, 1829, resides at Bangall, Dutchess county. (4) John H., born December 19, 1831, enlisted in Company B, 128th Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, August 20, 1862, and was discharged November 19, 1864, at Albany, N. Y., on account of disability. He is at present living at Stanfordville, Dutchess county. (5) Orra S., born August 30, 1836, became a member of Company A, 20th New York State Militia, October 22, 1861, and was discharged March 20, 1863, on account of wounds received at the battle of Chantilly. (6) Jehiel P., born August 30, 1836, died August 17, 1848. (7) George C., subject of this review, completes the family. For several years after his marriage the father remained in Putnam county, N. Y., but later became a resident of Stanford town, Dutchess county, where he engaged in farming until his death, which occurred November 24, 1865. Politically he was a Democrat, and religiously was a consistent member of the Baptist Church at Bangall.

The education of our subject was obtained in the schools of Stissing, and, after completing his education, he was employed as a farm hand for three seasons. While thus engaged the storm of war broke over our beloved country, and in response to the call for men he enlisted August 20, 1862, in Company B, 128th Regiment, New York Volunteers, and served until the South laid down its arms. He participated in the Red River expedition, the siege of Port Hudson, the expedition up the Pearl river, and the campaign in the Shenandoah Valley. He was mustered out at Albany, N. Y., July 7, 1865. For some time after his discharge he was in poor health, having become ill while in Savannah, Georgia.

After his return home Mr. Payne engaged in farming for a time, and then opened a general store at Bangall, which he conducted for a year, after which he clerked a year for C. H. Humphrey, at that place. He then removed to the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where for three years he carried on agricultural pursuits, after which he returned to Stanford town, and for the past twenty years has been engaged in the meat business.

Mr. Payne was married October 20, 1869, to Miss Emeline C. Mosher, who was born at East Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y., January 12, 1850. Her father, David Mosher, was a native of Saratoga county, N. Y., where his father, Benjamin Mosher, was also born. The latter married Jane Bloom, and they became the parents of seven children: Joseph, David, Jane, Mary, Rennselaer, Amy and Esther. The father of this family spent his entire life in farming in Saratoga county. There his son David was educated in the common schools, and on reaching his manhood he was united in marriage with Miss Alice Mosher, by whom he had two children: Edwin B., who became a member of the 21st New York Cavalry during the Civil war, and was shot by a guerilla; and Emeline C., the wife of our subject. Her maternal grandfather, William Mosher, was born March 5, 1786, and wedded Martha A. Mosher, by whom he had ten children. His father, Barnabas Mosher, was born September 2, 1758, and married Ruth Mosher, who was born July 13, 1757. In their family were eight children.

To Mr. and Mrs. Payne were born five children: Edward Van Rensselaer, born on March 24, 1872, is now a civil engineer, located at Lockport, N. Y.; Alice Gertrude, born September 28, 1874; William Mosher, born February 22, 1882, died April 9, 1885; Rose Cleveland, born February 8, 1886, died February 18, 1895; and Albert Henry, born September 19, 1887, completes the family.

As a Democrat Mr. Payne takes great interest in political questions, and has served as collector of Stanford town. In religious belief he is a Baptist, holding membership with the Church of that denomination at Bangall, and socially is identified with Warren Lodge No. 32, F. & A. M., at Schultsville, N. Y. As a soldier he displayed bravery, sagacity and true patriotism; as a business man his actions have been above reproach or criticism, and as a citizen he is an illustration of a high type of American manhood. In social circles he and his wife occupy a prominent position. She is an earnest worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and for four years has been recording secretary for the Dutchess County Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

CHARLES W. HOAG (deceased) was one of the most genial and whole-souled men of Dutchess county, where was spent his long and useful career. The genealogy of the family can be traced to John Hoag, who was born in 1643 and died in 1728. On April 21, 1669, John Hoag married E. Emery, by whom he had the following children: John, born February 28, 1670; Jonathan, born October 28, 1671; Joseph, born January 10, 1677; Benjamin; Hannah, born January 3, 1683; Judith, born April 20, 1687; and Mary.

For his first wife Benjamin Hoag wedded Sarah Morris, and they became the parents of six children: Mary, born April 5, 1704; John, born September 3, 1706; Jonathan, born in December, 1708; Sarah, born May 3, 1711; Benjamin, born November 15, 1714; and Judah, born April 29, 1716. By his second wife, who bore the maiden name of Esther Sneatt, he had ten children, whose names and years of birth are as follows: Patience, 1719; Daniel, 1720; Moses, 1721; Elizabeth, 1723; Anna, 1724; Mary, 1728; Isaiah, 1730; Abenezer, 1731; Theodore, 1732; and Esther, 1734.

John Hoag, the second child of the first union, was joined in wedlock with Mary Hoag, who was born January 9, 1706, and they had six children: Elijah; Enoch, born in 1731; John, born May 10, 1734; Abner, born in 1736; Mary; Paul, born in 1741. For his second wife John Hoag married Patience Rogers, and to them were born four children: Isaiah, in 1754; Rachel, in 1756; Jeremiah, in 1759; and Nathaniel, in 1765.

The next in direct line was John Hoag, a resident of the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He was united in marriage with Mercy Tripp, who was born March 16, 1738, and they became the parents of eight children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Abel, December 12, 1761; Philip, December 6, 1764; Lucy, March 17, 1767; Amy, June 2, 1769; Charles, December 25, 1771; Ruth, April 22, 1775; Tripp, March 6, 1778; and Mary, May 25, 1782.

The fifth child of that union, Charles Hoag, was the grandfather of our subject, and died January 23, 1840. On November 21, 1793, he married Betsy Denton, who was born April 5, 1772, and died August 30, 1852. Their family included nine children, as follows: Anna, born October 2, 1794; John T., September 27, 1796; James D., February 14, 1799; Henry C., May 3, 1801; Phoebe, August 13, 1805; Ezra B., December 11, 1807; Benjamin, October 23, 1810; Deborah, October 18, 1812; and Mary, February 25, 1815.

The father of our subject, John T. Hoag, spent his boyhood days at Pine Plains, Dutchess county; on November 30, 1825, he was united in marriage with Mary C. Bedell, born July 20, 1800. By this union they had two children: Charles W., born October 7, 1826; and Mary B., born June 10, 1835. For some time the father engaged in farming in Columbia county, N. Y., and on his return to Dutchess county first located in Clinton town, but later removed to the old homestead in Pine Plains town, which he operated up to his death, May 8, 1849. He was reared in the faith of the Society of Friends, and was highly respected and honored. His wife departed this life on July 14, 1858.

Charles W. Hoag passed his early life in the usual manner of farmer boys, in the town of Pine Plains, and secured a good education at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He assisted his father in the labors of the home farm until he was married, June 10, 1857, to Laura Bryan, whose birth occurred April 21, 1831. They became the parents of five children: Ward B., now a physician of New York City; he was born July 3, 1859, and married L. Lilian Sills, of New York City, May 9, 1895; John E., born November 2, 1861; Mary E., who was born November 25, 1863, and December 9, 1891, wedded William H. Ulrich, of Greenfield, Mass.; Anna Gertrude, born July 6, 1868; and Charles William, born February 14, 1870.

For two years after his marriage Mr. Hoag remained in the town of Pine Plains, and the following eight years were passed near Miller-ton, Dutchess county. In April, 1869, he removed to the town of Stanford, where he erected the large house at the upper end of Upton Lake, now known as the "Upton Lake House," and there continued to live until his death, which occurred March 4, 1893. He was classed by his fellow citizens as one of the public-spirited and representative men of the county, and merited and received the warmest confidence and esteem of the entire community.

The family of Mrs. Hoag has also long been identified with the history of Dutchess county, her great-grandparents, Ezra and Sarah Bryan, being residents of the town of Northeast. Their son, Amos Bryan, who also lived in that township, married Betsey Finch, and to them were born nine children, of whom Vard W., the father of Mrs. Hoag, was the eldest. His entire life was passed upon the old homestead farm in the town of Northeast. On December 12, 1829, he was united in marriage with Elizabeth Wanzer, and they became the parents of eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Laura, April 1, 1831; Calvin, January 6, 1833; Elihu (deceased), July 26, 1835; Amos (deceased), October 9, 1836; James, March 25, 1839; Sarah (deceased), November 25, 1840; Jane, February 25, 1843; Ezra, December 16, 1844; Phœbe, February 5, 1847; Reuben, June 20, 1849; and Coralie (deceased), February 9, 1853. The father, who was a faithful member of the Friends Church, died December 1, 1863; his wife survived him till July 27, 1885.

B. W. Hoag

EDWARD BARMORE, of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, is a representative agriculturist, his farm, near Moores Mill, being among the best of its size in that locality.

He is a native of Dutchess county, but his father, Clark C. Barmore, was born May 25, 1805, in Westchester county, N. Y., and came to Dutchess county with his parents when he was six years old. He attended the district schools of the town of Unionvale, and taught for several terms in early manhood. On December 26, 1831, he was united in marriage with Mary C. Alley, who was born December 8, 1810, the daughter of James Alley. For a few years after his marriage Mr. Barmore was engaged in farming in Unionvale, but, in the spring of 1836, he moved to the town of Lagrange, and settled upon the farm now occupied by his grandson, Clark Barmore. He was a forthright Quaker, always adhered to the old ways of speech, and was a regular attendant at the Friends' meetings, serving as clerk for many years. A self-made man, he was very successful as a farmer, and his fine character gave him great influence among his acquaintances. He was a life-long Democrat, and held several offices in the town of Lagrange. His death occurred there September 30, 1873, and his wife followed him February 22, 1880. They had nine children: Phœbe, who married Crumline Patterson, of Arthursburgh, N. Y.; Edward, our subject; Stephen, deceased;

Caroline, the wife of Andrew S. Wanzer, of Moores Mill; Eliza M., deceased; Sarah, who married Cyrus Perkins, of Moores Mill; John, deceased, who married Josephine Phillips; Charles, deceased, and Mary Adelia, the wife of Gilbert V. Downing, of Poughkeepsie.

Edward Barmore was born in the town of Unionvale November 8, 1835, but accompanied his parents to the town of Lagrange at the age of four months. He was educated in the district schools of his neighborhood and at a boarding school at Oswego village. He taught successfully in Lagrange during the winter terms of 1856 and 1857. On November 24, 1858, he was married in the town of Beekman to Miss Lucy E. Wanzer, daughter of Isaac Wanzer, and a native of the town of New Milford, Litchfield Co., Conn. Immediately after their marriage they settled upon the farm, where they now reside, in a house built by Mr. Barmore. Three children blessed their union: (1) Clark, a farmer in the town of Lagrange, born February 13, 1862, is a graduate of Eastman Business College; he was married December 17, 1885, to Gertie Tripp, daughter of Daniel Tripp; he is a member of the Lagrange Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union; was one of the organizers of the Farmers' Insurance Co., of Lagrange, of which he is a director and the treasurer. (2) Mary Eliza is president of the local W. C. T. U., and treasurer of the County Union; at the time of the Constitutional Convention of New York State, in 1894, she canvassed the town of Lagrange for signatures to the Equal Suffrage petition, securing nearly 300 names; she was also secretary to the county campaign committee. (3) Emma B. was married January 2, 1890, at the age of twenty, to Charles Huestis, of Unionvale.

Mr. Barmore is a Prohibitionist politically, and his wife is one of the leading members of the W. C. T. U. of Lagrange. He is a non-combatant, and, having been taken in the first draft during the war, he was released by President Lincoln, owing to his conscientious scruples against the use of arms.

LEWIS SMITH. Among the young and enterprising citizens of Barrytown, Dutchess county, there is probably none more energetic or thorough-going than the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He made his appearance on the stage of life at Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., in 1868, and acquired a good practical education in the schools of Canarsie and Brooklyn, N. Y. He learned the art of piloting, and was granted a license as a pilot on the Hudson river, New York harbor and Long Island sound. He now follows that calling, being mostly engaged in taking freight steamers. He is one of the prominent and representative young men of Barrytown, where he now makes his home, and has the respect and esteem of all who know him. His estimable wife was Miss Hattie Moody, daughter of George and Lucinda Moody, of Clinton township, Dutchess county.

Mr. Smith is of German descent, his parents, Robert and Sophia (Helm) Smith, both being natives of the Fatherland, the former born at Glangstadt in 1841, and the latter at Maxfeld, Prussia, in 1844. They were educated in Germany, and in 1865 took passage on the same vessel, bound for the United States. They met on board the ship, and their friendship ripening into love, they were married on reaching Rondout, N. Y. The father had been a sailor previous to his location in this country, and had visited almost every country on the globe. At present he is a boatman, and makes his home in Barrytown. In the family were seven children, namely: William, who died at the age of seventeen years; Lewis, subject of this review; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; and Robert, Martha, Rebecca, and Albert, all at home.

John Helm, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was born at Mecklenburg, where he was educated, and there married Miss Elizabeth Yager, also a native of Prussia. They became the parents of eight children, but the names of the oldest three are not known. The others are: William, who married a Miss Russell; Mary, who became the wife of Charles Klopp; Sophia, the mother of our subject; Caroline, who wedded August Heidman; and John, who when a young man served in the Prussian army, and who died of a fever soon after his return home.

PLATT V. AND JOHN J. HALL, leading and prominent citizens of the town of Unionvale, are worthy representatives of an honored family of Dutchess county. William Hall, their grandfather, was born in what was then the town of Beekman, but is now Unionvale, and secured his education in its public schools, after which he followed the vocation of farming. He wedded Miss Mary Vale, daughter of Israel Vale, who held the commission of captain in the Colonial army during the Revolutionary war. The following children were born of this union: Levina, who married Solomon Duncan; Ruth, who became the wife of Henry Deyo; John, the father of our subjects; Israel, who married Catherine Albro Isaac, who wedded Mary Rogers; Gideon and Benjamin, who remained single; Mary, who became the wife of William Pine; William Abigail, who married Isaac Titus; and Rebecca, who married Joseph Losee.

John Hall, Sr., who was born in the town of Beekman, in 1776, was educated in the schools near his home, and there engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Mary Waite, daughter of Joseph and Catherine Waite. Her father was a lawyer by profession, and also followed auctioneering, and was a prominent member of the Masonic order.

Thirteen children graced the union of the parents of our subjects, as follows: (1) Catherine, born in the town of Beekman, November 10, 1802, married David Hawes. They had eight children: John D., who married Miss Fuller; Daniel; Charles, who married Miss Briggs, and, after her death, wedded Miss Wheeler; Erthemer, who married a Miss Edmonds; Phœbe, who married George Hall George; Benjamin; and Judson. (2) Martha, born August 3, 1804, married Smith Titus. (3) Phœbe A., born August 13, 1806, married Henry P. Emigh, by whom she had one child that died in infancy. (4) Pauline A., born August 2, 1808, married Levi Haskell. (5) Abigail, born March 3, 1810, married Frederick Davis. (6) Levina, born December 1, 1811, married Smith Titus. (7) Ruth, born January 6, 1814, died unmarried.

(8) Platt V. Hall, one of our subjects, was born in Beekman, Dec. 25, 1815, and, after completing a common-school education, turned his attention to farming. He was united in marriage with Miss Louise Paul, daughter of Alfred and Levina Paul. Her father was a hotel keeper in Chenango county, N. Y. Ten children were born to Platt V. Hall and his worthy wife, namely: Mary L., who was born September 6, 1865, and died in infancy; and Alfred P., who was born in the town of Unionvale, July 26, 1868. For twenty-five years their father served as postmaster of Mansfield. Alfred P. Hall was educated in the State Normal School, at Albany, N. Y., and as a life work chose the occupation of farming. Since 1894 he has acceptably filled the office of assessor of Unionvale town, has been inspector of elections and held other public positions of honor and trust. In 1890 was celebrated his marriage with Miss Loda K. Pitcher, daughter of Charles J. and Wealthy (Tanner) Pitcher, the former a farmer and lumberman of Shekoneko, Dutchess county. Two children were born to Alfred Hall and wife: Susie V., born April 6, 1892; and Paul A., born January 8, 1894, and died in infancy.

(9) Rebecca, the ninth child of John Hall, Sr., was born April 24, 1818, and married George Hopkins, by whom she had two daughters: Sarah and Mary, twins, the former the wife of Egbert Benson, and the latter the wife of George Tillinghast. After the death of her first husband, Rebecca became the wife of Victor Fuller, who was a soldier in the Civil War, and to them were born two children: Ruth and Estelle, both of whom died in infancy. (10) Helen, born March 31, 1820, married Joseph Benson. They had eight children: Levina, deceased; Mary, who became the wife of Truman Case; Platt J., who first married Flora Dickerman, and after her death wedded Louisa Benson; Franklin D. married Armel Gay; Homer, deceased; Fred J., deceased; Augusta, who married Clarence Oakley, and Ella, who wedded Fred Irish. (11) Sarah E., born October 26, 1821.

(12) John J. Hall, another of the subjects of this sketch, was born in the town of Beekman, February 10, 1824, and obtained an excellent education in the State Normal School, of Albany, N. Y. He was admitted to the bar in 1868, but has never engaged in practice. His early life was principally devoted to teaching, but in later years he has carried on farming with good success. For eight years he has held the office of justice of the peace, having been elected by the unanimous vote of the people; was also the first postmaster appointed at Mansfield, and was superintendent of the schools of Unionvale town, all of which offices he creditably filled, proving a most trustworthy and capable official.

(13) Fred D. Hall, the youngest of the family, was born in the town of Unionvale, September 17, 1827. After finishing his literary education, he entered the law school at Ellston, N. Y., under Professor Fowler, and was admitted to the bar in 1852. He removed to Chickasaw, Iowa, where he was elected district attorney, but is now engaged in farming. He married Miss Harriet Moore, by whom he has children as follows: Amos, John and Mary Emily.

The farm now occupied by Alfred P. and John J. Hall is the old Hall homestead, which has been in the possession of the Hall family from 1767 to the present time.

JHAVILAND HAIGHT was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, February 12, 1828. He spent his early life in Clinton, where he attended the district and Quaker schools, finishing his education at the Amenia Seminary, in the eastern part of the county.

After leaving school our subject settled on a farm in the town of Washington, where he remained two or three years, removing then to Poughkeepsie, and engaging there in the coal and lumber business for a short time with James Collingwood, later with Charles Pearl, in the saddlery and hardware business. In 1855 he went to Iowa, stayed there until 1864, returned to Poughkeepsie and lived here until 1871, when he went to Kansas and engaged in farming for some twenty years. In 1866 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Wanzer, daughter of Dr. H. C. Wanzer, of Rochester, N. Y. In January, 1891, Mr. Haight moved from Kansas to Poughkeepsie, where he is now living a retired life. Mrs. Haight died August 23, 1894. Although our subject takes an interest in politics, he is no politician, being independent in politics more than anything else. He is a member of the Hicksite Quaker Meeting, and is interested in all matters pertaining to the development and improvement of the city in which he resides.

Dr. Charles Haight, father of our subject, was a native of the town of Washington, born June 15, 1806. After obtaining a common-school education he went to New York City and studied medicine. He returned to Dutchess county, and at Four Corners practiced until 1845, when he moved to Poughkeepsie and practiced there until his death, September 26, 1891. He married Miss Elizabeth Haviland, who was born in the town of Washington, a daughter of Jacob Haviland. After their marriage Dr. and Mrs. Haight located at Four Corners, which, with Hart's Village, is now known as Millbrook. Our subject was the only child. Mrs. Haight died in 1856. Dr. Haight was a Republican, and he was a highly successful physician.

Jacob Haight, the grandfather of our subject, also born in Dutchess county, married Amy Clement, and they settled on a farm where they reared a family of four children, as follows: Charles, father of our subject; Alonzo, a prominent farmer and physician in Dutchess county; Alexander, who was a farmer in Virginia; and Maria, married to James Barlow, a merchant of New York, but at one time a farmer in Virginia. Mr. Haight followed farming in Dutchess county until 1840, when he went to Virginia and farmed there until his death.

Jacob Haviland, father of Mrs. Haight, was a native of Dutchess county, where he followed the occupation of farming. Daniel Haviland, great-grandfather of Mrs. Haight, was a Quaker preacher, and followed farming as a vocation.

JOSEPH HARRISON BENSON was born in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, September 8, 1815, and acquired his education at the district schools. At the early age of sixteen years he left the home farm and began working by the month and year as a farm hand. His attention has always been devoted to agricultural pursuits.

While still a young man he and his brother, Samuel K. Benson, bought the Thomas Swift farm. After running this farm together for three years, he decided to branch out for himself, and, selling his interest to Samuel, he bought the Reuben Reed farm on the hill near the Steel works, where he lived for twenty-five years. Wishing to enlarge his farming operations, he bought the farm known as the Judah Swift farm, one and one-half miles south, where he still resides.

In the meantime he was united in marriage, in March, 1842, to Hellen S. Hall, of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess Co., N. Y., daughter of John Hall, who was an influential member of the Friends (or Quaker) Church at Mechanic, N. Y. Mrs. Benson passed to the better land in June, 1880. Unto them were born eight children: Lavina and Frederick De Peyster (both deceased); Mary E., wife of Truman Case, of Norwich, N. Y.; Platt J.; Franklin De Peyster; Augusta, wife of Clarence Oakley, of Norwich, N. Y.; John Homer (deceased); and Ellen, deceased wife of F. M. Irish, of Wassaic, New York.

Like his father, Mr. Benson was first a Whig, and now advocates the principles of the Republican party, but has never aspired to political preferment. In 1877 he purchased the handsome residence and farm situated at the junction of Tower Hill and Dover Plains road, known as the Cal. Nase property, also a place on Chestnut Ridge, both of which he presented to his two sons, Platt J. and Franklin D. He is now in his eighty-second year, a living monument to the coming generations showing what a young man with a pair of willing hands and good judgment may accomplish.

FRANKLIN DE PEYSTER BENSON, one of the sons of Joseph Harrison Benson, and a thorough and systematic farmer of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, was born there March 22, 1854. He belongs to a family that has for several generations carried on agricultural pursuits within the borders of the town. Samuel Benson, his great-grandfather was a native of Horseneck, R. I., but early became a resident of Dutchess county, locating in the southern portion of Amenia town, where he engaged in farming. He married Rachel Darling, and reared a family of four sons and three daughters: Samuel, Joshua, Bethiah, John, Abigail, Phila and Polly. The grandfather, who also bore the name of Samuel, was born in Amenia town, where he spent his boyhood days attending the district schools. He was married at Otsego, N. Y. to Sarah Knapp, but soon afterward returned to Amenia town, and there followed farming until his death. In early life he was a Whig, and on the organization of the Republican party he joined its ranks, becoming one of its faithful supporters. There were eleven children in his family, namely: Joseph H., father of our subject; Samuel K. and John, deceased; James V., of Dover town, Dutchess county; Ebenezer, of South Dover; Darius, of Amenia; Charles and Sarah Jane, both deceased; Adeline, wife of J. G. Dutcher; Harriet, wife of Van Nest Dutcher, of South Dover; and Joshua, deceased.

Franklin De Peyster Benson obtained his literary education in the district schools, Franklin D. Edward Academy and the Amenia Seminary. After attaining his majority he went to western Kansas, where for five years he was engaged in the stock business, and he still owns a large cattle ranch there. Returning to Amenia, he located upon his present farm in 1887, and has since been engaged in its cultivation and improvement. He follows in the political footsteps of his father and grandfather, voting the Republican ticket, and is deeply interested in the success of his party. In Lane county, Kans., January 24, 1887, he was united in marriage with Miss Carmel Gay, a daughter of Rev. E. L. and Mary A. (Massey) Gay. Her father, who was from Boston, Mass., is now serving as pastor of the Baptist Church at Brighton, Kans. Three children bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Benson, namely: Luther Joseph, Frank De Peyster and Fannie Augusta.

F. D. Benson

Joseph H. Benson

Platt J., a brother of Franklin De Peyster, and a prosperous farmer of Amenia town, was born April 29, 1852, and attended the district school and the Amenia Seminary. In Amenia he married Flora Dickerman, who died April 1892, and to them were born nine children: Clarence, Sadie, Helen, Joseph, Hadley, Milo (deceased), Anna, and Flossie and Flora (twins). For his second wife he wedded Luisa Benson, daughter of Samuel Benson. Politically he supports the Republican party.

OLIVER BARRETT, one of the enterprising and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Northeast, resides on a farm near Coleman Station, which has been in the possession of the family without interruption for nearly one hundred years. The Barretts are of English descent, but is not known positively when the first of the name came to this country. Ezekiel Barrett, our subject's grandfather, was born September 17, 1742, in Norwich, Conn., where he passed his entire life, following the trade of carpenter and joiner. He was not prominent in politics, nor was he a Church member, although he was a Universalist in belief. On July 7, 1773, he married Sarah Lathrop, who was born in Norwich, April 29, 1729. She was a descendant in the fifth generation from Rev. John Lathrop, a Congregational minister, who left England on account of religious persecution, and arrived at Scituate, Mass., September 28, 1634, accompanied by his six sons and two daughters. He died in 1653. His son, Samuel Scudder Lathrop, had a son, Israel, who married Rebecca Bliss; their son William married Sarah Huntington; their son Ezra, Mrs. Barrett's father, married Esther Clark. Mrs. Barrett died October 27, 1811, in her sixty-third year, her husband surviving until February 10, 1838, when he passed away at the age of ninety-six years. They had four children: Mary B., born May 19, 1774; Ezra Lathrop, born September 27, 1775; and Oliver and Backus (twins), born April 10, 1779.

Ezra Lathrop Barrett, our subject's father, was a carpenter and joiner, and worked at his trade for many years. He came to Dutchess county prior to 1800, and, after a short stay at Pine Plains, he moved to Northeast and managed the Caleb Dakin farm, now occupied by Mrs. Coleman. Later he bought the farm which our subject owns, moving there in the spring of 1820. The house he built at that time is still in excellent repair, and he constructed other substantial buildings, including Mrs. Coleman's present home, built for Caleb Dakin. He was a Democrat, and very positive in his views on public matters, and was a member of the Masonic fraternity. Early in life he united with the Congregational Church at Sharon, Conn., but afterward assisted in the establishment of the Northeast Center Congregational Church, in which he held the office of deacon until his death. On January 3, 1805, he married Rhoda Dakin, daughter of Caleb and Rhoda (King) Dakin, and granddaughter of Simon Dakin, a well-known Baptist minister, and an early settler of the town. Of this union five children were born: Sarah Louise, born December 6, 1805; Caleb Dakin, born November 21, 1807, married Caroline, daughter of Douglas Clark; Edward Lathrop, born July 26, 1810, married Sarah Fish; Myron, born September 9, 1816, a minister of the Presbyterian Church, married Emma Elizabeth Ryerson; and Oliver, born December 9, 1819. Ezra Barrett died November 18, 1857; his wife died May 23, 1860.

The subject of our sketch has always lived at the old homestead, having been absent from it not more than six months in all. There are two other farms in the vicinity, which have been owned by the family for about one hundred years, having been handed down by inheritance. Mr. Barrett has been very successful, his prosperity being attained by close attention to business, and he has added to his original farm of 123 acres, the Smithfield farm of 188 acres, acquired from the Dakin estate. On November 21, 1854, he was married to his first wife, Catherine Sophia Hornfager, daughter of Adam Hornfager. Five children were born to them: Charles Miller, October 24, 1855, a farmer, married to Josephine Devoe; Ezra Lathrop, August 30, 1858, married to Alice N. Clark; Rhoda Louise; Cornelia, who died in 1865; and Albert, the railroad agent at Coleman Station, married Edna Dodd Hazard. The mother of this family died in 1870, and in 1874, Mr. Barrett married Julia Elizabeth Pulver, daughter of Nicholas N. Pulver, and a descendant of one of the old Holland-Dutch families.

Mr. Barrett is well informed on general topics, and takes an intelligent view of the questions of the day. In politics he has always been a Democrat, and he has taken an active part in local affairs, and served two terms as justice of the peace. He and his family have always belonged to the Congregational Church, in which he held the offices of trustee and deacon.

MILES SCOFIELD. The Scofield family in this country is descended from Sir Cuthbert Scofield, of Scofield Manor, parish of Rochdale, Lancashire, England, two of his grandsons, Daniel and David Scofield, having come to America in 1639, in the ship "Susan and Ellen," settling in Stamford, Conn. The family history is now in process of completion, and, according to present expectations, will shortly be in print, giving a complete account of the many descendants of these pioneers. The subject of this sketch traces his lineage to Daniel Scofield, through a long list of ancestors.

His great-grandfather, Jacob Scofield, married Hannah Knapp; his grandfather, Miles Scofield, married Abigail Hustis, and their son, Ephraim M., our subject's father, was born, November 1, 1796, in Putnam county, N. Y., south of Fishkill, near Cold Spring. He was a farmer in Fishkill, and, January 8, 1824, married a native of that town, Catherine Phillips, who was born September 24, 1802, the daughter of Henry Phillips, a Hollander by descent, and his wife, Sarah Southard, an English lady. Our subject was one of a family of nine children: Emily, Miles, Joseph, Julia, Mary, Sarah, Catherine, Ephraim and Cordelia. The father departed this life July 21, 1878, and the mother December 29, 1893.

Miles Scofield was born August 3, 1827, in the town of Fishkill, and was educated in the common schools of the village of Fishkill, under J. C. Howard and Rev. Mr. Pingree, and in the Fishkill Academy. He left school 1850, and February 5, 1852, he sailed from New York for California on the steamer "Prometheus," for Greytown, by the Nicaragua route. On the Pacific coast he took the steamship "North America," which was wrecked on the coast of Mexico 100 miles below Acapulco, the vessel being a total loss. The passengers were taken by land to Acapulco, where they remained five weeks, and then took passage to San Francisco on the steamer "Independence," arriving April 10, 1852. Mr. Scofield with three others started immediately for the gold mines on the Yuba river, where they purchased an interest and went to work with a will. After three years of mining in Yuba and Nevada counties, Mr. Scofield joined a company in constructing the Excelsior canal to supply the hydraulic works in Rose Hill township, Timbuctoo Diggings. They brought the water first from Deer creek, a distance of sixteen miles, and later extended the canal to the South Yuba river, thirty-one miles away. While in California Mr. Scofield was a strong supporter of the Vigilance movement in 1851. He left the mines and went down to San Francisco, where he offered himself to the Vigilance committee to be held in reserve for use as needed. He remained in California four years and a half, and then, in the fall of 1858, came back to his native place, where he purchased his present farm of eighty-five acres near Fishkill village, now known as Fruit Ridge, to the Osborn Hill.

In the following year, October 2, 1859, he married Miss Mary Vail, daughter of William R. and Sarah Ann (Bogardus) Vail, highly respected residents of the town of Fishkill. A new home was built in the spring of 1859, and there Mr. and Mrs. Scofield began their wedded life. For some time he devoted his land to general farming and dairying, but gradually put it into use in fruit growing, and at the present time he has fifty acres in fruit of various kinds, and is considered one of the best horticulturists in that region. In 1890 he purchased a residence on Main street, in the village of Fishkill, where he has since resided, although he still owns and cultivates his farm. His wife's father lived with them for ten years and died July 1, 1896, in his ninety-first year, leaving a large estate. Mr. and Mrs. Scofield have had two children, of whom Frank died in infancy; the other, Mary Louisa, is the wife of Edgar A. Shook, former the town of Red Hook, but now a resident of Fishkill.

Mr. Scofield and his wife are leading members of the Reformed Church of Fishkill, in which he holds the office of elder. He was appointed to attend the general synod of the church at Kingston in June, 1896. In politics, Mr. Scofield is a Republican. He was elected assessor in 1877, and he served two terms of three years each. For several years he has held the office of school trustee, and he has been a trustee of the Fishkill Rural Cemetery Association from its organization to the present time. In business circles he is also prominent, and for many years he has been connected with the management of the Fishkill Savings Institute, and is now its vice-president.

WESLEY VAN TASSELL, a leading citizen of the town of East Fishkill, is noted no less for his ability as a business man and political worker than as an agriculturist, his success in various lines of effort showing unusual grasp of affairs.

His family originated in Holland, but his ancestors settled in Westchester county, N. Y., at an early date, acquiring extensive estates there. Henry Van Tassell, our subject's grandfather, was born there and became a prominent agriculturist. He married a Miss Tickly, and reared a family of six children: John L., our subject's father; Isaac, Henry, Jones, Jane and Delia.

John L. Van Tassell, who was born August 2, 1817, and spent his early years upon the old homestead in Westchester county, married Miss Catherine Baker, a lady of English descent, whose family had been located in Dutchess county for several generations. Her father, Ennajah Baker, was a well-known carpenter and builder. After his marriage Mr. Van Tassell settled in Old Fishkill, where he engaged in business as a farmer, miller and speculator in cattle, his shrewd judgment enabling him to make a success of each. Politically he was a Republican. His wife died March 16, 1888, and he did not long survive, passing to his rest February 16, 1895. They had eleven children: Sarah (deceased), formerly the wife of Anzo Townsend, a carpenter in Connecticut; J. Wesley, our subject; James, who died at an early age; Wilbur, a resident of Lagrange; Ezra, who has never married; Benjamin, a farmer in Wappinger town; Isaac, who lives at Fishkill Plains; Phoebe, the wife of John Nolin, a farmer near Matteawan; Kate, who married Charles Dains, of Matteawan; and Eugene and Charles, who are not married.

J. Wesley Van Tassell was born October 12, 1845, and was educated in his native town of Fishkill, attending first the district schools, and later the old academy at Fishkill. On completing his studies he engaged in farming, which he has always followed, spending about three years at his first place, in East Fishkill, and six upon another farm in Fishkill Plains, two in the town of Northeast, and afterward returning to his present farm in East Fishkill. On September 19, 1866, he married Carrie C. Haight, a descendant of the well-known family of that name. She is a native of Dutchess county, and was the youngest daughter of Henry Haight, a leading agriculturist of East Fishkill. They have had seven children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Cora, October 26, 1867, married C. M. Dolson, a farmer in the town of Wappinger; Clinton W., July 15, 1869, the manager of a commission store in New York City; Milton J., June 9, 1874, a cashier in a restaurant, No. 1305 Broadway, New York City; Howard C., October 26, 1875, a cashier in a restaurant, No. 221 Sixth avenue, New York City; Carrie Mae, September 11, 1879, at home; Orrin, April 28, 1884, died July 24, of the same year; Wesley Augustus, November 5, 1888, at home.

In addition to his agricultural interests Mr. Van Tassell carries on a fire-insurance business in Dutchess, Putnam and Westchester counties. He has been an able and energetic public official, and a prominent worker in the Republican party. Ever since he was twenty-one years of age Mr. Van Tassell has been closely identified with the politics of the county. He has been a delegate to every Republican county convention since that time, and has cast a vote at every election. He was elected assessor of East Fishkill in 1873, over Abram Adriance, for three years. While on a farm in Middleton, 1877-79, he investigated the iron ore interest of J. V. W. Brinckerhoff, of that town. In 1880 he was elected commissioner of highways in the town of East Fishkill for three years. In the fall of 1888 he was elected sheriff of Dutchess county for three years, defeating Storm Emans by a majority of 466. He was elected supervisor of the town of East Fishkill in 1894, for two years, and in the spring of 1896 he was re-elected for a similar term. He was appointed in 1886 assistant superintendent of the State Stove Works at Sing Sing, and held the position for two years.

While sheriff of Dutchess Co., Mr. Van Tassel managed the two farms of A. A. Brush, and was proprietor of the flour, feed and grist mill at Hopewell. He has held school trusteeship in every town in which he has lived. In the spring of 1897 his name was frequently mentioned as a candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket.

PHILIP KLADY, who during the greater portion of his life was an esteemed citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born October 22, 1828, at Muehlhoffen, Rhein-Pfaltz, Bavaria, Germany, the son of Jacob and Lucetta (Alexander) Klady. His father was also born in that town, and was a member of one of its old families which came originally from France, and are descendants of Huguenots; his mother's family were also descendants from Huguenots. The name Klady originally was Kloedy.

Our subject had one brother, Jacob Klady, and four sisters, Catherine (who married Jacob Strobe), Elizabeth (who became Mrs. Philip Riedinger, of Poughkeepsie), Mary (who married Jacob Barth), and Eva (who married Paul Baur, of Cincinnati, Ohio). The family were Lutherans in their religious views, but became members of the Reformed Dutch Church. The father was a carriage and wagon manufacturer by occupation.

Philip Klady obtained his education in the common schools of his native land, and then learned the trade of cooper, at which he served an apprenticeship. In 1849 he came to the United States, his destination being Poughkeepsie, where he had two sisters and a brother living. He was soon employed by the Vassars, for whom he worked some years; he also spent a short time in Hudson, N. Y. Mr. Klady followed his trade as journeyman cooper until 1857, when he formed a partnership with Valentine Frank, in the brewing business, under the firm name of Frank & Klady, and in this business Mr. Klady was engaged until October 1, 1875, when he retired from the firm. During the continuance of this partnership a large business was built up, it becoming one of the most prosperous and substantial firms in the city.

Mr. Klady was married, in 1857, to Mar-etta, daughter of William Keesler, one of the old and prominent citizens of Poughkeepsie and of this union one child, George Robert, was born in 1867.

Mr. Klady's second marriage took place in the City of New York, June 10, 1875, when he was united with Miss Lena Alexander, cultured and refined lady, daughter of George Alexander, whose family are also descendants of Huguenots; no children have been born of this marriage. The death of Mr. Klady occurred September 18, 1892, at Lahr, Baden, Germany, whither he had gone for his health, his remains being brought home for burial.

For some years previous to his decease Mr. Klady had not been engaged in active business but spent his time in retirement at his pleasure, at home, and in traveling. He was much devoted to his family and friends, finding his greatest enjoyment in their society. In business affairs he showed excellent judgment, and a resolute will that overcame all obstacles. Coming to this country a poor young man, he accomplished his purpose of becoming a successful financier, and during his active life he held an enviable position among his business associates as a man of integrity and upright life. His generosity and benevolence were well known, and his tender heart could never refuse assistance to those in need. Mr. Klady took great interest in all public matters, and was a loyal citizen of his adopted country. He belonged to the Royal Arcanum, and was an attendant of the First Reformed Church. His widow is yet a resident of Poughkeepsie but spends her winters at Tarpon Springs, Florida.

STEPHEN C. VAN WYCK, an agriculturist of energy and ability, belongs to a family that long has been prominently connected with the interests of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county. His great-grandfather, Cornelius R. Van Wyck, was married March 2, 1775, to Ann Duryea, by whom he had five children: C. R., Annie, Duryea, Stephen D. and Richard C. For his second wife he married Magdalene Montfort, and they had a family of five children: Stephen D. and Peter M. (twins), Annie, Barbara, and Cornelius R.

Ph. Klady

Stephen D. Van Wyck, grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Fishkill, March 3, 1795. He was a farmer, and in 1840 efficiently served as sheriff of Dutchess county. His death occurred June 3, 1879. He was united in marriage with Hetty Purdy, a native of Fishkill Landing, and they located in the town of Fishkill, where they reared their family of six children: Cornelius S., the father of our subject; Francis P., who was a wholesale dry-goods merchant of Chicago, and was the American minister to Turk's Island at the time of his death; Jane Ann, widow of David Heacock, at one time a glove manufacturer of Gloversville, N. Y.; John P., who died when a young man; Helen M., deceased, unmarried; and Tunis B., a retired merchant of Chicago.

Cornelius S. Van Wyck, the father of our subject, born in Fishkill town, March 9, 1831, grew to manhood on a farm, and October 14, 1846, married Phœbe Van Wyck, who was born in the town of Fishkill, March 9, 1823, the daughter of Richard C. Van Wyck, whose father was Cornelius R. Van Wyck, the paternal great-grandfather of our subject. After their marriage they located upon the farm now occupied by Stephen C., who was the second in their family of four children, the others being Robert M., born May 20, 1848, and now a retired jeweler of Chicago; John Adrian, born May 23, 1852, and died February 16, 1859; and Francis, born October 24, 1854, and at one time a merchant of Fishkill Plains, but now living retired. The father followed farming, but for ten years lived at Poughkeepsie, while he was educating his sons, during which time he served as alderman and supervisor of the Sixth ward. He was a Republican in politics, and both he and his wife were earnest members of the Reformed Dutch church, while he served as deacon in the church in Poughkeepsie. She passed away March 7, 1880. Cornelius S. Van Wyck married, for his second wife, Helen Josephine Barton, of Earles, Yates county, in December, 1883. After his marriage he united with the Presbyterian Church in Balona, and was elected elder of the Church, and was elder at the time of his death. He was one of the building committees of the Memorial Church. He died June 18, 1895, and was buried in the family plot at Hopewell, his widow surviving him.

On June 22, 1850, in the town of Fishkill, was born Stephen C. Van Wyck, the subject of this sketch, and in the schools of Poughkeepsie he acquired his education. On leaving school he clerked for some time for a Mr. Van Wyck. On October 23, 1872, our subject married Miss Libbie Underwood, a native of Poughkeepsie, and a daughter of Capt. Charles Underwood, who was born in Peekskill, N. Y., but has spent most of his life in Poughkeepsie, where he is now living retired. Mr. and Mrs. Van Wyck began their domestic life upon the farm, comprising 120 acres, which is still their home, and there they have reared their two children: Charles U., born June 3, 1874; and Robert M., born January 16, 1876, the elder of whom is now studying law. In 1879 Mr. Van Wyck erected his present beautiful residence. His political support is unwaveringly given the Republican party, and both himself and wife are faithful members of the Reformed Dutch Church.

JOEL N. BUDD. The subject of this notice is certainly entitled to be considered not only one of the enterprising farmers of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, but one of its representative and honored citizens, and a man of more than ordinary ability. He was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, August 10, 1819, and is the son of James Budd, also a native of the county, born in the town of Fishkill, December 18, 1781.

Mr. Budd's paternal ancestors were of French descent. The exact date when the first of the name emigrated to America is unknown, but it was early in the Colonial history of the nation. John Budd, the grandfather of our subject, was born about 1730, and was an early settler in Dutchess county. He moved from the town of Fishkill to the town of Washington, and later purchased the farm, in the town of Pleasant Valley, now owned by Mr. Van De Water. He married Miss Mary Merritt, who was born September 19, 1741. The twelve children of John and Mary Budd were as follows: Gilbert, born December 25, 1758, settled in Columbia county, N. Y.; Joseph, born November 14, 1760, died of yellow fever in New York City October 13, 1795; Mary, born January 24, 1763, married and settled in Canada; John, born December 28, 1766, settled in Kentucky, and there married; Abigail, born April 4, 1768, married Mr. Emmans, and settled in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county; Daniel, born June 27, 1770, left home May 11, 1799, and settled near Rochester, N. Y.; Elijah, born October 11, 1772, died January 28, 1796; Merritt, born March 3, 1775, died June 6, 1795; Hannah, born April 22, 1777, died June 6, 1802; Underhill, born October 17, 1779, settled in Greene county, N. Y.; James, father of our subject, born December 18, 1781, remained on the home farm, and Sarah, born February 13, 1783. John Budd, who was regarded as one of the successful farmers of Dutchess county, died on his farm in Pleasant Valley October 1, 1813; his wife departed this life July 31, 1820.

When about sixteen years old James Budd, the father of Joel N., accompanied his father to the town of Pleasant Valley, and soon afterward assumed the active management of the farm. His education was mostly obtained at night schools, where he became a good mathematician, and by subsequent reading and study he became a well-informed man. His whole life was devoted to agricultural pursuits, and he added to the original farm until he had over 208 acres of highly cultivated and productive land. He was married November 23, 1805, to Miss Eleanor Schryver, a daughter of John Schryver, and by her he had the following children: Mary, born September 30, 1806, married William Traver; John, born January 26, 1808; Caroline, born February 20, 1812; Gilbert, born September 6, 1813; Hannah, born June 23, 1815, wedded James Rhymph; George, born August 6, 1817; Joel N.; Joseph H., born January 13, 1822; Jane Ann, born November 23, 1825, married Charles N. Cole; Elizabeth, born September 28, 1826, married Oliver Stelle, of New Jersey; and Albert, born August 16, 1830. Aside from casting his ballot in support of the Whig party, the father took but little part in political affairs, though he was always willing to give his aid to anything for the good of the community, and was held in the highest regard by all.

Joseph H. Budd, a brother of our subject, graduated from Williams College about 1844, and was the leader of his class in mathematics. After studying law in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he went to Janesville, Wis., where he engaged in practice, and also became largely interested in the manufacture of agricultural implements; but during the panic of 1857 his business was ruined. Going to California, he began life anew, and after winning a case for his employer he became quite prominent, and is now one of the foremost lawyers and leading Democrats of the State. He is now judge of the superior court of his district. His son John is a prominent lawyer of California; and James, another son, is the present governor of the State.

Joel N. Budd entered the New Paltz Academy, where he pursued his studies for two winters, thus acquiring a good practical education. He remained on the home farm, which, after the death of the father, in 1844, was divided between himself and his brother, Albert. There he resided until 1872 when he sold, and in the spring of 1876 purchased the farm which he now owns, to the cultivation and improvement of which he has since devoted his time and attention with good success.

In 1850 Mr. Budd was married to Miss Elizabeth Du Bois, daughter of Peter K. Du Bois, of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and by her had the following children: Warren J., who died at the age of nineteen years; Bertha M. and Frederic Albert (twins the latter of whom died in infancy; G. Gordon Charlotte DuBois, who died at six years of age; George N.; and Rosamond, wife of John Van De Water. On February 22, 1888, Mr. Budd married Mrs. Mary Jane Van Wagne daughter of Oliver Wilber.

Mrs. Budd is a descendant in the seventh generation of one of the earliest New England settlers, William Wilber (as the name was then spelled), who in 1630 came to America with his uncle, Samuel Wilber, from Doncaster, Yorkshire, England. They were Quakers and, settling first at Boston, were driven out by religious persecutions. William Wilber settled at Portsmouth, R. I., in 1656, and died there in 1710. He had a family of ten children, several of whom settled at Little Compton, R. I., where they owned a large tract of land, some of which yet remains in the possession of descendants. The seventh child was Samuel Wilber, born in 1664; he married Mary Potter, and died in 1740; they had eleven children; the farm where they lived is still owned by descendants, and includes the burial ground where seven generations are at rest. William Wilber, son of Samuel and Mary (Potter) Wilber, was born June 6, 1695, and died in 1774; in 1717 he married Esther Burges, of Little Compton. Their children were Thomas, born June 1, 1718; Mary, born in 1720; Esther and Lydia (twins); William; Daniel; Samuel and Charles. Samuel married Elizabeth Shaw, and died in May, 1791. The children of Samuel and Elizabeth Wilber were: Sylvanus, born August 18, 1749; Clark, born May 3, 1752; Anthony, born July 24, 1759.

Sylvanus Wilber, the grandfather of Mrs. Budd, was married January 20, 1770, to Sylvia, daughter of James Chase, born in 1749. The twelve children of Sylvanus and Sylvia Wilber were: Huldah, born June, 1771; Elizabeth, born July 16, 1772; James, born September 5, 1774; Rhoda, born September 22, 1775; Sarah, born March 16, 1778; Abner, born July 16, 1779; Elsie, born November 1, 1780; Sylvanus, born August 1, 1783; Clark, born August 1, 1786; and Cynthia, born December 29, 1788. All these children were born at Little Compton, R. I., except Samuel, the youngest, who was born in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Oliver and Samuel were soldiers in the war of 1812, and Samuel died at Harlem.

In May, 1793, Sylvanus Wilber sold to his brother Anthony his farm in Little Compton, R. I., and with his wife and eleven children, and the families of Philip Irish and Isaac Wood, came to Hyde Park, Dutchess county, settling on a farm which his grandchildren now own. It was from a point in Sakonnet river at the party of Rhode Islanders embarked on sloop and made the journey by way of the land to New York, thence up the Hudson river to the landing at Hyde Park.

Oliver Wilber, the father of Mrs. Budd, was a corporal in the American army during the war of 1812. On January 15, 1818, he married Maria Hoffman, who was born March 1, 1798. He died July 26, 1869, his wife December 26, 1887. Eleven children were born to them, namely: (1) Evas V., born February 20, 1819, died January 10, 1829; (2) Benjamin V., born July 26, 1821, died July 20, 1828; (3) Catherine H., born September 20, 1823, died July 27, 1828; (4) Sylvia Ann, born April 15, 1825, died March 15, 1828; (5) Stephen Pettit, born March 18, 1827, died April 27, 1856; (6) Emeline E., born August 2, 1829, married William A. Lattin, a farmer, February 9, 1848; they had two children: Henry W. (a wagonmaker, who married Mary Crapser, and has two children—Elma and Harriet), and Ardell (who married Augustus Cramer, who died in 1889; they had two children—Ethel and William Augustus); (7) John A., a farmer, born April 6, 1831, married Emily Dunn, and has one child—Lena;

(8) Mary Jane, born July 27, 1833; (9) Morgan L., a butcher, born October 30, 1835, married Josephine Ackert; (10) Henry K., a farmer, born December, 1837; and (11) Amelia K., born October 5, 1840, married George H. McLean, March 24, 1865, and died July 13, 1873. Mrs. Budd, the eighth child of Oliver and Maria Wilber, was first married January 15, 1851, to Evert A. Van-Wagner, a farmer, who died October 30, 1884. Their five children are: (1) Amelia C., who married Silas W. Downing, and has four children—Harry S., Francis Vivian, Bertha M. and Arthur R.; (2) Theron C., a farmer, who married Louise Lattin, and has two children—Libbie and Clayton; (3) Oliver Wilber, a farmer; (4) Christable; and (5) George M., a farmer, who married Ernestine E. Devine, and has two children—Inez and Wilber.

Mr. Budd is a clear-headed, intelligent man, with sound, common-sense views of life and its duties. He is active in well-doing, sober, industrious, and of good business habits; in fact, possessing in an eminent degree all the qualities that go to make up a good citizen and honorable man. In politics he was formerly a Republican, but is now independent, usually supporting the Democratic party. He attends the Baptist Church.

JMULFORD CONKLIN. Among the prosperous farmers of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, the record of whose lives fills an important place in this volume, it gives us pleasure to commemorate the name of the gentleman here presented. One of the native-born, energetic, progressive citizens of the community, actively identified with all its interests, he was born in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, December 1, 1819.

Nathan Conklin, his grandfather, was born in Amagansett, Suffolk Co., N. Y., April 20, 1758, and in Long Island was married, in September, 1781, to Amy Mulford, who was born July 7, 1759. Their family included the following children: Nehemiah, born January 20, 1783; Jeremiah M., born February 23, 1785; Nathan, born November 20, 1787; John H., the father of our subject; Henry, born April 16, 1793, married May 20, 1818, to Mary Ann Hewett; Betsy, born November 9, 1795, died April 9, 1800; Phebe, born October 8, 1798, married September 9, 1823, to James Bowne; and Eliza, born August 29, 1802, married August 15, 1820, to Stephen B. Trowbridge. All of these are now deceased. The grandfather served in the Revolutionary war, and at its close removed to Dutchess county, where he purchased a farm in the town of Northeast. He made the journey from Long Island on horseback, with his wife on the pillion behind him, and they came by way of an Indian trail, as few roads had been laid out at that time. Upon his farm here he died April 23, 1827. He was known to every one by the title of "Major."

John Herriman Conklin, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Northeast, July 27, 1790, and was educated in the public schools near his home, where he remained until his marriage. On December 24, 1818, he wedded Miss Eliza Hunting, who was born January 25, 1800, and died October 12, 1863. They became the parents of five children: J. Mulford, subject of this review; Isaac H., born July 29, 1822, died in 1890; Elizabeth, born August 12, 1824, married Israel R. Wilson, of the town of Northeast; John N., born August 12, 1826, is a resident of the same town; and Nathan, born March 13, 1829, is now deceased. The father was one of the most prominent citizens of Northeast, where he successfully followed farming through much of his life. Politically he affiliated with the Democratic party, and held a number of local offices, including that of supervisor, which he held for two terms. Like his father, he went to the defense of his country, serving in the war of 1812, and participated in the engagement at Harlem Heights. He was a conscientious, earnest Christian, a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which he served as elder, and faithfully followed its teachings until called from life, September 14, 1870.

J. Mulford Conklin, whose name introduces this record, was supplied with excellent educational advantages during his boyhood and youth. After attending the district schools for a time, he entered a private school at Poughkeepsie, later was a student in College Hill Seminary under Charles Bartlett; attended the Amenia Academy, and completed his education at Warren, Conn. On laying aside his text books he assisted in the labor of the home farm until he had reached his majority, when he came to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and located upon his present farm, where he has since resided.

In Stanford town, September 12, 1844,

Mr. Conklin was married to Miss Mary E. Husted, who was born in that town, April 4, 1826, a daughter of James and Elizabeth (Harris) Husted. She received her education at the schools of Poughkeepsie. For over half a century Mr. and Mrs. Conklin have not traveled together as man and wife, and are nearing the last milestone that marks the end of life's journey; but they are surrounded by many loving kindred and friends, and can look back upon their honorable and useful lives knowing that they have accomplished much good in the world. Three children were born to them: Mary Elizabeth (deceased), who was the wife of Henry C. Thompson, by whom she had two sons—Mulford C. and Edward P. Phoebe E., the wife of Frank Dibble, by whom she has a daughter, Cora M.; and Ella M., the wife of Joseph Brace, of West Hartford, Conn. Mr. Conklin is one of the leading representative men of the town of Stanford, one whose merits and receives the warmest confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens, and his public spiritedness and charity are proverbial. In the exercise of his elective franchise he invariably supports the candidates offered by the Democratic party, has himself served as supervisor for two terms, and also been excise commissioner. He and Mrs. Conklin, their children and grandchildren, are members of the Presbyterian Church of Pine Plains.

T DE WITT VAN WYCK, one of the wealthiest and most prominent agriculturists in the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, is a descendant of an old Holland family whose representatives have held an influential place in that locality for nearly two hundred years. The head of this branch of the family was one of five brothers who came to America between 1690 and 1700, his ancestor settling in Fishkill after a short stay on Long Island. In an old Bible printed in Holland in 1690, we find the following record in Dutch: "In the year 1668, I, Theodoorus Van Wyck, was born September 17. In the year 1675, the 3d of February, Margerita Abrahams was born. In the year 1693, the 29 of April, we were married." The children of this marriage were Cornelius, born April 2, 1694; Abraham, November 7, 1695; Theodorus, October 15, 1697; Catrina, July 1, 1699; Susanna, March 1, 1701; Berent, March 4, 1703; and Altia, May 19, 1706. The next inscription is in English, as follows: "In the year 1717, I, Cornelius Van Wyck, married my wife, Hannah Thorn. The age of my wife, she is born in the year 1700, February the 17th. The following children were born: Phœbe, December 5, 1717, and Theodorus, May 4, 1720. In the year 1741, my wife died, the 27th of August. In the year 1753 my grandfather Van Wyck died, December 4th; 1761, June 28th, my father Cornelius died; 1771, August 23d, the wife of Cornelius, who was Hannah, died." This is the family record of Richard Van Wyck, who was born November 25, 1730, and they were married May 12, 1749. Four children were born of this union: Cornelius, January 6, 1753; Catherine, November 23, 1756, the wife of Henry Boerman; Theodorus, November 18, 1761, who married Hannah Griffith; and Hannah, June 30, 1764. The mother of this family died August 16, 1807, and the father three years later, April 1810.

Cornelius Van Wyck, our subject's grandfather, a farmer by occupation, was married March 2, 1777, to his first wife, Anna Duryee, who was born October 6, 1758. She died April 9, 1791, and for his second wife he married Magdalene Monfort. His death occurred October 1, 1820, the father of eight children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Of the children of the first marriage—Anna, December 31, 1777, married Turnus Linkerhoff, of Poughkeepsie; Stephen, March 1, 1781, was a farmer in East Fishkill; Richard, June 11, 1783, was a farmer and miller in the same town; Abraham D., April 11, 1785, mentioned below; and Theodorus, July 15, 1787, was a physician at Bloomingburg, N. Y. The four children of the second marriage were: Peter and Stephen (twins), March 3, 1795; Anna, August 25, 1797; and Barbara, February 15, 1800.

Abraham D. Van Wyck, our subject's father, grew to manhood on the old homestead, and January 27, 1810, was married to Loebe Boerum, who was born May 8, 1790, a descendant of an old Dutch family. He then settled upon a farm in Fishkill, where he became prominent in local affairs. He was a strong believer in the policy of Prohibition, but always voted the Republican ticket on national issues in later years, having been a Whig previous to the war. His wife died July 17, 1851, and he survived her until 1866. They were leading members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and highly esteemed in the vicinity. They reared a family of five children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Jane A., March 10, 1812 (died September 24, 1832), married John Adriaance, a farmer of Fishkill, who died in Chicago; Elizabeth, November 4, 1815, married R. S. Van Wyck, a farmer and miller in the town of East Fishkill; T. DeWitt, July 28, 1822; Duryee, February 27, 1827, is a farmer in the town of Wappinger; and Cortland, March 8, 1829, is now living in retirement at Dunkirk.

The subject of our sketch spent his boyhood at the old home farm, and attended the district school in the neighboring village of Fishkill Plains, until the age of eighteen, when he engaged in farming. On February 28, 1855, he was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Luyster, who was born December 10, 1829, in what was then known as the town of Fishkill. Her father, Matthew Luyster, who was a well-known farmer there, was of Dutch stock, and a descendant of one of the oldest families in the county. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Van Wyck: Abraham D., February 14, 1856; Mathew, May 15, 1858; Estella, March 20, 1866; and Charles H., October 9, 1870. The daughter is at home, and the sons have all settled upon farms, one in the town of Lagrange, and three in the town of Wappinger, comprising in all about 500 acres devoted to general farming. In politics Mr. Van Wyck is a steadfast Republican, and he is always ready to encourage any progressive movement, being especially interested in the temperance cause. He and his wife are prominent members of the Reformed Dutch Church; he is an elder in the Hopewell Church, and for sixteen years has been a trustee of Fishkill Plains Chapel.

JACOB S. ACKERMAN, a prominent and influential resident of Low Point, Dutchess county, is a member of a family that has been identified with that locality since Colonial times. His ancestors were from Holland originally, and his great-grandfather, John Ackerman, was the first to locate in Dutchess county. His son, Peter, who was born in 1779, was married March 15, 1801, to Elizabeth B. Lent, also a native of Dutchess county. They located upon a farm in the town of Fishkill, where they reared a family of ten children. (1) John, a farmer, in Dutchess county, married Ann Terboss. (2) Dorothy never married. (3) Abram L. was the founder of the Matteawan Cotton Factory, and with his brother, David L., was the builder of the first locomotive for the N. Y. C. R. R.; he married Miss Hagerman, and his later years were spent in Pennsylvania. (4) Peter S. was a farmer, and married Deborah Vail. (5) Margaret A. married Jacob Sebring, a farmer. (6) David L., a farmer and machinist by occupation, married Cynthia Robinson. (7) Jasper C., a farmer, married Susan Collins. (8) Eliphalet P., a Methodist minister, married Julia B. Hedden. (9) Samuel B. is mentioned below. (10) Sylvester B. never married.

Samuel B. Ackerman, our subject's father, was born in what is now Wappingers Falls, in 1820, and was reared upon the old homestead. His wife was Delia Brinkerhoff, a native of the town of Fishkill, born September 1, 1822. Her father, John W. Brinkerhoff, was a well-known farmer there, and later became a merchant in Fishkill. After their marriage our subject's parents settled upon a farm near Newburg, Orange county, where they reared a family of three children, of whom our subject was the eldest. Edward F., born June 7, 1846, was a farmer and leading Republican in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and died there April 20, 1894. Fred E., born June 24, 1856, is a prominent lawyer in Poughkeepsie. Our subject's father was a highly-respected citizen, a Republican in politics, and he followed farming all his life. He died in 1889, and two years later his wife followed him to the grave.

Jacob S. Ackerman was born Nov. 11, 1843, in Newburg, and at the age of four years he was taken to Low Point where he grew to manhood, receiving his education there with the exception of a short time in the schools of Schodack. He learned the art of photography on leaving school, but followed it only a year and a half, when he began to learn the house-painter's trade. This he found uncongenial also, and he then returned to the farm, and has since given his time to the agricultural pursuits. He was married October 9, 1867, to Sarah C. Eshleman, a daughter of Eurich Eshleman, a well-known baker of Poughkeepsie. Three children were born of this marriage, all of whom reside at Low Point. Frank married Miss Eva Ward; Charles married Miss Bertha Leubert; and Kittie is at home. Mr. Ackerman has a small estate on the Hudson river, his pleasant residence commanding a charming view. He also owns several houses in the village. He takes an influential part in the local work of the Republican organization, and has held the offices of pathmaster and excise commissioner.

HENRY CHATTERTON. For more than half a century the subject of this sketch was engaged in agricultural pursuits upon his late farm near the village of Moores Mill, Dutchess county, and he was one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of that locality. He was born January 4, 1818, in Lagrange, Dutchess Co., N. Y., and spent his boyhood there, receiving his education in the district schools near his home. On arriving at manhood's estate he engaged in farming and always followed that calling, locating a his late home in 1844.

His first wife, who was Miss Mary Ann Haviland, of Unionvale, died, leaving no children, and for his second wife he was married in Unionvale, to Miss Helen Miller (now deceased). One daughter, Mary Ann, was born of this marriage, but she did not long brighten his home, passing away at the age of four and one-half years. Mr. Chatterton always took an intelligent interest in public questions. In early life he was an adherent of the Whig party, later espousing Republican principles. He died December 21, 1896.

Underhill Chatterton, father of our subject, was a native of Dartmouth, Mass., when he was brought by David S. Dean to Dutchess county when ten years old, and afterward made his home there. By occupation he was a farmer and tanner, and his life was spent mainly in Lagrange. In religious faith he was a Quaker. He was married in Lagrange to Miss Elizabeth Gidley, and they reared a family of thirteen children, all now deceased.

DURYEE VAN WYCK, one of the most intelligent and prosperous agriculturists in the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, was born February 27, 1827, upon the estate which he now owns. His ancestors came from Holland about the year 1700, and were among the early settlers of that locality, and the farm has held a prominent place there for several generations, our subject's brother, T. DeWitt Van Wyck, of the town of Wappinger, being among its representatives.

The subject of our sketch received an excellent education for the time, supplementing the course at the Fishkill district school by an attendance at the schools at Rhinebeck, New Paltz, and Middletown Point, N. J., spending a year at each, and he afterward studied for six months in the Polytechnic College near Red Bank, N. J., which was founded by O. S. Fowler, the phrenologist. On leaving school, Mr. Van Wyck returned to the old homestead, and remained until 1861, when he bought a farm near Hopewell, where he lived about thirteen years. He then returned to his present home, where he cultivates between 250 and 300 acres. The land is unusually level, and lies near Sprout creek.

In June, 1863, Mr. Van Wyck married Caroline D. Stockholm, a descendant of an old Holland family, and a daughter of Andrew Stockholm, a native of Dutchess county, and a prominent agriculturist of near Hopewell. The only daughter, Miss Ella Van Wyck, is at home with her parents. In politics our subject is an ardent Republican in principle, but he has never been a seeker after political honors.

WILLIAM C. HOLMES, a prosperous farmer of Dutchess county, was born near Washington Hollow, in the town of Pleasant Valley, December 21, 1818. There he was reared and received his education.

At the age of twenty-five Mr. Holmes was married, on March 6, 1844, to Miss Sarah C. Van De Water, who was born in the town of Hyde Park, April 1, 1818, and whose death occurred May 31, 1892. Our subject bought his grandfather's farm in 1843, lived on it for seven years and then traded it for another farm in Tompkins county, where he lived seven years. He then rented a farm in Hyde Park for a year, and one in Bloomingdale, Pleasant Valley, for two years. He next went to live on the farm with his father, and remained there until the latter's death, when he bought the homestead. After seven years' residence on the place, he traded it for other property. In 1885 he moved to the town of Lagrange. His children were: Phœbe Elizabeth, born August 10, 1845, married December 16, 1864, to Orlando E. Gazely; William V., born September 8, 1847, married Miss Emma E. Ayres December 25, 1869; Lavina Adelaide, born October 1, 1849, became the wife of C. W. Stoutenburg, December 2, 1874; Florence Augusta, born March 5, 1852, married April 14, 1875, to John Welch; Henrietta, born February 22, 1855, married William B. Merritt February 27, 1884; Joel O., born July 7, 1862, married September 23, 1884, to Miss Emma F. White, who died April 10, 1891. Our subject is a staunch Democrat in politics, but has always refused to accept public office.

Wheeler C. Holmes, father of our subject, was a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, where he spent his boyhood, attending the public school. He married Phœbe, daughter of William Allen, and moved to a farm about two miles from the paternal homestead, where he lived for over fifty years and reared the following children: Allen, Nathaniel, Phœbe Maria, and Joel O., all deceased, and William C., our subject. Mr. Holmes was again married, his second wife being Miss Betsy Crawford. Of their children only one is living, Isaac, who is in Colorado. Mr. Holmes was a Democrat, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. Both the parents and the stepmother of our subject died in Pleasant Valley.

William Holmes, grandfather of our subject, came of Scotch ancestors. He settled in Pleasant Valley before the Revolutionary war, being one of the first pioneers. He married Miss Phœbe Cromwell, who was of Holland descent, and they had the following children: Nathaniel, Joseph, Isaac, Wheeler, Joshua. Mr. Holmes was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and lived to the ripe old age of ninety years.

JOHN B. FREDRICK, an enterprising and successful business man of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and the proprietor of a first-class meat market there, was born in 1856, in the town of Lloyd, Ulster county. He was educated in the public schools, and on entering business life learned the butcher's trade with J. H. Brown. After working at the trade some time for different parties, he moved to Dover Plains, in 1886, and opened his present fine establishment. The firm was at first known as Shelly & Fredrick, and then Mr. Fredrick conducted the business alone for a time. Later the firm became Fredrick & Boyce, and then Fredrick & Fox, but our subject is at present the sole owner. He is a public-spirited citizen, but has never been desirous of political office, although at one time he served as excise commissioner. In 1881 he married Miss Emma J. Terwilliger, and their home has been blessed with eight children, of whom all but two are living. The names, with dates of birth, are: Herbert J., 1882; Lilly M., 1883; Edith, 1884; Bessie, 1885 (died in infancy); Clarence, 1887; Mabel, 1888; Arthur (deceased), 1891, and Clayton, 1895.

Mr. Fredrick is of the fifth generation in direct descent from Peter Fredrick, a native of Holland, and a miller by trade, who came to this country at an early date and settled in New Jersey. His son Peter, our subject's great-grandfather, was born and educated in New Jersey, but he and two brothers left home and settled in Ulster county, where he engaged in farming. He married, and reared a family of seven children: Jacob; William; Catherine, who married Mr. Decker; Lucy, the wife of Louis Palmater; Hannah, who married John Banker, and two whose names are not known. William Fredrick, our subject's grandfather, was born in Ulster county, and after acquiring a common-school education, also engaged in agriculture. His wife was Miss Devoe, and they had two children: Dorcas, the wife of Abram Tompkins; and George, our subject's father, who was born in 1836, in the town of Lloyd, Ulster county, and always lived in that neighborhood, receiving his education there, and spending his later years as a farmer. He married Miss Emerett Johnson, daughter of Andrew Johnson, a well-to-do farmer of Ulster county, and had six children, of whom our subject is the eldest. The two youngest children—William, and one whose name is not given—died in infancy, and the others are: Maria, who married Warren Palmer; Evelena, the wife of Joseph O'Donnel; and George W., who is not married.

Mrs. Fredrick's ancestors were early settlers in Ulster county, and her grandfather, Cornelius Terwilliger, was a native of New Paltz, and a leading farmer there. He married Miss Wicklow, and had five children, of whom Ira Terwilliger, Mrs. Fredrick's father, was the youngest. Hiram died at the age of twenty; Elijah married Catherine Freer; Elmira married David Dunn, and Sarah was the wife of Anthony Dunn. Ira Terwilliger was born in New Paltz in 1826, and passed his entire life there, following the carpenter's trade. His partner in life was Miss Harriet Van Noy, daughter of Andrew J. Van Noy, a well-known wagon-maker of the town of Lloyd, Ulster county, and Hester Johnston, his wife. Mrs. Fredrick was the oldest of five children—the others being Annie, the wife of Wallace Phillips; Andrew, who married Alice Smith George, who is not married; and Carrie, who died at the age of twenty-one years.

HENRY LIVINGSTON CAMPBELL (deceased), in his day an honored and worthy citizen of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, was born March 23, 1829, in the town of Pawling, in the same county. He was a grandson of Archibald Campbell, who followed farming and merchandising throughout life. He married Miss Elizabeth Mitchell, of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and they became the parents of ten children, as follows: (1) Captain Archibald married Miss Samantha Sherman. (2) Mary, born in Pawling, wedded Benjamin Hurd, and they had six children—Harriet E., who married Leonard Hall; Irving, who married Miss Howard; William T.; Mrs. Mary J. Brill; Stacia, who married Jerome Dodge; and Julia. (3) Harriet Louise married Dr. Fowler, and they had one son—Archibald, who also became a physician; after the death of her first husband she married Rev. John Pierpont, the paternal grandfather of John Pierpont Morgan, the great railroad magnate. (4) Stacia married Cushen Green. (5) Jane became the wife of Rev. Dr. Foss, father of Archibald Campbell Foss, and Cyrus Foss, Methodist Episcopal Bishops. (6) Catherine married Haxton Van Deburg. (7) Duncan was the father of our subject. (8) Sarah married Mr. Merrick. (9) Thomas Clement married Cordelia Noxon; he was district attorney of Poughkeepsie some time, but now a prominent lawyer of New York; (10) Eliza married Mr. Calhoun.

Duncan Campbell was born and educated in the town of Pawling, and also at Poughkeepsie Academy, and engaged in farming in Pawling, becoming quite prominent in business affairs. He married Amanda Ferris, and five children graced their union: Amanda Ferris Henry Livingston; Priscilla; Harriet Louise, who died when young; and Duncan, who died in infancy.

Henry Livingston Campbell was educated at Pawling and Amenia. As a lifework he took up the occupation of farming, in which he was successful. In public affairs he took an active and leading part, and by his fellow citizens was called upon to fill such offices as supervisor, justice of the peace, and others of equal honor and trust, the duties of which he discharged in an able manner. He married Miss Emeline C. Collins, and five children were born to them, as follows: (1) Duncan was educated at Helmuth College, London, Ontario, Canada, and at the Bisbee Military School, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., graduating with the highest honors, in 1874; he is now engaged in operating the home farm, also the other's farm in Pawling. (2) Ada Ferris Campbell was educated at Linden Hall, Poughkeepsie, and Helmuth College; she married I. Reynolds Adriance, a manufacturer of Poughkeepsie, by whom she has two children—Marion C. and John P. (3) Elizabeth Borden Campbell was educated at Linden Hall, Poughkeepsie; she is now the wife of Albert Adriance Simpson, superintendent of the Buckeye Binder Department of the Adriance Platt Co., manufacturers of mowers, reapers and binders, of Poughkeepsie, by whom she has one son—Albert Adriance. (4) George Collins died in infancy. (5) Harry Borden died at the age of four years.

HENRY L. CAMPBELL.

Hezekiah Collins, the paternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Campbell, was the son of Hezekiah Collins, who was the son of Humphrey Collins. Hezekiah was the father of eight children: Hezekiah, Joseph, Solomon, Joshua, Samuel, Jabez, Nathan and Mary. The last named Hezekiah Collins was the grandfather of Mrs. Campbell. He was born December 1, 1739, and in 1765 married Miss Rhoda Eketson, whose birth occurred August 8, 1738. Their family included thirteen children: Catherine, born in 1767, married Zachariah Figler; Meredith, born in 1768, married Gen. Erker; Mary, born in 1770, married David Arnold; Lydia, born in 1772, married Martin Doughty; Elizabeth, born in 1774, married Mr. Manney, of Poughkeepsie; Phœbe, born in 1776, married Jacob Doughty; Rhoda, born in 1777, married Morton De la Vergne; Ricketson, born in 1779, married Elizabeth Robinson; Martha, born in 1781, married Gurline Ackerman; Ann, born in 1784, married Dr. Browns; Gilbert, born in 1786, married Miss Stan Bogart; George, born in 1788, was the father of Mrs. Campbell; and Lancelot Wendell, born in 1792, never married.

George Collins, the father of Mrs. Campbell, was born in the town of Unionvale, attended the schools of that locality, and there engaged in farming throughout life. He married Miss Elizabeth Borden, by whom he had three children—Phebe (1) who died in infancy; Phebe (2) who married (first) Isaac Ackerman, by whom she had three children—Emma, George C. and Jacob H.—and after his death wedded Willis Case, by whom she had two children—Oscar and Olive A.; and Emeline C., who was born in Unionvale April 22, 1835; she was educated in Poughkeepsie and New York City, and, as already related, married Henry Livingston Campbell, the subject proper of this review. She is a most estimable lady, whose circle of friends is only limited by the circle of her acquaintances. The Collins family crest is two doves and an olive branch, emblems of love and peace.

Perry Borden, Mrs. Campbell's maternal grandfather, was a son of Samuel and Peace Borden; Perry married Phœbe Sisson. His nephew, Simeon Borden, was at one time a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. In 1830, Simeon Borden devised and constructed for the State of Massachusetts an apparatus for measuring the base line of the trigonometrical survey of that State, which at that time was the most accurate and convenient instrument of the kind extant. Mr. Borden assisted in the measurement of the base, and in the subsequent triangulation. In 1834 he took charge of the work and completed it in 1841. It was the first geodetic survey ever completed in this country, and its precision has since been proved by the coast survey.

JACKSON GIDDINGS, a leading citizen of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, who throughout his active business career followed wagon making, is descended from a family that for many years made their home in Connecticut.

At Chestnut Sand, in that State, his grandfather, William Giddings, was born, reared and educated. He was a prosperous tiller of the soil, and during the old training days served as captain in the militia. By his marriage with Miss Armida Noble he had eleven children: (1) George married Phœbe Hungerford, and two children were born to them—Orissa, who married Nelson Hoag; and Susan, who married Edwin Hungerford. (2) William was married, and had two children. (3) David married Betsy Salmon, and had two children—Ammi, who married Augusta Page; and David B., who married Hannah Beecher. (4) Noble remained single. (5) Buell was the father of our subject. (6) Daniel, who was born in Connecticut, married Betsy Gorman, and has three children—Ralph; Jay; and Pauline, who died at the age of sixteen years. (7) Sarah married Bennett Picket, and had five children—Noble, who married Laura Giddings; William, who married a Miss Stewart; Daniel; Eunice, who married David Strong; and Buell, who now lives at Rockford, Ill., and is nearly eighty-six years of age. (8) Dorcas married William Leach. (9) Lucinda married Abraham Seaman, and had seven children—Hannah, who married Joshua Morgan; Eliza, who married Timothy Holloway; David, who married Malissa Howard, and was elected sheriff of Dutchess county in the early forties; Nancy, who married Archibald Wing; Polly, who married Benjamin Soule, and they settled in Kent, Litchfield Co., Conn. (they had three children—John, Adaline and Seaman; in 1835 they removed to Chemung county, N. Y.; the youngest son, Seaman, now lives in Michigan); and Harvey and Permelia, who remained single. (10) Ann became the wife of John Seeley, and has four children—Franklin, who never married; Morgan, who married Minnie Page; Abel became a merchant, and enlisting as a soldier during the Rebellion died in the service; and Charlotte. (11) Lydia married Samuel Giddings, and has seven children—Rebecca, who married Hiram Giddings; Sallie A., who never married; Dorcas, who married William Turner; Alfred, who married Sophia Picket; Henry, who married a Miss Leach; Ann, who remained single; and Caroline, who married David Fuller.

Buell Giddings, the father of our subject, was born September 20, 1781, in the town of Sherman, Fairfield Co., Conn., and at his native place acquired his education in the common schools. On leaving the school room he learned the wagon maker's trade, at which he worked the greater part of his life. On coming to the town of Dover, Dutchess county, he established business at Webatuck. In early life he was connected with the Whig party, and on the organization of the Republican party joined its ranks, ever afterward being one of its stalwart supporters. By his fellow citizens he was called upon to fill a few minor offices in the town. He was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Reasoner, daughter of Peter and Betsey Reasoner, farming people of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. By this union five children were born: (1) Adeline A. married Luther Dutcher, a manufacturer, Dover, by whom she had four children—Hiram Gilbert, George and William. (2) Jackson, the subject of this sketch, is next in order of birth. (3) Orin N. at the age of sixteen went to Poughkeepsie, where he clerked in a dry goods store, and married Miss Harriet Cox; in 1835 he removed with her father's family to Kalamazoo county, Mich., and became a merchant; after the financial crash of 1837 he engaged in milling, but was soon after elected clerk of the county, and removed to Kalamazoo where he is now engaged in the insurance and real-estate business. He has represented his county in the State Legislature, and was adjutant-general of the State during the Civil war. He has one son, Theron F., now State commissioner of insurance for Michigan. (4) Martin L. learned the wagon-maker's trade with his brother Jackson, but did not follow it becoming a cattle drover. He married Miss Mary Hoag, and died in 1862, leaving three children. (5) William M., the youngest, did not marry.

Jackson Giddings was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, in 1812, and received a fair English education. Learning the wagon maker's trade, he followed that occupation until eighty years of age, since which time he has laid away business cares, and is now enjoying a well-earned rest. In early life he took quite a prominent part in public affairs and served as assessor and in other town offices. His ballot is always cast in support of the men and measures of the Republican party. Mr. Giddings married Miss Deborah Hoag, daughter of John and Delila Hoag, of the town of Dover, and to them have been born five children: (1) John H. first married Amanda Chase, and after her death wedded Maria Olivet; (2) Almira became the wife of James Reynolds, and has two sons—Jackson and Harry B. (3) George W. married Jennie V. Vinger, and has four daughters—Grace, born in 1886; Almira in 1887; Laura, in 1888; and Hazel, in 1891. (4) Andrew completes the family.

Mrs. Giddings's ancestors have long been residents of Dutchess county, the birth of her great-grandfather, John Hoag, occurring in 16 town of Dover, where he engaged in farming. In his large family of children was Nathaniel, an agriculturist, who married Mollie Howland, and had three children: Priner, who married Eliza Griffin; John, father of Mrs. Giddings; and Deborah, who wedded Russell Tabor.

John Hoag was a native of the town of Dover, followed general farming and stock raising. For his first wife he married Miss Delia Whitley, and to them were born five children: Almira, who married Isaac Geroe; Deborah, wife of our subject; William, who first married Betsy Baldwin, and after her death wedded Phœbe Bowman; Elizabeth, who never married; and Mary J., who wedded Hiram Whitley. After the death of the mother of these children, Mr. Hoag was united in marriage with Phœbe Preston.

ARTEMAS SACKETT BARTON, a valued citizen and popular business man of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, is a native of Columbia county, N. Y., born at Ancram October 6, 1838, and is descended from an old English family that long made their home in Dutchess county. His great-grandfather was Josiah Barton, of the town of Stanford, and his grandfather, Dr. Leonard Barton, who was born in that town, was one of the early practitioners in the county.

Dr. Leonard Barton married Rachel Gale, granddaughter of William Gale, and daughter of Josiah and Rachel (Mead) Gale, who lived at Stanford, and had eight daughters and two sons, as follows: Sarah Gale, born October 1, 1767, married Henry Kinney; Rebecca, born March 23, 1769, married Enoch Goodridge; Rachel, born February 2, 1771, married Leonard Barton; Phebe, born April 6, 1773, married Andrew Finch; Roba, born July 1, 1775, married Lewis Austin; Nancy, born April 19, 1777, married Henry Griffin; Betsey, born April 19, 1779, married Nathan Beckwith; Clorinda, born November 12, 1783, married Ebe Lete; Josiah, born August 11, 1836, died in 1809; and George W., born December 3, 178-, married Harriet Sheldon. Dr. Leonard Barton and his wife had eleven children, as follows: Hiram; James married Caroline Canfield; Nelson, not married; George married Elizabeth Hoffman; Josiah married Eliza Briggs; Edward married Malissa J. Worth, of Northeast town; Eliakim married Tammy Germond; Julia married Morgan Hunting; Sally married Anthony Hoffman; Rachel married Stephen Sackett; Nancy married John Davis.

George W. Barton, the father of our subject, was also born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, May 14, 1795, and was a farmer by occupation. He became quite wealthy, owning two farms, each of 250 acres, in Columbia county, one in the town of Ancram and the other on Pugsley's Hill, the old homestead. He was a man of great natural ability, and was essentially self-made. He was identified with the Democratic party in politics, and attended the Presbyterian Church. He died September 17, 1872, and his wife died August 26, 1879. He had married Elizabeth Hoffman, daughter of Henry Hoffman, who lived near Bethel, N. Y., and to them were born nine children: Mariette, born March 1, 1824, married Warden Hiserodt, of New York City, and died September 12, 1873; William H., born August 25, 1825, married Cornelia Decker, and died January 24, 1879; George, born May 19, 1827, married, first, Sarah Collins, and, second, Mary French, and resides in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county; Catherine, born December 15, 1829, wife of William McArthur, of Wisconsin; Rachel, born December 16, 1831, married James Collins, of the town of Northeast; Leonard, born December 14, 1834, married Henrietta Pulver, and is now living in the same town; Anthony H., born July 4, 1836, married, first, Emily Sackett, and, second, Isaphene Wilkinson, and resides in Pine Plains town; Artemas S., subject of this review; and Frederick, born May 24, 1841, married, first, Libbie Hoysrodt, and, second, Zada Tripp, and resides at the old homestead in the town of Ancram, Columbia county, which he owns, and also a half interest in the old Dr. Barton homestead in the town of Stanford. The children were lovers of music, especially our subject, who organized a string band, called "Barton's Band," composed of his brother, uncle and others, and playing for nearly all the public and private parties in northern Dutchess and southern Columbia counties, from 1865 to 1880, the music not so artistic, but the prompting excellent.

The education of our subject was such as the district school of the neighborhood afforded, and he early became familiar with the duties of the agriculturist. Being a great reader, he has become a well-informed man, and is posted on the current events of the day.

On leaving home at the age of twenty-four, he opened a general store at Ancram Lead Mines, which he conducted three years, and the following year he spent in Wisconsin and Iowa. He was then with the Van Ambergh show for a year, and on returning to Pine Plains, he worked on the railroad for the same length of time, building fences. He was next engaged in the commission business, dealing in coal and hay from 1882 until 1893, when he removed to his present site, buying a part of the Clark estate, where he now carries on the lumber trade. He has been quite successful, and is one of the steady-going, reliable business men of Pine Plains.

Mr. Barton has been twice married, his first wife being Anna Rockefeller, of Columbia county, who died in 1866. For his second wife he chose Jane Tripp, daughter of DeWitt Tripp, who has lived in both Pine Plains and Northeast town, Dutchess county. Two children grace this union, Carrie and Artie. Socially, Mr. Barton is prominently identified with the Masonic order, being one of the oldest members of Stissing Lodge No. 615, F. & A. M., in which he has filled nearly all the chairs. He is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party. For three terms he served as justice of the peace, was pathmaster two years, and inspector of elections for a number of years at Pine Plains; while in Ancram he served for about three years as town clerk. He takes an active interest in public affairs, and earnestly supports measures for the benefit of the community. He attends the Methodist Church.

Henry Hoffman, father of our subject's mother, married Catherine Betesle, and lived in Ancram, Columbia county. They had the following children: Margaret, born September 25, 1786, married Rowland Sweet; Catherine, born October 12, 1788, died young; Eleanor, born December 28, 1790, married Walter Dorchester; Henry J., born May 17, 1793, married Almyra Culver; Polly, born August 27, 1795, married Jeremiah Conklin; Catherine (2), born January 28, 1798, died young; an infant, born in 1799; Betsey, born May 28, 1800, married G. W. Barton; Laura, born June 23, 1803, married Artemas Sackett; Anthony, born September 15, 1805, married Sally Barton. The father of this family was born January 6, 1761, and died in 1840; the mother was born January 6, 1762, and died in 1850.

Anthony Hoffman resided in the town of Pine Plains, and he and his wife had four daughters and three sons, as follows: Henry, born December 26, 1829, married Mary A. Strever; Sarah, born December 6, 1831, married Herman Snyder; Leonard, born November 24, 1833, died January 8, 1865; Catherine, born February 22, 1835, married J. C. Hoag; Julia, born October 30, 1837, married Elias Halsted; Laura, born January 20, 1840, married Edgar Eggleston; and Anthony, born September 8, 1844, not married, died November 21, 1882.

EDWIN SUTTON (deceased) was a popular citizen of the town of Washington Dutchess county, where, a leader among men his memory is held in reverence and honor. Almost his entire life was passed in Dutchess county, and by his strong force of character and undoubted integrity he gained the confidence of the people. His death, which occurred September 16, 1887, left a vacancy difficult to fill, and it was considered a severe blow to the material and moral interests of the township.

Mr. Sutton was a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., born in 1836, and was a son of Abram and Jane (Mabbett) Sutton, the former born in Westchester county, N. Y., and the latter of Chestnut Ridge, in the town of Washington Dutchess county. Shortly after their marriage his parents removed to the farm where Haydon Hall is now located. The paternal household included six children, three of whom however, died in infancy. The two brothers of our subject who reached adult age were William H. (now deceased), who was a farmer and merchant; and Franklin, who is engaged in the insurance business in Poughkeepsie, New York.

When but two years old Edwin Sutton was brought by his parents to the town of Washington, where his childhood was passed, and after finishing his education he went to New York City, where he engaged in the retail furniture business for several years. On the death of his father, however, he returned to the town of Washington and took up farming, which he continued until his death. In 1878 Mr. Sutton married Miss Mary L. Donington, who was born in Elizabeth, N. J., and is the daughter of Henry and Mary (Badgley) Donington, also natives of Elizabeth, where the father lived retired. Mrs. Sutton is one of their family of fine children. The father's death occurred in 1861, while his wife passed away in 1887. He was a son of Jacob Donington, also a native of Elizabeth, N. J., and of English descent. On both sides of the family Mrs. Sutton is descended from Revolutionary heroes, Cornelius Badgley, her maternal great-grandfather, having been an officer in that war, and William Shute, her great-uncle on the father's side, was a major in the same struggle.

Edwin Sutton

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sutton resided at South Millbrook, where Mrs. Sutton still makes her home. They became the parents of a daughter, Carrie Donington, born in 1879. Our subject was an earnest Christian man, taking an active interest in religious affairs, as an adherent of the Hicksite faith, while his wife holds membership with the Presbyterian denomination. His political views were in accordance with those of the Republican party, and for a number of years he served as postmaster of South Millbrook, previous to which time he had been assistant postmaster, when the office was known as "Washington."

HIRAM H. BRIGGS, a general merchant of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, has done much to promote the commercial activity, advance the general welfare and secure the material development of the place. As a business man, he is enterprising, energetic and always abreast with the times, and has been rewarded by success in his undertakings. He was born in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, December 27, 1834, a son of Stephen D. and Phoebe T. (Hewlett) Briggs.

His father was born in 1806, and was the son of Stephen Briggs, Sr. In early life he followed the occupation of a farmer in the northeast part of the town of Hyde Park, and then, after living for a time in Pleasant Valley, located in the northwest portion of the town, where he carried on the same occupation. In 1853, however, he came to Hyde Park, where for twenty-five years he engaged in contracting and building, which business he followed until the day of his death, dying while at his work. He was a man of great energy, became a successful contractor and builder, and was widely known throughout the county, where he had been employed in the capacity of mover. He was essentially a self-made man, whose success was well deserved. In politics he was prominently identified with the Republican party, and served his fellow-citizens as collector of Hyde Park and school trustee. He was reared amid the Society of Friends, and ever held to that faith. He was married to Miss Phoebe T. Hewlett, daughter of Samuel Hewlett, of Hyde Park, and to them were born five children, who grew to adult age: Hiram H., subject of this sketch; Mary J., wife of Coster De Groff; Charlotte H., who married Ulrick Eshelman, of Poughkeepsie, but is now deceased; Sarah B., twin sister of Charlotte, who married Samuel Gunn, and is also deceased, and Martha C., deceased wife of De Witt C. Degolier, of Poughkeepsie. The father's death occurred in 1878, but the mother is still living.

After pursuing his studies in the district schools of the town of Hyde Park for some time, Hiram H. Briggs entered a boarding school at Oswego Village, and, on completing his education at the age of twenty years, he was well fitted for the practical duties of life. He had previously, however, clerked in the store of John K. Hewlett, his maternal uncle, for a year and a half, and later was with that gentleman for about a year. Going to New York City, he took a clerkship in the wholesale dry-goods establishment of Lewis Haviland & Co., where he remained for two years and a half, and, in the spring of 1863, began clerking for H. N. Vedder, in the store which he now owns at Hyde Park. For seven years he filled that position, and then for about four months was in a grocery store in New York City; but the following winter he was with Uhl & Husted, of Poughkeepsie. The next year he was again with Mr. Vedder, after which he returned to New York, and was in a retail grocery for three months. Later going to Dover Plains, Dutchess county, he there remained for two years and a half, when he entered the employ of Mark H. Hitchcock of Poughkeepsie, serving in that position for four months. It was January 1, 1886, that he started in business at Hyde Park as a general merchant, the firm being H. H. Briggs & Co., but May 4, 1895, the partnership was dissolved, and he has since been alone in business. He now has the largest store in the place, and his stock is well selected.

The record of Mr. Briggs is that of a man who has by his own unaided efforts worked his way upward to a position of affluence. His life has been one of industry and perseverance, and the systematic and honorable business methods which he has followed have won him the support and confidence of many. Without aid of influence or wealth, he has risen to a position among the most prominent business men of the county, and his native genius and acquired ability are the stepping-stones on which he mounted. He is an attendant of the Episcopal Church; is an honored member of Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 266, F. & A. M.; and in political affairs takes an active interest in the success of the Republican party, which he always supports by his ballot.

WILSON B. STORM, an enterprising and reliable business man of Stormville, was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, June 28, 1868, and is the son of Joseph H. Storm, a prominent citizen of the county. His boyhood and youth were passed upon a farm, and his education received in the district schools. Later he was a student in the Mount Beacon Academy, at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, and subsequently took a business course at the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, graduating with the class of 1888. On laying aside his text books he worked on the farm of his grandfather in the town of Beekman for six years.

On August 1, 1895, Mr. Storm began merchandising at Stormville, in connection with W. J. Storm, one of the leading business men of the town of East Fishkill, and the owner of the farm on which is located Storm Lake, which is a beautiful sheet of water covering twenty-five acres, fed by springs, and in which many different varieties of fish abound. Upon the east bank of the lake a creamery was erected and put in operation in April, 1896, and to which the New England railroad has built a side track. The business carried on by these gentlemen has grown to extensive proportions, and they deal in flour, feed, hardware and agricultural implements. Since April 1, 1896, Wilson B. Storm has laid aside agricultural pursuits, and now devotes his whole time and attention to merchandising.

On October 24, 1895, Mr. Storm was married to Miss Mary T. Berry, a native of the town of East Fishkill, where her father, Edward W. Berry, engages in farming, and to this union has been born one child—Georgia Sheldon—

January 26, 1897. Our subject is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, was elected supervisor of the town of Beekman in 1894, which position he served for two years or until his removal to East Fishkill, and was the youngest member of that board. In social as well as business circles he holds a high position and is a young man of more than ordinary ability. Religiously, Mrs. Storm holds membership in the Reformed Church at Hopewell.

DAVID EDWIN COLWELL, a highly esteemed resident of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is one of the favored few, who, reaching the ordinary limit of three-score years and ten finds life still enjoyable, old age being but the harvest time for their previous years of toil. He was born in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, April 1, 1825, and is a descendant of an old Scotch family.

His direct ancestors lived in the North of Ireland for some generations, and his great grandfather was the first of the line to come to America. He was a Protestant, and the majority of the family have been members of the Methodist Church. Samuel Colwell, our subject's grandfather, married Mary Smith, whose brother was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Their son Archibald, our subject's father, married Abigail Hall, and had eight children: Calvin Hubbard (deceased); Louis, now Mrs. Reed, of Moores Mill; Archibald L., of Verbank; Samuel Augustus, of Peoria, Ill.; David E., our subject; Julia Ann, now Mrs. Burnett, of Connecticut; Mary L. Ackerman; and Sarah A. Seaman.

When David E. Colwell was six years of age his parents moved to Verbank, and at an early age he began to work in a cotton factory there, which was the first of its kind to be operated in this State. In 1845 he went into the shoe business with his brother Archibald, but in 1855 entered the service of the Fishkill Lathing Machine Co., and in due time became a skilled machinist. For a short time he was employed by the late H. N. Swift, in the manufacture of lawn mowers, and then he moved to Passaic, N. J., to take a lucrative position with the New York Steam Engine Co. After a few years he went to Yonkers, N. Y., and was engaged in Waring's hat factory until his retirement from active business. He has resided at Matteawan for many years, and is leading member of the M. E. Church there. On January 14, 1847, he was married to Miss Gene A. Beach, and on January 14, 1897, they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, a most joyous occasion. They have two sons, Winfield S. and Frank W., both residents of Matteawan.

FRANK W. COLWELL was born in Matteawan, April 9, 1859, and after receiving an education in the public schools of that place, went to Yonkers to learn the jewelry and watchmaking business with H. F. Von Storch, with whom he remained for more than four years. He then worked at this trade in various places, spending some time with the Independent Watch Co., at Fredonia, N. Y., four years with the Waterbury Co., at Waterbury, Conn., and two years with the Cheshire Watch Co., at Cheshire, Conn. In 1888 he returned to his old home and engaged in business for himself in a small way, beginning with one window in a millinery store on Main street. He prospered, and after seven or eight months he moved into a more convenient store in a new building, and has since carried on his business there with a constantly growing patronage. His store is fully equipped with all the modern appliances, and a complete stock of watches, clocks, and jewelry of all kinds. He has a pleasant home at No. 21 Vine street, but in January, 1895, it was darkened by the death of his beloved wife, Carrie E. Tiel, to whom he was married November 10, 1880. Four children survive her: Minnie A., Jennie R., Frances B. and Edmund T.

Mrs. Colwell was a member of one of the leading families of Matteawan, a granddaughter of the late William H. Tiel, and a daughter of J. William Tiel, a well-known hat manufacturer. He married a lady of English descent, Miss Julia Rogers, a native of Palenville, Greene Co., N. Y., and both are still living. Of their eight children the first two and the last died in infancy. The others were Dr. Arthur R. Tiel, Edson L., J. William, Jr., Corie E. and Minnie A. In politics Mr. Colwell is a Republican, and he is an active worker in the M. E. Church, holding at present the office of superintendent of the Sunday-school. He is much interested in fraternal society work, belonging to the I. O. O. F., Evergreen Lodge, in which he has been a trustee for six years, and to the F. & A. M., Beacon Lodge, having joined the Masonic order while residing in Cheshire.

EDWARD ANTHONY UNDERHILL, the genial and able station agent at Glenham, Dutchess county, is also well known in business circles in that locality, being an extensive wholesale and retail dealer in coal. He is a native of New Hackensack, Dutchess county, and was born August 7, 1865, the son of Dr. Anthony Underhill, who practiced medicine successfully at New Hackensack for more than forty years. Dr. Anthony Underhill first saw the light November 12, 1818. His death occurred September 4, 1889, and his wife, Charlotte Augusta Marvin, who was born December 22, 1823, survives with their six children: Charles, George, William, Frank, Lottie, and Edward A.

Our subject availed himself of the usual district school advantages, and then entered the employ of his brother William in the coal business at Fishkill. After one year he went to Hopewell as assistant agent at the Union Depot for the N. Y. & N. E. R. R. and the N. D. & C. R. R., and remained seven years, when he was appointed agent at Glenham for the N. D. & C. R. R. In the same year, 1890, he purchased the coal business there from his brother William, and has combined the two enterprises satisfactorily. In politics he is a Republican.

On July 31, 1895, Mr. Underhill was united in marriage with Miss Jane Edith Schubert, daughter of Charles E. F. and Amelia W. Schubert, and made a wedding trip to Europe. Mr. Underhill was one of the lucky ten in a voting contest for a tour offered by the New York Press, standing second on the list with 23,525 votes. The Press gave its guests first class steamer and railway tickets and hotel accommodations, three meals a day being provided according to the custom of the hotel, and every other necessary expense was liberally met, including omnibuses between stations, piers, and hotels, carriage drives to points of interest, fees to hotel servants, railroad porters, and local guides and care-takers, while there was free transportation of the usual allowance of baggage on the steamer, and fifty-six pounds on the railways. An experienced conductor accompanied the party, superintending the arrangements throughout, and it would have been impossible to secure similar privileges for less than $800 each. The tourists left New York August 3, 1895, on the Cunarder "Aurania" and on August 12 arrived at Liverpool, where they stopped at the "Adelphia Hotel." On the same day they went to London and spent five days there, three being given up to carriage drives about the city; here they were quartered at the "Midland Grand Hotel." They left via Harwich for Antwerp on the evening of August 17, and arriving on the following day, remained until the afternoon of the 19th, when they made the trip to Brussels, which occupied one hour. A carriage drive there on the 20th gave them a view of the main points of interest in the city, and on the 21st they went to Rotterdam, where they remained until the evening of the 22d. The next two days were passed at the Hague, the first in an extended carriage drive, and on the evening of the 24th they went to Amsterdam, where the following day, Sunday, August 25, was made a day of rest to the travelers, fatigued by their continuous sight seeing. An early train took them to Cologne on the 26th, and that day was spent in visiting the wonderful cathedral and other places of note. On the 27th they took an express steamer on the Rhine for Mayence, and on the next day continued the trip by rail to Heidelberg, and after a short stay there they went to Strasburg by an early afternoon train, and saw the great wonder of that city, the Cathedral, with its world-renowned clock. August 29, found them en route for Paris, and the next five days were spent there at the "Grand Hotel," three days being devoted to carriage drives, and on the evening of September 3 they started via Dieppe for London, where they spent one day, leaving in the evening for Liverpool to embark on September 5 on the Cunarder "Gallia," for Boston. They landed there September 15, and left in the evening by the Fall River line for New York City, arriving at 7:30 A. M. September 16.

Mr. Underhill had purchased a home at Glenham before his marriage, and on their return he and his wife immediately began house-keeping. They take a prominent part in the social life of the village, and attend the Reformed Dutch Church.

SILAS E. CARD (deceased), in his lifetime a prominent citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and a member of a well-known firm of Satterlee & Card, merchant tailors, was a native of Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., born July 18, 1845, and died March 27, 1896.

He came of old pioneer stock, the ancestors of the American line being two brothers who came from Ireland in 1600 and settled in Rhode Island. Of their numerous descendants many came west from time to time, following the advancing line of civilization, and Edson Card, our subject's grandfather, who was born in Connecticut, became one of the early settlers of Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he was engaged in farming. He married Charlotte Witheral, and had nine children: Edson (1) (deceased), Catherine, Mary (deceased), Eton H., Emma (deceased), Sarah, Edson (2), Charlotte, and William (deceased).

Edson Card, our subject's father, was born November 29, 1817, in Ancram, and was married to Miss Mary Miller, who was born 1814, a daughter of Silas Miller, of Copake, Columbia county, who was of Dutch ancestry and followed the occupation of a farmer all his life. They had five children: Albert M., an attorney of New York City, who resides in Sharon, Conn.; Silas E., our subject; Lott H., born in 1848, now a resident of Pleasant Valley; Charles M., born in 1850, also of Pleasant Valley; George, born in 1854, an attorney at Poughkeepsie; and Edson, born 1856, who was graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, in 1888 and is now a prominent physician at Lal Mahopac, Putnam county (he married Miss Cora Badeau, and has one son, Badeau Card). For eight years after their marriage our subject's parents lived at Ancram, but in 1858 they removed to a farm in the town of Stafford, Dutchess county. In 1869 they went to Pleasant Valley, there to pass their declining years. The father was a man of influence in his neighborhood, possessing the esteem of all classes of people, and for many years he was a justice of the peace in the town of Pleasant Valley, and held the office of assessor for many years. He died May 12, 1888; his widow is still living at Pleasant Valley.

Silas E. Card was only two years old when he came to Dutchess county, and he was educated in the public schools of his vicinity and in the seminary at Amenia. In 1865 he came to Poughkeepsie to engage in business, and after spending fifteen years in the store of Seward & Hayt he bought an interest in George P. Satterlee's merchant-tailoring establishment, at No. 280 Main street. He was admirably qualified for success in his chosen line, and held a high rank among the enterprising merchants of his vicinity. On November 4, 1888, in the town of Stanford, he married Miss E. Belle Alling, a daughter of John T. and Frances Mabbett) Alling, and five children were born of this union: John A., born May 20, 1877, graduated from the Poughkeepsie high school at the age of sixteen, and is now completing his course in medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York; Frank M., who died when one year old; Mary E., born December 5, 1882; George H., born July 17, 1886; and Albert N., born May 14, 1890.

Silas E. Card

In politics Mr. Card was a Democrat, and took an influential part in the work of the organization in his locality. He was the candidate of his party for mayor in 1894; but that was a year of tribulation for Democrats, and he with all the others on the ticket suffered defeat. He was one of the City Alms House commissioners for ten years, and was an Except Fireman of Phoenix Hose Company No. 1 of which he was treasurer. In the Masonic order he was a member of Triune Lodge No. 72, Poughkeepsie Chapter and Commandery, and of the Royal Arcanum, and was District Deputy of Dutchess county. He was a prominent member of Washington street M. E. Church, at the time of his death holding the office of steward.

JAMES HENRY HIGNELL, the junior member of the firm of McFarlane & Hignell, the well-known boiler manufacturers, of Fishkill Landing, Dutchess county, is among the most prominent of the younger business men of that place.

The family name is English in its origin, and our subject's paternal grandfather, Joseph Hignell, came from England in early manhood, and was married in this country to Mrs. Rachel Lawson, a widow. Their son, Daniel L. Hignell, our subject's father, was born at Binegat, N. Y., April 28, 1833, learned the blacksmith's trade in youth, and is now the Fishkill Landing Machine Company's foreman. He married Miss Mary Odell, who was born November 23, 1832, near Cold Spring, Putnam county, the daughter of Elijah and Sabra (Perry) Odell. The Odell family is an ancient one, and this branch was established in this country in Colonial times. Our subject was the eldest of three children, the others being Millard Fillmore Hignell; and Mamie, who married James E. Tomlins, and resides at Tuedo Park.

James H. Hignell was born at Fishkill Landing, October 22, 1856. He has been identified with the village all his life, receiving his education in the public schools, and at thirteen entering upon his practical business career. Until the age of eighteen he worked at different employments, and then followed the harness maker's trade about six years; but his health becoming impaired he left this occupation in 1880, to take a position as bookkeeper with the late John J. Herley, the boiler manufacturer. On the death of Mr. Herley in the spring of 1892, Mr. Hignell formed his present partnership, and purchased the business from the estate. Their work embraces not only boiler-making, but the manufacture of tanks and everything in that line, and their trade is extensive, reaching throughout New York State and to various portions of the South and West.

On February 2, 1881, Mr. Hignell married Miss Kate Chase, a native of Glenham, N. Y. Her father, Henry Chase, came from Switzerland; her mother, Ann Roe, from Ireland, and their marriage took place at Fishkill Landing. Mr. and Mrs. Hignell are prominent members of the Reformed Dutch Church at Fishkill Landing, and are interested in all that pertains to social and religious progress. They have one daughter, Lelia Ella, born August 17, 1887.

Politically Mr. Hignell is a Republican. He is a charter member of River View Lodge No. 560, I. O. O. F., has passed through the chairs, and is now trustee and treasurer. On June 18, 1896, he helped to organize a lodge of the Improved Order of Redmen at Fishkill Landing, and was elected to the order of Sachem. On March 18, 1897, he was elected treasurer of the general hospital of the town of Fishkill, N. Y.; was also elected treasurer of the executive committee.

WILLIAM E. HAVENS, the efficient superintendent of the Fishkill Electric railway and the Citizens Electric railway of Fishkill-on-Hudson, is one of the rising young practical electricians of his locality. His already wide and varied experience in the mechanical arts has especially fitted him for the understanding of the difficulties which attend the application of electricity to business uses, while he possesses also rare gifts as an organizer and manager of men.

He is a son of William H. and Anna

(Dixon) Havens, and grandson of Edward Havens. His father, who is a native of Oswego, N. Y., born July 4, 1840, is now a well-known engineer. He had three sons—Frederic Dare Havens, Charles P. and William E.—and one daughter—Jennie Lee. Our subject was born in Oswego, N. Y., August 24, 1863. His early education was obtained in the public schools of his native city, also in Rome, N. Y., and at the age of thirteen he began to learn photography, at which he worked for about three years. He then spent a number of years in different pursuits, learning in each one some lessons which were to prove of benefit in after life, possibly in unexpected ways. He spent one year in a machine shop, three years in the business of steam engineering at Rome, two years as special collector of the Howe Sewing Machine Co., two years in the National Express Co., and one year with the Edison Electrical Illuminating Co., at Rochester, N. Y. He then went to Syracuse, N. Y., and passed two years in the employ of the Third Ward Electric Street Railway Co., and their successors, the Consolidated Street Railway Co., and later held the position of night engineer of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad depot at Syracuse for six months. On July 6, 1892, he came to Matteawan as electrician for the Citizens and the Fishkill Electric Railway Companies, and in September, of the same year, he was appointed superintendent of those lines.

Mr. Havens has a pleasant residence on Main street, Fishkill-on-Hudson. His wife, whom he married June 10, 1885, formerly Miss Minnie E. Moore, is a daughter of Andrew W. and Ovanda (Craig) Moore, of Cohocton, Steuben Co., N. Y., and they have three children: Catherine E., Jennie Lee and William Henry. Mr. and Mrs. Havens are prominent members of the Episcopal Church at Fishkill, and are ever ready to sustain any progressive movement. In politics he is a Republican, and he also takes an active interest in fraternal society work as a member of Melzinhah Lodge No. 304, K. of P., and Court Beacon No. 296, F. of A.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, one of the residents of the village of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, is the proprietor of the extensive establishment known as Hammond's Slug Shot and Paint Works, and a manufacturer and wholesale dealer in paints, oils, chemicals and similar commodities, his trade extending in his specialties to all parts of the United States.

Mr. Hammond was born in Kidderminster, Worcestershire, England, July 12, 1849. His father, Benjamin Hammond, the son of Levi Hammond, was born in that locality in 1817 and in 1848 married Miss Mary Twemlow, for his second wife. Our subject is the oldest of the five children of this union, the names of the others being Mary, Levi, Sophia and Sophronia Warren. In 1855 the father came to America, bringing his family, and after locating for a time in New York City, he removed to Carlinville, Macoupin Co., Ill., where he remained until 1858. Returning east, he made his permanent home in Brooklyn, where he died in November, 1876. The son began his business life with Lazell, Marsh & Gardner, at No. 10 Gold street, New York City, as an office boy, and after nine years with them he went, in 1873, to Mt. Kisco, in company with Charles S. Ware, who had purchased the drug business of Mrs. Dr. Fenton, a sister-in-law of the late Gov. Fenton, of New York. This business was continued and developed until the fall of 1884, when Mr. Hammond removed to Fishkill Landing and founded his present establishment. Mr. Hammond is one of the pioneers in the United States in the manufacture of economic insecticides, and this particular branch of his business is known all over the world, as he ships his product to London (England), Auckland (New Zealand), Nova Scotia, and all other parts of Canada. His works are located on the N. E. corner of Lot 10, Dock Landing, opposite the N. Y. & N. J. depot, and near the H. R. R. depot and Newburg Ferry, and the business under his judicious and vigorous management has been the increase ever since its establishment. In politics Mr. Hammond is a Republican. Mount Kisco, Westchester county, in connection with Stephen and Samuel Carpenter, established a local newspaper, known as the Mount Kisco Weekly, of which he was the editor for several years. He was chairman of the Republican town committee, was elected justice of the peace of the town of New Castle, and a member of the board of education of the Mount Kisco Union Free School District. At the incorporation of the village of Mount Kisco he took an active part, and obtained the soubriquet of "Prime Mover."

In Mount Kisco Mr. Hammond met Miss Isabel Monilaws (who subsequently became his wife), a woman of refinement and culture, the daughter of the Rev. George Monilaws, of Somers, Westchester county, in which village he was born. They were married by Rev. Dr. C. W. Baird, of Rye, July 25, 1875, and three daughters, all born in Mount Kisco, were the issue of this marriage: Marion Isabel, Grace Twemlow, and Elsie. Mrs. Hammond died at her home, "Spy Hill," Fishkill Landing, N. Y., May 28, 1892, and was buried in the Fishkill Rural Cemetery, Fishkill, N. Y. On April 6, 1897, Mr. Hammond was again married, his second wife being Miss Laura Anthony, daughter of the late Richard Kip Anthony and Ann Bowie Dash, of New York, the ceremony having been performed by the Rev. Charles W. Fritts, D. D., of Fishkill-on-Hudson, New York.

Mr. Anthony took up the ordinary duties of a good citizen, and interested himself in the development of his locality. In October, 1889, at the formation of the Union Free School District of Fishkill Landing, he was elected a member of the board of education, and as clerk to the board took a leading part in the planning and building of the splendid school building which was erected in 1890-91. In 1894 Mr. Hammond was elected president of the board. For three successive terms he was elected president of the village of Fishkill Landing, and close attention to all the details of the position was the marked peculiarities of his term of service. He has served as town auditor, and while a pronounced temperance man was elected, after a hard contest, a member of the Town Board of Excise, with a handsome majority. The village of Fishkill, because of its situation between great brick yards, is proverbial for its many saloons and liquor shops. Mr. Hammond is a member of the Reformed Dutch Church, and an officer of the same, being for years a Sunday-school teacher, a deacon and an elder. His residence is nicely located on Park avenue, overlooking Newburg Bay, surrounded with ample grounds, well-kept and planted with beautiful flowers, shrubs and hedges.

GILMAN D. HOLMES, a prominent citizen of Matteawan, Dutchess county, has been for many years the master mechanic of the N. D. & C. R. R., in charge of the building and repair shops at Dutchess Junction, and has proved himself an able executive officer in that department, uniting in a rare degree practical knowledge of the details of the work with the faculty of managing effectively a large force of men.

He is a "Yankee" by birth, his parents, Lewis and Mittie (Osgood) Holmes, being residents of Francestown, N. H., where his father was a well-known farmer and miller. There were three children: Sarah A., Mason, and Gilman D.

Gilman D. Holmes was born November 29, 1842. The public schools of his native place furnished educational advantages, of which he made good use until he was twenty years old, when he began to learn the trade of machinist in the railroad shops of the N. N. H. R. R., now the Boston & Maine R. R. Eight years there gave him a thorough mastery of the business in all its branches, and he then came to Dutchess Junction, and was employed by the N. D. & C. R. R. for about fifteen years before his appointment, in 1885, to his present responsible position in the car shops. His ten years of faithful work in that place completes a term of a quarter of a century in the service of the same road. He is loyal to the interests of his fellow workers as well as to his employers, and is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Mr. Holmes married Miss Emma S. Anson, daughter of Nathan Anson, a native of Stanfordville, and his wife, Catherine (Cashner), a descendant of a well-known family of Rhinebeck. The pleasant home of our subject on Ackerman street, Matteawan, is gladdened by one son, Lewis A., born in 1884. In politics Mr. Holmes is an independent voter, supporting either party under varying circumstances as his conscience dictates. He and his wife are Methodists in faith, and take a generous interest in the work of the Church at Matteawan.

SAMUEL BRYANT, a well-known citizen of Matteawan, Dutchess county, was born February 10, 1833, in Gloucestershire, England, where his family has resided for many generations. His grandfather, Richard Bryant, was a prosperous hat manufacturer there, and his four sons—George, Jonathan, Samuel, and Henry—all lived and died in England, and were highly esteemed members of the Established Church.

Jonathan Bryant, our subject's father, was born at the old home, and learned the hatter's trade in his father's factory. He followed this business successfully until his death, in 1875; his wife, Esther (Gardner), a native of the same place, died in 1883. Her father, George Gardner, was also engaged in hat manufacturing. Of the thirteen children of this union, nine are living: (1) George (deceased) was a hatter in Matteawan, where his son, Albert R. Bryant, still resides; (2) Mary A., a twin of (3) Samuel, our subject, married John Skidmore, of England, and lives in that country; (4) Esther married John Connells, of Australia; (5) Henry is a resident of Sydney, Australia; (6) Richard lives at Yonkers, N. Y.; (7) Westley resides in Sydney, Australia; (8) Albert died in England; (9) Clara married (name not given), of London; (10) Eving and (11) Jonathan live in England; (12) Luke and (13) Richard died in infancy.

The subject of our sketch was reared in Gloucestershire, England, learning the ancestral occupation, in which he engaged in early manhood. In 1855 he came to the United States, his first designation being Yonkers, N. Y. He remained there only a few days, and then went to Riverstreet, N. J., and worked at his trade for a short time. In 1856 he made his permanent home at Matteawan, engaging first in the hatter's business, but since 1885 he has conducted a saloon. He was married, in 1857, to Miss Charlotte Gifford, a native of England and a daughter of Thomas Gifford. They have had six children: Martha M., now the wife of Fred Moore, of Matteawan; Clara (Mrs. Richard Van Voorhis), of the same place; Jane (Mrs. George Van Orsdale), also of Matteawan; Evan and Edward, who are in the saloon business at Fishkill Landing; and Lizzie, at home. The family attend the Episcopal Church. Mr. Bryant has many friends, and takes a loyal interest in public questions, voting independently both on local and national issues.

ELAKIN TOMPKINS, one of the most prominent residents of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, and the able manager of the Dutchess Hat Works, was born in Ashland, Greene Co., N. Y., July 9, 1842.

His family is of English origin, and he is of the fifth generation in direct descent from Stephen Tompkins, who came to America in Colonial times, and, after a short residence in Connecticut, settled in Winchester county, N. Y., where he and two of his sons did good service on the side of the colonies all through the Revolutionary war. He had sixteen children, and his remote descendants are very numerous. One of his grandsons, Daniel L. Tompkins, was vice-President of the United States from 1816 to 1820, and many other members of the family have held positions of honor and usefulness. The great-grandfather of our subject, James Tompkins, supposed to be a son of Stephen, rendered important service in the Revolutionary war. He served in the Seventh Dutchess County Regiment under Col. Henry Luddington, and in the company commanded by Capt. George Lane. His son Solomon, our subject's grandfather, was one of the earliest settlers at Ashland, being accompanied by his son, Solomon (2), father of our subject, who became a prominent farmer there and married Elizabeth Randall, who survives him and now resides at Matteawan.

E. Lakin Tompkins was educated in the public schools of Ashland, and in September, 1862, at the age of twenty, went to Matteawan to work for the Seamless Clothing Manufacturing Co., with whom he remained eight years. He then clerked for a year or two in a clothing store belonging to his brother Lewis, and in 1872 he and John F. Gerow purchased his brother's interest. He disposed of this, however, and in July, 1874, became superintendent of the Dutchess Hat Works, which Lewis Tompkins established at that time. Our subject has managed this extensive plant ever since, and much of the time it has been under his sole charge, owing to the ill health of his brother and his absence abroad. At the death of the latter Mr. Tompkins was appointed executor of his estate. An able business man displaying in every enterprise, energy and good judgment, Mr. Tompkins has conducted and assisted in various successful ventures. In 1889 he purchased a tract of land in the northern part of the village, and laid it out in fifty building lots, many of which have been sold and are now occupied by dwelling houses. He is a director of the First National Bank, and trustee of the Mechanics Savings Bank. In politics he is a Republican. In 1878 he was elected trustee of the village of Fishkill-on-Hudson, was re-elected to the position for several eral years in succession, and served one year as president of the village. In August, 1892, President Harrison appointed him postmaster of his village, and this position he held four years, three and one-half years under President Cleveland's administration. For ten years he was a member of the board of education, being elected term after term successively; but early in 1896 he resigned on account of the demands of other important interests upon his time.

Mr. Tompkins has a beautiful residence, built in 1893, situated on High street and commanding a charming view of the river. His wife was formerly Miss Cordelia E. Knapp, of Greenwich, Conn., a daughter of the late John C. and Joanna Knapp. Her father spent his last days at their home, and passed from earth Thursday, March 12, 1896, in his eighty-fifth year. Two children were born of this marriage, Reta I. and Harry K. Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins are leading members of the M. E. church, and he is especially active in its interest, being a trustee and class leader at present, and for many years he served as Sunday-school superintendent. He has been a Freeason for about thirty years, and has held the office of master in Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. A. M., for two successive terms.

EDMUND H. SHEAFF, the superintendent of the Fishkill and Matteawan water works, and widely known as an able and efficient manager of large enterprises, was born in Radnor, Delaware county, Penn., June 29, 1850.

His family is of English origin, and he is a direct descendant of Gen. Sheaff, of the English army. His grandfather, William Sheaff, was a wealthy tanner in Pennsylvania, and his father, William Sheaff, Jr., born in 1797, was a prosperous farmer, and also a prominent business man of Delaware county for many years before he retired from active business. His death occurred in Philadelphia August 25, 1861. On May 28, 1828, he married Miss Margaretta Fry Sinquette (a descendant of an old French Huguenot family), who died in 1833. They had eleven children: John, William, George, Sarah, Noah, Susannah, Mary, Cortrude, Edmund H., Margaret and Adele.

Edmund H. Sheaff received his education in part in the Philadelphia public schools, in part in Crittendens Business College, same city.

When a mere boy, he enlisted, November 17, 1864, in Company K, 196th P. V. I., under Capt. Edward Lyster, for a term of three months, and served until he was mustered out at the close of the war. He then went to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and spent three years on a coffee plantation, and on returning to the United States engaged in the transportation business in New York City. In 1870 he went to Cuba, and took charge of sugar plantations at Sagua de la Grande and Cardinas; but after two years went to New Orleans and then to San Francisco, and in the following year engaged in mining at Virginia City, Nev., where he remained several years. On returning to the East, he took up his residence at Hoboken, N. J., and for three years was employed by John H. Starin Transportation Co. In 1881 he was engaged by Decker & Rapp, as wharfinger, having charge of their docks at New York City. In 1884 he went to Mt. Vernon, N. Y., as superintendent and general manager of the Mt. Vernon water works, remaining seven years, and in 1891, representing the interest of Taintor & Holt, bankers, No. 11 Wall street, New York, he came to Fishkill to take the management of the Fishkill & Matteawan system. This duty he discharged most ably, winning the respect and esteem of the entire community. He is a Democrat in politics, and a member of the First Baptist Church, of Mt. Vernon, New York.

BENJAMIN M. TALBOT, a prominent resident of Fishkill-on-Hudson, is a well-known dealer in real estate, and the owner of valuable property in that vicinity.

He is a native of England, and a descendant of an old Yorkshire family. His paternal grandparents were Charles and Jane Talbot, whose son Thomas, the father of our subject, was a prosperous cloth merchant at Holmfirth, Yorkshire, England. He married Judith Winter, daughter of Matthias Winter, and reared a family of eight children: Elizabeth, Benjamin M. (our subject), Charles, Jane, Richard, Thomas, Matthew and Emily.

Benjamin M. Talbot was educated in the schools of his native town, and in early manhood came to America, where he located first in Newburgh, N. Y. After one year there he moved to Fishkill Landing, and in 1866 engaged in the wholesale and retail liquor traffic, continuing until 1886—twenty years to a day. He then sold his business and partially retired from active life, his attention being given to some extent to dealing in real estate. He is the owner of several stores and other property, and in his investments has always shown fine business judgment.

Mr. Talbot has a beautiful home at Fishkill-on-Hudson, on the corner of Dutchess terrace and Verplanck avenue. His wife, formerly Miss Elizabeth Bates, whom he married November 9, 1868, is a daughter of William and Mary Ann (Rothwell) Bates, of Yorkshire, England. Five sons have blessed their union, one of whom died in infancy, and another, Frederick, at the age of twenty years. The surviving three are: James G., a bookkeeper in New York City; William R., a law student in the law office of J. Hervey Cook, attorney at law; and Henry Talbot, attending school. Mrs. Talbot is a prominent member of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church at Matteawan, and interested in the various lines of parish work. In politics Mr. Talbot is a Republican, but he keeps aloof from partisan strife, and does not seek official honors. He belongs to the order of the Knights of Pythias Lodge at Matteawan.

SILAS TERWILLIGER, a merchant of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is well known throughout the State as an able and energetic business man, many years of successful work as a contractor and builder of important structures having established his reputation. Among other enterprises successfully carried out by him was the building of large flour-mills and a cotton factory in Columbia county, and for some time was engaged upon the Delaware & Hudson canal, rebuilding the "weighlock" at Eddyville, a very particular piece of work involving the construction of the "cradle" or frame, in which the boats rest while being weighed. He also worked in the State armory at Syracuse, N. Y., and had a contract from a Mr. Austin, the builder, to lay the floors.

His family is one of the oldest and most prominent in the town of Marbletown, Ulster county, and his great-grandfather, Solomon Terwilliger, was the first patriot in that town to sign the following paper. [Copied from the Calendar of New York Historical MSS. Revolutionary papers]:

Vol. 1, Page 5.

OLD SENATE HOUSE, KINGSTON,
GOSHEN, ORANGE COUNTY, APRIL 29, 1775.

General Association:

Persuaded that the salvation of the Rights and Liberties of America depends under God on the firm union of its inhabitants, in a vigorous prosecution of the measures necessary for its safety, and convinced of the necessity of preventing the anarchy and confusion which attend a dissolution of the powers of Government. We, the Freeman, Freeholders and Inhabitants of the county of Orange being greatly alarmed at the avowed design of the Ministry to raise a revenue in America, and shocked by the bloody scene now acting in the Massachusetts Bay, do in the most solemn manner resolve never to become slave and do associate under all the ties of Religion, Honor and Love to our country, to adopt and endeavor to carry into execution whatever measures may be recommended by the Continental Congress or resolved upon by this Provincial Congress for the purpose of preserving our Constitution, and opposing the execution of the several arbitrary and oppressive acts of the British Parliament, until a reconciliation between Great Britain and America, on Constitutional principles (which we most ardently desire can be obtained; and that we will in all things follow the advice of our respective Committees, respecting the purpose aforesaid, the preservation of peace and good order and the safety of individuals and private property.

From Calendar of New York Historical MSS. Revolutionary papers, Vol. 1, Page 33, among the Associates in Marbletown appear the names of 292, that of Solomon Terwilliger being the very first.

Solomon Terwilliger and his wife, Helen (Bodly) had a son Derrick, who was a farmer in the town of Marbletown, Ulster county, and a soldier of the war of 1812. He married Margaret Krom, and had a son William, our subject's father, who became a prominent carpenter and builder of the same locality, following that occupation until a few years previous to his death. He and his wife, whose maiden name was Nellie A. Hill, and whom he married August 12, 1829, reared a family of four sons: Alfred, Silas, Edgar and Jacob L.

Silas Terwilliger, our subject, was born June 23, 1834, at Stone Ridge, Ulster county, and after passing through the common school of his native town attended a select school two terms. At sixteen he began his business career, learning the trade of mill-wright with Fred Paine, of Connecticut, who took contracts in all parts of the country. An apprenticeship of three years familiarized Mr. Terwilliger with all the details of the trade, which he then followed continuously until 1860, being many extensive contracts with entire satisfaction to all concerned. In 1862 he took a contract from C. B. Morse to do the wheel work on all cotton and woolen machinery made at the Union Iron Works at Rhinebeck, N. Y., and after six years there he moved (in 1868) to Matteawan to take charge of the pattern shop of J. B. Schenk & Sons, with whom he remained one year, and then entered the employ of the Matteawan Manufacturing Co., to superintend their building and repairs. He spent eighteen years in this position, and was then compelled by ill health to resign and spend some months in recuperating. In 1888 he purchased the property in Spring street, opposite the Union Free School, where he has since conducted a store, enjoying a fine custom. He also owns three houses and lots in the village, and a farm of eighty acres in the vicinity.

On June 26, 1852, he was married to Rachel Hasbrouck, daughter of Garrett and Martha Hasbrouck. Her death occurred January 3, 1873, and Mr. Terwilliger has since wedded Sarah E. Sutherlin, daughter of David and Maria (Schoonmaker) Van Wagenen, who were natives of Ulster county, N. Y. Of the two children of this union one died at the age of seven years, and the other, Nellie A., is at home. She and her mother are members of the M. E. Church, but Mr. Terwilliger, who was reared in the faith of the Reformed Dutch church, still inclines to that belief. Politically, he is a Democrat, and he was trustee of the village of Matteawan for two years.

THOMAS S. JUDSON, one of the leading business men of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is the head of the Beacon Ice Company, the superintendent of the mechanical goods department of the New York Rubber Company, and a shareholder in many other prosperous enterprises.

Mr. Judson was born in Newtown, Conn., September 1, 1833, a son of Zenas and Fannie (Corrence) Judson, and grandson of John Judson. He is of English descent on his father's side, of Irish origin on his mother's. His father was for many years the proprietor of a merchant-tailoring establishment in New York city. Our subject is one of a family of thirteen children, six of whom are still living. The public schools of Newtown afforded him the only educational opportunities, and as he was too old enough to help upon the farm his attendance was limited to the winter terms. At the age of sixteen he began to work in the village of Sandy Hook for the New York Belting & Packing Company, located in the town of Newtown, and remained in their employ until 1858, when he came to Matteawan as foreman of the New York Rubber Company. This position he held some twenty-four years, and since 1883 he has superintended the mechanical department of those works. He is now a stockholder in the concern, and he has become interested in various other business ventures. For over twenty years he was the proprietor of the Beacon Ice Company, now managed by his two sons, George G. and William H., and he is a trustee and vice-president of the Matteawan Savings Bank, director of the Matteawan National Bank, stockholder in the "Holland Hotel," and trustee of the Hotel Association. In politics he is a Republican, and in 1879-80 he was collector of the town of Fishkill; in 1881-82 was township supervisor, and in 1887-88 he was president of the village of Matteawan. He is a member of Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M., and has held the office of trustee for some years. His sound, conservative views, so rarely found in combination with such enterprise as he has always displayed, make him as valued an adviser and helper in public affairs as in business concerns.

On July 30, 1854, Mr. Judson married Eliza Glover, daughter of the late Capt. D. J. and Pollie (Briscoe) Glover, of Newtown, Conn. They have three children: Two sons, George G. and William H., and one daughter, Lillian F., married to C. E. Jaynes. The family attend the M. E. Church of Matteawan, and take an interest in its varied lines of effort. Mr. Judson has a charming home at the corner of Sargent avenue and Wincopee street.

EMIL PARMENTER, proprietor of the "Mechanics Hotel" at Glenham, Dutchess county, was born August 2, 1851, at Strassburg, Germany. He traces his descent from a family which has long been engaged in agricultural pursuits, and his grandfather, Nicolas Parmenter, was a farmer in the Province of Lorraine, where he reared a family of children, all of whom lived and died in their native land.

Nicholas Parmenter, our subject's father, was born in Lorraine, in 1823, and followed agriculture all his life, his death occurring in 1895. His wife, Caroline Weber, who is still living, was a native of Strassburg and a daughter of Anthony Weber. Her grandfather Weber lost his property during the Napoleonic wars, and nearly lost his life. After their marriage Nicholas and Caroline Parmenter settled in Strassburg, and eleven children were born there, of whom our subject was the eldest: (2) Caroline, widow of John Swing, lives in Strassburg; (3) Lewis resides at the old home, and is now in the employ of the government; (4) Charles, a resident of Nancy, France, is a master carpenter, and was sent to the World's Fair in Chicago to superintend the installation of certain machinery; (5) Magdalene remained in Germany; (6) Edward is engaged in the cooper's trade in Strassburg; (7) Mary married Xavier Vix, a restaurant-keeper at Nancy, France, and has become thoroughly French in speech and customs; (8) Eugene is a cooper at Strassburg; (9) Albert is a carpenter at Holyoke, N. Y.; (10) August died when about nine years old, and the eleventh child died in infancy.

Emil Parmenter remained in his native place until he reached the age of twenty-one, and there acquired a knowledge of the mason's trade. In 1872 he crossed the ocean, and has since made his home at Glenham, Dutchess county. For some time he followed his trade, and for a few years he was engaged in the grocery business. Six years were spent in the wholesale ale business, and then he began dealing in beer; but in 1884 he opened the hotel and saloon which he has ever since conducted. In 1876 he married Miss Ella Boyce, a native of Dutchess county, and a daughter of Robert and Sarah Boyce. Three children have blessed their union: Emily and Ella, who are both at home, and Louis, who died at the age of four and one-half years.

Mr. Parmenter is a public-spirited citizen, taking great interest in all improvements. He has been a Democrat, but is now a Republican in political faith. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F., with which order he united in 1883.

MON. EDWARD M. GORING was born in Manchester, England, April 20, 1828. No citizen of the pleasant and prosperous village of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, is more deserving of notice in this Commemorative Biographical Record, and none is better known and esteemed than the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch, and who has spent almost his entire life in the locality where he still makes his home.

Robert Goring, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in England in 1770, and married Jane Morris on February 4, 1802. They had four children: John M., the father of our subject; James, born in 1807; Thomas, born in 1813, came to the United States and located in Wisconsin, where he died; and Jane, who died unmarried.

John M. Goring was the eldest of the family, and was born in Manchester in 1804. He learned the business of engraving to calico printing, and followed it all his life. He married Miss Martha Heald, who was born in Lancashire, England, where her father was a cotton broker. One member of the family, James Heald, was member of Parliament from Stockport, in that county. Nine children were born of this union, of whom the following record is given: Edward Morris is the subject of this sketch; Walter H. lives in Wappingers Falls; Mrs. Jane E. Myatt, in Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. Lucy A. Babcock, in Haverstraw, N. Y.; Thomas W., in Chicago; Victoria A. Martha M. and John M., Jr., of Wappingers Falls; Anna, died in 1852. The father of the family came to the United States in 1832, first locating at Fall River, and later at Boston. He was a close friend of Alvan Clark, the maker of the lenses for the great Lick telescope, and of the large Yerkes telescope, of Chicago.

In 1836 Mr. Goring removed to Wappingers Falls, where he died January 22, 1879. His wife died April 15, 1886. He was originally a Whig, later a Republican, and although an active politician, he never held an office. He was a strong advocate of temperance, and was interested in all matters pertaining to the public welfare.

Edward M. Goring, our subject, was only eight years of age when his parents left England, but had already attended school for some time. His education was completed in the district school at Wappingers Falls, and in 1845 he was apprenticed to the trade of engraving to calico printing, which he followed from 1845 to 1860. For the succeeding nine years he was engaged in the coal business, and in 1869 he was a member of the firm of Debbrow & Goring, iron founders; was in the real estate business until 1872, when he built Goring Hall and opened a drug store. In this business he was engaged until 1890, since which time he has retired from active business pursuits.

In 1850 Mr. Goring married Miss Jane J., youngest daughter of Alexander Thomson, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. Of the union four children were born: Thomson E., who is superintendent of the large overall factory of Sweet, Orr & Co., and whose sketch immediately follows; Maria J., who married Ashley S. Worsley, chief engineer in the Providence Electric Light Company's works; Prescott C., a printer; and Ada M., who died in childhood. Mr. Goring was an Old-line Whig, coming into the Republican ranks on the formation of the latter party. He has always taken a lively interest in public affairs, and has held a number of important offices, being collector of Fishkill town in 1862; Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue from 1865 to 1867; Assistant U. S. Assessor Internal Revenue from 1867 to 1871. He was the first Republican supervisor elected in that township in ten years, and was re-elected by a large majority. In 1871 he was a member of the New York Assembly, and sergeant-at-arms of the Assembly in 1872. He was president of the village in 1879, and is its present police justice. In 1883 he was appointed, by President Arthur, postmaster at Wappingers Falls, which office he held four years. Mr. Goring has been a trustee of the Grinnell Library for thirty years. In local enterprises, notably the separating of the town of Wappinger from the town of Fishkill; in the incorporation of Wappingers Savings Bank, and Bank of Wappingers; the incorporation of Wappingers Falls as a village; in the laying out of the new road to New Hamburg as a public, instead of a toll, road, as chartered by the Legislature; in the authorizing the erection of the $15,000 public-school building in the village, and in other kindred enterprises, Mr. Goring was the initiator and earnest promoter. In all these responsible and honorable positions, he has acquitted himself with credit to himself, and for the best interests of the public.

E. M. Goring

Thomas E. Young.

THOMSON E. GORING, eldest son of Hon. E. M. Goring, was born at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, September 27, 1852, and after graduating from the public schools was for some time associated with his father in the drug and stationery business at Cring Hall. In 1878 he entered the employ of Sweet, Orr & Co., who recognized his abilities in 1884 in appointing him to his present position.

Mr. Goring's abilities and kindly disposition have won him a firm place in the regard of the community at large, and, although his views on the Temperance question are somewhat in advance of the sentiment in that locality, he received a hearty support as candidate for the office of president of the village.

He is one of the three honorary members of the K. of T. No. 22, St. Andrews Guild, and is a vestryman of Zion Episcopal Church. He is also a thirty-second degree Freemason; a life member of the Lodge of Perfection; Council Princes of Jerusalem; Chapter of Rose Croix; the Consistory of New York City — the first three named orders being also of New York. He is also an illustrious noble of Mecca Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and wears a past master's jewel presented by the brethren of Wappingers Lodge No. 671, F. & A. M., on his retirement from his second term of office. Mr. Goring is also a member of Poughkeepsie Chapter No. 172, R. A. M.; King Solomon's Council No. 31, R. & S. M.; and a past senior warden of Poughkeepsie Commandery No. 43, K. T. At the Masonic fair held in Poughkeepsie in 1896 he was awarded a past master's apron, which had been offered to the past master of any lodge in Dutchess county receiving the largest vote. Mr. Goring is also a member of Lafayette Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F., Lafayette Encampment No. 95, and Evening Star Lodge No. 98, K. of P., all of Wappingers Falls, and also belongs to the Amrita Club of Poughkeepsie. In politics he is a Republican. While fully recognizing his social obligations, Mr. Goring, with all his business cares, is not without an interest in the world of sport and recreation, as is shown by his membership in the Dutchess County Golf Club, the Carthage Ice Yacht Club, and the organization known as the Long Island Wheelmen of the City of Brooklyn. He is also a member of L. A. W.

Mr. Goring's first wife was Miss Mary J. Myatt, a daughter of James Myatt, of Bridgeport, Conn. Three children were born of this union: Myatt E., Maud A. (who died September 27, 1888), and Ethel M. The mother of these passed away March 11, 1886, and May 21, 1894, Mr. Goring formed a second matrimonial alliance, his bride being Miss Martha Nelson, of Wappingers Falls. Her father, Justice Reuben W. Nelson, was born in New Jersey, of English stock, and her mother, Mary A. Phillips, was a daughter of James A. Phillips, of French ancestry.

Mr. Goring, as the able and popular superintendent of Sweet, Orr & Co.'s overall factory at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, seems to have settled in a satisfactory manner the difficult problem of maintaining the interests of his employers efficiently while establishing with the workers of the establishment a feeling of respect and esteem which eliminates friction. His genial and generous temperament enables him to find a way to secure discipline without sacrificing harmony, and the affection of the employes has been evidenced by the valuable testimonials of their regard. A genuine lover of the beauties of nature, he has thoughtfully striven to make the factory an inviting place to the eye; and from spring to fall the vine-covered buildings, with their windows and roofs brightened by a profusion of flowering plants, make a refreshing picture. In the center of the factory is a court which is made a veritable bower in the warm season, while scattered about in the various departments are potted plants, palms and ferns. There is also a greenhouse containing a large collection of plants valued for their beauty and rarity. In this connection it is appropriate to mention that Mr. Goring is also a member of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society.

JOHAN HENRY TIEMEYER. Among our thrifty, energetic citizens of German birth the subject of this biography, the well-known proprietor of the "Union Hotel" and stables at Fishkill village, is a notable figure. His untiring and well-directed energy, and wise management, qualities so thoroughly characteristic of his race, have won for him an enviable success in life from a start which could scarcely have been more discouraging.

He was born January 9, 1838, in Osna-bruck, Hanover, Germany, where his father, John Gerhard Henry Tiemeyer, owned a good-sized farm. The mother, whose maiden name was Drietchen Zurmellen, died when our subject was only six years old, leaving a family of two sons and two daughters. Until the age of fifteen, Mr. Tiemeyer enjoyed excellent educational advantages in the public school near his home, but after that time he was employed upon his father's farm. At twenty-two he came to America, and on landing in New York City he immediately secured a situation in a grocery at $3.00 per month and board. Five months later he was offered $5.00 per month at another store, and he spent four months in hard work there; but this employer failed, and he received nothing for his efforts but his board. At his next place he worked one year his wages being raised during that time from $8.00 a month to $12.00, and he then found a place where he began at $13.00 a month and stayed three years, receiving in the latter part of the term $15.00 a month. His last employer, Henry Klute, furnished him money to engage in the grocery business for himself and he accordingly opened a store on Twentieth eighth street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, where he continued successfully for a year and a half. As his landlord wished to raise his rent, Mr. Tiemeyer moved to another store near by, having by this time saved enough money to be independent as to his location. About a year later, his former landlord having come to terms, Mr. Tiemeyer took the building again, and carried on the two stores. Later he opened another, and conducted the three for a time until a brother-in-law purchased one, and after a time he sold one of the others to a clerk who had been with him for three years. He then took a trip to the "Fatherland," and on his return disposed of his last store. Having accumulated about $5,000 he purchased the store building belonging to his first landlord, and carried on business there for some time; but as real-estate in that locality was depreciating in value, he took advantage of an opportunity to exchange it for property in Kingston, N. Y. Then he engaged in soap-making, and later carried on a milk business; but after a time he moved to College Point, and while there lost all he had previously gained.

He had to begin life anew, and for several years he worked at different kinds of employment; in 1880, with the help of a friend, bought out a saloon, where for a year and a half he managed to make a living. In 1882 he purchased, in partnership with two others, the fixtures and stock of a saloon on the corner of Seventy-second street and Second avenue, New York City, for $8,000, with a lease of five years at a yearly rental of $1,200. Mr. Tiemeyer was a silent partner, and managed the business, succeeding so well that five years later he purchased the interest of one of the active partners. As the time drew near for a renewal of the lease, in 1887, the landlord raised the rent to $2,500, so Mr. Tiemeyer bought the interest of his other partner, and removed the business to the corner of Eighty-ninth street and Second avenue, where he remained four years. In 1891 he purchased his present hotel property at Fishkill, where he now lives.

On February 1, 1868, Mr. Tiemeyer was married to Miss Rebecca Meyer, daughter of Franz and Elizabeth Meyer. Of eight children born to them five are now living: Louise, Frank Henry, John M., Rudolph and Eddie. The other three died in childhood. Although Mr. and Mrs. Tiemeyer are members of the German Lutheran Church, they attend the Reformed Dutch Church at present, as the Lutherans have no organization at Fishkill. On political questions Mr. Tiemeyer generally gives his vote to the Democratic party, but he is not a politician in the strict sense. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, Empire City Lodge No. 228.

LEWIS W. GENUNG, a prominent citizen and leading business man of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, conducting a general store at Johnsville, was born February 9, 1843, at Swartout, in the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, and comes from one of the good old families of the community, which is probably of French origin. His paternal grandfather, after his marriage, located on a farm in the town of Fishkill, where he reared his three sons: Adrian, the father of our subject; Joseph, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; and Benjamin, a farmer of Wayne county, New York.

In the town of Fishkill Adrian Genung was born, and on attaining to man's estate was united in marriage with Miss Susan Boice, whose birth occurred in the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county. Her father, Isaac Boice, was also a native of Dutchess county, and a carpenter by occupation. After their marriage the young couple located at Swartoutville, where the father engaged in merchandising for many years, but later in life turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, dying upon his farm in East Fishkill town in 1880. He was a man of the strictest integrity, and a Democrat in political sentiment. His wife passed away in 1885. Of the seven children born to them, four died in infancy, and Ella is also now deceased; Adriana married Willet Pierce, a butcher; Lewis W. completes the family.

Our subject's early life was spent at Swartoutville, and after finishing his education he engaged in teaching for about ten years, principally in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county. In February, 1866, he married Miss Mary E. Pierce, who was born at Johnsville, and is a daughter of Caleb Pierce, a native of East Fishkill, and a farmer and butcher by occupation. For three years after their marriage they continued to live at Johnsville, but at the end of that time removed to Lagrange town, where Mr. Genung followed the profession of school teaching. Returning to Johnsville in 1878, he opened his present store, which he has since successfully conducted, and as a business man is straightforward and honorable in all his dealings. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Genung: Fred L., who assists his father in the store; and Grace E. Politically, our subject is identified with the Republican party, and was appointed postmaster at Johnsville shortly after the close of the Civil war, which position he has held almost continuously since; he is also notary public. He is a most highly esteemed citizen.

BENJAMIN F. TREEN, a prominent citizen of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, and superintendent of the extensive straw works, was born in Wallace, Nova Scotia, March 27, 1848.

His ancestors came from England at an early period, and his great-grandfather, Joseph Treen, and his grandparents, Joseph and Mary Treen, were residents of Nova Scotia. His father, William Treen, married Mary a daughter of Benjamin Cook, and had six children: Joseph, Benjamin F., Edward, Ellen, Elizabeth and Mary Jane. William Treen was a prominent ship builder, and often sailed as captain of one of his vessels. He was lost at sea in 1855, his brig, the "Mary Jane," being wrecked off the coast of Nova Scotia.

Benjamin F. Treen received his early education in the public schools of his native place, and at the age of fifteen entered the employ of Thomas Flynn to learn to make fine custom boots and shoes. After working at this trade for five years, he came to the United States and found employment at Holliston, Mass., with Peter R. Johnson, a boot and shoe manufacturer, for whom he worked one year. For the next ten years he was engaged in clerking for Timothy Daniels in the retail grocery and dry-goods business, and he then became interested in the manufacture of straw goods, and worked three years with D. C. Mowrey & Co., learning the details of hat making. This done, he became superintendent of B. H. Spaulding's straw hat factory at Milford, Mass., and two years later he came to Matteawan to take charge of the plant of the Matteawan Manufacturing Co. He resigned this position after seven years to accept a similar one with W. H. Mase, but in two years he returned to the former company, with which he has since been connected as superintendent. He is now a stockholder and the secretary of the company, of which Leonard M. Hills and Frank E. Whitman, of Amherst, Mass., are the principal members.

On December 20, 1876, Mr. Treen married Miss Ida Frances Blake, daughter of Johnson R. and Abbie S. (Gunn) Blake, of Greenwich, N. Y., and has two daughters, Marion Louise and Emma Gertrude. The family attend the Presbyterian Church, and take a generous interest in various philanthropic movements. In politics Mr. Treen is a Republican, and he is at present a member of the board of education. He is a member of the Matteawan Club, and of the Masonic order, Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M., Matteawan; Highland Chapter No. 52, R. A. M., Newburg; Hudson River Commandery No. 35, K. T., Newburg, and Mecca Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., New York City.

BENJAMIN W. VAN WYCK, a prominent citizen of Poughkeepsie, and senior partner of the firm of Van Wyck & Collins, which owns the extensive marble and granite works at Nos. 175 and 177 Main street, was born October 27, 1835, in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county.

Theodorus Van Wyck, great-grandfather of our subject, was one of three brothers who emigrated from Holland, and, coming to the United States, settled on a farm at Jamaica, Queens county, Long Island. There they were all married, and two of the brothers, John and Abram, remained and reared their families; Theodorus Van Wyck settled at Hempstead, Queens county, Long Island, and there Samuel, grandfather of Benjamin, was born. He married Katura Sammis, who was born in that locality, and in 1792 came to Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, settling on a farm. A family of six children were born to this couple, of which the following names are given: Charles, Walter, Cornelia and Betsey. Samuel Van Wyck followed farming during his life and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church.

Charles Van Wyck, father of our subject, was born in 1806, in Pleasant Valley. He was married in 1822 to Miss Eliza Ruger, who was of Dutch descent, and was born in Pleasant Valley. Five children were born of this union: Mary E. is the wife of Henry M. Owen, a farmer in Pleasant Valley; Lewis is a machinist at Newburg; Amelia died in 1858; Benjamin W. is our subject; Mart died in infancy. The father was a machinist and worked in the mill at Pleasant Valley. He was a Whig in politics, and both parents were members of the Presbyterian Church. He was very domestic in his tastes, fond of his home and family, and highly respected by all who knew him. He died May 15, 1883; his wife died July 9, 1896, at the advanced age of about eighty-seven years.

Benjamin W. Van Wyck, our subject, continued his early education in the schools of his native village, and when old enough began learning the trade of a marble-cutter at Fishkill. Later he went to Glens Falls, where he perfected himself in the business, and in 1848 finished his schooling at the Oswego Institute. He then went into the marble business in Pleasant Valley; but had hardly more than made a beginning when the Civil war broke out, and he felt it his duty to rally to the defense of the Union. On September 4, 1862, he enlisted in Company D, 128th N. Y. and served throughout the war, being discharged July 12, 1865. He was with Barlow on the Red River (La.) campaign, and with Sheridan during the Shenandoah Valley campaign, also in the battle at Cedar Creek, where he had a narrow escape from death, and was in other important engagements. On his return from the war he took up his residence in Poughkeepsie, where he worked for a time in the marble works of Haxby & Miller. In April, 1867, he bought the interest of Mr. Haxby, the firm then becoming Miller & Van Wyck. This partnership lasted until the death of Mr. Miller in 1878, and for the succeeding twenty years Mr. Van Wyck had sole control of the business. In 1881 he sold a half interest to Mr. Collins, and the present firm of Van Wyck & Collins was organized.

B. M. ...

In the extensive works owned by this firm all kinds of marble work is done, such as interior work in buildings, vault linings, wainscoting and flooring, table and buffet tops, as well as monuments. Mr. Van Wyck was the first dealer in this part of the State to introduce granite work to supersede that of marble, in this line, and they are well equipped with steam machinery, etc., to turn out very fine specimens, both in design and workmanship. They also keep on hand all kinds of encaustic tiles, grates, fireplaces and brass goods for the time. They buy stock in the rough, and cut and polish to suit their trade. Their steam plant and other accessories have been twice enlarged so that they have now one of the best manufactories in the State, and turn out superior work in every line of their business. The integrity and fair dealing of the firm is well known, and it has a high reputation in business circles.

Mr. Van Wyck was married October 11, 1865, to Miss Mary L., daughter of Alfred C. Van Vlack, of the town of Unionvale. Her father, generally known as Major Van Vlack, of Dutch descent and a miller by occupation. No children have been born to this union. Mr. and Mrs. Van Wyck are members of the First Reformed Dutch Church, and are highly esteemed by all who know them. Our subject is a Republican, but has never consented to hold office. He is public-spirited, a loyal citizen, and always ready to assist in worthy enterprises. He is a member of the A. M. and the G. A. R.

EDWARD EVERETT HAVENS, a well-known dealer in groceries and provisions on Main street, Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, is one of the leading business men of that town, and is noted not only for prudence and sagacity in that enterprise, but for the energy which carries his plans to successful completion.

He was a native of the beautiful village in which he now resides. His father, Joseph F. Havens, was born in New London, Conn., and he and his wife, Katherine O'Shaughnessy, are still living. Of their twelve children, eleven survive, the eldest being now about forty years of age, and the youngest seventeen. Their names are: Rhodolphus Augustave; Joseph Francis; Edward Everett, our subject; Catherine, who died in infancy;

Adella, William, James Henry, Maryette, Sanford Wilson, Lewis H., Herman and Walter.

The paternal grandparents of Edward Everett were Silas and Maryette (Griffin) Havens. The former was born February 4, 1794, and died January 20, 1857; the latter was born December 6, 1809, and died April 18, 1884. They had twelve children, whose family history is as follows: (1) Silas Nathaniel Havens, born March 2, 1827, married Arabella Smith February 24, 1858; no children. (2) Sabroh Angeline, born April 7, 1829, married Samuel Beckwith March 15, 1853; nine children—Fannie Maryette, who was born October 3, 1855 (married Jerome Munger January 1, 1882, and has two children, Mina Estella, born July 23, 1883, and Emma May, born May 21, 1885, died May 4, 1886); Wilbur Wilson, born April 1, 1857; Albert, born April 28, 1858, died April 4, 1886; Flora Elvira, born September 4, 1862; Emery Melvin, born January 7, 1864; Angie Alida, born April 27, 1865; Effie May, born June 4, 1867; Emma Estelle, born April 12, 1869, died June 12, 1884; Edna Luella, born November 12, 1870. (3) Cynthia Margett, born February 1, 1831, married March 2, 1849, Nathaniel B. Crocker, who died July 3, 1864; five children—Nelson Steadman, born May 27, 1851, died September 24, 1851; Allen Wilson, born February 11, 1853, died September 6, 1853; Alfred Walter, born February 11, 1853, died August 12, 1853; Ella Maryette, born August 27, 1855, married Edmund Smith May 7, 1873, and has one child, Millie Smith, born October 1, 1874 (Ella Maryette was again married, this time February 8, 1885, to Arthur Baker); and Perry Willis, born March 2, 1860, died January 26, 1861. (4) Sanford Wilson, born March 5, 1833, married October 8, 1857, Laura Ellen Gallup; one child—Walter Louis, born December 29, 1861. (5) Joseph Francis, born April 26, 1835, married Katherine O'Shaughnessy, August 5, 1855; twelve children—Rhodolphus Augustave, born June 24, 1856 (married Ella Corcan, November 25, 1877, and has three children, Katie A., born December 1, 1878; Ella, born October 15, 1879, died September 5, 1881; and Mary G., born November 25, 1882); Joseph Francis, Jr., born March 1, 1858, married Jennie Benedict, May 9, 1883; Edward Everett, whose sketch appears below; Katie, born June 5, 1862, died July 6, 1864; Adella, born June 25, 1864, married to Philip Knapp, May 12, 1883; William S., born May 21, 1866; James Henry, born March 7, 1868; Sandford W., born December 12, 1869; Margetta, born August 26, 1870; Lewis H., born January 12, 1873; Herman, born August 5, 1875; Walter Lee, born May 21, 1876. (6) Nelson Monroe, born November 12, 1837, married Mary A. Luce, December 14, 1862; two children—Jennie Marian, born June 5, 1868, died April 21, 1869; and James Luce, born August 25, 1871. (7) Melissa Jane, born October 22, 1840, married William F. Beckwith, March 17, 1858; two children—Elmer Leslie, born April 16, 1866; and Elsie Melissa, born November 12, 1874. (8) Alfred Word- ing, born October 29, 1842, married Mary B. Chapman, May 1, 1872; one child—Willis Monroe, born May 17, 1875. (9) Sophia Amelia, born December 4, 1844, married James Valentine Luce, December 30, 1860. (10) Terrie Florella, born May 18, 1847, married James Valentine Luce, December 2, 1883; one child—Laura Sophia, born May 12, 1885. (11) Wilbur Edson, born October 29, 1849, married Lottie Rosella Jordan, November 25, 1875; three children—Arthur Edson, born September 26, 1876; Florence Rosella, born March 13, 1878; and Edith Gertrude, born November 16, 1879. (12) Herman Edgar, born February 8, 1854, married Jessie Fremont Beebe, February 7, 1882; one child—Myrtle Sophia, born December 23, 1882.

Edward Everett Havens, the subject of our sketch, was born February 9, 1861, and was educated in the public schools of Fishkill. On leaving school at about the age of fourteen, he secured a situation as clerk in the grocery store of R. H. Delaney, in the town of Beekman. He remained there three years, and then went to work in the A. T. Stewart mill at Glenham, and during the three or four years spent there learned several different trades connected with the manufacture of woolen cloth. After leaving this place he entered the employ of Rev. Father McSweegan, in Matteawan, and for about a year worked on church improvements, and the next four years were spent with James A. Murray, a carpenter and builder. In October, 1886, the business in which he is now engaged was founded, beginning in the building next door to his present establishment, which he erected in 1892.

Mr. Havens' partner in life's joys and sorrows was Miss Mary C. McCarroll, a daughter of Robert and Mary McCarroll. They have four children: John E., Mary A., Robert Francis, and James Herman. They are members of the Roman Catholic Church at Fishkill.

In politics Mr. Havens is a Democrat, and he has been the candidate of his party for commissioner of the poor, and also for trustee of the village. As the town is generally Republican, and as the years in which he led the forlorn hope exceptionally unfavorable for the Democratic party, he was defeated. He is a member of Dutchess Council C. B. L., and at present its treasurer. He is also a member of the Catholic Knights of America, member No. 49120, of the Catholic Benevolent Society and of Court Queen of the Hudson No. 8119. A. O. F. of A.

FRANK M. EDMOND is one of the most able and enterprising young business men of Matteawan, Dutchess county, the inventor of a wire-spring support for upholstered chairs and car seats, which promises well, his patent having been obtained and a company formed for the manufacture and sale of the appliance with Ross Judson, president, Samuel K. Phillips, secretary and treasurer, and Mr. Edmond as superintendent. No one who knows Mr. Edmond will fail to wish him well in this new undertaking, as his courageous and energetic efforts during past business reverses have won universal admiration and good will.

He is a son of the late William Roman Edmond, who for over twenty years was stockholder in the Matteawan Hat Manufacturing Co., and the foreman of its extensive works. He was a native of Windham, Green Co., N. Y., and went to Matteawan at the time the late Lewis Tompkins and the Matthews brothers began their investments in the hat business at that place. He died of paralysis July 10, 1889, his wife, formerly Mary L. Bump, and six sons surviving him. Our subject is one of eight children: George; Addison, who died in childhood; Nelson; William; Frank M.; James; Horace; and Lucius, who died in early youth.

Frank M. Edmond was born February 1, 1863, and resided at Matteawan throughout his early life, attending the public schools until the age of twenty, and later working in a straw-hat factory. After six or seven years of that employment he engaged in the furniture business at Fishkill Landing in partnership with Mr. Otto Deicke, one of the best upholsterers and carriage trimmers to be found on the Hudson. This partnership was terminated four years later by the death of Mr. Deicke; but his interest was taken by his son Herman and the firm continued for another year under the same style of Deicke & Edmond. The business had prospered, and the firm was carrying at this time a full line of household goods, including stoves and ranges, but their trade was largely "on time", and when the business depression came and their customers were unable to meet their obligations, the firm was forced to discontinue. Mr. Edmond was thus compelled to make a new start in life, but he had his tools and an abundant supply of "pure grit", which in combination with his gained abilities were a sufficient capital. In 1891 he began work in repairing bicycles and upholstering furniture, and his success enabled him to open a shop of his own in Matteawan on Main street, under the "Dibble House", in the spring of 1896. He also holds the agency for a fine line of bicycles, and is at present the manager of Scharbauer & Sargent's Bicycle Manufacturing and Repair Shops.

On June 4, 1890, Mr. Edmond married Miss Emma Deicke, a daughter of his former partner, Otto Deicke, and his wife, Marie Deicke. They have two children, Romain and Martha, and reside in a pleasant home on Washington avenue, Matteawan. Both attend the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Edmond is a member of the I. O. O. F., Evergreen Lodge, Matteawan. He has always voted the Democratic ticket.

DANIEL H. MONKS, a well-known resident of Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born August 19, 1858, in Dublin, Ireland. His family has been prominent in that city for many years, and his father, the late William Monks, a native of the place and a man of independent means, passed the greater part of his life there. With his wife, Anna (Murphy), and their family, he came to America to spend his last years, and his death occurred in the town of New Windsor, Orange Co., N. Y. He took a keen interest in all the questions of the day, and especially in political problems, his sympathies being with the Democratic party. In religious faith he was a Roman Catholic, as was his estimable wife, who survives him.

Of their seven children, the eldest, James, gave his life for his adopted country, dying in Andersonville prison in the latter part of 1864. He enlisted first in the 168th N. Y. V. I., and, after receiving an honorable discharge at the end of two years' service, he re-enlisted, this time in the 15th N. Y. Cav. He was captured three times, and the cruel hardships of the historic stockade at Andersonville finally proved too much for his gallant spirit and once strong and healthy frame. The other members of the family were: Margaret (deceased), formerly the wife of James A. Dunn, an undertaker at Newburgh, N. Y.; Mary, wife of Nicholas Lee, of Newburgh; John, a liquor dealer in the same city; Daniel H., our subject; Fannie, wife of Robert Greening, of New Windsor, N. Y.; and Anna (deceased).

D. H. Monks was but a child when his parents came to this country, and his youth was spent mainly in Newburgh. He learned the business of molding iron and brass, which he followed for some time; but in 1889 he engaged in the retail liquor business at Fishkill Landing. Since 1890 he has carried on a wholesale trade, making a specialty of Howard & Child's beer.

Mr. Monks was married, in 1886, to Miss Elizabeth Smith, of Fishkill Landing, a daughter of James Smith, whose ancestors came originally from the Emerald Isle. No children were born of this union. In politics Mr. Monks is a Democrat, and he is a prominent member of St. John's Roman Catholic Church at Fishkill.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON DUDLEY. The Dudley family is of English origin, and the branch to which the subject of this sketch belongs traces its lineage to Lord Guilford Dudley and his wife, Lady Jane Grey. The first of the line to come to America left Leicestershire, England, at a very early period, and located in New England, where his descendants have been prominent in various walks of life, some having been Governors of States.

Asael Dudley, our subject's grandfather, married Hannah Woodhouse. He died May 31, 1830, in the eighty-second year of his age, and his wife on December 16, 1831, at the age of eighty-three. Their son, Joseph S. Dudley, our subject's father, was born in Wilton, Conn., in 1786, and died September 16, 1865. He was a tanner and currier by trade, and owned a tannery at Hughsonville. His wife, Betsey (Cole), was a daughter of William Cole, of Wilton, Conn. She was born in 1790, and died January 10, 1855. Of their nine children only two survive. John died in infancy; William S. in 1867; Harriet in 1891; John G. on April 24, 1867; Charles H., born October 24, 1823, and died September 17, 1850; Joseph H. is still living; George W., born May 21, 1828, died January 23, 1848; Alexander H. is the subject of this sketch; Hannah M. died October 14, 1869.

Alexander Hamilton Dudley was born April 24, 1830, in the town of Peekskill, Westchester Co., N. Y., and was educated in the district schools of that locality, and at Wilton Academy, Wilton, Conn., where he remained one year. On leaving school he went to New York City and engaged in the business of buying and tearing down old buildings, and selling the materials. His office was located on 23rd street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. In 1864, after eighteen years in this business, he moved to Brinckerhoff, Dutchess county, and purchased the Starr gristmill, which he has conducted ever since. The water privileges on this property are excellent as he has never been obliged to shut down during the driest season. There is an interesting history connected with the mill also, as it stands upon the site of one which was burned by the Hessians during the Revolutionary war, and was built, by order of Gen. Washington, by a detail of soldiers belonging to the Colonial forces. There is not a sawed stick in it, all have been hewed from solid hardwood and mortised together, and it bids fair to stand as solidly as ever through many years to come. On December 23, 1859, Mr. Dudley was married to Miss Frances S. Hamilton, who was born November 27, 1827, the daughter of William Hamilton. Her death occurred November 14, 1885, and Mr. Dudley afterward wedded Mrs. Mary (Brett) Fountain, daughter of James and Helen (White) Brett, and widow of Hosea Fountain, by whom she had one child. Politically, Mr. Dudley is a Republican, and a member of the Reformed Church at Fishkill.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TEN-BROECK, an agriculturist whose progressive and scientific management has made him one of the successful men of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born July 8, 1830, at Livingston, Columbia Co., N. Y. The district schools of that day afforded but limited educational opportunities; but such as they were he made the most of them, and by intelligent observation and constant reading he has since acquired thorough information upon many subjects, and especially upon branches of science relating to his occupation.

Mr. Ten Broeck remained at the homestead until he was twenty-five years of age, and April 1, 1854, he purchased a farm near Rhinebeck; but two years later sold this property and moved to the estate upon which he has now resided for forty-one years. He possesses fine executive ability, and the 160 acres of land to which he devotes his attention are kept in a high state of cultivation. In 1866 he became a life member of the New York State Agricultural Society, and he has always taken a prominent part in local affairs; but although he is a firm supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, he has never held public office, having refused to serve when elected. He was married in 1855 to Helen U. Schultz, daughter of Peter I. Schultz, of Rhinebeck, and has had eight children: Derrick Wessel; Peter S., who died at the age of eight years; Heler R. (Mrs. Wallace Traver); Albertina S., who is at home; Jane L., who died at the age of twenty-one years; and Mary E., Lucys and Walter T. L., who are all at home. Mrs. Ten Broeck is a leading member of the Reformed Church at Rhinebeck, and a generous worker in its varied lines of effort.

The Ten Broeck family is one of the oldest and most distinguished in America, and our subject is one of the seventh generation from Wessel W. Ten Broeck, of Munster (a city of Westphalia, Prussia, situated near the border line of Holland), who landed at New Amsterdam in 1626 in company with the Hon. Peter Minnit, third director of the Holland West India Company. (Cornelius May, of Hoorn, having been its first director, in 1624, and William Van Hulst its second director, in 1625). And when we reflect that the first known outline map of New Belgium (now New York), its accurate as it was, was made in 1618; that Boston was only settled in 1630, and Maryland in 1632; that when this ancestor of the Ten Broecks came to this country in 1626, New Amsterdam (now the mighty city of New York) contained only 270 souls, including men, women and children; that Albany, the capital of our great Empire State, contained only twenty-six inhabitants, including one white man; it may be truly said that Director Minnit and his protégé, Ten Broeck, came to New Belgium when it was a very feeble colony, and, dating from that origin, this family is one of the most ancient in the New World.

W. L. DeBrock

Nor were the early ancestors unknown or distinguished. The first settler became the most extensive merchant of his day at Albany; and the historical records of New York show that in 1689 Dirck Wessel Ten Broeck, his son, was employed by Gov. Dougan as emissary to Canada to settle matters of Provincial difficulty; and that in the same year he was his majesty's recorder of the city of Albany; and in 1690 the same recorder is certified to with high commendation for energy and philanthropy in relieving the people of Schenectady from suffering, after the destruction of their town by the French and Indians; and subsequently for his great zeal in furthering the Governor's designs against the French invasion then in progress. Guided by such lights, we can safely assume that the father and son, for that primitive day, were no ordinary men; but it is foreign to this notice to attempt the history of the whole family.

Other descendants, too, have shared much public honor and confidence, and it may not be inopportune to say: That the able and patriotic correspondence of Abraham Ten Broeck, president of the committee of safety of New York, with Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress; the polish and eloquent power of Derick Ten Broeck, his son, for three sessions speaker of the House of Assembly of the State of New York; and the gallantry of Maj. Leonard Ten Broeck (the grandfather of our subject) at the taking of Burgoyne, are matters of history so clear that no historical scholar will question the general talent, influence or gallantry of the descendants of the original emigrant.

Mr. Ten Broeck's father, the late Gen. Leonard W. Ten Broeck, served as a member of the State Assembly, and one term as sheriff of Columbia county, and was one of the most influential and popular men of his day. On the maternal side our subject is a grandson of Walter T. Livingston, of Clermont, a representative of another family distinguished from the earliest periods of our country's history.

Capt. Samuel Ten Broeck, an elder brother of our subject, born in Livingston June 5, 1826, just 200 years after the landing of his ancestor in this country, was a soldier in our Civil war, and a hero worthy of the patriotic blood of these illustrious families, identified with the Declaration of Independence and the stern trials of our Revolutionary struggle. He devoted some years of his life to mercantile pursuits, but at the outbreak of the Rebellion he was one of the first to respond to the call to arms, joining Company M, 5th N. Y. V. C., and from that time his every energy was given to his country. He died July 4, 1863, leaving a wife, son and daughter, the parting from them being his severest trial. Columbia county mourned the death of this generous and chivalric officer; on the day of his burial the flags of the shipping and public buildings at Hudson, a point twelve miles distant from his residence and place of burial, were lowered to half-mast; and a concourse, unequalled by numbers in that section of country upon any previous occasion, escorted his earthly remains to their last spot of rest—and affection deposited in his grave many a sprig of evergreen dedicated to his virtues and his memory. But the finale is so graphically told by one who knew and loved him well, in an obituary notice published the day succeeding his death, that we will close this notice by its insertion as follows:

Capt. Ten Broeck was one of nature's noblemen—one of the very few so happily constituted that he had no enemies, but many ardent, ardent friends; his nature was so genial, his benevolence so expansive, his affections so enthusiastic, that, as husband, parent, brother, friend, his loss is irreparable, and, therefore, deeply and widely mourned.

As Masonic brother, his heart and hand were in many charitable offices, and the tear of sorrow has often been hushed from the orphan's eye. As a companion, the light of many a social circle has been dimmed; as husband, father, and friend, his voice of cheerful kindness has been hushed forever, to leave a sad and aching void.

Capt. Ten Broeck was widely known and valued in Columbia county as a judicious and public-spirited citizen, having served as a member in its board of supervisors with marked ability, and as a member of the Assembly from its Second District in 1856.

But his brightest phase of character was unswerving patriotism which shone forth brilliantly in the first booming of rebellious cannon upon the stars and stripes at Fort Sumter. Descended from a stock who were among the first settlers of this country, and whose swords leaped gallantly from the scabbards in the trials of 1776, his soul burned with native fire to resent the impious insult to our flag, and he early volunteered in a New York cavalry corps, where, amidst other active services, he endured such exposure and fatigue while following his admirable leader three weeks in the saddle, almost without intermission, that he was sent on a furlough to his home, a victim of severe typhoid fever; and, after partial recovery, urged on by over anxiety to be with his regiment and in the service of his country, he returned too soon to the scene of conflict, and still too weak to follow in the train of his intrepid commander, was intrusted with command of the camp, until, borne down by insidious disease, he came home on a thirty-days' furlough to recover, if possible, yet so spent that in three days after his arrival, surrounded by his loved ones and in his own house, that manly spirit took flight. Farewell, dear Captain; our national day of jubilee was a fitting one for the death of so devoted a patriot.

RICHARD COURTLAND HORTON is the owner of a property in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, his handsome residence being set off by a back ground of dense foliage, while the grounds are intersected by winding paths, the whole presenting a most attractive appearance. The farm, which comprises 130 acres, has been brought to a high state of cultivation through the untiring efforts of our subject, and yields bountiful harvests.

Mr. Horton was born at Gayhead, town of East Fishkill, August 2, 1832, and is a lineal descendant of Barnabas Horton, who came from England to this country, in 1640, locating in Southhold, Long Island. A wing of the old house which he erected in that year is yet standing and the property is still in the possession of the Horton family. He was a minister of the Gospel, and a most excellent man.

Capt. Joseph Horton, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born at Southhold, Long Island, and there grew to manhood. He removed to New York City, and from there to Moodna, Ulster (afterward Orange) county, where his death occurred. During the Revolutionary war he had the pleasure of entertaining Gen. La Fayette and Gen. Washington at the old home. He married Miss Jane Van-Voorhis, and to them were born two sons and several daughters. Of the former, Jacob never married and lived but a short time after they located at Gayhead; Courtland was the grandfather of our subject. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Horton purchased the property at Gayhead, in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county (now owned and occupied by our subject), and at her death was buried at Hopewell, while her husband was interred on Murders creek, or Moodna.

Courtland Horton was born at Murders Creek, in Orange county, N. Y., and was quite a young man when he came to Dutchess county. He wedded Hannah Van Wyck Brinckerhoff, who was born at Hopewell, in the town of East Fishkill, where Mr. L. C. Rapalje now lives. After their marriage they located at the old homestead, where they reared their four children: Richard Van Wyck, who died when a young man; John G., who was also quite young at the time of his death; Jane, who died unmarried; and Jacob, the father of our subject. The three former were never married. The grandfather was a prominent man of his time, was a merchant at Gayhead, and was also a large landholder in the locality. Religiously he was a member of the Reformed Dutch Church, and his political support was given the Whig party.

At the old homestead at Gayhead the birth of Jacob Horton occurred, and on reaching manhood he also followed farming and merchandising at that place. He took an active part in religious affairs, assisting in the erection of the Reformed Dutch church, of which he was a member, and was first a Whig in politics, later a Republican. He married Dian Storm, a native of Hopewell, and a daughter of Col. John Storm. Her death occurred August 16, 1840, that of her husband on March 9, 1865. In the family were six children, all: Jane, who married Edward H. Seely, Brooklyn; Richard Courtland, subject of this sketch; John Storm; Jacob, who was a minister of the Gospel, and died in Bethel, Maine; Diana, who married Henry W. Brower, New York City; and Elizabeth Van Wyck. The last three are brother and half-sisters of our subject.

Upon the farm where he still resides, Richard Courtland Horton passed his early life, attending the local schools, and later pursuing his studies at Danbury, Conn., at the American Seminary, and at Newburg, N. Y. After finishing his education he returned to the home place, where he has since resided. He was married to Miss Mary Brown, a native of Newburg, and a daughter of Judge John W. Brown, who was born in Dundee, Scotland, and held many public offices in the State, among them that of Supreme Court Judge for sixteen years, and latterly justice of the court of appeals. Two children graced this union: Mary Brown, wife of William A. Adriance, of Poughkeepsie; and Ralph Courtland, of New York City.

Since 1852 Mr. Horton has given his attention exclusively to agricultural pursuits. Politically, he is a Republican, and in 1844 was appointed postmaster at Gayhead, in which position he faithfully filled for thirty years. Both himself and wife are members of the Reformed Church, and they certainly well deserve the high regard in which they are held by all who know them. Their beautiful home icates the refined and cultured taste of the inmates, and its hospitable doors are ever open to the reception of their many friends.

LEONARD V. PIERCE, a substantial and progressive horticulturist of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, is one of the most extensive grape growers in this section of the State, having upon his place several varieties of fancy grapes. He has been visited by many of the leading men engaged in that particular industry from all over the country, and his fruit farm has often been referred to in articles on the grape subject in horticultural magazines.

A native of Dutchess county, Mr. Pierce was born in the town of Beekman, March 18, 1812, and the family have mostly made their homes in that county for the last century, his grandfather, Daniel Pierce, having come from Westchester county about 100 years ago. He followed the vocations of carpenter and planer.

Isaac Pierce, the father of our subject, was one of the fourteen children born to Daniel Pierce, his birth occurring in the town of East Fishkill, where he grew to manhood upon a farm. In early life he learned the tailor's trade, was later an agriculturist, and still later in life conducted a general store at Johnsville, Dutchess county. His political support was given to the Whig party until its dissolution, when he became a Republican.

Isaac Pierce married Jane E. Wilcox, who was also born in the town of East Fishkill, and was a daughter of Abner Wilcox, a native of Dutchess county, and a farmer by occupation. Six children blessed this union: Elizabeth, who married Abraham Stout, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; Leonard V. our subject; Louisa, widow of Abraham W. W., a wagonmaker; Cora, wife of William H. Griffin, an agriculturist of East Fishkill; Annette, who married DeWitt Conover (both are now deceased); Mary J., wife of Deborn Wixon, a farmer of East Fishkill. His mother died in 1888, the father in 1893, and he is respected by all who knew them.

The childhood of our subject was passed in the town of Beekman, but the greater part of his life was spent in East Fishkill. For eight years he clerked in the store of his father at Johnsville, since which time he has been engaged in the culture of fruit with most satisfactory results, upon his present farm of seventy acres. He also raises vegetables, but gives his special attention to his vineyards, in which he may well take a just pride.

On December 31, 1868, Mr. Pierce was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Way, who was born at Johnsville, and is a daughter of Abraham Way, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill, and a wagonmaker by trade. At their present comfortable home, which was erected by Mr. Pierce, he and his wife began their domestic life, and two sons came to brighten the household: Walter S. and Henry B. Like his father, our subject is a Republican in politics, has served as collector and supervisor of the town of East Fishkill, and was postmaster of the village of Johnsville for many years, which position he held to the satisfaction of all concerned. For about ten years he was vice-president of the Dutchess County Agricultural Society, and was also superintendent of the fruit and flower department.

WINTHROP SARGENT, of "Wodenethe," a charming country estate in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, finds in this highly-favored region an environment most congenial to a man of fine culture and artistic tastes. He was born in the city of New York, April 3, 1840, the eldest in a family of four children, of whom he is now the only survivor.

Henry Winthrop Sargent (his father), of Boston, Mass., for some years was a member of the firm of Gracie & Sargent, agents in that city of Welles & Company, of Paris, France, the earliest American bankers in Europe. Samuel Welles, the head of the house, was his uncle. The mother of Winthrop Sargent was Caroline, only child of Francis Olmsted, a member of the old New York firm of Peter Remsen & Company.

When Winthrop Sargent was but a few months old, H. W. Sargent, having retired from business, purchased a country estate in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he resided until his death in 1882. He soon became one of the leading horticulturists of the country, and exhibited in the gardens and grounds of "Wodenethe" the highest skill in cultivation, and in the art of landscape gardening. At the death of his mother in 1887, Mr. Winthrop Sargent inherited "Wodenethe," where he had lived since infancy, and where he continues to spend his summers, passing the winter months in Boston.

Winthrop Sargent was graduated from Harvard College in the class of 1862, and from the Harvard Law School in 1864. Since the year 1766, in this college, all of the men of his family have received their education. After leaving Harvard, Mr. Sargent made an extended tour in Europe. He was married in 1873 to Miss Aimee Rotch, daughter of the late B. S. Rotch, Esq., of Boston, and granddaughter of the Hon. Abbott Lawrence, who, through two administrations, was United States minister to the Court of St. James. The Rotch family were old and honored residents of New Bedford, Mass.; one of their early ancestors was Francis Rotch, the owner of the "Dartmouth," the ship from which 114 chests of tea were thrown overboard in 1773, by the indignant Colonists of Boston, disguised as Indians.

Mr. Sargent's first American ancestor was William Sargent, who came to this country from Exeter, England, in 1650, and settled on Cape Ann, Massachusetts, where he had a grant of land. His eldest son married a granddaughter of John Winthrop, first Colonial Governor of Massachusetts, since which time there has been a Winthrop Sargent in each generation of the family. A grandson of William Sargent was severely wounded in the battle of Bunker Hill; another grandson, Winthrop Sargent, commanded a sloop of war in 1745; his son, Winthrop Sargent, was a distinguished officer in the war of the Revolution, and fought at the battles of Trenton, Brandywine and Germantown, and endured the privations at Valley Forge. He was at one time adjutant-general to Gen. Wayne, and at another time was aid-de-camp to Gen. Howe, and was greatly distinguished by Gen. Washington. Later he became Governor of the Mississippi Territory under the administration of President John Adams.

Three members of the Sargent family rendered distinguished service in the war of the Rebellion, one of whom was killed in battle. A curiously romantic story has been handed down through the generations of the Sargent family since 1738. In the reign of James I, of England, there lived in London one Master George Heriot, goldsmith to the King, and, if report has spoken truly, a lender of large sums of money to that monarch. Sir Walter Scott made him a prominent character in his novel called the "Fortunes of Nigel," in which the King familiarly calls him "Jingling Geordie." Some exquisite specimens of gold and silver work are still shown in England as the work of Heriot. It is related that one day, through the carelessness of the attendant, the only daughter of Master Heriot, a child tender age, fell from the window of his house on London Bridge into the Thames below. One of her father's apprentices, Francis Osborne, seeing this, jumped from a window into the water, and saved the child from death. After some years had passed, Francis Osborne married his master's daughter, whose life he had saved; succeeded to his business, became a great merchant, and, like Whittington, was thrice Lord Mayor of London, and was knighted by King Charles I. One of his direct descendants was afterward ennobled, and that branch has held in succession to the present day the title and estates of the Duke of Leeds. While this was going on in England, a more distant descendant of Sir Francis Osborne found his way to this country in the early Colonial days and settled in Rhode Island. One of his descendants, Hon. John Osborne, became a prominent citizen of Boston, and his daughter married in 1738, a great-great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch.

ADOLPH G. HUPFEL. One of the most beautiful and well-appointed estates in this region of elegant country homes is the 100-acre farm, near Johnsville, belonging to the subject of this sketch. Nature did much for it, but no expense has been spared to add to those attractions all the improvements which artistic taste and utility could desire.

Mr. Hupfel was born August 13, 1841, in Orange county, N. Y., the son of Adolph and Catherine Glaser (née Bross), the former a native of Neviiges, Prussia, the latter being of Holland. The family of Adolph Glaser was of some note in Prussia, he enjoying the distinction of Burgomaster of Neviiges, and holding other important local offices; took part in the revolution of 1848, was banished, and when a general amnesty was declared he returned to his native place where he taught languages. He lost all through his participation in the 1848 trouble. They passed the first year of their residence in this country in New York City, where the father worked as a cabinet aker, in 1843 removing to Orange county, N. Y., where he engaged in the manufacture of fishing rods, which he continued until his death in 1849. His widow conducted the business about three years, and then married Anton Hupfel, who took it in charge, continuing the same until 1854, when he associated himself with Roemelt & Assheimer, in the brewery business, at Nos. 223-229 38th street, New York. In 1858 he bought out his partners, and carried on the business alone until his retirement in 1873, his two stepsons, Adolph G. and John C. G. Hupfel, taking the place in partnership, under the firm name of A. Hupfel's Sons.

Adolph G. Hupfel attended the district schools of Orange county for some years and at the age of nine accompanied his parents to New York City, where he took a course in the public schools, graduating in 1861. He then spent a short time in a private school, and on leaving this entered business life at the foot of the ladder, being employed as driver of a beer wagon for two years. For the five years following he collected the debts and kept the books of the establishment, and then worked in the brewery, learning the business in all its details. His health failing at this time, he was sent to Europe to recuperate, and on his return he took charge of all the out-door interests of the brewery. After succeeding to the business in 1873, Mr. Hupfel and brother conducted it for ten years, together with another establishment, at the corner of 161st street and Third avenue, which their step-father had purchased in 1863. In 1883 John C. G. Hupfel retired from the 161st street and Third avenue plant, and our subject continued alone for about six years, when he sold a part of his interest, but continued the management. The following year he bought his farm near Jonsville, then known as the Du Bois property, now called "Echodale." There were no improvements of any kind upon it, and he has spent many thousands of dollars in bringing it to its present state of perfection. His residence is one of the finest in the county, and his barns are models of construction and arrangement; he still owns property in New York City, including a residence, but he makes his home constantly at the farm.

On April 11, 1870, Mr. Hupfel married Mrs. Catherine Kentz, of New York City, who died in February, 1871, with her only child. On May 11, 1873, Mr. Hupfel wedded her sister, Miss Magdalen Kentz, by whom he has had four children: Catherine G., who married H. W. McMann, of New York City; and Adolph G., Jr., Antoinette G., and Otto G., all three at home. In politics Mr. Hupfel is an independent Democrat.

WILLIAM BAKER. To the traveler of to-day the voyage across the Atlantic is only a short pleasure trip, and it is difficult to realize the discomforts and, perhaps, hardships endured by the emigrants to this country, before the advent of steam as a motive force.

The father of our subject, John D. Baker, a native of Germany, came to America in the early part of this century in a sailing vessel, spending six months upon the way. Among the other passengers was Miss Elizabeth Rickerts, in whom he found a sympathizer in his aspirations for the freer life in the New World. For some time after landing Mr. Baker worked on Staten Island as a common laborer, but later he became a farmer, and after marrying Miss Rickerts, settled in the town of New Paltz, Ulster county, where the subject of our sketch was born, July 16, 1820, the sixth in a family of eight children. The others were: Catherine, who married Hiram Donaldson, a farmer in Dutchess county, both deceased; Mary, the widow of the late Alanson Vail; Nancy, who married George Pray, a farmer in Dutchess county, both deceased; Jacob, deceased, a farmer and blacksmith at Freedom Plains, N. Y.; John, deceased, a carpenter and farmer at Freedom Plains and New Hackensack; Henry, a miller in the town of Unionvale, and Isaac, a resident of Lagrange township. In 1823 the father moved to a farm in Freedom Plains, where he passed his remaining years. In politics he was a Republican, and he and his wife were both members of the Presbyterian Church. He died in 1854 and his wife in 1852.

William Baker was only three years old when the family moved to Freedom Plains, where he spent his early years. At the age of twenty-one he began to learn the blacksmith's trade, and followed it at that place for about six years. In 1851 he went to Sprout Creek, and later to New Hackensack, carrying on his business successfully in both localities. He purchased his present farm in 1864, and built the house in which he now resides. His eighty acres of land have been highly improved under his judicious management, and make one of the best farms of the size in that section.

On January 25, 1849, Mr. Baker married his first wife, Miss Catherine E. Meddaugh, daughter of James Meddaugh, a well-known farmer of the town of Lagrange. Two children were born to them: Annie E., who died at an early age, and Mary, the wife of Court A. Van Voorhis, a farmer in the town of Wappinger. Mrs. Catherine Baker died December 24, 1875, and January 17, 1877, Mr. Baker was united in marriage with Harriet A. Croft, daughter of Henry D. Needham, a farmer in the town of Wappinger.

In politics, Mr. Baker is a Republican, but he does not take an active part in public affairs, preferring a quiet home life and the peaceful enjoyment of the fruits of his past labors.

WILLIS DEAN, a prominent agriculturist, residing near Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, is one of the most highly respected citizens of that county. He is descended from an old English family, and his ancestors in the American line crossed the Atlantic at a very early period. John Dean, his grandfather, was a leading farmer in the town of Kent, Putnam Co., N. Y., and Niles Dean, our subject's father, succeeded to the homestead, and followed the same occupation. He married Nancy Northrup, also a native of Putnam county, and reared a family of nine children: Milton, a farmer in Putnam county; Rensselaer, a carpenter in Patterson, N. Y.; Anner, who married Philip Smith, a farmer in Steuben county, N. Y., both now deceased; Willis, our subject; Ursula (deceased), who married the late Benjamin Stone, a farmer in Steuben county; Lafayette, an agriculturist in the same county; Jackson, a carpenter in Binghamton, N. Y.; and Oliver, a comb manufacturer in Binghamton. Our subject's father was a man of prominence in his locality, and in politics was a Whig. He died in 1837, and his wife survived him many years, departing this life in 1858.

The subject of our sketch was born at the old homestead, September 10, 1821, and remained there until he attained his majority, when he learned the butcher's trade. He followed this for two years in the same vicinity, and in 1845 moved to Glenham, Dutchess county, and about three years afterward settled in Hughsonville. He continued his business successfully until 1875, when he retired, and purchased the farm of 100 acres upon which he has since resided. A good manager, his industry and thrift have enabled him to accumulate a competency, and in addition to his farm he owns four houses in Hughsonville.

On December 22, 1846, he married his first wife, Miss Catherine Squires, a daughter of Jonathan Squires, a well-known farmer in Putnam county. She died in 1880, leaving children. In 1889 Mr. Dean married his present wife, a lady of Holland-Dutch descent, Miss Jeannie Westervelt. She is a granddaughter of George Westervelt, and a daughter of John C. Westervelt, a native of New Jersey who has been for years a prominent manufacturer and coal dealer in New York City. His mother, Cornelia Westervelt, a native of New York, is no longer living.

Mr. Dean has always endorsed the principles of the Democratic party, and has held several minor offices. The Dean family is noted for advanced views on the temperance question and other reforms, and has always been connected with the Baptist Church, which both Mr. and Mrs. Dean attend.

Seven brothers are living. The eldest, Milton, is now eighty-three, and the youngest, Oliver, is sixty-six. They have their annual reunion in the month of June. All have Christian principles, using no intoxicating liquors, speaking no profane language, and are straightforward in every respect.

HENRY B. KNICKERBOCKER, a representative and successful farmer of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, was born on February 28, 1832, upon the farm which is still his home. There his grandfather, Benjamin Knickerbocker, located over a century ago, and it has been in the family ever since. The grandfather was a man of excellent judgment, and was very successful in the operation of his land. He married Alathia Smith, by whom he had four children—two sons and two daughters—namely: Peter, Alatika, Henry, and Hannah (who became the wife of Lewis A. Pulver).

The birth of Henry Knickerbocker, the father of our subject, occurred upon the homestead in 1798, and he inherited half of the place from his father. He followed agricral pursuits throughout life, and in his earlier days also conducted a gristmill upon the farm. He was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Culver, daughter of Peter Pulver, and four children were born to them: Cornelius and Emeline (now deceased); Henry B., subject of this review; and Jane, widow of William Smith. The father died in 1861, the mother in 1886.

Our subject received a somewhat limited education in the district schools, but this has been greatly supplemented by extensive reading and observation in later years, so that he may be termed a self-educated man. At the age of eighteen he took charge of his father's farm, assuming the entire responsibility, and since that time has successfully managed the place. On reaching his majority he came into possession of 109 acres belonging to his father, and in 1865 purchased of Hiram Wilson the remainder of his grandfather's farm, so that he now has a valuable place of 215 acres. He is careful and methodical in business, and has converted his land into one of the most highly cultivated and attractive places in his locality. Besides general farming he is successfully engaged in sheep raising.

On September 26, 1860, Mr. Knickerbocker married Miss Phœbe Stickle, daughter of Jacob and Hulda (Card) Stickle, and they have become the parents of two children: George B., of the town of Northeast, married to Julia Collin; and Fred, at home. Until President Lincoln ran for his second term, Mr. Knickerbocker had always supported the Democracy, but at that time he voted for the martyred President, and was a Republican for several years, but now his allegiance is given to the Prohibition party. He and his wife and sons are members of the Presbyterian Church of the Plains, of which he is an officer, and takes an active interest in Church work. In the prosperity of his town and county he has been an important factor, assisting in everything for their improvement, and throughout the community he has many warm friends.

EDGAR CLARK (deceased). The subject of this sketch, formerly one of the leading agriculturists of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, was a descendant of one of the oldest families in the country, the head of the American line, Thomas Clark, having been a passenger on the "Mayflower."

Several generations of the family have made their home at Plainfield, Conn., and there our subject's grandfather, Ezra Clark, was born in 1748. He came to Dutchess county in 1795, and became very prominent, owning large tracts of land, and taking an influential part in local affairs. He married Mary Douglas, and had ten children, among whom was Moses Clark, our subject's father, who was born May 20, 1785, at the old home in Connecticut. He was ten years of age at the time of his father's removal to Dutchess county, and the remainder of his life was here passed. On November 3, 1808, he married Mary Wiggins, daughter of Arthur Wiggins, of New Milford. This family was of Scotch origin, but had lived in the North of Ireland for some time previous to emigration to America. Soon after his marriage Moses Clark purchased the farm of 600 acres near Miller-ton, now owned by Ambrose Culver, and made his permanent home there. Later he bought another farm of 176 acres, now owned by his granddaughters, Elizabeth and Carrie D. Clark, and at one time he had about 1000 acres of land at different points. He was a man of great energy and excellent judgment, and possessed much influence in the community. He died August 12, 1854, and his wife April 25, 1874. They had eight children, a brief record of whom is as follows: Ambrose, born September 11, 1809, married Julia A. Collin, of Northeast; Mary E., born January 13, 1811, married Ambrose Mygatt, of Amenia, N. Y.; Edgar, born February 22, 1813, was married (first) to Mary Ann Holbrook, of Northeast, and (second) to Emeline Dakin, also of Northeast; Julia L., born October 26, 1814, was married (first) to Peter Righter, of Pine Plains, N. Y., and (second) to Solomon Weaver, of Branchport, Yates Co., N. Y.; Emily A., born June 25, 1816, married George E. Crane, of New Milford, Conn.; George, born May 3, 1818, was married (first) to Emily Rogers, of Fishkill, N. Y., and (second) to Ada Stevens; Harriet J., born April 19, 1827, married Willard Weed, of Torrington, Conn.; and Moses C., Jr., born April 29, 1833. None of this family are now living except Mrs. Emily A. Crane and Mrs. Harriet J. Weed.

The late Edgar Clark was a man of wide and accurate information, always interested in the topics of the day. He received a good English education in boyhood, attending the common schools near his home, and, later, the academy at Hudson. In 1837 he bought the farm where Leonard L. Barton now lives, and resided there until 1853, when he purchased from his father the farm of 176 acres above mentioned, and moved there. On October 18, 1838, he was married to Mary Ann Holbrook, daughter of Nicholas Holbrook, a prominent merchant of Northeast Center. She died March 3, 1849, leaving three children: Mary Elizabeth, born July 23, 1839, now living at the old farm; Emily Leora, born October 8, 1840, the wife of Marvin Reed, of Lakeville, Conn.; and Rachel H., born June 23, 1844, who married Arthur J. Mead, of Fayetteville, N. Y. On October 15, 1849, Mr. Clark, for his second wife, married Emeline Dakin, daughter of Jacob Dakin, in his day one of the most prominent men of the town of Northeast, and the owner of about 1,000 acres of land. One child came of this marriage, Carrie D., born December 2, 1850, who now resides on the old homestead. Her mother died December 25, 1882, a little more than five years after the death of Mr. Clark, which occurred September 12, 1877. He was an excellent business man, and was often asked to assist in the settlement of estates, his integrity as well as his ability being unquestioned. Although he was not a member of any Church, his life displayed in every phase the loftiest morality. He took a hearty and generous interest in all worthy public movements, and in local affairs was a leading worker, being elected on the Republican ticket to various offices, including that of township supervisor, which he held for several terms. During the Civil war he was active in securing the quota of men required from his township, and he greatly regretted the fact that his advanced age prevented him from going to the front himself. He was a member of Webatuck Lodge No. 480, F. & A. M.

EDWIN BARNES, M. D., the well-known physician of Pleasant Plains, Dutchess county, is a representative of one of our most prominent families, his own achievements in the line of his profession adding lustre to the record.

His great-great-grandfather Barnes was born on Tower Hill, London, England, and came to America before the Revolutionary war, but returned to England early in the struggle, his sympathies being with the British government. His family, however, were patriots, and remained in this country. His son Joseph, our subject's great-grandfather, was born November 1, 1744, in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and became a farmer there. He was married, November 7, 1777, to Sarah Butts, who was born January 4, 1744. They were Quakers in faith, and both died 1813—he on March 15, she on April 5. Their thirteen children were born to them, their names with dates of birth being as follows: Benjamin, August 25, 1772; Thomas, April 1, 1774; Joseph, Jr. (1), July 22, 1775; Moses, November 7, 1776; Elizabeth, June 14, 1777; Joseph, Jr. (2), December 10, 1779; John, April 30, 1782; William, October 15, 1788; Stephen and Samuel (twins), April 19, 1788; Jacob, April 19, 1787; Sarah, July 15, 1790; and Mary, March 12, 1793. Samuel, our subject's grandfather, lived for many years at the old homestead in the town of Clinton, and afterward in Livingston county, N. Y., but in his old age he moved to Canada, where he died. He married Fanny Armstrong, who was born October 26, 1787, and died in Poughkeepsie, January 11, 1854. They had the children: Stephen S., born July 18, 1811; Edwin, born September 6, 1817, died April 18, 1842; and Hannah (now Mrs. Moses Camac), born December 2, 1819.

Stephen S. Barnes, our subject's father, learned the cooper's trade in early manhood and later became the junior partner of the firm of A. B. Nash & Co., brewers, of Troy, N. Y. He married Huldah Britton Hall, daughter of Camillus Hall, of East Westmoreland, Cheshire Co., N. H., and children's names follows were born to their union: Elizabeth (now Mrs. Caleb C. Hewlett), March 2, 1813; Charles Nash, February 8, 1840, a resident of Denver, Colo.; George Waters, March 18, 1842, died in infancy; Edwin, July 28, 1846, our subject; and Clark Phillips, November 1, 1846, who resides near Denver, Colo. The family always made their home in Hyde Park township, although the father's business often required his absence. He died in Anderson county, Kans., March 29, 1886, his wife surviving until August 6, 1892.

Dr. Barnes was born in Troy, N. Y., and he passed his boyhood at the old home, attending first the district schools of Hyde Park and then a private school at Pleasant Plains.

Edwin Barnes M.D.

taught by Rev. Sherman Hoyt. He began his medical studies with an uncle, Camillus Hall, M. D., at Burlington, Ohio, where he remained a year and a half. He then entered the Albany Medical College, but, in 1864, before his course was completed, he joined the army as a cadet on the medical staff. He served in the Department of the Cumberland, of West Virginia, and of the East, until mustered out, February 3, 1866. In the meantime, his degree of M. D. had been conferred upon him by Albany Medical College, December 28, 1865, while he was on duty at the Ira Harris General Hospital. Ten days after his return home he began the practice of his profession at Pleasant Plains, where he has since resided.

On November 13, 1866, Dr. Barnes was married in Macedon, N. Y., to Matilda Armstrong, whose grandfather, Jacob Armstrong, was a resident of Clinton. Her father, Truman Armstrong, was born August 15, 1804, and for the greater part of his life was a farmer in the towns of Clinton, Unionvale and Hyde Park; but in 1863 he moved to Palmyra, Wayne county, where he lived a retired life. He was married September 19, 1833, to Elizabeth Powell, who was born February 15, 1804, and they had four children: (1) Daniel, born December 27, 1833, was a machinist in New York and Chicago, and died January 25, 1891; (2) Jacob, born August 30, 1837; (3) Theodore, born———, 1845, who died in infancy; (4) Matilda, born August 11, 1841, and (5) Anna, November 22, 1842. Jacob enlisted in Company D, 128th N. Y. V. I., and served until mustered out with the rank of first lieutenant, July 28, 1865. He took part in a number of important battles, among them being Port Hudson, Pleasant Hill, Sabine Cross Roads, Winchester, Cedar Creek, being taken prisoner at the latter place, and not again joining his regiment until February, 1865. After the war closed he engaged in the real-estate and lumber businesses in Chicago, where he died June 15, 1893. Mrs. Barnes' father resided at Palmyra, January 13, 1878, her mother surviving until September 9, 1883. Our subject's pleasant home has been brightened by three children, of whom the first, Marion, born February 1, 1868, died October 25, 1871; the others are Myrta Elizabeth, born August 17, 1877; and Percy Raymond, August 9, 1880.

In politics the Doctor is a Republican, and he took profound interest in the abolition of slavery. Professionally, he stands high, and he has been president of the Dutchess County Medical Society, and vice-president of the New York Medical Association.

EDMOND A. MOREY (deceased) was one of the popular and highly respected citizens of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and at the time of his death was connected with the Harlem railroad. The Morey family was founded in Dutchess county by his grandfather, Abraham Morey, who was born in Connecticut, September 15, 1778, and from his native State he removed to Dutchess county, locating in the town of Washington. He was a prominent farmer. He was the ninth son of Stephen and Sarah Morey, who were born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. When he had attained to man's estate he was married on Christmas Day, of 1806, to Miss Phebe Boyce, who was born in the town of Washington, June 9, 1780, and was the daughter of Isaac and Remembrance Boyce. Six children were born to them: Alonzo, born November 5, 1807, died April 5, 1860 (he served two terms as sheriff of Dutchess county); Barak, the father of our subject, was next in order of birth; Alanson was born January 5, 1810; Harriet, born February 25, 1812, was married October 22, 1856, to Isaiah Reynolds, by Rev. Abram Davis, at her father's home, in the town of Washington, and she died March 4, 1888, at the age of seventy-six years; Julia, born November 27, 1816, died November 26, 1887, at the age of seventy-one years; and Priscilla, born May 13, 1821, died September 7, 1872. The father of this family died July 15, 1859, at the age of eighty years and ten months, and his wife passed away on September 18, 1866.

Barak Morey, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, December 16, 1808, and there received his education in the common schools. He later, for some time, engaged in merchandising at Halls Mills, Dutchess county, and on disposing of that business purchased a farm in the town of Amenia, which he cultivated for thirty years. He always took a great interest in politics, and held a number of town offices to the satisfaction of all concerned. His earthly career was ended on April 12, 1886, at the age of seventy-eight years.

Barak Morey was twice married, his first union being with Miss Mary L. Toby, daughter of Albert Toby, of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county; she died September 18, 1847, leaving one child, Albert B., who was born August 29, 1847, and died, unmarried, November 7, 1892, aged forty-five years. Mr. Morey was again married December 9, 1849, the lady of his choice being Miss Sarah Elizabeth Howes, a daughter of Edmond Howes, a farmer of Sullivan county, N. Y. Of the five children that graced this union Edmond A. was the oldest. Alonzo H., born December 20, 1853, never married, and died February 23, 1893, at the age of thirty-nine years. Ira A., born September 28, 1856, died November 10, 1880, at the age of twenty-four years. Cinda E., born February 28, 1860, married Reuben A. Brown, of Westfield, Mass., who is now engaged in the manufacture of cigars at Buffalo, N. Y. Samuel, born June 14, 1862, makes his home at Amenia, where he is engaged in business.

Mr. Morey, of this review, was a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Stanford, on September 15, 1851, and his education was such as the common schools afforded. Most of his life was devoted to agricultural pursuits, but after his removal to Dover Plains he was in the employ of the Harlem railroad. A stanch Democrat in politics, he kept well posted in regard to current events, and held a number of minor town offices. Socially, he held membership with the Odd Fellows lodge of Poughkeepsie, No. 297, and also belonged to the Odd Fellows Mutual Benefit Association of Dutchess county. He was classed among the best people of the community, well worthy of any distinction that might have been conferred upon him. Mr. Morey was united in marriage with Miss Thedorah Odell, a daughter of Samuel and Elmira Odell, of Pleasant Valley, and to this union was born one child, Jennie E., born September 21, 1874, and on September 2, 1896, at half-past two o'clock, was married by the Rev. S. J. McCutcheon to Emanuel C. Benson. Edmond A. Morey passed to the unseen world December 19, 1896, at the early age of forty-five years.

Samuel D. Odell, father of Mrs. Morey, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, July 3, 1793, and was the son of Samuel D. and Sarah Ann (Doty) Odell, the former a native of the town of Washington, and the latter of Salt Point, Dutchess county. In early life he learned the hatter's trade, which he followed for a number of years, but afterward engaged in farming and carpentering. By his marriage with Miss Permelia Marshall, he had ten children: Edwin, Sallie A., George, Bartlet, Marshall, Lewis, William, Seneca, Elizabeth and Joseph; of these, Seneca was made colonel of the 28th Regiment, September 5, 1862, which regiment went out 1,600 strong, and when mustered out, July 13, 1865, numbered but 400. After the death of his first wife he married Miss Almira Baker, who was born in 1822, and was the daughter of John Baker, of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. Six children blessed this union: Leander, born December 21, 1844, married Miss Frances Husted (no children were born to them); Charles A., born November 29, 1846, was in the Union army during the Civil war, and is now married and has two children; Jacob J., born May 16, 1849, married Mrs. Elmira Finkle, and they have one child, Mary; Theodora, born May 1, 1851, is the wife of our subject; Mary F., born October 29, 1853, wedded Andrew Lake, a soldier of the Civil war, who now receives a pension, and they have nine children—Oran, Alex. James, Fred, Arthur J., Mary, Alvereta, Alice and Ida; and Cornelia, born April 27, 1858, died August 18, 1866, at the age of eight years.

POLHEMUS W. MYER, leading agriculturist of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, is a member of one of its old and highly respected families. His ancestors came from Holland at an early period, and his grand father, Reuben Myer, was born in that county and spent his life there. He married Catherine Van Voorhis, and had seven children, none of whom are now living: (1) John R. was farmer upon the estate now owned by our subject; (2) Abraham R. resided in Hughsonville; (3) Zachariah was a hotel-keeper in Arlington, Dutchess county; (4) Egbert was a resident of Hughsonville; (5) Ellen married William Van Voorhis, a carriage painter; (6) Nancy married William Monfort; and (7) Warren D.

Warren D. Myer, the youngest of the family, was born and reared in New Hackensack and in early manhood began his successful mercantile career by clerking for his brother in Hughsonville, where he afterward conducted a general store for twenty-six years. His wife was Miss Susan Lyster, daughter of John Lyster, a well-known farmer of East Fishkill and a descendant of another old Hollan Dutch family. They attended the Presbyterian Church, and were prominent in its work. In later years Mr. Myer purchased the present homestead, near Hughsonville, where he resided until his death, in 1872. His wife survived him twenty years. Of their four children, the eldest, Delancey L., died in 1891, and Margaret and Olevia died in infancy.

The subject of this biography, the youngest child, was born in Hughsonville, July 31, 1846, and after availing himself of the educational facilities of his native town settled at the homestead, and the management of its 133 acres has since occupied his attention. On September 6, 1883, he married his first wife, Miss Kitty H. Denny, a native of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county. They had two children—Maud K. and Emma H., who are both at home. Their mother died October 22, 1888, and on October 25, 1893, Mr. Myer was again married, this time to Miss Jennie E. Cutler, who was born in Westchester county, the daughter of Cyrus Cutler, a prominent farmer.

Mr. Myer is a Democrat, as was his father before him, but his influence is exerted in a quiet, though forceful, way.

HENRY HOFFMAN, who was born on January 26, 1829, in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, was there successfully engaged in farming for many years. He was a worthy representative of an old and honored family of the locality. The founder of the family in the New World was Hendrick Hoffman, his great-grandfather, who was born in Germany about 1719, and on crossing the water located in Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he secured the farm now occupied by a great-grandson, Frederick Barton. By his marriage with Sybil Magdalene Yunghans he became the father of three children: Henry, who was the grandfather of our subject, was born in Ancram January 6, 1761; Matthias, who married Anna Maria Strever, and Margaret, who wedded a Mr. Talmadge, of Rensselaer county, N. Y., a distant relative of T. Witt Talmadge.

The grandfather came to the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, in 1812, locating on the hill where the Hoffman Mills now stand, and in this town he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1840. He was one of the most prosperous farmers of the vicinity, owning 500 acres of valuable land. His wife, who was born January 6, 1762, survived him about ten years. On January 15, 1786, he had married Catherine Veterle, of Red Hook, N. Y., and they became the parents of ten children, namely: Margaret, born September 25, 1786, married Rowland Sweet, of Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y.; Catherine, born October 12, 1788, died unmarried; Eleanor, born December 28, 1790, married Walter Dorchester; Henry, born May 17, 1793, married Almira Culver, of Pine Plains; Polly, born August 27, 1795, married Jeremiah Conklin, of Pine Plains; Catherine, born January 28, 1798, died in childhood; one child, born June 15, 1799, died in infancy; Betsey, born May 28, 1800, married George Barton; Laura, born June 23, 1803, married Artemas Sackett, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county; and Anthony was born in Ancram, Columbia county, September 15, 1805.

Anthony Hoffman, the father of our subject, spent his entire life upon the farm which his father had located in the town of Pine Plains, where the family had long been a leading and prominent one in the community. He was a progressive and enterprising man, and kept the old homestead property intact. He was married to Sally Barton, of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and to them were born the following children: Henry, of this review, was the eldest; Sarah, born December 6, 1831, wedded Herman Snyder, of Gallatin, Columbia county; Leonard, born November 24, 1833, died unmarried; Catherine, born February 22, 1835, married J. Culver Hoag; Julia, born October 30, 1837, became the wife of Elias Halstead, of Ancram; Laura, born January 20, 1840, married Edgar Eggleston, of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, and Anthony, born September 8, 1844, died unmarried. All of the children are now deceased with the exception of Catherine and Laura. The father's death occurred September 10, 1876; his wife passed away November 23, 1884.

Our subject was educated in the district schools of the neighborhood, and in a select school at Millerton, Dutchess county, conducted by E. W. Simmons, and by reading in subsequent years became a well-informed man. He succeeded to the eastern end of the old homestead, consisting of 153 acres, and on that farm spent his entire life. He was naturally a man of good business ability, and was numbered among the substantial and industrious farmers of Pine Plains. The farm is now occupied by his only child, Leonard, making the fourth generation that has resided there. In 1866 Mr. Hoffman married Miss Mary A. Strever, who was born July 31, 1836, and is a daughter of Adam and Eliza (Eno) Strever. Their son Leonard married Ella J. Miller, daughter of Adam Miller, of Pine Plains, and they have two children, Ira and Harry. Mr. Hoffman used his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party, and took an active interest in public affairs. He was straightforward and honorable in his dealings, and gained the high regard of all with whom he came in contact.

The Strever family, of which Mrs. Hoffman is a member, is of German origin, and the name was formerly spelled Streibel, later corrupted to Strevel and afterward to Strever. About 1720 Johannes Strever came to America from the Fatherland, and on his arrival in New York City was sold to pay his passage. A man by the name of Couse brought him to the town of Milan, Dutchess county, where he worked his time out. He was born December 24, 1731, and married Maria Dings, who was born in 1742, the daughter of Adam Dings. His death occurred February 24, 1804, and his wife survived him about four years. In their family were six children, namely: John Adam, born June 1, 1760, married Lizzie Strever; Jacob, born June 18, 1762, married Anna Maria Hoysradt; Anna Maria, born April 5, 1764, married Matthias Hoffman; Eva, born March 27, 1766, became the wife of Hendrick Hoysradt; John, born July 4, 1768, wedded Mary Hoysradt; and Benjamin, born November 8, 1771, married Maria Righter.

The next in direct line to Mrs. Hoffman is John Strever, who was born on a farm near Ancram Lead Mines, now owned by Jacob Miller, and by his marriage with Mary Hoysradt had ten children: Polly, born October 23, 1790, became the wife of Cornelius Hoysradt; Henry, born March 18, 1793, married Betsey Snyder; John, born January 13, 1796, never married; Adam, born March 13, 1798, was the father of Mrs. Hoffman; Elizabeth, born April 28, 1800, died while young; Benjamin, born June 20, 1802, married Cornelia Snyder; J. Hoysradt, born November 24, 1805, wedded Abbie Marsh; Tammy, born in November, 1807, became the wife of John Silvernail; Eliza, born February 9, 1810, died unmarried; and Fanny, born January 18, 1812, also died unmarried. On June 7, 1790, the father of this family purchased of Mr. Graham, one of the Little Nine Partners, 700 acres of land, for which he gave 900 pounds in English money, and that property has been in the family ever since.

On the family homestead Adam Strever, the father of Mrs. Hoffman, was born and reared his family. He was an able financier, being very successful in business matters, upright and reliable, and could be depended upon under any circumstances. He was naturally a quiet man, and one of the most highly esteemed men of the community. He married Miss Eliza Eno, daughter of Julius and Amanda Eno, of Schoharie county, N. Y., and to them were born three daughters: Mary Amanda, now Mrs. Hoffman; Jane W., born November 23, 1837; and Julia, born August 30, 1840. On August 27, 1872, the last named married Daniel Poole, by whom she had one son, Strever, and her death occurred August 6, 1895. The father passed away February 18, 1872, and the mother on July 25, 1845.

Among many heirlooms, Mrs. Hoffman has a German Bible, sent to Johannes Strever some time after his arrival in this country, and it is now about 140 years old. This family, it is quite evident, was one of considerable standing in the Old World.

MMARTIN W. COLLINS, a prominent business man of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born October 14, 1847, in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., and is a member of one of the old families of that locality.

The following record is given of Mr. Collins' immediate paternal ancestors: Isaac F. Collins, his father, was born May 22, 1818, in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y.; Martin W. Collins, his grandfather, was born in the town of Rhinebeck, in 1790; and Joshua Collins, the great-grandfather, was born near Providence, R. I. He was the son of Joseph Collins, who was a native of England, and came to America, settling near Providence where he reared a large family of children, of whom the sons were: Joshua, Hezekiah, Joseph, William and Charles. Of these, Hezekiah came to Dutchess county, N. Y., and settled on a farm in Unionvale; he married, and reared a large family. Joseph lived in Rhoads Island, where his family became prominent.

Martin W. Collins

William also made his home in Rhode Island, and there reared a family. Charles removed to Columbia county, N. Y., where he married and settled on a farm; he had two children, one of whom, Charles, became a lawyer and lived in Brooklyn.

Joshua, the eldest of the family above recorded, and great-grandfather of our subject, was reared in Rhode Island, where he married Mary White, and shortly after (about 1774) came to New York, settling in Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and taking charge of property belonging to Gen. Montgomery. In 1800 he bought a farm in eastern Pleasant Valley, where he remained until his death in 1829. He had a family of seven children, namely: (1) Henry, married Miss Cox, of Rhinebeck, and followed farming. (2) Gideon married Miss Sweet, of Lithgow, Dutchess county, moved to Chautauqua, N. Y., and there reared a family. (3) Joshua married Miss Rowe, and located at Coeymans, N. Y., from there moving to Illinois. (4) Susan married Caleb Angevine, a stock dealer in New York City. (5) Oliver married Miss Ward, and lived in Pleasant Valley (he was a school teacher, and also a merchant). (6) Patty married Minard Velie, who was a farmer and stockraiser, of Lagrange. (7) Martin W. was the grandfather of our subject.

Martin W. Collins lived in Rhinebeck until ten years of age, but was reared to manhood in Pleasant Valley. He married Miss Nancy Forman, a native of the latter place, and for some time after his marriage lived on his father's farm. He afterward bought a large farm in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he died October 1, 1876, his wife surviving him until November 20, 1886. He served as lieutenant in the war of 1812, and was very prominent with the Democratic party of his locality, and held the office of supervisor for many terms, and also superintendent of the County Poor. To the union of this worthy couple were born four children: (1) Joshua, the eldest, is living at Wappingers Falls at the age of eighty-two years; he has for many years been a minister of the Gospel, Presbyterian Church, but is now retired from active work. (2) Mary A. married William H. Gurney, who lived in Dutchess county, and was a stockdealer in New York City. (3) Isaac is our subject's father. (4) Rhoda, who never married, is now seventy-four years old. In religion the family were Quakers.

Isaac Collins, father of our subject, grew up on his father's farm, and early in life studied surveying and engineering, which profession he followed during the greater part of his life. He married Miss Phœbe J. Holmes, who was born at Pleasant Valley August 10, 1822. She was the daughter of Isaac Holmes, a farmer, and granddaughter of Joseph Holmes, who came from Westchester county, N. Y. The family was of German descent. Four children were born to Isaac Collins and his wife, as follows: (1) Isaac H. died when eight years old. (2) Mary Ann married James Hogan, of Rhinebeck, and died December 12, 1871. (3) Martin W. is our subject. (4) Peters H. died at five years of age. The mother passed away March 16, 1895; the father is now living in Poughkeepsie, at the age of seventy-seven years. He is a Democrat, and was county superintendent of schools from 1868 to 1872, taking an active part in all matters pertaining to education. He and his wife contributed liberally to the support of the Second Reformed Church at Poughkeepsie, and have always commanded the respect and esteem of the community.

Martin W. Collins, the subject of this sketch, lived in the town of Washington, where he attended the district school until he was fifteen years old, when his parents removed to Rhinebeck. He then entered the Dutchess County Academy, Poughkeepsie, where he remained two years, and for one year was a student in the Seminary at Amenia. In 1870 he began teaching at Rhinebeck, continuing in this occupation some five years. In the fall of 1875 he was elected school commissioner, and was re-elected in 1877, serving until January 1, 1882. At this time he formed a partnership with Benjamin W. Van Wyck in the marble and granite business, under the firm name of Van Wyck & Collins, in which business he is still engaged.

Mr. Collins was married September 19, 1870, to Miss Mary, daughter of Isaac F. Kirby, of New York, who died in August, 1873. One child was born to them, Jennie, who married William R. Brown, of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Collins, on December 20, 1877, married, for his second wife, Miss Emily M., daughter of William I. Foster, a farmer of Pleasant Valley. (The Fosters are of English descent, and came to Dutchess county from New Hampshire). Of this union two children have been born: Mattie F. and Ruth M.

Mr. Collins is a Democrat, and a public-spirited man, one who takes an active interest in all public matters. He is broad and progressive in his ideas, and as a loyal citizen is held in the highest esteem. Socially he belongs to the I. O. O. F. and K. of P., and he and his wife attend the Reformed Church.

CHARLES EMERY BAKER. As pioneer farmers of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, the Baker family held a prominent place in the development of that town in early days, and the numerous descendants of this generation ably sustain the reputation won by their forefathers for industry, business acumen and public spirit.

Henry Baker, the grandfather of our subject, was born at the old homestead, and became the owner of a farm of about 100 acres, admirably adapted to the dairy business, which land is still in the possession of the family. He was a successful man, and was regarded as a representative citizen of his town. He was married, and reared a family of eight children. The five sons, James, Warren, John, Henry and Joshua, all followed agricultural pursuits. The three daughters were Ann, who married Harry Peck; Betsey, the wife of Luman White; and Hulda. All lived to the age of nearly sixty years or more, but have now joined the silent majority.

Harry Baker, our subject's father, was born on the old homestead in 1818, and succeeded to it after the death of his father, buying out the claims of the other heirs. His entire life was passed there, and he added to the acreage from time to time. Possessing the usual native ability, he was even more influential in public life than his father, for many years taking active part in the support of Republican principles. He served as assessor from eight to ten years, also held other important offices of the town at different times, and was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Reynolds-ville. His death occurred in February, 1883, and his wife, Rebecca Jane Denton, followed him May, 1893. She was a native of Reynolds-ville, a daughter of Josiah Denton. Our subject was one of the family of seven children, as follows: Josiah was a soldier in the Civil war, having enlisted in 1862, but only lived four weeks thereafter, dying of smallpox. George H., the eldest living, and a farmer in Putnam county, married Ann Kent, but has no children.

James H., a resident of Pawling, was twice married, first to Anna Gage, and after her death he wedded her sister, Sarah; by his first wife he had two children: William and Anna. Charles Emery, our subject, comes next. Amos D. is deceased. John Wesley, who resides at the homestead, married Ida Ballard, and they have two children, the elder, Harry, being now deceased, the younger, Stanley, yet living. David L., the youngest brother of our subject, a resident of Matteawan, married Emma Ladue, and has two children: Edith M. and Ralph.

Charles E. Baker, our subject, was born at Reynolds-ville, April 27, 1849, and his educational opportunities were restricted to an attendance at the district schools of that village until the age of twenty, the last four years being limited to the winter term. Study was a pleasure to him, and he became especially proficient in mathematics, while a wide course of reading in later years has kept him well abreast with the topics of the time. At twenty-one he left home to engage in farming, and after his marriage, in 1872, to Miss Juliette Mead, daughter of Robert Mead, of Farmers Mills, Putnam county, he spent one year on the Mead homestead. On April 1, 1873, he settled on his present farm in the town of Pawling. The place was known as the Hiller homestead, and was owned by Alfred Hiller; but after nine years, Mr. Baker purchased the property, which contains 255 acres, and is considered one of the best farms in the town. As Mr. Baker had only $300 when he moved to this farm, he may well be proud of the success which his industry and good management have brought him. He is interested largely in dairying, keeping about sixty cows. In politics he has always been a Republican and an active one, having attended many conventions. In 1891 and 1892 he held the office of commissioner of highways. He and his wife attend the Methodist Episcopal Church of Pawling. Socially, he is a member of Dover Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., of Dover Plains.

Of their three children, Charles H. is a graduate of the military school at Claverack in Columbia county, while Edith V. is attending school at Chappaqua, Westchester county and Frances L., the youngest, is at home.

Mrs. Baker, wife of our subject, was born January 14, 1850, near Farmers Mills, in Putnam county, a daughter of Robert and Abigail M. (Smith) Mead, who were the parents of three children: Naomi J., who married James W. Compkins, a farmer of East Fishkill, and has two children: Nellie and William D.; Juliette (Mrs. Baker) comes next; and Robert R., who married Addie O. Thomas, and resides at Matheawan, where he is engaged at horse dealing. The father of these was born in Putnam county in 1822, and died in 1858. By occupation he was a farmer and drover, and also conducted a store. He was a Democrat. The mother was born in Putnam county in 1819, and died in January, 1894.

CLEMENT HAIGHT, who has ever been closely identified with the agricultural interests of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, was born August 27, 1814, on the farm where he still makes his home. His ancestors came from England to America, the founder of the family in this country, Simon Haight, landing in 1628. He had a son, Nicholas (1), who married Susanna Joyce, and had a son, Samuel; Samuel married, and became the father of Nicholas (2), who married Patience Titus, and had a son, Jacob (1); Jacob (1) by his marriage with Sarah Hicks became the father of Jacob (2), the grandfather of our subject. Jacob (2) married Phœbe Haviland, and to them were born seven children, as follows: Jacob (3), who in early life engaged in farming in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, but later removed to Virginia, where he owned a tract of land; John, who operated a farm and engaged in cider-making at Millbrook, N. Y.; Isaac, father of our subject; Elizabeth, who wedded Philip Allen, a farmer, tanner and currier; Patience, who died unmarried; Sarah, who became the wife of Abner King, a resident of Washington town, but whose death occurred in Ohio; and Charity, who married Obediah Thorne, an agriculturist of Washington town. The grandfather always followed the pursuit to which he was reared, and died in the faith of the Society of Friends.

On the old family homestead Isaac Haight, the father of our subject, was born November 2, 1784. He married Johanna Clement, a native of Long Island, whose father was a shoemaker by trade. To them were born five children: Clement; Phœbe is the widow of Daniel B. Haight, who carried on farming in Washington town; Jacob C., who was also an agriculturist, is now deceased; Mary T.; and one deceased in infancy. The father's entire life was devoted to farm labor, and on the old home farm both he and his wife passed away, the former in 1856 and the latter in 1855. They belonged to the Society of Friends, and in politics Mr. Haight was an Old-line Whig.

Clement Haight grew to manhood under the parental roof, receiving the usual educational advantages afforded by the schools of that day, and was active, industrious and capable in the discharge of the farm duties falling upon him. He was united in marriage with Maria C. Almy, a native of Otsego county, N. Y., and a daughter of Clark Almy, an agriculturist of that county. Their entire married life was spent upon the Haight homestead, which he operated, with the exception of three years he was engaged in merchandising at Little Rest, Dutchess county. Three children came to brighten their home: Clark A., a farmer of the town of Washington; Marian and Isaac. Mrs. Haight was called from this earth in 1893, leaving many friends to mourn her departure from their midst.

Our subject is numbered among the substantial and thrifty farmers of his township, where he owns a valuable farm of 150 acres, which for the care and labor bestowed upon it yields a golden tribute in rich and bountiful harvests. His ballot is generally cast with the Republican party, but he is also a strong Prohibitionist. He believes that precept should be accompanied by practice, and his exemplary life has won the confidence and respect of all.

GEORGE BROWN, a wealthy agriculturist residing near Fishkill Plains, Dutchess county, is one of the most progressive and scientific workers in that ancient calling to be found in this region, his extensive estate being managed in a model manner.

He is the son of the late David H. Brown, who was born in London, England, April 20, 1806, and crossed the Atlantic at the early age of twelve years, in the care of a friend of the family. After a short stay in Quebec, Canada, he ran away and joined a party of Indian traders, with whom he remained about five years at the head of the Mississippi. On leaving them he went to Nantucket and learned the ship-carpenter's trade, which he followed throughout his active business life, principally in New York City, but to some extent in Georgia and New Orleans, La. In politics he was in his later years a Republican. He married Miss Maria Van Slyck, a lady of Holland-Dutch descent, whose ancestors were among the earliest settlers in Columbia county, where her father, Barant Van Slyck, was a prominent farmer. For some years after his marriage Mr. Brown made his home in New York City; but in 1867 he bought the farm now owned by our subject, and resided there a few years. His wife died December 12, 1869, and in 1872 he purchased another farm on the banks of the Hudson river, where he passed his declining years in retirement. He departed this life September 19, 1889.

George Brown, whose name opens this sketch, was born in New York City, February 13, 1841, and was the eldest of three children. Henry, the second son, is now a patient in the Hudson River State Hospital; he succeeded to the farm lying on the Hudson. Catherine, the youngest child, died in infancy. After acquiring an education in the schools of the metropolis, our subject engaged in the retail grocery business; but since 1867 he has lived upon his farm, which contains 235 acres, and lies upon the line between Wappinger and East Fishkill. He raises a variety of crops, and devotes much of his time to the care of his estate. So far, he has not donned the matrimonial yoke. Intelligent and progressive in his ideas, he stands high in his locality. He votes the Republican ticket, and is a member of the F. & A. M., Hopewell Lodge No. 596.

GEORGE HUGHES. Among the leading merchants of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is found this gentleman, who is proprietor of the largest furniture establishment on the Hudson river.

Mr. Hughes was born in County Armagh, Ireland, February 8, 1843, and is a son of Francis and Rose (Ward) Hughes, the former of whom was born in County Armagh, in 1808. The family is of Welsh-Briton ancestry, but most of its members have been residents of Ireland for centuries past, and the old homestead in the county mentioned is still in the hands of relatives of our subject. For many years the men of this family have been builders and contractors, and were the leaders in this line of business in their locality; also had contracts in England, Scotland and on the continent. Charles Hughes, an uncle of our subject, built the cathedral in the city of Armagh, the church and school in Middletown, and the church and parochial school in Keady; he was also a great railroad bridge builder in the British Isles. His son Charles succeeded him in business, and owns the old homestead yet. Bernard Hughes, a cousin of Francis, is the largest baker in the world, his bread finding its way to the continent, and to England and Scotland; he grinds his own flour, and ships car-loads of bread every morning, employment being given to four hundred men in his establishments. His popularity is great, and he has served as mayor of Belfast, the chief city in the North of Ireland. The Right-Rev. John Hughes, formerly Arch bishop of New York, was of this family, and many other Catholic prelates originated from same.

Owen Hughes, the grandfather of our subject, and who was a farmer and builder, married Miss Phœbe Thornton, a native, like himself, of County Armagh, and a member of one of the oldest families of that section, of ancient Briton ancestors who settled in Ireland after the Conquest of Britain by the Romans. This family also had many extensive contractors and builders in New York City, William Bernard, John, Peter and Hugh Thornton being of the number. Seven children were born to Owen Hughes and his wife, as follows: Bernard, who was a large land owner. George (whom our subject is named after), who died when a young man; he was noted for his great strength and athletic powers. Charles, who remained in Ireland. Francis, who came to America. Mathew, who lived in Ireland. Phœbe, who married a Mr. Hagan, of Middletown, County Armagh. Bridget, who never married, and remained in Ireland.

Francis Hughes, the father of our subject received a liberal education, for his time, the schools of Middletown and city of Armagh and learned the cooper's trade. Prior to coming to America he also followed farming and cooperage, dealing in cattle in conjunction with his trade. In 1840 he built a fine stone house on his farm at Carriclane. On first arriving in this country he lived for a time in Rochester, N. Y., where Francis L. Hughes and Edward Denney (a relative) lived. He afterward went to New York City, and was engaged with the Thornton Brothers in building and contracting in that city and in Brooklyn for a number of years. In partnership with George Clark, he erected several blocks of buildings in those cities, and about 18 took a contract from Matthew Vassar to build Vassar Row on Main street, and for the large carriage factory of J. W. Fredericks, in Poughkeepsie. In all of these contracts they did all the work, masonry, carpentering, etc., completing each job in full, and turning the keys over to the owners.

Geo. Hughes

On May 1, 1854, George Clark and Mr. Hughes brought a boatload of building tools and material, twenty-five workmen and their families, their own families and house-furnishing goods, and Mr. Hughes took up his residence in Poughkeepsie, where he carried on business the remainder of his life. During his later years he became a great friend of Matthew Vassar, acting as a sort of manager and confidential adviser. Mr. Hughes was a man of strong will and great energy, and was successful in his enterprises, becoming quite wealthy before his death. In 1842 he was married to Miss Rose Ward, daughter of Bryan Ward, of County Monaghan, Ireland, the same county from which Gen. John A. Logan came. The Wards were an influential family in Ireland, and of old Irish stock going back before the time of St. Patrick, and were largely engaged in farming and stock-raising, while Bryan Ward was a great horse-breeder, jobber and valuer. Col. James Kelly, who succeeded Col. McCoran, 69th Regiment, after the battle of Bull Run, was of this family. Two children were born to Francis Hughes and his wife: George, the subject of this sketch, and Sarah Ann, who became the wife of Patrick Campbell of Brooklyn, but is now deceased. Mr. Campbell has just retired from the Brooklyn police force, in which he made a fine record over twenty years' service. Francis Hughes died February 5, 1882, and his wife on April 2, 1873.

George Hughes obtained his early education in the schools of Middletown, County Armagh, Ireland, where he was under the instruction of Prof. Afnew, a member of the family of which is celebrated Dr. Agnew, of New York, is now deceased. After coming to America he attended St. Paul's school, in Brooklyn, of which Prof. Bridges was in charge, and finished his schooling in Poughkeepsie. He has been a great reader all his life, has a most retentive memory and is especially well-versed in history. He is a man of broad and progressive ideas, well-informed on a variety of subjects, and keeps abreast of the times.

After leaving school Mr. Hughes learned the trade of a carriage painter and finisher with David Olmstead, with whom he was employed until 1860. He then took charge of a carriage shop at Libertyville, Ulster county, for two years, and the following year worked for the Brewsters, in New York City, at his trade. In 1864 he moved to Peekskill, and took charge of a carriage shop for Golding & Lent. On October 1, following same, he came back to Poughkeepsie and went into business for himself on Grand street, where he worked at carriage manufacturing, painting and trimming until 1867. He then went into the Red Mill building, his business having largely increased, he doing the painting and trimming work for the small wagon and carriage makers for from thirty to forty miles around Poughkeepsie, and making a financial success of a then new business enterprise.

In February, 1870, Mr. Hughes bought out Charles H. Wygant, a carriage manufacturer in Newburgh, Orange Co., N. Y., and who had just been elected sheriff, and carried on the business very successfully until 1873. The lease being broken, however, by the sale of the property by John P. Embler's creditors, Mr. Hughes was obliged to give up the property, so in 1873 he returned to Poughkeepsie, and on April 29, of the same year, purchased the large building comprising Nos. 406, 408 and 410 Main street. Of this he retained No. 406 for his own establishment, as carriage repository, same year building a three-story brick structure in the rear of Nos. 406, 408 and 410, for his carriage and sleigh manufactory, and fitted up the remainder for the furniture store and warerooms of Coe & Deyo. In 1875 he sold out the carriage manufacturing business and leased the building to Schoonmaker & Bailey for a term of ten years, for a time retiring from active business; but his energetic nature would not allow him to long remain idle, and in the fall of the same year he took up the auction and commission business, which he carried on until 1880. In 1887 Mr. Hughes purchased the old George Carson property, known as Nos. 398, 400, 402 and 404 Main street, and Nos. 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 South Hamilton street, including the corner of those two streets. The buildings on South Hamilton street had been old frame landmarks, which Mr. Hughes caused to be torn down, in their place erecting the present substantial and commodious stores. The South Hamilton street property consisted of a solid rock, towering some twenty-five or thirty feet above the level of the street, a property that real-estate dealers were afraid to speculate in. Undoubtedly the site was valuable, and at one time the former owner had refused as much as $40,000 for it! Four years were spent by Mr. Hughes in blasting and hauling away this massive rock before it was brought to a proper level, and the cellar floor for the block of buildings about to be erected there is solid rock. The foundation and inside masonry of the new Christ Church building in Poughkeepsie is of rock hauled from this "quarry," while the foundations for hundreds of houses were made of it, and thousands of loads of "chips" and broken stone were sold and delivered to the city at ten cents a load, for street improvement purposes, which was about one-tenth of their value. On the corner of Main and South Hamilton streets there now stands a fine brick building, which Mr. Hughes concluded to put up after doing some blasting in the blue-stone rock foundation, hewing a fine cellar out of the solid rock. He owns the large stores fronting on Main street, three stories in height, equipped with the largest plate-glass front in the city, and occupying a very prominent location. In the meantime Mr. Hughes had been gradually working into the furniture trade, and in 1880 he opened up a furniture establishment which has constantly increased in size, and volume of business, and to which he has added the manufacture of some of the best of his goods, the carriage factory having been converted into a furniture factory and store house. Twice each year Mr. Hughes takes a business trip to the principal furniture markets in the country—Grand Rapids, New York City, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati, etc., buying from manufacturers in car-load lots, securing, also, exclusive agency, and choice of manufactured goods, something unusual for places outside of large cities. In 1885 Mr. Hughes admitted his son, Charles F., into partnership, and the concern has since so continued, the volume of business steadily increasing each year.

Mr. Hughes' traveling has not always been on matters of business, for he has made some most pleasant and interesting journeys "on pleasure bent." On July 8, 1891, he set out for a six-months' tour across the Atlantic, the voyage being made in the "City of New York," on which were Prince George of Greece (with whom Mr. Hughes became personally acquainted) and retinue. In Ireland, our subject visited his old home and birth-place, saw, conversed and visited with hundreds of friends and relatives, and made a tour of the island from Cape Clear to the Giant's Causeway; in Scotland he saw, among many other interesting sights, the celebrated bridge over the Firth of Forth; then toured through England (where he saw all the principal points of interest in London and vicinity), Wales, France and part of Germany. In the summer of 1896 he took an ocean tour along the Eastern seaboard, including that of the Canadian Maritime provinces, visiting St. John (New Brunswick), and sailing up the St. John river to Fredericton thence proceeding to Halifax (Nova Scotia), and from there homeward, via Boston and New York.

On September 20, 1863, Mr. Hughes was married to Miss Bridget Carroll, of Ohioville Ulster Co., N. Y., and member of the family of "Charles Carroll of Carrollton," one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and John Carroll, first Catholic Bishop of Baltimore and all America, and a native of Waterford, Ireland. Six children were born of this union: Charles Francis, who will be spoken of more fully presently; Mary Bridget at home; George Dennis, employed in the Department of Public Printing at Washington D. C.; William Carroll, employed in his father's business; Rose Agnes (deceased), and Loretta Anna, at home. Charles F. was born June 29, 1864, in Peekskill, N. Y., received liberal education, and graduated from Poughkeepsie High School, of the Alumni Association, of which institution he was first secretary. On November 19, 1890, he was married, in Poughkeepsie, to Miss Mary Skelly daughter of John Skelly, and two children a living, viz.: George Francis and Charles William. In 1885 Charles F. Hughes became associated in his father's business, as above related. For the past five or six years he has been inspector of elections.

In 1892, George Hughes, our subject, purchased his residence property, No. 51 N. Clinton street, fronting on the Mansion Square Park, and in the following year he remodelled and enlarged the building, making it into a large suitable family residence, where his married son also resides. In addition to his real-estate investments, he owns eight clear building lots on "The Heights" at Newburgh, and it may be here mentioned, as another illustration of his shrewdness and business acity, that in 1866 he built the residence No. 85 Union street, a very substantial structure, and in 1873 sold it and an adjoining building lot for $10,000. He has been remarkably successful in his various enterprises, a fact due to his untiring perseverance, good judgment and reliable business methods, which have given him a deservedly high standing with the public; his word is as good as his note; he has always paid one hundred cents to the dollar. He is progressive in his ideas, liberal in his aid of all worthy objects, and has done much toward the growth and prosperity of his city. In politics he is a Republican, and is a strong Protectionist from principle; has made a study of the question, and has taken an active part in calling the attention of the people to its beneficial results. He served as chairman of the first Republican convention held during the Harrison campaign, of 1880. Although giving much time and attention to political matters, he has never been an office seeker. He and his family attend the services of St. Peter's church, Poughkeepsie, and take an interest in all Church work. He is broad and open in his religious views, claiming that any religion is better than none. During the war of the rebellion Mr. Hughes was captain of Company C, 21st N. Y. V. I., which regiment was organized in Dutchess county. In 1870 he took an active part in the Fenian raid on Canada, being District Center, at the time, of Dutchess, Columbia, Orange, Putnam and Rockland counties. He was captain of an Irish volunteer military company, and forwarded over a hundred men to Ogdensburg and northern New York, transportation and equipage being largely paid out of his own pocket.

To the above Mr. Hughes adds: "He was a firm believer at the time that the men of Ireland had a perfect right to strike the British flag wherever it floated, and countenanced the scheme of the Fenian Brotherhood to capture Canada and make it a base of operations to work from for the liberation of Ireland. After the capture of Fort Erie and defeat of the 'Queen's Own' crack Canadian regiment by about 500 of the Fenian volunteers, who succeeded in crossing Lake Erie on flats, President Johnson issued his neutrality proclamation, and Gen. Mead, who was in command of the lakes, was only too eager to enforce it. The 50,000 Fenian volunteers who had then assembled on the Canadian borders came to the conclusion that rather than precipitate the United States Government into a war with England, they gave up the project and returned to their homes, notwithstanding the fact that reinforcements were continuously arriving from all parts of the United States, the majority of whom were men who had just been discharged from the United States army, after the Southern Rebellion was suppressed, and for love of old Ireland volunteered their services without fee or reward. There was no power on earth that could have stopped them from capturing Canada; but the United States had just passed through four years of the great Rebellion, and Irishmen thought too much of America to plunge her into a war with England so soon thereafter."

AMBROSE M. CULVER, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, is a native of that county, born in the town of Amenia, September 2, 1869. His grandfather, Bachus Culver, who was born in the town of Pine Plains, was a noted farmer of his day, owning and cultivating, in early life, a large tract of land in the town of Pine Plains. He was also engaged in cattle dealing, and, his ventures being uniformly successful, he accumulated a fine property. By his marriage he became the father of three children: Dudley, a member of the firm of Sherman & Culver, of New York City; Lavinia, who married William Bartlett, a brick manufacturer of the town of Amenia; and Walter B., our subject's father. Bachus Culver was a member of the Presbyterian Church, to which the later generations have also adhered. His last years were spent in Amenia town, where he and his wife both died.

Walter B. Culver was born at the old homestead in the town of Pine Plains, and remained there until 1864, when he married Miss Harriet Mygatt, daughter of Ambrose Mygatt, a leading resident of the town of Amenia, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of the town. For some years prior to his marriage, Mr. Culver located upon the Bartram farm, near Sharon Station, where he remained several years, and then removed to the Mygatt farm, in Amenia, where he now resides. He has been very successful, and is now the largest landholder in the township, owning four farms besides the one upon which he resides, comprising in all over 1,000 acres. He is a Democrat, and has been active in local politics, holding office as assessor, road commissioner, excise commissioner and school trustee. In educational matters he has taken great interest, and has been ready to befriend every movement for the benefit of the community. He and his wife are leading members of the Presbyterian Church at Amenia, of which he is a trustee. They have had eleven children, of whom eight are now living: May Emily, Laura B., Ambrose M., Dudley D., Harry W., Arthur B., George R. and Bessie, all of whom are at home except our subject and Dudley, who is a farmer of the town of Amenia.

Ambrose M. Culver was educated in the public schools of his native town, and later attended Amenia Seminary for about six years, receiving a good English education. After leaving school, at the age of seventeen, he stayed with his father four years, and then took the Wheeler farm, just east of his father's, and conducted it on his own account two years. In 1893 he purchased the George Clark farm, in Northeast town, George Clark being a brother of Mrs. Culver's mother. According to the original survey of this farm it contained 600 acres, but it is probably larger than that. It is on the State line, and a portion of it is in Connecticut. Mr. Culver has made many improvements upon the estate, and has made it one of the best farms in the town.

On February 15, 1894, Mr. Culver married Miss Ida Estelle Chapman, daughter of David S. Chapman, of Millerton, a well-known traveling salesman. They are members of the Baptist Church at Millerton, and are prominent in the best social circles of the locality. Being an intelligent and public-spirited young man, Mr. Culver has taken an active interest in local improvement, and is an active worker in the Democratic ranks, always giving his influence toward the selection of able and reliable officials.

FREDERICK HENRY STREVER. There are numerous fine farms in Dutchess county which will compare favorably with any others in the State, as regards production, and also to the improvements that have been made upon them, many of which places are owned by men comparatively young in years. As a representative of this class of agriculturists, great pleasure is taken in presenting the name of the subject of this notice, who has always lived in the town of Pine Plains. He was born on the old Strever homestead December 11, 1861.

His paternal grandfather, Adam A. Strever was a native of Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., born November 24, 1793. He made farming his life occupation and continued to reside in Ancram until April, 1835, when he removed to the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, and purchased a farm consisting of 188 acres on which he spent the remainder of his life there dying July 14, 1866. He was a Jackson Democrat, and a loyal, patriotic man. Enlisting in the war of 1812, he immediately started for Plattsburg, but the battle was fought before he reached his destination, and he was discharged. He stood firmly by the Union during the late Rebellion. A faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, he gave his support to everything that would advance the moral and material welfare of the community and was a public-spirited and enterprising man. In the family to which he belonged were four sons and four daughters. His brothers and sisters are as follows: Margaret who became the first wife of William Tanner Betsey, wife of Joseph Gillis, who located at Argyle, Washington Co., N. Y.; Maria, wife of Abram Reynolds, also of Argyle; Sally John; Uldrick, who married Amanda Kinne and lived in Argyle; and Benjamin A., who died unmarried at the home of his cousin, Job B. Strever.

Adam A. Strever was married to Clarissa Tanner, who was born January 16, 1797. Samuel and Rachel (McIntosh) Tanner, and died December 4, 1877. They became the parents of three children: Rachel, who was born October 1, 1820, and died unmarried August 2, 1882; Sylvester, born March 2, 1822; and Benjamin A., the father of our subject. The father of Mrs. Strever, Samuel Tanner, was born April 4, 1758, in Dove Dutchess county, where he lived some years. He first wedded a Miss McIntosh by whom he had five children: William, born February 1783, first married Margaret Strever, after her death Mrs. Finch, and his third wife was Betsey Davis; John, born March 6, 1788, for whose second wife chose Mrs. Christine Mosher. Rachel was born March 20, 1784; Alexander born February 20, 1785, was married and had two children, one daughter marrying Dr. Plummer; and Margaret, twin sister of Alexander was also married. For his second wife Samuel Tanner chose Rachel McIntosh, who was born August 4, 1767, and was a daughter of Alexander and Rachel (Yonkhonce) McIntosh, and to them were born ten children, namely: (1) Mary Magdalene, born November 2, 1790, married William T. Woolridge. (2) James, born January 12, 1793, was married three times. (3) Reuben S. was born January 12, 1795. (4) Clarissa was the wife of Adam A. Strever, the grandfather of our subject. (5) Anthony, born August 13, 1799, was twice married, and died January 14, 1877. (6) Henry was born November 9, 1801. (7) Samuel was born August 6, 1804. (8) Morris was born April 26, 1807. (9) Almyra, born May 24, 1810, was married to Jeremiah Lown. (10) Eliza, who completed the family, was the twin sister of Almyra, and married Andrew Case. Alexander McIntosh, the father of Mrs. Rachel Tanner, was undoubtedly a native of Scotland, and his parents died while on the voyage to the New World, and he worked for three years to pay his passage. The sister of our subject now has in her possession a small straw-covered trunk which he brought over about 1740. It is supposed that he sailed from England, and took the oath of allegiance to the King of England. Rather than break that oath he went as a baker in the Colonial army during the Revolutionary war, and was called a Tory as he would not take up arms against the mother country. He remained in New York City for some time, where he married Clara Yonkhonce, but November 1, 1786, he bought land of George Clinton, and removed to the farm now owned by his great-grandson, Samuel Tanner. It is said that while looking for a place to build he accidentally stepped into a spring, and said "here is where I will put my house." His wife's parents located about the same time on the land now owned by the Lixberry family.

Benjamin A. Strever, the father of our subject, was born on the old homestead in the town of Ancram, Columbia county, June 19, 1730, and in the district schools of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, received a good common-school education. He was turned to agricultural pursuits, and in connection with that occupation also engaged to some extent as blacksmith, carpenter, mason, artist, etc. In 1884 he removed to the farm still occupied by the family.

On December 26, 1855, Benjamin A.

Strever married Amelia Jane Collier, who was born November 11, 1831, the daughter of Simeon Mace and Maria (Jones) Collier, and to them were born three children: (1) Franklin Adam (who still owns and occupies the old Strever homestead in Pine Plains), born October 18, 1857, was married December 5, 1883, to Mary Elida Vosburg, who was born June 26, 1858, and is the daughter of John and Rhoda Ann (Scutt) Vosburg, and three children blessed their union—Rhoda Anna, born April 16, 1885; Raymond V., born June 24, 1886; and Senella Blanche, born December 17, 1887. (2) Frederick Henry, whose name introduces this sketch, is next in order of birth. (3) Rachel Tanner, born November 17, 1865.

Simeon Mace Collier, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was born July 30, 1807, and was married December 16, 1830, to Maria Jones, by whom he had two children: Amelia Jane and Gilbert Henry. She was born August 22, 1805, to Isaac and Sally (Ross) Jones, and died July 18, 1834. Her paternal grandparents were Isaac and Anna Jones, and her mother, who bore the maiden name of Sally Ross, was the niece of Captain Ross, who is buried at Mt. Ross. On December 10, 1839, Simeon Mace Collier was again married, his second union being with Eliza Thomas, who was born May 2, 1806, and was the daughter of John and Elsie (Hollow) Thomas, and to them were born five children: Frances C., Thomas, George M., Gertrude Arnold and Amy Thomas. The father of this family was the fifth and youngest child of Noah and Leah (Mace) Collier. His mother was born October 16, 1775, and after the death of Noah Collier, she became the wife of John Benson, and died in 1857. She was the second daughter of Simeon and Deborah (Fillow) Mace. Her mother was born September 13, 1757, and in 1772 became the wife of Simeon Mace, who was born January 2, 1752, and died December 24, 1822. Her death occurred January 17, 1839. She was the daughter of John and Phebe (Olmsted) Fillow. John Fillow was born probably about 1704 and married before 1726. He was the son of John and Sarah Fillow. It is thought that John Fillow, Sr., was born in France about 1667, and was about thirty-three years of age when he came to America, bringing his wife and three sons, who came here Huguenot refugees to escape religious persecution. On coming to the New World he located at Norwalk, Conn. He died about 1765, at the extreme old age of ninety-eight years.

In the usual manner of farmer lads Frederick H. Strever was reared to manhood, assisting his father in the labors of the farm, and attending the schools of the neighborhood. He has been quite successful in his agricultural pursuits, which he has continued to follow, and now has a farm of 140 acres of rich and arable land. He takes quite an active interest in local political matters, voting with the Republican party, and is interested in school work. He is one of the representative young farmers of the locality.

ISRAEL R. WILLSON, a prominent agriculturist and dairyman of the town of North-east, Dutchess county, residing near Coleman Station, is a descendant of a hardy, long-lived Scotch-Irish ancestry, whose shrewd judgment and upright character won for them a leading place in this community. His great-grandfather, Robert Willson, was one of three brothers who came from the North of Ireland at an early day, his ancestors having moved from Scotland to Ireland a number of years before. He settled upon a tract of 100 acres west of the present residence of Mr. Slee, where he followed farming successfully. He was an enterprising, public-spirited man, and did much to develop the neighborhood, being one of the founders of the Congregational Church north of Amenia. He died in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and his wife, Betsey Hindman, to whom he was married after coming to this country, lived to be over 100 years old. They had seven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Reuben, October 16, 1755; Amos, March 10, 1758, both of whom moved to Saratoga county, N. Y.; Hannah, May 15, 1760; Mary, April 1, 1763; Thomas, September 11, 1767, who moved to Ohio in early manhood; Margaret, September 9, 1769, the wife of Reuben Gaston, of Chantilly, N. Y.; and Robert, May 14, 1772, our subject's grandfather. He inherited his father's farm, but sold it and purchased the Murdoch property, containing about 400 acres, where he passed the greater part of his life. He was a captain in the State Militia, and a man of prominence in this region, active in politics as a member of the Whig party, and in business circles as a successful manager of his fine estate. He belonged to the Presbyterian Church of Amenia City (now Smithfield), and was a deacon for many years. He was married November 11, 1795, to Sarah Thompson, of Amenia City, born February 7, 1777, and had eight children, whose names and dates of birth are here given: John, June 3, 1797; Hiram, August 12, 1799; Rebecca, May 17, 1801, who was married January 6, 1820, to Philip Flint; Samuel T., October 3, 1803, who was married February 21, 1833, to Emeline Shornberger; Theron, June 10, 1805, who was married January 8, 1829, to Lydia Collins; Robert E., March 28, 1807, a well-known minister of the Presbyterian Church, who was married February 20, 1838, to Mary Strong, sister of Justice Strong of the United States Supreme Court; Sarah, August 12, 1811, who died at an early age; Henry, July 12, 1814, who was married to Sarah E. Cady, October 25, 1838; and Barak, January 24, 1817, who married Cordelia Collins, September 24, 1840. Capt. Willson died October 21, 1854, and his wife survived him until July 6, 1872, when she died at the age of ninety-five years.

Hiram Willson, our subject's father, also followed farming as an occupation, and spent many years on the homestead at Amenia City. He moved to the town of Pine Plains in 1844 and bought a place known as the Knickebocker farm, where he passed his remaining years, his unusual executive ability enabling him to accumulate a fine property. He was married February 18, 1824, to Elizabeth Reynolds, a lady of English descent, and granddaughter of Stephen Reynolds, who came from Rye, Long Island, and located in Pine Plains. Her father, Dr. Israel Reynolds, was one of the prominent citizens of that locality. He married Deborah Dorr, of Lyme, Conn., and had three children—Walter, who was an able lawyer of Pine Plains; Julia and Eliza. Hiram Willson died June 22, 1872, and his wife September 30, 1892. Their children were born as follows: Ellen, October 8, 1825; Israel, November 2, 1827; Julia Maria (Isaac Carpenter), February 11, 1830; Edward P., December 26, 1832, who married Olivia Sinks, of Leavenworth, Kans.; Sarah R. Maria, 2, 1836, who was the second wife of Isaac Carpenter; Elizabeth D., July 20, 1838, who married Theodore Strong, of Pittston, Penn., a brother of Justice Strong, of the United States Supreme Court.

Israel Willson first saw the light of day on the farm now occupied by John N. Conklin the town of Northeast. He received a good academic education, attending the district schools near his home, and later the schools of Warren, Conn., and Pittsfield, Mass. He is a very intelligent man, a great reader, and has taken the New York Tribune for forty years. On leaving school in 1852, he bought a farm of 160 acres of Barak Willson, to which, four years later, he added 120 acres purchased of Stoughton Moore, and subsequent additions have enlarged it to a tract of 320 acres, making one of the best farms of the town. The Harlem railroad was built through it in 1851, and, in the following spring, Mr. Willson engaged in the milk business, being one of the pioneers in that line, and has met with gratifying success.

On September 16, 1852, he married Elizabeth Conklin, a daughter of John Conklin, and granddaughter of Major Nathan Conklin, an officer in the Revolutionary war, who came to Dutchess county from East Hampton, Long Island, about 1781. They have had three children: Elizabeth Hunting, who was born August 16, 1856, and died June 7, 1878; and Julia, born November 11, 1858; and Helen F., born August 14, 1864, who married D. Dewey Merwin. Mr. Willson and his family are leading members of the Presbyterian Church at Amenia, and he is one of the active workers in all matters of local improvement. Although he never aspired to office he was town assessor for six years, and he takes great interest in national affairs, being in early years a Whig, and later a Republican.

THOMAS O'BRIEN, one of the most enterprising and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, resides near Dover Plains on a fine farm of 225 acres, which he devotes to dairy work and stock raising. He is a native of Parish Vancha, County Tipperary, Ireland, where his ancestors have made their home for many years. His father, Daniel O'Brien, conducted a large dairy farm here, supplying the neighboring cities with milk. He married Margaret Dempsy, and had six children: Daniel, who died at an early age, Jeremiah, John, Thomas, Margaret and Mary.

Mr. O'Brien came to the United States in 1854, and located for a time upon a farm in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. Later he purchased his present property, known as the Hall farm. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has always taken an intelligent interest in all that concerns the welfare of his adopted country. He was married at Wappingers Falls to Miss Mary Cunningham, who was born and educated in the Emerald Isle, and came to America in 1850 at the age of twenty. They have three children: (1) Mary T., who was born in the "Clove" in 1862, married Thomas McIngram, a farmer in Amenia, and has four sons—Thomas, Joseph, John and Leo. (2) John who was born in 1863, received his education in the schools of Dover, and is now engaged in farming with his father. (3) Julia A. is at home.

Mrs. O'Brien's grandfather, Thomas Cunningham, was born in the Parish of Golden, County Tipperary, Ireland, where he was a farmer during his mature years. He and his wife, Bridget, reared a family of children, among whom was a son, Patrick, Mrs. O'Brien's father, who moved in early manhood to Tullimane Parish, Lethard, County Tipperary, Ireland, and engaged in agriculture. He married Bridget Markley, daughter of Dennis Markley, a farmer of the same locality, and his wife, Johanna. Thirteen children were born to them, of whom four died in infancy. Of the others, Thomas married, first, Catherine Hayes, and, second, Miss Penneferth; Patrick married Kate O'Brien; Dennis, Miss Hayes; Michael, Mary O'Brien; John; Johanna, Charles Watson; Margaret, Mr. Kennedy; Mary, Thomas O'Brien; and Bridget died at an early age.

EUGENE HAM, a progressive agriculturist of the town of Washington, is now devoting his time and attention exclusively to his farming interests, operating the old homestead where his life has, for the most part, been passed.

Conrad Ham, grandfather of our subject, was a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Washington, in 1757, and was there educated in the common schools. By his marriage with Elizabeth Haight he had six children: Henry, George, Milton, Lewis, Jonathan (father of our subject) and Hannah. Of these, Henry was born, reared and educated in the town of Washington, and married Miss Elizabeth Thorn, by whom he had four children: C. Conrad, Joseph, Sarah and Elizabeth (wife of Peter Mesick). George, a farmer by occupation, married Miss Catherine Marshall, and they had two children: Stephen (who married Sarah Sleight) and Hannah (who married Stephen Angell). Milton, also an agriculturist, wedded Miss Phebe F. Ferris, and they had three children: John (who married Rhoda Sleight), Sarah, and George (who married Miss Grace Seymoure); Lewis never married.

Jonathan Ham, the father of our subject, was a native of the town of Washington, and after attending the common schools near his home took a course in the Jacob Willets school. Quite early in life he began tilling the soil, and became a very successful farmer, acquiring a large tract of land in both Washington and Unionvale towns, on which he carried on general farming. He married Miss Mary Vincent, daughter of James and Mary (Sisson) Vincent, prosperous farming people of the town of Unionvale, and three children were born to them: Eugene, Helen and Elizabeth B.

In the town of Washington, Eugene Ham, the subject proper of this sketch, was born in 1850, received his primary education in the local schools, and later was a student at College Hill, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. After his return he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, purchasing the old homestead in the town of Washington, where he has since resided. He is a wide-awake, progressive citizen, taking a deep interest in the welfare of the community, and is widely and favorably known. On June 15, 1881, he was married to Miss Mary K. Sleight, who was born in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, and received her education at Poughkeepsie. They have become the parents of six children: Mary, Francis, Irene, Edwin S., Lewis E. (who died in infancy) and Eugene.

James Sleight, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Ham, was a native of Ulster county, N. Y., and was a gallant Revolutionary soldier. By his marriage with Miss Elsie de Reimer he had five children: Peter R., Henry A., Harriet, Elsie and James Edwin. The first named, Peter R. Sleight, was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, July 20, 1804, and there secured a common-school education. He engaged in farming, and was also president of the Dutchess County Mutual Insurance Company at Poughkeepsie. He took a great interest in all public improvements, and was a highly respected citizen. He was twice married, his first union being with Sallie A. Barnes, by whom he had one son, James Edwin, the father of Mrs. Ham. After her death he wedded her sister, Miss Catherine Barnes, and they had three children: Sarah A., David B. (who died in the army during the Civil war), and Alexander W.

James E. Sleight, father of Mrs. Ham, was a native of Lagrange, and after completing his education engaged in farming. Later he conducted a mill and also carried on farming. He married Miss Frances E. Titus, daughter of Elias and Annette (Hoag) Titus, the former of whom was a woolen manufacturer of Poughkeepsie. Mrs. Ham, who was born in 1854, is the eldest of four daughters, the others being Rhoda, the wife of John M. Ham, of Washington Hollow, N. Y.; Sallie, the wife of Dr. Augustus Angell, now of Hartford, Conn.; and Fannie, the wife of Henry Winchester, a merchant of South Amenia, Dutchess county.

ROBERT J. STUART, proprietor of the extensive foundry and machinery work at New Hamburg, Dutchess county, is well known throughout that county as a prosperous and thorough-going business man. He was born May 15, 1847, at Darkley, County Armagh, Ireland, as was also his father, William Stuart, and comes of Scottish ancestry on his father's side.

William Stuart married Sarah Harvey, who was also born in County Armagh, and they settled on a farm in Ireland, where seven children were born to them, namely: Eliza, Robert J., William, John, Nathaniel, Jane and Sarah. In 1858 the father came to America first locating in New York City, the rest of the family following in 1862, and Emily J. and Thomas H. were born in that city. In 1866 they moved to Saugatuck, Conn., where they lived until 1884; then removed to Middletown, N. Y., thence after two years moving to the new home in New Hamburg. The parents are members of the Presbyterian Church; in politics the father is a Republican.

Robert J. Stuart attended school in his native country, and was fifteen years old when he came to America. In New York City he began to learn the trade of a machinist with the Dalton Knitting Machine Co., and when this firm removed to Connecticut our subject went with them and finished his apprenticeship. He then returned to New York City and worked at his trade for about four years. For the following twelve years he lived in Yonkers, N. Y., and while there became interested in an automatic paper-feeding machine.

Robert J. Stuart

chine, which, after ten years of hard and persistent struggle and experimenting, he succeeded in perfecting. This was the first machine of the kind to be put in successful operation in this or any other country, and was the most successful one seen at the World's Fair in 1893. Mr. Stuart is entitled to the credit of bringing into practical use this important and wonderful invention, which has worked a revolution in the old methods of handling single sheets of paper. In 1882 Mr. Stuart went to Poughkeepsie and formed the Sedgwick & Stuart Manufacturing Co., for the purpose of putting the machines on the market, which company lasted two years, when he sold his interest to Whitman & Burrel, and for the first time started in business for himself, renting a laundry and machine shop at Middletown, N. Y. In two years business had so increased that he was compelled to find larger quarters, and purchased, of McArdle & Hart, his present property in New Hamburg, Dutchess county.

Since the date mentioned Mr. Stuart has been carrying on a large and prosperous business, in his patent shaft couplings and dryer outfits for brick, terra cotta, and various clay products, salt, starch, etc. He also builds various kinds of machinery, does all kinds of repairing, makes castings of every description, as well as patterns, and, in fact, does all kinds of work to be done in first-class foundries and machine works. His trade is extensive, and he fills orders from all over the country, his well-known skill and ingenuity guaranteeing satisfaction to his patrons. As a citizen here he is held in high esteem, and is always ready to assist in all enterprises tending to the growth and prosperity of the community.

In 1881 Mr. Stuart was married to Miss Esther, daughter of Joseph and Ann (Platt) Auburn, of Yonkers. No children have blessed his union. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart are members of the Presbyterian Church, and are liberal contributors to all its needs, as well as active workers in Church affairs. In politics our subject is a Republican, and in everything is a loyal citizen to his adopted country.

JOHN A. MARSHALL. Among the reliable, substantial and prosperous farmers of the town of Hyde Park there is probably none who stands higher in the public estimation than the gentleman whose name is here recorded. He was born in the northwest corner of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, November 21, 1835, the night of the great fire in New York City, and is a son of Isaac P. Marshall, whose birth occurred in 1806, on the same farm, which is known as the old Marshall homestead.

The paternal grandfather, Zacheus Marshall, on coming from England to the New World, first located at Horse Neck, Conn., whence he removed to the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess-county, receiving the title to the home farm there from King George, and he was the original ancestor of the Marshalls in that section. By trade he was a carpenter, which occupation he carried on to some extent in connection with his agricultural pursuits. He belonged to the Society of Friends, and helped to erect their church in his locality. He was three times married, his second union being with a Miss Dean, while his third wife bore the maiden name of Jane Quimby. She was a native of Westchester county, N. Y., and was a witness of the battle of White Plains during the Revolutionary war.

The only son of the third union was Isaac Powell Marshall, the father of our subject, who was a farmer by occupation. He was a successful business man, of sound judgment, quite popular in his neighborhood, having the confidence and esteem of all who knew him, and did much in the settlement of estates. He was united in marriage with Maria Van Wagner, a woman of strong character, and to her was due much of the success of her husband. Three children were born to them: Culver, a civil engineer of California, is a man of great natural ability and versatility, and was one of the brave and valiant Union soldiers during the Civil war; John Allen, of this sketch, is next in order of birth; and Albion, who died in 1893. The father affiliated with the Democratic party, and was one of the leading citizens of the town of Pleasant Valley, where he served for many years as supervisor and justice of the peace. He took a commendable interest in the free schools of the county, as well as in other worthy objects for the benefit of the community. He was a faithful member of the Society of Friends, and spent his entire life upon the old Marshall homestead, his death occurring February 24, 1872. His wife passed away February 9, 1892.

The primary education of John Allen Marshall was obtained in the district schools, after which he attended the Friends school at Mechanicstown, N. Y., and for two years was a student at Claverack, N. Y., taking the full course in the academy there. He thus acquired an excellent education, becoming well fitted for the practical duties of life, and at the age of twenty-one began teaching in the district schools of the towns of Pleasant Valley and Hyde Park during the winter season, while in the summer months he assisted in the operation of the home farm until his marriage, at the age of twenty-six years. Going to Brooklyn, he there engaged in the milk business, which he also followed in Jersey City for two years. Since 1866, however, he has been principally engaged in the cultivation and improvement of his present farm in Hyde Park town, though the year 1888 was spent by him in the West, and for another year he was in the South.

Mr. Marshall wedded Miss Elmira D. Culver, daughter of John A. Culver, and to them have been born five children: Nellie, wife of Benjamin Haviland; Edwin Vincent, who is still upon the home farm; Culver, who is employed in the New York Central depot, at New York City; Jennie Maria, at home; and John Allen, who is engaged in teaching in East Park, Dutchess county. The religious views of Mr. Marshall incline toward the Society of Friends, in which he was reared. In politics he is an ardent Democrat, taking a warm interest in the success of his party, and during the years 1875 and 1876 he served as supervisor of his township. He is a progressive, enterprising man, broad and liberal in his views, and is very popular in his neighborhood, where he numbers many friends.

The Culver family, of which Mrs. Marshall is a member, is of Scotch origin, and was founded in America by three brothers, Jacob, John and James, who located first on Long Island, but later bought farms in Hyde Park, Dutchess county, the titles to which came from King George at an early date. John had two sons, James and Allen, while the other brother became the father of four sons, Samuel, Cornelius, Peter and John. Of the latter family, John settled near Battle Creek, Mich., and the others became prominent men of western New York, having located near Rochester. Until his marriage James Culver, Jr., remained upon the family homestead in Hyde Park town, and then for many years lived in Orange county, New York.

Allen Culver spent his entire life upon the old home farm, in the cultivation of which he was very successful, and became the owner of over 300 acres. He married Abigail Marshall, daughter of Henry Marshall, and they became the parents of eleven children: Marshall, Hester, John A., Willet, Deborah, Mariam, Emeline, Maria, Catherine, Hiram and Jacob, all now deceased except John A. Maria and Hiram. In religious belief the family were Friends, and though not an active politician, the father was a strong Federalist.

John A. Culver, the father of Mrs. Marshall, was born January 10, 1809, on the farm adjoining the one where our subject now lives, and there continued to reside until after reaching his majority. He later purchased the farm once owned by his grandfather Marshall, which he operated for seven years, and then engaged in the mercantile and lumber business in the village of Hyde Park for about four years. On the expiration of that time he purchased a farm in the northwest corner of the town of Pleasant Valley, where he continued to make his home some twenty-three years, and as an agriculturist was very successful. Going to Poughkeepsie in 1865, he there lived retired for many years. On October 31, 1834, Mr. Culver married Miss Catherine Skidmore, daughter of Walter Skidmore, and on the maternal side a granddaughter of Jesse Bell, who served as captain in the Continental army during the Revolution, and was one of the honored citizens of Dutchess county. Three children blessed this union, Mrs. Marshall being the only one now living; Jane Ann died at the age of seventeen; and Henry M. at the age of seven years. The mother passed away February 29, 1840. For his second wife, Mrs. Culver wedded Elizabeth Brown, on February 2, 1842, and they had two children: Charles Wheaton, who died at the age of two years, and Amanda, who died when twenty-one years old. The mother was called from this life May 18, 1890. By birthright Mr. Culver is a member of the Friends Church, and has ever been one of the leading and influential citizens of the county, serving as alms-house commissioner while a resident of Poughkeepsie.

LEONARD LYON. Few sections of the country can boast of more charming and quietly picturesque scenery than that to be found within the limits of Dutchess county.

and nowhere will there be found people more progressive and companionable. The house of Mr. and Mrs. Lyon on Quaker Hill, town of Pawling, is one of the pleasant spots of that favored region, and its occupants hold a high place in the esteem of the community. Mr. Lyon was formerly engaged in agriculture in Cayuga county, N. Y., but has become fully identified with the interests of his adopted county.

Mr. Lyon was born March 11, 1843, in Sherwood, Cayuga Co., N. Y., a son of Alfred and Harriet (Valentine) Lyon, the former of whom, a native of Bedford, Westchester Co., N. Y., was a merchant there in early life, later moving to Cayuga county, where he followed farming. He was twice married, first time to Lavina White, and by her had seven children, of whom five died when young, the two yet living being George and Lavina. By his second wife, Harriet (Valentine), Alfred Lyon had seven children, as follows: (1) Hiram, a farmer of Cayuga county, married to Abbie Gifford, and had six children—Sanford, Genevieve, Edith, Gertrude, Lyman and Herbert. (2) Elizabeth married Henry Grimshaw, and had three children—Samuel, Howard and Della. (3) Samuel married Della Nye, and had three children—Howard, Alfred and Page (the entire family live in Chicago). (4) Leonard, our subject, comes next in the order of birth. (5) James, a farmer of Sherwood, Cayuga county, married Sarah Hopkins, and had three children—Warren, Hettie and Rossa. (6) Hattie married Frank Fowler, and five children were born to them—Mary, Homer, Della, Stanley and Ada. (7) Mary married William Avery, and they moved to Fort Collins, Colo., where he died; they had one child—Pearle. (8) Charles, a dealer in horses at Atalissa, Iowa, married Lucy Avery, and had one son—Alfred. The father of this family died in 1880, the mother in June, 1893. He was known as Col. Lyon, having served as a colonel in the State Militia; was a member of the State Assembly several times, and a justice of the peace many years, besides holding minor offices. Politically, he was originally a Whig, later a Republican. Col. Alfred Lyon was of English and Scotch descent, the present Lord Lyon and Lord Howe being relatives. The silver dram-cup and cane, bearing the name of John Lyon (one of three brothers who came to America, and the one from whom Col. Lyon was descended) are now in possession of John Lyon, of Binghamton, N. Y. Col. Lyon's aunt (his father's sister) married John Jay, the first chief justice of the United States. The family coat of arms is still in the possession of the family.

Leonard Lyon, whose name introduces this sketch, received a liberal education, and graduated from Cayuga Lake Academy, after which he took up farming, which vocation he has ever since followed, having, in 1864, settled on his present well-improved farm of 220 acres, whereon he has erected some fine buildings. In 1863 he was married to Mary Haines, a native of Pawling, Dutchess county, and they have one daughter, Jessie H., born in Pawling in 1878, who is now being carefully educated by private tutors at home. Mr. Lyon, our subject, is a Republican in politics, but no office-seeker.

The ancestors of the Haines family were among the early settlers in Dutchess county. Caleb Haines, Mrs. Lyon's great-great-grandfather, was born and educated in Rhode Island, whence he came to Dutchess county in his manhood, to engage in farming. At one time he owned most of the land upon which Pawling now stands. He married Deborah Lewis, and had two sons: Sylvester and Caleb. The elder of these married, and reared a family of ten children: Chauncey; Andrew, who married Phœbe Howard; Charles, the grandfather of Mrs. Lyon; Peleg, of whose marriage no particulars are known; James, who is mentioned below; William, who married (first) Eliza Smith, and (second) Alma Betts; Lewis, who wedded Maria Tabor; Caleb, who remained single; Sarah, wife of Benjamin Sheldon, and Sylvester, who never married.

James Haines was born on the old farm in the town of Pawling, in 1790, and after acquiring a common-school education engaged in farming. He was a strong Republican, and held some minor township offices. He married Miss Hannah Sheldon, daughter of Jedediah and Jerusha (Hotchkiss) Sheldon. Her father was a leading farmer of the town of Dover. They had seven children: John, who married Abbie J. Allen; Sheldon, who married Emeline Corbin; Jane, who died in infancy; Maria, wife of Archibald Dodge; Susan, wife of Aaron Baker; Lydia, wife of Cyrus Baker; and Jackson, who married Lydia M. Cook.

Maria Haines was born in the town of Pawling, in 1819, and was educated there. She married Archibald Dodge, who was born in 1810, and educated in the common schools of that town, afterward engaging in farming. He is now very bright and active at the age of eighty-eight years, and he sowed an acre of wheat at that age. They have one daughter: Cornelia, who married T. J. Arnold, a farmer, and has three children: Helen M., Archie and Carrie H. Labon Dodge married Miss Libbie Birch, but they have no children.

Charles Haines, Mrs. Lyon's grandfather, was born in the town of Pawling, and moved West to engage in farming. He married Miss Mary Spaulding, and had three children: Albro A., the father of Mrs. Lyon; Harriet, wife of Simeon Walters; and Eliza, wife of Leonard Cole.

Albro A. Haines was born in the town of Pawling, in March, 1813, and educated there, but later engaged in farming in the town of Pawling. On July 7, 1833, he married Miss Sarah Orton, daughter of William and Sarah Orton, and Mrs. Lyon is the only child. Albro A. Haines died July 31, 1891, a staunch Republican in his political preferences.

ELIAS SPROSS, a retired contractor and builder, with residence in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in Rhein Pfaltz, Germany, August 5, 1826.

Michael Spross, father of our subject, was a farmer in the Fatherland, and took part in the war of 1813, when Germany was invaded by the French under Napoleon. He married Miss Margaret Handschuh, and they settled on a farm whereon they reared children as follows: Thomas was a mason contractor, and died in 1895; Philip died in Switzerland at the age of twenty-five years; Margaret married Conrad Rissberger, who was a boiler maker in Albany, N. Y., and both are now deceased; Elias, our subject, comes next; Joseph is a farmer in Monroe county, N. Y.; and Michael is a shoemaker in Poughkeepsie. The father of this family died in 1872, the mother in 1842; both were members of the German Catholic Church.

The early life of our subject was spent in his native land; in 1851 coming to America, and locating in Poughkeepsie, he followed the mason's trade, which he learned in Germany, and at which he continued to work in this country until his retirement from business in 1884. From 1853 to 1858 he worked with his brother Thomas in the Poughkeepsie Iron Works or Furnace, also in Cold Spring, Manhattan, Peekskill, and other places until 1858, doing the mason work. In the latter year he took work in Poughkeepsie, and began contracting on his own account, in which he continued until his retirement as above related. In 1875 he did the mason work on the fourth section of the Hudson River State Hospital, and in 1876 took another big contract to do the mason work on another section of the hospital—the center building from basement to second story. He has filled many other contracts in Poughkeepsie, the last being for the building of the post office in 1884, if we except his contract in 1888, for putting in the foundation of St. Mary's Catholic church.

Mr. Spross was married July 25, 1851, to Miss Barbara Bollman, who was born in Germany, and who came to America on the same vessel as did our subject. They have no children. In 1875 they took a trip to the Fatherland, and in 1889 Mr. Spross again visited the old country, rambling among the scenes of his boyhood. He also visited England, particularly to see an old friend, Frank Brown, of Castle Villa, Keighley, Yorkshire, England, from there going to Germany. The latter country he left August 12, for the Exposition held in Paris that year, to meet Mr. F. Brown, and after a stay of two weeks they went back to England, where he stayed until September 2, when he left on his homeward trip to the United States, after a three-months' tour. Mr. and Mrs. Spross have a beautiful brick residence at No. 8 Garfield place, Poughkeepsie, which he built in 1877. Their home has always been in that city since June, 1851. He is a Democrat in politics, and has served on the water board, and was an alderman from the Fourth ward of Poughkeepsie. Socially, he has been a member of the Germania Society for forty years, and has devoted much time and attention to its welfare. He and his wife are members of the German Catholic Church.

GEORGE A. TROWBRIDGE. The Trowbridge family has been so long and favorably known in this section that its history will be of unusual interest to many. The great-grandfather of our subject, Billy Trowbridge, was born November 4, 1748, the son of Deacon Samuel and Sarah (Seeley) Trowbridge. He received a common-school education, and then engaged in agriculture. In June, 1777, he married Miss Rhoda Beardsley, who was born February 14, 1758, and died February 8, 1844. A year or two after their marriage they settled in Carmel, Putnam county, N. Y., and in 1798 moved to Truxton, Cortland county; but Mr. Trowbridge died two days before the little party reached its destination. They had nine children, whose names, with dates of birth and death, are as follows: Ephraim, March 22, 1778, died May 5, 1791; Alvah, September 4, 1779, died June 10, 1856; Billy, March 26, 1781, died May 8, 1854; Levi, February 16, 1783, died 1846; Polly, April 3, 1786; died 1818; Samuel, December 1, 1788, died 1817; Sally, February 23, 1792, died 1810; Ephraim, June 15, 1795, died 1798; John C., October 18, 1797, died 1831.

Elin. Spruf

Alvah Trowbridge, our subject's great-grandfather, received the education obtainable in the common schools of his day, and later became a farmer. He was married November 10, 1797, to Miss Sally Crane, daughter of Judge John Crane, of Carmel, N. Y. She was born June 27, 1780, and died of measles April 6, 1833. Eight children were born to them, whose names, with dates of birth and the names of their respective partners in matrimony, are here given: Phineas B., December 4, 1798—Sally B. Raymond; Ada Z., October 18, 1800—Levi Knox; Allerton M., February 24, 1803—Letitia Coe; Aralinda, February 26, 1805—Orrin Richards; William C., April 15, 1807—Mary E. A. Holley; Correlia A., November 8, 1809—Reynolds Platt; Sarah B., March 21, 1821—David B. Rogers.

Phineas Beardsley Trowbridge, the grandfather of our subject, was born and educated in the town of Southeast, Putnam county, and at an early age engaged in farming near Wings Station, later following the blacksmith's trade. He was married October 28, 1823, to Miss Raymond, who was born October 22, 1803. They have six children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows; Edwin M., November 1, 1824 (died August 29, 1854); Amanda, December 5, 1826 (died August 8, 1855); John C., September 24, 1828; Correlia A., April 1, 1831 (died August 26, 1848); William R., May 6, 1833; and George Platt, July 19, 1840 (died April 15, 1845). Only two of that family entered the matrimonial state; Edwin, who married Miss Sarah Marsh, and William R., our subject's father. He was born and reared in the town of Southeast, Putnam county, and has been for many years a prominent farmer near Wings Station. He purchased his present farm of 300 acres about twenty-seven years ago, and makes a specialty of dairywork. He married Miss Maria W. Sheldon, daughter of Albro and Elizabeth (Edmond) Sheldon. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Trowbridge: (1) Cora B., born September 20, 1858, married June 11, 1878, Arthur Dorn, a merchant in Springfield, Mass., and son of Albert Dorn, of Beekman, N. Y. They have one child, Mabel, born September 30, 1880. (2) George A., born September 20, 1861, is a farmer and merchant at South Dover; he married, March 19, 1889, Miss Eva Dutcher, daughter of George W. and Nettie (Hill) Dutcher, well-known residents of Dover. He has two children: William D., born June 6, 1891, and Nettie A., born March 4, 1894. (3) Ada, born December 27, 1863; and (4) Eliza, born April 17, 1866, are at home.

Mrs. Trowbridge is a member of one of the old families of the town of Dover, and her great-grandfather, Caleb Sheldon, was born and educated there, also passed his mature years in farming. His death occurred there November 22, 1841, at the age of ninety-three. His son Luther, Mrs. Trowbridge's grandfather, was a blacksmith for a number of years, and later engaged in farming. He died August 28, 1861, at the age of eighty-six years, and his wife, formerly Miss Mary Butts, of Delaware county, died October 13, 1863, aged eighty-seven years. They had eleven children, all of whom married except one. Their names, with those of their respective husbands and wives, are as follows: Phoebe—Abraham Sherman; Theodorus—Mary Wing; the twins, Electa (died at the age of seventeen) and Delilah (married Duncan McDonald); Albro—Eliza Edmonds; Ophelia—Henry P. Amey; Anner—Wilson Johnson; Jeremiah—Sophia Doughty; Wilson B.—Hannah M. Doughty; Harrison—Hannah Ward; and Almeah—Andrew Ward.

Albro Sheldon, the father of Mrs. Trowbridge, was born in 1808, and became a prominent farmer. He was active in local affairs, and held a number of town offices. He married Miss Eliza Edmonds, daughter of Kenedy Edmonds (a well-known farmer of the town of Dover) and his wife, Leah C. Edmonds. Mrs. Trowbridge was born in 1840, the eldest of four children. Sarah A. Sheldon, born November 11, 1844, married (first) George Root, by whom she had one son—George S. Root, born April 23, 1871; Mr. Root died July 29, and she married Myron Edmonds; one child came of this union—Carrie L., born March 12, 1882. Wilson B. Sheldon, born October 22, 1846, is a prominent farmer in Dover; he married Nellie J. Root, and has two children—Albro, and Grace (Mrs. Frank Denton). Almira Sheldon, born August 16, 1848, married William Wheeler, a farmer of the town of Dover, and has five children: Carrie, born in 1877; Maude, 1879; Phœbe, 1881; Howard, 1883; and Allie, 1886.

WALTER B. CULVER, a worthy representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Amenia, and one of the large land owners of Dutchess county, is descended from good old Revolutionary stock, Joshua Culver, his great-grandfather, having assisted the colonies in gaining their independence. His grandfather, who also bore the name of Joshua, was a native of the town of Amenia, and in early life learned the tanner's trade with Capt. William Young, at Amenia Union. Subsequently he established himself at Pine Plains in the tanning business, conducting it with remarkable success and becoming a wealthy man for his day. He married Lavinia Backus, whose birth also occurred in Amenia, and to them were born five children, all now deceased, namely: Elmira, Eliza, Backus, Roxanna and Phebe.

Backus Culver, the father of our subject, was born at Pine Plains, Dutchess county, in 1806, was there reared and educated, and later turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. From farming he drifted into stock raising, becoming an extensive dealer in live stock before a railroad had been constructed through this section of the country. He married Miss Abbie Drew, and they had nine children: Joshua, Mary, Laura and Sanford (all four deceased); Walter B.; Dudley G.; Lavina, wife of William H. Bartlett; and Phebe and Henry, both deceased. The father, who was an earnest Democrat in politics, was called upon to serve in several official positions, including those of supervisor and assessor of Pine Plains. In the spring of 1864 he removed to Amenia, where he lived until life's labors were ended, in 1870, in which year his faithful wife also died.

Walter B. Culver was born in Pine Plains, May 7, 1837, and in the village schools he began his education, supplementing the knowledge there acquired by a course at Dominic Benedict's private school at Patterson, N. Y., and also at the Dutchess County Academy, of Poughkeepsie, and the Amenia Seminary.

He remained on the home farm until after attaining his majority, and in 1859 located upon the old Culver place, south of the depot at Amenia, where he continued to live until the spring of 1864. On December 17, 1863, he married Harriet J., a daughter of Ambrose Mygatt. Their children are: Mary E., Laura B., Ambrose M., Dudley D., Harry W., Arthur B., George R. and Bessie H. Like his father, Mr. Culver has always been an unswerving Democrat in his political views, and has acceptably served as commissioner and assessor of his town. He is one of the most progressive farmers of the community, and is a straightforward and reliable citizen, on whose word is considered as good as his bond.

WILLIAM VAN DE WATER is numbered among the native sons of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and for more than a century the family of which he is a representative has been connected with the history of that county. It furnished its representatives to the Revolutionary war, to the war of 1812, and to the Civil war, and its members have ever been loyal and patriotic citizens giving a hearty support to all interests and measures calculated to benefit the communities in which they have resided.

As the name indicates, the family is of Holland origin, and was founded in America by Harman Van De Water, who with several brothers came from Holland to America. One of the number located in Canada, another in Fishkill, and Harman on Manhattan Island. He served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. After the British had captured New York, he removed to Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, now the town of Poughkeepsie, locating on a farm. His death occurred in Pleasant Valley in July, 1816. He married Maria Barnes, a sister of David and Joshua Barnes, and they became the parents of six sons and one daughter, namely: Benjamin, who was born November 25, 1782, and died in Buffalo, N. Y.; William, who was born December 2, 1784, and died in Hyde Park, N.

ember 30, 1834; Richard, born May 8, 1790; Samuel, born in 1793; George, born January 27, 1795; Joshua, born January 21, 1799, his death occurring in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1877; and a daughter who died in early life.

William Van De Water, grandfather of our subject, was drafted for service in the war of 1812, was with the command of Capt. Valentine, and by him was honorably discharged. After his death the grandmother received a pension. Farming was his life work, and both he and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church. In their family were ten children: Sarah, who became the wife of William Holmes, a farmer of the town of Lagrange; Maria, deceased; George, father of our subject; Alexander, formerly a farmer, now living in Hyde Park; William A., who was a farmer and milk dealer, but is now deceased; Henry, an agriculturist in the town of Hyde Park; Hiram, a deceased farmer; John, a farmer in the town of Hyde Park; Alfred, an agriculturist of Kansas; and one who died in infancy.

George Van De Water was born April 29, 1821, in the town of Hyde Park, where, on his father's farm, he spent his boyhood days. He married Elizabeth Phillips, a native of Poughkeepsie, and a daughter of M. D. L. F. Phillips, who was named for Gen. La Fayette, a friend of the family. The ancestry of the Phillips family is English. Upon their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Van De Water located upon a farm in Pleasant Valley, where he has now made his home for fifty-one years, devoting his energies exclusively to agricultural pursuits. He gives his political support to the Republican party, and has served as assessor. Both he and his wife are consistent Presbyterians. Of their family of seven children, Lavina died in infancy, William is the next younger; Marquis P. is a farmer of Pleasant Valley; Wilson A. was married, and both he and his wife were killed by a train in 1890; Jennie M. died at the age of nineteen years; Carrie is the wife of Israel D. Marshall, a farmer of Hyde Park; and Elizabeth is the wife of Charles Ambler, a merchant of Stissing, Dutchess county.

William Van De Water, whose name introduces this review, was born on his father's farm, in the town of Pleasant Valley, June 4, 1846, and to farm work devoted his energies in the summer months, while in the winter he attended the district school of the neighborhood, completing his education in the Columbia County Academy, at Claverack. Subsequently he went to New York City, and entered upon his business career as a salesman for the firm of Lord & Taylor. He was married September 4, 1867, to Caroline E. Ganse, who was born at Wappingers Falls, a daughter of Henry Ganse, a farmer who was of Holland lineage. After his marriage, Mr. Van De Water located upon a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley, where he lived until 1881, and then embarked in the milling business at Salt Point, which he continued for five years. On the expiration of that period he purchased his present farm of 122 acres, and is now engaged in the cultivation of his land. He has placed many improvements upon his farm, and his progressive methods and well-directed efforts class him among the leading agriculturists of the county.

Mr. Van De Water gives his political support to the Republican party, and both he and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church. They are parents of five children: Rosilla M., wife of Harry A. Russell, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley; Cora A., wife of William H. Allen, a farmer, and the president of the Salt Point Creamery Co.; George H., who was killed by the kick of a horse, in North Dakota, in 1891; and Casper G. and Ethel M., at home.

MRS. MARY J. WOODIN. The Woodin family, which has been identified with the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, from early times, traces its origin to three brothers, Amos, John and Daniel Woodin, who came from England during the Revolutionary war as soldiers in the service of the British government. When the struggle for freedom was ended they settled here—Amos locating in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county; John on Huckleberry Mountain; and Daniel in Ansonia, Connecticut.

Amos Woodin married Lucretia Miller, and had six children: Solomon; Joel; Daniel² (who married Mary Pierce); Henry (who remained single); Hyal (who married Betsy Turner), and Esther (who married John Brownell). Solomon Woodin was born in the town of Pawling, in 1780, and his education was obtained there in the schools of that time. He married Miss Annie Prosser, daughter of Dr. Prosser's sister. Thirteen children were born to them, of whom all married but one, their names, together with those of their respective partners in matrimony, being as follows: Ransom—Charlotte Brairtain; Esther—Jarvis T. Sweet; Sallie—Duncan Mead; Ira—Caroline Woodin; Chauncey, who never married; Milton—Malonie Lawrence; Federal—Maria Brazee; Benjamin—Esther Brownell; Amos—Naomi Griffin; Egbert—Mary Miller; Henry L.—Laura Armstrong; Ruth—John Willard; and Lucretia—Peter Brazee.

Henry L. Woodin was born in the town of Pawling, in 1816, and on finishing his course in the schools there he became a collier, which occupation he followed some forty years; he is now engaged in farming. He and his wife have had four children: Ransom married Marinda Beers; Amelia is the wife of George Squires; Solomon married Alice Wilcox; and Coleman married (first) Elizabeth Sprague, and (second) Ida Ett.

DANIEL T. WOODIN, the son of Daniel Woodin², was born in the town of Pawling, in 1812, and was reared at the old farm, attending school in the neighborhood. He learned the cooper's trade, and followed it for some years, and later engaging in farming. Having an active mind with a legal bent, he also practiced law for some time. His wife, Mrs. Mary J. (Clump) Woodin, is a lady of unusual mental force and ability, and the descendant of one of the old families of the town of Poughkeepsie. They have had four children: (1) Isabelle was born and educated in the town of Pawling, and is now the wife of Prof. Edward T. Pierce, principal of the State Normal School at Los Angeles, Cal.; they have had three children—Ethel Elbora; Harold, who died in infancy; and Hilda Bell, who died when two years old. (2) Daniel W. Woodin, Jr., was born in the town of Pawling, and, since he completed his studies in the schools there, has been engaged in farming. (3) Arvine was born at the old homestead, in 1855, and like the others obtained her education in the local schools. (4) Gertrude B. died at an early age.

Mrs. Woodin's maternal grandfather, Samuel Lucky, was born and reared in Poughkeepsie, and in manhood became a successful farmer. By his first wife, Miss Rebecca Wilsey, he had six children: Samuel, Thomas, James, Robert, John, and Jane. Mrs. Woodin's mother, who was a native of the town of Poughkeepsie, and was reared at the old home there. She married Cornelius Clump, and had eight children, of whom Mrs. Woodin is the youngest. Rebecca married James Martin; Gertrude married (first) Charles Hoffman and (second) James Benson; John L. married Celia A. Tompkins; Sam married Eliza Phillips; Peter died in infancy; Almira is the wife of Walter Shader; and Joanna married George De La Vergne.

FRANK B. LOWN was born at the village of Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N. Y., on the first day of January, 1849. He is the son of David and Jane M. Lown, and with his parents removed to the city of Poughkeepsie in 1857, where he has since resided.

Mr. Lown was educated in the public schools of the city of Poughkeepsie, and in 1871 entered the law office of Nelson & Baker as a law student. After being admitted to the bar, he became a clerk in the office of Thompson & Weeks, then the oldest firm of practitioners in the county. In 1878, the firm of Thompson, Weeks & Lown was formed, and upon the death of James H. Weeks in 1887 and of John Thompson in 1891, Mr. Lown became the sole survivor. He is still engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Poughkeepsie.

LEWIS B. BARTON, proprietor of the "Amenia House," at Amenia, Dutchess county, comes of a well-known and honorable family that has long been connected with the professional and business interests of the county. Dr. Lewis Barton, his great-grandfather, was one of the early residents and successful practitioners of the town of Stanford where he served as assessor in 1793, that being the first town meeting held in the town of Stanford in the house of Ephraim Paine. The farm owned by him in that township is still in the possession of the family. He died in 1813, at the age of eighty-nine years.

Dr. Leonard Barton, the grandfather, was born there in 1769, and he also devoted his life to the practice of medicine in the town of Stanford, where he owned a large farm, and was a prominent and influential citizen, holding several important offices. As early as 1799 he served as town clerk, and was supervisor of his township in 1818, 1819, 1820, 1829 and 1830. His political support was given the Democracy, and socially he affiliated with the Masonic fraternity. He was twice married his first wife being Miss Thompson, and to them was born a son, John. After her death he wedded Rachel Gale, and they had ten children: George; James; Eliachim; Edward P., of New Milford, Conn.; Josiah L.; Julia, who married Morgan Hunting; Rachel, who married Stephen Sackett; Nancy, who married John Davis; Nelson, who died in 1852; and Sarah, who married Anthony Hoffman. All are now deceased with the exception of Edward P.; Dr. Leonard Barton deceased in 1841, at the age of seventy-two years.

James A. Brown

Josiah L. Barton, the father of our subject, was born August 1, 1816, in the town of Stanford, and acquired an excellent education at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in Washington township, Dutchess county, after which he began the study of medicine, but later gave it up. In 1844 he married Miss Annor Eliza Briggs, who was born in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, March 29, 1822, a daughter of Enoch Briggs. They became the parents of three children, of whom our subject is the eldest; (2) Arzelia is the wife of Bryant Strever, of Ancram, N. Y., by whom he has one son, Henry; (3) Julius L., of Milerton, Dutchess county, married Annie Pulver, and they had two children, Ethel (deceased) and Harry. After his marriage the father removed to Ancram Lead Mines, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he engaged in farming from 1844 until 1849, and then removed to the village of Ancram Lead Mines. There he conducted a hotel until the spring of 1854, when he came to Pulvers Corners in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, and carried on the same business for a year. In the spring of 1855 he removed to Dover Plains, where he ran the "Stone Church Hotel" for the same length of time. Going to Ancram he resided there until 1863, when he returned to Ancram Lead Mines, where his death occurred in 1866, and as he was a member of Warren Lodge, F. & A. M., he was buried with Masonic honors. He was also connected with the I. O. O. F. at Pine Plains. He died February 20, 1866, at the age of forty-nine years, six months and twenty days, and at the time he was serving as collector at Ancram.

Lewis Briggs Barton, whose name introduces this sketch, was born in the town of Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., August 5, 1846, and during his early years accompanied his parents on their various removals, attending school at Ancram Lead Mines, Pulvers Corners and Dover Plains. On leaving the parental roof he went to Lithgow, in the town of Washington, where he carried on farming until 1871. On November 15 of that year he was there married to Miss Mary Anna Tompkins, daughter of Enoch Tompkins. He then engaged at Lithgow in the butchering business with Cyrus Hammond for two years, after which he followed the same line of trade at Wassaic, N. Y. From 1873 until 1876 he conducted the "Wassaic House." In the spring of 1880 he removed to Amenia, where he has since had charge of the "Amenia House," which was opened for guests in 1852. It is conveniently arranged and well furnished, and in all its appointments, under its present excellent management, a first-class hotel, and is well patronized. Mr. Barton holds membership with the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit Association, also the New York State Hotel Association, and since 1868 has been connected with the Masonic order, joining Shekomeko Lodge No. 458, F. & A. M., at Mabbettsville, now located at Washington Hollow, Dutchess county. He makes a genial, popular host, and as a private citizen stands deservedly high in the estimation of his fellowmen.

CORNELIUS WINNE GRIFFEN, the well-known member of the firm of Griffen Brothers, proprietors of the Union Mills at Leedsville, Dutchess county, was born in New York City, March 11, 1856. He belongs to an old and prominent family of Dutchess county, his grandfather, Bartholomew Griffen, who was a blacksmith by trade, having been a resident of Unionvale. He married Sarah Filkins, by whom he had eight children, namely: Bartholomew (deceased); George; Cornelius (deceased); Alonzo; Mary; Caroline (deceased); Jane Ann; and Timothy S., the father of our subject.

The birth of the last named occurred in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, July 19, 1811, and until thirteen years of age he there spent his boyhood. He then entered the old Red Mill, near Pawling, where he learned the milling business, which he subsequently followed at Verbank, Dutchess county. At that place he wedded Mary LeRoy, daughter of John LeRoy, and to them were born three children: Charles E., of Wassaic, Dutchess county; Catherine M., of New York City; and Frances, of Colorado. About 1837 Timothy S. Griffen removed to South Amenia, where he conducted a mill for about three years, after which he returned to Verbank for a short time, and in 1842 moved to Leedsville, here running a mill on shares for nine years. In 1851 he went to New York City, where he was engaged in the grocery and meat-market business until March, 1857, when he removed to Salisbury, Conn., there operating the Long Pond mills until 1861, in the spring of which year he returned to South Amenia. He then conducted the Weebotuck mills until the spring of 1877, when he again brought his family to Leedsville, where his death occurred June 10, 1885. He was strictly a self-made man, honest and industrious, and in politics a supporter of the Republican party, while socially he belonged to the I. O. O. F. at Sharon, Conn., and religiously was a member of the Episcopal Church at Amenia Union.

For his second wife, Timothy S. Griffen married Miss Helen Beach, by whom he had two children: John and Helen. At Schodack, State of New York, he was subsequently united in marriage with Lydia Ann Winne, and they became the parents of eight children: William A. (deceased); George A., of Leedsville; Frank P., of Chicago, Ill.; Cornelius Winne, of this sketch; Mary A., wife of Charles E. Still, of Wassaic, Dutchess county; Alonzo D. (deceased); Peter A., of Leedsville; and Ida S.

In 1877 our subject began the milling business at Leedsville, and two years later took his brother, George A., as a partner. In March, 1886, they purchased the mill property which they still own, and in the fall of 1887 admitted their younger brother, Peter A., as a member of the firm, which then assumed the firm style of Griffen Brothers. They are manufacturers of and dealers in flour, feed, grain, etc., and also buy and sell hams, shoulders, pork, lard and butter. In connection with their other business they in 1893 established a grocery store, which they have since successfully conducted. They are wide-awake, energetic business men, and success has come to them as a just reward for their labor.

At Amenia, December 23, 1886, Cornelius W. Griffen was married to Miss Georgiana Palmer, daughter of Hiram Palmer, and four children have blessed their union: Clarence P., Harry Stephen, Elsie Alide and Joel C. The cause of education has ever found in Mr. Griffen an earnest advocate and supporter; for four successive terms he has been the efficient trustee of his school district, and is now (1897) serving his fifth term. His life is a living illustration of what ability, energy and force of character can accomplish, and while promoting his own interests he has materially advanced the welfare of the community.

DANIEL VAN DE BOGART, a prominent resident of Red Hook, Dutchess county, and one of the leading contractors and builders of that region, is a descendant of one of our most distinguished pioneer families.

The great-great-grandfather of our subject was Myndert Van De Bogart, who in 1702, with his brother, Jacobus, emigrated from Amsterdam, Holland, and settled on the site of Poughkeepsie. They acquired a large tract of land and built one of the first eleven houses in that city. Jacobus Van De Bogart was one of the first sheriffs of Dutchess county, in 1726. The two brothers, Jacobus and Myndert, gave the land and contributed liberally to the first church in the village, which was to be a Reformed Dutch meeting-house. In 1715 Jacobus Van De Bogart leased land to the county for a court house and jail, and in 1734 it was made a county seat. Myndert was in 1744 married to Gretchert Kipp, daughter of Jacob and Engellge Pells. Myndert Van De Bogart, Jr., was married in 1765 to Miss Hanna Velie. Peter, son of Myndert Van De Bogart, was married in 1807 to Mary Maria Wilcox.

James Van De Bogart, our subject's father, was a lifelong resident of Poughkeepsie, receiving his education there, and afterward following the trade of mason. He married Miss Mary Ann Windover, of the same city, and had seven children: James K., who died in infancy, Ellen, Lydia Ann, Daniel, Eugene, James and Harriet.

Daniel Van De Bogart was born December 25, 1849, and, after availing himself of the excellent educational advantages offered in the schools of Poughkeepsie, he learned the mason's trade with William Sague, a prominent mason of that city. For a few years he worked as a journeyman and then went into business for himself at Verbank, and met with such success that he looked about for a wide field for operations. In 1873 he moved to Red Hook, and since that time he has erected many of the finest structures in that and other towns. Among the most notable are the two elegant residences at Summit, N. J., built for Miss Donaldson and Mrs. Bronson; St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Red Hook; the Methodist Church at Red Hook, erected in 1893; the beautiful mansion of Johnston Livingston on the banks of the Hudson at Tivoli; several charitable institutions built by Gen. John Watts De Peyster; the De Peyster Memorial Church at Tivoli, erected in 1892; the St. Paul's Training School; the Hospital for Consumptives at Verbank, in 1894-95; and the annex to the Leak & Watts Orphan House at Yonkers, N. Y., 1896. These and other substantial and artistic buildings will stand for ages to come as a monument to his skill and ability.

On September 3, 1873, Mr. Van De Bogaert was married to Miss Estella Pulver, a daughter of Louis Pulver, a prosperous farmer of Red Hook. Of this union eight children were born: Allard A. March 1, 1875; Mary, April 28, 1877; Edna, October 30, 1879; Daniel, March 19, 1882; Ernest, July 17, 1884; Lucinda, May 9, 1887; Ralph, November 7, 1889; and Maynard J., April 17, 1892. In all local movements our subject takes an influential part on the side of progress, and he has found time to fill creditably several official positions, having been collector of the town of Red Hook, and one of the trustees of the village, when it was incorporated in 1894. In 1893 he received the nomination for supervisor of the town of Red Hook. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F., for many years but is not at present active in the order.

GEORGE C. SMITH, superintendent of one of the most important departments in the extensive works of the New York Rubber Company, and a prominent resident of Fishkill-on-Hudson, was born January 8, 1840, at Shrub Oak, Westchester Co., N. Y., of English descent.

Leonard Smith, his father, son of Jacob Smith, and a well-to-do farmer of Westchester county, was born in 1806, and married Mary A. Carpenter, who was born April 13, 1814, a daughter of Walter and Nancy (Somerbell) Carpenter. Ten children were born of this union, of whom eight lived to adult age: George C., Ferdinand, Leonard, Lewis, Theodore, William, Lauretta, and Mary I. (who married Charles E. Martin, a grocer of Fishkill-on-Hudson). The father of these died January 21, 1868; the mother on March 16, 1869.

George C. Smith attended the district schools at Shrub Oak in early boyhood, and then pursued a wider course of study in the public schools of Peekskill, and the well-known academy of the same town. When he attained the age of seventeen he left home to make his own way in the world, and, going to Brooklyn, he secured employment in a grocery and feed store, owned by George & Alfred Wallace. With them he remained two years, and then came to Fishkill Landing, where he was employed by William Teller & Co. until 1861, in which year he entered the service of the New York Rubber Company. He began as a day hand, but so efficient and capable did he prove that he was promoted, from time to time, until he was appointed to the responsible position of superintendent of the hollow-goods department, which employs 130 men, boys and girls, the entire plant containing in all about 250 employes. This honorable record of continuous service speaks more eloquently of his essential trustworthiness than could any words, and Mr. Smith, who is a stockholder of the company, is, as may well be imagined, a valued worker in other business enterprises, being a stockholder and director in the Holland Hotel Company, and for twenty years past a trustee of the Mechanics Savings Bank, of Fishkill-on-Hudson. He takes a prominent part in local politics, also being an ardent supporter of the Republican party. In 1875 he was elected trustee of the village, and has since held that office almost continuously. In 1895 he was elected president of the village; in March, 1896, was again chosen to that office, and also in 1897. For a number of years he was a member of the 21st Regiment New York State Militia, which was called out during the Civil war, and served thirty days at Baltimore. Socially he is affiliated with Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M.

Mr. Smith has a pleasant home overlooking the Hudson river and the city of Newburg, where he owns two large lots opposite his residence. His wife, whom he married in August, 1861, was formerly Miss Elsie M. Bishop, daughter of Miles and Cynthia (Ives) Bishop, of Woodbury, Conn. Her ancestors were early settlers in New England, and one was a soldier in the Revolutionary war; her father served in the war of 1812. Mr. and Mrs.

Smith are members of the Reformed Church. They have one son, Walter A. Smith, who is at home.

WARREN S. DIBBLE, one of the substantial business men of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is the proprietor of the popular hotel known as the "Dibble House," and also of the Dibble Opera House, a favorite place of amusement for the best people of that town.

His great-grandfather, Jonathan Dibble, was a soldier in the Revolutionary army. His grandparents were Seth and Diana (Sherwood) Dibble, and his father was the late Augustus N. Dibble, a well-known farmer of Litchfield county, Conn., who was born February 20, 1811. He married Henrietta Morgan, and they reared a family of three children, of whom our subject is the eldest; Mary E. is the wife of Robert Cooley, of Albany, N. Y.; and Belle married William Daly, Waterbury, Connecticut.

Warren S. Dibble was born July 11, 1842, at Cornwall, where the schools afforded excellent educational advantages, of which Mr. Dibble availed himself, attending the public schools for some years, and later the Adelphi Institute. After his graduating, in 1858, he taught for several years in different places, and then went "on the road" as an auctioneer. A few years later he engaged in the hotel business, first at Cornwall, Conn., and then at Pine Plains, N. Y., and in 1877 he purchased his present hotel at Matteawan, then known as the Jaycox property. This he has greatly improved, making additions from time to time until it now contains seventy-five rooms; and he has also built a commodious stable. In 1886 he erected the Dibble Opera House, which he is at present managing, and is furnishing a high class of entertainment to an appreciative public. He has also built several tenement houses which he rents. Genial in manner, but possessing keen discrimination in financial matters, Mr. Dibble holds the confidence of the people in an unusual degree. He is a Republican, politically, but is not an active worker in the party.

On April 11, 1870, Mr. Dibble married Miss Jane Stoddard, daughter of Jasper and Sophia (Hubbard) Stoddard. She is a member of the Baptist Church. They have one daughter, Daisy M., a young lady of fine social gifts, who attends the Episcopal Church, and takes an active part in various charitable enterprises.

JOHN FLANNERY. The "Flannery House" at Fishkill Landing is one of the finest and best managed hostelries in that locality, and its genial proprietor, the subject of this sketch, has demonstrated his business sagacity in his liberal yet judicious expenditures, in its building and equipment. When he purchased the property, in 1878, it was simply a marshy lot with an old shanty upon it, but as its location near the dock made it especially suitable for his purposes, he secured it at a cost of $10,000, and he has since spent $25,000 in the improvements which he has made from time to time.

Mr. Flannery was born March 25, 1849, in Dublin, Ireland, but his father, Patrick Flannery, a native of the same place, was for some years a farmer in County Tipperary before coming to America. Our subject's mother, whose maiden name was Katie Moore, was also a native of Dublin, and her death occurred there in 1854. Of their four children, our subject was the youngest. (1) James died at the age of four years; (2) Patrick E., who served as a soldier throughout the Civil war, is now a successful hotel-keeper at St. Paul, Minn.; and (3) Mary is the wife of Michael Ormand, a wealthy resident of Hastings, Minn. The father, Patrick Flannery, married a second wife, and for some time after his arrival in America lived upon a farm at Goshen, N. Y. He is now living in retirement, having sold the place to our subject. In religion he is a devout Catholic, and he has been an adherent of the Democratic party ever since he came to this country.

As John Flannery was but a child when he made the trip across the Atlantic, his boyhood was mainly spent at Goshen, where he received his elementary education. He also attended school at Campbell Hall, Orange county, and in Poughkeepsie. His first venture in the business world was at Goshen, where, when a mere boy, he conducted a hotel, and in seven months made $12,000, a remarkable beginning. He continued in the hotel business for two years, and then spent one year in rest and recreation, after which he went to Poughkeepsie, as mentioned, and studied for a year. Resuming business, he conducted a hotel at Newburg for three years, and then bought one in the country, in Orange county, which he sold after two years, returning to Newburg and continuing in business there for three years. In 1876 he moved to Fishkill Landing, leasing the old "Myer's Hotel," near the depot, where he remained until he established his present place. Since taking up that enterprise he has purchased a wholesale liquor business in Newburg, and he is also interested in thoroughbred horses, having owned many valuable trotters. He is highly respected, and has always been noted for his liberality in political, educational or philanthropical movements which appeal to his judgment, and especially to the Catholic Church, of which he is a member. In politics he is a Democrat, and his influence in the organization is widely recognized.

In 1867 Mr. Flannery married his first wife, Miss Mary Groody, of Binghamton, N. Y., a daughter of John Groody, a well-known brewer of ale. Three children were born of this union: John, Jr., who died at the age of eighteen; William, who died at twenty-four; and Katie, the wife of Daniel Glinn, of Newburg. Mrs. Mary Flannery died at Fishkill Landing, in 1892, and on October 17, 1894, our subject was married to Miss Margaret J. Faulkner, an Episcopalian, the ceremony being performed in the Catholic Church, by Father T. F. Kelly. One son, John G., brightens their home.

Mrs. Flannery is a native of Newburg, where she was born May 1, 1870. Her family originated in England, but her great-grandfather, who was a major in the English army, settled in the North of Ireland, in County Antrim, where her grandfather, Richard Faulkner, was born, and is still living at an advanced age, having passed his life there as an extensive agriculturist. He is a strict Episcopalian, and a generous contributor to various charities. He married Margaret Ewing, who was of Irish descent, and had the following children: John and Jane, twins, who died in infancy; Richard (1) deceased; John H.; James (1); Mary, wife of James Weir, of Ireland; George, a well-to-do farmer there; Robert H., a police captain at Derry, Ireland; Elizabeth, wife of James Walters, of Ireland; William, a successful farmer at the old homestead; Margaret, deceased, formerly the wife of John Nesbitt, principal of a school at Randallstown; Richard (2), and James (2).

John H. Faulkner was reared in the old country, attending school at Seymour Bridge, and in early manhood engaged in the grocery business at Belfast. On June 25, 1867, he wedded Miss Agnes Colville, who was born August 5, 1844, at Ballymena, County Antrim, Ireland, daughter of Hugh Colville, and granddaughter of Alexander Colville. Her mother, Jane (Gordon), was also born there, and both families were among the old residents of the town. Mr. Faulkner continued in business in Belfast about three years after his marriage, and in 1870 he and his wife came to Newburg, where he became a salesman in a wholesale liquor store. It was not long before he had acquired a sufficient acquaintance with his new surroundings to warrant him in opening a similar establishment on his own account, and he has ever since been engaged in the business. In 1880 he removed to Matteawan, but later he transferred his interests to Fishkill Landing, where he has remained. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner, as follows: Agnes and Jennie, who died in infancy; Robert C., who graduated from the School of Pharmacy in New York City, and is now a druggist at Cornwall, N. Y.; Margaret J. (Mrs. Flannery); Martha, a graduate of De Garmo Institute, who is at home; Richard, a publisher in New York City, and a member of the Seventy-first regiment, N. Y. N. G.; Esther, who died in infancy; John G. and Esther (2), who are at home; Agnes, deceased, and another child who died in infancy.

FRANCIS TIMONEY, a wealthy brick manufacturer of Dutchess Junction, Dutchess county, is one of those business men whose industry and enterprise seem limitless, their activity in varied lines of work appearing to be an easy and natural exercise of their inborn capacity for organization.

Mr. Timoney was born August 4, 1829, in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and is the third of his name. His grandfather, Francis Timoney (1), married Winifred Gallagher, and their son, Francis Timoney (2) (our subject's father), married Abbie Duffy, by whom he had eight children: Dennis, Patrick, James, Francis, John, Winifred, Mary and Bridget. The common schools of his native land did not afford Mr. Timoney the advantages that he needed, and he was partly educated by private tutors. At the age of twenty-three he came to America, and located at Verplanck's Point, Westchester county, where he found employment in the brick yard of S. M. Dykeman. After three years he was put in charge of the yard as foreman, and held that position for two years, when he began to work on shares, Mr. Dykeman furnishing the plant, horses, carts, and implements, and Mr. Timoney supplying the labor and feeding the horses. This arrangement lasted two years, and then Mr. Timoney purchased a half interest in the business, and four years later he bought the other half and continued the business alone until 1886, when he purchased his present property at Dutchess Junction at a cost of $42,000. There was at the time one yard in working order, and he has since fitted up two others, expending from $50,000 to $75,000 upon his improvements. He now has three yards which he would not hesitate to compare with any on the Hudson. He can turn out a quarter of a million brick per day, and his daily expenditure for labor alone is from $300 to $500. He owns two barges which he uses to convey his brick to market, most of which is disposed of in New York City. For twenty years past he has been a prominent member of the Brick Exchange in that city, and his thirty-seven years of continuous work in brick manufacture has made him authority on all points relating to the business. But his success in this line of effort has not prevented him from engaging in others, and while at Verplanck's Point he carried on a grocery and dry-goods store for over eighteen years, the butcher business for two years, and the coal business for four years. Since coming to Dutchess Junction he has devoted his attention to his main line of business, but he takes an active interest in the Matteawan National Bank, in which he is a stockholder and director.

In politics Mr. Timoney is a Democrat, and while living at Verplanck's Point he was for two years a member of the board of auditors of Cortland township; but his business interests have prevented him from taking a very active part in political affairs.

On July 6, 1855, he married Miss Margaret Reed, daughter of John and Margaret (McKil-lup) Reed, and they have had eleven children, four of whom died in infancy. Their eldest child, Mary Ann, is the wife of John C. McNamara, a commission merchant of New York City, formerly a resident of Fulton, N. Y., but now living at Fishkill Landing. Francis A., one of the leading young business men of Dutchess Junction, is a brick manufacturer, merchant, and at present the postmaster there, having been appointed in January, 1894. He married Miss Margaret Grady, of Fishkill Landing. Five younger children—Theresa, Susie, John, James and Clara—are still at home. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

ROBERT P. LAWSON, a wealthy fisherman and real-estate holder of New Hamburg, Dutchess county, was born in that village about seventy years ago. His ancestors came originally from Holland, and the family is one of the oldest in the county.

Cornelius Lawson, our subject's grandfather, was born in Dutchess county, and followed the occupation of farming all his life. He reared a large family of children, among whom was Cornelius Lawson (2), our subject's father, who passed the greater part of his life in the village of New Hamburg, where he engaged in the occupation of lime burning. He married Miss Amy Lawson, a native of that village, and reared a family of five children, of whom our subject (the third son) is now the only survivor. Jeremiah and Cornelius were boatmen on the Hudson; John was a farmer of Dutchess county; and Ann, the youngest child, married Moses Sensabal, now deceased. The parents passed away many years ago.

Robert P. Lawson has spent his entire life at New Hamburg, and has secured a fine competence, being the owner of a valuable property in the village, and his industry and thrift have won for him the high esteem of his associates. In 1855 he married Miss Ann Orbson, a native of Ulster county, who died in 1893, leaving no children. In politics Mr. Lawson is a Democrat, as was his father before him, and he has never wavered in his devotion to the principles of his party.

ALONZO S. WILTSE, a well-known citizen of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, proprietor of a grocery located on the corner of Main and Ferry streets and South avenue, is descended on both sides of the family from old Holland-Dutch ancestry.

His father, the late Benjamin Wiltse, was born May 4, 1799, and became a farmer in the town of Fishkill. He married Margaret Ann Tidd, who was born December 22, 1801, and had eight children: Jane, Annis, Catherine, Margaret, Peter, Charles, Cyrus and Alonzo S. Of this family, our subject and three daughters are the only survivors. The father died January 1, 1881, and the mother on January 9, 1868.

Alonzo S. Wiltse was born at the old homestead in the town of Fishkill, April 24, 1840, and was educated in the district schools of the neighborhood, his attendance, after he reached the age of twelve, being limited to the winter terms as his help was needed in summer in the work on the farm. At nineteen he began his business career at Fishkill-on-Hudson as a clerk for S. G. & J. T. Smith, dealers in dry goods and groceries, with whom he spent six years. He then entered the employ of the Newburg, Dutchess and Connecticut R. R. Co., taking charge of the buildings and bridges along the entire line. This position he held until 1880, when he received the appointment to the post of engineer at Sing Sing Prison, which he held eight years. In 1888 he resigned and returned to Fishkill-on-Hudson, where he established his present business, in which he has met with well-deserved success.

Mr. Wiltse married Miss Mary E. Benson, a descendant of one of the prominent families of Highland, Ulster county, and the daughter of Capt. John Benson and his wife, Priscilla H. Benson. Two children were born of this union: Charles B., who has been for some time a train dispatcher on the N. D. & C. R. R., and Carrie L., a successful teacher in the public schools of Fishkill. The family attend the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fishkill Landing. In politics Mr. Wiltse has always been a steadfast Republican; socially, he is a member of Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M.

ABRAMHAM BRETT was a descendant of one of our oldest families. His paternal great-grandfather, George Brett, married Hannah Cooper; their son, Francis G. Brett, married Margaret Camel, and their son, Harvey Brett, married Susan Coleman, and had three sons: Wesley, Abraham and Charles Fletcher, and one daughter—Emma—who died in her seventh year. Abraham Brett was born in Matteawan February 1, 1843, and died April 13, 1893. He attended the schools of the village and the Tarrytown Institute for some years, and then entered Claverack College, Claverack, Columbia county. After graduation he at once began a mercantile career, spending two years as a clerk for Mr.

Wells in a general store at Highland Falls, N. Y., and then went to Newburgh, to enter the employ of Isaac Wood, at that time a prominent dry-goods merchant there. After one year he returned to Matteawan, and clerked for David Davis in his general store, which was long known as the "old Matteawan store." The building has since been torn down and replaced by the Music Hall building, now occupied by S. G. and J. T. Smith as a dry-goods store. After learning the details of mercantile business, Mr. Brett opened an establishment of his own August 1, 1865, the first exclusive dry-goods store in the town, and about a year later his brother, Charles F. Brett, was taken into partnership, under the firm name of A. & C. F. Brett. The first location was in what was known as the Mechanics Hall building, and from there they moved to the Phillips building, and remained until 1876, when they went to a store which they had just completed, next to the Howland Library building. Here the business is still carried on, C. F. Brett conducting it since his brother's death, and retaining the same firm name. In politics the late Abraham Brett was a Republican, and in religion a Methodist, being an active member of the Church. In 1863 he married Jane, a daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth Randall Tompkins. They had three children: ALBERT V., Emma S. and Harvey, Jr.

GEORGE SIEVERS, a retired clothing merchant and hotel proprietor, of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born October 3, 1824, in Hanover, Germany, where he grew to manhood and learned the tailoring business.

Mr. Sievers was united in marriage with Miss Louisa Frese, who was also born in Hanover, and was a daughter of Henry Frese. They were married in Hanover September 19, 1847, and directly thereafter came to America, locating in Albany, where our subject followed his trade for three years. He and his wife then came to Poughkeepsie, and have since remained here. Mr. Sievers worked at his trade for a year, and then went into the clothing business, his store being located at No. 282 Main street, where he remained until 1861, and then started a hotel on the corner of Bridge and Main streets, carrying on at the same time a liquor business, until 1870, since which time he has been retired. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sievers: Susie, who became the wife of Charles Achuster, a butcher, and died in 1884; Charles died at the age of twelve years; Louisa married Dr. Harper, of Cambridge, who is deceased; Anna married Bonocio B. Llensa, and they own a plantation in Porto Rico; Jeraldine is the wife of Dr. John P. Wilson.

When President Lincoln called for volunteers in 1863, Mr. Sievers answered the call, and was appointed lieutenant of Company G, N. Y. S. M. He is a member of the Masonic order, and, with his wife, attends the German Lutheran Church. He is a fine German citizen, one who has helped to promote matters of public interest in Poughkeepsie. He possesses considerable real estate, and is one of the leading men of the city.

Our subject's father, Christian Sievers, was born in England, learned the tailoring business and followed it all his life. He married Miss Dora Tilke, a native of Hanover, and the following children were born to them: Christian, Henry and Carl, tailors by trade, who died in Germany; Dora, who died unmarried; and George, our subject. The father died in 1838 and the mother in 1831. The grandfather was a French Huguenot, born in France.

THOMAS G. NICHOLS (deceased), the founder of The Sunday Courier, of Poughkeepsie, now owned and edited by Arthur G. Tobey, was born in Boston, Mass., January 8, 1827. While he was quite young his parents removed to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he attended the common schools, and then commenced an apprenticeship to the printer's trade. Soon after his apprenticeship ended he opened a job-printing office, the first one in Poughkeepsie. In May, 1852, in partnership with John H. Bush (now also deceased), under the name of Nichols & Bush, he started the first daily paper published in the city, which was called The City Press; but in 1858 it was sold to Albert S. Pease, who changed its name to The Daily Press. Mr. Nichols then gave his attention to job printing, and continued exclusively in that line until 1868, when with the assistance of George Innis and others he established another daily paper called The Morning News, which soon became quite popular. Receiving a favorable offer, however, from Hegeman & Wilbur, Mr. Nichols sold the paper to them, and they changed its name to The Poughkeepsie News. Subsequently J. O. Whitehouse purchased the paper, and for a year or two Mr. Nichols remained looking out for a good opportunity to enter anew the field of journalism. The favorable time came, and December 15, 1872, he commenced the publication of The Sunday Courier, the first Sunday paper issued between New York and Albany. Many of his friends doubted the wisdom of his enterprise; but it prospered, thanks to his own indomitable perseverance and energy, as well as the influence and patronage of his many friends; and when in 1888, owing to failing health, he concluded to sell his newspaper, he realized a competence which enabled him to retire from business, and take his ease for the remainder of his days. He died August 26, 1895, at the residence of Mr. Ackerman, at Carthage Landing, N. Y., where for some time previous he had been making his home, having never married. He was peculiarly fitted for the profession which he chose to adopt, was careful, painstaking and discreet, his editorials, withal, showing marked ability and thought.

ARTHUR G. TOBEY, the well-known editor and sole proprietor of The Sunday Courier, was born May 5, 1850, in the city of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, where he lived until eight years of age, and then went with his parents to Utica, N. Y., where he attended the public schools. Later he was employed in a drug store at Rome, N. Y., remaining there for about two years, and subsequently returning to Poughkeepsie, where he learned the printing business, with T. G. Nichols, who was then conducting the Morning News with singular ability.

In 1871 Mr. Nichols sold the News to Hegeman & Wilbur, and Mr. Tobey was made foreman and, subsequently, local editor. Later our subject went to New York City and engaged in the restaurant business. Disposing of his restaurant in December, 1872, he in the following month returned to Poughkeepsie and assumed the position of manager and local editor of The Sunday Courier, which was established December 15, 1872. He held that position until December, 1888, when he purchased the paper, which at that time had a circulation of 5,000. This he has increased to 8,500. Mr. Tobey has never aspired to political or party honors, but has devoted his entire time and attention to his business, and has always conducted his paper on a non-partisan basis and with eminent personal popularity and pecuniary success. Beside the sole ownership of The Courier and a full modern plant, he has constructed and resides in an attractive residence on one of the most pleasant avenues in the city.

A. G. Tobey

In 1875 Mr. Tobey was married at Highland, Ulster county, to Miss Florence Deyo, a daughter of the late Monroe Deyo, and they have two children: Earle D. and Florence E. Our subject is a member of Triune Lodge, F. & A. M., of Poughkeepsie Council No. 391, R. A., and of Hudson River Lodge, A. O. U. W.

Henry L. Tobey, our subject's father, was born in Poughkeepsie, and was one of the editors of the Utica Herald at the time of his death. He learned the printer's trade in the office of The Eagle, in Poughkeepsie, going from there to Kingston, where he was employed as a writer on The Journal. He subsequently went to Utica, where he died at the age of thirty-five. He was married in Poughkeepsie to Miss Eliza A. Seabury, and they had the following children: Heman A. (deceased); Clara (deceased); Arthur G., our subject; and Kate E., wife of George R. Mooney, of New York.

Heman Tobey, the grandfather of Arthur G., was born in Sharon, Conn., and was at maturity a merchant in Poughkeepsie, where he married Miss Hannah Bolan.

GEORGE WARHURST, the present efficient superintendent of the engraving department of the Dutchess Print Works, at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, has now held that position for sixteen years, and the long period of fifty-three years connected with that business plainly indicates his fidelity to duty. He has been longer in the employ of the company than any other man, and his trustworthiness and capability have been fully appreciated by those over him.

Mr. Warhurst was born at Newtonmore, England, April 19, 1824, and is a son of George and Mary (Wood) Warhurst, both so natives of England, the former born in 1799, and the latter in 1798. Their marriage was celebrated in England, and some of their children were born there, while the births of the others occurred after their removal to America; they were as follows: William, deceased, was a gold-leaf manufacturer of New York City; Ann married William D. Snow, who in early life was a block printer, and later became a shoe merchant of Wappingers Falls, but both are now deceased; Thomas (1) died in infancy; George, of this review, is next in order of birth; Thomas (2), for several years served as agent on the road for "Blind Tom," the musician, and others, but is now living retired in New York City; Betsy, deceased, was the wife of Mr. McGinn, of Newburgh, N. Y.; James was a carpenter and shipyard superintendent in Chicago, but has now laid aside business cares; and Mary died in infancy. On his emigration to the United States, the father located first at Belleville, N. J., in 1831, where he worked at his trade of blacksmithing for a short time, and then came to Wappingers Falls, where he followed the same occupation. His death occurred in New York City, and his wife, who survived him, has also departed this life. The family were earnest and faithful members of the Episcopal Church.

When seven years of age George Warhurst was brought by his parents to the New World, and at Wappingers Falls grew to manhood. During his youth he learned machine-engraving — to calico printing — and has followed that business continuously since, being connected with the Dutchess Print Works for over half a century, as previously stated.

In 1845 Mr. Warhurst was joined in wedlock with Mary Turner, who was born near Leeds, England, and is a daughter of William and Mary (Wood) Turner. After coming to America her father followed the leather business for a time, both in New York City and Wappingers Falls, but his last days were spent upon a farm in Wisconsin. To our subject and his estimable wife have been born the following children: William, who died in Wisconsin; Mary, wife of Dan Ives, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rowena, wife of Dr. William Baxter, of Wappingers Falls; Esther, wife of William J. Brown; Lizzie, wife of Dr. L. C. Wood, also of Wappingers Falls; George and Joseph, both machine-engravers of the same place; Martha, who died in infancy; Violetta, wife of James Hunter, of Wappingers Falls; Edith, wife of M. J. Van Aden, a merchant of New Hamburg, Dutchess county; Martha; Frank, a die maker, who is living at home; and Louisa, wife of Richard A. Pott, a publisher of New York City.

As neighbors, friends and citizens, Mr.

Warhurst and his wife are held in the highest regard. Both are members of the Episcopal Church, in which he is at present a vestryman. They are passing quietly down the sunset hill of life, enjoying the esteem and confidence of their neighbors, and the affection of their children and friends. In politics Mr. Warhurst has been a life-long Republican, has served as trustee of the schools of Wappingers Falls, and for two terms was trustee of the village. He is a trustee of the Grinnell Library Association, and is at present trustee of the Wappinger Savings Bank. For forty years he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and with the Masonic lodge, No. 671, F. & A. M., in which he has served as master, he has been connected for many years.

ASAHEL DENMAN LYON was born August 12, 1838, in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, a son of Clinton and Jane (Denman) Lyon. His father was the son of Aaron Lyon, a surveyor by profession, who married a Miss Nelson, an ancestor of the Nelsons of Poughkeepsie. The Lyon family came from England.

Clinton Lyon, our subject's father, was a machinist and a fine workman. He was a man of great natural ability, and when Henry Clay ran for President he "stumped" Orange county in his behalf, and became well-known as a fluent and forcible speaker. He was well qualified to hold a high position in society, and was a warm friend of the historian Benson J. Lossing, and of Egbert Kelley. They were all members of the same reading class, and were in accord in many things. Clinton Lyon worked on the construction of the first steamboat which ran on the Hudson river, and on many other important structures. He was a liberal Democrat, afterward becoming a Whig and a strong Protectionist. He died in 1840, esteemed and respected throughout the county. The wife of Clinton Lyon was a daughter of John Denman, and a granddaughter of Asahel Armstrong, who was a brother of Gen. Armstrong. They had seven children, namely: John Robert, Adeline, Horatio, Sheridan and Julia (both died when sixteen years old), Asahel, and William Henry (born August 27, 1840, lives in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania).

Asahel D. Lyon received only a limited education, but has been a great reader, and is a man of keen perception, one of close observation, in which way he learns much. He is well-informed on all current topics, and is a man of sterling good sense. When Asahel was only two years old his father died, and as soon as he was able to work the lad was put out on a farm, the wages of even so small a boy of eleven years being a help to his widowed mother. He worked by the month until eighteen or nineteen years old, when he started out for himself, running a threshing machine for three years. He was married when twenty-two, and after working for awhile on a farm went into the butchering business, which has grown to be quite extensive, and in which he is still engaged. He has also for a number of years done some auctioneering.

In 1871 Mr. Lyon bought his present farm of 120 acres, which he is carrying on, as well as his other business, and has become a very successful agriculturist. He is active and energetic, and puts through whatever he undertakes, qualities which are essential in a farmer as much as in any other man, and which seldom fail to bring prosperity. In politics he is a Republican, and believes strongly in Protection. In public matters he has always been ready to assist in the development and growth of the community, and has taken a special interest in the schools of the county, doing all in his power to make them equal to any in the State.

On February 22, 1860, Mr. Lyon was married to Sarah A. Lawless, daughter of Jacob and Anna Lawless, of Clinton. Two sons have been born to them: Asahel Ansel and George Morgan. The family are highly esteemed by all who know them.

JOEL S. WINANS, one of the prominent and influential citizens of the town of Stamford, Dutchess county, comes of an old established family in the county.

James Winans, born in 1715, first of the name in Dutchess county, was descended from ancestry who came from Brabant, Belgium, 1630. He and his wife Sarah migrated from Horse Neck, Long Island, to Dutchess county about 1770, settling in the town of Stamford on the late Dr. Isaac M. Hunting farm. Their children were as follows: James, Ira, Girardus, David and Sarah. Of these, James married Hannah D. Groff, of Poughkeepsie, and had eleven children; Ira married Mary — and had children; Giraudus ("Crand") married (first) Hannah Merritt, and (second) Vietta Knickerbocker; Sarah married Peter Smith.

David Winans (mentioned above), grandfather of our subject, came from Horse Neck to Dutchess county with his father, and was a lifelong agriculturist. He served as a soldier in the war of the Revolution, gallantly fighting for the freedom of the colonies. He was an earnest Christian gentleman, and politically was a supporter of the Whig party. By his marriage with Miss Tammy Smith he had the following children: David, Leonard, Morris, Smith, Seymour, Egbert, Ambrose, Amanda, Gertrude, Tammy, Maria, Harriet and Elizabeth.

Upon the old homestead in the town of Pine Plains, Leonard Winans, the father of our subject, was reared to manhood. He was married in the town of Stanford to Miss Sally Ann Sutherland, daughter of Joel Sutherland, an early settler of that township, and to them were born six children, namely: Brush and John (deceased); Joel S., subject of this review; Walter H., of near Amenia, Dutchess county, a sketch of whom follows; William, a perannated minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now located at Catskill, Greene county, N. Y.; and Mary. The mother of these children died in 1828, and Mr. Winans afterward married Miss Elizabeth Thompson, of the town of Stanford. Four children graced their union: Sally Ann and Margaret (both deceased); Elizabeth, wife of Nathaniel Robinson, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; and Isaac (deceased). For many years Leonard Winans operated the farm in the town of Pine Plains, and in 1830 returned to the old homestead in that township, which is now owned by Frank Ho. At the end of six years, however, he removed to Stanford town, locating near Bangall, where he farmed for many years, but finally laid aside all business cares, and spent his last days in that village, dying there in 1868, at the age of eighty-five years. He was always interested in the success and welfare of his country, and took part in the war of 1812. Politically, he was first a Whig and later a Republican, while in religious faith he was one of the most active and prominent workers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, being the founder of the Church of that denomination at Bangall.

Joel S. Winans, the subject proper of this sketch, was born November 5, 1820, in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, where he attended the district schools, and aided his father in the cultivation and improvement of the home farm until he had attained the age of thirty years. On October 2, 1850, in the town of Stanford, Mr. Winans married Miss Lucy Ann Wright, who was born July 29, 1822, in the town of Fishkill, daughter of Isaac and Jeanette (Howe) Wright, natives of Dutchess county. Three children were born of this union: (1) Tamar Ella, who married Charles H. Carpenter, of Stanfordville, N. Y., and has three sons—George Irving, Joel S. Winans, and Henry Sesson; (2) Sophie D. H., married to George E. Rogers, by whom she had one daughter, Sophie, and two sons, George E., Jr., and Clayton, who died in infancy; and (3) W. Irving (only son), who died while attending school at Fort Edward Institute, N. Y. in 1877.

Mr. Winans first located upon a farm at Attlebury, in the town of Stanford, where he continued operations until 1866, when he removed to his present farm near Stanfordville, and in connection with the cultivation of his land he also for a year ran a freight boat on the Hudson from Poughkeepsie to New York City. As an agriculturist he has been quite successful, having secured for himself a comfortable competence. He has always been one of the most progressive, reliable and popular citizens of the town of Stanford, where he has held a number of prominent positions of honor and trust, having been justice of the peace for the long period of forty-three years; revenue collector for seven years, which office he filled during the trying years of the Civil war; and from 1869 to April, 1887, was bonding commissioner for the town for the Newburgh, Dutchess & Connecticut railroad. Politically, he early became a stalwart Abolitionist, and on the organization of the Republican party joined its ranks, becoming one of the leaders of that party in his locality. In religious belief he and his wife are Baptists.

Isaac Wright, father of Mrs. Winans, was born in Fishkill, Dutchess county, as was also her mother, he in 1787, and she in 1791. They had nine children, eight of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, one dying at the age of eleven years, and five yet living. The father, who was a carpenter and joiner by trade, died in 1871; the mother died in 1873. Lebbens Howe, maternal grandfather of Mrs Winans, served in the war of the Revolution. John Wright, her paternal grandfather, came from England, and settled in Fishkill, Dutchess county, in a very early day.

WALTER H. WINANS, a prosperous agriculturist, residing near Amenia, Dutchess county, is one of our most highly respected citizens, the sturdy virtues of his Scotch-Irish ancestry being well exemplified in his character and his successful, though quiet, career. [A sketch of his immediate ancestry will be found in that of his brother, Joel S. Winans.]

Walter H. Winans was born in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, April 21, 1823, and the district schools of the locality afforded him the usual opportunities for instruction. Until the age of twenty-three he remained at home, and then he began farming in the town of Stanford, where he made his home for many years, and took a leading part in local affairs, and at one time held the office of collector. In 1870 he purchased a farm in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. April 1, 1892, he removed from that farm to his present estate. December 24, 1846, he was married in the town of Stanford to Miss Emily Robinson, with whom nearly a half-century of wedded life was passed, before she was called to the unseen world, her death occurring February 27, 1893. Six children were born to their union: Franklin; Mary Elizabeth; Seth K., who married Miss Nettie Robinson; Brush; Amy and Ellsworth. Amy married Christian Lang, and has had three children: Walter, Miriam and Emily. Ellsworth married Miss Ida Wheeler, and resides in the town of Washington. He is possessed of the same self-reliance and industry for which his family is noted, and has never had any financial aid from his father.

Mrs. W. H. Winans was a descendant of a well-known Putnam county family, her grandfather, Chappell Robinson, a farmer, having located there, with two brothers, in the early days. He married Miss Mary Sprague, and had five children: Stephen, Sabins, Squire, Mary and Eli. Stephen Robinson, Mrs. Winan's father, was born in the town of Kent, Putnam county, and was married there to Miss Martha Kelley, daughter of Seth Kelley. Thirteen children were born to them as follows: Chappell, Kelley, Osborn, Enos, Emily, Zillah, Jarvis, Ada, Nathaniel, Priscilla, Robert,

Catherine and William. In 1836, Mr. Robinson moved to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, continuing there his chosen calling of agriculture. Later he spent twelve years in Lithgow, Dutchess county, but returned to the town of Stanford, where he breathed his last in February, 1876, at the age of eighty years. His patriotism and gallantry were proved in the war of 1812, and the various issues in national politics never ceased to interest him, his influence in his later years being given to the Republican party.

CORNELIUS SMITH VAN ETTEN, M.D., who is distinguished as one of the most successful practitioners of Dutchess county, a descendant of one of the oldest families in the State, being the seventh generation in direct line from Jacob Jansen Van Etten, when a young man, came to America from Etten, North Brabant, Holland. He settled in Ulster county, N. Y., and on January 4, 1666, (according to the record in the First Reformed Church of the city of Kingston, N. Y.), he married Anna Ariense Von Amsterdam. Their union was blessed with three sons: Jan, Peter and James, who lived and died in Ulster county. Jan was baptized January 3, 1666, and about 1690 was united in marriage with Jennette Roosa, daughter of Arien Roosa. They had two sons—Arien and Jacob—besides a large family of daughters. Jacob was baptized at Kingston December 25, 1696, and at the same place on April 22, 1719, was married to Autje Westbrook, of Rochester, Ulster county. About the year 1720 he settled in the Delaware Valley, and reared a large family of children, among whom was Johannes, the fifth son, who was born at Namanock, N. J., in 1731. When near the age of twenty years Johannes settled upon a tract containing 1.5 acres near Milford, Penn., which is still owned by his descendants. He died February 1, 1815, in his eighty-third year, and was buried on his own farm. He had been twice married and by his second wife, Rachel Williams, had a son, Cornelius, our subject's grandfather, born near Milford, December 8, 1782.

Cornelius Van Etten married Anna Smith and became the father of eight children: Rachel, Solomon (our subject's father), Maria, Amos, Catherine, Robert, Margaret, and Amanda. This family all settled near Milford, and Catherine, Robert and Amanda are still iving. Amos Van Etten was the father of Edgar Van Etten, who is now general superintendent of the New York Central & Hudson River railroad. The Pennsylvania Van-Ettens have usually followed farming, and have been prominent in non-political local affairs, but have never sought public office.

C. S. Van Hook M.D.

Solomon Van Etten was born near Milford, May 18, 1806. He married Hannah Mettler, daughter of Mathias Mettler, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of Hunterdon Co., N. Y. They had seven children: William and Amos, who died in infancy; John H., a lawyer in Milford; Cornelius Smith, our subject; Mathias M., a farmer at Dover, N. J.; and Frank and Anna, both deceased. The father died in 1873 in his sixty-eighth year, mother in 1894, at the age of eighty-two years.

Dr. Cornelius Smith Van Etten was born on the old homestead September 13, 1846. He completed the regular course of study at the seminary at Schooley's Mountain, N. J., and in 1870 entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania for a three-years' course. On graduating in 1873 he located in the lower part of the Wyoming Valley; but after a few months was called home by the death of his father. He then remained at home until 1876, when he came to Rhinebeck, and has here engaged in general practice. He has been very successful—his fine abilities, his thorough training, and his firm but kindly manner, have won for him the entire confidence of the community.

On June 7, 1882, the Doctor was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Hill, who was born June 16, 1849, a daughter of Edwin and Catherine (Cramer) Hill, the former a leading citizen of Rhinebeck, and, until recently, president of the First National Bank. To Dr. and Mrs. Van Etten have been born two sons, Edwin and Royal, and the home is one of the most charming in the town, a fine library being an especial feature. The Doctor and his wife are active workers in the Reformed Church. In politics he is a Republican, but his professional duties have never allowed him to be very active in political affairs. He is a director in the First National Bank, a trustee of the Savings Bank, and in municipal matters has taken a great interest, being health officer of the town, member of the fire department, and, for ten years past, the president of the school board. He is a trustee of Starr Institute, and treasurer of the Rhinebeck Gas Company. In professional circles he is equally prominent, and is a member of the New York State Medical Association, and of the United States Medical Association.

LEWIS F. EATON is one of the most enterprising business men of Dutchess county, and is a resident of Amenia. His operations as a wholesale grain dealer are extensive in their scope, and he belongs to that class of representative American citizens who promote the general welfare while advancing their individual prosperity. For over a quarter of a century he has been identified with the interests of Amenia, and the connection has been as honorable as it is long.

Mr. Eaton was born at Syracuse, N. Y., May 7, 1850, and is a son of Lewis Eaton, a native of Fayetteville, Onondaga Co., N. Y. After completing his common-school education the father clerked in a store for a time, and subsequently was connected with the Syracuse & Oswego line of transportation in New York City and vicinity for about fifteen years. Returning to Fayetteville, he became general freight agent for the New York, Syracuse & Chenango railroad, which position he retained up to the time of his death, in 1878. At Fayetteville he had married Miss Sarah Willson, daughter of John H. Willson, and to them were born four sons: Robert W., of Fayetteville; Frank H., of Terre Haute, Indiana; Charles B., deceased; and Lewis F., of this sketch. The mother's death occurred in 1875.

The primary education of our subject was received in the village schools of Amenia, and he later attended the public schools at Astoria, Long Island. At the age of fourteen years he entered the Peoples Line Transportation Company in New York City, where he remained for one year, after which he was in the canal collector's office, where he was second clerk the first year, and first clerk the three succeeding years.

At the age of eighteen Mr. Eaton came to Amenia, becoming bookkeeper for B. Willson & Co., dealers in flour, feed, lumber and coal. In March, 1878, he became manager for George T. Willson, who had assumed control, and in the following May was made a partner in the business, under the firm name of Willson & Eaton. About 1881 the firm started a wholesale trade, which now extends through several counties of New York, Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and they also have three retail stores, one at Amenia, another at Wassaic, and the third at Shekomeko. Their sales have increased from $40,000, in 1881, to three-quarters of a million in 1895. Their specialty in the wholesale trade is that of feed and grain, and they were the first to sell cotton-seed meal in this vicinity. They have a wood-working factory in connection with their other business, manufacturing house trimmings, doors, sash, blinds, etc., and Mr. Eaton also handles life and fire insurance. He is a man of remarkable business qualities, resourceful and energetic, and the scope of his operations and his varied interests show that a master hand and mind is in control of his affairs.

On October 24, 1877, Mr. Eaton was united in marriage with Miss Julia Per Lee, daughter of Walter P. Per Lee. He is an earnest advocate of Republican principles, is connected with the fire company at Amenia, and in religious belief is a Presbyterian. His hobby is that of stamp collecting.

PPETER PRATT, the popular proprietor of the "Pratt House" in Amenia, Dutchess county, traces his ancestry back to Peter Pratt, a college-bred man, who was a resident of Wallingsford, Conn. He married a Mrs. Ingraham, widow of a sea captain, with whom he boarded while attending Yale College, and to them were born two children: Peter, and Sophia, who married Oliver D. Cook, of Hartford, Conn. When his son was three years old he removed to Kent, Conn., where for twenty years he served as collector, and his old home there is still in the possession of the family. He became one of the leading men of that place and an earnest worker in the Presbyterian Church.

Peter Pratt, the son, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born at Wallingsford, Conn., in 1762, and died at Kent in 1845. At the latter place he attended the district schools, and always lived on the old homestead farm, engaging in its operation, and in running a sawmill and forge. He was appointed captain in the militia, was a Whig in politics, and a Presbyterian in religious belief. He was united in marriage with Miss Sally D. Bardwell, a daughter of Rev. Joel Bardwell, who was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Kent for over half a century. She was born in 1768, and her death occurred in 1849. In the family were nine children, all now deceased with the exception of John M., the father of our subject, who was next to the youngest of the others being; Philo B., Sherman, John, Ralph, Peter, Sophia, Sarah and Cook.

John M. Pratt was born at Kent, Conn. May 22, 1809, attended the public school and completed his literary course in an academy. He remained at home until February 7, 1838, when he married Miss Charlotte Mills, who died in 1846. She was the daughter of Deacon Lewis Mills, a merchant and farmer, and was a most estimable lady. They had five children, as follows: Charlotte is the wife of John D. Platt, of Farmington, Conn., by whom she has three children Frank, William and John; Jane, a resident of New Milford, Conn., is the widow of Sheld Wheaton, by whom she had one daughter Nellie; Mary (deceased) was the wife of Seth Hobson, and the mother of one child—Elizabeth; Peter is next in order of birth; and Sophia is the wife of Walter B. Camp, Ansonia, Connecticut.

The father carried on farming in the town of Kent, Litchfield Co., Conn., until 1845 when he purchased the "Putnam House," the name of which he changed to the "Pratt House." This hotel has been greatly improved since that time, and is now one of the best equipped in the county, everything being provided for the convenience and comfort of the guests. Since coming to Dutchess county, Mr. Pratt has also engaged in buying and selling sheep, cattle and horses, and in this line his business has been quite successful. Previous to 1857, he was a Whig, but since that time has been a firm supporter of Republican principles. A strictly moral, upright and temperate man, he has never gambled, bet on a horse race, or been drunk in his life. He makes his home with our subject.

Peter Pratt, whose name begins this sketch, spent his boyhood days in the town of Kent, Litchfield Co., Conn., attending the district schools and assisting his father in the operation of the farm. In 1865 he married Julia Stone, of New Milford, Conn., and they have one daughter, Minnie S.

Since 1867 Mr. Pratt has successfully engaged in the hotel business at Amenia. The greater part of his present hotel has been erected since locating there, so that the place is now a comfortable, modern structure, near urnished, and the cuisine is all that could be desired. Like his father, he is also an ardent Republican, and socially is a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M.

JOHN C. DUBOIS, one of the leading merchants of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, combines energy and pluck with excellent judgment, an embodiment that has brought great success to his efforts and labors. His entire life has been passed at that village, where his birth occurred on June 20, 1857, and those who have known him longest are numbered among his most faithful friends.

The paternal ancestors of Mr. DuBois were French. In his native land Jacques DuBois married Pierrone Bentyne, and April 15, 1675, sailed from France to America, locating at Kingston, Ulster Co., N. Y., thus becoming the founders of the family in the New World. Their son Pierre wedded Jeannetje Burhans, and to them was born a son, Jonathan, who was united in marriage with Ariantje Oosterhout. The son of the latter, Cornelius (1) DuBois, married Charity Griffin, and their son, Cornelius (2), a farmer by occupation, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born at Saratoga, N. Y., and by his marriage with Deborah Payne became the father of twelve children, namely: Parmelia, Jane, Harriet, Elizabeth, Chester, John, Charity, Cornelius G., Smith, Richard, Harvey and James. The family were mostly members of the Presbyterian Church.

John DuBois, the father of our subject, was born January 1, 1825, at Saratoga, N. Y., and upon the home farm he remained until nineteen years of age, when he began teaching, which profession he continued to follow up to the time of and several years after his marriage. His wife bore the maiden name of Mary S. Scofield, and was a native of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where her father, Cornelius Scofield, was also born. He was of English extraction. Her mother's maiden name was Elizabeth Warren, and she was a relative of Gen. Warren, of military fame. After their marriage the parents of our subject made their home at Wappingers Falls, N. Y., where the father taught in the old Wappinger Seminary for several years. In 1857 he began merchandising on Market street, having a general store, and continued at his first location until 1863, when he removed to another building on the same street. Later, he conducted the business across the creek in the Egan building, in partnership with Adam Bently, which connection was continued until 1868, when he sold out. He then opened a wholesale dry-goods business, conducting same until called from this life, May 18, 1876. He had just erected his beautiful residence, where his widow now makes her home. He was a conscientious and faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, in the work of which he took an active part, and his political support was unwaveringly given the Republican party.

During his early life our subject aided his father in the store, under whose able directions he became a thorough business man. After the death of the latter, his uncle, James B. Scofield, had charge of the store until he, too, was called from this life. Our subject then purchased the stock, and since 1879 has successfully conducted a general store. He carries a large and well-selected stock, and is abundantly able to meet the demands of his customers. In November, 1881, he married Miss Ada M. McKeel, a native of Cold Springs, N. Y., and a daughter of Caleb McKeel, who was of English origin. One child graces this union: Chester M., born in August, 1882.

Mr. Du Bois is an influential member of the Republican party, and takes a conspicuous part in public life. In 1895 he was elected a member of the village board, in which position he is still serving. He is prominently identified with the Knights of Pythias, the American Mechanics, and the American Legion of Honor. He and his wife contribute to the support of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and they enjoy the esteem and respect of all in the community.

ALEXANDER W. SLEIGHT, supervisor of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, was born in that town July 4, 1841, and is the son of Peter R. and Catherine S. (Barnes) Sleight.

The ancestors of our subject were originally Holland-Dutch, who came to this country in 1652, and the known record extends back five generations, to Cornelius Barentsen Sleight, who came from Worden, Holland, on the Rhine, and who married Miss Tryntje Tysen Bos, from Bue Stee, Holland. The name was spelled Sleight until the time of James, grandfather of our subject. Matthew Sleight, son of Cornelius, married Maria Magdalena Crespel. Jan, son of Matthew, married Miss Elizabeth Smeedes. Abram, great-grandfather of our subject, was born in the city of Kingston, where he spent his boyhood and received his early education. He married Miss Ariantje Elmerndorf, and moved to what is now the town of Lagrange, cleared the farm land, built a stone house, and reared his children there. He died October 21, 1800. She died in 1796.

James, or Jacobus, Sleight, our subject's grandfather, was born in the old stone house above mentioned April 19, 1753, and died September 2, 1833. He married Miss Elsie Deriemer, and the following children were born to them: James Edwin, Peter R., Elsie D., Harriet E., Henry A., all of whom are deceased. In 1776 Mr. Sleight served seven months in the Revolutionary war at Fort Montgomery, under Capt. Dorland, as orderly sergeant, and in 1777 he served seven months at Fort Constitution, and then went with the army as first lieutenant under Capt. Henry Wynkoop, and was with it when Kingston was burned. In 1778 our subject's grandfather served one month under Gen. Scott at White Plains, and at Fort Independence, near King's Bridge, as quartermaster under Zephaniah Platt, colonel. He was afterward made a colonel. [The foregoing is from the Archives of the State of New York, Vol. 1, page 473, and is taken from records left by Mr. Sleight in his own handwriting and signed by him.] He took a prominent part in the affairs of Lagrange, where he held the office of justice of the peace.

Peter R. Sleight, father of our subject, spent his boyhood days upon the farm, and in attending the district schools, also the Jacob Willets school, in the town of Washington. He was married in the town of Poughkeepsie (first) October 3, 1827, to Sarah K. Barnes, who was the daughter of David Barnes, of Poughkeepsie, and one child, James Edwin, was born to them, August 31, 1829, who died September 16, 1868. Mrs. Sleight was called from earth October 20, 1829, and Mr. Sleight married (second) Catherine S. Barnes (sister of his first wife) December 18, 1832, and the following children came of this union: Sarah A., born September 5, 1835, was married November 14, 1860, to Stephen M. Ham; David B., born April 30, 1838, was killed in the battle of Averysboro, N. C., March 16, 1865 (he held the rank of first lieutenant); James Edwin married Frances E. Titus, March 9, 1853, and they had four children—Mary Kate, Rhoda Sallie, and Frances. Peter R., the father, was captain of a company of militia, and was assessor, commissioner of highways, and railroad commissioner when the town was bonded. At the time of his death he was president of the Dutchess County Mutual Insurance Co., in which office he was elected in 1881, and for several years was a director of the First National Bank. In politics he was a Republican. On December 18, 1882, he and his wife celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Sleight died in Lagrange, March 15, 1888, Mr. Sleight on February 11, 1894.

Alexander Wheeler Sleight, our subject spent his youth on the paternal farm in the town of Lagrange, where he attended the district school, also the Dutchess County Academy, and the Cornwall Collegiate School. He was married in Lagrange October 7, 1860, to Miss Mary C. Pells, a daughter of John C. Pells, and the following children were born to them: Josephine W., March 14, 1875; Peter R., April 19, 1877; and David B., November 27, 1880. Mr. Sleight was elected supervisor of Lagrange on the Republican ticket for two terms. He is a member of the B. P. O. E. or Elks, and is a popular and public-spirited citizen.

JACOB GRIFFEN, a citizen who has been useful in his community, and ever taken a prominent place in the enterprises tending to the enlightenment of the people; the friend of education, and active in all good works, has all his life been a tiller of the soil, and still finds therein his great pleasure.

Elihu Griffen, grandfather of our subject was an early resident of Westchester county, N. Y., where his entire life was spent in agricultural pursuits. By his marriage with Catherine Underhill he became the father of three sons (all now deceased), named, respectively, Daniel, Jacob and Abraham. He belonged to the Society of Friends, and always attended the monthly meetings in New York City, making the trip thither on horseback.

Daniel Griffen, the father of our subject was born near the city of Sing Sing, in Westchester Co., N. Y., June 11, 1790, and there attended the district schools of the neighborhood. He remained under the parental roof until his marriage, in 1810, with Phœbe Davenport, who was born August 17, 1793. They became the parents of nine children, their names and dates of birth being as follows: Mary D., August 11, 1811; Judith M., January 11, 1814; Abigail S., April 6, 1817; Esther H., April 19, 1819; Elihu, September 6, 1821; William D., February 12, 1824; Jacob, October 10, 1825; Catherine E., December 27, 1830; and Lydia Sigourney, April 29, 1834. All are now deceased with the exception of our subject and his sister, Judith M., who is now the widow of the late Alexander Haviland. The father engaged in farming in North Castle township, Westchester county, until 1826, when he removed to the present farm of our subject in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and there continued to make his home until his death, August 26, 1858; his wife died June 11, 1874. They were faithful members of the Society of Friends, and in a church of that denomination were married. As was the custom at that time, they rode to the house of worship on horseback, and our subject still has in his possession the saddle used by his mother. Although the father started out in life a poor boy, he worked his way steadily upward by persistent and untiring efforts until he secured a comfortable competence, and was numbered among the well-to-do citizens of the town.

Alice Griffen

Jacob Griffen

Jacob Griffen, our subject, was born in North Castle township, Westchester county, whence when an infant he was brought to the farm which is now his home, and in the town of Clinton he began his education under the instruction of private tutors, and in private schools. Later he entered a boarding school at Westtown, Penn., and completed his literary studies at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. In that town, October 10, 1878, Mr. Griffen was married to Miss Alice Wilson, by whom he had three children: Catherine, Anna and Frances Elsie.

With the exception of the twelve years during which he farmed an adjoining place, our subject since his infancy has lived on the old home farm, which he successfully operates. He has served as commissioner of highways in the town of Clinton, to which position he was elected on the Republican ticket, that being the party with which he always affiliates. The entire family are members of the Friends Church, to the support of which they contribute liberally, and heartily co-operate in its good works. Mr. Griffen is public-spirited and enterprising, giving his support to all measures which he considers beneficial to the community.

Mrs. Griffen was born in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, a daughter of John V. and Mary Ann (Barnes) Wilson, and received her education in the town of Washington, where she had her home up to the time of her marriage. Her father was born in Unionvale town in 1832, and died in 1864, in the army, while serving as a member of Company I, 158th N. Y. V. I. By his marriage with Miss Mary Ann Barnes he had five children: Henry G., Alice, Thurston J., Clarence and Belle, the last two being now deceased. Mrs. Griffen's grandfather, John Barnes, born in 1792, died when about seventy years of age. Her grandmother, Mary Wilson, died July 5, 1879, at the advanced age of eighty years.

CYRUS F. HAWLEY, the proprietor of a large dry-goods store at Millerton, ranks among the leading merchants of northern Dutchess county, and the adjacent portion of Litchfield county, Conn. His family is of English origin, and his ancestors were early settlers of the village of Hawleyville, Fairfield Co., Conn., where Harmon Hawley, his father, was born about 1809. His grandfather, Hawley, was born probably at the same place. Harmon Hawley was a hatter by trade, and followed this occupation for a few years at his native town. He married Emma Freeman, a prominent resident of the town of Amenia, and shortly afterward moved to Wawarsing, Ulster Co., N. Y., where he established a sawmill and charcoal furnace. He was a man of fine business ability and great energy. He bought and cleared large tracts of land, which he afterward disposed of, and carried on the two enterprises with great success until his death, which occurred in his forty-eighth year. His wife survived him with seven children: William, Martha, Cyrus, Fannie, Josephine, Charles and John.

The subject of our sketch was born at Amenia Union, March 24, 1846, and was educated mainly in the district schools of that vicinity, attending the Amenia Seminary only one year. These somewhat limited advantages have been improved upon in later years by reading, and his information covers a wide range. At the age of thirteen he began work on a farm in the town of Amenia, and at sixteen he became a clerk in Sharon, Conn., for G. A. Kelsey and G. B. Reed. Here he remained ten years, acquainting himself with all the details of mercantile life, and in 1876 he and two others formed a partnership under the firm name of Beach, Hawley & Co., and established a store at Millerton. After the death of Mr. Beach in 1886, the firm name remained C. F. Hawley & Co. for three years, when Mr. Reed withdrew, and since that time Mr. Hawley has conducted the business alone. In 1894 he built one of the finest stores to be found in any town of the size in the county. His trade is very large, extending throughout a wide territory, where his enterprise and sound judgment have won him the confidence of the people.

Mr. Hawley takes an active interest in all that concerns the advancement of the community; and has been ready to promote any movement for the public good, but although he has always been a Democrat, he never joins in political work. He married a member of one of the oldest families, Miss Martha Brown, daughter of Douglass Brown, of Northeast, and has one son, Cyrus.

EDWIN G. VAIL, of the town of Unionvale, one of the younger members of the board of supervisors of Dutchess county, was born in that town October 15, 1861, the younger of the two sons of Elias and Lavina (Cornell) Vail.

Isaac Vail, our subject's great-grandfather, was for many years a resident of Unionvale, and died August 1, 1801, at the age of sixty-one years. His wife, Lavinia (Ketcham), passed away March 1, 1803, aged fifty-eight years. Their son, Elias, our subject's grandfather, was born in Unionvale in 1775, and followed farming as his life work. He died August 3, 1851, his wife on July 20, 1851. She was born in 1781, and was a daughter of David Duncan, a native of the town of Dover, where he was a merchant farmer.

Elias Vail, father of our subject, was born September 15, 1823, and was the youngest of the thirteen children born to Elias Vail, Sr., and his wife, Hannah (Duncan) Vail. He was twice married, first time, in 1853, to Lavina Cornell, by which union were born two children: W. C., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Edwin G. It is believed that their mother descended from Perry Green White, who came over in the "Mayflower," and whose son, or daughter, was the first white child born in the New World. Mrs. Vail died October 22, 1861, aged thirty-six years, and for his second wife Elias Vail married, January 10, 1867, Miss Jane W. Haight, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, a daughter of John J. Haight. Mrs. Vail died January 21, 1891, aged fifty-eight years.

JOHN FRANCIS MYERS. To the thrift industry and economy of the German immigrants this country owes much, and find among their descendants many of our most substantial and respected citizens, and to this class belongs John Francis Myers, of New Hamburg, the subject of this sketch.

The family to which Mr. Myers belongs is one of the oldest in Dutchess county, the first of the American line having come from Germany at an early date, locating at what is now known as Myers' Corners, in the town of Wappinger, where the homestead has ever since been maintained. John Myers, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer and hotel keeper, a Democrat in politics and a prominent man in the locality. He married Susann Bussing, and reared a family of seven children: Joseph, who went to California and died there; Peter, a resident of Hughsonville; John, who was an extensive land holder; Francis, our subject's father; Deborah; Elizabeth (deceased), formerly the wife of Henry Patterson; and Amelia, the wife of Edward Bayard.

Francis Myers, the father of our subject, was reared on the old home farm, and married Ann Roy, a native of London, England, an aunt of William K. Roy, of Wappinger Falls. For some time after his marriage Francis Myers followed farming in his native town, but in 1855 he became employed in grocery at Wappingers Falls, and moved his family there. In 1860 he went to New Hamburg, and engaged in the manufacture of blacing; but later was in the grocery business which he carried on successfully until 1890 when he retired. He has always been a Democrat, and served as supervisor of the town Poughkeepsie for several years; he and his wife now live in Florida. To this worthy couple have been born five children: Anna, who first married J. E. Willard, of New Hamburg, a after his death wedded (second) Walter Jameson, of Walden, N. Y.; Charles is the superintendent of the Southern Express Co.; at Jacksonville, Fla.; Mary married Dr. Russell Dean, of the same city; James R. is a farmer at the homestead; and John Francis, the youngest of the family, is the subject of this review.

John Francis Myers was born December 7, 1856, at New Hamburg, and has spent his entire life in his native place, with the exception of two years at Wappingers Falls during his childhood. Under the careful tuition of his father, he so mastered the details of the grocery business at an early age that, although one of the younger business men of the place, he became one of the most successful and enterprising, conducting a retail grocery, which commanded an extensive trade, and which is now conducted by Mrs. H. A. Myers. In 1882 he married Miss Harriet Scofield, daughter of William Scofield, a well-known farmer of near Low Point (formerly known as Carthage Landing). Three children were born of this union: James L., Eeleelah and Francis S. Mr. Myers is a public-spirited citizen, and, like his ancestors, is a Democrat in political faith. He and his wife are prominent members of the Reformed Dutch Church, of which his family have always been influential adherents.

MMORTIMER B. COLE is prominently identified with the business interests of the town of Pleasant Valley, being actively engaged in the retail feed, grist and saw mill businesses in Salt Point, where he also conducts a general store and sells farming implements, etc. His success has all been achieved by his own unaided exertions, and as the years have passed he has gained experience and business ability, which have secured him prosperity while yet in the prime of life.

Mr. Cole was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, December 13, 1854, and is a son of Charles N. Cole, whose birth occurred in Putnam county, N. Y., January 1, 1820. His paternal grandfather, Elisha J. Cole, also a native of Putnam county, was the son of Jesse Cole, who was born in New England, and at an early day located in Putnam county, where he married a Miss Ogden. He there engaged in the grist, saw and carding mill business. In his family of seven children, four sons and three daughters, were Hiram and Jesse (both farmers,) and Elisha J., the grandfather of our subject. In his native county the last named grew to manhood, and in 1800 married Lydia Frost, after which they located upon a farm, where they reared four children: Charles N., George, and two daughters who died while young. He died in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, in 1879, his wife having preceded him to the world beyond. In religious belief he was a Baptist; politically, he first supported the Whig party, and later the Republican. His youngest son, George Cole, was a wholesale liquor dealer, but is now living retired in Chicago, Illinois.

After completing his own education, Charles N. Cole taught school for a time. He was united in marriage with Miss Jane Ann Budd, who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley in 1827, and is a sister of Joel and Albert J. Budd, prominent citizens of Dutchess county. To them were born two children: Edward, who was killed in infancy; and Mortimer B., of this review. The parents located upon a farm which the father operated until his death, which occurred September 4, 1891, but he also invented many different articles, being of an ingenious turn of mind. He was a strong Republican, and held many local offices of honor and trust. His estimable wife is still living on the same farm, which is managed by Mortimer B. Cole.

In the usual manner of farmer boys, our subject spent his childhood, receiving his elementary education in the district schools, after which he pursued his studies for two winters at Pleasant Plains, and finished his education in the Amenia Seminary. Returning to the farm, he later married Antoinette Sands, a native of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and a daughter of Isaac G. Sands, who was also born in Stanford town, and was of English descent. For one year the young couple lived upon a farm, but the following year Mr. Cole worked his father-in-law's farm. The next two years, however, were spent in agricultural pursuits, after which he ran a skating rink in New Jersey for a short time, and on returning to this county again worked his father-in-law's farm for a couple of years. In 1887 he came to Salt Point, where he purchased a half interest in a gristmill and flourmill, but the following year bought out his partner, and has since conducted the business alone. He is also engaged in sawing lumber, and deals in all kinds of general merchandise and farm implements.

Three children grace the union of Mr. and Mrs. Cole, namely: Stanley S., born November 11, 1881; Jennie B., born May 27, 1884; and Pinnia, born December 29, 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Cole are active in the community. He is a strong believer in the principles of the Republican party, which he always supports with his ballot.

CHARLES H. DUNCAN. This gentleman bears the family name that figures prominently in the annals of Dutchess county, his ancestors having been long and prominently connected with the history of Pleasant Valley. The Duncans, of whom we write, are originally of Scotch extraction. The grandfather of our subject, Joshua Duncan, was for many years assistant superintendent of the cotton factory at Pleasant Valley, and was widely known as a straightforward, honorable business man. His political support was given the Republican party. Both he and his wife spent their last days in the locality where they had so long made their home, and where they had reared their family of six children, namely: Mary, wife of George Cramer; Margaret, wife of Richard Cronkrite, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley; Rachel, wife of John McCord, a native of Dutchess county, now living in Denver, Colo.; Jane, widow of Samuel Bullock, and a resident of Pleasant Valley; John B., the father of our subject; and Henry, a farmer of the town of Lagrange.

John B. Duncan was born and reared in Dutchess county, and in his early life learned the machinist's trade, which he followed for some years. After his marriage he located in Pleasant Valley, where for many years he engaged in general merchandising, for a short time as a part of the firm of Duncan & Hastings, and then as sole proprietor of his well-conducted store. His last years were spent in retirement from business cares. He gave his political support to the Republican party; for several years served as postmaster of Pleasant Valley, and was also town clerk for a number of terms, and he also acceptably served as president of the board of village trustees. Mrs. Duncan, who bore the maiden name of Jane E. Cronkrite, was a daughter of John Cronkrite, a farmer of Lagrange town, descended from Holland ancestry. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan included five children, namely: Addison G., a resident of Streator, Ill.; Charles H. and Marsden F., prominent merchants of Pleasant Valley; Grace; and Jennie, wife of I. D. Le Roy, M. D., of Pleasant Valley; two children died in infancy. The father died May 30, 1880; the mother is still living.

Charles H. Duncan spent his boyhood days under the parental roof, and began his education in the district schools, which, later, he continued in Pelham Institute, Poughkeepsie. Returning to Pleasant Valley in 1875, he soon after entered upon his business career by securing a clerkship with Heath & Co., of Poughkeepsie, in whose service he remained some four years. He then entered the employ of Solomon Strauss, a dry-goods merchant, with whom he remained five years, and then began business on his own account, in Pleasant Valley, in partnership with his brother, Marsden F. Under the firm style of Duncan Brothers they carry on business, and have a large trade, which their honorable dealing and courteous treatment of their customers justly entitles them.

Charles H. Duncan was married June 12, 1889, to L. Ida Pray, who was born in Lagrange town, Dutchess county, a daughter of George Pray, who followed farming in that locality. The family has long been identified with the history of this community. An interesting family of five children—Ethel Pray, Martha Lavinia, Hazel May, Virginia Ida, and John Howard—grace the union of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan. The parents are esteemed members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is trustee and treasurer. His political support connects him with the Republican party, and socially he affiliates with the Masonic fraternity.

ALFRED HAVILAND MOORE. In 1812 a mill was erected in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, around which the thriving village of Moores Mill has since grown up, its development and prosperity being largely due to the energy and business sagacity of the subject of this sketch, and other members of his family.

His grandfather, Stephen Moore, a native of Plattsburg, N. Y., owned and operated the mill in his day. He married Ruth Clark, and reared a family, among whom was Alfred Moore, our subject's father, who was born at Verbank, Dutchess county. He was educated in the district schools of that town and of Moores Mill. On attaining manhood he engaged in farming in the western part of the town of Lagrange, but after ten years he removed to Moores Mill, where he conducted a farm and ran the old mill. He was a high-minded, progressive man, a Quaker in faith, and a devoted friend to Liberty, his house having been a station on the "Underground railroad," by which so many slaves made their way to freedom. Although he never sought political honors, he was an earnest supporter of the Republican party. Deeply conscious of the necessity for broad and thorough education for the masses, if our form of government is to endure, he never failed to champion the cause of education, as a worker in the Society of Friends, attending meetings regularly from boyhood, and often preaching to the congregation. He probably officiated at more funerals than any other minister of his day in Dutchess county. His wife, Charlotte Haviland, was a daughter of Isaac Haviland, a well-known resident of Quaker Hill, and both lived to a ripe old age, Mr. Moore departing this life in his seventy-eighth year, and his wife at the age of eighty-nine. They had seven children: (1) Lydia, the wife of Daniel Willets, of Jericho, L. I.; (2) Ruth (Mrs. P. A. Skidmore); (3) Susan, who resides at Moores Mill; (4) Albert H., our subject; and three, Charlotte, Andrew and Annie, who are now deceased.

Alfred H. Moore, our subject, was born at the village of Moores Mill November 27, 1843, and his early education was acquired in the district schools there and in a boarding school in Unionvale, N. Y. He has thoroughly identified himself with the interests of his native place, and in addition to the work of conducting the mill and farm, he started the first store in the village, opened the first telegraph office, and the first post office, serving as postmaster for several years. After some time, he disposed of the store, and now gives his attention to the ancestral occupation, and since 1876 has been the sole manager of the mill. He has been extensively engaged in breeding fine Holstein cattle on his farm.

In politics he is a Republican, and he is active in the Friends Meetings. He is a man of excellent ability and upright character, and is held in high esteem. His courtesy is unfailing, and in conversation he gives pleasure not less by the wisdom of his remarks than by their form, the soft "thee," "thou," and "thy" lending their grace to his well-turned sentences. He was married at Jericho, L. I., to Phœbe Willets, daughter of Jacob Willets, and they have three children: Herman Wheeler, Jacob Willets, and Daniel W.

Miss Susan Moore, our subject's sister, is the proprietor of the "Floral Home" at Moores Mill, a delightful summer boarding place. She is a model hostess, untiring in her efforts for the comfort of her guests, of whom there are usually about seventy-five throughout the season. The house takes its name from the abundance of beautiful roses and other flowers which bloom there, making the place a charming retreat.

ELMORE FERRIS, a well-known dealer in lumber, feed and coal at Pawling, Dutchess county, is one of the most enterprising and successful business men of that locality. He was born October 19, 1837, in Middlefield, Otsego Co., N. Y., and was educated in the district schools there, his attendance after the age of twelve years being limited to the winter terms. At fifteen he left school and began working by the month for farmers, and at eighteen he came to Pawling town, Dutchess county, where his ancestors have had their homes for several generations. In 1859 he began to learn the carpenter's trade with Mr. McIntyre, and followed this for nine years; but in 1867 he purchased a one-half interest in J. C. Merritt's lumber, feed and coal business. Two years later he bought Mr. Merritt's share, and has since continued the business alone, building up a large and profitable trade. Energetic and self-reliant in business, he is also interested in local affairs, and is regarded as one of the leaders in the community. He has always been a staunch Republican, and although he has never been an office seeker, he is at present trustee of the village. He married Miss Mary Jane Holmes, daughter of James Holmes, and has four children: Carrie M., Harriet E., James H., and Claude, all at home.

The Ferris family is one of the oldest and most prominent in this section. The genealogical record dates back to John Ferris, a native of Leicestershire, England, who emigrated with his family to Fairfield, Conn., and afterward, about 1654, removed to New York State, dying in 1715. He is said to have been one of five brothers who came to this country with their families, one of whom, Jeffrey, settled first in Massachusetts in 1635, and then in Fairfield, Conn., in 1660. Another brother, Benjamin, settled in Salem, Mass., in 1640.

Samuel Ferris, a son of John, was born in Reading, England, and was among the first settlers of Groton, Mass., whence he removed to Charlestown, Mass. His only son, Zachariah Ferris, married Sarah Reed, of Stratford, Conn., and had eight children, of whom there is the following record: (1) Deborah, born June 17, 1700; (2) Joseph, born September 27, 1703, married a Hannah Noble; (3) David, born March 10, 1707, in Stratford, died in Wilmington, Del., December 5, 1779; (4) Benjamin, born in 1708; (5) Sarah Ann, born November 10, 1710, married a Mr. Noble; (6) Hannah, born August 6, 1712, married (first) Gains Talbot, and (second) Dobson Wheeler; (7) John, born February 7, 1714, married Abigail Tyron, of New Fairfield, Conn.; (8) Zachariah, Jr., born September 30, 1714, was a Quaker preacher of Wilmington, Del.; and Daniel comes next in order of birth. Zachariah Ferris, Sr., was in Charlestown in 1675, and afterward settled at Stratford, Conn., and then about the year 1710 removed to New Milford, Conn. From him are descended persons of that name in different parts of the United States. Five of the children—David, Benjamin, Hannah, John and Zachariah, Jr.—together with the mother, joined the Society of Friends. David was educated for a Presbyterian minister, but afterward became a celebrated preacher among the Friends. He went to Philadelphia in 1733, and was there married to Miss Mary Massey, and often attended the Oblong meetings, visiting his brother Benjamin. He traveled about with William Russell and Paul Osborne, preaching, being a minister among the Friends for twenty-four years. The Oblong meeting house was on land owned half by a Russell and half by a Ferris.

Benjamin Ferris was a Quaker preacher, and was among the very first settlers of the Oblong (now Quaker Hill), Dutchess county, between the years 1734 and 1736. The name "Oblong" is derived from the shape of that portion of equivalent land that was set off from Connecticut about 1730. He was very prominent in the meetings there throughout life. In his old age, his son Zebulan's store (now occupied by William Clark) was robbed by the cowboys during the Revolution, and he was so far non-resident in his ideas that he desired those present to "seize the rascals." Benjamin Ferris married Elizabeth Beecher, and had the following children: (1) Zebulon, born in New Milford, Conn., March 19, 1729, married Ruth ———; (2) Reed, our subject's great-grandfather, born August 15, 1730, in New Milford, married Anne Tripp; (3) Susannah, born in New Milford, in 1732, married Elijah Doty; (4) Phoebe, born in 1734, in New Milford; (5) Lillius, born in 1736, in Oblong, married Jonathan Akin; (6) Benjamin, born September 25, 1738, in Oblong, married Mary Howland; (7) Gilbert, born in 1740, in Oblong; and (8) Edmund, born in 1748, in Oblong.

Reed Ferris, tradition and history informs us, freely offered his fine mansion (known as the "old Kirby House") to Gen. Washington for his use as headquarters, at Pawling, N. Y. In James H. Smith's history of Dutchess county we find the following: "The old 'Kirby House' was built by Reed Ferris in 1771, and at the time Washington was in Pawling was a new house. Mr. Ferris was a substantial farmer, and his house, like his means, was large. Mrs. Akin, mother of the late Judge Albro Akin, and another lady used to tell of its occupancy. One day two aides-de-camp rode up and informed Mr. Ferris that Gen. Washington would like to make his home there for a while. Mr. Ferris consented, and to notify all intruders that this was the house of the commander-in-chief, they fastened a paper to the front door, reading: 'Headquarters of Gen. Washington.' The Ferris house has been torn down, and all that remains is the front door step with 'R. F.' and '1771' cut in it." The farm is now owned by Archibald Dodge. Reed Ferris and Anne Tripp had the following children: Edmund, born March 30, 1752; Benjamin, July 29, 1754; Lydia, July 5, 1756, married a Mr. Wanzer; Molly, April 20, 1759, married John Akin; James, July 2, 1761; Warren, February 19, 1764; Pitt, July 4, 1766; Morris, October 16, 1768; Anne, January 5, 1771, married a Mr. Haviland; and Seneca, February 15, 1773.

Edmund Ferris, the grandfather of our subject, was married four times, and had nineteen children. On October 30, 1771, he married his first wife, Mary Akin, who was born Noember 1, 1747, and had one son—John Akin Ferris, born October 17, 1772, at Pawling, N. Y. The second wife, Hannah Taber, became the mother of two children: Thomas Taber, October 8, 1776, and Hannah, born November 22, 1777. The third wife of Edmund Ferris was Martha Birch, born in 1760, whom he married in 1781; she died January 22, 1794. Their children were: Willett F., who was born May 19, 1782, and died April 12, 1853; Betsey, born November 14, 1783; Amy, born January 17, 1785; Ira, born October 23, 1788; Sophia, born May 17, 1789; and Oliver, born December 5, 1793. For his fourth wife, he married Sally Birdsall, who was born in 1777, and to them were born ten children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Ann, February 25, 1796; Philelus, November 5, 1797; Minerva, March 18, 1799; Horace, February 9, 1801; Ransom, February 24, 1803; Matilda, December 30, 1804; Garrett, May 28, 1806; Sally, April 26, 1809; Alfred, September 29, 1810; and Massilla, September 26, 1812. The third and fourth wives of Edmund Ferris are the ancestors of nearly all of the name in Pawling. The grandfather of our subject was a farmer, and succeeded to a part of the estate of his father. He lived on Quaker Hill during a portion of his life, and later on the Daniel Dodge farm. He was quite a large land holder at one time, and was prominent in his locality. He served in the war of 1812, and was known as Major Ferris.

Horace Ferris, our subject's father, was a farmer who went to Otsego county, N. Y., about 1830, purchased a farm and spent the remainder of his life there. He had only a small estate, but was a man of push and energy. He was a Whig, although he never took an active part in politics, and he attended the Methodist Episcopal Church. He died in 1873, and his wife, Emeline Bentley, a daughter of Thomas Bentley, of the town of Beekman, passed away in 1891. She was the third in a family of five children, the others being: Elmer; Luman; Harriet (who married Philo Ferris, and lived in Chenango county, N. Y.); and Clarinda (who married Mr. Garrett, and lived and died in Pawling). The Bentleys were also of English origin. To Horace Ferris and his wife were born children as follows: Clarissa, who married (first) Cyrus Groves, and (second) Adam Dye; Matilda, wife of John Corbin; Walter H., who married Caroline Terwilliger; Ellen, wife of John Pratt; Mary, who married

(first) Albert Cole, and (second) Emery Jaquins; Phoebe, wife of Farren Pratt; Edmond, who married Amanda Sun; Elizabeth, who died in girlhood; Elmore, whose name opens this sketch; Alfred, who married Amanda Chase, and was a soldier in the Civil war; Levisa, wife of Isaac Techout; Richard, who died from wounds received in the army; Leroy (who also served in the Union army) married M. J. Dolan; and twins who died young. Most of the family live in Otsego county.

RICHARD A. SCHOUTEN, proprietor of a meat market at Staatsburg, Dutchess county, is a man of strong and intelligent convictions and of good business tact. He is a native of Dutchess county, born November 22, 1835, in the town of East Fishkill, then known as Fishkill, and is descended from J. Schouten, a Holland emigrant, who came to Dutchess county and located in the town of Fishkill, where his son, John S. Schouten, was born. The latter was the grandfather of our subject, who lived upon one farm during his entire life and was very successful in his agricultural pursuits. He wedded Phoebe Perry, who was born in Fishkill, in 1777, and to them was born a son, Stockholm, the father of our subject. In Hyde Park, Dutchess county, the grandfather died, March 22, 1861, and his wife, in 1835.

Stockholm Schouten was born December 20, 1803, on the old home farm in the town of Fishkill, which he conducted until the spring of 1850, when he removed to a farm in Hyde Park town, about a mile north of East Park (then called Union Corners), procuring 260 acres of land now owned by De Witt Mulford. That farm he operated for about seven years, when he traded for a smaller place. He spent his last days, however, with his son, a prominent lawyer of Poughkeepsie. He was an intelligent, well-read man, having received good educational advantages, and being possessed of much natural talent. He took quite a prominent part in local political affairs in both Fishkill and Hyde Park town, always voting with the Democratic party, and served for many years as overseer of the poor in the former town. In later life he was an earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, dying in that faith March 13, 1876, at the age of seventy-two years.

Stockholm Schouten married Miss Ann

Maria Underhill, who was born December 16, 1810, and died April 7, 1883; she was the daughter of Absalom Underhill. Children as follows were born to this union: Ann Eliza, born August 19, 1830, became the wife of William S. Ladin, and died in August, 1849, the year she was married. John S., born October 8, 1832, is a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county; he served in the Civil war, enlisting as private, and was promoted to sergeant. Richard A. is next in order of birth. William Kipp, born January 27, 1839, became a promising young lawyer of Poughkeepsie, but was called from this life February 18, 1870, at the age of thirty-one years, one month and four days. Charles Andrew, born November 23, 1843, was a soldier during the Civil war, and was promoted to sergeant; most of his life has been spent in the dry-goods business in New York City, but he is now assistant superintendent in a post-graduate hospital, 21st street and 2d avenue, New York. Phœbe Helen, born October 2, 1847, died in 1866, the year of her marriage. Julia, born March 14, 1850, married to William Nelson, and had two children—Guy Lockwood and Grace Deere; Julia died about the year 1885. Stockholm, born March 27, 1853, was a printer of Poughkeepsie, where he died October 6, 1879.

The education of our subject was such as the common schools of Fishkill and Hyde Park towns afforded, and he is well posted on the current events of the day. For one year after attaining his majority he still remained upon the home farm, and then began the butchering business on a small scale, for a few months running a wagon. The following year he bought a small place east of Hyde Park, where he resided for about four years, but in 1863 succeeded to the business of M. E. Lattin, in Staatsburg, starting a small market on the west side of the track. For nine months he conducted a shop at Red Hook, Dutchess county, and for about a year one at Newburg, N. Y., but in 1872 he purchased his present building of William B. Densmore, and has since successfully carried on a market there, handling the best meats and controlling the trade of the town. He is careful and methodical in his business dealings, and his success is the just reward of his own diligence, enterprise and good management.

In 1857 Mr. Schouten was united in marriage with Laura J. Velie, daughter of Henry Velie, and they have become the parents of the following children: Charles Henry, who was born August 3, 1858, and is now in the shop with his father; Alice L., who was born January 5, 1863, and is the wife of C. W. H. Arnold; Francis M., who died May 3, 1879, at the age of thirteen years; Richard U., born January 15, 1875, and died in 1894, at the age of nineteen years; Laura Velie, who was born February 10, 1870, and is at home; Sterling Bird, born May 17, 1879; and Emma Deere, born May 23, 1882. Politically, Mr. Schouten votes the straight Democratic ticket, and has served his fellow-citizens as school trustee and collector of his town. He is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Staatsburg, in which he has officiated as trustee, and superintendent of the Sunday-school.

ORLANDO JAMES COWL, a retired merchant tailor of Pawling, Dutchess county, has been for many years a leading resident of that town, and he and his estimable wife, who recently passed from earth, have been helpful factors in the important social, philanthropic and religious movements which have contributed to the development and progress of the community.

Mr. Cowl is a native of New York City, born November 14, 1825. His family is of English origin, and the home of the American branch may be said to be at Cowl's Corners, east of Patterson, in Putnam Co., N. Y., where many of the name now live. Capt. William Cowl, our subject's grandfather, was a prominent citizen of that locality, and was greatly respected for his sound judgment and upright and temperate life. Possessing great energy, he engaged successfully in various business enterprises, being a merchant, a shoemaker, and the owner of a large tannery, and he also took an active share in local politics as a supporter of the Whig party. His title was a well-earned distinction gained in the war of 1812. He died in 1860, and his wife, Elizabeth Gorham, in 18—. They had seven children: Eliza Harry; Orrin; James; one who went to the West; Mrs. Flora Anderson; and Anna (also married).

James Cowl, our subject's father, was born in 1799, and about 1826 engaged in the grocery business at Pawling, on what was then known as Goosetown, on the spot now occupied by the residence of James Ferris. He afterward moved to New York, and followed the same business at the corner of Church and Franklin streets, but at the age of thirty-five he was compelled to abandon mercantile pursuits on account of ill health, and from that time he was engaged in the real-estate business. The family has always been distinguished for excellent business judgment, and his career would serve to confirm that reputation, his energy and foresight enabling him to accumulate a fortune. He did not care for public honors, and refused to become a candidate for office when urged; but he was interested in political questions of national importance, and was at first a Whig, later, as a strong opponent of slavery, becoming a Republican. He was a cheerful giver to any worthy cause, and a steadfast adherent of the Presbyterian Church for many years before his death, which occurred April 15, 1892. His first wife, our subject's mother, was Miss Phœbe Martin, a daughter of John Martin, a well-known resident of Quaker Hill. She died a few years after their marriage, and his second wife, Mary (Ludlum), was a victim of the cholera epidemic of 1848. He then married Mrs. Stanton, by whom he had one son. In no place did the strong character of James Cowl show to a better advantage than in his home life. The best of fathers, he gave his children good advantages, and started them well in life. Of the three children of his first family, Harriet, the wife of Alexander Allen, was the youngest. Martin H., who died at the age of forty-five years, was a carriage-maker by trade, and was noted for his fine natural abilities. George Cowl, the son of the third marriage, is a successful drug broker in New York City.

Orlando J. Cowl

The subject of our sketch received a good academic education in New York during his boyhood, completing his studies in the school conducted by Profs. King and Feaks, on Broadway, near Bleeker street. At eighteen years of age he began to learn the tailor's trade in that city, and when he was twenty-two years old he opened a shop of his own while living with his brother-in-law, Mr. Allen. In 1865 he started a merchant-tailoring establishment at Pawling, near the depot, which became the principal house in that line in the town. He was obliged to give this up in 1871 on account of failing health, and in the following year he built his present residence, and has since given his attention to the care of his extensive gardens. As a business man he has been very successful, displaying force of character combined with clear and sound judgment. In politics he was first a Whig, later a Republican, and he is a strong upholder of the temperance cause.

In 1866, Mr. Cowl married Miss Phœbe A. Beardsley, daughter of Bennett Beardsley, a prominent citizen of Poughkeepsie. She possessed rare qualities of mind and heart, and her death, which occurred July 19, 1894, was deeply mourned. The memory of her efforts as a devoted and self-sacrificing worker for the good of others will always be cherished in that community. She and her husband were both active members of the Methodist Church, and Mr. Cowl has held the office of steward for many years.

WILLIAM H. PARKER has, since 1872, been a successful merchant of Hughsonville, Dutchess county, dealing in stoves, house furnishing goods and groceries. His fair dealing and systematic methods of doing business have won for him the confidence and respect of all with whom he comes in contact, and his property has been acquired by the exercise of sound judgment, good business talents and industry.

Thomas Parker, father of our subject, was a native of Connecticut, born at Chester, in 1800. The family is of Welsh origin, three brothers having come from that country and settled in America about 1650. When ten years of age the father became a resident of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he learned the tin, sheet-iron and copper trade, and later followed his chosen occupation at Rochester, Troy and Elmira, N. Y. In 1841 he removed to Milwaukee, Wis., but his last days were passed at Dubuque, Iowa, where he died in December, 1856. In early life he was a Whig in politics, but later supported the Democratic party. He was a very religious man, a faithful member of the Episcopal Church, to which his wife also belonged. Thomas Parker was united in marriage with Miss Sarah De Groff, who was born in 1804, at Poughkeepsie, where their marriage was celebrated, and was the daughter of Cornelius De Groff, a native of the same place. The De Groffs were originally from France, but, on going to Holland, they intermarried with that nation, and representatives of the family came to America at a very early period in the history of this country. Shortly after their marriage the parents of our subject removed to Troy, N. Y., where part of the children were born, the remainder being born at Rochester. They are as follows: Jeffrey A., a resident of Dubuque, Iowa; Adaline, deceased wife of William R. Anderson, a captain on the Mississippi river; Thomas, who died in Milwaukee at the age of eighteen years; Maria and Julia, who died in infancy; William H., of this review; and Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Prest, of Whitinsville, Mass. The mother's death occurred at Hughsonville, N. Y., in 1893, when in her ninetieth year.

At Troy, N. Y., on July 4, 1837, William H. Parker first opened his eyes to the light, and was only a year old when taken by his parents to Elmira, where they remained a short time. As early as 1841 he became a resident of Milwaukee, Wis., where his boyhood days were passed, and there he learned the tinner's and plumber's trade with Henry J. Nazro & Co. In May, 1856, he started overland to Kansas by cattle train, and was three months en route. He traveled extensively through the West and South for some time, but finally, in 1858, came to Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, where he remained for a short time. He then worked at his trade in many large cities, including Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. On the outbreak of the Civil war, he went to Monticello, N. Y., where he enlisted in the First New York Mounted Rifles, but because of a rupture did not enter into active service.

In June, 1864, Mr. Parker was married to Miss Mary Kelly, a native of Orange county, N. Y., and a daughter of Thomas Kelly, who was of Irish extraction. Nine children were born to them, but four died in infancy. Those still living are Willard, Fred, Jennie, Charles and Addie, all at home. Shortly after his marriage, Mr. Parker located at Wappingers Falls, where he worked at his trade for A. W. Armstrong for three years, and the following year was in business for himself at that place. Going to Troy, N. Y., he engaged in the wholesale spice-box business, manufacturing tinware there for four years. Since 1872, however, he has been a resident of Hughsonville, where he has engaged in his present line of business.

Politically, Mr. Parker affiliates with the Republican party, being one of its most earnest supporters, and he takes quite a prominent part in public affairs. In 1889 he was elected justice of the peace, in which office he served for four years, for the same length of time was the efficient postmaster of Hughsonville; in 1893 was elected supervisor of Wappingers township, and at the end of a year was re-elected, serving in that position until the present time, when superseded by Mr. Barlow. He is a very intelligent man, being well-read on literary and scientific subjects, and is one of the prominent men in the community, standing high in the estimation of his fellow-citizens.

MILES HUGHES. In past ages the history of the country was the record of wars and conquests; to-day it is the record of commercial activity, and those whose names are foremost in its annals are the leaders in business circles. The conquests now made are those of mind over matter, not man over man, and the victor is he who can successfully establish, control and operate extensive commercial interests. Mr. Hughes is unquestionably one of the most successful men of Dutchess county. Tireless energy, keen perception, honesty of purpose, genius for devising and executing the right thing at the right time joined to every-day common sense, guided by resistless will power, are the chief characteristics of the man. He is at the head of a large mercantile establishment at Staatsburg, where he is also engaged in handling grain, feed and flour, having one of the finest elevators in the county; is president of the Falkkill Knitting Co., of Poughkeepsie; president of the Dutchess Land Co., vice-president of the Gilber Arnold Land Co., and is also largely interested in property at Superior, Wisconsin.

The family is of English ancestry, being founded in America by those of the name who took up their residence in New England during Colonial days. The great-grandfather of our subject, Christopher Hughes, was a native of New Haven, Conn., and in early life was a sea captain. He was the first of the family to come to Dutchess county, where he purchased about 600 acres of land in the town of Hyde Park, southeast of Staatsburg, also the property on which A. J. Briggs is now living. His son, Christopher, the grandfather of our subject, was one of the first officers in the town of Hyde Park after it was set off from Clinton. He was born in New Haven, Conn., and occupation was a farmer, operating the land which his father had here purchased. He was one of the leading members of the locality, took an active part in Church work, and was one of the founders of St. James Episcopal Church at Hyde Park. He married Rachel Paulding, belonging to the family of which John Paulding, one of the captors of Major André, was a member, and also James Kirk Paulding, the author and statesman. Of this union eight children were born: Samuel; Miles; Christopher, the father of our subject, who is the only one of the sons now living; Brooks; Elizabeth, who married Mr. Wade, of Albany county, N. Y.; Harriet, who became the wife of John Uhl; Maria, who wedded Mr. Kidmore; and Lucinda, wife of Hercules Reed, of Hulburton, New York.

Upon the family homestead in the town of Hyde Park, the father of our subject was born, July, 1805, and has always followed agricultural pursuits, in which he has been successful, being a man of good judgment in business matters. He married Miss Sarah Lamoree, daughter of John Lamoree, who belonged to one of the oldest families of Dutchess county, of French origin, and was one of the most successful farmers and prominent men of the community. Mrs. Hughes is one of a family of seven children, the others being Daniel; Isaac; George V.; Nathaniel; Millie, who married Harris Marshall; and Mary, who wedded Jeremiah Shultz, of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county. To the parents of our subject were born four children: Sarah, now the widow of Jacob Cookingham; Miles, of this view; Edgar, who died at the age of fifteen years; and Lucinda. In his early years the father took a great interest in military matters, being captain of a cavalry company in the State Militia, and was always known by his associates as Capt. Hughes. He is still living in the advanced age of ninety-one years, while his devoted wife is in her eighty-ninth year. He early became connected with the Episcopal Church of Hyde Park, but now holds membership with the Church at Staatsburg, in the work of which he takes an active part, and has always served as one of its officers. Public interests also receive his attention, especially educational affairs, and for many years he served as school trustee. His political support has always been unswervingly given to the Democratic party.

Miles Hughes was born April 8, 1836, on the old family homestead at Staatsburg, Dutchess county, and received a good academic education, finishing his literary studies at Hinsdale, Mass., where he went with the intention of preparing for Williams College. At the age of eighteen, however, he left school and began teaching in the home school, holding that position for about six months. He was very successful in that undertaking, and now looks back upon his work there with as much satisfaction as anything he has accomplished in life. For about seven years afterward he assisted in the cultivation of the home farm; but in February, 1864, he began the general merchandising in connection with a Mr. Wood, of Clinton town, and the firm continued to do business for some seven years, when our subject bought out his partner's interest, and has since conducted the concern alone. He has one of the largest trades in the county, won by the high grade of goods which he carries, fair and honorable dealing, and his courteous treatment of customers. He has been successful in all his business ventures, the result of his own untiring efforts.

In October, 1865, Mr. Hughes was married to Miss Pier, of Upper Red Hook, Dutchess county, daughter of Benjamin S. Pier, formerly of New York City, but later a resident of Upper Red Hook, N. Y. As a coppersmith he made the first pans for the Borden Condensed Milk Company. Five children grace the union of our subject and his wife: Edwin B., in the store at Staatsburg, and Marian, both living; and Pier, Mary and Emily, all three deceased. Mr. Hughes is a fine representative of the Republican party, always a firm supporter of its principles, and has served as justice of the peace. He takes great interest in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, of which he is a member, and is now senior warden. Public-spirited in a high degree, he has ever been loyal to his home interests, and the town owes as much to Mr. Hughes as to any other man for its growth and stability, while throughout the community no one is more widely or favorably known.

LOUIS YOUNG was born August 24, 1837, at a place called Oberingelheim, in Germany, and came to America when he was thirteen years old. The following eight years were spent mostly in traveling through the country on pleasure trips, and when he had reached the age of twenty-four years, he had settled down in Wappingers Falls, where he was employed for ten years by John Barlow in the bakery business. In 1858, Mr. Young purchased the business from Mr. Barlow, and carried it on until the time of his death, which event took place November 12, 1889. He was very successful in his undertakings, being a man of strict honesty, careful management, and reliable in all his methods of dealing. He started in life in the village with a capital of fifty cents, and at his death left property valued at $10,000.00. He built the brick store which he occupied, and the one now occupied by Matthew J. Cashin, and also two brick houses on Mesier avenue.

On November 21, 1871, Mr. Young was married to Miss Eliza Smith, who was born in Orange county, N. Y., a daughter of Thomas Smith, a native of England. Of this union four daughters were born: Josephine, Mary, Sarah and Wilhelmina. They are all young ladies of culture and refinement, and with their mother are popular members of society.

Mr. Young was a Republican, but never aspired to become an office holder. He was quiet and unostentatious, and used his influence in making improvements in the village, and doing good in an unobtrusive manner, rather than in seeking prominence for himself. He will long be remembered for his many kindly deeds. Socially he belonged to Wappinger Lodge, F. & A. M.; Lafayette Lodge, I. O. O. F.; and the Legion of Honor. The family are all members of the Episcopal Church, to which their father was a liberal contributor.

EDWARD ELSWORTH PERKINS, lawyer, born in the town of Poughkeepsie, February 4, 1863, is one of the prominent young members of the Dutchess county Bar, and a son of Alexander W. Perkins and his wife, Elsie A. Kay.

The old homestead, known as the "Spackenkill Farm" (now owned by Edward), stands on the post road between the city of Poughkeepsie and Wappingers Falls. There Mr. Perkins had the usual experience of a country boy, attending the district school in the neighborhood until the age of fifteen, when he entered Pelham's Institute, on Montgomery street, in the city of Poughkeepsie, for a three-years' course. At the expiration of that he returned to the farm for two years, and then at the age of twenty commenced to prepare for his profession in the law office of O. D. M. Baker. At the age of twenty-one he was elected justice of the peace of his town, which office he held for three years. In 1886 he was admitted to the bar at the December term of the Supreme Court held in Brooklyn, having the highest standing in a class of seventy. He immediately engaged in practice at the city of Poughkeepsie, in the office of his preceptor, and met with a degree of success.

Mr. Perkins in 1887 was one of the organizers of the Poughkeepsie & Southeastern Railroad Company (now the Dutchess County R. R.), extending from Poughkeepsie Bridge to Hopewell Junction, and was elected its first secretary and treasurer.

In 1890 Mr. Perkins went to Texas for New York and Philadelphia capitalists, and engaged in organizing and building the extension of the Fort Worth & Rio Grande railroad from Comanche to Brownwood. Completing this work, he went to Fort Worth, Tex., associated with T. L. Marsalis, of Dallas, Tex., in the completion and extension of the Dallas & Oak Cliff railroad, and later in the building of the West Dallas railroad, of which Mr. Perkins became president.

Mr. Perkins while in Fort Worth was elected president of the American Savings Bank and Trust Company, and was chosen by the Travelers Insurance Company, of Hartford, Conn., as their financial and loan representative for the State of Texas. In 1893 he organized the American National Bank; was elected a director and its first vice-president. In 1893 he removed to his native town, and resumed the practice of his profession.

Mr. Perkins is one of the governors of the Dutchess Club, member of the Gentlemen Driving Club of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County Golf Club, Poughkeepsie Tennis Club, and is a Democrat in political faith.

On June 23, 1891, Mr. Perkins married Miss Mary D. Beard, daughter of Col. O. W. Beard, a prominent resident of Poughkeepsie. Their children are three in number: Oliver, Elizabeth, Jeannie Marie and Argenta.

DOUGLAS MERRITT, one of our most esteemed citizens, residing upon a beautiful farm called "Leacote," is of the sixth generation in descent from Thomas Merritt, who settled at Rye, Westchester county, in 1670, and was a prominent citizen, and a deputy to the

W. Perkins.

General Court of Connecticut in 1699. He had four sons: Thomas, Joseph, Ephraim and Samuel, of whom, Joseph, who died in 1754, left three sons: Joseph, Thomas and Nehemiah.

Nehemiah was born in 1715, married Minah Hopkins, of Oyster Bay, and in 1758 moved to Quaker Hill, Dutchess county, where he owned a large farm. He died there in 1794, leaving four children: Daniel, Nehemiah, Ichabod and Anna.

Nehemiah, Jr., born in 1740, married Rebecca Wing, in 1760, and was a merchant of the town of Washington, where he died in 1793, leaving eleven children. His youngest son, Benjamin, was born in 1777, married Thankful, daughter of Col. Matthew Scott, and was a merchant in New York and Troy. He died in 1854, leaving ten children, of whom the eldest son, George, was born in Washington county in 1807, and married Julia, daughter of Alanson Douglas and Ann Sutherland. He became an eminent dry-goods merchant in New York, and was noted for his beneficence. His death occurred at his country seat, "Lyndehurst," Irvington-on-Hudson, in 1873. Of his six children the eldest, Douglas, was born at No. 42 Barclay street, New York, December 4, 1847, was educated at the school of John MacMullen and the Columbia Grammar School, passed two years in Europe, and was graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1874. He purchased his farm called "Leade" in 1875, and was married August 3, 1876, to Elizabeth Cleveland, daughter of Rt. Rev. Arthur Cleveland Coxe, Bishop of Westchester, New York. They have two children: Ethel Douglas and Alan Douglas.

Mr. Merritt has always taken an interest in public affairs and the progress of the neighborhood. He is a trustee of St. Stephens Clergy, Annandale; St. Johns Church, Barrytown; the Starr Institute, Rhinebeck, and the Public School No. 3, and was a member of the local Board of Excise. He is also senior warden of the Church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck, and has for many years been a delegate from the Church to the Diocesan Convention.

JOHN H. SMITH, JR., was born at the Steel Works in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, March 18, 1863, and is a lineal descendant of Nehemiah Smith, whose birth occurred in England about 1605, and who came to America and made application to be admitted as a freeman at Plymouth, Mass., March 6, 1637. For two years he lived on Long Island, but in 1644 removed to Stratford, Conn., where he kept a flock of sheep on the west bank of Oyster river, and was consequently known as Shepherd Smith. Later he removed to New Haven, Conn.; in the spring of 1651, to Norwich, L. I.; and two years afterward to London, Conn. Owing to trouble with the Indians he continued to reside at New London until after 1665, when he removed to his farm at Smith Lake, Poquonock, where he doubtless had been making improvements for several years. He was one of the original proprietors of Norwich, buying the land from the Indian chief, Uncas, in 1659, and was among the earliest settlers of several new towns in Connecticut. He always took an active interest in Church affairs, and, doubtless, officiated in the absence of the regular pastor. He died about 1686. On January 21, 1639, he married Annie Bourne, of Marshfield, Mass., who died in 1684, and to them were born the following children: Sarah, born in 1642; Mary; Hannah, born in 1644; Mercy and Elizabeth (twins), born in 1645; Nehemiah, born in 1646; Lydia, born in 1647; Ann and Mehitabel.

Nehemiah Smith, the only son, was born at New Haven, Conn., in 1646, and was baptized October 24, of that year, by Rev. John Davenport, first pastor of the first Church at that place. When ten years of age he accompanied his father to the farm at Poquonock, Conn., and was seventeen when the latter moved to Norwich, leaving him on the farm. On October 24, 1669, he married Lydia Winchester, daughter of Alexander Winchester, of Roxbury, Mass. In that year he was a member of the General Assembly at Hartford, and also in several subsequent years. He and his wife became members of the first Church at New London, Conn. About 1691 or 1692 he purchased a large tract of land at Niantic, Conn., of Joseph and John Bull, of Hartford.

Nehemiah Smith, a son of Nehemiah and Lydia (Winchester) Smith, was born November 14, 1663, and April 22, 1696, was united in marriage with Dorothy Wheeler, who was born December 6, 1679 (a daughter of Isaac Wheeler), and died May 25, 1736. Soon after their marriage they both joined the first Church at New London, and he was always known as an honest and highly respected farmer; in 1712 and 1714 he served as townsman.

His entire life was spent upon the old homestead farm near Smith Lake, Poquonock, Groton, Conn., where his death occurred November 21, 1724. In his family were twelve children, namely: Dorothy, Hannah, Elizabeth, Nathan, John, William, Isaac, Mary, Lydia, Jabez, Anna and Sarah.

Isaac, the seventh child of Nehemiah and Dorothy (Wheeler) Smith, was born December 29, 1797, at Groton, Conn., and November 4, 1729, wedded Esther, daughter of Deacon Daniel Denison. Both became members of the First Congregational Church at New London, Conn. He departed this life March 14, 1783, and his wife died on August 17, 1798. In their family were eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Daniel, December 1, 1730; Amos, December 13, 1732; Esther, August 9, 1734; Hannah, August 9, 1734; Simeon, June 9, 1738; Abigail, February 15, 1740; Mary, November 15, 1743; Lucy, November 11, 1746; William, October 26, 1749; and Silas and Phebe, twins, April 18, 1752.

William Smith, the ninth of the family, engaged in farming at Mt. Archer and North Lyme, New London Co., Conn., and served as deacon in the Baptist Church, of which he was a consistent member. In 1772 he married Sarah Smith, daughter of Nathan and Elizabeth Smith, who died July 14, 1831, and his death occurred September 1, 1841. They also had twelve children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: William, January 22, 1775; Sarah, February 1, 1777; Elizabeth, December 1, 1779; Gurdon, December 4, 1781; John D., August 12, 1782; Edward, August 24, 1784; Phebe, August 20, 1786; Nathan, November 12, 1788; Charlotte, January 1, 1791; Lucy, February 14, 1793; Almira, March 1, 1797; Ansyl, April 2, 1799; and Edward.

Nathan Smith, the seventh in order of birth, was born at North Lyme, Conn., and was the grandfather of our subject. In 1810 he was married to Nancy Waterman, of Salem, Conn., who died July 2, 1824, and they became the parents of five children: Sarah M., born August 6, 1814, married Columbus Reed; Gilbert B. was born April 10, 1816; Nathan W., born January 12, 1818, is now living at South Amenia, Dutchess Co., N. Y.; Nancy L., born August 12, 1819, died January 11, 1874; and John H., born June 1, 1821, died October 13, 1892. For his second wife Nathan Smith married Hannah Stark, and they had two children: Fitch C., born January 1, 1826; and Henry S., born May 20, 1828. His third wife was Nancy Baker, widow of Mathias Baker, and daughter of Deacon Eliphalet H. Baker, and his last wife was Mary Gallup. For a time he was captain of a sloop, but most of his life was devoted to farming at Salem, Conn. At the time of his death, which occurred March 26, 1876, he was serving as deacon of the Baptist Church at North Lyme, Conn., of which he was a faithful member.

John H. Smith, the father of our subject, was born at Lyme, Conn., was there educated in the public schools, and at the age of fourteen years walked from his home to Wassaic, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he resided with his sister for a time. At Williamstown, Mass., he learned the trade of wagon making, after which he worked in the mill at Amenia, where he continued to reside for one year after his marriage. Removing to the Steel Works, he began wagon making, which business he continued to follow up to the time of his death. He was entirely a self-made man, having started out in life for himself empty-handed at the early age of fourteen years, and succeeded in accumulating a good property through persistent labor and well-directed efforts. In religious belief he was a Baptist, belonging to the Church at Amenia, and in politics he was a stalwart Republican. He was called upon to serve his fellow citizens in the offices of assessor and justice of the peace.

At Amenia, June 1, 1847, was celebrated the marriage of John H. Smith, Sr., and Maria, daughter of Myron Reed, and to them were born seven children: Nathan, who was born April 21, 1848, and is now a merchant at Amenia Union; Sarah M., who was born September 11, 1849, and was married July 26, 1879, to Charles, son of Philo S. Hoyt, of Danbury, Conn.; Myron, born May 12, 1851, who is serving his third term as superintendent of the poor of Dutchess county; Belinda, born April 11, 1855; Esther M., born September 22, 1856; Edwin D., of Poughkeepsie, born January 18, 1859; and John H., whose name introduces this sketch.

John H. Smith, Jr., spent his boyhood days in Amenia, attending the district schools and the Amenia Seminary, and learned the trade of wagon making with his father, who then gave him an interest in the business. Since the death of his father he has successfully conducted the trade alone, handling all kinds of goods in the wagon line, and is now at the head of a large and constantly increasing business. Socially he affiliates with the Royal Arcanum at Wassaic, Dutchess county, and politically is identified with the Republican party. At Plainsville, Conn., December 22, 1887, he was united in marriage with Miss Carrie Gridley Parrish, a native of Hillsdale, Columbia Co., N. Y., and they have two children: Celia M. and William Parrish.

HENRY M. BARKER, who for the past five years has been the efficient superintendent on the place of Mr. Mills, of the town of Hyde Park, is a native of New Hampshire, born at Antrim, August 24, 1838, and is of Scotch-Irish lineage, but for several generations representatives of the family have made their home in New England.

His paternal grandfather, Capt. Peter Barker, was born in Atkinson, N. H., and was the son of Zebediah Barker. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, being captain of the alarm list, and served for seven years in that terrible struggle. By occupation he was a farmer, and was one of the most successful and prominent men of the community in which he lived. He wedded Sallie Wood, of Atkinson, N. H., and to them were born the following children: Samuel, Hannah, Peter, Isaac, Thomas, Moody M. and Sallie. The family were all faithful members of the Presbyterian Church, and the male representatives were ardent Democrats, very firm in their political convictions. The death of Capt. Peter Barker occurred on the 23d of May, 1829.

Moody M. Barker, the father of our subject, first opened his eyes to the light in New Hampshire, May 24, 1795, became a prominent farmer of that State, and would have been an honor to any community. He became captain of the State Militia, and served for about four months in the war of 1812. He was married to Miss Nancy Bixby, of Hillsboro, N. H., a daughter of John Bixby, and they became the parents of five children: John B., a paper maker, who became the owner of a factory in Mexico, where he died in 1863; Emily, who became the wife of Samuel Brown; Adeline, who married Charles Woods; Miles, who is living at Nashua, N. H.; and Henry M., of this review. On March 24, 1873, the father departed this life, and his loving wife only survived him two days. They were earnest Christian people, who had the respect of all who knew them.

Mr. Barker, whose name introduces this record, attended both public and select schools during his youth, and as he is quite a reader, the knowledge thus acquired has been greatly supplemented, and he is now a well-informed man. On starting out in life for himself, for five years he was clerk in a dry-goods store at Manchester, N. H.; but in 1864 he returned to the old home farm, to which he devoted his time and attention until 1878. In that year he came to Staatsburg, Dutchess county, as manager for Mrs. Major Lowndis on her farm, just above the one on which he is now located. At the end of a year, however, he became superintendent on the farm of Maturin Livingston, with whom he remained until the latter's death, and for the past five years has been on the same farm with Mr. Mills. It is needless to say that he gives general satisfaction, as his long-continued service well indicates that fact.

For the last two years Mr. Barker has taken quite an active part in local political affairs, adhering closely to the principles of the Republican party, and at the election in the spring of 1894 was chosen supervisor of the town of Hyde Park. Since coming to the county he has always held a prominent and influential position, and stands remarkably high in the estimation of the community, as an honorable, upright and trustworthy man. In religious belief he is a Presbyterian, and socially is a member of the Knights of Pythias fraternity of Staatsburg.

In November, 1864, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Barker and Miss Mary J. Colbourn, of New Boston, N. H., a daughter of Luther Colbourn, and three sons grace their union: Herbert L., a practicing physician of Woodside, Long Island; Harry C., an attorney at law, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; and Fred M., at home.

WILLIAM J. CAREY, a well-known merchant at Pawling, Dutchess county, is one of the most enterprising and successful young business men of the town, having built up his trade from the start to its present handsome proportions.

His ancestors have had their home for many generations in Kings county, Ireland, and his grandfather, Andrew Carey, a farmer, left there in 1858 to come to America, where he followed his occupation first in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, and later at Claremont, N. H. His last years were spent in retirement at that place. He married, and had eight children: John, a resident of Manchester, England, who died in 1896; Mary, the wife of James Kating, of Claremont, N. H.; Christopher, formerly a farmer, but now a resident of Danbury, Conn.; Joseph, deceased, who lived at Claremont, and has a son practicing law in Washington, D. C.; Edward and Thomas, both residents of Claremont; Margaret, the wife of M. Fitzgerald; and Andrew, our subject's father.

Andrew Carey was born in the Emerald Isle in 1844, and was about fourteen years old at the time of the emigration to this country. He is now one of the substantial citizens of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, owning a farm of 160 acres, gained by his industry and thrifty management. He is a member of the Catholic Church at Pawling, and in politics is a Democrat, and his sound common sense and public spirit have made him influential in local movements. Thoroughly patriotic in his devotion to the best interests of his adopted country, he enlisted in 1863 in the 28th Connecticut V. I., under Capt. Hoag, and served for one year, taking part in several important engagements. He now belongs to Campbell Post No. 661, G. A. R., of Pawling. He married Miss Mary Ellen Donahue, daughter of William Donahue, of Pawling, N. Y., and they have ten children, of whom our subject is the eldest. Mary Ellen married Daniel J. Driscoll, an engineer, of Boston, Mass.; John Edward is head clerk in the store of his brother, William J.; Margaret is in Boston; and Elizabeth, Sarah, Andrew, Alice, Emma and Frank are at home.

The subject of this sketch was born November 20, 1865, in the town of Pawling, and was educated in the common schools near his home, attending only the winter terms after he reached the age of eleven. At sixteen he left school and began business life, but he has always taken a keen interest in reading, and is well informed upon the topics of the day. His first employment was in a pleating shop in Boston, in 1883, and after some time there he went to Brooklyn and secured work as a porter in a chop house for the winter season. In March, 1884, he took a position as driver for Dr. E. H. Hasbrook, and remained with him until November, 1886. The next two years were spent at home, working part of the time by the day upon the farm, and meanwhile farming some rented land. On December 5, 1888, he opened a candy and cigar store, Pawling, at the corner now occupied by O'Leary's store, and continued there in a small way until April 25, 1889, when he moved to his present place and added groceries to his stock, his business having so increased as to justify the investment. Since that time his trade has extended until it is regarded as among the largest in the town.

Mr. Carey's matrimonial partner is Catherine Lehan, daughter of Daniel Lehan, prominent resident of Pawling, and they have one daughter, Madeleine. Like his ancestor he is a Catholic in religion, and he is an active worker in local affairs, supporting the Democratic ticket, and serving the community as member of the board of education and of the fire department.

JAMES RUSSELL PAINE, the senior member of the well-known firm of J. R. Paine & Son, leading hardware merchants of Milford, was born June 20, 1831, in the town of Northeast, upon the old Paine homestead which has been in the possession of the family since the first settlement of the town of Northeast. He is of English descent, the founder of the American line being Thomas Paine, who landed at Plymouth in 1621.

Mr. Paine's descendants have held a distinguished place in the early history of the country, Robert Treat Paine, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, being among them. Thomas Paine had a son, Elisha, who settled at Canterbury, Conn., and his son, Abram located in Amenia about 1741, and was the first to take steps toward organizing a Church there. Joshua Paine, also of Canterbury, probably a son of Thomas, came to Dutchess county in 1749, and purchased land in the eastern part of the township, and Section 59 of the "Oblong," where he followed farming and blacksmithing. He was the father of Barnabus Paine, Sr., and of Judge Ephraim Paine, who was county judge in 1778, being the first to be appointed to that office in Dutchess county after the organization of the government of the State of New York. Elisha Paine, our subject's great-grandfather, owned and cultivated the old farm in Northeast, and did his son, Jeremiah, who, as one of the most influential and prosperous men in the community, sustained the well-deserved reputation of the family. He was a justice of the peace for many years. He married Betsey Woodard, and had six children: Lorinda (Mrs. Eggleston); Platt A., our subject's father; Sarah Ann (Mrs. Bailey Bowditch); Rachel (Mrs. Mortimer Worthey); Jeremiah W.; and Mary (Mrs. Darius Penny). His death occurred about 1855, and that of his wife about 1848.

J. R. Lane

Platt A. Paine was born June 19, 1806. He conducted the old homestead for a time in early manhood, but later bought the Roe farm of 244 acres, and lived there for nearly twenty years. He became interested in Western lands also, and made a number of successful deals. In politics he was a Republican, and an active one, holding various offices in that town, including those of supervisor and justice of the peace. He was highly esteemed in the neighborhood, and was a deacon in the Baptist church, with which his family has been closely identified from very early times. He married Julietta Russell, daughter of Eli Russell, in his day a leading citizen of Northeast. Both lived to a good old age, and retired in 1859 to the village of Millerton to spend their declining years. Mrs. Paine died there in 1876, her husband surviving her only three years. They had five children: James R.; Judson P., now of Annawan, Ill.; Theron J., of New York City; Martin W., living in Millerton; and Julia, who married George Houston, now of Pennsylvania, but at that time the superintendent of Maltby's furnace in the town of Northeast.

James R. Paine was educated mainly at a select school in his native town, of which E. V. Simmons was principal. He attended there until he was nineteen years old, and attained a good academic education. His vacations were spent in farm work, and until his marriage, at the age of twenty-two, he remained at the old farm, assisting his father. In 1853 he bought a life lease of a farm in Northeast, where he lived for ten years, buying in the meantime another farm. In 1863 he sold both properties, and for three years was engaged with William Dayton in the hotel business at Millerton. Later he made several voyages, moving to Canaan, Conn. (where he owned a farm for a time), to Great Barrington and to Sheffield, Mass., where he engaged in speculating in real estate and stock. After a successful year there he returned, in 1869, to his native county, and established himself in business in Millerton, buying out Mr. Merrifield's interest in the hardware store which he had been conducting in partnership with Darius Penny. The new firm continued the business for three years, when Mr. Paine purchased Mr. Penny's interest, continuing alone until January, 1878, when his son became a partner. This is the oldest mercantile house in the town, and commands a large and profitable trade. Mr. Paine's well-proved ability and judgment have made him a valued adviser in many business enterprises; he has been a director of the Amenia National Bank, and was one of the original directors of the Millerton National Bank, of which he has for a number of years past been the vice-president.

Mr. Paine has been married four times, first to Miss Julia Eggleston, who died leaving one son—Platt N.; and second to Miss Julia Dayton, by whom he had two sons—William H., a resident of Roanoke, Va.; and Lester, who conducts the homestead. His third wife, who was Miss Ann Friss, had one daughter, Florence, a successful music teacher at Keene, N. H.; his present wife, formerly Miss Cynthia Tripp, has one son, James Russell Paine, Jr. The family are active and influential supporters of the Baptist Church, of which Mr. Paine has been a communicant since the age of twelve years, and for many years has been a deacon. In local affairs he has always been a leader, but, although he is an influential Republican, he has never cared to hold office. He served a term as town assessor, but has since declined to be a candidate for any position.

PLATT N. PAINE was born December 25, 1854, and received a good academic education in the schools of Millerton, Canaan, Great Barrington, and Amenia. On leaving Amenia Seminary at the age of nineteen, he engaged in clerking for his father; but in 1876 he went to Port Royal, S. C., and became interested in gardening and draying, with the view of supplying the government fleets at Port Royal harbor. He sold out after eight months, however, and returned to Millerton to make his permanent home. On January 1, 1878, he formed a partnership with his father in the hardware business, and he has also been engaged in the building of houses for sale. Some of the finest cottages in the town have been erected by him, five being located in Park Lot. He has already disposed of nine houses, and has made this branch of his work very profitable. Some years ago he undertook the work of surveying with W. E. Simmons, and is now engaged in that also. He takes an active part in public affairs and is among the leaders in the Republican organization in his town, serving as trustee for several terms, and as treasurer of the village to fill a vacancy; he has now also held for some time the offices of justice of the peace, sealer of weights and measures, and superintendent of the water works. He introduced the original motion for the construction of these works, and has been one of the chief promoters of various other measures for local improvement. He is a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he is a trustee.

ALLEN H. DUTCHER, a most genial and companionable gentleman, has through a long and useful career been prominently identified with the interests of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. He is one of the representative and public-spirited citizens, always aiding in everything that will in any way benefit his town or county, and has the respect and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact.

The Dutcher family is of Holland origin, and the first of its members to locate in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, was Christopher Dutcher, the great-grandfather of our subject. He erected the first flourmill in this part of the county, and a portion of it is still standing. He conducted the same during his entire life, grinding much of the flour that was sold at Poughkeepsie and other places in the locality. As Dover Plains was then the terminus of the Harlem road, which was built before the New York Central, all the Poughkeepsie freight and passengers were brought to that village by stage, and it became quite a center of trade. The grandfather of our subject, Lawrence Dutcher, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where his education was later acquired, and he became a farmer by occupation. He was twice married, by the first union having three children, and by his second wife, who bore the maiden name of Waldo, had eleven children.

Belden Dutcher, the father of Allen H., was also born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, in the year 1790, and after completing his education there engaged in agricultural pursuits. During the old training days, he served as major of a troop of militia. An earnest and sincere Christian, he took a prominent part in religious work, giving the ground at Dover Plains, on which the Baptist Church was built and still stands. He also took a prominent part in the upbuilding of the village, erecting two good hotels, and he succeeded in getting the first mechanics to locate there. He was united in marriage with Miss Maria Hurd, a daughter of Capt. Allen Hurd, and six children were born to them: Egbert, Allen H., Elizabeth, William, Thomas, and one that died in infancy. The mother was called from this life in July, 1862, and for his second wife, Mr. Dutcher wedded Mrs. Abbie Burrows.

The birth of our subject occurred at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, in 1819, and he acquired a practical education in the academy of that place. During early life he learned the trade of a wagon maker, at which he worked for about eight years, when he entered upon a mercantile career. He has held every office in his town with the exception of two, and it is needless to say that he ever discharged his duties with promptness and fidelity. For seventeen years he served as postmaster of Dover Plains, and for eight years was revenue collector. He is at present justice of the peace, and his decisions are marked by fairness and impartiality, being well calculated to serve the ends of justice. He is also engaged in the fire-insurance business.

Mr. Dutcher married Miss Maria Prestor, daughter of Clark Preston, of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and to them was born a son, Ernest P., who married Isabella Gridley, of New York, by whom he has one child, Isabella E. In 1856 Mr. Dutcher lost his wife, and about four years later he wedded Miss Mary A. Bricker, daughter of William Bricker of England. To them was born one child that died in infancy.

James Bricker, the grandfather of Mr. Dutcher, was a native of Wotton-under-Edge, Gloucestershire, England—a most beautiful place, surrounded by mountains. In his family was William Bricker, who was born and educated at the same place. He there married Miss Hannah White, and in England were born to them three daughters: Mary A., wife of our subject; Caroline, who became the wife

William Beldin, son of Dr. Beldin, of Dover Plains; and Emily. In January, 1842, the latter came to the United States, locating at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county. When he had been here a year and nine months, he sent for his family, which arrived in 1844, and ever afterward made their home in this county. After the death of his first wife in 1850, he was again married, and his death occurred in Fond du Lac, Wis., in 1882. Although an Englishman by birth, he became a thorough American citizen, and always stood by his adopted home. In his native land he had engaged in the manufacture of broadcloth, but in this country gave his entire attention to agricultural pursuits.

CHARLES A. SIMMONS, who occupies an influential and prominent position among the citizens of Stanford town, Dutchess county, resides near Bangall, where he is engaged in the breeding of Jersey cattle and raising fancy poultry. When a young man he learned the profession of an architect, contractor and builder, which he followed at Pine Plains, Dutchess county, for four years, and then removed to his present home, where he still engages in that business to some extent.

Mr. Simmons was born at Pine Plains, December 24, 1860, and is the only child of Norman and Emeline (Eldridge) Simmons. His father was a native of Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y., and the youngest of a family of three sons and two daughters born to John B. and Catherine (Hover) Simmons, who for many years resided in Pine Plains town, Dutchess county. After his marriage, the father of our subject made his home in the village of Pine Plains, where he was one of the leading contractors and builders, and his wife, who is milliner and dressmaker, has there carried on that business ever since. He learned his trade at Philmont, Columbia county, where he served a seven-years' apprenticeship, and was entirely a self-made man. In politics he was an ardent Republican, and held the office of overseer of the poor. He died in 1881, at the age of forty-nine years, in the faith of the Baptist Church, of which he was a consistent member.

Charles A. Simmons spent his early days in the village of Pine Plains, where he attended the public schools, and completed his literary education in the Seymour Smith Institute, of that place, after which he began his business career. In the city of Albany, N. Y., he was married, August 12, 1892, to Miss Eva Wilber, daughter of Zachariah Wilber, of the town of Milan, Dutchess county. Both are highly respected in their community and foremost in all good work. Mr. Simmons uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party, and is a member of the Baptist Church at Bangall.

JAMES R. BARLOW, one of the leading citizens of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, was born in that village, June 4, 1836, and is a son of John and Elizabeth Barlow, the former of whom was born near Burnley, Lancashire, England, and for many years followed the sea. In 1827 he came to America, and located in New York City, where, for some time, he followed the trade of a dyer. He married Miss Elizabeth Holt, of Rockland county, N. Y., a daughter of Thomas Holt, an Englishman, who was one of the first to introduce calico machine printing into this country.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. John Barlow settled at Wappingers Falls, where three children were born to them: Patience, who died aged twelve years; James R., the subject of this sketch; and Sarah J., who married George Stevenson, a merchant of Wappingers Falls. About 1854 John Barlow became interested in the manufacture of combs, an industry he carried on until 1858, when he embarked in the bakery business, which he followed during the succeeding ten years. He then went into partnership with George Stevenson, in the hardware business, in which he was engaged until his death in September, 1892. His wife passed away in February, 1885. Mr. Barlow was a Republican in politics, and both he and his wife were members of the Episcopal Church.

James R. Barlow, our subject, spent his boyhood days at Wappingers Falls, and in 1852, then a lad of sixteen, was apprenticed to learn calico engraving to calico printing, at which he worked for nine years. In 1861 he went to New York City, and engaged in the commission business some eighteen months, then proceeding to Chicago, was there employed as clerk in the Stock Yards for a short time. His next occupation was that of foreman in a cracker factory at Sparta, Wis. After a short tour through the Western States, Mr. Barlow returned to Wappingers Falls, where, on July 5, 1864, he opened a grocery store; which he carried on until 1869, at that time going into partnership with Mr. Sweet, the firm becoming Sweet & Barlow. In 1880 Mr. Barlow went to Newburg, N. Y., and started the Sweet, Orr & Co.'s overall factory, of which he took charge until 1882, when he returned to Wappingers Falls, and settled up the business of his own firm, which was then discontinued. In the year last mentioned he became one of the partners in the Eagan overall factory, remaining with the firm until 1884, when he withdrew, and the following year he sold goods for Sweet, Orr & Co., on the road. In 1889 he became proprietor of the dry-goods store which he is at present carrying on. He is a good business man and commands a large trade, his acquaintance throughout the surrounding country being extensive, and his many sterling qualities making him numerous warm friends.

Mr. Barlow was married, in September, 1862, to Miss Mary A. Hayes, a native of Wappingers Falls, and a daughter of John and Elizabeth Hayes, who were of English descent. Two children came to this union: Fred, born in 1867, died in 1872; and May, born in 1875. The wife and mother died December 29, 1886. Our subject cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, in 1860, and he has ever since been a staunch Republican. He served two terms as trustee of Wappingers Falls, and March 3, 1896, was elected supervisor, an office not sought by him, but for which he received a majority of 240 votes, the largest ever given a candidate in that town, and which testifies to his popularity with his fellow-citizens.

Mr. Barlow is a member of the Episcopal Church, and is clerk of the vestry; for three years he was secretary of the Cemetery Association. He belongs to the Masonic Order, being a member of the Royal Arch at Poughkeepsie. In all the relations of life he bears the reputation of an honorable, upright man, and is highly esteemed wherever known.

JACOB H. FEROE. The records of the lives of our forefathers are of interest to the modern citizen, not alone for their historic value but also for the inspiration and example they afford; yet we need not look to the past. Although surroundings may differ, the essential conditions of human life are ever the same, and a man can learn from the success of those around him, if he will heed the obvious lessons contained in their history. Turn to the life record of Mr. Feroe, study carefully the plans and methods he has followed in bringing about his wonderful success in business affairs. He is a man of keen perception, of great sagacity and unbounded enterprises, who is now at the head of extensive business interests at Tivoli.

He was born October 15, 1841, at Tivoli, then known as Myersville. His father, John K. Feroe, was born in the northern part of Red Hook town, and is the son of Henry Feroe, who was of French descent. John K. Feroe was married to Miss Anna Coon, who was born in Clearmont town, Columbia Co., N. Y., in 1820. She is the daughter of Jacob Coon, also a native of Columbia county, and of Holland extraction. Upon their marriage the couple located at Tivoli, where the father has followed his trade of carpentering since that time; they are faithful and devout members of the Methodist Church. Four children were born to them: Sarah, wife of David Affleck, station agent at Tivoli; Jacob H., subject of this review; Frances, who married Rensselaer Potts, a bookkeeper; and Libbie, wife of James Greene, station agent at Saugerties.

Mr. Feroe, whose name introduces this sketch, spent his boyhood days at Tivoli, attending the district schools and also a private school, but when only fifteen years of age he began teaching near the village. He later taught school for two years and a half at Unionville, in the town of Saugerties, Ulster Co., N. Y., after which he clerked and kept books for Gilbert A. Melham for nearly a year and a half, and then conducted a school at Nevis, Columbia county, for two years. For the same length of time he had a select school at Tivoli, and met with great success as teacher. For a time Mr. Feroe carried on fruit farming, his principal product being strawberries, of which he raised as high as 5 bushels per season, at the same time teaching at Tivoli. After having charge of a school at Glasco, Ulster county, for four years and a half he taught the public school at Tivoli for five years, during the last two years of which he was also engaged in the coal and lumber business on the Tivoli dock, and has since carried on the latter occupation. He has built up an extensive trade along that line, does a general freighting business, conducts a grist and cider mill, and has large real-estate interests, renting about forty houses.

In September, 1871, Mr. Feroe was married to Miss Evelin Cooper. Her father, Ozias Cooper, was a native of Dutchess county, a miller by occupation, and the uncle of Charles Davis, of Saugerties, Ulster county. A family of four children have been born to our subject and his wife: Harry Cooper, who married Harriet Laffin, and is now a book-keeper for his father; Thomas J., also a book-keeper for his father; Millie and Florence.

In manner Mr. Feroe is social and genial. He is the center of a circle of friends, who honor and esteem him for many manly virtues and genuine worth. His prosperity cannot be attributed to a combination of lucky circumstances, but has risen from energy, enterprise, integrity and intellectual effort, well directed. He is a worthy representative of that type of American character, that progressive spirit, which promotes public good in advancing individual prosperity.

CHARLES E. SMITH, a skillful blacksmith of Amenia, Dutchess county, was born in that village, June 20, 1854, and comes of a family that have long been residents of the county. Stephen Smith, his grandfather, was born in Pawling, and throughout most of his life was engaged in blacksmithing at South Dover. He married Hannah Skelton, by whom he had the following children: William and Edward (deceased); George W.; Sarah (deceased); Emeline; Abbie J. (deceased); Amanda; Asa; and Mary (deceased).

George W. Smith, the father of our subject, was born in Dover, January 14, 1824, and in the town of Dover he passed his boyhood and youth, acquiring his education in the schools near his home. With his father he learned the blacksmith's trade, and about 1847 came to Amenia, where he worked in the shop of Clark Fish. Subsequently he began business for himself down by the mill pond at Amenia, later removing to a shop nearly opposite the B. H. Fry foundry, afterward conducting business near the present residence of Mr. Rockwell, and on leaving that location he engaged in farming and blacksmithing at Sharon, Conn. On his return to Amenia, he reopened the shop now carried on by our subject. He was initiated into the mysteries of the Masonic Order in Montgomery Lodge No. 14, F. & A. M., at Lyme Rock, Conn., and later became a charter member of Hamilton Lodge No. 54, at Sharon, Conn. In religious belief he is a Methodist, and was serving as trustee of the Church at Amenia when it was disbanded. He cast his first vote in support of the Whig party, is now an earnest Republican, and in 1893 was collector of taxes in Amenia. He is an upright, honorable man, devoted to the best interests of his native county, and has a host of warm personal friends throughout the community, where he has so long made his home.

On November 25, 1850, in the town of Dover, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Mary Ann Van Tassell, daughter of John P. Van-Tassell, and by their union were born eight children: William H., who was born November 26, 1852, and is now a painter and decorator of Torrington, Conn.; Charles E., subject of this sketch; Hattie, wife of Walter S. Harrison, of Patterson, N. Y.; George W., a painter and decorator, of Amenia; Myra E.; Frederick J., a tinsmith, of Brewster, N. Y.; Frank (deceased); and Helen A., wife of Frederick Adams, of Torrington, Conn. The wife and mother departed this life in September, 1890.

The boyhood days of Charles E. Smith were passed in Amenia, N. Y., and Sharon, Conn., and in the latter place he secured his education. Learning the blacksmith trade with his father, he has since followed that business, having entire charge since May 24, 1886. He is now at the head of a large and constantly increasing business, doing all kinds of blacksmithing and wagon repairing. In politics he is a straight Republican, and socially, is connected with the Masonic Order, being a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and the Eastern Star at Sharon, Connecticut.

At Oxford, Conn., October 10, 1878, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Rosella Russell, daughter of Theodore D. Russell, and they have two sons: Clarence Russell and Howard Alfred.

ARTHUR S. PEACOCK is one of the prominent citizens and enterprising young business men of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, where he is successfully engaged in the drug business. He is a native of New York, born at Haverstraw, Rockland county, March 24, 1860, a son of William M. Peacock, whose birth occurred in Birmingham, England. His paternal grandfather, who also bore the name of William, was a native of England, where he was married, and reared a family of four children, of whom the father of our subject was the eldest. The others are: Thomas, a carpenter and millwright of Fishkill Landing, Dutchess county; George, a fish and oyster dealer of New York City; and Elizabeth, wife of Robert Wainright, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

When a young man William M. Peacock, father of our subject, emigrated to America, and at Bloomfield, N. J., learned the machine-printing business. His marriage with Miss Minerva Young was celebrated at Columbiaville, Columbia Co., N. Y.; she was born in Columbia county, N. Y., where her father was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In their family are two children, who grew to adult age, namely: Elmira, wife of John L. Shrader, who conducted the drug store in Wappingers Falls, which our subject now owns; and Arthur S. The father still works at his trade in Wappingers Falls, where he was employed by the Dutchess Company Print Works for nearly half a century. In his political views he coincides with the platforms formulated by the Republican party, and religiously he and his family are Episcopalians.

Our subject was only four years old when brought by his parents to Wappingers Falls, where he grew to manhood, receiving his early education in the Hughsonville district school, and later attended the public schools of Wappingers Falls, where his literary education was completed. For some time he was a clerk in the law office of Mr. J. W. Bartram, and for a year and a half was employed in the Dutchess Company Print Works, after which he was a clerk in his brother-in-law's drug store for about three years. Going to New York City, he held a similar position in the drug store of William Mettenheimer, at the corner of Forty-fifth street and Sixth avenue, being there employed during the day, until ten and eleven o'clock at night, except on college nights, when he would attend lectures, and after going to his room at night would study pharmacy. He then attended the New York College of Pharmacy, and during his vacations clerked for F. C. Corner, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Returning to New York City, he clerked in a drug store while attending college during the senior year, but at the end of three months gave up his position in order to devote his entire time to his studies, and graduated with the class of 1885. In January, 1885, previous to his graduation, Mr. Peacock had purchased his present drug business, and since leaving college has built up an excellent trade, which is certainly well deserved. His store is one of the best of the kind in the county, carrying only first-class goods, and he attends strictly to the wants of his customers.

On October 14, 1886, Mr. Peacock married Miss Eliza Clinton, of Catskill, N. Y., daughter of Joseph Clinton. Politically, he is a Republican, a staunch adherent of the principles of the party, and for the last two years has served as collector of the town of Wappingers. He was also nominated as president of the village in the spring of 1896, but withdrew his name. He is very popular with his fellow citizens, and always lends his support to promote the best interests of the community where he makes his home. Socially, he is identified with the Masonic Order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is also an enthusiastic yachtsman, owning the yacht "Orient," which is a very fast one, and takes part in almost all the regattas held in the section, he spends the most of his time on the water, as a benefit to his health, as well as a means of pleasure.

ROBERT JACKSON HUNGERFORD is a prominent young business man of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county. Having a large amount of industry, perseverance and energy, he has made a noble record as a successful merchant and is one of the reliable citizens of the county. His birth occurred at New Milford, Conn., November 7, 1866.

Edwin Hungerford, his grandfather, was a native of Sherman, Conn., and there devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits. He was an earnest Christian gentleman, and served as deacon in the Congregational Church. By his marriage with Susan Giddings he had five children: George, of Sherman, Conn.; Martin Luther, father of our subject; Phoebe (deceased); Annie; and Linus, of Mableton, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Martin Luther Hungerford was born at Sherman, Conn., January 16, 1841, there spent his boyhood and acquired his education in the district school.

On starting out in life he began freighting from South Dover, Dutchess county, and Paterson, Putnam county, to New York City, in which business he was engaged for five years. He then turned his attention to the tobacco trade, raising and selling at wholesale at Gaylordsville, in the town of New Milford, Litchfield Co., Conn., but is now living retired, looking after his real-estate interests. He is an earnest member of the Congregational Church, and a stalwart Republican in politics. At Sharon, Conn., he was joined in wedlock with Miss Julia, daughter of Edwin Jackson, and to them were born four children: Robert Jackson; John Edwin and Arthur, of New Milford, Conn., and Genevieve.

In the place of his nativity our subject was reared, obtaining his education in the district schools and in a select school at Cornwall Plains, Conn. On laying aside his text-books he began the cigar business, buying and selling at retail, later selling cigars on the road for two years, and for one year was on the road selling fruits and vegetables. In March, 1891, he began general merchandising at Wassaic, which business he has since successfully followed, and in the spring of 1894 he erected his present store building. At Brookfield, Conn., June 8, 1887, Mr. Hungerford was married to Miss Jennie Simmons Peck, daughter of Clark S. Peck, and they have three interesting children: Martin Luther, Jessie Irene and Robert Jerrold. Socially, Mr. Hungerford is connected with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and of the Royal Arcanum at Wassaic; politically, he supports the men and measures of the Republican party.

EBENEZER J. PRESTON, who is successfully engaged in the tobacco business at Amenia, Dutchess county, was born March 24, 1855, in the town of Dover, that county, where his branch of the family was founded at a very early day by Ebenezer Preston, who was probably from Rhode Island, and came to the county with his brother Martin. The next in direct line also bore the name of Ebenezer, and was born in the town of Dover. His son, Abijah Preston, was the grandfather of our subject. The latter took quite an active interest in political affairs, served as captain of the militia, and as a life work followed farming in the town of Dover. He married Elizabeth Ross, and to them were born four children: John R., who became a butcher of New York City; Mary; Phoebe E.; and Ebenezer A.

Ebenezer A. Preston was born in the town of Dover, September 20, 1818, there acquired his primary education in the district schools, and later attended the Amenia Seminary. When a young man he was for a time in the cattle business with his brother in Texas, and engaged in driving cattle from the West to the East. Returning to Dutchess county, he carried on the marble business at South Dover, and also followed farming, being a large land owner in this county. Socially, he was a member of Dover Lodge, F. & A. M., while his political support was ever given the Democracy, and in 1848 he served as supervisor of the town of Dover. He wedded Miss Marie Elizabeth Jewett, daughter of John Jewett, a prominent surveyor of the town of Dover, and they became the parents of five children, namely: Mary Ellen, wife of A. F. Bates, of Ontario, Cal.; Cornelia Alice, wife of George B. Upham, an attorney-at-law, of Boston, Mass.; Ida, wife of E. L. Nichols, professor of physics in Cornell University, of Ithaca, N. Y.; Ebenezer Jewett, of this sketch; and Augusta, wife of Stephen C. Bedell, of New York City. The mother departed this life May 1, 1887, and the father's death occurred December 20, 1891.

At the old homestead in the town of Dover our subject spent his early days, and was prepared for college by private teachers. He then entered Cornell University, taking a scientific course, and was graduated in 1875. He is a member of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. Returning to Dover, he remained with his father until 1882, when he took a trip to Europe, visiting many points of interest. Subsequently, in connection with J. A. Thompson, he represented P. L. Van Wagonen's interest in the tobacco business at Poughkeepsie. Since that time he has engaged in the tobacco trade at Amenia, buying from the farmers and packing the leaf. He is one of the most wide-awake and energetic business men of Dutchess county, and his success was assured from the start.

At his present residence in Amenia, September 19, 1885, Mr. Preston was married to Miss Carrie A. Kirby, who died January 17, 1892, and to them were born three children: Mary Reynolds; Elizabeth Jewett, and Ebenezer Kirby. Mrs. Preston also belonged to a family that has been long identified with the interests of Dutchess county. George Kirby, her great-grandfather, was a native of Rhode Island, but became an early settler of Pawling, where he followed blacksmithing, and was a large land owner in that section of the county. His son, Uriah Kirby, was born in the town of Pawling, and throughout most of his life carried on agricultural pursuits in the western part of the town of Amenia, where he died in 1855, at the age of sixty-one years. By his marriage with Phebe Gerow, he had five children: William, deceased; George, the father of Mrs. Preston; Solomon; John; and Amelia, deceased.

George Kirby is also a native of the town of Pawling, born in January, 1830, but was reared in the town of Amenia. He wedded Miss Mary E. Reynolds, who died October 15, 1874, and they became the parents of three children: Carrie A., who was born July 31, 1857, and became the wife of our subject; and Frank R., who was born November 9, 1858, and died August 20, 1861. After his marriage, Mr. Kirby purchased a farm at South Amenia, where he resided for about three years, and then removed to the present residence of Mr. Preston. By occupation he is a farmer, politically is an ardent Republican, and is one of the prominent, representative citizens of the community.

In connection with his local business, Mr. Preston has also traveled through the West, selling tobacco to jobbers and wholesale dealers. At Altoona, Penn., he was again married, Miss Minnie Helen McKean becoming his wife. Both as a business man and true citizen he is held in high esteem, and in 1885, on the Union ticket, was elected supervisor of the town of Dover. Socially, he is prominently identified with Triune Lodge, F. & A. M., of Poughkeepsie. He was elected first master of the Pomona Grange of Dutchess county, organized in March, 1897.

EDWARD S. HICKS, of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, has accomplished satisfactory work as a farmer, and acquired a comfortable competence so as to enable him to live retired from active business life, and he is now making his home at the "Pleasant Valley Hotel" in that village.

The Hicks family, of which our subject is a member, was founded in Dutchess county, by Joseph Hicks, who was born on Long Island, and after his marriage with Miss Filkins became a resident of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county. From there he and his wife removed to Bloomingdale, Pleasant Valley town, and located upon a farm in the eastern part of the town, where his death occurred. He obtained a grant of title from Queen Anne. Twice married, he became the father of a large family of children, among whom was Samuel Hicks (the grandfather of our subject), who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley. He was reared to agriculture, which was mainly his life work; in early life he also followed shoemaking to some extent. He wedded Margaret Doty, a native of Dutchess county, and they became the parents of three children: Benjamin, who carried on farming in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where his death occurred; Mary, who became the wife of Samuel Halstead, a farmer of Clinton town; and Samuel S., the father of our subject. The parents of both these died in Pleasant Valley town, the father in 1845, the mother in 1827. They were Hicksite Quakers.

Upon a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley, Samuel S. Hicks was born and reared. As he was a cripple and thereby unable to perform much labor on the farm, he was given good educational privileges, and later became a teacher in Poughkeepsie Academy. On September 4, 1816, he was united in marriage with Mary Peters, a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, where her father, Hewlett Peters, was also born, and spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits. The Peters family was of French origin, and on crossing the Atlantic its members first located on Long Island. After their marriage the parents of our subject settled upon the old farm, where they reared their family of eleven children, as follows: Margaret, born June 23, 1817, married Thomas Smith, a farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county; Hewlett P., born April 5, 1819, wedded Sarah Smith, and is now living retired in the town of Clinton. Edward S. is the subject of this sketch; Elias, born February 20, 1825, is a merchant in Rochester, N. Y., married to Miss Elizabeth Howland. Burtis, born April 3, 1827, married Mary J. Wiley, and is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Clinton town; Hannah, born May 8, 1829, became the wife of Asa U. Smith, who at one time was a farmer of Dutchess county, but died in the West; and Mary, born June 9, 1831, was the wife of Solomon Merritt, a carpenter of Rochester, N. Y., and died in 1862. The mother of these was called to her final rest June 28, 1831; the father died March 31, 1869. In religious belief they were Hicksite Quakers, and in politics he was an earnest Whig.

Edward S. Hoicks

Jennie M. Hoicks

Upon the old homestead farm in Pleasant Valley town, Edward S. Hicks, our subject, was born March 26, 1823, and was reared to rural life, receiving the usual education of the district school, after which he taught in the neighborhood for one term. On September 25, 1844, he married Emily Wilber, a native of the town of Hyde Park, and a daughter of Sylvanus Wilber, who was born in Rhode Island, and devoted his entire life to farming. Two children blessed their union: Sylvanus W., a farmer of Pleasant Valley, born December 7, 1845, married Dorcas M. Wood, of Hyde Park, September 5, 1866; and Barnard B., a traveling salesman, born October 4, 1847, married Hannah A. Doty, of Pleasant Valley, June 13, 1866. Dr. Edward E. Hicks, of Brooklyn, son of Barnard B., born November 18, 1870, married Lizzie Porteous, of Poughkeepsie City, June 1, 1893. The mother of these died February 4, 1862, and November 19, 1862, Mr. Hicks married his present wife, Jennie M. Lattin, who was born in Pleasant Valley town, where the birth of her father, John W. Lattin, also occurred (in October, 1810). Her mother bore the maiden name of Hannah E. Wilber, and was the sister of our subject's first wife. Four daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Lattin, namely: Sarah C., who died unmarried; Ellen W., wife of John L. Marshall, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Emily C. (the twin sister of Mrs. Hicks), who first wedded George B. Dale, a farmer, and after his death became the wife of George Vanliet, a miller at Salt Point, Dutchess county, who is now also deceased; and Jennie M., the wife of our subject. The Lattin family was founded in this country on Long Island, but Nathaniel Lattin, the grandfather of Mrs. Hicks, early became a leading farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county.

After his first marriage Mr. Hicks located on a farm in the town of Clinton, where he spent two years, the following year being passed on the old home in Pleasant Valley; he then removed to a farm in the same town, which he occupied some four years. For eighteen years he next cultivated a farm in the western part of the town, and the following year he was a resident of Poughkeepsie. At the end of that time he returned to the town of Pleasant Valley, where he purchased a farm, on which he made his home until 1889, when he sold out, and has since lived at the "Pleasant Valley Hotel."

Politically, Mr. Hicks affiliates with the Democratic party, in whose principles he claims he finds the best guarantees for the preservation of the government. Both himself and wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, of which for the past sixteen years he has been deacon, and for twenty-five years assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school. After long lives of toil, surrounded by the love, respect and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, Mr. and Mrs. Hicks are resting from their labors, and quietly and pleasantly passing their time.

WELDON F. WESTON, one of the leading citizens of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, and the proprietor of Weston's Express and Transportation line running between Fishkill, Newburg, and neighboring points, is a native of Litchfield, N. H., and a member of a family which has long held a prominent place in political, business and social life. Jonathan Weston, his great-grandfather, served with honor in the Revolutionary war, enlisting from Reading, Mass., three different times.

Amos Weston, grandfather of our subject, was born in Reading, Mass., April 21, 1767, and was married June 1, 1790, to Polly Flint, who was born November 8, 1767. Amos died at Manchester, N. H., April 4, 1843, his wife on December 4, 1858. They had nine children, whose names with dates of birth and death are as follows: Amos (2), March 18, 1781, died June 1, 1859; Betsey, October 17, 1793, died August 27, 1878; Mary, December 29, 1795, died August 13, 1838; Nathaniel F., September 5, 1798, died December 29, 1799; Sally, October 26, 1800, died May 12, 1881; Harriet, January 23, 1803, died April 2, 1892; Elbridge, July 23, 1805, died March 7, 1863; Achsah, August 26, 1807, died March 17, 1849; and Harrison, December 17, 1811, died June 19, 1883. Amos (2) was the father of Hon. James A. Weston, who was elected Governor of New Hampshire in 1871 and 1874. The esteem in which he was held throughout the State is attested by his election on the Democratic ticket, he being the only member of his party chosen to that office in New Hampshire in nearly half a century. He was mayor of Manchester, N. H., serving four terms, and when he died, May 18, 1895, was president of the New Hampshire Fire Insurance Company, the Manchester National Bank, and was connected with several other institutions in that city. Elbridge J. Weston was the father of Sarah, who married Hon. George S. Merrill, of Boston, for many years past the Insurance Commissioner of the State of Massachusetts. He is prominent in Grand Army circles, having been commander in chief of the National body.

Harrison Weston, our subject's father, was born in Manchester, N. H., and lived there forty-two years, removing thence to Litchfield, N. H., December 19, 1853. He was a farmer during the greater part of his life, but in early years was lock-tender and collector of tolls on the Merrimac river at Crummell's Fall and Moores Fall. In those days transportation was done mainly by waterways, railroads being unknown. He was a man of modest pretension, possessed of sterling integrity, and was respected and honored by all who knew him. During a brief stay in Fishkill in his later years he made many friends, who hold him in affectionate remembrance. In politics he was a Democrat, always taking a lively interest in public affairs, and his townsmen honored him with nearly every office in their gift. He died in Laconia, N. H., and was buried beside his wife, Betsey J. (Richardson), at the old home in Litchfield, in the cemetery which owed its existence mainly to his enterprise and foresight, and which had been improved under his sole supervision. Of the five children of this estimable couple all are living. Their names, with dates of birth, are as follows: Mary J., September 3, 1848; Wilbur Harrison, February 11, 1851; Warren J., June 28, 1853; Weldon F., April 14, 1856; and Ellura H., June 12, 1859.

Wilbur H. Weston (popularly known as "Maj. Weston") resides in Newburg, and has been engaged in the railroad industries in Dutchess and Orange counties throughout his business life. In recent years he has given special attention to the construction of electric street railways in Fishkill and Newburg, and is also connected more or less intimately with many other important business ventures of his city. He is prominent in fraternal and social circles, and has been active in political matters for several years, having many friends throughout the State. William H. Moore, for twenty years general passenger agent and auditor of the N. D. & C. R. R., is a half-brother. At the early age of eighteen years he enlisted as a private in Company K, 1st Massachusetts Heavy Artillery; was made quartermaster's clerk, and served three years; then re-enlisted for other three years, but was discharged January 7, 1865, by reason of wounds received in an engagement near Strawberry Plains, Va. August 15, 1864.

Weldon F. Weston received instruction in the public schools of his native place during boyhood, and later attended Pinkerton Academy, at Derry, N. H., finishing his education at the New Hampshire Conference Seminary and Female College, at Tilton, N. H. After a brief experience as a teacher, he, at the age of twenty, came to Newburg, as shipping clerk for the Erie railroad, at the Homer Ramsden Transportation Company's line of barges. After two years there, he returned to New Hampshire and engaged in mercantile business for three years; but in 1879 he came back to his former position at Newburg, for another season. The next six years he spent at Matteawan as station agent for the N. D. & C. R. R., and in 1888 he and his brother, W. J. Weston, purchased the Matteawan & Fishkill Landing Stage Line, and were engaged in the express and trucking business in connection with the stage line, until 1892, when the electric railroad superseded the stage route; then purchased his brother's interest in the business. He is still extensively interested in transportation business with adjoining towns, and is a director of the Citizens Street railroad and the Fishkill Street railroad. He has a pleasant home at No. 42 High street, Fishkill-on-Hudson. His wife (formerly Miss Anna Jeanette Elkins), to whom he was married September 26, 1878, is a daughter of Charles M. and Elizabeth A. (Davis) Elkins, of Wallfield, Massachusetts.

Politically, Mr. Weston is a Republican. In 1891 he was elected president of the village of Matteawan, and was re-elected in 1892 without opposition, being the first incumbent of the office to be chosen without an opposing candidate since the incorporation of the village. At the present time he is president of the Board of Trade of Matteawan and Fishkill.

Hudson; president of the board of health of Fishkill Landing; and president of the Fairview Cemetery Association. He has taken an interest in fraternal society work, also, and has been warden of Beacon Lodge, F. & A. M.; also chancellor of Hudson River Lodge, K. of P., has twice represented the latter society in the Grand Lodge of the State, and has been deputy for this district.

JOHAN V. O'FARRELL, who is engaged in the ice business in Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, although a resident of Hughsonville, was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, March 2, 1845.

The father of our subject, James O'Farrell, was a native of the same county, and a baker and shopkeeper by occupation. He married Margaret Lamphier, and they reared four children, namely: P. W., who is a general merchant in Blackville, S. C.; Margaret, who married John Sullivan, of Goshen, Orange Co., N. Y., who is now deceased; John V.; and Elizabeth, who died unmarried. The family came to America in 1850, and Mr. O'Farrell, who was then an officer in the English army, left his family at Wappingers Falls while he went to Canada, to which country he had been ordered. He died in Montreal in 1851. His wife survived him until 1882. They were members of the Catholic Church, and their children were brought up in that faith.

John V. O'Farrell was only five years old when his parents settled at Wappingers Falls, and in the common schools of that village he obtained his education. When old enough he found employment in the Dutchess Print Works, and worked there until 1864, when he enlisted in Company I, 3d New York Cavalry, and served until the close of the Civil war. He was discharged, June 17, 1865, at Suffolk, Va., and returned to his home, where he learned the carpenter's trade, and for the past thirty years has been one of the most successful builders at the Falls. In 1880 he formed a partnership with John M. Goring in the furniture and undertaking business, which connection lasted for four years. He then sold out to E. W. Flynn, and engaged in the ice business, which he has since carried on, also being interested in buying and selling real estate. He has been very successful, and is among the prosperous and substantial citizens of Wappingers Falls.

On January 7, 1877, Mr. O'Farrell was married to Miss Mary A. Downey, who was born in Wappingers Falls, and is a daughter of Peter Downey, Sr., a native of Ireland. Of this marriage six children have been born, all of whom are living: Vincent, Leo, Joseph, Raymond, Marie, and Emmett.

Mr. O'Farrell was a Democrat until 1886, since which time he has been in sympathy with the Republican party. He was for two terms assessor of the town of Poughkeepsie, for three years chief of the Wappingers Falls fire department, and for nine years one of the village trustees. He is a member of the Foresters, and also of the G. A. R. Post, in which he has held all the offices and was commander for three terms. He and his family are devoted members of the Catholic Church. Mr. O'Farrell is a man of progressive ideas, always ready to assist in matters for the public good, and is one of the most loyal and enterprising of the business men of the village. He has many warm friends, and is popular with all who know him.

JOHAN M. GORING, a leading and representative business man of Wappingers Falls, where he has a furniture and undertaking establishment, is a member of the well-known firm of Goring & Flynn. He was born in that village, December 21, 1851, and is a son of J. M. Goring. There he grew to manhood, being educated in the public schools, and learned the trade of a tinsmith and plumber with A. W. Armstrong, by whom he was employed for eleven years. In 1882 he started his present business, being at that time connected with John O'Farrell, under the firm name of O'Farrell & Goring, which partnership continued for two years, when the senior member withdrew, and Edward W. Flynn became a member of the firm, which then assumed its present style. They have one of the leading establishments of the kind in the town, and the liberal patronage they receive is well deserved.

On November 20, 1876, Mr. Goring was married to Miss Mary C. Downing, of Clinton Point, Dutchess county, a daughter of Edward and Jane Downing, who were both born in the North of Ireland, and were of Scotch lineage. Our subject and his wife have become the parents of four children (two pair of twins): Howard D. and Harold V., born September 23, 1884; and J. Morris and Mary C., born January 6, 1897.

In politics, Mr. Goring is identified with the Republican party, and is at present serving as treasurer of his school district. He is a highly respected and esteemed citizen of the place, and as a merchant bears the reputation of an honest, upright and trustworthy man. His gentlemanly deportment and genial manners are gaining him hosts of friends, and rapidly increasing his business. He takes quite an active part in civic societies, belonging to Wappinger Lodge No. 671, F. & A. M., of which he is past master; Poughkeepsie Chapter, R. A. M.; La Fayette Lodge No. 18, I. O. O. F.; and Evening Star Lodge No. 98, K. P.

JAMES M. DE GARMO, proprietor of De Garmo Institute, Fishkill Landing, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Hyde Park, near Crum Elbow, N. Y., December 22, 1838, a son of Peter and Sarah Gilchrist (Marshall) De Garmo. The father was born March 4, 1798, also in the town of Hyde Park, the mother on July 24, 1800, in Westchester county, N. Y. Peter De Garmo, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born September 2, 1751, in New Jersey, and the paternal grandmother, Mary D. Robinson, on November 12, 1763. James I. Marshall, the maternal grandfather, was born January 6, 1773, the maternal grandmother, Elizabeth (Gilchrist), on December 2, 1772.

On his father's side James M. De Garmo is a lineal descendant of French Huguenots, while his mother's family were Rhode Island Yankees. During the Huguenot persecution in France, the De Garmos of Normandy fled to Holland, where some of them married Dutch women, and, later, three brothers—Elias, Jacob (or James) and John—with their families, came to America and settled at Pompton Plains, N. J., and from them the whole De Garmo clan in America is descended.

Peter De Garmo and his father before him were tanners and farmers, retaining many of the physical and mental characteristics of their French ancestry, for they were mostly men of small stature, of nervous temperament, but cheerful and happy disposition, active and vigorous in mind and body. James was one of a family of nine children, and was never a very hardy, tough boy, like most of his age. His primary education was obtained from the old-fashioned district school of the time. But at eleven years of age he was needed on the farm, left school and worked till he was seventeen, then he went three months to the Dutchess County Academy at Poughkeepsie, under the Scotch Prof. William McGeorge. After these three months he returned to the farm, and worked till he was nineteen, when he began, in April, to teach in the academy where he had studied, and at the same time began his studies for college. In two years and a quarter, as he was about to enter college, his health failed, and he took charge of a boarding-school at Oswego Meeting House, near what is now Moores Mill, under Quaker auspices. In the following spring he was in such ill-health that he went home to recruit, spending some of the time in the wild Adirondacks, and in Vermont. In November he again took charge of the Oswego school, teaching till spring, when he went to Poughkeepsie, and, under private instructors, studied French, German, Latin and Greek, continuing till the next February, when he entered a co-partnership with Prof. McGeorge and Mr. Stewart Pelham, to conduct the Old Academy. At that time he was married to Emily L. Drake, of Pleasant Valley, and soon began his life-work at teaching. The co-partnership, not proving congenial, was dissolved and in April, 1864, he went to Rhinebeck N. Y., and took charge of the Rhinebeck Academy, which he soon after purchased, changed to De Garmo Institute, entirely rebuilt and improved, and continued to manage it until 1892, when he moved to Fishkill Landing, where he hired Mt. Beacon Academy, and has taught till the present time. His school has been one of the best known in the county or State.

Soon after going to Rhinebeck, Princeton College conferred upon Dr. De Garmo the honorary degree of Master of Arts, and later, in 1878, Hamilton College, at Clinton, N. Y. gave him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Both degrees were conferred in recognition of his success in preparing boys for college, and for his scientific studies. In October, 1867, he was initiated, passed and raised a Free and Accepted Mason, and is now past master of Rhinebeck Lodge No. 432; past master of Beacon Lodge No. 283; grand representative of the Symbolic Grand Lodge of the United States of Mexico, near the Grand Lodge of the State of New York; and a thirty-second-degree Mason of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite.

J. M. DeGarmo

in the Valley of New York, for the Northern Jurisdiction of America.

Dr. De Garmo has never held any political office, but since his eighteenth year has spoken on the Republican side in every Presidential campaign but one. In the famous Greeley campaign he was silent. He has lectured frequently and acceptably on scientific topics, was an active member of the Poughkeepsie Society of Natural Science, and later of Vassar Brothers' Institute. He is an after-dinner speaker of some reputation, and writes occasional poems, which have been well received. But whatever he may have of enduring reputation will come from his long and faithful work as a teacher. Although a linguist by profession, he has devoted much time to scientific studies, is a fair microscopist and astronomer, and familiar with lepidoptera and with ornithology and geology, in all which departments he has collected fine cabinets and museums. He has delivered many lectures, especially on science, is a skilled manipulator of apparatus either before a class or a public audience, and is a man, on the whole, of rather versatile talents.

DAVID AND HENRY RUNDALL are prominent and representative citizens of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, the former residing in the village of Amenia, and the latter on the old family homestead on the road between Amenia and Wassaic. About the middle of the eighteenth century the family was founded in Dutchess county, and their great-grandfather was buried in the old abandoned cemetery between Bangall and McIntyre, in the town of Stanford.

David Rundall, the grandfather, was born January 4, 1757, in the town of Horse Neck, Fairfield Co., Conn., but came to the town of Amenia, Dutchess county at the age of fourteen years, in company with his brother, to whom he was bound out as an apprentice to learn the tailor's trade. They moved their entire worldly effects on horseback, and located in that part of the town which was then called separate. The apprenticeship was ended at about the time of the inauguration of the Revolutionary war, in which the grandfather served through two campaigns, one in the North and the other in the South, in the years 1775 and 1776. After obtaining his discharge he returned to Amenia, where he followed his trade, which was then called "whipping the cat," being employed on both sides of the mountains, wherever he could secure work for a few days.

After his marriage the grandfather lived for six years at Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, at the end of which time he returned to Amenia, taking up his residence in the old house near the H. W. Peters homestead, and a few remaining apple trees standing on the opposite side of the road mark the stop of the orchard which he set out. There he resided until 1795, when he removed to the place now occupied by Henry Rundall, where his death occurred January 21, 1848. During his residence on the old Peters farm, the first Methodist Church was organized in Amenia, of which he was for several years the only male member.

The grandfather was thrice married. On January 7, 1777, he wedded Catherine Powers, who died May 14, 1799, and they had six children: Betsey, born February 8, 1780, died February 26, 1829; Mary, born January 5, 1783, died August 15, 1831; Jacob M., born May 26, 1785, died October 8, 1833; Abigail, born August 26, 1787, died in December, 1871; William, born October 1, 1794, died October 2, 1795; and Henry, born March 4, 1799, died November 3, 1871. In March, 1801, he married Elizabeth Cole, who died July 6, 1821, and to them was born a daughter—Catherine, born January 5, 1803, and married Henry Ingraham. His third wife was Alice Allerton.

Henry Rundall, the father of our subjects, during his boyhood attended the "Johnny Cake" school between Amenia and Wassaic, and throughout life operated the old homestead farm. On December 12, 1821, he was united in marriage with Nancy T. Sutherland, who was born April 18, 1803, a daughter of Roger B. Sutherland, and died January 31, 1869. Six children graced this union, namely: Sarah S., born August 7, 1825, married Dr. Isaac M. Hunting, and died November 29, 1895; Elizabeth M., born August 24, 1827, married George W. Center, of Amenia, N. Y.; David and Henry are next in order of birth; Mary B., born January 10, 1833, wedded John J. Harrison, and died in November, 1882; and Catherine P., born October 2, 1835, married Henry C. Dauchy, and died November 25, 1895. For his second wife the father chose Susan Hebard, who still survives him, residing at Sharon, Connecticut.

Henry Rundall, Sr., was a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church, and was the first man in the town of Amenia to abolish the use of liquor upon his farm. In early life he had belonged to the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was an active Democrat in politics previous to 1857, but at that time became an earnest supporter of the Republican party, as in antebellum days he was very much opposed to slavery.

The following is a copy of the commissions of the father as captain, major and colonel in the New York State Militia:

The People of the State of New York, To all to whom these presents may come: Know ye, that pursuant to the constitution and laws of our said State, we have appointed and constituted and by these presents do appoint and constitute Henry Rundall, captain in the Twenty-ninth Regiment of Infantry of our said State (with rank from May 13, 1826), to hold said office in the manner specified in and by our said constitution and laws.

In testimony whereof we have caused our seal for military commissions to be hereunto affixed. Witness DeWitt Clinton, Esquire, Governor of our said State, general and commander-in-chief of all the militia and admiral of the navy of the same, at our city of Albany, the 22nd day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-six.

DEWITT CLINTON.

Passed the adjutant-general's office.

N. F. BECK, Adjutant-General.

The commission of major reads exactly like that of captain, but dated July 30, 1827. The commission of colonel of the Twenty-ninth Regiment reads like the other two, dated July 23, 1830, and signed by Enos T. Troop, Esquire, Lieutenant-Governor of the State, and by M. H. Webster, Adjutant-General. These papers are still in the possession of David Rundall, of Amenia.

DAVID RUNDALL, whose name introduces this review, was born on the old homestead in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, August 2, 1829, and he also began his education in the "Johnny Cake" school, but the knowledge there acquired was supplemented by a course in the Amenia Seminary. Until reaching his majority he remained upon the home farm, and then for ten years operated land near the village of Amenia, after which he engaged in farming for twenty-one years on the road to Wassaic. Since 1888, however, he has made his home in the village of Amenia, and is now capably serving as town clerk. He has also been collector for several terms, and his duties are always discharged with credit to himself, and with satisfaction to all concerned. By his ballot he supports the Republican party, and religiously himself and family are connected with the Presbyterian Church.

At Amenia, September 14, 1852, David Rundall was married to Harriet P. Reynolds, a daughter of Jonathan P. Reynolds. She died February 5, 1863, leaving one son, William P., who was born in December, 1862, and married Fanny McHugh, by whom he has a daughter, Hattie; he is a resident of the town of Amenia. On February 10, 1864, at Mechanicsville, Saratoga Co., N. Y., David Rundall married Sarah Catherine Barrett, daughter of Henry E. Barrett. Harry Barrett Rundall, the only child of the second union, was born November 24, 1864, and after finishing his education in the Amenia Seminary, on March 17, 1881, he entered the First National Bank of Amenia as bookkeeper, which position he has since filled to the satisfaction of the bank officials. He is at present serving as justice of the peace, and socially is a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M.

HENRY RUNDALL, of this review, was born July 6, 1831, on the farm where he still resides, and like his brother was educated at the "Johnny Cake" school and the Amenia Seminary. He has always engaged in the cultivation of the home farm, and since 1853 has also dealt in milk. At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 6, 1853, he married Lucinda A. Ransom, a native of Highland, Ulster Co., N. Y., and a descendant of the Deyo family, early settlers of that county. Seven children were born to them, as follows: (1) Herbert R., pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Hammonton, N. J.; first wedded Mary Herrick, of Saratoga county, N. Y., by whom he had a daughter, Millie R., and after her death married Elizabeth Endicott; (2) Clarence A. married Julia Roberts by whom he has a son, Warring Deyo, and they now live at Brewster, Putnam Co., N. Y.; (3) Arthur S. is with the Phoenix Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill.; (4) Frank D., on February 10, 1897, married Frances Thompson Reed, daughter of Henry V. D. Reed, and lives at Amenia Union, N. Y.; (5) Bell H. born July 11, 1864, died February 24, 1876; (6) Martin K. married Jennie Rutledge, and has two children, Olin Rutledge and Henry T.; (7) Laura J. is the wife of J. Henry Halstead, of Rye, Westchester Co., New York.

Henry Rundall is one of the prominent and active members of the Presbyterian Church of Amenia, in which, for thirty years, he has erved as elder, and will continue to hold the office through life. He is connected with the Amenia Grange, in politics is an ardent Republican, and has served as assessor of the town of Amenia. In manner, the Rundall brothers are quiet and unassuming, yet their sterling qualities command the respect and confidence of all, and have secured for them the high regard of a large circle of friends. They are numbered among the valued citizens of the community, who have been devoted to the public welfare, and are assuredly worthy of representation in a volume of this nature.

WILLIAM H. BARTLETT, one of the prominent and leading business men of Amenia, Dutchess county, traces his ancestral line back to the Colonial epoch. His great-grandfather, Daniel C. Bartlett, was born at Hedding, Conn., where his father, Rev. Nathaniel Bartlett, a Congregational minister, had located May 23, 1753. The latter was called from this life January 10, 1810. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, the Sabbath day, he presented his sword, which he had newly ground, to his son Daniel with the instruction to go and defend his country. With Montgomery's forces he went to Quebec, and was at the capture of Fort St. John in November, 1775. He was also present at the burning of Danbury, Conn., in 1777. Later in life he became a resident of Dutchess county, N. Y., in 1803 purchasing the Joel Gillett farm in the town of Amenia, in which his great-grandson, Sanford J. Bartlett, now resides. In his family were five children: William, Collins, Mrs. John Barker, Mrs. Thomas Paine and Mrs. William Paine.

William S. Bartlett, the father of our subject, was born upon the family homestead in the town of Amenia, attended the district schools during his boyhood and youth, and in later life carried on agricultural pursuits in his native township. His birth occurred January 6, 1809, and October 13, 1830, he was married to Miss Jane Eliza Reynolds, daughter of Nathan P. Reynolds. They became the parents of four children: Jonathan R., born July 15, 1831, was married October 5, 1863; Hannah L. Grant, and died September 8, 1872; Adelaide Amelia, born January 10, 1836, died April 27, 1838; William Henry, subject of this sketch, is the next in order of birth; and Sanford Jarvis, Sr., born December 29, 1842, was married March 12, 1873, to Mary Lizzie Hill, of Bridport, Vt., and they are now living on the home farm; they have two sons: William Edgar, born February 14, 1873, and Sanford Jarvis, Jr., born August 4, 1876. Politically the father of this family, William S. Bartlett, was a Whig in early life, later uniting with the Republican party, and at one time served as assessor in his township. He was one of the leading members of the Presbyterian Church at Amenia, in which he served as deacon, and was a generous contributor toward the erection of the house of worship. A broad-minded man, he was liberal in his religious views as well as in other things. After a long and well-spent life he was called to his final rest November 6, 1881. His wife, who was born December 25, 1812, died June 1, 1881.

In the town of Amenia our subject was born, February 14, 1839, and acquired his education in the Amenia Seminary. Later he accepted a position in the store of William Burrell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., where he remained for two years, and was then engaged in clerking in Amenia for a short time. While thus calmly employed, the storm of war which had been gathering for so many years over the country broke out, and, bidding adieu to home and its influences, Mr. Bartlett enlisted, in the fall of 1862, in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I., and from private was promoted from time to time until he became adjutant. He participated in many important engagements, and at Peach Tree Creek, in front of Atlanta, was wounded. He now holds membership with Hamilton Post, No. 20, G. A. R., of Poughkeepsie, New York.

When the war was over Mr. Bartlett returned to Amenia and purchased the store in which he had formerly clerked, conducting the same until 1888, since which time he has engaged in the manufacture of brick, under the firm name of the Amenia Brick Company. In the town of Amenia, October 30, 1867, he was united in marriage with Miss Lavina Culver, daughter of Backus Culver. Our subject is devoted to all interests that are calculated to advance the welfare of his County, State and Nation, and has done much for the up-building of the community where he has always made his home. With a strict regard for business ethics, he has won the confidence and esteem of all, and is to-day one of the most honored citizens of his county. For two terms he served as supervisor of Amenia, and was unanimously nominated by the Republican party for sheriff. Being elected, he took the office January 1, 1892, and acceptably served until January 1, 1895. Socially, he is connected with Amenia Lodge, F. & A. M., and is a charter member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks at Poughkeepsie, New York.

RAYMOND RIKERT, the editor and proprietor of the Rhinebeck Gazette, is one of the youngest journalists in Dutchess county, and at the same time is one of the most prominent in all the Hudson River Valley.

The Rikert family have long occupied an honored place among the old families of New York, the great-great-grandfather of the subject of this review being a patroon. George I. Rikert, his son, was born in Clermont, Columbia county, and by occupation was a farmer, operating one farm for nearly half a century. He married Margaret Snyder, and to them were born five children: Robert, Reuben, John, Mary (wife of Chancellor Wyllie), and Eliza (wife of John Kilmer). Although he enlisted in the war of 1812, he never took part in any important engagement.

John Rikert, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Rhinebeck in 1811, and for many years was an employe at the State dock. In 1857 he began the butchering business in the village of Rhinebeck, which he continued to follow up to the time of his death in 1860, and was quite successful in that undertaking. His political support was given to the Whig party, and religiously he was a Lutheran. As a companion and helpmeet on life's journey he married Phebe Dedrick, daughter of Jacob Dedrick, of Rhinebeck, who had come from Claverack, N. Y. Five children blessed this union, but Nelson died at the age of three years; the others are, Wellington, Franklin, Calvin and Elmore. The mother is still living.

Franklin Rikert acquired his education in the Rhinebeck Academy, and at the Flat Rock school, laying aside his text books in 1859 to enter upon the more active duties of life. He served an apprenticeship as a butcher in Rhinebeck, but on the outbreak of the Civil war he laid aside personal plans and interests, and on President Lincoln's second call for troops became a member of the 128th N. Y. V. I. He was attached to the department of the Gulf and was in the Red River campaign, and in 1862 returned north with Gen. Sheridan, being with him in the Shenandoah Valley and at the battle of Winchester. At Cedar Creek he was taken prisoner October 19, 1864, was incarcerated in Libby prison, Castle Thunder, and at Salisbury, N. C., and the following spring was paroled at Goldsboro, that State. At Annapolis, Md., he was discharged in July 1865, under general order No. 77, and returned home with an honorable war record.

On October 19, 1869, Franklin Rikert was joined in marriage with Miss Ellen Cramer, daughter of John P. Cramer, and to them was born a son, R. Raymond. On May 18, 1870, he formed a partnership with J. H. Rikert in the butchering business, which connection continued until August, 1883, when the latter died. Through his own unaided efforts he has achieved success in the business world, and is one of the most popular and highly respected citizens of Rhinebeck. He takes quite an active interest in local political matters, voting the straight Republican ticket, and has been a member of the board of health for many years. He holds membership with Armstrong Post No. 104, G. A. R.; also with the Masonic fraternity; and is an honorary member of Relief Hook & Ladder Co. In religious faith he belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

R. Raymond Rikert, the subject proper of this sketch, was born November 14, 1870, in Rhinebeck village. He received his education in the De Garmo Institute, and was graduated from that institution in 1891, a member of the first class to graduate from the time-honored school after its removal to Fishkill-on-Hudson. After completing his education, and until January 1, 1893, he acted in the capacity of bookkeeper for his father in Rhinebeck. On the above date, in connection with William R. Tremper, he purchased the Rhinebeck News of William N. Tyler, and the same time assumed the management of the Gazette. On July 1, 1894, the Gazette was purchased from the estate of Lewis H. Livingston, and our subject bought out the interest of his partner, and is now the sole owner of the business, which is rapidly increasing. The office employs about six men the year round and has a weekly circulation of 1000.

Although young in years, Mr. Rikert has made a grand success of his undertaking, be-from a financial and from a literary point of view, and is regarded as one of the strong men of Dutchess county. Politically the paper is independent, but the editor is a staunch Republican. He is secretary of the Rhinebeck Gas Company; and socially is a member of the F. & A. M., the S. of V., and of the Hook and Ladder Fire Company.

R. Raymond W. Riker

L EONARD I. TRIPP, an enterprising and prosperous blacksmith of Clinton Hollow, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Rhinebeck, May 20, 1851.

The family is of French descent, and our subject's grandfather, Smiten Tripp, was one of the early residents of Clinton. He married a Miss Wicks, and had several children, among whom was George C. Tripp, the father of our subject. He grew to manhood in the town of Clinton, and was married there to Mary A. P. Haight, a native of the same locality, and a lady of rare nobility of character. She was a daughter of Isaac S. Haight, a Quaker, who was born in Rhode Island, where his great-grandfather had settled on coming from England; but he spent the greater part of his life farming in the town of Clinton. He married Hannah Bedford, and had five children, as follows: Hannah, Sarah, Susan, Leonard and David; all are now deceased except Hannah.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. George C. Tripp settled upon a farm in the town of Hyde Park, and later moved to Rhinebeck. They had nine children: Julia F.; Helen Augusta (deceased); James S., a contractor and builder at Rochester, N. Y.; Jacob W., a contractor and builder at Salt Lake; Martin F., who is in the same business in Cole county, Mo.; Leonard I., our subject; Hiram M., a contractor and builder at Bergen, N. Y.; and Alting B., a policeman in New York City. To Mrs. Tripp belongs the credit of bringing up his family, and giving them those industrious habits and sound principles which have marked their successful careers. She was a faithful member of the Christian Church for many years previous to her death, which occurred March 15, 1895, when she was aged seventy years.

The subject of this sketch attended the schools of Clinton Hollow in his early boyhood, and at the age of eleven he began working out on neighboring farms. At nineteen he entered H. S. Van Dyne's blacksmith shop at Clinton Hollow, and served an apprenticeship of three years, receiving $40 a year, with the privilege of working twelve sunny days in harvest time. After learning his trade he worked one year at Washington Hollow for Charles McCormick, also for three years at Millbrook for Henry Shaw, and in March, 1877, he returned to Clinton Hollow and bought the shop where he had learned the business, and has conducted it since with growing popularity and success. On April 19, 1877, he married Almada D. Briggs, a daughter of George C. and Margaret Briggs, well-known residents of Clinton Hollow. Mr. Tripp is a public-spirited citizen, and takes an influential place in local affairs. He is an active supporter of the Democratic party, has been inspector of elections, and has held the office of town clerk for two terms.

J OSEPH KLINE, a well-known resident of Pawling, Dutchess county, engaged in the livery business, has also been for some time in the employ of the United States Government as mail clerk on the Harlem railroad. He learned the carriage maker's trade in early life, but did not follow it long as a business. He and his wife, formerly Miss Carrie Mabie, have three children: Anna A., Mary E. and Agnes J., who are all at home.

Mrs. Kline was born and reared in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and is a descendant of early settlers in Patterson, Putnam county, where her grandfather, Samuel Mabie, first saw the light. His education was acquired in the common schools there, and he engaged in farming in early manhood. He was united in matrimony with Miss Polly Bolts, and had six children, of whom Hiram, Mrs. Kline's father, was the eldest. William married Laura Dykeman; Phoebe married Nathan Dykeman; Ruth was the wife of James Dykeman; Adaline married J. B. Swan; and Sarah died at an early age.

Hiram Mabie was born in 1823, in Towners, Putnam county, and after obtaining a common-school education there followed agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Julia Pagsley, daughter of Benjamin Pagsley, a leading butcher of Patterson, and his wife, Polly Crosby. Mrs. Kline was the fourth in a family of five children. Of the others, (1) Mary E. has never married. (2) Washington was educated in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and is now engaged in farming. He married Miss Jennie Fowler and had three children—Estelle, Gertrude and Clarence. (3) Estelle was born and reared in the town of Dover, and she is now the wife of John Haynes, an agriculturist of the town of Pawling. They have two children—Fred and Ruth. (5) Florence, Mrs. Kline's youngest sister, married John Merrick, a resident of Towners, and has no children.

JOHAN G. DOYLE, the junior member of the well-known firm, Lewis & Doyle, of Wassaic, was born at South Dover, Dutchess county, September 27, 1863.

The boyhood and youth of Mr. Doyle were passed uneventfully at Wassaic, where he attended school, and at the age of fourteen years he entered the store of M. K. Lewis, with whom he has since remained. Until the 25th of July, 1894, he served as clerk, but since that time has been a partner, and the firm is now enjoying a large and paying business. He has always been a staunch Democrat, and in 1893 was appointed postmaster of Wassaic, by President Cleveland, which position he has since capably filled to the satisfaction of all concerned. He is a business man of more than ordinary ability, and justly deserves the success which has crowned his efforts. Socially, he is identified with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and is a past regent of Council No. 1291, Royal Arcanum, at Wassaic.

At Pawling, N. Y., January 20, 1886, Mr. Doyle was united in marriage with Miss Mary F. Barrett, of Charleston, S. C., daughter of Pierce Barrett. They have had one son, Percy Vincent, who died in infancy. The young couple hold a high position in the social circles of the community.

DEWITT C. HUSTED, the enterprising proprietor of a combined bakery and confectionery store and restaurant at Millerton, Dutchess county, and one of the most successful business men of that village, was born in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, January 2, 1860. His ancestors were early settlers in the town of Pleasant Valley, where his grandfather, Nathaniel Husted, and his father, Luther Husted, were born, the latter in the year 1840.

The subject of our sketch was educated in the district school at Clinton, which was excellent for that day, and being fond of reading he has supplemented this course in later years by keeping "well posted" on current events and the advance of scientific thought. At eighteen he left school and assisted his father for three years, when he started out in life for himself, first as attendant for Dr. Knight at Lakeville, Conn. Three years later he and his brother, Elmer, took charge of his father's store at Wassaic, the partnership continuing two years. The next two years, Mr. Husted conducted a store of his own, and then after one year of retirement from business he came to Millerton in the spring of 1892 and established the bakery, confectionery and restaurant business, which he has since conducted. This is one of the finest stores of its kind in the town and enjoys an extensive patronage. A self-made man, Mr. Husted has always displayed the energy and good management which win success, and every enterprise in which he has engaged has prospered.

On January 25, 1888, he was married to Miss Etta Jenks, of Lakeville, Conn.; they have one son, Harry, born April 13, 1890. Mr. Husted is among the leaders in local affairs and has been at times active in politics, and not being bound slavishly by party ties, he has always worked for the nomination and election of such men as he has considered best qualified to carry out the will of the people.

Mrs. Husted is the only surviving daughter of William and Caroline (Edwards) Jenks. She was born at Hillsdale, N. Y., August 1, 1858, and in her girlhood accompanied her parents to Orehill, Conn., where they made their home some six years, thence moving to Lakeville, Conn. Here she attended the public school, later taking a one-year's course at New Preston, Conn. Then, for ten years and until her marriage, she lived at Norfolk, Conn. Her father was born October 10, 1822, in New York. Her mother was a native of Connecticut, born in New Milford, December 3, 1817. They were married October 1, 1844, and became the parents of five children, as follows: Rachel and Mary Amanda (both deceased); George, a resident of Torrington, Conn.; Fred E., of New Haven; and Elmer (Mrs. Husted). Her maternal grandfather Edwards was born September 12, 1784, and in 1803 married Sarah Bennett, who was born May 2, 1783. They had five children: 4-phia, Abel, Caroline, Sarah and Rachel. Of these, the last two are yet living.

John Jenks, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Husted, was born April 9, 1782. Mary (White), his wife, was born October 11, 1793. They were married November 20, 1813. The former died September 3, 1833, the latter, December 17, 1874. Their seven children were: John Fredrick, born September 13, 1814; Mariette, born February 1, 1816; Ann Maria, born November 24, 1817; Harriet Emily, born October 20, 1819; Sarah Jane, born June 3, 1821; Clarissa Amanda, born December 16, 1822; and William Hunt, born October 10, 1824. Of these only John Fredrick and Clarissa Amanda survive. The paternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Husted was Thomas Jenks, who married Sarah Barton and died, aged forty-one years.

Abel Edwards, the maternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Husted was a Revolutionary soldier. He enlisted May 4, 1775, in the company of Capt. Samuel Whitney, of Stratford, in the 10th regiment, Col. David Waterbury commanding. He married, for his first wife, Lucy Hawley, and, for his second, Sarah Mann.

GEORGE HAM ANGELL, a leading citizen and enterprising, progressive business man of Wappingers Falls, is one of the prominent dry-goods merchants of the place. He is a native of Dutchess county, born January 1, 1852, at Salt Point, in the town of Pleasant Valley. The family of which he belongs is of English origin, and its members mostly belonged to the Society of Friends. Ephraim Angell, his paternal grandfather, who was also born in Pleasant Valley town, located upon a farm near Spencertown, Columbia Co., N. Y., after his marriage with Mary Thorne, where he reared a family of eight children—Joseph, Augustus, Stephen, Henry, Ephraim, Sarah, Emma and Martha—and there he continued agricultural pursuits until his death.

Upon that farm in Columbia county, Stephen T. Angell, the father of our subject, was born, October 31, 1817, and when he had attained his seventeenth year, he began teaching school in that locality. He was united in marriage with Miss Hannah E. Ham, a daughter of George Ham, who was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and was a farmer by occupation. After their marriage the parents located at Salt Point, where the father engaged in farming until called from this life in 1889. His estimable wife still survives him. Politically, he was in early manhood a Whig, and, upon the abandonment of the old party, cordially endorsed the Republican principles, which he ever afterward sustained. He was prominent in the public affairs of the county; having served one term as justice of the peace of Pleasant Valley township, and two terms as president of the Dutchess County Agricultural Society. He was a man of sterling integrity, and possessed great force of character, which won for him the confidence and esteem of the community in which he lived. The parental household included five children: Eva, George H., Augustus, a prominent oculist of Hartford, Conn., who was graduated from the Homeopathic Medical College, of New York City; Milton H., a well-known physician of Salt Point; and J. Thorne, who is station agent and telegraph operator for the Poughkeepsie & Eastern R. R. Co., at Pine Plains, Dutchess county.

At Salt Point our subject spent his boyhood days, where he attended the district schools, and later was a student at a private school in New Hampshire. Going to Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y., he was there employed as a salesman in a dry-goods store for about five years. He was afterward with Luckey, Platt & Co., and Donald, Converse & Maynard, of Poughkeepsie. On coming to Wappingers Falls in 1880, Mr. Angell formed a partnership with William A. Clapp in the dry-goods business, which connection lasted for three years, since which time our subject has been sole proprietor, and has ever been prominently connected with the business interests of the place.

In 1882, Mr. Angell married Miss Margaret J. Stevenson, a daughter of Thomas Stevenson, a comb manufacturer, and a niece of George Stevenson, a prominent resident of Dutchess county. One son graces this union, Winfield Thorne. In politics, Mr. Angell is a firm supporter of the Republican party, and has taken a prominent part in public affairs, always lending his influence to promote the best interests of the community. His personal integrity, both in private and public life, is of the highest order. He is endowed with a clear, well-balanced intellect, sharpened by a sound education and keen powers of observation. Both himself and wife are consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is serving as deacon, and he is at present one of the trustees of the Grinnell Library, at Wappingers Falls.

EDMUND NELSON LANDON, an enterprising and successful merchant of Millerton, Dutchess county, was born November 23, 1852, at Town Hill, Salisbury, Conn., which has been the home of the family for more than one hundred years. The family estate there is at present in the possession of a cousin, having been continuously passed from heir to heir since Colonial times without a single transfer by deed. Mr. Landon is the sixth generation in direct descent from a Landon who came from Wales to Connecticut sometime in the seventeenth century, and after a short stay in Litchfield settled at Salisbury. A son, Capt. James Landon, who was born there about 1700, and lived until 1773, was a member of the Colonial legislature in 1759, and justice of the peace about the same time. His title was gained by serving in the Colonial militia. He married Mary Reed, and had twelve children, three of whom were named: Ashbil, David, Joel. Capt. Ashbil Landon, our subject's great-grandfather, who died in 1838, was also an officer in the militia, and was a prominent man of his time. He lived on Tory Hill, so called from the loyalty of his family to the British government during the Revolutionary war. He married Lorain Chapman, by whom he had six children: Betsey, Letty, William, Horace, Edmund and James.

Edmund Landon, our subject's grandfather, was born in 1790, and died in 1845. He was a farmer, as nearly all his family have been, and was fairly successful in that occupation. He was twice married, first to Sylvia Fitch, who died leaving four children: Nelson, Fitch, Abigail and Ann. His second wife was Sarah Lord, who survived him several years, dying in 1862. She had four children: Ashbil, Thomas Newton, George and Asa. Thomas Newton died at the age of eleven.

Nelson Landon, our subject's father, was born in 1817, and died in 1887, his life having been passed in agricultural pursuits. He owned a farm of 200 acres, acquired by his own efforts, and gave but little attention to public affairs, preferring a quiet life. He was, however, a well-informed man of broad ideas, a Whig in political faith during his early years, and later a Republican. His wife was Mary Raymond, daughter of Gershom Raymond, of South Norwalk. This family was of French descent, the name being at one time Raiment.

The first ancestor of the American line was one of the founders of South Norwalk, and one of the original patentees of the land there. Seven children were born of this marriage: Fannie Reed, Mary Ella, Edmund Nelson Raymond Fitch, Jennie (deceased), Horace and Angeline.

Edmund N. Landon received a good education in his youth, attending first the district schools of the neighborhood, and later the academies of Lakeville and Lime Rock, Conn. After leaving school, in 1874, he taught at Orr Hill (one term), Sharon and Salisbury and then began clerking for W. B. Hawley at Sherman, Conn., in a general store. There he remained about six years, and then became traveling salesman for J. L. Clark & Son, manufacturers of carriages, Oshkosh, Wis., and for two years represented them in the eastern and middle States. He then traveled for the house of I. D. Ware, of Philadelphia, manufacturer of varnishes and japans, and later for the Ware Brothers, publishers of the Carriage Monthly, remaining with them for four years. In 1887, he left "the road" to take a position in the store of C. B. Dakin & Co., of Sharon, Conn., and early in the following year he came to Millerton, where he opened a general store on the 1st of April, under the firm name of E. N. Landon & Co. In 1890 he sold this business to Hoag & Keefer, and bought a store building of Julius Benedict, which he established his present business as dealer in flour, feed, grain and coal. He has a large trade, extending for a considerable distance around Millerton, and amounting about forty thousand annually. His judgment and energetic methods have insured his success in his undertakings, and he has high standing in business circles.

On March 30, 1887, Mr. Landon married Miss Adelaide Cross Barker, daughter of Hervey Barker, a well-known resident of White Creek, Washington Co., N. Y., and they have one daughter, Adelaide Barker Landon. On national political questions Mr. Landon is a Republican, but on local issues he votes independently, giving his support to the "best man." He has repeatedly been urged to enter the political field himself, but has declined to do so, and on one occasion when elected justice of the peace he did not qualify, as he did not wish to take the office. He takes a hearty interest in local improvements, however, and is always ready to promote them in a quiet way.

HENRY BODENSTEIN, a prominent and worthy citizen of Staatsburg, is extensively engaged in the manufacture of ice tools, having a large plant in that village. He was born September 28, 1852, in Nesselreden, Hessen, Germany, a son of John H. and Dorothea (Boerner) Bodenstein, natives of the same place, and of whom mention is made elsewhere.

In 1858 our subject came to America with his parents, and in the common schools of Staatsburg, Rockland Lake, N. Y., Jersey City, N. J., and Athens, N. Y., he received his education. At the age of sixteen he left the school-room in order to start out in life for himself, and for two years he worked at cigarmaking in Hudson and Athens, N. Y. At this time his father was much in need of help, so he decided to learn the trade, and accordingly entered the establishment of his father, who was then in the manufacture of ice tools in Staatsburg. He gradually worked his way upward until he became master of every department of the business, and remained in his father's employ from 1868 to 1875. After the latter's death he, with his brother, continued the business for the estate until 1877, and then formed a partnership under the firm name of J. G. Bodenstein & Brother. In 1887, the name was changed to J. G. & H. Bodenstein, and the firm continued to do business until March 22, 1890, when the co-partnership was dissolved. Our subject has since conducted the business alone on the same stand where his father carried on operations, and has built up a large trade which extends over the whole country. While the name Bodenstein is a guarantee as to workmanship and the quality of material used in the manufacture of their tools by the use of improved machinery, he has increased the facilities for getting out ice tools.

In 1879 Mr. Bodenstein was united in marriage with Antoinette Podrabski, and to them have been born eight children: Clarence Henry, Charles Irving, Morgan, Harriet Eliza, Sarah Margaret, Ernest Frederick Ham, Laura Antoinette and Louise Amelia. Formerly our subject cast his ballot with the republicans, but is now a strong Prohibitionist, as that party embodies his views on the temperance question. He and his wife are faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has served as trustee and steward. Socially he is identified with Rhinebeck Lodge No. 432, F. & A. M.

WILLIAM C. ARMSTRONG is one of the popular and esteemed citizens of Pleasant Valley. Though his connection with the history of Dutchess county extends over a period of thirty-three years, he was in his earlier life an extensive traveler, and thereby became a man of broad mind and liberal views. He was born in New York City October 24, 1830, but for many generations his ancestors had lived in Scotland. His father, Henry Armstrong, an only child, was born in Glasgow, Scotland. He wedded Mary Clifford, and shortly afterward sailed for New York, where both he and his wife died of cholera in 1837. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and people of genuine worth. Their family included five children: John A., an engineer, residing in New York City; William C., subject of this review; Thomas, who carried on harness-making in Syracuse, N. Y., but is now deceased; Henry, also deceased, who was an engineer of New York, and ran on several river boats; and Elizabeth, deceased.

Mr. Armstrong, whose name introduces this review, spent his boyhood days in his native city, and is indebted to its public schools for his educational privileges. There he received his training as an engineer, working in the Novelty Iron Works for twelve years, and in the Cold Springs foundry for three years. He afterward became engineer on the steamer "Golden Gate," running between Panama and San Francisco, Cal., his service in that line covering a period of one year. He was then employed to construct the river passenger boat "Talca," for the government of Chili, and made his headquarters at Valparaiso in that country. He next went to Cuba, where he took charge of a sugar plantation, thus spending the winter seasons for nine years. During this period he purchased machinery to the value of many thousand dollars in Newburg, N. Y., and sent to the island of Cuba. His extensive travels gave him a knowledge of the regions which he visited, that any amount of reading could not have done, and he can relate many interesting incidents concerning the places he has visited. He is a man of comprehensive business powers, of ceaseless activity and enterprise, and the success he has achieved is the merited reward of his own labors.

Mr. Armstrong has been twice married. He wedded Elizabeth Scott, a native of New York, who lived only a few years. They had two children, but one died in infancy, and Emma is also now deceased. She was the wife of Frederick J. Fay, of Brooklyn, pay-teller for the Union Trust Company, of New York. In 1862 Mr. Armstrong married Hester I. Seaman, a native of Pleasant Valley, and a daughter of Egbert C. and Eliza (Van-Wagner) Seaman, the latter a native of Dutchess county. The father was a harnessmaker of Pleasant Valley. In 1863 Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong located in this place, and their home has been blessed with two daughters, Clara and Bessie, the former now the wife of Harvey G. Ward, who is engaged in the practice of law in New York City, but resides in Ridge-wood, N. J. Bessie became the wife of George Rutherford, a music teacher and dealer in music, Poughkeepsie.

Since locating in Pleasant Valley, Mr. Armstrong has conducted a hotel, and his pleasant, genial and courteous manner, combined with honorable dealing, makes him a popular landlord and his house a favorite with the traveling public. He is also a dealer in coal, and has an extensive trade among the citizens of Pleasant Valley. Public-spirited and progressive, he manifests a commendable interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community, and is found a liberal supporter of all enterprises calculated to prove of public benefit. He would be a valued addition to any community, and his fellow-townsmen hold him in high regard.

CHARLES A. STEPHENS, one of the most enterprising business men of Miller-ton, Dutchess county, was born December 14, 1851, in Morrisania, then in Westchester county, but now a part of New York City. The family originated in Scotland, his grandfather, Thomas Stephens, having emigrated from that country in 1821, accompanied by his wife, Margaret Perkins, daughter of Thomas Perkins. He located in New York City, where he followed the trade of ship carpenter until his death, in 1835; his wife died in 1827.

They had three children—Thomas, who was drowned; John, our subject's father, and Margaret, who married H. Higginson, a builder.

John Stephens was born in New York City August 6, 1822, and at an early age found employment in the Morrisania Railroad Car Shops. His unusual ability soon attracted the notice of the officials, and he was promoted to a position of responsibility; in 1859 was transferred to Dover Plains and placed in charge of the car repairing department, where he remained until he retired from active business in 1892. At that time the Harlem road accepted his resignation with reluctance, notwithstanding his advanced age. He was a well-read man, a close observer and original thinker, and could have made a success of almost any enterprise. Although he has always been a staunch Republican in principle he has taken no part in political work. He was an active worker in the Masonic Lodge at Dover, and is a regular attendant of the Baptist Church. His first wife was Miss Ann Reed, daughter of James Reed, of New York City, who died at the age of twenty-seven, leaving three children: Thomas, born in 1844, died in 1869; Charles Anthony, our subject, and John George, born in June, 1856, is now the agent of the Harlem railroad at Fordham and a dealer in electrical appliances for domestic use. In 1858 Mr. Stephens married, for his second wife, Miss Jane Reed.

Charles A. Stephens attended the district schools near his home for some time, and later spent two or three years in the Dover Plain Academy. When he was about sixteen years old he became a clerk in B. F. Chapman's coal and lumber yard at Dover Plains, and the following year went to Poughkeepsie, to be clerk in the dry-goods store of W. H. Brown. Here he worked for a year and a half, when his health failing, he returned to Dover. While recuperating, he studied medicine with Dr. Berry, of Dover Plains, for two years, but decided that he would not follow the profession. He had also gained a knowledge of telegraphy in the meantime, and in February, 1873, was appointed agent of the Newburgh Dutchess & Connecticut railroad, at Fishkill, and in the spring of 1874 took a similar position at Sylvan Lake. He lived at that place for thirteen years, and was postmaster under President Arthur and, later, under President Harrison. He was also engaged in the coal business there, and owned and operated a farm of five acres for about ten years, while for some time he was a conductor on the Clove Branch railroad. In 1887 he moved to Fordham, and bought an express business in New York City, which he sold after seven months. He then took a position as telegraph operator at White Plains, but after four months there he returned to his old situation at Sylvan Lake, where he remained until August, 1894, when he was transferred to Millerton. In addition to his work as station agent there, he is the representative of the New York Life Insurance Company, and since September, 1894, has been a member of the well-known firm of Landon & Stephens, the leading wholesale and retail coal dealers.

Mr. Stephens is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, and in local affairs is an active and progressive worker, seeking always to secure the nomination and election of good men. He has taken great interest in educational matters also. He belongs to the Reformed Dutch Church at Hopewell, and is a member of and officer in Webatuck Lodge No. 480, F. & A. M.

Mr. Stephens married Miss Helen E. Westcott, by whom he has had two children—George Westcott and Helen Anthony. Mrs. Stephens is a descendant of two of the oldest families of the town of Fishkill—the Westcotts and the Scofields. Her father, the late George W. Westcott, a son of Abram W. Westcott, a pioneer farmer, was a prominent man of that locality, the owner of a fine farm, devoted largely to fruit raising, and for some years a leading merchant at Glenham. His influence in local affairs and in the Democratic organization was marked, and he held the offices of supervisor and assessor for a number of years. He died in December, 1891, in his seventy-ninth year. He was twice married, first to Miss Helen Mills, by whom he had five children—George, Elbert, Matilda, Adaline, and Abram; and, second, to Miss Jane E. Storm, of Stormville. Two children were born of this union—John and Helen—the latter of whom and her half-sister, Matilda, are now the only survivors of the family.

ROBERT MATTHEWS. This gentleman, who spent his early manhood in active business, mainly in agricultural pursuits, is now living retired at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county. A native of that county, he was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, November 1, 1825. His paternal great-grandfather was born in either Ireland or Scotland, and, on crossing the Atlantic to America, located in Dutchess county, where he carried on farming as a life work. When the colonists took up arms against the mother country, he joined the ranks of the Continental army, and was killed in battle.

Samuel Matthews, the grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, September 25, 1756, there grew to manhood, and followed the occupation of farming and carpentering. He married Mary Compton, of Canada, and they became the parents of four children: John, who became a farmer in the town of Poughkeepsie; Robert, the father of our subject; Mary, who became the wife of Isaac A. Willsey, a farmer of Albany county, N. Y.; and Jane, who died when young. The family were members of the Reformed Dutch Church.

Robert Matthews, Sr., was also born in the town of Poughkeepsie, on December 22, 1788, and was there reared upon a farm. He was married to Jane Jaycox, who was born March 3, 1794, in the same town, and was a daughter of Benjamin and Gertrude Jaycox, the former a native of Dutchess county, and a farmer by occupation. Shortly after their marriage they located upon a farm in the town of Poughkeepsie, where they reared their children, six in number, namely: Samuel, who throughout life engaged in farming in that town; Maria, who married Harvey Van Dyne, a farmer of the same town; Jane Ann, the widow of Henry Willsey, of Albany county, N. Y.; Robert, of this review; Harriett, who married H. Ferdon, a farmer of Poughkeepsie; and John, who still carries on agricultural pursuits in that town. The father's death occurred May 4, 1872, and the mother departed this life December 20, 1857. They were both earnest members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and in politics he was a Democrat.

At the schools near the home farm our subject received his education, and on reaching manhood was married December 20, 1865, to Olive Goodsell, a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, where the births of her parents, Elliott and Beulah (Thompson) Goodsell, also occurred. Isaac Goodsell, her paternal grandfather, came to this country from Manchester, England, and on the maternal side also she is of English descent. Upon his marriage Mr. Matthews located upon a farm in Poughkeepsie town, which he operated until his removal to Wappingers Falls in 1874, since which time he has lived retired from active labor, enjoying the fruits of his former toil. He votes the straight Democratic ticket. Both himself and wife are prominent people of the community, and receive the warmest confidence and esteem of their fellow-citizens.

LEGRAND GRAHAM, of Clinton Hollow, a miller by trade, and one of the most popular auctioneers in Dutchess county, was born in the town of Ghent, Columbia county, May 14, 1847.

The late Virgil B. Graham, our subject's father, was a native of Connecticut, born June 29, 1795. He was educated in Rhode Island, and when a young man came to Ghent, where he followed the trade of cradle and wagon making. He possessed a fine intellect, and was a great reader, taking especial interest in political science. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. After his removal to Columbia county, he married Miss Elizabeth Miller, who was born in 1803, and died in 1896, in the ninety-third year of her age, at the home of our subject, who is the youngest of her eleven children. The names of the others are: Charles H., Gertrude, Franklin, Abner, William, Sarah, Sylvester, Eliza, Jane and Almon. Of these only Gertrude, Franklin, and the two last named are now living.

The early education of LeGrand Graham was acquired at Ghent, Columbia county, and at Clinton, Dutchess county. For some time he taught school, working on a farm during vacations, and for a year and a half he conducted a store at Clinton Hollow. In 1864 he enlisted in the First New York Mounted Rifles, and his first battle was on September 28, 1864, at Chapin's farm, Va. He was mustered out of service at Richmond, Va., at the close of the war, and returned to Ghent, N. Y. In the spring of 1867 he came to Dutchess county, engaging in farming and merchandising, and in 1871 he began to operate a gristmill and sawmill at Clinton Hollow, in a building which has stood for one hundred and fifty years. He is energetic and far-sighted, and has won a fine standing in business circles. He has been twice married, first, on June 26, 1873, to Miss Jane M. Latten, daughter of Adolphus D. Latten, of Clinton.

She died January 19, 1878, leaving one daughter, Bertha, and December 24, 1879, Mr. Graham married Miss Ella Smith, daughter of Stephen H. Smith, of Clinton. Two children were born to this union: Frank and Florence.

In politics Mr. Graham is a Republican, and he takes an active share in local affairs, having been town clerk for five years in all, and at present is holding the office of excise commissioner of the town of Clinton. He is a member of the G. A. R., Armstrong Lodge No. 104, at Rhinebeck, and of the F. & A. M., Warren Lodge No. 32, at Schultsville.

ARTHUR R. TIEL, M. D., a prominent physician and surgeon, of Matteawan, N. Y., whose abilities have received recognition far beyond the limits of his own locality, was born October 14, 1854, in Ashland, Greene county, where his family was located for some time.

His great-grandfather, Jacob Tiel, settled in Rhinebeck with others from Holland. Later, his grandfather, Henry Tiel, moved to Greene county, and was there a resident for most of his life. His son, J. W. Tiel, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in the same county, in 1825, and remained there till of middle life, when he moved with his family to Newark, N. J. After living there for some time the family moved to Matteawan, where they were impelled owing to the hatting industry, which was the trade of Mr. Tiel. A little later Mr. Tiel went into the grocery business in Newburgh, and at an early age, and for some time, Arthur acted as bookkeeper for his father. About this time he made up his mind to study medicine, and began this study in the office of Dr. William Jones, of Newburgh. In 1878 he was graduated from the Eclectic Medical College, of the city of New York. Since that date he has followed his profession at Matteawan, and has built up a large and lucrative practice. He located at first on Main street, opposite the depot, and in 1885 he established his office in his newly-built residence, called "Beaconview," situated on Tioronda avenue, in full sight of North Beacon.

In 1880 Dr. Tiel was married to his first wife, Miss Ella F. R. Brown, daughter of William H. Brown, a respected citizen of Matteawan. She lived her married life only fourteen months, and in 1885 the Doctor married Miss Elizabeth H. Badeau, daughter of Arthur F. Tiet M.D.

Joseph N. Badeau. They have two children: Arthur David, born in 1887; and Helen Josephine, born in 1895.

The Doctor and his wife are both greatly interested in various movements, social, religious, educational and philanthropical, and have ably assisted many a worthy enterprise. We may note especially the Matteawan Public Library, of which the Doctor is treasurer and secretary of the executive committee. They are active members of the M. E. Church, and the Doctor is recording steward, member of the official board and president of the Epworth League, while for eight years he was superintendent of the Sunday-school. He has always been a worker in the temperance cause, and for some years has been a leader in the Prohibition party in his locality, having been nominated for every important office in his town and district. Among his professional brethren he is so held in high esteem, and he is at present secretary of the Hudson River District Eclectic Medical Society; in 1894 was treasurer of the New York State Eclectic Medical Society, and last year was its president. He was recently elected by the State board of Regents as a member of the medical examining board, of which he is secretary.

CHARLES A. CARE, a well-known resident of Millerton, Dutchess county, was born October 15, 1846, in Reffroy, France; his family is one of the oldest in that part of the country. Claude Care, his grandfather, was a cooper by trade, and followed this occupation successfully during his entire life, accumulating a fair competence. He married Marie Ann Boulard, and they had five children: Marie, Jannette, Margarete, Marie Ann and Laurent. He died in France in 1861, and his wife in 1859.

Laurent Care, our subject's father, was born May 19, 1819, and came to America in 1854. He married Justine Monory, and they had three children: Aderal, Charles A., and Clarice, who married Charles Pierson. Laurent Care was a sawyer by trade, but had been employed in France as a common laborer, in getting timber out and making charcoal, and other work of similar kind, and possessing good natural abilities and a laudable ambition, he determined, if possible, to better his condition. On coming to this country he located in the town of Beckett, Berkshire Co., Mass.

His wife died August 28, 1862, and ten years later he accompanied his son Charles to Millerton, where he died December 16, 1895. He had been somewhat active in politics in France, but while heartily in sympathy with the progress of his adopted country, he took no part in public life.

The subject of our sketch attended the schools of his native land for a few years before coming to America, but his education was mainly acquired in Berkshire county, Mass., at Beckett and Muddy Brook, near Stockbridge. He received a good academic education, and has always been an intelligent reader, especially fond of history. After leaving school he assisted his father in the lumber business, until his enlistment, August 28, 1864, in Company G, Second Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. He served until the close of the war, being transferred, however, to Company A, 17th Mass. V. I. Among the engagements in which this gallant compatriot of La Fayette took part were the battles of Wise Forks, N. C., in March, 1865; Kingston and Goldsboro. On his return home in July, 1865, he engaged in the hotel business at Pittsfield, Mass., for four years. In April, 1872, he came to Millerton and opened a hotel in the brick block, but after four years there he went into the wood and coal business, which he carried on for three years. He then became a clerk in the "Amenia House," in Amenia, and a year later established his present business, in which he has been very successful. He married Phoebe Ann Loring, daughter of Chester O. Loring, a prominent citizen of Sheffield, Mass., and has had seven children: Charles A., Jr., deceased; Clarice; Florence; Mamie; Eugene, deceased; Frankie, deceased; and Fannie.

In public affairs Mr. Care has taken an active and influential part, and has always worked for the welfare of the community. He was a Democrat until 1876, but since that time has given his support to the Republican party. He is now deputy sheriff under Jerry S. Pierce, and has been constable for some years; was elected collector for the town of Northeast by the largest majority given any candidate on the Republican ticket. He is a member of Webatuck Lodge No. 480, F. & A. M., of the Odd Fellows Lodge, No. 319, and of the Grand Army of the Republic, in which he now holds the rank of adjutant of Henry Gedley Post No. 617.

CHARLES HAMILTON DAVIS, JR., a prominent and representative citizen of Amenia, Dutchess county, was born in Worcester county, Mass., March 8, 1840, a son of Charles H. and Lucinda (Mundell) Davis, who are the parents of four children, of whom our subject is the eldest. The others are: George H., who died in 1863; Ginery T., of Auburn-dale, Mass.; and Frank, who died in infancy. The father, also a native of Worcester county, Mass., was born in 1810, and has there followed farming most of his life. He is still living, and enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him.

In the district schools of his native county our subject acquired his elementary education, and completed his literary course at the Barre Academy, in Barre, Mass., after which he taught school for several years in that State. In the spring of 1864, he entered the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and on leaving that institution secured the position of bookkeeper in the City National Bank of Poughkeepsie, where he remained for eight years.

In 1872, Mr. Davis located in Amenia, where he has since served as assistant cashier and notary public in the First National Bank. During President Cleveland's first administration, he was appointed national bank examiner for a term of four years, and for many years served as justice of the peace at Amenia, in fact holding the office as long as he would accept of it. He is public-spirited and progressive, faithfully discharging every duty of citizenship, and has hosts of friends throughout the county. Politically, he is a staunch Democrat, and has been the nominee on his party's ticket for county treasurer of Dutchess county. Religiously, he holds membership with the Baptist Church at Amenia.

While a resident of Poughkeepsie, Mr. Davis was united in marriage with Lucy E. Harrington, who died in that city. Later, in Worcester county, Mass., he wedded Miss Mimmie R. Harrington, and they have one son, Robert S., born June 4, 1883.

GEORGE SEDGWICK NORTON. The history of the American branch of the Norton family begins in the days of the Pilgrim Fathers with the emigration of three brothers of that name from the home of their ancestors, near the border line between England and Scotland. They landed at Plymouth Rock, and while one son went farther west to locate a Whitehall, N. Y., two settled in Berkshire county, Mass., where their descendants have maintained a high reputation for ability and public spirit.

The subject of this sketch is descended from this Berkshire-county line, and his great grandfather, Jonathan Norton, was among the distinguished citizens of that locality in his day, owning between two and three thousand acres of land, and holding various positions of honor and usefulness. In 1790 he was commissioned captain in the State militia by John Hancock, the immortal signer of the Declaration of Independence, who was at that time governor of Massachusetts. Jonathan Norton was a Whig in politics, and, with the exception of one man who voted for George B. McClellan, his posterity at all times have supported the Whig and Republican parties. He married, and had three sons—Jonathan L. Roderick J. and Lyman—and two or three daughters, all of whom married.

Roderick J. Norton, our subject's grandfather, possessed great natural ability, and like his father, was a man of prominence. His holdings in real estate were very extensive, and he followed farming all his life. In local politics he was very active, holding at different times all the offices in his town and several in the county. He and the majority of his family were leading members of the Congregational Church. His wife, Rhoda (Johnson) was a member of an old Granville, Mass. family, daughter of Charles and granddaughter of Timothy Johnson. They had seven children, of whom the first, Roderick J., died in childhood. Isaac was treasurer and clerk of the town of Otis, Berkshire county, for fifty-two years without being required to furnish bond, and his term of service only ended at his death, when he was ninety-four years of age. Elam was at one time sheriff of the county and was trial justice for twenty-five years, and justice of the peace for seventy years, being elected at the age of twenty-one, and holding the office until his death, which occurred when he was ninety-one. Unlike the rest of the family, he was an Episcopalian. Harriet married Robert Hunter, of Berkshire county. Roderick Hyde is mentioned more fully below. Sedgwick died at twenty-one years of age. George was a harness maker of the town of Otis, Berkshire county, and lived to the of seventy-seven years. Roderick J. Norton died in 1848, and his wife in 1858.

Roderick Hyde Norton, our subject's father, was born at the old home March 19, 1809, and was intended for the ministry; but on account of financial reverses his education was interrupted, and at twenty-one he began teaching, which occupation he followed successfully some forty years. His first school was at Claverack, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he met and married his first wife, Harriet Bierce, who was born in 1808 in an old brick house on the post road between Ghent and Hudson. Her father, Bradford Bierce, was a prominent resident of the town. After two years in Claverack, Mr. Norton returned to his native place, and for many years taught at Otis, Mass., becoming known as one of the ablest teachers of that region. For twenty-five years he was chairman of the examining committee, was a selectman of the town for many years, and was a deacon in the Congregational Church. The last ten years of his life were spent at Egremont, Mass., in agricultural pursuits. His first wife died August 17, 1861, and he formed a second matrimonial alliance with Miss Dora Van Buren (a second cousin of President Van Buren), of Stockport, Columbia Co., N. Y. She departed this life in 1882, and on October 12 of the following year he breathed his last. There was no offspring by the last marriage, but his first wife bore him four children, of whom three grew to adult age. (1) Isaac F. was given good advantages in his youth, and became wealthy. For some years he was a merchant at Egremont, Mass., but later traveled as a salesman. (2) Bradford B. followed mercantile pursuits for some years at Blandford, Mass., and East Winsted, Conn., afterward removing to Gold Hill, Nev., where he acquired great wealth, owning a large ranch and holding an interest in many valuable properties. He was treasurer and secretary of eight different mining companies. He possessed great influence in political circles, and in 1880 was urged to accept the nomination for governor. Against his own wish he undertook the campaign, and was defeated by but a very small majority. In the following year his death occurred through overwork.

(3) George S. Norton, the youngest son, was born at Otis, Mass., August 19, 1841, and his educational advantages were confined to three years and four months attendance at the district schools; but he has so thoroughly informed himself upon important topics of the day that these limitations would not be suspected. At the age of eleven he was put to work upon the farm, and practically placed in charge, and when he was fifteen he raised 500 bushels of potatoes and 100 of corn. In the fall of 1859 he apprenticed himself to J. L. Fatro, of Winsted, Conn., for two years, at $50 for the entire term, in order to learn the blacksmith's trade. Before the expiration of his term in had become proficient in the business, and he April, 1861, he opened a shop in Egremont, Mass., where he spent one year. He then went to Collinsville, Conn., and worked for Mr. Shook six months, forging plow standards, afterward returning home for a year. On resuming his trade he went to Salisbury to work for Mr. Pratt; but after four months, ill health caused him to choose another occupation, and he went "on the road" selling a "Life of Lincoln." Six months later he widened his field of operations, selling jewelry, silverware and cigars, in which he continued successfully until 1875. During the previous year he had bought the hotel at Pawling, known as "Travelers' Home," which he had been carrying on in connection with his other business, and on leaving the road he gave his attention to its management. For two years he conducted a jewelry store also. In 1880 he engaged in the business of shipping ice to New York City, and after the sale of the hotel to Frank Lee, in 1881, he carried on the retail ice business until 1896, when he sold out and began contracting to do various kinds of work, chiefly the transplanting of trees. In this he is remarkably successful, having moved shade trees which were fifty feet high and fifteen inches in diameter.

On August 22, 1870, Mr. Norton was married to Miss Siche Doughty, daughter of Peter D. and Emma Doughty, prominent residents of Beekman, and he has a pleasant home in Pawling, his present residence, built in 1881, being one of the finest in the village. Aside from his business activities, in which his success has won for him a high reputation for good judgment, Mr. Norton is interested in all movements of public importance, and was among the leading promoters of the plans for the incorporation of the village and the construction of the water works. In politics he is active and influential, giving his support to the Republican party, and he has held all offices except those of supervisor and deputy sheriff, and for eleven years he has been justice of the peace. Although often urged to become a candidate for supervisor, he has declined. For twenty-five years he has been chairman of the town committee, and for three years chairman of the Assembly committee of the First District, and for a quarter of a century he has attended every Assembly convention but one, and most of the county conventions. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F. for twenty-one years, and is now an active worker in Lodge No. 173, Patterson. At one time he held the office of noble grand, and he has passed the chair fifteen times.

D W. WILBUR, one of the able and energetic business men of Red Hook, Dutchess county, who have made that charming village a thriving commercial point, is descended from one of the oldest families of Dutchess county,

His great-great-grandfather, Jephtha Wilbur, was one of the earliest settlers of the Nine Partners Patent in that county. He had a son Jephtha (2), who had a son Samuel, born in March, 1782, who married Elizabeth Hicks, whose birth occurred in 1786. Samuel Wilbur died at the age of forty-five, but his wife attained the ripe old age of ninety-five. They reared a family of five sons and three daughters, and three of the number are still living. One of the sons, Jephtha S. Wilbur, our subject's father, was born in the town of Pine Plains, October 29, 1818. He married Miss Mary J. Story, and made his home in his native township, where D. W. Wilbur was born January 18, 1857. The schools of that locality furnished our subject an opportunity for securing the rudiments of knowledge, and he afterward took a course of study in the De Garmo Institute, Rhinebeck. On his return home he assisted in the development and cultivation of the farm, until he reached the age of twenty-five, when he removed to Red Hook and entered into the coal and lumber business with his father-in-law, H. H. Conklin, under the firm name of H. H. Conklin & Co., which was continued until the death of the senior partner, August 1, 1883. Since that time Mr. Wilbur has conducted the business as the sole owner. In addition to this, he is also engaged in the coal trade in Poughkeepsie under the firm name of Wilbur Bros; is president of the Kaal Rock Chair Co., of Poughkeepsie, and secretary and treasurer of the Red Hook Telephone Company.

On November 17, 1881, our subject was married to Miss Mary G. Conklin, a daughter of Henry H. and Ann Eliza (Gifford) Conklin. Her birth occurred in Red Hook, April 7, 1857, and she received her elementary schooling there, afterward supplementing it with a course in the De Garmo Institute, Rhinebeck, from which she was graduated in 1875. For several years prior to her marriage Mrs. Wilbur was a teacher in the public school of Red Hook, and was very successful in her professional work. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur have no children. Their home is pleasantly located on South Broadway, Red Hook, where their many friends enjoy their hospitality.

The Wilburs from the earliest in the line down to the present time have been enterprising and industrious citizens, leaving a record of which the coming generation may justly be proud.

CLEMENT CARRINGTON GAINES, president of Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and of the New York Business College, New York City is one of the noted educators of the State, and indeed, we may say of the country, the high reputation of the institutions under his care bringing students from all parts of the Union and also from foreign lands.

He is a native of Virginia, and enjoyed the best educational opportunities afforded by the schools of that State. After graduating from Hampden Sidney College, Virginia, he began his professional career at eighteen years of age as a teacher in the Fincastle (Va.) High School and his time during the next seven years was divided between teaching in Virginia and Kentucky, studying in a law office, and at the University of Virginia, with finally a business course in Eastman Business College. At both these institutions he was duly graduated, and in 1883 he went to Chicago, was admitted to the bar, and entered upon the practice of law. In the following year a position upon the Faculty of Eastman Business College was offered him, and as the profession of teaching had always seemed to him to be of the highest value and importance, he accepted. Since his marriage, in October, 1884, to the widow of H. C. Eastman, he has been the head of the institution. Under his management the interests of the college have been ably cared for, the sta-lard of scholarship having been raised in all departments, and the range of usefulness extended. In 1895 there were students enrolled from thirty-eight States and Territories and eleven foreign countries, making a favorable comparison in point of wide-spread popularity in its special lines with that enjoyed by the most famous of institutions of the higher education in the country. Such a marked degree of success could not have been attained without an adequate cause, and this is found in the original and practical features of the Eastman system; faithful and well-directed work in the class room; and the sincere and energetic efforts made to secure desirable employment for every worthy pupil. In this feature of his work the excellent character of instruction offered is of great assistance, as business men in search of competent assistants have already proved beyond a doubt the worth of the practical training given in this school.

Wm. James

In December, 1892, Mr. Gaines opened the New York Business College, at No. 81 East 125th street, New York, N. Y. Less than a dozen students were in attendance at the start, but each succeeding year has more than doubled the enrollment, and in October, 1895, there were so many applications that more space and an enlarged corps of teachers became necessary. Both day and night sessions are held, and students of either sex may enter at any time, selecting whatever branches they may prefer, both in the strictly business courses and in the line of general culture.

Mr. Gaines is a descendant of several of the earliest Virginia families. One of his ancestors was one of the first governors of the colony; two others were members of the House of Burgesses in Colonial times, representing Charlotte county, Virginia, who were among the supporters of Patrick Henry in his heroic efforts in the cause of independence. The family still own extensive plantations, and are prominent in their locality; but like the majority of the Southern people they suffered financially from the Civil war.

Although Mr. Gaines belongs to several clubs and organizations of a social and literary nature, he finds but little time for society, and his business cares have prevented him likewise from entering the political arena. He has, however, served as a member of the board of education of Poughkeepsie, and has been a member of the executive committee of the Board of Trade of that city; while his hearty co-operation and encouragement are always given to any movement which in his opinion will promote the public welfare.

JOHN WILLIAMS, a leading hardware merchant of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, has been for many years prominently identified with the best interests of that town, and has encouraged by his active and efficient aid many of the most important progressive movements in his locality. He is of English birth, and on his mother's side is descended from an old Lancashire family.

Robert Samulshaw, his great-grandfather, was born in that county in 1758, and after receiving an education in the schools of his native place learned the tailor's trade, which he followed throughout his later years. He also owned and cultivated a farm there. Among his eleven children was a son, William, our subject's grandfather, who learned the tailor's trade with his father, and after working at it in his native town for some time removed to Liverpool, England, and established a custom-tailoring business, which proved very successful. His wife's name is not known, but they also had eleven children. A daughter, Mary, our subject's mother, was born in Wigan, Lancashire, and was educated there. She married William Williams, a native of Llan-gollen, Wales, who at the time of their marriage owned a large bakery in Liverpool. Nine children were born to them: Robert, who died in his youth; William, who married Addie Delaverne; John, our subject; Jane (Mrs. John Lewis); Ellen (Mrs. Andrew Johnston); Mary, who married (first) George Reynolds, and (second) Mr. Scott; Elizabeth, the wife of William Frost; Susanna, who died at the age of nine years; and one that died in infancy.

The subject of our sketch was born in Liverpool in 1836, received a good education in the schools of that city, and learned the art of brass finishing there. In 1858 he came to America, locating for a time in Amenia, Dutchess county, where he learned the tinsmith's trade. While there he married Miss Martha Harrocks, daughter of Robert and Ellen Frost Harrocks. She was born and reared in Bury, England, where her father was a well-known merchant. In 1872 Mr. Williams established his present hardware store and tinshop at Dover Plains, of which he has made a success from the first. His wife passed from earth in 1891, leaving two daughters: Hattie S., the wife of Frank H. Brant, and Mary E., who is at home.

The family is prominent, socially, and our subject's fine bass voice is highly appreciated among the best people of Dover Plains. He is a member of the Baptist Church, and in its choir makes worthy use of his musical gifts. He belongs to the Masonic Lodge, No. 666, of Dover Plains, and has always taken great interest in public affairs, local and national. Possessing the courage of his convictions, he is an outspoken Democrat, and he has been chosen by his fellow townsmen to several official positions. He was inspector of elections for a number of years, and on one occasion his honesty, courage, and persistence saved his party from being "counted out."

JOHAN DUTCHER, one of the most trusted employes of the Harlem railroad, upon which he has run an engine for over twenty years, is an honored veteran of the Civil war, having been one of the first to join the forces for the defense of the Union, and one of the last to leave the service at the close of the struggle. He was born in Dover Plains, Dutchess county, July 16, 1841, and his parents, John and Catherine (Elliot) Dutcher, were both natives of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. On the maternal side he is of English descent, his great-great-grandfather, Samuel Elliot, having been born in the city of London early in the eighteenth century. The Elliots of that day were engaged in commerce, owning a fleet of sailing vessels, and this ancestor came to America as a young man, became a merchant and settled in Dutchess county, marrying, and rearing a family, among whom was a son, Samuel, our subject's great-grandfather. He was born in the town of Dover in 1740, and spent his life there quietly in agricultural pursuits. He married Catherine Gillet, of Norwalk, Conn., and had six children: Richard, who never married; Jonathan, who died in infancy; Anna (Mrs. Morrey); Elizabeth (Mrs. Neilson); Sarah (Mrs. Ward); and Samuel, our subject's grandfather, who was born and reared at the old homestead in the town of Dover, and followed farming. His wife was Miss Delia Dart, the daughter of a prominent farmer of Dover, and they had five children, all of whom lived to maturity and married: Enos married Miss Mary Brown Charles, Miss Calista Chamberlain; Juda, Sherman Mallory; Samuel, Miss Gibbs; and Catherine (our subject's mother), who was born in 1817: Our subject's father, John Dutcher, was a son of Cornelius Dutcher, a leading agriculturist of the town of Dover, and his wife Ruth. Of the seven children, all but one lived to adult age. (1) Ruth married John Proper, of Hudson, and has had four children: Samuel, who died when about twenty-four years of age; Alfred, who married Nellie Blood; Jennie, the wife of Walter Davis; and Frank, who married Elizabeth McGarry. (2) Amelia never married. (3) Mercy married John Cameron. (4) Jennie married William J. White, and has two children—Mary Ella and Catherine C. (5) John is the subject of this sketch. (6) Enos married (first) Estella Brewer, who died, leaving one daughter, Bertha, and he then formed a second matrimonial union, this time with Mrs. Sophia Sailor. (7) Vaness died at the age of four years. John Dutcher, the father died in 1856.

The subject of this sketch has spent the greater part of his life at his native place, receiving his education there and later engaging in farming. After three years at that occupation he enlisted, in August, 1861, in Company C, 72d N. Y. V. I., and took part in campaigns under McClellan, Halleck, Burnside, Grant and others. He was in the engagements at Williamsburg, and Yorktown, the second battle of Bull Run, the seven-days fight at Richmond, and the retreat to Harrison Landing—in fact, his regiment was engaged in fighting all of the time. When Halleck took command the regiment was sent to Mine Run, then to Spottsylvania, then back to Chancellorsville, and participated in the battles at Fredericksburg, under Burnside's, and at Spottsylvania C. H., under Grant. While at that place Mr. Dutcher was taken prisoner and remained a prisoner of war five months being confined the greater part of this time at Andersonville, Ga., and on his release rejoined the army. At the close of the war he was sent west as member of the 5th Regiment U. S. V., and was mustered out at Fort Kearney, Kans., in 1865. Fortunately he passed through all the dangers of those trying years without serious injury, having been wounded but once, and that slightly, by a piece of shell. He was promoted to the rank of sergeant.

On his return from the army Mr. Dutcher went to New York City to take a position on the police force, which he held five years. He then resigned and came back to his native place, entering the employ of the Harlem Railroad Company, with which he has now been connected about a quarter of a century, working first as brakeman and fireman, and since 1875 as engineer. He is now in charge of an engine on a passenger train, and stands high in the confidence of his employers and the public. He belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Masonic Lodge of Dover, No. 666, and to the Independent Order of Good Templars, Dover Lodge. Although his tastes are domestic, and he appreciates the repose of home life, he has never married.

GEORGE ROGER, the able and popular postmaster at Millerton, Dutchess county, and one of the most prominent of the younger men of the town, was born August 29, 1855, at Kirkmichael, Scotland, which has been the home of his family for many generations. His grandfather, William Roger, was a miller here, and was killed in a mill in the year 1822, leaving his wife, Mary Hunter (who survived until 1862), and three children—Mary, Jane and David, our subject's father.

David Roger was born in 1810, and for about thirty years was a gardener in the employ of the Ferguson family, being head gardener for some time previous to his coming to America, in 1873. He married Janet Bone, daughter of Quintin Bone, of Paisley, and had seven children: William and Quintin (both deceased); Janet (Mrs. William Allen); Mary (Mrs. Thomas Moore); Agnes (Mrs. John Empey); John, a gardener at Spencer's Corners; James and David (twins), the former of whom is the depot agent at Rosslyn Castle, Scotland, the latter being now a clerk in the Colonial Bank, at Dunedin, New Zealand; Robert, a gardener at Millerton; Marian, the wife of Freeman Traver; and George, the subject of this sketch. After coming to this country David Roger and his wife made their home with their sons, John and Robert, and he was not regularly engaged in any work. He died in 1892, followed a year later by his wife. Both were devout Presbyterians, and their children all adhere to the same faith.

George Roger received a good education in the schools of his native land, and taught as a pupil teacher for one year, but finding the occupation injurious to his health he engaged work in a railroad office for a short time. He accompanied his parents to this country, and his first employment here was as bookkeeper for C. S. Maltby, he and Mr. Manning entering his service in the same year, 1873. Mr. Roger resigned after two years, but in 1880 returned to the firm, retaining his position until 1893. In 1894 he was appointed postmaster by President Cleveland for the term of four years, and his efficient management of the office has won the praise of all classes. He has also held the office of excise commissioner, and he is a prominent worker in the Democratic organization of his locality. It is not often that a stranger can so quickly gain the confidence of an entire community, but Mr. Roger's character and abilities are of a sort to command esteem.

He was married, in 1882, to Miss Mary I. E. Ward, daughter of Alfred Ward, of Durham, England, and they have five children: Isabel, Janet, Marion, David and Margaret. Mr. Roger attends the Presbyterian Church, and is a member of Webatuck Lodge No. 480, F. & A. M. (in which he has been master for two years), and of Poughkeepsie Chapter; he also belongs to Millerton Lodge No. 383, I. O. O. F., and is now noble grand in that body.

CAMPBELL N. HICKS, a well-known business man of Red Hook, Dutchess county, and proprietor of a livery stable there, was born September 10, 1855, in the town of Stanford. His father, Eli Hicks, was a native of Clermont, Columbia county, married Miss Margaret A. Waters, of Binghamton, Broome county, and reared a family of nine children. The subject of our sketch received his education in Brooklyn, N. Y., and after completing his course learned the butcher's trade. He then engaged in business for himself at Red Hook, in partnership with George Cramer, to whom he sold his interest two and a half years later. Since that time he has conducted a stage and livery business, and holds the contract for carrying the U. S. mail.

On October 28, 1874, he was married to Miss Mary E. Hutton, a daughter of Jacob and Lydia Hutton, prominent residents of Red Hook. Two children were born of this union: Byron N., December 2, 1876, and Margaret B., June 9, 1882. Mr. Hicks takes an active part in local affairs, and has been overseer of the poor for one term, and town clerk for two terms, discharging his duties with the faithfulness which has characterized him in every line of effort. He is a member of the I. O. O. F., Christian Lodge No. 379, of Red Hook, in which he is past grand, and of Shiloh Encampment No. 68, holding the office of chief patriarch.

SAMUEL HOLMES BROWN, a prominent citizen of Poughkeepsie, and one of the leading members of the Dutchess County Bar, is a descendant of a well-known family which has been identified with this section for more than a century.

Noah Brown, his great-grandfather, who was of Scotch ancestry, had his early home at Johnstown, N. Y. He married Lois Mills, September 20, 1783, the two starting upon their united career with but little capital except their health, their strong common sense and industrious habits. Not long after their marriage they moved to Dutchess county and settled upon a tract of land at or near the Square, about two miles northwest of Amenia City, and there Mr. Brown conducted a farm, a hotel and a tannery. They prospered as they deserved, and in 1817 they purchased a fine farm two miles south of the site of the present village of Millerton, a part of what is known as the Edgar Clark farm. Mr. Brown's well-proved abilities were devoted mainly to his business affairs, and he never, in any sense, took a position which would call him from his family, yet he felt a keen interest in public affairs, and filled several local offices with credit to himself and satisfaction to the public. After the towns of Amenia and Northeast were divided, he was elected, April 1, 1823, to act as one of the first assessors of the latter. He served in the 6th Regular Dutchess County Militia, of Charlotte Precinct, under Col. Roswell Hopkins and Capt. Waters. His death occurred May 11, 1841, when he was seventy-eight years old, and that of his wife October 3, 1849, when she was aged eighty-six; their final resting place is in the family lot in Spencer's Corner burying yard, north of Millerton, N. Y. They had six children, whose names with dates of birth and death are here given: Noan M., June, 1784—June 22, 1822; Samuel, April 20, 1785—January 5, 1870; Sally, May 21, 1787—February 13, 1876; Betsey, October 28, 1791—May 19, 1888; George, February 16, 1794—October 18, 1878; Harriet, March 29, 1800—June 24, 1876.

Samuel Brown, our subject's grandfather was a man of far more than the average ability and foresight, and while conducting several farms carried on successfully a number of business enterprises, including a tannery. Among some of the farms owned by him is what is known as the "Halstead farm", near Millerton, the "David Eggleston farm", situated between Millerton and Boston Corners, the "Hopkins farm", situated between Millerton and Salisbury, and the "Rudd farm" at the head of Rudd pond. Although he was judiciously economical in his management of his private affairs, he was ready to respond liberally to any public need, and showed in many ways a hearty sympathy with the interests of his fellows. In 1828 he was one of the building committee to erect the "New Baptist church" at Spencer's Corner, which was dedicated the following year, and was used until 1866, when the congregation decided to establish a place of worship at Millerton. Samuel Brown's wife, Sally (Clark), whom he wedded February 20, 1813, was a daughter of Edgar Clark, a prosperous farmer near Millerton, who came from Lisbon, Conn., about the time of the Revolution. She died July 18, 1859, aged seventy-one years, five months, nine days. Their children were as follows: Mary, born February 20, 1815, died April 16, 1875; Milton, born July 22, 1816, now living; Milton, born September 26, 1818, died April 9, 1881; and Douglas Clark, born July 23, 1822, died March 19, 1871.

Milton Brown, our subject's father, became a successful agriculturist at the "Hopkins farm", already referred to. He, in appearance, favored the mother's side of the family. In looks he reminded one much of Hon. William M. Evarts, and there is no question in the mind of any one who knew him well that he was a man of marked ability and business courage and capacity. He was not only a farmer, but branched out into other enterprises. He had the full confidence of all who knew him, and his advice was sought by many. His careful methods brought him a competency for himself and family. For his first wife married Selina H. Wheeler, daughter of Milton Wheeler, a prosperous farmer. This marriage was blessed with one child, Mary E., who was born July 14, 1845. Selina H. died March 30, 1848. In September 14, 1864, Mary E. married William H. Hart, a dentist, who practiced his profession at that time at Millerton, but afterward moved to Hudson, N. Y., where he died March 30, 1868. She left her surviving one child, Clarence, who died July 29, 1877. On November 21, 1849, Milton Brown married Miss Phoebe Holmes, daughter of Leuben Holmes, a prosperous farmer of Mt. Pleasant, near Millerton, N. Y. They had one son, Samuel Holmes.

P. H. Brown

The subject of this sketch was born and reared on the "Hopkins farm", helped in the farm work and attended the local schools during his early boyhood. As he grew older he was given better educational advantages at Genesee Seminary, Cazenovia Seminary, the Troy Business College and the Albany State Normal School; but before entering the latter institution he clerked for a short period in a store at Millerton, and was employed as a bookkeeper in a wholesale flourmill at Waterford, N. Y. On leaving the Normal School, in 1876, he went to Newark, N. J., and taught for a year and a half in a business college, meantime preparing himself for the position of a court stenographer. That calling he followed successfully for some time; but in that and in all his other enterprises he was actuated by the hope of finally entering the legal profession. His father had always discouraged the idea, hoping that he would settle down on the old homestead. In 1881 Mr. Brown began the study of law with Hon. Milton A. Fowler, of Poughkeepsie, and September 14, 1883, he was duly admitted to the bar. He immediately established himself in practice at Poughkeepsie, with a branch office at Millerton, and he soon attained prominence in his chosen work, much important litigation—civil and criminal—passing through his hands.

Mr. Brown is an able business man, and has been engaged in several enterprises, notably the Millerton National Bank, the stock of which he was one of the first to subscribe for, and of whose board of directors he was a member. Later he was made a director of the Farmers' and Manufacturers' National Bank of Poughkeepsie. He was also one of the organizers of the Hallock & Duryee Fertilizer Co., of Mattituck, L. I., and of several other corporations. At his father's death, in 1881, he succeeded to the homestead, and he afterward acquired the "George R. Winchell farm" and the "John D. Kerley farm" adjoining. Until 1890 he was extensively engaged in raising live stock, and dairying; but he has since disposed of all his farms, and now gives his entire time to his profession.

On October 30, 1877, Mr. Brown married Clara Lefferts Duryee, daughter of John Wyckoff Duryee, and his wife, Elizabeth T. (Verity), who resided near Mattituck, L. I., and were formerly of New Utrecht, N. Y.; both descended from old families of Long Island, the Duryees being descendants of the famous Huguenot family who arrived in this country in 1675. For some time after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Brown lived at Newark, N. J., and on the homestead near Millerton; but in the fall of 1887, they, with Mr. Brown's mother, moved to Poughkeepsie, where they now reside. In politics, Mr. Brown is a Republican, and he has been a member of the board of supervisors of Dutchess county for several years. In 1893 he was the president of the Lincoln Republican League Club of Poughkeepsie. In 1894 he was the first choice of a large number of delegates to the Republican County Convention, for the office of District Attorney of his county. In the fall of 1896, the Republican party of the city of Poughkeepsie got into a bitter factional fight over local matter, and a strife between leaders. It was not only carried into primaries and conventions, but was also carried on up to and including election day. Mr. Brown devoted much time to this matter, and it is generally conceded that it was owing much to his efforts that the Republican city ticket was saved from defeat. He is also regarded as an able, instructive, interesting, and amusing political speaker, and he has done much for his party in that direction.

In the summer of 1896, in company with his wife, he spent his vacation in traveling extensively in Europe. His letters to the public press received much favorable comment, and showed him to be a keen observer and possessed of the rare faculty, as a writer, of being able to give a graphic idea of what he saw in a very few words—painting a picture with a very few lines. His genial manner, industry and strong common sense have surrounded him with many friends, clients and well wishers.

JAMES FINCH, an enterprising and successful merchant of Millerton, Dutchess county, has shown in his conquest of unfavorable circumstances in early life all those admirable qualities of courage and perseverance which mark the self-made business man.

Caleb Finch, grandfather of our subject, was descended from one of four brothers of the name, who came to America from England some time in the eighteenth century. He settled in the town of Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., and followed blacksmithing there during the rest of his life. He was the father of six children, all of whom lived to adult age, namely: John, Ebenezer, James, Betsey (Mrs. Amos Bryan), Alma (Mrs. Ambrose Gray), and Laura (Mrs. William Van Alstine).

James Finch, our subject's father, was born in the town of Ancram, Columbia county, on July 14, 1789, and after the death of their father, he and his brother, John, owned and farmed the old homestead together. Possessed of good natural ability, he held a prominent place in the community. He married Almira Card, who was born in Ancram on October 23, 1791, the daughter of Stephen Card, who was of English origin. Six children were born of this marriage, as follows: Betsey, September 27, 1812, married Eli Collins; Bryan, April 23, 1814, married Mary Thorne, daughter of Richard Thorne, and settled in Tompkins county, where he died, leaving three children; Caleb, November 13, 1816, located in Tompkins county, where he died in 1852; Sally, January 5, 1819, married Smith Stewart; Elisha, March 21, 1823, died at the age of fourteen; and James, our subject. The father of this family died in the latter part of 1827, and his widow married William Tanner. She died July 6, 1844.

The subject of our sketch was born at the old Finch homestead April 8, 1827, and attended the district schools at Pulver's Corners, receiving a good English education. He remained at home with his step-father until the age of twenty-two, being employed for one year, and then worked upon the farm of his brother-in-law; Eli Collins, for two years. In 1853 he went to Dryden, N. Y., and learned the details of the manufacture of fanning mills, working at the trade for two years and a half. Returning to Mr. Collins' farm, he worked there for a time, and later found employment in the Bryant Fanning Mill shop. In the fall of 1857 he began clerking, first for Herman W. Pulver, at Pulver's Corners, and then for Harris Jones, at Millerton, but his brother-in-law dying in 1861, he was engaged for one year looking after his sister's business interests. On March 28, 1863, he entered the general store of E. W. Simmons & Co., as clerk, the firm consisting of Mr. Simmons, J. M. Benedict and S. N. Jenks. He continued until 1877, when the firm failed, and as he had not drawn his wages for some time, he took the business in payment. In spite of this somewhat inauspicious beginning, he made a success of the venture, and has given the business a much larger scope than it formerly had, adding to the stock a large line of furniture. It is now one of the largest houses in its line in the northeastern part of the county. On Monday night, August 2, 1880, his store was broken open by three burglars, who bound and gagged Mr. Finch, and compelled him to go with them to his office and open his safe, from which they took about $1,300.00. This was an experience which but few men could undergo with the courage and "pluck" shown by Mr. Finch.

In politics he is a Republican, and has always taken a great interest in the success of his party. He has been town clerk for two terms, and is one of the most earnest advocates of improvement in local affairs.

VALENTINE RICKES, one of the leading mechanics of Dutchess county, now engaged in blacksmithing at Millbrook, town of Washington, was born November 3, 1836, Hegenheim, Germany, a son of Valentine, Sr., and Anna Mary (Carch) Rickes, both natives of Germany.

Valentine Rickes, Sr., was born in 1800 and spent his entire life in Germany, engaged in the hotel business, and also as owner of a bakery, when enjoying the privileges of a civilian; in times of trouble, however, he was a sharpshooter in the German army. He married Anna Mary Carch, one of the children of Christian Carch, a native of Germany, born about 1766. To Mr. and Mrs. Rickes, Sr., were born twelve children—ten boys and two girls—who grew to maturity. Four of the ten boys were college graduates, and three of the ten came to America. The father of this family died in 1867; the mother is still living.

Valentine Rickes, the subject proper this sketch, spent his boyhood in Germany, and until the age of fourteen attended the excellent public schools of that country. For two years he served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith trade, under Peter Schryver, learning all the details and mastering the art of making horse shoes in the finest style. Having completed his trade at the age of sixteen, he came to America, in company with his brother Frank, and settled in Connecticut, where for two years he followed his trade. In 1854 or 55, he removed to Mechanic, Dutchess county, and here for four years was heard the busy sound of his hammer and anvil. On February 7, 1858, he was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Butler (an account of whose ancestry will be found in the sketch of her brother, Edmond Butler), a native of County Waterford, Ireland, born May 25, 1841. At the age of twelve years she was brought to this country by her mother, who returned to Ireland and here died, leaving her little daughter Ellen in the care of her brother Edmond. After attending the public schools of the town of Washington for a couple of years, she cared for herself until her marriage with Mr. Rickes, to whom she has been a devoted helpmeet. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Rickes remained at Mechanic for a year, then for two years they resided at Rhinebeck, at the end of which time our subject temporarily laid aside the cares of business, and visited the old home in the Fatherland, where still resided his father, and several of his brothers and sisters. Truly a happy reunion after eleven years of absence. On his return from Germany, he and his wife again settled in Mechanic, remaining three years, then coming to Millbrook, where he followed his trade for four years.

At this time Mr. Rickes purchased 125 acres of fine land in the town of Unionvale, and for seventeen years carried on farming; wearying of this, he again returned to Millbrook, and for one year followed his trade, while his wife carried on the farm. They purchased a pleasant location in Millbrook, and erected a neat, Gothic house, also commodious and well-arranged carriage house, and are now enjoying life on the fruits of their early toil. Mr. Rickes still carries on his business with the assistance of two men. Mr. and Mrs. Rickes were born three children: (1) Edward, who for nine years has been in the employ of Swift & Co., at Kansas City, and is now their hog buyer; he married Miss Mamie Hopson, daughter of Dr. Hopson, of Kansas City. (2) Charles, who is now farming the old homestead in the town of Unionvale; he married Miss Mamie Cutler, of that town, and has one child—Valentine. (3) Anna Mary, the only daughter, who married Cassius M. Couch, of Poughquag, and has three children—Bessie, Edmond and Ellen Stack.

Mr. Rickes was the first man to open business in what is now Millbrook. He purchased the ground on which the Catholic Church and parsonage now stands, and also the ground on which is located the present Catholic cemetery. The ground was bought for $600 per acre. On this he erected a large blacksmith, wagon and paint shop, and also the parsonage which is now occupied by Rev. Father Burns. The lumber used in these buildings was hauled by team from Poughkeepsie, and there was but one other building on the present site of Millbrook. Mr. Rickes has ever been one of the active, energetic men of the community, and is highly respected for his many manly qualities. In politics he is a Republican, and he is a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

JOHAN CAMPBELL. The family name of the subject of this sketch was identified for many years with some of the leading interests of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, and has become associated with the qualities which win success. The first American ancestor came from Scotland at an early date, and enlisted and served in the Revolutionary war. Robert Campbell, the grandfather of our subject, was born in 1776, and settled in the town of Mt. Washington, Berkshire Co., Mass. He possessed excellent natural abilities and much public spirit, and became quite prominent in local affairs. He died in 1853; his wife, Huldah Noble, departed this life in 1841. They had eight children: Harriet, Stanton A., Anna (wife of Simion Pollard), Robert, Almira (wife of William Vosburgh), Huldah (wife of Gilbert Race), John, and Susan (wife of Jason Lamson).

John Campbell, Sr., our subject's father, was born at the old home in Mt. Washington, June 5, 1811, and his educational opportunities were limited to an irregular attendance at the schools of that time, as he was obliged to go to work at an early age. He was ambitious, however, and possessed more than ordinary ability and energy, and after a hard day's toil as a collier, or at chopping wood, he would spend his evenings in study. In this way he prepared himself for teaching, and in early manhood he followed this occupation successfully for a number of winters. In 1849 he became superintendent of the works of the Salisbury Iron Co., at Mt. Riga, Dutchess county, having acquired an interest in the business. He continued this work for nearly ten years, in the meantime securing the entire control of the stock, and in 1864 he sold the property for $42,500 to William H. Barnum, of Connecticut, who was chairman of the National Democratic Committee at the time of Cleveland's first election. In his later years Mr. Campbell engaged in manufacturing Salisbury pig iron, and farming. He was a man of remarkably keen perceptions and sound business judgment, and at his death, which occurred in 1866, his estate was inventoried at $250,000, although only $180,000 was realized. In his early years he was a Whig, later a Republican, but he was never active in party work. He was prominent, however, in many public movements which had no partisan bias, helping during the war to raise the quota of men from his locality. In 1862 he was elected supervisor of the town of Northeast, without opposition, having been nominated by both parties. A shrewd judge of human nature, he easily made friends, whom his sterling qualities of character retained. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and was not a strict sectarian, being broad and liberal in his views. He was married June 27, 1835, at Pine Plains, to Miss Eliza Van Dusen, a descendant of an old Holland-Dutch family, and a daughter of James N. Van Dusen, a farmer of Taghkanic, Columbia county. He had eight children, whose names, with dates of birth, are as follows: Sarah J., born July 1, 1836, died March 15, 1858; John, born February 1, 1838; James May 1, 1840; Wesley, June 20, 1842, died March 26, 1891; Eliza Ann, June 23, 1844, died February 15, 1877; Christina, March 27, 1846; Mary Ellen, April 21, 1849; and Henry D., March 18, 1851, died December 6, 1875.

CHARLES W. WRIGHT. Among the young and energetic business men of Dutchess county, none stands higher than the subject of this personal history, who is a well-known general merchant of Clinton Corners. His birth occurred in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, on March 1, 1866, and he belongs to an old and honored family of the county—his grandfather, Isaac Wright, having been born in the same town.

The father, James Harvey Wright, was born in that town in 1819, where he attended the district schools, and was also a student in the Jacob Willets school, in the town of Washington. In his native town he wedded Mary Ann Humphrey, a daughter of William D. Humphrey, and they became the parents of six children: John H.; Clara, wife of F. M. Talmadge, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Isaac, deceased; Charles W.; Ira; and Nettie, who died in infancy. The entire married life of the father has been passed upon his farm at Bangall, in the town of Stanford, for which he went greatly in debt, as on starting in life he had very little capital besides a pair of willing hands and a determination to make a success of his business undertakings. Since quite young he has been an active member of the Baptist Church, and is a sincere and earnest Christian. He has never taken any prominent part in political affairs, but does all in his power to promote the welfare of his town and county.

The elementary education of Charles W. Wright was such as the common schools of Bangall afforded, and he later became a student in Sackett's private school, in the town of Stanford. When his school days were over he entered upon a business career as clerk in the general store of Mr. Knickerbocker, of Bangall, with whom he remained four years after which he went to New York City, where he was employed for about two years in the butter and egg business. He then began business for himself, which he continued for four years. In the spring of 1892 he established his present store at Clinton Corners where he carries a full and complete assortment of general merchandise, and now secure a liberal patronage. His stock is well selected, and he devotes his entire time to his business interests, and is meeting with a well deserved success.

On September 5, 1889, in the town of Stanford, Mr. Wright was married to Miss Della Stewart, daughter of William Stewart of that town, and to them have been born three children: Harold and Edith, twin born August 22, 1890; and Ethel, born August 19, 1894. In his political views, M

Wright is a stalwart Democrat, and is now serving as postmaster in Clinton Corners, to which position he was appointed in the winter of 1892.

EDWARD ODELL, a well-known miller of Smithfield, Dutchess county, where he has engaged in business for over thirty years, was born March 21, 1819, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and belongs to a family that was long connected with the interests of that township. There his grandfather, John Odell, was also born, and worked at his trade of a hatter. In his family were six children, namely: William, John, Jacob, Samuel, Caroline and Betsey.

Samuel Odell, father of our subject, was also a native of the town of Washington, and a hatter by trade. His political support was given the Republican party. He married Permelia Marshall, of Salt Point, Dutchess county, and they became the parents of six children: Edward; Lewis, who was killed while gallantly serving in the Mexican war; William, of New Haven, Conn.; Bartlett, of Illinois; Sally Ann (deceased); and Elizabeth, who married John Dodge.

The school days of our subject were passed in the towns of Washington and Dover, and at an early age he learned the carpenter's trade with Samuel Tompkins in the latter township, which occupation he then followed for a time. For forty years he made his home at Perry's Corners, town of Northeast, but since 1870 has resided in Smithfield, at which time he purchased the grist and saw mill that he has since operated with good success. Although now seventy-six years of age, he has never worn glasses, and his eyesight seems better than it was at sixty. Ever fond of sport, he is still one of the best marksmen with the rifle in Dutchess county. His career has not been marked by startling incidents, but his life has been quietly and peacefully passed amidst the scenes of his youth, and he has gained the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact. Politically he is an adherent of the Republican party. At Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, Mr. Odell was married to Miss Mary Marquart, and they have two sons: John, of Smithfield, who married Ella Cookingham; and Frank, of Verbank, who married Lettie May Smith, and has one child, Ethel M. Odell.

JAMES V. MEAD, a well-known brick manufacturer of Low Point, Dutchess county, is one of the prominent self-made men of the locality, having begun his business career without a cent, and gained by his own efforts a fine fortune and limitless credit.

He is a native of the town of Cornwall, Orange Co., N. Y., where he first saw the light, May 12, 1832, and on both the paternal and maternal sides is of Dutch descent. Joseph Mead, his grandfather, was born in Holland, and Justice Mead, our subject's father, married Elizabeth Van Duser, whose father, Benjamin Van Duser, was of Holland stock. Justice Mead settled in Cornwall after his marriage, and followed the carpenter's trade, until his death at the age of forty, and he and his wife, who also died many years ago, were leading members of the Methodist Church there. In politics, he was a Democrat. Our subject was the youngest of six children: Benjamin is a gardener in Cayuga county, N. Y.; Elizabeth married Sylvenius Cury, of Orange county; Sarah married Frederick Burton, who was a machinist at Newburg, N. Y.; Justice is a farmer and brick manufacturer in Amenia; and Hiram died in childhood.

Mr. Mead made his entrance into business life at the early age of thirteen years, when he left his home in Cornwall to learn the details of the brick business at Haverstraw, N. Y. He proved himself so capable that, at twenty, he was placed in charge of a gang of men for the firm of Peck & Morris, and after two years in that position he became superintendent for Michael Archer, with whom he remained three years. He then went to Verplanck's Point, N. Y., as foreman for Mr. Reed, and later worked for a short time for Francis Timony. Returning to Cornwall, he engaged in boating for a year, and then became foreman for Mr. Chambers, at New Windsor, Orange county. About 1865, Mr. Mead leased a brick yard at Dutchess Junction, and in four years there he made $24,000. He sold his lease and purchased a farm near Fishkill, which he improved, building a fine residence and other structures. But farm life was too quiet for one of his active temperament, and he resumed the business of brick-making, leasing from Thomas Aldrich the yards at Low Point, which he bought ten years later. The property includes eighty-two acres, and the plant covers one acre. Mr. Mead turns out about 5,000,000 second-class brick per year, disposing of them mainly in New York City. His fortune is now estimated at $50,000, and his integrity and able management have won for him a high standing in business circles.

On August 4, 1858, Mr. Mead was united in marriage with his first wife, Miss Mary A. Flood, a native of Orange county, who died March 14, 1884, leaving six children: Henrietta married Mose Collier; Alvaretta is the wife of Jerome Walsh, a brick manufacturer; Harry C. is engaged in the same business at Low Point; James A. (the name given her at baptism), the third daughter, married Frank Collier; and Thomas A. and Sebastian are both engaged in brick manufacturing. In December, 1887, Mr. Mead formed a second matrimonial union, his present wife being Mary Knapp, a native of Putnam county. Three children were born of this marriage: Ralph, Mabel and James V. Mr. Mead has made a point of giving his children a strict business training. The family are members of the Methodist Church, and Mr. Mead takes a prominent part in all movements of public importance, giving his influence in political affairs to the Republican party.

RICHARD P. KETCHAM, prominent among the business men of Dutchess county for a quarter of a century, has been closely identified with the history of Dover Plains, while his name is inseparably connected with its financial records. The banking interests are well represented in him, for since 1884 he has been cashier of the Dover Plains National Bank. A man of keen discrimination and sound judgment, his excellent management has brought to the concern with which he is connected a high degree of success. He is a native of Dutchess county, born at Poughkeepsie in 1848.

Amos Platt Ketcham, his paternal grandfather, was born at Huntington, Long Island, where his early education and training were received, and in his younger years he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. On September 9, 1811, he married Miss Anna R. Platt, who was born in Huntington, November 26, 1793, and they became the parents of five children: Esther, Alonzo, Zophar P., Andrew J. and Rebecca.

Andrew J. Ketcham, the father of our subject, was born in Poughkeepsie in 1819. After his graduation he began his banking career by entering the Farmers and Manufacturers Bank of Poughkeepsie, and after serving there for some years as teller and bookkeeper he was called to Saugerties, Ulster Co., N. Y., where he organized the first bank in that place, called the Ulster Bank. After placing that institution on a sound financial basis, he started the Saugerties Bank in the same village, which is now a flourishing institution. In 1865 he left Saugerties and came to Dover Plains, N. Y., as cashier of the Dover Plains National Bank, where he served for twenty years. From this position he resigned in 1885, and moved to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., his native city. After his retirement from active work for one year he was called to the presidency of the Poughkeepsie Bank, in which capacity he served for two years, leaving the institution one of the soundest in the State. He is now living in retirement in the city of his birth and business successes. He was twice married, his first union being with Miss Sarah Anderson, daughter of Capt. N. L. Anderson, of Rondout, Ulster Co., N. Y., and to them were born six children: Andrew, Richard P., Annie, Golding, John and Gaston. The mother of these children died in 1874, and sometime afterward Mr. Ketcham married Miss Frances Cowles, of Stamford, Delaware Co., N. Y., and to them has been born a son, Charles, who, after his graduation from the River View Military Academy, entered the First National Bank of Poughkeepsie, where he is now one of its best bookkeepers.

Richard P. Ketcham, the subject proper of this review, was educated in the Claverac Military Academy, and after graduating from that institution became bookkeeper in the Importers and Traders Bank of New York City. In their employ he continued for some time, resigning in order to accept his present position with the Dover Plains National Bank. During his residence here he has attested his eminent and pronounced ability as a financier, and he is probably equally prominent in social life. In 1873 Mr. Ketcham married Mrs. Mary F. (Dutcher) Peters, widow of George H. Peter of Pleasant Valley, N. Y., daughter of Egbert and Maria Dutcher, of Dover Plains. One child graces this union, Grace Dutcher, who was born at Dover Plains, and was educated at Linden Hall, Poughkeepsie.

The Dutcher family is of Holland origin but for many generations its representative have resided in Dutchess county, where Christopher Dutcher, the great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Ketcham was born September 29, 1747. He acquired his education in the common schools of the county, and later devoted his time to agricultural pursuits, his farm comprising what is now the village of Dover Plains. He married Mary Belding, who was born in 1751, and they had seven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Christopher, 1768; Mary, 1769; Jane, 1770; Lawrence, 1773; Silas, 1776; Elizabeth, 1779; and Cornelius, 1789.

Lawrence Dutcher, the fourth child of that family, was the great-grandfather of Mrs. Ketcham. He was born on the old homestead at Dover Plains, and was educated in the schools of the township. He succeeded to the farm of his father, which he conducted until his death. He was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Nase, in the same place, and they had two children: Belding, born August 1, 1793; and Rachel, born in 1791. After the death of his wife he wedded Miss Mary Waldo, and they became the parents of eleven children, whose names and dates of birth were as follows: Rensselaer, 1795; Silas, 1797; T. Waldo, 1798; Cornelius N., 1802; Jerome, 1804; Elizabeth, 1806; Hannah, 1809; Jane, 1811; Armelia, 1813; Maria, 1815; and Charles, 1817.

Belding Dutcher, the grandfather of Mrs. Ketcham, obtained a good education in the common schools, and remained upon the family homestead during his entire life. He took quite a prominent part in military affairs, and became major in the State militia. He was united in wedlock with Miss Maria Hurd, and they were born five children: Egbert, Allen H., Elizabeth J., William H. and Thomas N.

Egbert Dutcher, the oldest of this family, was born at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, 1814, and was educated in the public schools of the neighborhood. After reaching manhood he became quite prominent in the Masonic order. He was united in marriage with Miss Maria Soule, daughter of Henry and Abigail Soule, farming people of the town of Dover. Mr. Dutcher continued to live upon a part of the old homestead, where were born his two children: Mary E., the wife of our subject; and Walter E., who was educated in the Cazenovia Seminary, at Cazenovia, Madison county, N. Y. He became connected with the banking firm of Opdyke & Co., of New York, where he held the position of bookkeeper for three years, or until his death in 1874.

NICHOLAS ALLEN, a prominent and influential citizen of the village of Hibernia, town of Clinton, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Washington, that county, June 14, 1840. His father, William N. Allen, was a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, born April 6, 1806, and died in 1885, and was the second in order of birth in the family of four children born to Nicholas and Mary (Carpenter) Allen. Grandfather Allen was also born in Pleasant Valley town, about 1750, and died in 1860; his wife died some three years before him. Many years of his life were passed in the operation of his farm, in his native town, and he also lived in the town of Washington on a farm which he owned there. He was one of the heroes of the Revolutionary war, and a consistent Christian, a member of the Presbyterian Church.

In the town of Pleasant Valley, William N. Allen was united in marriage with Miss Helen Ketcham, a daughter of Israel Ketcham, who was born September 5, 1802, and they became the parents of five children: Ann Maria; Sarah, wife of Charles Smith; Nicholas; James Henry and John W. After his marriage the father removed to a farm in the town of Washington, near Hibernia, which he continued to cultivate and improve during the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1885; his wife had passed away in 1866.

Nicholas Allen, whose name introduces this sketch, acquired a substantial and practical education in the schools of the town of Washington, one of his teachers being Judge Guernsey, and was well fitted for his subsequent career. After completing his school life, he assisted his father in the management of the farm, and while still living upon the old homestead his marriage with Mrs. Sarah (Ketcham) Justus took place, the ceremony being performed February 24, 1881, in the town of Clinton. She was born September 12, 1839, and is a daughter of Eli Ketcham, a miller by occupation, who first saw the light in the town of Pleasant Valley, March 14, 1809. He was married July 12, 1835, and two children were born to them. He died March 2, 1890, his wife on January 20, 1894. They were members of the Presbyterian Church at Pleasant Valley. Mrs. Allen's grandfather, Israel Ketcham, born about 1770, came from Long Island to Pleasant Valley, where his children were born. He married a Miss De Long, and died about 1844, his wife a few years later. By her first husband, Howard Justus, Mrs. Nicholas Allen had a daughter, Carrie, now the wife of Francis H. Harris, of New York.

For one year after his marriage Mr. Allen continued upon the old homestead, and then removed to Clinton Corners, where a year later he bought his present comfortable residence. For the past thirteen years he has engaged in farming in the town of Clinton, where he has served as pathmaster several terms, and is prominently connected with the upbuilding and development of the locality. The improvements upon his property are of a substantial character, and everything manifests the thrift and prosperity of an intelligent farmer. He and his wife are devoted and efficient members of the Reformed Church of Bloomvale, and his straight-forward, upright life has gained him many friends.

CLINTON W. CLAPP, a substantial citizen of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, was born in that thriving village May 28, 1831.

Tracing back the genealogy of the Clapp family, which name was at that time spelled Clapa, we find that Thomas, our subject's great-great-great-grandfather, was born in Weymouth, England, in 1597. He was a Puritan, and came to America July 24, 1633, settling at Dorchester, Mass. His eldest son, Thomas, was born March 15, 1639, at Weymouth. He settled at Dedham, Mass., and was the ancestor of all the Clapps of that locality. He married Abigail Clapp, and had three children: Increase, Samuel and Eleazer.

Samuel, the great-grandfather of Clinton W., married Elizabeth Fisher, and reared a family of six children: Samuel, David, Jonathan, Elizabeth, Abiel and Eleazer. The latter, who was the grandfather of our subject, married a widow, Mrs. Gushee, whose maiden name was Sylvia Forbes. They settled at Uxbridge, Mass., where their three children were born. These were Abiel, born in 1785, and who became a merchant, living first in Rhode Island and later in Maine; Forbes, born 1787, and was a soap and candle manufacturer in New York City; Benjamin, father of our subject. Eleazer Clapp, with a number of his relatives, took an active part in the Revolutionary war, and he was a member of the First Provincial Congress, in 1774.

Benjamin Clapp was reared to manhood in Massachusetts, and was the first person that put up and operated cotton machinery in Lowell, Mass.; but at the close of the war of 1812 he went to New York City and learned the trade of a cabinet maker. Later he went into the manufacture of looking-glasses, and even after his removal to Wappingers Falls, in 1827, continued to carry on his business in New York. At Wappingers Falls he built a sawmill, in which he made mahogany veneerings, operating this mill until 1844, although in the meantime he had sold out his business in the city. In the latter year he started the Frankendale cotton factory, which was in operation for many years. He owned the principal water power and privileges at Wappingers Falls, which in 1865 he sold, together with the factory, to the Garner Company, who are now conducting the extensive print works there, and are reputed to be worth eighty million dollars. After disposing of his property Mr. Clapp retired from active business. He was married November 1, 1821, to Ruth Houghton, who was born at Milton, Mass., December 12, 1794. Her father, Jason H. Houghton, was also a native of Milton, and followed farming on a place which belonged in the family for over 200 years. He had fourteen children, of which our subject's mother was the third in order of birth. The family came from England about 1632.

To Benjamin Clapp and his wife four children were born, of whom the following record is given: George H., born September 9, 1822, married Anna Beckwith, of Dutchess county a daughter of Col. Nathaniel Beckwith, of Rhinebeck; George H. died October 11, 1877, leaving two children, Edward and Emma; Jason F., born September 16, 1825, married Elizabeth Houghton, and died March 19, 1886. Three children were born to them, Ruth E., Arthur and Jason H. Warren B., born September 13, 1827, married Elizabeth Ayre, and two children were born to them, George H. and Warren A. He was a Baptist minister and died September 27, 1865.

Clinton W. Clapp, the subject of this sketch, and the youngest of the family, live at home until fourteen years of age, when he went to New York City, entering the University, and later the New York City Mechanical Institute, finishing his studies there when twenty-one years old. He then returned to Wappingers Falls, and worked at the carpenter's trade for seven years. Subsequently he turned his attention to fruit growing, but is now retired. Mr. Clapp has a great talent for mechanics, and is quite a genius in that line. He has built steamboats and various other things requiring a knowledge of mechanics, and in his delightful home was constructed a large pipe organ, which is run by a gas engine.

Clinton W. Clapp

On May 23, 1854, Mr. Clapp was married to Miss Catherine Samons, who was born in Orange county, of Dutch extraction. She bore him six children, and died January 13, 1871. These children were Benjamin F., born August 27, 1855; George M., born June 13, 1858; Warren H., born December 27, 1859, and died March 15, 1880; Charles L., born October 28, 1862; Walter C., April 30, 1865; Jason E., June 1, 1869. Mr. Clapp was again married October 15, 1871, taking for his wife Miss Nettie Ecroyd, a native of England and a daughter of Henry and Margaret Ecroyd. No children were born of this marriage. Mrs. Clapp departed this life April 17, 1889. On July 1, 1890, Mr. Clapp was married to Miss Charlotte A. Crosier, who was born in Wappingers Falls, March 21, 1862. Her parents were Isaac and Mary (Cole) Crosier, the former of English and the latter of Dutch descent. Two children have come to our subject and his present wife: Irving, born May 14, 1891; and Rhoda A., born May 13, 1894, died December 30, 1896.

Mr. Clapp was originally a Whig, becoming a Republican on the formation of that party. He has taken an active part in local politics, and has held a number of offices. He was twice elected assessor of the town of Wappingers; was for two years trustee of the village; for two terms was supervisor of the township, was justice of the peace for some time, and was recently been appointed again to the latter position. He has been president of the cemetery association, and is a director of the Trinnell Library Association. He is one of the leading citizens of Wappingers Falls, and a public-spirited man who always has the best interests of his community at heart. He is popular with all classes, and no family is more highly esteemed.

PEDRO SWEET, a leading merchant of Bull's Head, Dutchess county, and one of the well-known citizens of the town of Clinton, was born December 25, 1840, in Columbia county, where his ancestors on both sides had been residents for several generations.

Maj. Rowland Sweet, his great-grandfather, a farmer by occupation, was one of the early settlers there, and his grandfather, Luke Sweet, also a farmer, passed his life there. Jerome Sweet, our subject's father, grew to manhood under the care of his grandfather, and received an excellent education in the schools of Columbia county. He married Catherine Bathrick, whose grandfather, Jacob Bathrick, was a pioneer settler of that locality, and lived there until the good old age of 100 years. He married Hannah Kilmer, and their son, Peter, born in the town of Galatin, Columbia county, married Maria Marks, and moved to Dutchess county, settling upon a farm in the town of Milan. They had five children: Catherine, David (deceased), William (deceased), Elizabeth, now living in New York City, and Frances, who resides at Catskill. A few years after their marriage Jerome Sweet and his wife came to the town of Milan, where he bought a farm, which he cultivated until his death in 1884. He was unusually well-informed, a Democrat in politics, and he was a self-made man in the fullest sense of the term. Mrs. Sweet still survives him, and is living at Lafayetteville. They reared a family of eight children: Pedro, Clement, Franklin, Egbert, Emily, William, Hattie and Mary, all still living but the youngest.

The subject of our sketch was only a boy when his parents came to Dutchess county, and his education was obtained in the district schools of the town of Milan. His first employment was on a farm at $3.00 a month. After working Morgan L. Traver's farm, in the town of Clinton, for three years, he engaged in the butcher business at Clinton Hollow, and two years later he opened a general store there, which he conducted two years. He then went to Lafayette, and after clerking for Hiram Bentley for a year he bought him out, and continued the business three years. The year following he spent in Cokertown, in the same business, and then, on March 21, 1883, he opened his present store at Bull's Head, where he carries a full line of general merchandise and runs a wagon to supply his extensive country trade. He has been twice married, first to Miss Alice G. Green, daughter of Ambrose Green, of the town of Milan. Three children were born of this union: Annie (deceased), Melvin J. and Addie. Mr. Sweet's first wife died in 1879, and he has since married Miss Ella D. Denny, of the town of Milan, by whom he has a son named Grant Sweet.

A staunch Republican in political faith, Mr. Sweet has taken an active part in local matters wherever he has lived, and has been town clerk of Milan for two years, also a school trustee, and in the spring of 1894 he was elected supervisor of the town of Clinton, and is still serving as such, his term being from 1894 to 1898. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Warren Lodge No. 32, at Schultsville, having joined January 18, 1894.

WILLIAM HALL, a well-known resident of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, was born in 1823, in Unionvale, Dutchess county, where his family has been prominent for many years. Mr. Hall received his early education there, and in the town of Washington, later learning the carpenter's trade, which he followed for nearly forty-five years. He was also engaged at one time in mercantile business at Dover Furnace, and was postmaster there. A staunch Republican, he has always taken great interest in politics, and has held several town offices, including those of commissioner and collector. In 1862 he enlisted in Company I, 150th N. Y. V. I., under Col. J. H. Ketcham, and took part in many important engagements. His experience at Gettysburg was especially striking, as his division was instrumental in saving the day. Other battles were those of Dallas, Resaca, Culp's farm, and Peach Tree Creek, and he also joined in Sherman's march to the sea. He was taken ill, and spent some time in a hospital; but he served until the close of the war, and was mustered out at Washington, D. C. In 1852 Mr. Hall married Miss Priscilla Cutter, a lady of excellent mental gifts and great force of character. Her parents, Calvin and Keziah Cutter, were prominent residents of the town of Dover. Four children were born of this union: Helen A., who died at the age of thirty years; Harriet A., who died at twenty-five; Calvin, who resides in Dover Plains; and David, who died in infancy.

Calvin Hall, the only survivor of this family of children, was born in Dover Plains, Dutchess county, March 12, 1857, and was educated in the schools of that place. He lost the use of his lower limbs through sickness, but about two years ago he established himself in business in his native place, and has met with well-deserved success. He and his mother bought the home in which they now reside.

The Hall family was known in Rhode Island at an early date, and William Hall, our subject's grandfather, came from that State to Dutchess county to locate in Unionvale, where he purchased a farm and spent the greater portion of his life. He married Miss Vale, of that town, and reared a family of nine children. John, Israel, William and Isaac are mentioned below; Gedding and Benjamin never married. Katie was the wife of Mr. Duncan; Ruth married Mr. Deyo; and Abbie married Isaac Titus. John Hall was a farmer by occupation and married Miss Mary Waite, by whom he had children, as follows: Lavine (Mrs. Smith, Titus), Kittie (Mrs. Haws), Rebecca, Hele (Mrs. Joe Benson), Ruth, Abbie, Phœbe (who died at an early age), S. Emily, Pelina, Platt John J., and Fred D. Israel Hall was also a farmer. He married Miss Katie Albrow, and had children as follows: Leonard married (first) Miss Lawson, and (second) Miss Hurd; Draper married Miss Strong; Rutser married a lady of the same name; Richard married Miss Vale; Amy remained single; Mary became the wife of Mr. Townsend; Helen married (first) Mr. Bowdish, and (second) Mr. Northrup; Margaret never married, and Ann married Mr. Wheeler. A majority of those above are now living, at advanced ages and in different parts of the country. William Hall was a well-known teacher. He married Rebecca Waite, and had four children; Mary A. Joseph, George and William H.

Isaac Hall, our subject's father, was born at the old homestead at Unionvale in 1799 and was educated in that town, later engaged in farming. He married Miss Mary Rodgers, daughter of William Rodgers, a leading farmer of the same locality, and his wife Eleanor. Eleven children were born of this marriage, of whom one died in infancy. (1) Abbie married Gilbert Rozell, and had nine children: Thomas, Charles, DeWitt, Silas, Richard, Rhoda, Jane, Mary and Lillie. (2) Daniel E., a carpenter by trade, married Jane Duncan, and has four children: Mary, Samuel, Esac, Kate, and Jane. (3) Cordelia, born in 1818, never married. (4) William is the subject of this sketch. (5) Eleanor married Leonard Davis. (6) Angeline married David Tallman. (7) Lewis married Sarah Southwick. (8) Hannah married Isaac Palmer. (9) Joseph married Mary J. Duncan. (10) Phœbe married Robert Butts.

BENEZER H. STURGES, a wide-awake and thorough-going business man of Dover, is a representative of the hardware trade of that place, and is also a tinsmith. He married Miss Adaline S. Cook, whose birth occurred at Saugerties, Ulster Co., N. Y., August 1, 1845, and they have become the parents of four children: (1) Edward H., born in Danbury, Conn., February 11, 1866, secured his education in the schools of Dover, and is now employed as ticket agent on the New York Central & Hudson River railroad. He married Miss Jennie Benson, daughter of Joshua Benson, of Dover Plains, Dutchess county. (2) Theodore, born in Dover, November 24, 1867, was there educated and learned the tin and hardware business; is now located at West Cornwall, Conn., in the tin and hardware business. He married Miss Helen L. Cartwright, of that place, and they now have two children, Lawrence C. and Gertrude C. (3) Ida S., born at Dover, October 31, 1869, was the wife of Frank Hosmer, an employe of the Harlem Railroad Company at White Plains, and they had two children, Willie M., who died in infancy; and Earl. Mrs. Hosmer departed this life July 14, 1894. (4) Lillie E., born at Dover, March 31, 1872, the wife of Benjamin Hoag, son of Cornwell Hoag, of South Dover, Dutchess county, and now an employe in the condensed milk manufactory at Brooklyn, N. Y. They have one child, Jerome E.

Edward Cook, the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Sturges, was a native of Somersetshire, England, where he received a common-school education, and there devoted his entire life to agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Ann Jones, and to them were born twelve children: one, Emma, William, Sylvester, Ann, James, Henry, Walter, Winter, Jessie, Solomon and Benjamin.

Benjamin Cook, the last named, was the father of Mrs. Sturges. He was born in Somerset, England, April 11, 1810, and his educational privileges were such as the schools of his native country afforded. At the age of twenty years he crossed the Atlantic, locating first in Canada, but afterward made his home in Montgomery and Orange counties, N. Y., where he engaged in the butcher business and in farming. His political support was ever given the Republican party, but he never aspired to public office. After coming to this country he was united in marriage with Miss Susan O. Booth, who was born at Hamptonburg, Orange Co., N. Y., September 9, 1813. Her grandfather, William Booth, was a native of the same county, where he followed farming. He married Miss Lydia Booth, a cousin, and to them were born five children: George, who married a Miss Tuttle; Charles, who married Philadelphia Haines; Annie, who married David Haines; Mary, who remained single; and Sarah, who married William Conning. Charles Booth, the father of Mrs. Cook, was also born in Orange county, and was a farmer by occupation. He wedded Philadelphia Haines, a daughter of David and Temperance Haines, agriculturists of Orange county, and they became the parents of eight children: William, George and Temperance, who all died unmarried; Sarah, who first married a Mr. Vanansdoll, and after his death wedded a Mr. Doxie; Charles, who wedded Mary E. —; Jackson; Susan, who died in infancy; and Susan, the mother of Mrs. Sturges.

Eight children blessed the union of Benjamin Cook and Susan O. Booth: (1) George E., born July 15, 1835, at Flatlands, Long Island, where he secured his education, engaged in the drug business at Port Jervis, N. Y. He married Miss Catharine Bloomer, and they had six children—Willie, who died when a babe; Ida; James; Nellie, wife of John Little; George and Eva. (2) Susan, born on Long Island, January 11, 1837, was three times married, her first husband being Mr. Elliott, who survived his marriage only six months. By her second husband, a Mr. White, she had two children—Annie and Lula. After his death she married Mr. Connor, and to them was born a daughter—Catharine V. (3) James A., born on Long Island, September 20, 1838, was a hatter by trade; he wedded Miss Mary Morse, of Massachusetts, by whom he had one child—Helen L. (4) Mary Ellen, born at Hunter, Greene county, June 28, 1841, never married. (5) Harvey H., born at Hunter, Greene county, June 20, 1843, was never married; he engaged in the hat business at Danbury, Conn. (6) Adaline S., wife of our subject, is the next in order of birth. (7) William H., born May 23, 1848, at Saugerties, wedded Mary A. Parmer. (8) Annie E., born October 26, 1850, at Saugerties, first married Edward H. Abbott, and after his death wedded Seth Sturges.

WILLIAM J. DEDRICK, a well-known and highly respected resident of Amenia Union, Dutchess county, was born at Cossackie, Greene Co., N. Y., February 20, 1814, and is a son of John F. Dedrck, a native of the same county, while the birth of his paternal grandfather occurred in Holland. The father prepared for the ministry of the Reformed Dutch Church, of which he was a member, but, on account of an impediment in his speech, never engaged in preaching. He conducted a book store at Cossackie throughout the greater part of his life. In politics he was a Federalist. He married Fannie Judson, whose death occurred November 7, 1831, at the age of forty-six years, and he did not long survive her, dying August 22, 1832, at the age of fifty-two years. In their family were seven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: F. C., May 14, 1808; Jane A., October 25, 1809; Catherine, September 27, 1811; William J., February 20, 1814; T. S., March 6, 1818; Harriet, April 1, 1820; and J. F., November 28, 1827.

At the age of twenty years our subject left Cossackie, going to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he began the study of dentistry with his brother-in-law, Dr. Buck, and continued to follow that profession until 1865, since which time he has engaged in handling pictures and frames. It was in 1841 that he removed to Amenia Union, where he has since resided.

At Cornwall, Conn., in February, 1848, Mr. Dedrck was united in marriage with Miss Mariette Bonney, daughter of Stephen and Anna (Stone) Bonney. They have no children of their own, but adopted a daughter, Rosa Loper, who died in 1867, at the age of nineteen years.

Since the time that Horace Greeley ran for the Presidency, Mr. Dedrck has been a correspondent of the Amenia Times. He was first a Whig in politics, electioneering in the William H. Harrison campaign for three months, and since the organization of the Republican party has been one of its most earnest advocates, taking a prominent part in political affairs. On September 6, 1856, he received license as local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which service he has since engaged, and is the oldest living member of the Church of that denomination at Amenia Union. In all the walks of life he takes his guide the precepts of the scriptures, and foremost in any movement for the religious advancement of the community. He was the originator and a prominent helper of the Amenia Union Lyceum during the eleven years of its existence, and for twenty-seven successive years he has been elected superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school.

JONATHAN DICKINSON was born in Litchfield, Colnshire, England, and educated in Yorkshire, from which county he came at an early age to the United States, and for a number of years lived in Indiana, enduring all the rigors of pioneer life.

Leaving Indiana, Mr. Dickinson removed to New York City and became a commercial traveler for English hardware, of which line of business he made a success, and followed for twelve years. In 1863 he took up his abode in Norfolk, Va., and was extensively engaged in furnishing the government with hardware, machinery, belting, building material, etc., by contract. At the close of the war he moved to Newark, N. J., where he carried on large manufacturing interests until the latter part of 1875, when he embarked in the real-estate business in Stanfordville, Dutchess Co., N. Y. In 1877 he came to Poughkeepsie, where he has continued to deal in real estate to the present day.

Notwithstanding the fact that the city and county have experienced some exceedingly pressing periods, Mr. Dickinson, by close application, continued to maintain such a steady business that he felt himself called upon to locate where he now is—in the central portion of the city, and on the main street, where it would be easily accessible to his numerous patrons. He has successfully negotiated some of the largest transactions in real estate that have taken place for a number of years in Poughkeepsie. Mr. Dickinson believes that in a city of that size a man cannot deal in real estate, fire and life insurance, etc., and not have a decided success of each; consequently he as made the sale and exchange of real estate his specialty, to which fact his success in that line is probably due. [The foregoing is taken from the Souvenir Edition of The Eagle, issued in 1889.]

Jonathan Dickinson.

In 1856, in Westbury, L. I., Mr. Dickinson was united in marriage with Miss Anna Willis Smith, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Willis) Smith, one of the oldest families on Long Island. Thomas Willis, her grandfather, was a staunch Quaker, and at the division of the lands between the Licksite and Regular Church, he was disowned by the body following Elias Hicks at Jericho, the home of Elias Hicks, and T. Willis, a minister, for over thirty years drove twice each week past the Jericho meeting-house, three miles farther to the Westbury meeting-house of Orthodox Friends, to worship. Thomas Willis was born and died on the farm that was bequeathed to his predecessors by the British Government. The English soldiers occupied the house during the Revolution, allowing the Dickinson family a few rooms, when they occupied Long Island.

The Dickinson family originated in Yorkshire, England, and were all Quakers from the middle of the seventeenth century. At the rise of Quakerism in the time of George Fox, John Dickinson came to America, and for a time preached, traveling from North Carolina to New England, whence he started to return to England, but the vessel he was on was lost, and he was never heard from again. The old Dickinson homestead in Yorkshire, England (still standing) is built of stone, and over the door is a plate bearing the family name "John Dickinson, 1736." The house is now occupied by Simeon Dickinson, a cousin of Mr. Dickinson. The grandfather of our subject lived and died in England, in the same house wherein he was born; he was a weaver by trade.

Jonathan Dickinson, father of our subject, was by occupation a merchant, in his native England, and married Alice Hunt, a lady of means and social standing in Lincolnshire, England. He died in 1840, at the age of fifty-three years, and after his death the widowed mother came to America, where she died in Indiana, in 1863, aged sixty-five years. She had thirteen children, of whom eight grew to maturity, and all came to America, our subject being the only one living in the East.

To Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson have been born two children: Mary Alice, residing in Poughkeepsie, and Jonathan, Jr., a graduate of Haverford College, and is B. A. and M. A., now teaching in Oakwood Seminary, Union Springs, New York.

MILO FOLLETT WINCHESTER, one of the self-made men and influential citizens of Amenia, Dutchess county, commenced to "paddle his own canoe" at an early age, and is now a well-to-do and successful merchant, whose property has been accumulated by his own perseverance and untiring labors.

Mr. Winchester was born in the town of Amenia, October 1, 1823, and is a grandson of Amariah Winchester, whose birth occurred at New London, Conn., February 13, 1753. The father of the latter was a native of Brookline, Mass. The boyhood and youth of the grandfather were passed at New London, where he learned the hatter's trade, and on reaching man's estate he was married at Kent, Conn., to Mary Follett, who was born December 4, 1759, and died June 9, 1832. In their family were seven children, all now deceased: Henry, Milo, David, Mary, Lucy, Myra and Betsy. During the Revolutionary war the grandfather was a faithful soldier of the Continental army. It was in 1781 that he came to Dutchess county and purchased a farm at Hitchcocks Corners, in the town of Amenia, where his death occurred March 26, 1842. He engaged in the hatter's business until 1827, in connection with which he also carried on farming, and was one of the prominent men of the community.

Milo Winchester, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Amenia, November 30, 1788, and with his father learned the hatter's trade. On January 24, 1810, he was married to Betsey Pray, who was born October 7, 1791, and died January 13, 1872. In their family were five children, namely: Asa H., born October 26, 1810, died May 29, 1819; Julia M., born August 19, 1813, married Charles Wattles; Joanna, born June 21, 1816, married Seeley Brown, and died December 28, 1866; Eliza, born December 23, 1819, married Amariah Hitchcock on December 26, 1840, and died April 27, 1892; Abby, born December 22, 1821, first wedded L. P. Lockwood, and after his death Sidney Thompson, and died January 19, 1858; and Milo F., of this sketch, is the youngest. In 1830 the father removed to New York City, where he engaged in the grocery business until 1834, at which time he returned to Amenia Union, and bought a hotel, where he passed the remainder of his life, dying February 5, 1861. Fraternally, he was connected with the Masonic Order at Amenia Union, and in politics was first a Whig and later a Republican.

The boyhood and youth of Milo Follett Winchester were principally passed at Amenia Union, where he attended the district schools, and later pursued his studies in a select school on Seventh street, in New York City. He began his business life as a clerk in a store at Great Barrington, Mass., was next with Bowne & Trowbridge, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., after which he clerked at Amenia Union, and subsequently filled similar positions at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and at Kent, Conn. In April, 1847, he purchased the store of Judah Swift, at South Amenia, which he has since successfully conducted, and has also efficiently served as postmaster since 1849. In the town of Washington, Dutchess county, on October 13, 1847, Mr. Winchester was married to Miss Mary T. Nase, daughter of Henry I. Nase, of Amenia, and to them were born four children: Martha, who died in infancy; Henry Nase, who married Frances Sleight, a granddaughter of Peter R. Sleight (a prominent man of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county), and they have two children—Milo F. and Henry F.; Frank, who died at the age of nine; and Sydney Thompson, who died at the age of twenty-eight.

In politics Mr. Winchester is identified with the Republican party, giving his influence and vote to secure the passage of its measures and the election of its candidates, and socially holds membership in Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M. He has won the respect and confidence of all with whom he has been associated, either in business or in private life, and he is justly entitled to a position among the foremost men of Dutchess county. From 1854 until 1892 he capably served as justice of the peace, and for several terms has been supervisor of his town.

GEORGE STEVENSON, a well-known citizen of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, was born in County Armagh, Ireland, February 16, 1839.

John Stevenson, the father of our subject, was born near Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1798. He learned the business of making linen cloth which he followed in his native land for many years. He was married to Elizabeth Duncan who was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1800. Soon after his marriage, Mr. Stevenson went to Ireland, where he carried on his business and where his family of children were born. Those now living are: Jane, Thomas, John Mary, Sarah, Rachael, Margaret and George. John is employed in the print works in Wappingers Falls, and Thomas is a clerk in a store in the same place. On May 12, 1848, the father came to America, the family following him one year later. He settled in Wappingers Falls, and found employment in the cotton mills there. His death took place in 1868 and that of his wife in 1862. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, and in his political views Mr. Stevenson was in sympathy with the Republican party.

The subject of this sketch was but seven years old when his parents came to this country, and his entire life since that time has been spent at Wappingers Falls. He learned the trades of tinner and plumber when a young man, and, with the exception of five years when he was engaged in the grocery business, has carried on business in that line. Of late years he has added hardware of all kinds to his other departments, and has an extensive trade in the various implements and accessories used by plumbers, tinner and builders. He is a man of fine business ability, and has been successful in his enterprises. He is progressive in his ideas, and is a public-spirited citizen who stands high in the estimation of all who know him. He is a strong Republican.

In 1866 Mr. Stevenson was married to Sarah J. Barlow, a sister of James R. Barlow, whose sketch will be found elsewhere. They have two children, John and Fred.

GEORGE VINCENT, a leading carpenter of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, was there born on October 3, 1859, and since laying aside his school books has always worked at his trade, in which he is quite proficient. Socially, he is connected with the Knights of Labor. He married Addie Vincent, a first cousin, who was born in Dover, in 1862, and they have become the parents of five children: Angie, born December 16, 1880; Joseph, born December 6, 1882; William, born June 2

1888; George, born November 2, 1891; and Naomi, born February 2, 1894.

Allen Vincent, the great-grandfather of both our subject and his wife, was born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and was there educated in the common schools, and followed farming on attaining man's estate. In his family were three children: Jonathan, the grandfather; Ann, who became the wife of Leonard Carey; and Leonard, who married Ann Carey.

Jonathan Vincent was also born, reared and educated in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and followed the occupation of farming. He was married to Miss Martha Duncan, by whom he had seven children.

(1) George, the eldest son in the Vincent family, was born in Dover, and followed the occupation of shoemaking. He first married Miss Amanda Cooley, by whom he had one daughter—Mary. For his second wife he chose Malissa Sterey, and they had four children, but all died in infancy. His third wife bore the maiden name of Miss Caroline Sloom, and to them was born a daughter—Georgiana.

(2) William, the father of our subject, was the next. His birth occurred on Chestnut Ridge, and in the common schools of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, he acquired his education. He learned the shoemaker's trade, at which he worked for twenty years, but in later life he devoted his time to agricultural pursuits. He was a strong Republican in politics, but cared nothing for political referment. As a helpmeet on life's journey he chose Miss Martha Eggleston, daughter of David and Martha (Burhance) Eggleston, farming people of Dover Plains. They became the parents of six children, of whom our subject is the eldest. David J. died at the age of ten years. Jennie, born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, August 29, 1868, is the wife of John Hawley, a farmer of that town, and they have three children—Claude, Edgar and Lewis. Leon L. died at the age of twenty-six years. Hattie, born in Dover, Dutchess county, April 14, 1874, married William Humeston, a carpenter of Dover, and they have had three children—Jeffrey and two others, all of whom died in infancy. Ruth G., born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, March 1, 1877, is the wife of Fred De Garmo, a carpenter of Dover, by whom she has one child, Anna L. Previous to her marriage with the father of our subject, Mrs. Vincent was the wife of Charles Coates, a brakeman on the Harlem railroad, and to them were born two children: William, who died at the age of seventeen years; and Emma, who married Edwin Carey, and has four children—Charles, Eva, Ernest and Millard.

(3) Allen, the father of Mrs. George Vincent, is the third of the family. Like his brother, he also was born, educated, and followed farming in the town of Dover. On reaching manhood he was married to Miss Mary Stage, daughter of David and Mary A. (Colby) Stage, agriculturists of the town of Dover. Six children were born to them, as follows: Ida is the wife of John H. Ensign, and they have one child, John O. Addie, the wife of our subject, is next in order of birth. Martha married William Brown, a farmer in the town of Dover, and they have two children, Allen and Frank. Augusta is the wife of Fred Wilcox, a farmer of Dover. Daisy is at home. Mary is the wife of Martin Wilcox, a farmer of Dover, and has three children, William, Julia and John.

(4) Isaac, the fourth son of Jonathan and Martha (Duncan) Vincent, was born in the town of Dover, where, on reaching manhood, he engaged in farming. He first married Miss Jane A. Beers, by whom he had six children, only two of whom—Stephen and Hattie—lived, but Stephen also is now deceased. His second wife bore the maiden name of Imogene Butts.

(5) Edgar, the fifth son, never married.

(6) Eliza was twice married, her first union being with Harvey Wheeler, a farmer of Dover, and to them were born four children: Mary, who became the wife of Nicholas Edmonds; Phœbe, who remained single; William, who married Mary Sheldon; and Elizabeth, who married George Brown. After the death of her first husband Mrs. Wheeler became the wife of William Colby, and they had four children: Loretta, who married Frank Talladay; George A.; Katie, who married Peter Chase; and Myron, who died at the age of twenty-five years.

(7) Amanda was united in marriage with Oscar Wilcox, a laborer of Dover, and they had a family of eleven children: Lewis, who married Lydia Clarkson; Justina, who married Oscar Fiero; Mary, who wedded Arthur Sommers; Martin, who married Mary Vincent; Nettie, who married George Tompkins; Lydia, who married William Forbes; Dora, who married Earl Yale; Fred, who married Augusta Vincent; Oscar, who remained single; and Nellie and Amanda, who died in infancy.

J EDGAR MOITH, M. D., of Fishkill, Dutchess county, has a record as a practitioner which does him honor, and has gained for him a reputation as one of the most talented and successful members of the medical fraternity in his section. He is a native of Fishkill, where he was born September 22, 1855, and is of an excellent German family.

His father, August T. Moith, was born in the Fatherland, at Wiesbaden, Prussia, and came to America when a young man, locating at Fishkill without delay, and engaging in the drug business in a small way, in partnership with Cornelius Van Vliet. Two years later the firm was dissolved, Mr. Moith becoming sole proprietor, and he continued the business alone until his death, which occurred November 15, 1885. For some time he and Mr. Mapes were the only druggists between Fishkill village and the river. Mr. Moith had acquired a knowledge of chemistry and surgery in his native land, and being naturally of a scientific turn of mind, he made many experiments, some of them producing valuable results. He invented a process for making sponges elastic for beds, cushions, etc., and secured a patent, but it was literally stolen from him, and the fortune ($100,000) derived from the idea went to others. Another illustration of his skill was given in his analysis of a sample of oil obtained from a swamp near Fishkill. He proved that the oil was not in a crude state, but was doubtless a portion of the contents of a barrel of refined oil which had been emptied into the swamp in furtherance of a scheme to sell the property at a high figure. He married Miss Caroline Wade, a native of Blooming Grove, now known as Washingtonville, Orange Co., N. Y. She was a daughter of Colvin and Malinda (Moore) Wade, who were probably of English origin. Ten children were born of this union, our subject being the eldest. (2) Theodore is now deputy sheriff at Fishkill; (3) Ferdinand is a dentist at the same place; (4) Bertha married Charles Schlagel, a druggist in New York City; (5) Emma is a student in the College of Pharmacy in New York; (6) Ivanhoe is a machinist at St. Louis; (7) Lenna died at the age of nine years; (8) Blanche married Jacob Schlagel, a mechanical designer in New York, and a brother of her sister Bertha's husband; the two last children died in infancy.

Dr. Moith's boyhood was spent in Fishkill and as a clerk for his father he began at an early age to gather information concerning drugs which has been of great practical value to him. Greek and Latin were learned under the tuition of J. Hervey Cook, of Fishkill. In 1876 he began a course of professional study at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, and completed it in 1879, receiving the degree of M. D. His class contained a number of men who have achieved prominence in the profession, and Dr. Moith's standing among them is shown by the fact that he gained one of the few coveted positions open to graduates for practical experience, being appointed assistant physician of the out-door department of Bellevue Hospital. The knowledge there gained could hardly be equalled in many years of ordinary practice. In March 1879, he returned to Fishkill and engaged in professional work, and his success has been most gratifying. He has had 913 accouchements, twenty-eight cases of twins and two of triplets. He is president of medical staff of General Hospital, town of Fishkill. At present he is medical examiner of a number of life-insurance companies, including the Northwestern, the Mutual Reserve, National Life Insurance Company, Vermont, the Union Central, the Industrial Benefit, and the Metropolitan. Since 1894 he has been health officer of Fishkill Landing, and he is also physician to the order of Foresters, all these duties in addition to the claims of his private practice making him one of the busiest of men. From 1883 to 1886, he held the office of coroner but although he is a staunch Republican and influential, he is not a politician or an office seeker. Financially, the Doctor ranks among the substantial citizens of the town, and owns nine houses with other valuable property. He is a stockholder of the First National Bank, Matteawan, N. Y. He is a friend of public improvements, and can always be depended upon to assist a worthy cause. On September 22, 1880, the Doctor was married to Miss Grace E. Collins, daughter of Gilbert and Susan Collins, of Carthage Landing, and a descendant of an old Dutchess county family. No children blessed this union. Socially, Dr. Moith is a Freemason, and he is a

J. E. North M. D.

an honorary member of the Tompkins Hose Co., in which for five years he served as an active member.

CYRUS PERKINS, a resident of the town of Unionvale, is a well-known business man of Dutchess county, where he follows farming, and also the trade of a mason. He is an honored and representative citizen of the community, public-spirited and enterprising, and has the high regard of his fellow-men. He married Miss Sarah Barmore, who was born in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, in 1847, and there obtained her education in the public schools. They have a son, John C., who was born in 1881.

Henry Barmore, the grandfather of Mrs. Perkins, was a native of Westchester county, N. Y. By his marriage with Bethany Carter, he had thirteen children: Clark C., Bigail, Stephen, Anor, Lydia, Annie, Susan, Henry, Philip, Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth and James.

Clark Barmore was also born in Westchester county, and was united in marriage with Miss Mary C. Alley, daughter of James Alley. Their family consisted of nine children: Annebe, who married Cromoline Patterson; Edward, who married Lucy Wanzer; Stephen, who died unmarried; Caroline, who married Andrew Wanzer; Eliza M., who died unmarried; Sarah, wife of Cyrus Perkins, whose name introduces this sketch; John, who married Josephine Phillips; Charles, who died unmarried; and Mary Adelia, who became the wife of Gilbert Downing.

GARRET DU BOIS, now living in the village of Fishkill, Dutchess county, is a worthy representative of a family who left France and Holland during religious persecution, and sought homes here in the midst of the wilderness, where they would have to encounter all dangers and privations incident to life in a new country, inhabited only by the savage men and wild animals. This they did in order that they might worship God as their conscience dictated. The founder of the family in the New World was Jacques Du Bois, who was born in Leyden, Holland, and married Miss Ferronne Bentyn, of the same place. They reared a family of eight children: Marie (1), Jacques, Marie (2), Jean, Anne, Jehan, Pierre and Christian.

Pierre Du Bois came with the family to America in 1675, and located in Wiltwyck, Ulster Co., N. Y., but grew to manhood in Kingston, that county, where he married Jannetje Burhans, October 12, 1697. In 1707 they came to Dutchess county, locating in the town of Fishkill, about three and a half miles east of the village of that name. Here he secured a tract of land, and lived with his family. His eldest son was born at Kingston, but the births of the others all occurred in Dutchess county. They were as follows: Petronella (1), Johannes (1), Jacobus, Christiaan, Jonathan, Peter, Abraham, Johannes (2), Helena, Elizabeth and Petronella (2). The fourth child, Christiaan Du Bois, married Nelltje Van Vliet, and they became the parents of three children: Jannetje, Elizabeth and Christiaan. The last named was born June 13, 1746, and was married in 1768 to Helena Van Voorhis, by whom he had these children: Coert, Henry, Abraham, Garret, John, Elizabeth, Catherine and Cornelius.

Garret Du Bois, the fourth son, was the grandfather of our subject. He married Hannah Cooper, and located upon a farm near Johnsville, now in the town of East Fishkill, where they reared their family of three children: Maria, who married Peter T. Montfort, father of Peter V. W. Montfort, of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county; Eliza, who married Peter Fowler, a farmer of Orange county, N. Y., and Charles L.

Charles L. Du Bois was born in 1799, on the home farm in the town of East Fishkill, where he grew to manhood, and married Catherine Hasbrouck, whose birth occurred in the same town in 1800. Her father, Tunis Hasbrouck, belonged to the same family as those of the name in Ulster county, N. Y. Upon their marriage they lived upon the farm near Johnsville, where were born their four children: Jane E., who married Augustus Bartow, now a resident of Hackensack, N. J.; Mary, deceased wife of Isaac Sherwood, a farmer of the town of Fishkill; Garret, of this review, and Hasbrouck, a minister of a Reformed Dutch Church in New York City. Throughout life the father carried on farming, and died in January, 1878; the mother departed this life in 1880. Both were sincere members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and he was a Republican in politics.

Upon the home farm Garret Du Bois was born, September 27, 1828, and during his boyhood attended the district schools in the neighborhood. He was, later, a student at Andover, Mass., and completed his education at College Hill, in Poughkeepsie. In September, 1860, he was united in marriage with Mary Ida Van Wyck, who was born in the village of Fishkill, where the birth of her father, John C. Van Wyck, also occurred. He was a son of Cornelius Van Wyck, and a farmer and merchant by occupation. Upon their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Du Bois located upon their present farm, and there their three children were born: Charles, a farmer, who wedded Ethel Moore, of New York City; John V. W., now engaged in business in New York City; and Kate W. The wife and mother was called to her final rest May 28, 1873.

Mr. Du Bois owns a valuable farm of 142 acres, a part of which is devoted to fruit raising, and he continued its cultivation and improvement until the fall of 1893, since which time he has lived a quiet, retired life in the village of Fishkill. The family, which is one of prominence in the community, are members of the Reformed Church, of which our subject is serving as elder. His political support is unswervingly given the Republican party. He holds an enviable position in the esteem of his fellow-citizens, to which he is justly entitled, for his pure and honorable life is above reproach.

ORLIN B. ABEL. Jacob Abel, grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, where he passed his days in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Margaret Uhl, by whom he had three children: William W., John M. and Mary.

William W. Abel, father of our subject, was born March 1, 1814, in the town of Unionvale, and during his boyhood attended the Nine Partners School, after which he engaged in teaching for a time. Later he followed agricultural pursuits exclusively, becoming one of the most extensive farmers in his town. He took quite an active interest in political matters, always voting with the Whig or Republican party, and held a number of township offices, including those of supervisor, justice of the peace and revenue collector. He wedded Miss Mary Jane Austin, daughter of Beriah and Sarah (Waite) Austin, and four children were born to them: Orlin B., Dwight, H. Clay and one whose name is not given. Of these, Dwight is fully spoken of elsewhere; H. Clay was born in the town of Unionvale, and received a good common-school education after which he followed the profession of teaching. He is now engaged in mercantile business at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county. Socially, he affiliates with the F. & A. M. He married Miss Maggie Traver, by whom he had two children: William C. and Melburn T., and after her death he wedded Miss Mary Manning.

Orlin B. Abel was born in the town of Unionvale, in 1845, was educated in the schools of Fayette, Iowa, taught school several terms, and is now carrying on farming in Unionvale. In politics he is a Republican, and has held some minor township offices. He was united in marriage December 27, 1865, with Miss Mary Alice Vincent, daughter of Jonathan G. Vincent, of the town of Unionvale, and to them were born two children: Ellanita L., wife of Oscar Shaffer (they have one son—Harold F.), and Orlin Claude Lewis

JAMES HERRICK, a well-known stock dealer and agriculturist, residing near Lafayetteville, Dutchess county, was born August 21, 1832, in the town of Milan, where his family has long held a prominent place in local affairs.

The first American ancestor came at an early period from England, settling in New England, and our subject's great-grandfather Ephraim Herrick, was born in Massachusetts but settled in Dutchess county on arriving at manhood. His son, Ephraim Herrick (2), our subject's grandfather, was born in America and became a prominent farmer of the town of Milan. He married Anna Dixon, and the son, Ephraim Herrick (3), our subject's father was born September 28, 1788. He settled upon a farm near his birthplace, and married Phoebe Albertson, daughter of John Albertson, a leading farmer of Hyde Park, and a descendant of an old Holland-Dutch family. They had eight children: (1) John A., a farmer in the town of Pine Plains, married Margaret Sherwood. (2) William, a farmer of Pleasant Valley, married (first) Elizabeth Brown, and after her decease wedded Mary Harris. (3) Walter, a prominent physician, married Helen Sherwood, and died January 13, 1895, aged seventy-four years. (4) Gurdon B., who was a farmer in the town of Milan, married (first) Fannie Bentley, and after her death wedded Hulda Cornelius, also now deceased; he died April 28, 1894, aged seventy-one years. (5) James, our subject, will be fully spoken of farther on. (6) Elizabeth married Isaac Sherwood, and she is now a widow. (7) Susan died in infancy. (8) Caroline married Henry Butts, and is now a widow. The mother of his family died in 1835, and for his second wife Ephraim Herrick (3) married, October 2, 1840, Mrs. Susan Ann Andrews, of Kinderhook, Columbia county, and they had four children: (1) George, now of Danbury, Conn., married Kate Taylor. (2) Anna, wife of Frederick Taylor, of Danbury, Conn. (3) Edward, farmer of Bull Head, N. Y., married Emma Bentley. (4) Ephraim, of Rhinecliff-on-Hudson, married Henrietta Hermance. The mother of this family died in 1895, aged ninety years. The father passed away in 1868; during the war of 1812 he was one of the soldiers stationed at Brooklyn Navy Yard.

The subject of our sketch passed his boyhood at the homestead, and was educated in the district schools of that neighborhood and at Rhinebeck Seminary. On March 6, 1859, he married his first wife, Miss Jennette Cookingham, a descendant of one of the prominent families of the town of Milan, who died June 1, 1860, leaving one daughter, Mary Ida, who was married December 31, 1896, to Gurdon Tackett, a farmer of the town of Rhinebeck; our subject's second wife was Josephine Hapeman, a daughter of Andrew Hapeman, and granddaughter of John Hapeman, both in their day prominent farmers of the town of Milan. Her mother was Catherine Alendorf, a native of the same town, and a daughter of Henry Alendorf, who was born in the town of Red Hook. The Hapeman family is of German extraction, while the Alendorfs are of Holland stock. Mrs. Herrick's father died in the town of Milan, October 9, 1860, but her mother is still living. They had nine daughters: Julia, who married Alfred Coon, of Catskill Station, N. Y.; Martha, the wife of Robert Leator, farmer in the town of Red Hook; Josephine (Mrs. Herrick); Abby, the wife of John Phillips, of Ravenna, N. Y., a conductor on the W. S. R.; Catherine E., who married P. Traver, farmer in Red Hook, and died June 24, 1879; Emily I., who died March 30, 1869; Luella, the wife of Sylvester Stall, a fruit grower in Columbia county; Ada, who died April 18, 1872; and Fannie, who is at home.

After his second marriage Mr. Herrick settled upon his present farm, where two sons were added to the family: Thaddeus J., born July 1, 1869, was married September 7, 1893, to Bertha Dederick, of Milan, and they have one daughter, Ethel; and Charles S., born September 4, 1875, still at home. From early years Mr. Herrick has been engaged in buying and selling live stock, and the care of his fine farm of 114 acres does not prevent him from carrying on this business largely, purchasing in the West to sell in the East. His family are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and take an active part in its work. In local affairs Mr. Herrick is influential, being a valued adviser in the Democratic party, and he has been supervisor of his town for several terms. His son Thaddeus J. was appointed school commissioner of the Second District of Dutchess county, in 1892, and elected in 1893, served two years, and is now a coal dealer in Hyde Park, New York.

WLADYSLAWA J. PRALATOWSKI, a well-known resident of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, has displayed ability and energy while gaining a foothold in this new country for which he cannot be too highly praised, and has, in spite of all difficulties, made a place for himself in business life that could not readily be supplied. The facilities which his office affords to the intending tourist—whether he desires information, letters of credit, or tickets to any part of the known world—are many, and his acquaintance with European customs and legal formalities has smoothed the way for more than one perplexed client.

He is a native of Pakaslaw, Province of Posen, Poland, and was born April 23, 1843, the son of Jacob and Marguerite (Van Kaust) Pralatowski, and grandson of Vincent and Marguerite (Wulerd) Pralatowski. His family was highly respected, and his father was a professor in a college at Posen. Our subject was the youngest of three sons, the names of the others being Ludwig and Leon. His mother died when he was but three days old, and at the age of twelve years he was left fatherless. He was educated in the schools of Lissa, Poland, and at nineteen he came to America, landing in New York City November 6, 1862.

Although he was fitted by nature and education for other work, he went to Newburg, N. Y., and engaged in the first employment to be found, that of shoemaking. On December 1, 1862, he went to Matteawan to work for Mr. Budny, but after a few months he returned to Newburg, where he remained for some time, spending, however, a short period in Poughkeepsie. Later he moved from Newburg to New York City, and in the fall of 1865 he returned to Matteawan, where in the following year he opened a shop of his own. In 1868 he transferred his business to Fishkill-on-Hudson, and has since resided there. His present office was opened in October, 1890, and his business (which includes real estate and fire insurance, in addition to the other lines mentioned above) has steadily developed as time has passed.

On July 13, 1871, he married Miss Mary E. Rowland, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Clark) Rowland, and has two daughters: Mary Marguerite and Anna Helena. His family are all members of the Roman Catholic Church, and he is an active worker in the Catholic Benevolent League. In politics he is a Democrat, and is interested in all progressive movements in his locality. From 1869 to 1879 he was a member of Excelsior Engine Co. No. 1, Fishkill Fire Department, and for ten years he has been a worker in the Independent Order of Good Templars. For ten years he belonged to Company H, 21st Regiment, New York National Guards, and for two and one-half years served as its captain. At present he represents a combination of business, such as is seldom handled by one individual; his correspondence reaches more than 1,600 banks all over the world; he represents all the steamship lines, at home and abroad; he prepares all kinds of legal documents for foreign nations, and in foreign languages; he procures passports from the U. S. Government—in fact, he does a combination of home and foreign work which is seldom found done by one man with the same success which he achieves.

HENRY WORRALL, a well-known farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born on the farm where he now lives, near Poughkeepsie, October 22, 1844. Here he grew to manhood, attending the district schools, and, later, the Dutchess County Academy. After finishing his schooling he returned to the farm, where he has continued to reside.

On April 27, 1885, Mr. Worrall was married to Miss Clementine Lawson, who was born in New York City, a daughter of Casper Lawson, a farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie. One child, Donald L., was born to our subject and his wife December 16, 1893. Mr. Worrall is a general farmer, and has 100 acres of land on the Hackinac road. He is a Democrat, has been clerk of election, and was elected assessor of the town of Poughkeepsie in 1886, holding the office for three years. He is a prominent young farmer, and stands high in the community. His wife is a member of the Reformed Church.

George Worrall, father of our subject, was born in England February 26, 1817, a son of William H. Worrall, who came to Poughkeepsie in 1825, and bought property there. Our subject George was reared to the occupation of a farmer. He married Miss Jane E. Van De Berg, who was born in the old town of Poughkeepsie, near her present home, a daughter of Henry Van De Berg, a farmer, born in the town of Poughkeepsie, whose ancestors were of Holland stock. George Worrall's death occurred July 26, 1889. For five years he rented his farm and lived in Poughkeepsie, and in 1860 he built the residence which still remains in the family. Our subject was the only child born to Mr. and Mrs. Worrall. George Worrall was a Democrat, and at one time was commissioner of highways for several years. He was a worker in politics, and to a certain extent controlled the politics of his town. He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

LOUIS E. KAMPF, of Matteawan, Dutchess county, was born at Lenox, Mass. December 29, 1859, of French parentage.

Stephen Kampf, his father, was born and reared in the old French province of Alsace (now a part of Germany), and his ancestors were for many generations connected with the hotel business there. Our subject's mother Emily (Brielmann), was a native of the same locality, and a daughter of Conrad Brielmann, the famous soldier who accompanied Napoleon throughout the Austrian campaign, and was with him in the Russian campaign, at Moscow, holding high rank in the service. Twenty-four wounds attested his courage and devotion, at as a reward for his gallantry he and his family were advanced to a prominent position in France, which his descendants still maintain. Stephen Kampf was employed, as a young man, in building the first railroad through Metz, and in 1852 he came to America, locating at Lenox, Mass., as a skilled workman in a glass factory, the first in this country to engage in the manufacture of heavy glass. He was married to Miss Briemann, at North Adams, Mass., and about 1861 they settled in Glenham, where they still reside. They are Catholics in faith, and Mr. Kampf, who early became a citizen of the United States, has always taken a keen interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of his adopted country. Their union has been blessed with four children, three of whom are living, Louis E. being second in the order of birth.

Our subject's early life was spent in Glenham, where he received his education, and later took his first lessons in the practical art of making a livelihood, working for some time in the Glenham woolen mills. After learning the details of the business, he worked for many years in the Groveville mills, becoming foreman of the weaving department. In 1888 he purchased his present property at Matteawan, and in the following year erected the brick building where, in 1892, he established his saloon, one of the finest in the place.

On February 2, 1885, Mr. Kampf married Miss Carrie Marchesseault, and their home is brightened by a little daughter, named Grace. Mrs. Kampf is a native of Montreal, Canada, where her grandfather, Simon Marchesseault, a Frenchman by birth, settled upon coming to the New World, and her father, Simon Marchesseault, still resides there. Mr. Kampf is active in social life, and was one of the founders of the Matteawan Mannerchor. He is also a charter member of Court Beacon, Foresters of America. In politics he is a Republican, and actively supports his party, although he has never held nor sought political office.

the patentees of the township of Newtown, Long Island. In the third generation from him was Benjamin Burroughs, who settled in Dutchess county in 1748, and from Madame Brett obtained the deed for a tract of land, on which he reared his family.

Joseph Burroughs, son of this Benjamin Burroughs, and grandfather of our subject, was born August 24, 1754, and in 1781 he wedded Mary Nelson. In 1793 they removed to the farm now owned and occupied by our subject, having purchased the land the year previous, and the house was erected by the grandfather in 1799. There both he and his wife died. In their family were nine children: Elizabeth, who married Cornelius Haight, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; Reuben, a mechanic, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-eight years; George, a physician of Red Hook, Dutchess county, who died at the age of thirty-eight; Francis, a farmer of Columbia county, N. Y.; Susan, who married Nathan Jones, a mechanic and farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county; William, an agriculturist of Ohio, where his death occurred; Joseph, who died in Schenectady county, N. Y., where he was engaged in farming; Charles, the father of our subject; and Fairly, who died when young near Lake George, New York.

Upon the homestead farm, where our subject now lives, Charles Burroughs was born March 18, 1799, and throughout life he devoted his attention to its care and cultivation, with good success, dying there December 8, 1873. He married Alida Blatchley, whose death occurred May 8, 1887. She was a native of Rensselaer county, N. Y., and a daughter of Samuel Blatchley, who was of English lineage, and carried on agricultural pursuits, coming to Dutchess county from Connecticut. A family of four children were born to Charles Burroughs and his wife: Joseph, who was killed by the Indians in Arizona; Abraham, now a resident of San Francisco, Cal.; George, who also makes his home in the Golden State; and Frank, of this review.

The entire life of our subject has been passed at his present home, and he is successfully engaged in general farming upon his 194-acre tract of valuable and productive land. He is progressive in his methods of carrying on his work—in fact, is one of the model farmers of the community, the neat and thrifty appearance of his place indicating the careful and

FRANK BURROUGHS, a wide-awake and skillful agriculturist of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born January 10, 1844, on the farm which is still his home, and is descended from John Burroughs, who landed at Salem, Mass., in 1637, and came to Long Island in 1654. He, with others, were systematic manner in which it is cultivated. He is an intelligent, public-spirited citizen, and his neighbors have for him the highest regard. Politically, his ballot is cast in support of the men and measures of the Republican party.

OLIVER S. BARNES, a well-known agriculturist and real-estate owner of Dutchess and Putnam counties, resides near Gayhead, Dutchess county, and is one of the influential and progressive citizens of that locality.

The Barnes family is of Scotch origin, and the ancestors of this branch were early settlers in Westchester county, N. Y., where our subject's grandfather, Richard Barnes, and father, William Barnes, were born, the latter at White Plains, where he grew to manhood. He married Deborah Tompkins, daughter of James Tompkins, who was of Dutch descent, and a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and followed the occupation of a farmer. After their marriage William Barnes and wife went to the town of Kent, Putnam county, and settled upon a large tract of land, where they reared a family of children, as follows: Phœbe, Eliza B., and Mary A., deceased, who never married; Margaret, the wife of Louis Holmes, a farmer of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county; Hannah J., who married Thomas Townsend, a farmer in Putnam county; James, a shoemaker in Poughkeepsie; Oliver S., the subject of this biography; Caroline, who married William Holmes, a hay and feed merchant in New York City; and William H., a farmer at the old home in Putnam county. The father was a Republican in political faith during his last years, and like most of his family was a Methodist in his religious views, ably filling the office of class leader for sixty years, and in all things exemplifying his belief by honesty and upright dealing. His death occurred in 1860, and his wife passed to her reward December 22, 1876.

Oliver S. Barnes was born September 6, 1828, and passed his early years at the old homestead. In 1851 he went to the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, and December 24, 1855, he married Miss Mary E. Wilde, a lady of unusual mental acumen and executive ability. She was born in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, the daughter of James Wilde, and granddaughter of James William Wilde, an Englishman, who purchased 300 acres of land at Fishkill Plains at an early period, and made his home there. Her mother Caroline Hutchens, a native of the town of Fishkill, was a descendant of an old English family named Hudson, the spelling and pronunciation having changed as time elapsed. Henry Hudson, the discoverer of the Hudson river, being a direct ancestor. Members of her family took an active part in the Revolutionary war.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Barnes settled upon a farm in East Fishkill, and, in 1860, they purchased their present farm of 13 acres, near Gayhead, where they made many improvements. The property has been in the hands of some member of the Wilde family for 150 years, and Mrs. Barnes, in whose name it stands, is active in its management, owing to her husband's deafness. They are general farmers, but give especial attention to the dairy business. They have had eleven children, of whom William C., James Eugene Lewis, Francis Eugene and Florence E. died in infancy. Of the others, Howard O., disappeared and his present address is unknown. Richard is a farmer in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county; Wilberforce is a farmer in Putnam county; Jane married Ernest Hill, a farmer in Putnam county; Cora is at home and Ida, deceased, was formerly the wife of Daniel Jewell, a farmer in East Fishkill.

Mr. Barnes has always taken an intelligent interest in the questions of the day, and in politics is a Republican.

MICHAEL PELLIS. The Pellis family originally of Holland stock, but the immediate ancestors of our subject have been residents of Dutchess county since an early day. His great-grandfather located on the old farm on the Hudson river, in the town of Poughkeepsie, near where the Hudson River State Hospital is now situated.

On this farm John Pellis was born May 1, 1751. He married Rachel Leroy, who was born September 25, 1761, and they reared five of their children. Of these, Deborah died unmarried; Michael was a farmer in the town of Poughkeepsie; John followed the same occupation; Peter was a farmer in Hyde Park; and Simon J. The latter was born at the home farm, March 17, 1798, and married Phœbe Coe, a native of Ulster county, at the daughter of Abram Coe, whose ancestor also came from Holland. Shortly after his marriage, in 1826, Simon Pells purchased a farm near that of his father, and there his family of six children was reared. These were Rachel and Sarah, who both died unmarried; Celia F., who is single; Minerva, who died in childhood, as did also Sophia; and Michael. The father was originally a Whig, and later joined the ranks of the Republican party. He and his family, as were his parents before him, were members of the Reformed Dutch Church. He died in 1881, his wife having passed from earth in 1840.

Michael Pells was the youngest of his father's children, and was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, near Arlington, April 11, 1834. In 1860 he purchased the farm, on which he now resides, and which comprises 130 acres. Here he carries on general farming, in which he has been very successful. He is a Republican, and a member of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Pells has never married. He is popular with all his acquaintances, and is a good citizen and a man of upright life.

DAVID T. BARNES, one of the most progressive and successful agriculturists of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, resides upon a farm near Arlington, which has been in the possession of his family for four generations. The family name was originally Van Ness, and our subject's great-grandfather was one of three brothers of that name, who came from Holland at an early period, and located first on Long Island. Later they separated, and the ancestor of Mr. Barnes settled upon the present farm, then a wilderness. He had several children, among them a son, William, our subject's grandfather, who was born on this estate March 5, 1738. He was a farmer all his life, and died November 13, 1807, his wife, Katharine, surviving him until March 7, 1812. They had eight children, as follows: Maria, born May 29, 1760, married William Van Derwater, a farmer in Hyde Park; Richard, born May 23, 1762, a farmer in Columbia county; Henry, born October 9, 1764, a farmer near the old homestead; Catherine, born September 30, 1766; Hannah, born January 28, 1769, the wife of Joseph Platt, a farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie; Barnekah, born July 28, 1772, who died at the age of seventeen; David, born October 29, 1774, our subject's father; and Joshua, born July 13, 1777, a farmer near the old home.

David Barnes was married, December 20, 1806, to Ann Thorn, a lady of English descent, who was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, where her father, Joseph Thorn, born February 11, 1745, was a prominent farmer. Joseph Thorn married Sarah Kies, born November 21, 1750, O. S., and reared a family of nine children; Stephen, born December 9, 1773; Martha, March 3, 1776; Joseph, June 3, 1778; John, February 28, 1780; Phœbe, April 13, 1782; Ann, May 3, 1784; Richard, September 30, 1785; Mary, December 31, 1788; and Elizabeth, April 19, 1791. Our subject's parents settled upon the old homestead, where they made extensive improvements, and in 1822 they built the house, which has ever since been the family residence. They were members of the Presbyterian Church, to which William Barnes and his wife had also belonged. David Barnes was a Whig in politics, and an influential worker in local affairs, holding various minor offices. He died April 17, 1852, and his wife passed away fourteen years later—May 22, 1866. They had seven children: William, born October 10, 1807, died in infancy; Sarah, born January 1, 1810, married Peter R. Sleight, a farmer in the town of Lagrange, and died October 20, 1829; Catherine, born April 3, 1812, was the second wife of Mr. Sleight, and died in February, 1894; Ann Elizabeth, born January 31, 1820, is the widow of Alexander F. Wheeler, formerly a leading attorney of Troy; Josephine, born April 15, 1823, married Edmund Van Wyck, a farmer; David, who died in infancy; and David T., born June 29, 1828, the subject of this sketch.

David T. Barnes has always lived at the homestead, a fine farm of about 180 acres, devoted to general crops. He is one of the best managers in his locality, his estate being kept under the highest cultivation. On October 12, 1857, he was married to Rhoda E. Titus, a native of Gallia Co., Ohio, born January 15, 1837, the daughter of Lewis Titus (a farmer) and his wife, Susan. Mrs. Barnes' ancestors were residents of Dutchess county in the early days, and her grandfather, John Titus, was born there. Four children were born of this marriage: Susie, who married William H. Allen, a farmer in the town of Clinton, and died December 20, 1883; Edwin S., who married Annie Mary Howard, a daughter of Sherman Howard, and a descendant of one of the old families; Anna K., the wife of Charles Howard, a son of Sherman Howard; and Elizabeth, who died February 9, 1883. Mr. Barnes is a Republican in politics, and he and his family contribute to the support of the Presbyterian Church, and take a generous interest in various philanthropic movements.

DARWIN BEERS, senior member of the firm of Beers & Trafford, the well-known contractors and builders of Millerton, Dutchess county, was born at Ancram Lead Mines, Columbia Co., N. Y., June 5, 1858.

Linas Beers, grandfather of our subject, was a native of New Milford, Conn., and he and his brother Nelson came together to Copake, Columbia county, about the year 1810. Nelson was married to Eliza McArthur, and Linas to Katherine McArthur, by whom he had four children: Sarah, who married (first) Samuel Hagadorn, and (second) Mr. Livock; Ambrose; Martin, our subject's father; and Almira, the wife of Backus Howland. Linas Beers was a carpenter by trade. His death occurred about the year 1841, when he was aged fifty years, his wife surviving him until 1878, dying at the age of seventy-five years.

Martin Beers was born at Copake, N. Y., in September, 1831, and he also died at an early age, passing away July 2, 1861. He was a very intelligent, energetic man, and at the early age of seventeen had already established himself in business, and by his genial nature had gained a host of friends. Having learned the tailor's trade in boyhood, he made that his main occupation, and he was also engaged in mercantile business at the Ancram Lead Mines, in partnership with William H. Barton. He was married, February 17, 1852, to Sarah Decker, and had three sons: Alton, born December 6, 1855, is chief telegraph operator and train dispatcher on the Boston & Albany railroad at Union depot, Worcester, Mass., and has been in their employ for twenty-four years; Darwin, our subject, comes next; and Kirke M., born February 10, 1861, is in the express business at Worcester. The widowed mother of this little family subsequently, January 30, 1873, was married to Ambrose Beers (her first husband's brother), who was for many years the most prominent contractor and builder of Millerton. He died March 31, 1888 leaving a widow, and a son (William) by former marriage, born 1861. She was born October 14, 1830, in Ancram township, Columbia Co., N. Y., a daughter of Stephen and Rhoda (Williams) Decker, both born at Copake—the father on June 6, 1795, the mother on January 1, 1799. They were married August 30, 1818, and had children as follows: Louisa, born September 10, 1819; Clara A. born April 23, 1821; Orville, born August 17, 1825; Sarah, born October 14, 1830; Cornelia E., born August 8, 1834. The father died October 2, 1856; the mother on April 17, 1881.

Darwin Beers received his early education in the village of Millerton, attending the schools taught by Rev. Mr. Ferguson, Charles Walsh, now editor of the Amenia Times, and Miss Carrie Knickerbocker. For four months in 1873 he was employed as a clerk by Eggleston Brothers, of Millerton, but during the following winter he again attended school. In the spring of 1874 he began learning the carpenter trade with Ambrose Beers, and worked for him about five years, then managed the farm of his uncle, the late William H. Barton for three years, being appointed in the meantime to succeed him as street commissioner of the village of Millerton, for the term of three years. At the time that he assumed the duties of this office Mr. Beers was only twenty years old. After leaving the farm he returned to his trade and worked for his stepfather as a journeyman carpenter for three years, or until 1885, in which year he formed a partnership with William Trafford, and engaged in the construction of buildings on contract. The work has included architectural designing, and in this department the firm has won especial praise. Among the buildings erected by them are the $50,000 residence of Mrs. Francis Scoville, at Chapinville, Conn., and the elegant villa at Ravine Hurst in Massachusetts built for John Shepard, Jr., of Providence, R. I. In Millerton the evidence of their artistic taste and skilled workmanship are numerous, including the "Barton House", the business blocks owned by C. F. Hawley and the firm of Hotchkiss & Eggleston, besides many fine residences. Their business compares favorably in volume with that of any similar firm in this region outside of New York City. Since 1889 they have also dealt in lumber extensively, having a commodious lumber yard

Darwin Beers

William Trofford

FIRM OF BEERS & TRAFFORD, MILLERTON, NEW YORK.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN SHEPARD, JR., OF PROVIDENCE, R. I., BUILT AT RAVINE HURST, MASS., BY BEERS & TRAFFORD, OF MILLERTON, NEW YORK.

and they have employed from seventy-five to 150 hands throughout the year. Messrs. Beers and Trafford devote their entire time to their contracts, which include mason work, carpentering, grading, painting, plumbing and introducing all systems of heaters—in fact, every branch of the business. Mr. Beers has one of the finest family residences in Millerton, delightfully situated on Barton street.

In 1884 Mr. Beers was married to Miss Addie Bond, who was born September 30, 1860, at Newburg, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Lozier) Bond, formerly prominent residents of Newburg, N. Y., the former born in 1838, the latter in 1835. They had two children, Mrs. Beers alone surviving. Harriet (Cromwell), Joseph Bond's mother, and a lineal descendant of Oliver Cromwell, died at the advanced age of eighty-four years. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Beers—Alton Bond and Warren Martin.

In politics Mr. Beers is a Democrat, and while he is not what is termed a politician, he is deeply interested and active in and loyal to his party, but always true to his convictions of right. In matters of local importance he is public-spirited and progressive, having given his influence to many movements which tended to promote the common good. He is one of the members of the board of health, also a member of the fire department. Socially, he is a member of Webatuck Lodge No. 480, F. & A. M., of Millerton. Religiously, he is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Millerton, of which he is a liberal supporter, a member of the choir, also one of the official board.

WILLIAM TRAFFORD, a prominent contractor and builder of Millerton, member of the well-known firm of Beers & Trafford, was born December 31, 1852, in Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y. His family is of English origin, and is one of the oldest and most distinguished in Columbia county. His great-grandfather, Thomas Trafford, who was born in Copake in 1752, was one of the first justices of the peace in Taghanick, Columbia Co., N. Y., holding office in 1803, 1804 and 1808. He married Elizabeth Elliot, and died in 1817. William T. Trafford, our subject's grandfather, was born on the old family estate in Copake in 1783, and died in 1866. He was a farmer and leading citizen of his time, serving as supervisor in 1837, and as justice of the peace in 1827, 1830, 1846, 1847 and 1851. He married Helen Snyder, and had seven children: Elizabeth, Milton, Hannah, Thomas, Homer, Robert Emmet and William.

Milton Trafford, our subject's father, was born June 13, 1813, and spent his entire life in Copake, where he followed the carpenter's trade. He married Louise Decker, who was born in Copake, September 10, 1819, and died in 1878. He survived her fourteen years, dying in 1893. Of their six children our subject was the next to the youngest. The names of the others, with the dates of birth, etc., are as follows: Sarah, November 24, 1840, died March 24, 1843; Wesley, March 4, 1844, now living in New York City; Alice, February 5, 1847, died October 18, 1866; Stephen D., March 13, 1849, a resident of Torrington, Conn.; and Marion, August 16, 1858, a resident of Millerton.

Our subject attended the schools of his native town until he was about seventeen years old, obtaining a good academic education. In 1870 he began to learn the carpenter's trade with his father, and worked with him eight years. In 1881 he came to Millerton and engaged in the work of contracting and building with his uncle, Ambrose Beers, and in 1885 the present firm of Beers & Trafford was organized. They are among the most successful and enterprising workers to be found in their line of business, and have built some of the finest structures in that vicinity. On June 18, 1891, Mr. Trafford married Miss Allie Eggleston, daughter of Stewart Eggleston, of Dutchess county. They have no children.

Mr. Trafford is a progressive and public-spirited citizen, a leader in many of the most important measures for local improvement. He is a Republican, but has never taken an active part in political work. At present he is a trustee of the village of Millerton, and is chief of the E. H. Thompson Hose Company.

DANIEL S. BARIGHT, one of the progressive farmers of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in Pleasant Valley, March 25, 1838. He stayed on his father's farm during his boyhood and attended the district schools, the Quaker School in the town of Union Vale, the Dutchess County Academy, and was for a short time at the Nine Partners Boarding School. After going through these schools he taught for three winters in the town of Poughkeepsie, and three winters in the town of Pleasant Valley.

Mr. Baright was married, October 2, 1861, to Miss Mary Wing, who was born in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, the daughter of Alexander and Hannah Wing. Our subject and his wife located on their present farm in 1862, and reared a family of four children, namely: Ann G. married a Mr. Sheldon, of Poughkeepsie; William is living in Minneapolis, where he organized the "Order of the World," of that State, and where he is successfully engaged in the insurance business; Irving is in the insurance business in Nebraska; and Frederick is at home. Mr. Baright has a place of 116 acres, on which he carries on general farming. He is also engaged in the agricultural implement business, with headquarters at Poughkeepsie, and has represented the New York Life Insurance Company for over twenty years. In politics he is a Republican, and takes a lively interest in such matters, but, although frequently urged to do so, has never held office. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Church, in which he has always been greatly interested, and especially in the Sunday-school. He has been connected with the County Sunday-school organization for several years, and both he and his wife are devout Christians.

Elijah Baright, the father of our subject, was born, March 30, 1802, in Pleasant Valley, where he grew to manhood and married Miss Amy D. Carpenter, whose birth took place in Stanford town, January 17, 1799. She was the daughter of Samuel Carpenter, a farmer. After their marriage our subject's parents settled on the old farm, and the following children were born to them: Samuel, born in 1826, is a farmer in the town of Poughkeepsie; Ann Eliza died when twenty-one years old; Daniel S. is our subject; and Edwin was an insurance agent for many years in Poughkeepsie, but is now retired, and spends his summers at Ocean Grove and his winters at Poughkeepsie. Elijah Baright was a farmer by occupation, but was also a successful business man, and dealt largely in stocks in New York City. He was a Democrat up to 1856, when he became a Republican. He and his wife were Hicksite Quakers. His death occurred June 19, 1873; that of his wife on December 31, 1880.

John Baright, the grandfather, was born in Poughkeepsie, of Holland ancestry. He married, and then settled on a farm in Pleasant Valley, where the following children were born to him and his wife: Augustus is a farmer in Batavia, N. Y.; Sarah became the wife of John Stringham, a farmer in Michigan; and Susan married Daniel Stringham, a farmer in the town of Lagrange. John Baright remained on the farm all his life. The Barights were Quakers, and consequently did not take part in either the Revolutionary war or the war of 1812.

JOHAN G. SENCERBAUGH, now residing on a farm in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, was for over forty years connected with the Union Ferry Company, but now retired from active labor, and in the enjoyment of all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. He is a native of the town of East Fishkill, born June 19, 1818, and is son of Simeon D. Sencerbaugh, whose birth occurred in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. His mother, who bore the maiden name of Phoebe Washburn, was also born in Dutchess county.

After their marriage, the parents of our subject located upon a farm in the town of East Fishkill, where they reared their family of nine children: Jane, who married Lab Rogers, a farmer of Beekman town; John C. subject of this review; Jarvis W., a farmer and business man of Minnesota, who represented his district in the State Senate; Charles, who was a steamboat captain on the Mississippi; Mary, who wedded William Phillips, of East Fishkill town, but both are now deceased; Catherine, who married Joel S. man, and died at Candor, in the western part of the State; Susan, who married A. Brush, a warden in the prison at Sing Sing, N. Y.; Antoinette, who married William Humphrey, of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county; and Henry. The father was a farmer by occupation, and both him and wife were consistent members of the reformed Dutch Church.

John G. Sencerbaugh grew to manhood on the home farm, and was united in marriage with Catherine Lounsbury, a native of the town of East Fishkill, and a daughter of Joshua Lounsbury, also born in that township. The birth of her grandfather, is Lounsbury, occurred either in Dutchess county or in Putnam Co., N. Y. The family is of English origin. In the spring of 1848, with his wife, Mr. Sencerbaugh removed to Brooklyn, where he became connected with the Union Ferry Co., which connection continued until he laid aside business cares in 1889, and he has since lived retired upon a farm in the town of East Fishkill, where he is surrounded by many warm friends.

In the family were four children: (1) Carrie, married John V. Van Arsdale, who is a descendant of Baron Resolve Waldron, who came from Harlem, Holland, in 1666, and settled in New Harlem, N. Y.; Mr. Van Arsdale is a native of Bound Brook, N. J., where he was reared in his father's store. For thirty years he has made his home in Brooklyn, but now calls the Sencerbaugh farm, in the town of East Fishkill, his home. He is connected with the custom-house business, and every Monday goes into the city, returning again on Saturdays. (2) John died in infancy. (4) Emma became the wife of William D. Barlum, but died while yet young. (3) William P. (the third in order of birth) now manages the home farm of 125 acres, devoting his attention to general farming, and has made many valuable and useful improvements since locating thereon in 1889. Previous to coming to Dutchess county, he was a traveling salesman for a lace-importing house, for a period of about ten years, but gave up that work on account of ill health. He is a firm Republican in politics, and though his residence here is of comparatively short duration, he has figured quite actively in political affairs. By all who know them, the family is held in the highest regard, and justly ranks among the best citizens of the community.

A BUTLER ANDERSON, a prosperous agriculturist, residing near Brinckerhoff, Dutchess county, is one of the progressive citizens of that vicinity. His family has been identified with Dutchess county for several generations, and its various members have always shown the qualities of character which lead to good citizenship.

John Anderson, our subject's grandfather, native of Dutchess county, married Ann Davis, and settled in the town of Fishkill (now East Fishkill), where a family of six children were born to them: Zilla, who married Lewis Wright, a farmer in the town of Lagrange; Susan, the wife of Abram Van Vlack, a farmer in East Fishkill town; Polly, the wife of Moses Homan, a farmer in the same town; Elizabeth, who married Harvey Eighmy, as a farmer in the town of Beekman; Peter, who followed agriculture all his life in the town of East Fishkill; and John.

John Anderson (2), our subject's father, was reared as a farmer boy, and married Miss Eliza M. Butler, daughter of Allen Butler, a well-known farmer, and lifelong resident of Dutchess county. His wife was Sarah Crouse, and they had two children: Egbert C., a retired business man of the city of Poughkeepsie, and Eliza M. (our subject's mother). The young people settled upon the present homestead, which they purchased over fifty years ago. Mr. Anderson was an influential man in local affairs, serving for nine years as commissioner of his town, and in early years was a Democrat and afterward a Republican. He and his wife were leading members of the Reformed Church at Hopewell, and he held the office of elder for many years previous to his death in 1890. His wife survives him with one son, our subject, and a daughter, Sarah A., who married T. G. Matthews, a flour merchant of New York City, and a real-estate owner and resident of Brooklyn.

A. Butler Anderson was born August 15, 1847, and spent his life mainly at the old farm. He attended the neighboring district schools in early boyhood, and then went to Poughkeepsie, where he pursued his studies in a select school and the College Hill School. On his return home he assisted his father, and in time assumed the management of the estate. On October 30, 1875, he was united in matrimony with Susan H. Van Wyck, daughter of Henry Van Wyck, a farmer of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county. Six children were born of this union: John, Eliza Maria, Henry V. W., Annie L., Sarah L., and Egbert B., who are all at home.

Mr. Anderson makes no specialities in his work as an agriculturist. The old homestead comprised 196 acres, and to this an adjoining tract of eighty-six acres has been added, making one of the best farms in the neighborhood. In politics he is a Republican, and he takes a generous interest in all public improvements; he and his wife contribute to the support of the Reformed Church at Hopewell, of which she is a member.

CHARLES DU BOIS ROGERS, a prominent young agriculturist of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, is the owner of a farm which has been in his family for four generations.

His ancestors of a still earlier period were well known among the pioneers of this State, the head of the American line being John Rogers, who came from Scotland, formerly from England (lineal descendant of John Rogers, who was burned at the stake at Smithfield in Queen Mary's reign), and located in Putnam county, N. Y., where he kept the first road house, or hotel, opened between New York and Albany. It was in the woods among the Indians, near what is now called Garrison's Station on the Hudson River railroad.

The great-great-grandparents of our subject were Benjamin and Elizabeth (Fowler) Rogers. His great-grandparents, Benjamin (2) and Elizabeth F. Rogers reared a family of ten children: John, William, Benjamin, Absalom, Elijah, Pattie, Hester, Betsey, Mary, and Sarah. Absalom Rogers, our subject's grandfather, married Maria Du Bois, and had six children: Emily Abraham D., Peter, William, Lewis, and Charles C. (our subject's father).

Charles C. Rogers married Harriet L. Cook, and our subject was their only son. He was born March 17, 1867, at the old homestead near Fishkill Village, and his education was obtained in the district schools of the neighborhood and the Union Free School at Fishkill, with two years in Leslie's Academy in Poughkeepsie. He left school at the age of eighteen, and returned home, where he gradually assumed the management of the farm, relieving his father from the burden during his declining years, and caring for him until his death, which occurred May 30, 1892. The estate contains 100 acres, fifty acres lying on each side of the road laid out by Madame Brett from old Fishkill to Fishkill-on-Hudson. The trolley cars now pass the the door. Mr. Rogers makes a specialty of dairying, keeping from twenty-five to thirty cows the year round.

He has a pleasant home. His wife, whom he married December 9, 1891, was formerly Grace A. Haight, a daughter of J. Cornelius Haight, the historian. They have three children: Lewis D., Bertha May, and Grace A. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rogers attend the Protestant Episcopal Church, and are heartily in sympathy with various lines of social, religious, and educational progress. Politically, Mr. Rogers a Democrat, and he is a member of Hudson River Lodge No. 57, K. of P.

FRANK A. HOTCHKISS, a prominent merchant of Millerton, Dutchess county, and a representative of a family which has become widely famous for its inventive genius was born August 27, 1857, at Sharon Valley Connecticut.

The family is of English origin, the first the American branch being among the early settlers of New Haven, and during the Revolutionary war there were three generations the service at the same time. Asahel Hotchkiss, our subject's great-grandfather, resided at Prospect, now a part of New Haven, and there Asahel Hotchkiss, the grandfather of our subject, was born. He was a man of superior natural talent, successful in financial management, and also in the invention of various devices which he manufactured in a factory Sharon Valley, which at that day was considered a large establishment. At first he was engaged in the manufacture of leather wallets, and, later, in game traps, curry combs, wrenches and other small articles of hardware. This factory was afterward moved to Bridgeport, where it is now carried on by a grandson of the founder. Asahel Hotchkiss was prominent in public affairs also, having great influence in the Republican party. He served a member of the Connecticut Legislature for two terms, and as State Senator for one term. He was an active member of the Congregational Church. He married Althea Guernsey and had ten children, of whom Dortha and Charles A. are yet living. (1) Andrew was a cripple, died in early manhood, but not before he invented the explosive shell called the Rebels "screamers"—a description of rifle cannon. (2) Benjamin B. was the inventor of the famous Hotchkiss gun, and of other improvements of warfare, including a torpedo boat and was well known in all parts of the world. He spent a fortune in perfecting his gun and placing it upon the market, and was in actual want before its value was recognized; but later he realized a large fortune from it, and honored as well, being decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor, and other orders. He was a man of remarkable executive ability, as well as inventive faculty, and at one time he carried on the manufacture of his inventions

Frank A. Hotchkiss

Vienna, removing afterward to Paris. He retained his residence in New York, however, and his estate was settled here. (3) Frederick A., the father of our subject, is mentioned below. (4) Franklin died at the age of sixteen years. (5) William died in childhood. (6) Sarah M. married George A. Kelsey. (7) Dortha married (first) Henry Finch, and (second) Hugh A. McKelvey, and now resides in Bridgeport, Conn. (8) Charles A. is a resident of Bridgeport, Conn. (9) Dwight was a lifelong invalid. (10) Abijah died in childhood.

Frederick A. Hotchkiss was born in Water-town, Conn., in 1829, and became a member of the firm of Hotchkiss Sons, being for some time superintendent of the factory at Bridgeport. He retired from active business in 1870, and passed his later years in more congenial pursuits. He was a well-read man, of quiet tastes, and not at all inclined to seek public honors, though he was a strong supporter of the Republican party, and took a generous interest in public affairs, local and national, but never held official position. He married Caroline Parson, daughter of John Parson, a prominent resident of Sharon, Conn., and had four children, as follows: Mary married W. H. Hill, of Reading, Conn.; Carrie L. died in early womanhood; Frank A. comes next; and Mattie F. was the wife of Sidney McKelvey, of Barta, Ill. Of these, Frank A., our subject, is the sole survivor.

Frank A. Hotchkiss received his education mainly in the schools of Sharon, and attended the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, the winter. On leaving school at the age of seventeen, he taught in the village of Sharon for two years, since when he has been engaged in mercantile pursuits. For about five years he was bookkeeper and salesman for Beech, Hawley & Co., but March 17, 1886, the firm being reorganized on account of the death of Mr. Beach, Mr. Hotchkiss and L. J. Eggleston bought an interest, the firm becoming Hotchkiss & Eggleston. They have been very successful, and in 1894 they removed from the old locality, where the "Millerton House" now stands, to their new building, which is one of the finest of the kind in the county. His well-proven business ability places Mr. Hotchkiss among the foremost of the younger men of his locality. He has been president of the Millerton National Bank for two years, a fact which speaks volumes for the esteem in which he is held in business circles. He is greatly interested in local improvements, and has been trustee and president of the village four terms; but while he is a firm believer in the principles of the Republican party, he does not take an active part in political work.

In 1885 Mr. Hotchkiss was married to Miss Fannie H. Gillette, daughter of Edward F. Gillette, a leading merchant of Sharon, and they have six children: Mary F., Frederick, Edward G., Benjamin B., Reed H. and Andrew Dwight. Mr. and Mrs. Hotchkiss are prominent members of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is an elder.

JOSEPH SUNDERLAND, a prominent resident of Glenham, Dutchess county, was born May 25, 1839, at Darlington, England, and is descended in both paternal and maternal lines from ancestry who were engaged in agricultural pursuits.

His father, John Sunderland, a native of Colne, Lancashire, England, was an excellent workman, and in addition to his farm work was often employed as a stone-mason and wall-builder. He married Nancy Binns, who was born at Hunsworth, Yorkshire, England, the eldest daughter of Joseph Binns, a farmer. The young couple made their home at Armley, Leeds, England, where they spent the remainder of their lives, rearing to maturity five sons and one daughter. The father died October 2, 1864; the mother on December 14, 1885; both passing away in full faith, having been devout members of the Primitive Methodist Church. Their children were: William, now residing at Dewsbury, England, was formerly a spinner by trade, but is now engaged in mercantile business; Joseph is mentioned more fully below; Mary married Thomas Jowitt, a brickmaker, at Wortley, Leeds, England; Samuel is a butcher and milk dealer at Wortley; Charles Henry, who was a press setter, died in January, 1886, at the age of thirty-eight; John is a general merchant at Armley, England, and takes an influential part in religious work, is a member of the Methodist Church, and has been superintendent of a large Sunday-school for the past eighteen years.

Joseph Sunderland lived at home until he was sixteen years old, and by that time had gained a fair knowledge of the spinner's trade. In 1855 he joined the British army, and served a year and a half, when he was honorably discharged on account of a reduction in the forces. Returning home, he began to work at his trade, which he followed until the age of twenty-four years, then crossed the ocean, in 1863, and for about three years lived at Ballardvale, Mass., where he learned the trade of file forging. In 1866 he came to Matteawan, N. Y., and spent about two years at his trade before engaging in the saloon business, in which he continued from 1868 until 1876, when he moved to Glenham, N. Y., where he opened a saloon, which he still conducts. He is one of the leading dealers in his line, and for eight years has been president of the Liquor Dealers' Association of his Assembly District. In 1864 Mr. Sunderland married Miss Emma, only surviving daughter of David Robertshaw, of Wortley, Leeds, England. She is the only member of her family to come to America. Mr. and Mrs. Sunderland have one daughter living, Alice R., who is at home. Mr. Sunderland is fond of reading and takes much interest in current events. In religion he inclines to the Episcopal Church, and in politics he is a Republican. His influence in local affairs is marked, and he has served three terms as deputy sheriff, under Sheriffs Vantassell, Bartlett and Jerry S. Pearce, each term being for three years.

WILLIAM W. MARSHALL, an enterprising fruit raiser and farmer, was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, at Salt Lake Point, September 10, 1839. He began life on the farm, went to the district school, and spent two winters at the Claverack school. He then returned to his father's farm and worked for four years.

In 1861 Mr. Marshall married Miss Elizabeth D. Wing, who was born in the town of Clinton, the daughter of Alexander Wing, a native of that town. After their marriage our subject and his wife lived for four years on the old farm, and then worked a farm at Clinton Corners for five years. Subsequently our subject came to the town of Poughkeepsie, and engaged in the retail milk business for three years; then rented the John L. Marshall farm, on which he worked for ten years. In 1884 he bought a place, which consists of thirty-six acres, three-fourths of a mile from Poughkeepsie City, and has resided there ever since, making a specialty of raising small fruits of all kinds. He is a Democrat, and he and his wife attend the Orthodox Friends Church, to which they are contributors. He has a fine residence on his place, with all the necessary outbuildings.

Isaac Marshall, father of our subject, was born in Pleasant Valley, grew up on the Marshall homestead, and married Miss Eliza Lawrence, who was also a native of Pleasant Valley. Robert Lawrence, her father, was a farmer in the same place, and came of English stock. The parents of our subject settled on a farm in their native place, and there reared the following children: Elnathan G., a farmer in the town of Pleasant Valley; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Theron R. Marshall, a farmer of Pleasant Valley; Augusta, who married Joseph Doty, a farmer of the same place; Sarah, who married Parris Baker a carpenter in Saratoga county, N. Y.; Pamela, unmarried; Emily, who became the wife of Clarence Van Wagner, a farmer in Pleasant Valley; William W., our subject. Mr. Marshall died in 1890, and his wife in 1888. He was a Democrat in politics, and was assessor in the town of Pleasant Valley. They were both members of the Baptist Church.

John Marshall, grandfather of our subject was also born in Pleasant Valley, where he married and reared these children: Harris, a farmer in Dutchess county; Lewis was a farmer in the western part of the State; Oliver, who died young; Isaac, father of our subject; John C., who was a farmer at Salt Point and two daughters not named.

WILLIAM BODDEN, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, residing near Camelot, was born October 30, 1813, a Kirkcudbright, Scotland, where his ancestor had made their home for many generations.

His father, John Bodden, was born there June 27, 1789. He married Elizabeth Dirwiddie, a native of Scotland, and had two children, of whom our subject was the eldest. The other, Elizabeth, married Gilbert Grieve a farmer near the old home, and remained in Scotland. In 1817 John Bodden came to America, and for some years resided in New York City (his business being that of a builder later, on account of ill health, removing to the farm near Camelot, where he died May :

1874. He took a keen interest in all that concerned the community, was an active Republican, and while he was not a seeker after official position he served at one time as road commissioner. He and his wife were members of the Scotch Presbyterian Church.

William Bodden attended the schools of his native place until he was sixteen years old, and after coming to New York City he attended there for some time. In 1830 he came to Dutchess county and settled upon his present farm of 130 acres, where he has since followed general agricultural pursuits. He gives especial attention to the raising of fruit. On February 15, 1834, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Wilson, who was a native of his own town in Scotland, and of this union eleven children were born, a brief record of whom is as follows: John B., born August 1, 1835, resides in Poughkeepsie; David, born January 5, 1837, was a soldier in the Civil war, and later, was a farmer in Missouri, but now resides in Poughkeepsie; Mary H., born December 4, 1838, married William H. Van Keuren, jeweler in the same city; Eliza, born March 3, 1841, and Washington, born August 6, 1842, died in childhood; William B., born April 24, 1846, is a tinner and stove dealer at Lagrangeville; Thomas G., born August 6, 1848, is a horticulturist in the town of Poughkeepsie; Robert, born March 16, 1850, is a druggist in Syracuse; Elizabeth, born April 7, 1852, married John Grubb, a bookkeeper, residing in Poughkeepsie; James G., born May 1854, and Florence, born February 9, 1857, live at home.

Mr. Bodden and his wife are leading members of the Methodist Church at Poughkeepsie. In politics he is a Republican, and he has been active in promoting various movements for the common good, notably those for educational advancement, and he has been school trustee for many years. For more than half a century he has identified himself with the best interests of the locality, and he holds the esteem of the entire community.

LEWIS H. WRIGHT, one of the wide-awake and progressive agriculturists of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born there September 4, 1856, and on the paternal side is of English origin. His grandfather, Thomas Wright, was a native of the same town, while the birth of his grandfather, Lewis Wright, occurred in 1800, in Lagrange town, Dutchess county. After the latter's marriage with Jane Vermilyea, also a native of Dutchess county, he located upon a farm in Lagrange town, where their two children were born—John G., the father of our subject; and Mary, who wedded John Wanzer, a farmer of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. The wife and mother was a member of the Society of Friends.

After the death of his first wife, the grandfather was again married, his second union being with Zella Anderson, and they became the parents of four children: Thomas, who is a farmer of Lagrange town; Anderson, who died young; Susan, who married a Mr. Hall, of Unionvale town, Dutchess county; and Ann, who married Draper Hall, also of Unionvale. The grandfather carried on agricultural pursuits throughout life, and died April 14, 1887, on the farm now owned by our subject in the town of Fishkill. Politically, he was a Democrat.

John G. Wright, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Lagrange, May 31, 1824, there grew to manhood, and February 16, 1853, married Miss Ruanah Haight, who was born in Orange county, N. Y., in 1833, and is a daughter of Henry Haight, a native of Putnam county, this State. After their marriage the young couple located upon the farm in the town of East Fishkill, where Lewis H., their only child, was born, and remained there until 1871. The mother's death occurred October 4, 1889.

Lewis H. Wright obtained his education in the district schools near his home, and on attaining to man's estate was married January 28, 1880, to Miss Henrietta Jackson, a native of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where her father, Orry Jackson, was engaged in farming. The Jacksons are of Scotch stock. Two children grace this union: Runelia, born February 11, 1884; and John L., born April 19, 1889. Mr. Wright began his domestic life upon his present farm at Fishkill Plains, which comprises 300 acres of valuable land, and he also owns another farm of 250 acres in the town of East Fishkill. He devotes his time and attention to general farming, raising everything adapted to the soil and climate of this section, and is one of the most enterprising and energetic agriculturists of the community. Both himself and father cast their ballots in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party, and are most highly respected citizens.

GEORGE LAMOREE, a thorough, skillful farmer and business man, is a representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and has become one of the well-to-do citizens of the locality, where he is recognized as an important factor in preserving the reputation of the town as one of the most highly cultivated and improved in Dutchess county.

Our subject was born on Friday, December 8, 1819, on the farm where he now resides. Three brothers of the Lamoree family were among those hardy pioneers who came to this State prior to the Revolution—about the year 1772—one locating in Orange county, one in Albany county, and the other in Dutchess county, N. Y., the latter being Isaac Lamoree, the grandfather of our subject. From King George of England he obtained a grant for fifty acres of land in the town of Pleasant Valley, and our subject has that grant in his possession. Isaac Lamoree had two sons: John, who spent his entire life at farming in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county; and Timothy, the father of our subject.

Timothy Lamoree was born on the homestead in Pleasant Valley, which later became his property, and there he brought his bride, formerly Hester Van Wagner, who was born in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, of Holland descent. To their union were born eight children: John, a miller of Salt Point, Pleasant Valley; Sarah, who became the wife of Richard Tompkins, a farmer of Lagrange town, Dutchess county; Phœbe, who married Richard Allen, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Catherine, who became the wife of John H. Nelson, a farmer of Clinton town; Nancy, who married Platt Van Vliet, a miller and merchant of Salt Point; Eliza, who became the wife of Jonathan Allie, an agriculturist; Mary, who wedded Benjamin Howell, also a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; and George, subject of this review. Upon the old farm the parents of this family both died. They were consistent and faithful members of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics the father was a staunch Whig.

On reaching a sufficient age George Lamoree became a pupil in the district school near his home, and later attended the New Paltz Academy which he left in the spring of 1836, crossing the Hudson river on the ice on the second day of April. About this time young Lamoree joined a temperance society, very unpopular and even despised thing in those days, and for several years served as its president. On starting out in life for himself he chose the occupation to which he had been reared, and his labors have been amply rewarded, so that he is now the possessor of 400 acres in the town of Unionvale, twenty acres in the city of Poughkeepsie, and about 140 acres in the home farm. He has made a specialty of hay-raising, and had the first portable hay press in the town of Pleasant Valley. Not only is his land well cultivated, but the buildings are all of a substantial character, and the neat and thrifty appearance of the place gives evidence of an enterprising and industrious owner. Although now past the prime of life, he is still hale and hearty, and gives his attention to the improvement of his land.

Mr. Lamoree was united in marriage with Jane M. Pells, a native of the town of Rhinebeck, where her father, Simon H. Pells, was also born, and followed farming. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Amelia Van Wagner, was born in Dutchess county, and was of Holland lineage. Mrs. Lamoree had one sister, Julia M., who became the wife of John W. Moore, a farmer of Rhinebeck town. Our subject and his wife were married in 1846 and began their domestic life upon the farm which they still occupy. Four children were born to them: the eldest died in infancy; Franklin married Martha K. Canover, and is a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Emily J. married B. T. Alley, and after his death became the wife of Oscar J. Case, of Salt Point; Flora A., who is now the wife of Charles Burbank, a native of Orleans county, New York.

Mr. Lamoree takes an active interest in political affairs, uniformly voting the straight Republican ticket. He has held a number of public offices, appearing first in 1855 as justice of the peace of his town; next as supervisor for three years; and as sheriff of Dutchess county from 1864 to 1867, inclusive; also served as revenue collector of his district, the appointment being made by President Lincoln at the commencement of the Civil war, which incumbency he filled until 1864. Mr. Lamoree was one of the founders of the Poughkeepsie the City National Bank in 1860, and has been a director thereof during its existence. Previous to the Civil war he served as brigade paymaster under Gen. Isaac I. Platt. He is a public-spirited and progressive man, and is deserving of rank among the highly honored and representative pioneer citizens of Dutchess county.

George Lamore

Age and honored position do not protect him from the criminal class, and this esteemed citizen has been subjected to more than the average man's share of experience with the "ruffian burglar." On the night of November 2, 1896, two men entered his home through a small window in the basement, and carried off all the money, some $70.00, then in the house, together with as much clothing as could conveniently be taken away. This was all done without awakening the household. One of the men had called the previous day at noon, and asked for something to eat. His suspicious notions convinced the family of his evil intentions, but robbery was not thought of. One month later, December 12, the same men called about midnight, and placing a ladder to the portico, climbed in at an upstairs window, and went through the house. They placed a revolver at Mr. Lamoree's head, and demanding perfect quiet at the peril of his life, they bound both him and his wife with cords, and then searched for their booty. They secured about $30.00, and a valuable gold watch, a gift from Mr. Lamoree's father. Our subject prevailed upon them to leave the watch, which they did upon his promise to pay $5.00, which promise he will keep. The two ruffians then departed heartily and drank cider, and in their effort to get away they stole a horse from a neighbor, but were caught and arrested by Officer McCabe, indicted, tried, and then finally sentenced by Samuel K. Phillips to ten years in prison.

ISAAC S. GENUNG, a thorough and systematic farmer of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born January 30, 1831, in what was then the town of Fishkill, but is now East Fishkill, and is a worthy representative of one of the honored old families of the county, and was of French origin.

Gabriel Genung, his grandfather, was born in Morristown, N. J., May 22, 1775, and in that State, July 10, 1799, was united in marriage with Nancy Brinckerhoff, whose birth and there occurred. Shortly after their marriage they came to Dutchess county, locating in the town of Fishkill, where the grandfather engaged in farming and in the tanning business. There they reared their three sons: Adrian, who became a merchant of Swartoutville and Johnsville, Dutchess county; Joseph, the father of our subject; and Benjamin, who followed farming in Wayne county, N. Y. The mother of these children died September 10, 1844, and the father on November 20, 1857. He had a brother who faithfully served in the war of 1812.

In the town of Fishkill, March 13, 1801, was born Joseph Genung, the father of our subject, and he soon became familiar with the duties that fall to the lot of the agriculturist upon the home farm. He was united in marriage with Mrs. Charlotte Remsen, a native of the town of Fishkill, and a daughter of Abraham Storm. They located upon the old homestead farm, which the father continued to cultivate and improve until his death, June 6, 1865; his wife passed away August 11, 1893. They were both members of the Reformed Church, and in politics he was an ardent Democrat.

Our subject is the eldest in the family of ten children, the others being Sarah; Jane, who became the wife of Edgar Baldwin, but both are now deceased; John, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; Polhemus, a broker and insurance man of New York City; Joseph, who is living retired in Poughkeepsie; Albert, an agriculturist of the town of East Fishkill; and William, who died at the age of twenty years.

Upon the home farm of 155 acres of rich and arable land, Isaac S. Genung remained with his brother John and sister Sarah, and has there since carried on general farming. He is one of the substantial farmers of the township, having met with a well-deserved success in his chosen calling, and no man takes a keener interest in the prosperity of his native county, or is held in higher respect, than Mr. Genung. Politically, he affiliates with the Democratic party, which embodies his views on public questions of the day.

JOSEPH W. PHILLIPS. Among the enterprising and influential citizens of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, whose names are scattered through the pages of this volume none is more worthy of mention than the gentleman whose name introduces this brief biographical notice. His grandfather, John Phillips, was a native of Holland, and on crossing the Atlantic to the New World, located upon a farm in the town of Fishkill (now Wappinger), Dutchess county, where he spent his remaining days. There he was married and reared a family of several children, among whom was Elias Phillips, the father of our subject.

The last named was born May 3, 1792, in what was then the town of Fishkill, but is now Wappinger. When he attained to man's estate, he was married to Miss Maria Wilde, and they became the parents of seven children: Elizabeth, now the widow of John C. Storm, a farmer of East Fishkill; Sarah, who married Benjamin Strang, a farmer of the same town, but both now deceased; John, a resident of Tompkins county, N. Y.; William W., deceased, who also followed farming; Elias M., who carried on farming in Tompkins county, but is now deceased; Lumen B., an agriculturist of Tompkins county; and James D., a hardware merchant of Terre Haute, Ind. The mother of these children died in 1831, and Elias Phillips was again married, his second union being with Elizabeth Northrup, a native of Putnam county, N. Y., where her father, John Northrup, engaged in farming. Our subject was the only child born of this union. During his entire life the father followed the occupation of farming exclusively, and died upon his farm April 30, 1879, while the mother departed this life October 14, 1890. He was a Republican in politics, and the family were Baptists in religious belief.

Joseph W. Phillips was born in the town of East Fishkill May 8, 1835, and there his early life was passed amidst rural scenes upon the farm which his father had purchased in 1833. On November 6, 1856, he was married to Miss Caroline Rogers, a daughter of Laban and Jane (Sincerbox) Rogers, and a native of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, where her father was also born and engaged in farming throughout life. He was the son of John Rogers, also a native of that town, and an agriculturist by occupation. Hezekiah Rogers, the father of the last named, was born in England, and with two brothers crossed the ocean to America, he becoming a resident of the town of Beekman, while they settled on Long Island. Simeon D. Sincerbox, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Phillips, was also a native of Dutchess county.

Upon their marriage Mr. Phillips took his wife to a farm in the town of East Fishkill which he continued to operate until he purchased his present place near the village of Gayhead. It contains about ten acres, and is known as the Dr. Sutton place; but he still owns his valuable farm of 200 acres, which he now rents. At first he was engaged in general farming, but later turned his attention more to the milk business. He is at present living a quiet, retired life in his beautiful home, where hospitality abounds, and is surrounded by all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. He and his excellent wife contribute to the support of the Baptist Church at Beekman and are numbered among the prominent and highly respected citizens of the community. Politically Mr. Phillips is identified with the Republican party.

JOHAN N. LA DUE, a prominent and enterprising citizen of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born on the farm which is still his home, June 25, 1824. The family came from France during the Huguenot persecution, and in religious belief were Methodists in later years. William La Due, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Ryer, Westchester Co., N. Y., March 30, 1759, and on reaching manhood was married to Miss Elizabeth Swartout, whose birth occurred November 19, 1761. They began their domestic life upon the farm now owned by our subject and there reared their children, who were as follows: William; Samuel, who was a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; Cornelius, agriculturist of the town of Fishkill; Juda, who married William Coe, a farmer of the town of Unionvale; Jemima, who married Peter La Due, a farmer of East Fishkill; Elizabeth, who died in infancy; Sarah; Polly and Elizabeth.

Upon a part of the original tract which his father had purchased in East Fishkill, William La Due, the father of our subject, was born October 30, 1798, and was there reared. On September 20, 1820, he wedded Mary Conklin, who was born in Westchester county, N. Y., April 11, 1797, and was a daughter of Jeremiah Conklin, a native of the same county, where in later life he followed farming. Five children were born to the parents of our subject: John N.; Elizabeth, who married John C. Greene, a farmer of Westchester county; Tamar, who resided in New York C.

but is now deceased; James, a resident of California; and William L., an agriculturist of East Fishkill, Dutchess county. The father operated the homestead farm until his death, which occurred October 26, 1875; in politics he was first a Whig, and later a Republican. His faithful wife died September 18, 1866.

John N. La Due was reared upon the farm which is still his home, and there has spent his entire life, with the exception of fifteen years passed in New York City, when he was inspector of customs, and he proved a most capable officer, being prompt and faithful in the discharge of his duties. He has a fine farm of 125 acres, and now makes a specialty of fruit culture, raising apples, peaches, etc.

In 1850 Mr. La Due was married to Miss Mary Greene, who belongs to an old family of Westchester county, where her father, Israel Greene, carried on agricultural pursuits. Two children were born to them: Eugenie, who married Rev. Charles Knapp, A. M., an Episcopal minister of Delaware county, N. Y., now deceased; and Israel, who died at the age of four years. Mr. La Due is a staunch Republican in politics, is an intelligent, energetic man, highly spoken of by all his neighbors, and his life record is above reproach.

AARON A. STOCKHOLM, a valued and esteemed agriculturist, of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born here in October, 1824, and is a representative one of the oldest and most highly respected families of the county. Upon a farm in that township his paternal grandfather reared his family of five children, who in order of birth are as follows: Abraham, who became a farmer of East Fishkill; Derrick, an attorney at law, who removed to Utica, N. Y.; George, who went to Michigan, where his family still reside; Gertrude, who married Thomas E. Magler, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill; and Andrew, the father of our subject.

The last named was also a native of the town of East Fishkill, where he grew to manhood upon a farm. He married Miss Maria Peeks, who also belonged to an old family of Dutchess county, and was born in the town of East Fishkill, where her father, Chauncy Peeks, conducted a hotel. After their marriage they located upon a farm near Hopewell, where they reared their family of seven children, namely: Delia, who became the wife of James C. Emans, a farmer of East Fishkill; Mary G.; Aaron A.; Caroline, wife of Duryea Van Wyck, of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county; Harriet, wife of J. A. Young, of Westchester county, N. Y.; Charles, a restaurant keeper, of Poughkeepsie; Theodocia, widow of James Place; and John, who died in the Union service during the Civil war. The father followed the vocations of farming and milling in the town of East Fishkill, and became an extensive land owner, having at one time about 600 acres. His political support was given the Democratic party.

WILLIAM EDGAR BRINCKERHOFF, a well-known horticulturist of East Fishkill town, was there born July 24, 1820. His grandfather, Derrick Brinckerhoff, a native of Dutchess county, was descended from one of four brothers who came to this country from Holland about two hundred and fifty years ago, and the family have mostly been members of the Reformed Dutch Church.

After his marriage the grandfather located on a farm in the town of East Fishkill, where he spent the remainder of his life engaged in agricultural pursuits. In his family were nine children: John D., the eldest, was the father of our subject; Abraham was a farmer of East Fishkill town; Isaac was a merchant of Brinckerhoff, Dutchess county, but in later life engaged in farming in the town of Fishkill; William was a merchant of Peekskill, N. Y., where his death occurred; George was a farmer of Fishkill; Catherine married James B. Montrose, a farmer of East Fishkill town; Margaret wedded Charles Scofield, a farmer in the Highlands; Mary Ann married Darius Hustis, an agriculturist of the same place; and Helen married Absalom Serene, who was for a time a merchant at Hughsonville, Dutchess county, but later carried on farming in the West. She is still living.

John D. Brinckerhoff, also a native of Fishkill town, was there reared upon a farm. He married Miss Caroline Hasbrook, who was born in the town of Fishkill, and was a daughter of Col. Benjamin Hasbrook, a prominent farmer, and a Mason, fraternally. Mr. and Mrs. Brinckerhoff began housekeeping upon a farm in East Fishkill town, where he died in 1863, and she passed away in 1885. His political support was given the Democratic party. Five children were born to them: Benjamin H., now a resident of Ohio; William E., subject of this sketch; Theodoric, a merchant on Staten Island, who died in 1896; Abraham, a resident of southern California; and Susan, deceased wife of William B. Hazelton, a farmer of Mahopac Falls, New York.

The boyhood and youth of our subject were quietly passed upon the home farm. His marriage to Miss Sarah A. Anderson was celebrated in 1854. She is also a native of East Fishkill town, and a daughter of Peter Anderson, who came to that town from New England and located upon a farm. Four children graced this union: Charles E., who died aged about ten years; Carrie, wife of Henry J. Matthews, of Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Elizabeth, wife of Arthur Storm, a farmer of East Fishkill town; and Cornelia M., wife of George A. Member, a merchant of Fishkill Landing.

Since his marriage Mr. Brinckerhoff has lived upon his present farm of eighty acres, and besides general farming he gives special attention to fruit culture; being one of the most successful horticulturists of the community. He and his estimable wife contribute to the Reformed Church at Hopewell, and being a strong temperance man he always casts his ballot in support of the Prohibition party, which embodies his views on that question. He has always been identified with works of public improvement and progress, and is one of the representative and leading citizens of the community, where he has always made his home, and where he is so widely and favorably known.

MORGAN L. VAIL, a well-known dairy farmer of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, is a native of Rensselaer Co., N. Y., born March 29, 1848, but belongs to a family that was early established in Dutchess county, his great-grandfather having located upon a large tract of land in the town of Unionvale, where he reared a family of several children.

Elias Vail, the grandfather of our subject, was one of the four sons, and was born on the farm in Unionvale, December 23, 1774. He married Hannah Duncan, who was born in 1781, and they began housekeeping on a part of the old homestead. In their family were thirteen children, namely: David D., born in 1800, died in 1821; Isaac E., born in 1802, died in 1819; Simeon L., born in 1804, was a farmer of Illinois, where his death occurred; Egbert B., born in 1806, was a resident of Poughkeepsie; Mary, born in 1808, wedded John Snedecor, a farmer; Phenner P., born in 1810, engaged in farming in Dutchess Co., and in Vermont; Alexander H. is the father of our subject; Thomas S., born in 1813, died unmarried, November 25, 1894; John D., born in 1815, is a retired farmer, living in Chicago; Lavinia, born in 1817, married Elias N. Haight, a farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and both are now deceased; Milan, born in 1819, and Sarah, born in 1821, both died unmarried; and Elias D., born in 1823, is a farmer of the town of Unionvale. The grandfather always devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits, and both himself and wife died on the home farm in the town of Unionvale, in 1851.

Alexander H. Vail, the father of our subject, was born on the old homestead, October 4, 1811, and there spent his boyhood days. He wedded Caroline Smith, who was born in 1812, in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county and was a daughter of Maurice Smith, a tanner and currier by trade, whose birth occurred in the town of Fishkill in 1765. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Margaret Streit was born in Dutchess county in 1767. In their family were ten children, of whom Mrs. Vail was the youngest, the names and dates of birth of the others being as follows: Elizabeth 1788; Hannah, 1790; Abel, 1792; Mary, 1794; George, 1796; Jerusha, 1799; Morgan L. 1801; Susan, 1804; and Margaret, 1806. Maurice Smith, the great-grandfather of our subject, was an extensive landholder, owning a great deal of property where Poughkeepsie now stands, and served as sheriff of Dutchess county. The Smith family is of English descent, and an early day took quite a prominent part in the affairs of Dutchess county, where many of its members still live.

Upon their marriage, the parents of our subject lived for some time upon a farm in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, later spending eighteen years in Rensselaer county N. Y., while the following fourteen years were passed in the city of Poughkeepsie, after which they located upon the farm now owned by our subject, where the mother died in 1880, and the father in 1882. In politics he was a Democrat. The parental household included four children

Cornelia P., born in 1840, died in 1845; Albert H., born in 1842, practiced medicine in the West, and died in California in 1893; Morgan L. is next in order of birth; and Susan C., born in 1850, died in 1856.

Until sixteen years of age our subject remained in the county of his nativity, and then accompanied his parents to Poughkeepsie, where he completed his education, after which he clerked in the drug store of Wood & Tittaner for three years. In 1880 he married Caroline V. Seaman, a native of Dutchess county, and a daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Rynus) Seaman, both born in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. Richard N. Seaman, her paternal grandfather, was of English extraction, and a farmer by occupation, while the Rynus family was of Dutch stock. Mr. and Mrs. Vail at once located upon their present farm in East Fishkill town, and there their nine children were born, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Morgan L., r., 1881; Alexander S., 1882; Philip Seaman, 1883; Fanny, 1885; Caroline, 1886; Emily, 1888; Ruth, 1889; Elizabeth, 1891; and Harold Huntington, 1895. Morgan and Alexander both died in infancy.

Upon his farm of 165 acres, Mr. Vail is engaged in dairying, making a specialty of the sale of milk, and has been quite successful in his venture. He is an intelligent, public-spirited citizen, identifying himself with all matters which will promote the welfare of the community, is a Democrat in politics, and both himself and wife are faithful members of the Baptist Church at Beekman.

RICHARD T. SWIFT, a well-known resident of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, was engaged during the earlier years of his life in agricultural pursuits, but is now retired from active labor. He is a native of that town, where he was born September 5, 1817, and is the representative of an old American family, of English origin, that was founded in this country about 1640. His father, Zebulon Swift, was born at Springhill, near Sandwich, Mass., July 29, 1776, and here his grandfather, Abraham Swift, was also born. The latter was married in the Bay State, where he followed cabinet making, but later came to Dutchess county, N. Y., locating on a farm near Millbrook, which he operated in connection with work at his trade. In his family were five children: Zebulon and his twin brother, Lemuel, who was a farmer of Washington town; Bariah, a machinist and inventor; Robert, who had large business interests at Millbrook, including a sawmill; and Deborah, who died unmarried. The family belonged to the Society of Friends.

Zebulon Swift was only a boy when brought by his parents to this county, where he followed cabinet making and farming. He was married March 3, 1803, to Sarah Titus, a native of Washington town, and of English descent. Her father engaged in blacksmithing and farming as a means of livelihood. By her marriage with Mr. Swift she became the mother of nine children, namely: Deborah, who died unmarried; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Joseph Bartlett, January 1, 1828, and with her husband is now deceased; William, who was a farmer of Washington town, and has also passed away; Johanna and Phoebe, who both died unmarried; Richard T., subject of this sketch; Sarah, who also died unmarried; and Isaac, who operates a farm in the town of Washington. The father died August 16, 1823, and the mother passed away January 16, 1870.

Richard T. Swift was reared to the life of an agriculturist, which occupation he followed until his retirement, and he early became familiar with the labors on a farm. On September 12, 1839, he married Miss Hannah S. Deuel, who was born at Kinderhook, Columbia Co., N. Y., February 23, 1817, and is descended from a French Huguenot family, who sought religious freedom in this country at an early day in its history. Her father, Silas Deuel, was a native of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he married a Miss Davis, by whom he had only one child: Mrs. Swift. The entire married life of our subject and his wife was passed in the town of Washington with the exception of three years spent on a farm in Dover town, Dutchess county. For the last fifteen years he has given up active labor, enjoying a well-earned rest.

Three children graced the union of Mr. and Mrs. Swift. (1) Amelia M., born September 9, 1840, was married December 19, 1866, to Albert Knapp, a farmer of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county. (2) James D., born March 20, 1842, married Verna M. Case, October 12, 1867, and they had one son, Frederick W., now a tinsmith of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., who was born February 6, 1869, and married Charlotte Covil. Mrs. Verna M. Swift died February 3, 1873, and March 7, 1877, James D. Swift married Miss Emma E. Carson, of New York City, a daughter of John C. Carson, a native of Grenock, Scotland. They are the parents of four children: Jane Verna, who was born October 30, 1878, and died July 9, 1879; James Richard, born November 11, 1881; Richard Carson, born May 21, 1885; and Minnie Grace, born March 31, 1890. For some time James D. Swift was a merchant of Millbrook, but is now employed at the carpenter's trade. (3) Gurdon, born November 4, 1844, is the youngest child of the family, and is engaged in farming in the town of Washington.

On March 24, 1884, Mrs. Swift departed this life, leaving many friends, as well as a loving family, to mourn her loss. The children are members of various Churches, but our subject is an Orthodox Friend in religious belief, and stands high in the regard of his fellow citizens. In politics he is a firm supporter of the Republican party.

JAMES L. PINCKNEY. The fertile lands of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, have always afforded a tempting field for enterprise, and the subject of this sketch is one of the active and progressive men who have engaged successfully in agriculture and dairying in that town. He is a native of Putnam county, born at Lake Mahopac (or German Flats) March 1, 1855. He obtained a common-school education there, and at an early age engaged in farming on his own account. In 1889 he married Miss Marie L. Hay, and their union being childless, they adopted a little girl October 1, 1891, giving her the name of Mary Antoinette Pinckney. She was born on Washington's birthday, 1885.

Perry Pinckney, our subject's father, was born at Red Mills, Putnam county (now Mahopac Falls), and his early education was limited to the district schools of that time and locality. For a number of years he followed the carpenter's trade, and later purchased a tract of land in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he conducted a dairy farm during his remaining days. He married Miss Elizabeth Lockwood, daughter of David Lockwood, a well-known hotel keeper at Carmel, Putnam county, and had six children, of whom our subject was the youngest. All were born at the old home in Putnam county, and were educated in the public schools of the vicinity. (1) Lewis became a farmer of the town of Pawling, and has never married. (2) Sarah married Robert J. Lee, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill, and has had eleven children: Ella, who married Madison J. Horton, and has two daughters, Millie and May; Florence, who married Isaac Horton, and has four children, Madison, Mary L., and two others; Annie; Alice; William; Edith; Burton; Leona, who married, and has three children, Andrew, Hiram, and one whose name is not given; Edward L., who died when about sixteen years of age; and Lula and Maude, the last named living with her aunt, Mrs. Sophia Tompkins, who is bringing her up. (3) Sophia married Walter Tompkins, a farmer of Putnam county, but they have no children. (4) Irene has never married. (5) Caroline married John E. Patterson, a farmer, and has three children: Edith, May E., and one whose name is not given.

Mrs. Pinckney was born January 10, 1853, in New York City, and after attending the public schools there, she became an expert seamstress on shirts, vests and dresses, and afterward followed the business of dress-making for twenty years. Her father, Anthony Hay, was a native of Schwalbach, Germany where he received his education. He spent some years in Paris, France, as a shoemaker and he married a French lady, Mlle. Marie Catherine Renaud, daughter of Daniel Renaud. The latter had twelve children—six sons and six daughters: Daniel, Jr., who died in France; Peter, now living in France; Frederick (deceased), who had two children—Frederick and Emma—and formerly lived in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Henry, living in California; Eugene (deceased); Louis, who died in France; Marion, who died in France; Louise (deceased), formerly of Paterson, N. J.; Catherine (deceased), who was Mrs. Lalin, of Green Point, Long Island, N. Y., and had thirteen children; Elizabeth, of France; Susa (now Mrs. Hilbert, of Green Point, N. Y.) had four children living—Fred, in California; Lou M., in New York City; Alfred, Jr., in Green Point; and Emily, in Tremont, N. Y.—and Marie Catherine, the mother of Mrs. Pinckney. Anthony Hay and wife came to New York City, where their two daughters were born. Mrs. Pinckney, the younger, January 10, 1853.

and Emma C., the elder, on January 15, 1851. The latter attended the city schools during girlhood, and afterward married Charles Schaefer, a carpenter of the same city. They had one son, Charles, who died when nearly two years old. Anthony Hay died July 5, 1854. His widow is still living.

JOHN H. ORTON, residing near Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is a leading dairyman and agriculturist of that vicinity. He is a native of the town of Dover, born March 5, 1844, and has passed his life there, attending the public schools in boyhood and engaging in farming at an early age. In 1889 he purchased from Alice Wheeler his present farm, containing 125 acres of fine land, and his excellent management has made it one of the best of its kind in the township. Although he is not a politician in the strict sense of the term, he is a strong supporter of Democratic principles. In 1878 he married Miss Lucy J. Thorp, daughter of Bradford Thorp, a well-known resident of Lime Rock, Conn., and they had four children: Willard B. and a daughter (twins), born January 29, 1878, the latter living only three days, while the former who was a bright little boy, lacked but eleven days of being three years old when he, too, died; Oliver L., born February 28, 1883; and Claude M., born April 11, 1888.

Our subject's ancestors were early settlers in Connecticut, and his grandfather, William Orton, was a native of that State, and became a well-to-do farmer. He and his wife, Ruana, reared a family of four children: Sally, the wife of Harry Edmonds; James, who married Lydia Finch, and had five children; Harry, who never married; and Oliver L., our subject's father, who was born in Connecticut, August 15, 1809. After acquiring a common-school education he learned the shoemaker's trade, but did not follow it long. He was a musician and a trooper in the days of the old militia. In politics he was a staunch Democrat. He married Miss Ruth B. Burton, and had six children, of whom our subject was the fifth in order of birth. The eldest, Mary A., was born February 2, 1834, and married James Orton (a relative), who was engaged in farming near Patterson, Putnam Co., N. Y.; they had one son, Charles, who died in 1888. (2) James W. Orton was born October 27, 1835, in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and after leaving school followed farming for some time, but is now engaged in mercantile business at New Milford, Conn. He is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge at Dover. His first wife, Miss Sarah Lee, died August 16, 1865, and he is now married to Miss Maria Sherman. He has no living offspring, the two children of his first marriage, Charles and Bertha, having died in infancy. (3) Jetson Orton, who was born in Dover Plains, August 16, 1839, is a farmer by occupation. He married Susan Wheeler, daughter of Alfred and Mary Wheeler, prominent farmers of Dover, and has three children: Lewis J., who married Sarah Brinck; Mary, the wife of Joseph Titus; and Burton R., who is at home. (4) Sallie R. Orton, was born in the town of Dover, May 14, 1841, and like the other members of the family received an education in the public schools near her home. She married Miles C. Bump, a carpenter of Amenia, and has two children—Thomas L. and Nettie M. (6) Martha J. Orton, the youngest of the family, born October 9, 1846, died of consumption at the age of twenty-one years.

Mrs. Orton's grandfather, Hercules Westely Thorpe, was a native of Lime Rock, Conn., the old home of this family. He married Judith Lampson, and had five children: John, Bradford, Horace, Hiram, and Esther. Bradford Thorpe, Mrs. Orton's father, has always been a farmer at Lime Rock. He married Frances Winters, and had nineteen children, of whom fifteen are living, as well as both the parents. Edward married Ruth Jones; Mary,—Isaac Dinger; Minnie—William Dinger; Frank—Pollie Bishop; Andrew—Sarah Chase; Esther—Homer Brown; Fannie, Julia, and Sabelia never married; Lucy J. is the wife of our subject; William and Charles are not married; Rose is the wife of George Bishop; Estella married William Bishop; Hattie is not married; Birdie, Caroline, and John and Amelia are deceased.

HERBERT J. CURTIS, a stalwart and sturdy representative of the noble yeomanry who make up the agricultural population of Dutchess county, is a resident of the town of Red Hook, where he was born April 11, 1858. His father, John Curtis, was the son of Le Grand Curtis, a member of the firm of Carroll & Curtis, furniture dealers and undertakers, of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county. The father wedded Jane C. Beaumont, and to them were born eight children: Le Grand B., born November 3, 1841, married Helen Andrews, and after her death wedded Mary Massonneau; Edwin S., born August 28, 1843, was united in marriage with Miss Emma French, daughter of John French, a professor at West Point, N. Y.; L. Irene, born September 2, 1845, is the wife of John A. Fraleigh, son of George Fraleigh; Florence, born in December, 1847, Willis, born in November, 1849, and Grace, born October 2, 1852, all died in infancy; Herbert J. is the next in order of birth; and James C., born April 15, 1860, also died in infancy. The father of this family departed this life in August, 1875.

The maternal grandparents of our subject, Abraham and Martha (Carter) Beaumont, came to the United States from Onley, near Huddersfield, England, and located at Chester Creek, near Philadelphia, Penn. In their native land two children had come to bless their union: Jane C., mother of our subject, born April 15, 1816; and Martha A., born February 18, 1818; after their location at Chester Creek the family circle was increased by the birth of another daughter, Eliza T., born June 30, 1831. Being an expert machinist, the father soon secured work at Chester Creek, where he remained for four years, and then removed to Trenton, N. Y., where he also found employment at his chosen trade. His wife died in this country in February, 1832, but his death occurred while on a visit to England in 1843.

On reaching a sufficient age Herbert J. Curtis entered the common schools of Red Hook, completing his studies in the De Garmo Institute, Rhinebeck, N. Y., which has since been transferred to Fishkill-on-Hudson. After leaving school he began his business career as a bookkeeper in his father's store, but now turns his attention to agricultural pursuits, conducting a fine farm just outside the village of Red Hook, which might well be termed a model farm, as it is supplied with all modern conveniences, good and substantial buildings, and the fields are under a high state of cultivation. He also gives considerable attention to the raising of fine poultry, and has been quite successful in all his undertakings.

On November 7, 1878, Mr. Curtis was united in marriage with Miss Angie B. Lasher, daughter of Nelson P. Lasher, who was a teacher in the public schools of Red Hook. Mrs. Curtis began her education in the public schools of that place, completing same at Claverack Institute, Claverack, N. Y., and later engaged in teaching for some time with her father. By her marriage she has become the mother of four children: C. Leland; Minnie G.; Carrol J., who died February 26, 1883; and Raymond J. The parents are widely and favorably known throughout the community, and hold a high position in social circles.

JOHAN A. TRAVER, one of the most progressive and intelligent agriculturists of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born January 27, 1834, on the farm upon which he now resides.

It is not known exactly when the first of the American branch of the family crossed the ocean but his ancestors were undoubtedly among the pioneer farmers of Sullivan county, as three brothers of the name came from there at a very early date, and purchased a large tract of land in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and afterward separated.

David Traver, our subject's great-grandfather, had a son, Andrew D. Traver, born in Clinton town, who also followed farming, and about 1818 moved to a farm in the town of Rhinebeck now occupied by Mr. Crandall. He was thrifty and successful, highly esteemed in the neighborhood, and was an active member of the Lutheran Church at Wurtemburg. He died at that place in his eighty-ninth year and was buried there, as was also his wife, in her seventy-sixth year. They had three children: Maria (deceased), who married Georg Snyder; Michael, our subject's father; and Julia, the widow of H. D. Teal, deceased.

Michael Traver was born October 10, 1809, in the town of Clinton, but passed most of his life in Rhinebeck town. He had but limited educational advantages, but he has always kept himself well posted upon general topics, and is a constant and intelligent reader. In 1828 he married Eliza Teal, a descendant of one of the oldest and most prominent families of the township, a daughter of John Teal. The young couple settled upon the present homestead near Rhinebeck where Mr. Traver died July 6, 1895, in her eighty-fourth year. Michael Traver always displayed good judgment in business matters, and his success was based upon thrift and industry. In earlier times he was a Whig, and later a Republican, but in local affairs he always voted indepen-

John A. Francis

ently. He was never an office seeker, but at one time was assessor of his township. He united with the Wurtemberg Lutheran Church in his youth, and was one of the builders of the Lutheran church of Rhinebeck village, where for many years he was a leading official. He led a life of quiet and usefulness, which brought him the well-deserved regard of all who knew him. He passed to his final rest March 18, 1896, in his eighty-seventh year, one of those few who leave

"no memorial,
But a world made better by their lives."

John A. Traver, the subject of our sketch, the only son of his parents, received a good English education in boyhood, attending first the district schools of the neighborhood, and later studying for three years in Rhinebeck Academy under Prof. Harper. His reading has been extended far beyond the ordinary limits, his attention being especially devoted to history. He has also read much in the line of his own business, of which he takes a scientific view. After leaving school he began to relieve his father of his cares, and for the last twenty years the entire responsibility of the management of the farm of 130 acres was devolved upon him. His good judgment, integrity and public spirit have made him a leader in local affairs, and he has great influence in town and county politics. He has always been a Republican, but has never sought office, although he has been elected to several positions—having been assessor of the township for many years, and supervisor four terms, 1892-93, in 1894 for two years, and in 1896 for two years; he has also been chairman of the committee on equalization of the county, and is a trustee of Rhinebeck Savings Bank.

In 1855 Mr. Traver was married to Miss Elizabeth Ten Broeck, daughter of Samuel and Maria (Parks) Ten Broeck, and a descendant of one of the old families. They have four children: Eliza, (Mrs. William Wey); Charles, who assists his father upon the farm; Maria (Mrs. Frank Wey); and Jennie, who is at home. The children were educated in Rhinebeck Academy, the same school in which Mr. Traver completed his studies. Charles and Eliza paid especial attention to music, the former being a talented violinist, and the latter a proficient on the piano. The family are leading members of the Lutheran Stone Church at Rhinebeck, and have always been prominent in the social life of the locality. The homestead of the family has been in their possession for nearly one hundred years. The family is also noted for its longevity; Andrew D. Traver being at the time of his decease, eighty-nine; Leah Traver, his wife, seventy-six; Michael Traver, eighty-seven; and Eliza Traver, eighty-four years.

JAMES E. VAN KLEECK is the owner of a fine farm of sixty acres in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, where with progressive and improved methods he carries on agricultural pursuits, while the well-tilled fields yield to him a golden tribute in return for the care and labor he bestows upon them. In the midst of these stand good buildings, substantial and well-kept, and the air of neatness and thrift which pervades the place indicates the careful supervision of the owner, who is justly regarded as one of the leading farmers of the neighborhood.

Mr. Van Kleeck is a native of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, born November 19, 1820. His father, Minard Van Kleeck, was born in the city of Poughkeepsie, as was the grandfather, who also bore the name of Minard. The founder of the family in America was likewise a Minard Van Kleeck, and was a native of Holland, whence he emigrated to America, living for some years on Long Island. He then took up his residence in Poughkeepsie, where he spent his remaining days. The grandfather of our subject was here reared and married. Through the Revolutionary war he served as one of the defenders of the colonies, and when the struggle was ended he returned to his home at Poughkeepsie. His family numbered three children: James, who died of yellow fever in New York City, where he was engaged in business as a candlemaker; Rachel, who became the wife of James Talmadge, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley; and Minard the father of our subject.

The last named was reared in Poughkeepsie, and when a young man worked for various farmers in the neighborhood. He married Helen Rugar, a native of Lagrange town, and a daughter of John Rugar, a farmer and carpenter, who belonged to an old Holland family. Mr. Van Kleeck removed with his bride to Lagrange town, and continued agricultural pursuits throughout his life. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat. His death occurred in 1856; that of his wife in 1845. Their children were as follows: Cordelia, married Peter Youngs, a farmer of Dutchess county, and both are deceased; James E. is the next younger; John removed to the West, where his death occurred; Hannah E. is the wife of Morris Demers, a cooper, of Pennsylvania; Mary J. was married and removed to the West, since which time no news has been received of her; Helen became the wife of William Potts, formerly a farmer of Lagrange; Peter followed farming in Lagrange town until his death; Minard and Rachel both died in early life.

The subject proper of this review spent his boyhood days in the usual manner of farmer lads, his time being largely occupied by work on the old homestead, and to the pursuit to which he was reared he has always devoted his energies. He is ever an advocate of advancement, and ready to accept improved methods which his judgment countenances as practical. In his dealings he is strictly honorable, and his well-spent life commends him to the confidence and regard of all.

Mr. Van Kleeck was united in marriage with a daughter of David Rigar, and they resided on the old farm in Lagrange until 1869, when he sold his property there and came to his present farm. On July 4, 1895, he was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who was a most estimable lady.

JULIUS O. ROWE, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Milan, Dutchess county, was born September 7, 1830, upon his present estate, which has been in the possession of his family for over 135 years.

Johannes Rowe, great-grandfather of our subject, and a German by birth, came in 1760 with some of his brothers to Dutchess county, where he purchased 911 acres of land from Chancellor Robt. R. Livingston, and much of this land is still in the possession of the Rowe family. For this land he paid £750, on which, in 1766, he built a stone house (still standing), and passed the remaining years of his life in the quiet calling of a farmer. Johannes Rowe died in 1771, and was buried in the family ground across the road from the church which bears the family name. He was twice married, and by his first wife had six children, two daughters—Mary (Mrs. James Stewart), Catherine (Mrs. William Stewart); and four sons—John, Sebastian, Philip and Mark; and by his second wife he had one daughter, Lydia—seven children in all. To each of these the father gave a farm in the town of Milan, and the boys all settled there and were prominent in the early history of the town; they built the Methodist church there and were generous supporters of many local enterprises, from which that neighborhood still derives benefit. Philip had a son William P. Rowe, who served as a soldier in the war of 1812.

Mark Rowe, our subject's grandfather, married Catherine Pitcher, and reared a family of four sons: John, a farmer in the town of Milan, left no children; Garrett, a soldier in the war of 1812, was a farmer in Columbia county, and had six children, whose descendants still live there; William was a farmer in the town of Milan, and left several children; and Leonard Rowe, our subject's father, born on the present farm in 1801, became a farmer by occupation. He was married, in 1827, to Miss Eliza C. Reid, a native of the town of Milan. The Reids are of English origin, and the first American ancestors came at an early date, settling in New England. Peter Reid, Mrs. Rowe's grandfather, married Miss Thankful Beecher, of New Haven, Conn., and the son Ely was born in Connecticut, in early life coming to Dutchess county, where he met and married Miss Catherine Rowe, a native of the town of Milan (then Northeast). They settled in Rhinebeck-on-Hudson, where E. Reid was a merchant for a number of years. After the marriage of our subject's parents they settled at the old homestead, where they reared a family of four children: Julius C. Edward, Horatio, and Virginia A.

Leonard Rowe was very influential in local affairs, a leader in the Democratic organization, and for many years a supervisor and justice of the peace. Edward went to Minnesota in 1856, purchased a large tract of land on the Minnesota river where he improved a large farm, and resided there twenty-one years. In his health failing, he rented his land and returned to Milan in 1887, where he died in 1891. Julius O. Rowe still resides with his brother and sister at Home Nest, the ancestral home of their parents, where in youth they received an academic education, fitting them for a vocation in life. They stand high in the esteem of the people, among whom they live. In politics Julius O. is a Democrat, but has never sought nor could be induced to hold any official position. Horatio has served satisfactory as supervisor for several terms.

SHERMAN HOWARD, a prominent agriculturist and a dairyman of the town of Poughkeepsie, and a descendant of one of the oldest families of Dutchess county, was born in the town of Pawling, January 27, 1821. The family is of Irish origin, the first of the American line settling in Rhode Island at an early date.

Edward Howard, the great-great-grandfather, a Quaker, came from Rhode Island to Dutchess county early in the seventeenth century, settling on Quaker Hill, in what is now the town of Pawling, when that locality was a primeval wilderness. He built a cabin near a spring of water, and he and his wife endured all the hardships and privations of pioneer life before they transformed their land into a productive farm. They had three children, viz.: Cynthia (who married James Akin), Benjamin and Edward.

Edward, our subject's great-grandfather, was born in the year 1730, married Phebe Hart, and reared a family of eleven children: Stephen, Edward, John, William, Thomas, Richard, Matthew, Phebe, Mary, Patience and Sarah. Phebe married Daniel Martin; Mary married Samuel Tripp; Sarah married Thomas Stephens; and Patience married John Howard, an officer in the British army, whom she married during the Revolutionary war.

Stephen Howard, the grandfather of our subject, was born in 1760, was a tanner and shoemaker by trade, and also followed farming at the old homestead. Like his ancestors, he adhered to the faith of the Quakers, as have the majority of his descendants. He married Theodocia Totten, of Westchester county, by whom he had six children: Robert, Peter, Thomas, James (who died in childhood), Phebe and Edward (our subject's father.)

Edward Howard was born in 1785, and was a farmer in the town of Pawling, and in politics was a Democrat. He married Drusilla Sherman, a daughter of Abial Sherman, of Pawling, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and a politician of note, serving as a member of the State Legislature in 1817.

Two children were born to this union: Matilda A., who married Hiram Haviland, who resided on Quaker Hill, in the town of Pawling; and Sherman, our subject. The mother, Drusilla Sherman Howard, died in 1857, and the father survived her until the year 1871.

Sherman Howard grew to manhood at the old homestead, attending the schools of the neighborhood. His first venture into the world of business was as a clerk in a general store, where he remained two years. He then returned to the homestead. He was married in 1853 to Sarah Dorland, daughter of Samuel and Sarah Dorland, of the town of Lagrange. Of the five children of this union only two lived to maturity, Anna M., the wife of Edwin S. Barnes, a farmer of Poughkeepsie township, and Charles, who is at home. Charles married Anna K. Barnes, and they have one son, Roger S. Howard. In 1869 Mr. Howard purchased his present farm of 100 acres near Arlington, where he is engaged in general farming and the milk business, to which he gives especial attention. He has made extensive improvements upon the estate, and it is now a fine and productive property.

Mr. Howard was the first justice of the peace of the town of Pawling, and held such office from 1846 to 1850. In 1850 he was appointed deputy sheriff by Alonzo H. Morey, who was then sheriff of Dutchess county, and held such office three years. In 1854 and 1856, Mr. Howard represented the town of Pawling in the board of supervisors, and held the office of postmaster of the town of Poughkeepsie, at Manchester Bridge, from the years 1880 to 1892. Mr. Howard takes great interest in local affairs, notwithstanding his advanced age, and in politics is a Democrat.

ARVIS HAIGHT, agriculturist, of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, residing near Johnsville, is engaged in dairying and horticulture. His estate lies upon both sides of the highway between Johnsville and Brinckerhoff, and is bounded on the west by Charles D. Sherwood's farm, on the east by the farm of John Smith, on the north by Fishkill creek, and on the south by the property of Henry Schluter.

Arvis Haight was born at the old home in Phillipstown, August 9, 1849, and acquired his education in the district schools while working upon the farm and in the mill. In 1870 he left home and went to New York City, where he became a salesman in a commission house in Washington Market. There he remained nine years, and then moved to Dutchess county, and after a short residence in Fishkill village, he purchased, in 1880, his present farm. It contains eighty acres of cultivated land, and twenty which are not cleared. From ten to fifteen cows are kept, and the fruit and vegetable crops are of various kinds.

Mr. Haight married Miss Phœbe A. Hustis, by whom he has had three children: Bessie Beulah, Ralph, and Edna, who died at the age of eight years. Mrs. Haight's father was Caleb Hustis, son of William Hustis, the son of Caleb Hustis, and her mother was Elizabeth Ann Haight, the daughter of James and Jemima (Budd) Haight, and granddaughter of Marion (Swims) Haight.

EDWIN TRAVER, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, is a descendant of one of the earliest settlers of this region. Among the emigrants from Holland who located in Ulster county, in 1710, was Anna Maria Treber, who had two sons between the ages of nine and fifteen, and from them the numerous Traver family in this vicinity have sprung. The first of the name to settle in the town of Rhinebeck, came about 1715.

Our subject's grandfather, Henry B. Traver, was a native of Dutchess county, and probably of the town of Rhinebeck, where he was a prosperous farmer in later years. He married Miss Cookingham, and had seven children: Lewis, a farmer in Rhinebeck, who served as a soldier in the war of 1812; William, also a farmer in Rhinebeck; Eve, who married Gideon Traver, a farmer; Maria; Aaron, our subject's father; Moses, a farmer; and Gilbert, who is now a retired farmer in Rhinebeck.

Aaron Traver was born at the old farm in 1809. He married Christma Traver, a native of the town of Clinton, whose great-grandfather, Bastian Traver, was born in Holland, and came to Dutchess county when a young man, locating in the town of Rhinebeck. His son David had a son Samuel, born in Clinton town, in 1783, who was the father of Christina Traver. After their marriage our subject's parents lived in Clinton town for some years, and then moved to the farm in Rhinebeck, now owned by our subject. They had eleven children: Darius, a farmer in Rhinebeck; Elber, who died in 1863, in defense of the Union; Nathaniel, now living in Arizona; Seth, who died in 1887; Edwin, our subject; Sarah, who died in 1886; Wesley B., a farmer in Rhinebeck; Oscar and DeWitt, who died in youth; Mary, who died in 1891; and Emma C., now living with our subject. The mother died in 1882, and the father six years later.

The subject of our sketch was born in the town of Clinton, November 15, 1844, and six years of age he moved with his parents to his present home. His farm comprises 180 acres of land, well adapted to general farming. For about six years in all, during his early years, he taught school, and he takes great interest in educational progress and in all the movements of the day, keeping well informed on current measures. In politics he is a Democrat, and he contributes to the Lutheran Church, of which his forefathers were adherents.

WILLIAM P. ROE, a well-known dairyman and agriculturist of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, residing near Brinckerhoff, is one of the most enterprising workers in his chosen lines.

John Roe, his father, was born June 1, 1792, and followed the occupation of a farmer, settling upon a farm of about 100 acres in the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county. On April 1, 1849, he married Mary Ann Phillips, who was born August 26, 1802, in Fishkill, Dutchess county. To their union one son was born — William P. Our subject's mother was a daughter of William I. Phillips (who was born March 14, 1767, and died July 9, 1854) and his wife, Elizabeth (who was born December 3, 1774, and died March 14, 1854). The father of our subject died September 27, 1881; the mother passing away January 24, 1875.

William P. Roe was born near Flushing, Long Island, January 29, 1847. Although at the age of two years with his father, and received his education in the district school of the town of Fishkill, assisting in the meantime with the work at home. After leaving school he devoted his attention to the management of the farm, to which he succeeded at his father's death. On September 27, 1861, he married Miss Elizabeth De Long, daughter of James and Frances (Seaman) De Long, prominent residents of the town of Beekman. James R. De Long was the only brother of the Hon. Charles E. De Long, the most prominent lawyer on the Pacific coast, and who was appointed, by President U. S. Grant, United States minister to Japan, which office he filled with great honor, his wife being the first American lady introduced to the Mikado of Japan. In 1877 Mr. Roe sold his farm and moved to Brooklyn, where he opened a feed, flour and grain store, which he carried on for one year; he then returned to Dutchess county, and worked for a year on the farm of his father-in-law. Since that time he has been continuously engaged in agriculture, spending four years on the estate of George Tabor, of Beekman (Mrs. Roe's uncle); three years at Greenhaven on the Peters farm; three years in the town of Unionvale, on the Peter H. Christie property; and for the past seven years at his present location — the farm of 300 acres owned by W. F. Wilson, of New York City. He is largely interested in dairying, keeping, on an average, about fifty cows, with many young cattle.

Edwin Traver

In politics Mr. Roe is a Democrat, and in religion inclines to the Methodist Church, which he and his wife attend. They have had six children: John Franklin, George Bert, Mary Helena, James Clifford, Charles, Bertha, Sarah Elizabeth, Edith May, Carrie Elizabeth and William P., all of whom are living, except Charles and Sarah Elizabeth, who died in childhood.

Mrs. Roe's paternal great-grandparents were James and Sally (Losee) De Long, and their son Egbert (her grandfather) married Sarah Crandall, daughter of Reed and Elizabeth Crandall. On the maternal side her grandparents were David N. Seaman and his wife, Melissa Howard, who was a daughter of Edward Howard. This David N. Seaman was Sheriff of Dutchess county, serving three years from 1847.

THEODORE ANTHONY, a representative agriculturist of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, resides one-half mile from Fishkill village, upon a farm which has been in the family for many years. He was born September 25, 1830, in the house which he now occupies, and has passed the greater portion of his life there. His education was begun in the public schools of Fishkill, and completed in the old academy which has given so many of the clever sons of Dutchess county their intellectual training. On completing his course there he began his career as a farmer. Some years were spent at the homestead, and then he went to De Kalb county, Ill., to improve some prairie land belonging to his father; but after four years he returned and resumed his work at the old home. In 1884 he purchased the place, which now contains sixty-three acres, mainly devoted to general crops. He keeps from ten to twelve cows, and is very successful in his dairy work, and also raises some fine fruit of various kinds, his apple orchard being extensive and productive. The estate is bounded on the north and west by the lands of Sylvanus Haight, on the east by the old Albany and New York post road, and on the south by the property of Sebring Smith and Charles D. Rogers.

On November 20, 1862, Mr. Anthony married Miss Mary T. Phillips, daughter of Isaac and Cornelia (Tappan) Phillips, and granddaughter of John Phillips and his wife Hester (Van Voorhis). On the maternal side she was a granddaughter of Major Peter Tappan and his wife Annie (DeWitt), who was a daughter of Col. Charles DeWitt of Revolutionary fame, and Blandina (DuBois), his wife. Major Peter Tappan was a son of Christopher, who was a son of the Christopher Tappan, whose daughter Cornelia married Gov. George Clinton. Mrs. Anthony died November 15, 1884, leaving no children, and Mr. Anthony was married October 20, 1894, to her sister, Miss Cornelia V. Phillips, who lived but a short time, passing away December 18, 1894. Both were members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and were held in high esteem among their acquaintances. Mr. Anthony has also been a member of that Church for years, and at different times has held the office of deacon. Mr. Anthony is one of the leading workers in local affairs, and in the Republican organization, and has held the office of town auditor, and received the nominations of his party on various occasions as assessor, highway commissioner and collector.

The Anthony family is among the early comers to this State, and our subject's great-grandparents, Nicholas and Catherine (Daly) Anthony, were residents of New York City. Their son John, our subject's grandfather, married Elizabeth Van Wyck, daughter of William and Martha Carman Van Wyck. William Anthony, the father of our subject, was born August 10, 1798, and became a successful farmer at the present homestead, owning about 210 acres of land. He was a prominent member of the Reformed Dutch Church for many years previous to his death, which occurred November 16, 1879. His first wife, Miss Mary Wright, was a daughter of Enos and Mary (Woolen) Wright. She died June 20, 1836, leaving four children: John W., Theodore, Elizabeth (Mrs. Abraham G. Remsen, of Plainfield, N. J.), and Mary, who died at the age of thirty. By a second wife, Hannah Wright, a sister of the first, there were also four children: Cornelia, Sarah A., Enos and Kate.

JAMES MADISON WOOD. It is a natural and praise-worthy interest in our common humanity that lends to biography its chief charm to the reader, and there is no life history from which there may not be some lesson drawn to enlighten and direct the inexperienced, cheer the despondent, or renew the energy of the weary. Years spent in quiet usefulness may win honor for gray hairs as well as those which have been passed under the public eye, and while no one would detract from the merits of those who gain the world's applause, faithful attention to the every-day duties of life may also show ability and high purpose.

Our subject's paternal grandparents, Joseph and Elizabeth (Light) Wood, were early settlers, and his father, Joseph I. Wood, was born September 16, 1783, dying April 2, 1861, after a life given mainly to agricultural pursuits. His wife, Rachel Finch, was a native of Croton Falls, Westchester county, born June 7, 1790, and her death occurred March 19, 1879. Our subject was the eldest of five children; the others being: Martha E., Isaac F., John H., and Harvey.

James Madison Wood, who is one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of Matteawan, Dutchess county, was born in Johnsville, town of Fishkill, October 1, 1816. His education was received at the district school at Glenham for some years, and he then pursued the higher branches, including trigonometry and surveying, in a private school. On attaining his majority he left the farm, and learned the machinist's trade, which he followed until 1860, when he engaged in mercantile business, conducting a general store at Matteawan. In 1869 he disposed of this, and purchased a farm of 800 acres in Louisa county, Va., where he remained five years, raising corn, wheat, oats, and tobacco. Selling the property in 1874, he returned to Matteawan and rented a gristmill, and from that time until his retirement from business, in 1885, he was engaged in milling and in dealing in flour and feed. His sound judgment in business affairs gave him an influential place in local affairs; yet he has never sought public honors. He voted the Democratic ticket until 1859, but since that date he has been a Republican.

He married Louisa Rothery, daughter of John and Mary (Ashforth) Rothery, who were both natives of England. Her great-grandfather (on the father's side) was Joseph Rothery, and her grandfather, John Rothery, was the originator of the Rothery files, known all over the world. Her maternal grandparents were William Ashforth and his wife, Ann Clay, a native of Chesterfield, England, and a cousin of the famous American statesman, Henry Clay. Mr. and Mrs. Wood have had five children: Mary Ann, who married Moses Cortland Sanford, of New Jersey; John A. Wilfred, who died in infancy; Ida, who died at the age of eleven; and Lelia, the wife of Albert Townsend, of Peekskill, N. Y. Mr. Wood has been a member of the I. O. O. F. for nearly fifty-two years, and is now one of the two surviving charter members of Evergreen Lodge.

WILLIAM H. HAIGHT. In his chosen specialties of dairying and horticulture the subject of this sketch is regarded as one of the leaders in his vicinity, and his fine farm within sight of the village of Fishkill, Dutchess county, is one of the best-managed places of its kind.

For several generations the home of his family has been at Phillipstown, Putnam Co. N. Y., where his grandfather, Joshua Haigh was a farmer. Henry W. Haight, our subject's father, was born there in 1809, and became a farmer and extensive dealer in shingles and timber. On November 7, 1829, he married Jane Mekeel, who was born in 1808, the daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (Bell) Mekeel and of this union eight children were born: Sylvanus W., Mary E., Charles B., Sarah Jane, John, Phoebe W., William H. (our su ect), and Albert. The father died December 20, 1872, and the mother passed away May 5, 1886.

William H. Haight was born September 7, 1844, and grew to manhood on the farm near Phillipstown, attending the neighboring district schools in winter and assisting in the work at home at other seasons. At eighteen he left school and engaged in business, following the occupations of his father. He continued to conduct the homestead until he was thirty years old, when he rented a farm for a few years, and later purchased his present property, which contains something over 100 acres. He keeps thirty-five head of cattle, and sells an average of 200 quarts of milk per day the year round, while a goodly portion of his estate is devoted to the raising of fine varieties of fruit. As a business man he holds a high reputation, and he is a stockholder in the National Bank at Matteawan.

Mr. Haight has a pleasant home. His wife, whom he married February 12, 1881, and whose maiden name was Mary Nelson, is a daughter of Justus and Sarah (Nelson) Nelson. They attend the Methodist Episcopal Church, and are interested in all efforts for the advancement of morality. Their only son, Harry N. Haight, is a student in the Union School at Fishkill. Politically, Mr. Haight is a Republican, but has not given much time to party work, especially of late years. While living in Phillipstown he held the office of commissioner of highways for three years.

CASPER LAWSON, one of the most enterprising and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born at Barnegat, Dutchess Co., N. Y., November 22, 1823. His ancestors came from Holland at an early period, and settled in Dutchess county. The great grandfather of our subject, William C. Lawson (who spelled his name "Lansink"), wedded the first white girl born in Dutchess county. She was a Miss Lghmie, her Christian name being now unknown. The wedding created wide notice, and it is said that all the "whites" of Dutchess county attended—not very numerous in those days, though "Redmen" were plentiful.

His grandfather, Matthew Lawson, was born in the town of Fishkill, and became interested in several lines of business there, aside from the management of his small farm. He married Eleanor Hoffman, a native of Dutchess county, and reared a family of seven children. His five sons were all engaged in boating and in the stone and lime business. Simeon married Mary Miller; Daniel married Rachel Weaver; Peter H. (our subject's father) married Kathline Westervelt; Matthew married Ann Budd; John M. never married; Elizabeth was the wife of Thomas Lawson, who was engaged in boating and in the lime business; and Maria was the wife of John Bower, a shoemaker.

Peter H. Lawson was born at Barnegat, in 1793, and died there in 1828, his wife surviving him six years. She was the daughter of Casparus Westervelt, a native of Dutchess county, and a descendant of an old Holland-Dutch family. He owned and conducted a farm and gristmill, and was a prominent citizen of the town of Poughkeepsie. Peter Lawson was an honorable, upright man, whose reputation is a heritage of which his children may well be proud. He and his wife were devout members of the Reformed Dutch Church. They had seven children, two of whom died in infancy. Elizabeth married John Bishop (now deceased), then a mason and builder in New York City, and later a merchant and ferryman at New Hamburg, where his widow resided until her death in February, 1896; Albert G., a boatman by occupation, is now living in Brooklyn; Kathline married Benjamin Dearn, a native of Dutchess county, who engaged in mercantile business in New York City; and Eleanor married Adam Graham, a native of Poughkeepsie, and a well-known merchant and hotel-keeper at New Hamburg; and Casper (or Caspaorus).

The last named was a mere child when he lost his parents by death. He attended the schools of his native place until he was fourteen, when he began boating on the river, an occupation which he followed for many years. On December 15, 1847, he married Miss Eliza Nichols, who was born at the present site of Passaic, N. J., December 12, 1820. Her father, John Nichols, was a school teacher, and was an active worker in the Democratic party in his locality. He and his wife, Ann Masters, were both natives of England. After his marriage Mr. Lawson moved to New York City and engaged in a mercantile enterprise with his brother-in-law, Benjamin Dearn, but soon resumed his former employment, which he continued until 1868. He did an extensive business in the transportation of brick, having twenty-two boats under his control. His success reflects great credit upon him, as it was the result of his own exertions and thrifty management. Beginning at a salary of five dollars a month, he worked a long time before he managed to save enough money to buy a boat; but when this point was reached the purchase of others from time to time was more easily accomplished. As an employer, he is noted for fair dealing. On June 12, 1868, he bought his present farm of 113 acres near Arlington, where he has since been engaged in general farming. The estate is among the finest of that vicinity, and he has barns and other improvements of a model kind, and an elegant and commodious dwelling house. Mrs. Lawson died January 17, 1893, deeply mourned by a large circle of friends. She and her husband were for many years prominent members of the Second Reformed Dutch Church of Poughkeepsie. Of their seven children six are still living: Edward W. is the superintendent of the Fort Lee Ferry, at New York; Casper N. has been a stone dealer and contractor at New York, and still resides there; Roberta (1) died in infancy; Clementine married Henry Warrall, a farmer near Vassar; Roberta (2) is at home; Welcome H. married Catherine Watkins, of Fort Lee, N. J.; Watkins, a lawyer, is now studying at the farm on account of ill health; and Mary E. married Walter H. Bedell, a dentist of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Lawson has taken an active interest in local politics, and is a leading Democrat; was appointed assessor in 1869, was elected to the same office in 1870, and has served and is serving as supervisor, being elected in 1881, 1883, 1896 and 1897.

PPETER AKIN SKIDMORE, who is well known throughout Dutchess county, of which he is a native, is numbered among its best citizens, both socially and financially, and is especially valued as a large-hearted, public-spirited citizen, whose enterprise and benevolence have contributed largely to the happiness and comfort of the people around him. His homestead is one of the most notable in the town of Beekman, for the thrift and comfort which surrounds it, and the evidence of enterprise, taste and skill.

Mr. Skidmore was born April 15, 1831, in the town of Beekman, receiving his education chiefly at the district schools of the neighborhood. On December 26, 1856, he married Miss Ruth Moore, daughter of Alfred and Charlotte (Haverland) Moore, both born in 1806 in Dutchess county, where they were respectable farmers. They had four children who lived to maturity: Lydia (now Mrs. Willetts), residing on Long Island; Ruth (Mrs. Skidmore); Susan, a maiden lady residing at the old home at Moores Mill, proprietress of the "Floral Home" boarding house; and Alfred H., married, and making his home at the old farm, running the mills. Alfred Moore, the father of these, was a son of Stephen Moore, who was also a native of Dutchess county, and operated the old Moore Mills, formerly known as the Oswego Mills. The family have been members of the Society of Friends for several generations back, and Mrs. Skidmore's father was a preacher in that sect. He died in 1879, the mother in 1892. Four children have blessed the union of our subject and his wife, viz.: Elizabeth (deceased); Alfred M.; and Jesse and Susie (both deceased). Of these, Alfred M., the only survivor, was born October 10, 1860, and assists his father in the conducting of the farm. He is a Republican in politics, and has frequently been urged by his friends to run for office, but prefers to devote his time to agricultural pursuits. On the home farm are buried the parents of Benson J. Lansing, the historian.

An earnest Christian gentleman, our subject is a member in good standing of the Society of Friends, which organization is opposed to warfare; yet during the Civil war he was the first in his section to be drafted; he was rejected, however, on account of physical disability. In politics he is a Republican, has ever taken a commendable interest in the welfare of his native county, and has capably filled several minor offices of his town, discharging his duties to the satisfaction of all. Socially, he is a charter member and treasurer of Sylvan Lodge, of the Grange, which was organized in the town of Beekman, in December, 1896.

Jesse Skidmore, the father of our subject was born in the town of Unionvale, in 1796. By his marriage with Sarah Akin, daughter of Peter Akin, of the town of Pawling, in the county, he had four children: Peter Akin, Elizabeth, Abigail and Andrew. The daughters died in early life; Andrew is now living on a farm in Beekman, near the homestead, and has no children. The father engaged in farming on the farm now owned by his son, Peter Akin, until advanced in life, when he removed to Poughkeepsie, where he died in 1862. He was a lifelong member of the Society of Friends, as were his ancestors.

Peter A. Sidman

Andrew Skidmore, grandfather of our subject, was born on the Skidmore homestead, in the town of Unionvale, in 1797, and died in 1852. He was a man of great physique, weighing over 280 pounds. He married Elizabeth Clapp, and they had four children: Jesse, the father of Peter Akin Skidmore; James, who left no family; Andrew A., and Judith. The descendants of Andrew A. are James W. Skidmore, and Jane, who married Cromoling Dean, all now living in the town of Lagrange. Judith married Gideon Downing, and has one daughter living, but no descendants known.

Andrew Skidmore, the great-grandfather of our subject, whose ancestry came from Holland, was born at Great Neck, Long Island, in 1748, and died in 1816. Of his family, of which we have record: Had a bachelor brother murdered by a servant; he kept a large stable of running horses at Great Neck, Long Island. Had two sisters: Mary, married to Benjamin Everett, and Phœbe, married to John Golder. Many of the Skidmore family now living on Long Island are descendants of this family. Andrew Skidmore, the great-grandfather, moved to the town of Unionvale, Dutchess co., N. Y., in the year 1715, purchased a large tract of land, through which runs the clove creek. On this stream he built a gristmill, sawmill, and woolen-mill, these being the first mills in this section; the gristmill is now standing, and known as the "Skidmore mill." The tract of land is now one of the best in the Clove Valley. Mr. Skidmore married Judith Rogers, who was born in 1746, and died in 1826, and by this marriage had two sons and three daughters: Andrew, James, Mary, Phœbe and Abby.

James Skidmore married Elizabeth Rogers, and they had three sons and two daughters: Andrew J., Zophar R., Harvey, Elizabeth and Phœbe. All but Zophar R. and Harvey moved to the State of Maryland. Harvey moved to New Jersey; Zophar R. married Maria Hughes, of Staatsburgh, and lived until his death in 1888) on the Skidmore homestead in the Clove Valley; they had two children: James H., and Mary, who married

Charles E. Rogers, who now owns the Skidmore homestead.

Mary Skidmore married John Rogers, and resided near Sylvan Lake, town of Beekman; they had four sons and five daughters: Laban, Stephen, James, Gilbert, Hannah, Judith, Phœbe, Maria and Ruth. Judith, who married Samuel A. Doughty, is the only one living. Phœbe married Nichols Haight, lived and died near Coffins Summit. The only descendant living is Sherman Haight, of Mabbettsville, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Abby married Richard Betts, of Saratoga county; no record of descendants.

WILLIAM H. JAYCOX, a leading and progressive farmer of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, is a native of Putnam county, N. Y., born in the town of Phillipstown, October 6, 1843, and is of Holland lineage. His great-grandfather, Isaiah Jaycox, was also a native of Putnam county, while his grandfather, Thomas Jaycox, was born in the town of Phillipstown. There the latter was reared on a farm, and spent his entire life engaged in agricultural pursuits. In his family were five children: David, who was a liveryman at Matteawan, Dutchess county; James E., a farmer of North Highlands, Putnam county; Caroline, who married James Horton, a farmer of Phillipstown; Jeremiah, the father of our subject; and William, also a farmer of Phillipstown, Putnam county.

In that town Jeremiah Jaycox was born in 1817, and on attaining to man's estate married Levina Tompkins, whose birth occurred at Putnam Valley, Putnam county,—her father, Ananias Tompkins, being also a native of that county. On their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Jaycox located upon a farm there, but after a residence of seven years they came to Dutchess county, passing their remaining days in the town of Fishkill, the father dying October 15, 1888, and the mother on March 4, 1894. His vote was ever cast in support of the Democratic party. In the family were two children: William H., subject of this review; and Frances, who married William Dalrymple, a farmer of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county.

At an early age William H. Jaycox accompanied his parents to Dutchess county, where he has since remained, and now devotes his time and attention to the development and improvement of his excellent farms in the town of East Fishkill, which comprise 400 acres of rich and arable land, well adapted to mixed farming. On October 4, 1871, he married Miss Libbie Anderson, who was born upon the farm which is still her home, and there her father, Peter Anderson, was also born, in 1807. He married Sarah Van Dewater. The Anderson family was early established in this country, and was founded in Dutchess county by John Anderson (the grandfather of Mrs. Jaycox), who was a native of Putnam county, N. Y., and in 1793 purchased of Peter H. Schenck, the farm in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, upon which our subject still resides, and which at that time contained 265 acres. To Mr. and Mrs. Peter Anderson were born five children: Amanda, married to William B. Roe, a farmer of East Fishkill; Myers, a farmer, who died September 13, 1872; Sarah A., married to William E. Brinckerhoff, of East Fishkill; John P., an agriculturist of the town of Washington, Dutchess county; and Libbie, wife of our subject.

Upon their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Jaycox began housekeeping upon their present farm, and they have become the parents of three children, all at home, namely: George A., Charles W. and Howard. The entire family contribute to the support of the Johnsville Methodist Episcopal Church, and hold a prominent place in the social world. They are the center of a circle of friends who honor and esteem them for their many virtues and genuine worth. Mr. Jaycox is identified with the Democratic party, is public-spirited and enterprising, and aids in every possible way in promoting the interests of his town and county.

EMMER J. HAIGHT. Among the young and energetic farmers of Dutchess county, as well as among those who have been successful in their efforts thus far, is the subject of this personal history. His entire life has been passed in the town of Stanford, where he was born October 20, 1873, and there devotes his time and attention to farming.

His father, John Haight, was also a native of the town of Stanford, and was a son of Leonard Haight, who lived all his life in that town, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. The latter was a stalwart Democrat in politics, and one of the prominent men of the community. He married Miss Phœbe Griffin, of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and to them were born five children: Margaret George, Hannah, John and James B. The education of John Haight was such as the district schools of the times afforded, and he early became inured to the arduous duties that fall to the lot of an agriculturist. He never left the old homestead, which he operated up to the time of his death, which occurred September 6, 1885. He was one of the highly respected citizens of the community, and one of the earnest supporters of the Democratic party with which he always affiliated.

In the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, John Haight was married to Miss Sylvia A. Foster, daughter of John Foster, and to them were born two sons: Walter, who married Lenora Husted, by whom he has two daughters, Eva and Ruby; and Emmer J., subject of this sketch, who wedded Anita Dorland and they have one child, Ruth Anna.

GEORGE I. VAIL, a prominent dairyman and agriculturist of Unionvale, Dutchess county, has earned a place among the successful workers in his lines of business. He was born at Verbank, Dutchess county, May 2, 1843, and received his education in the school of his native town and at Mechanicsville, N. Y. He learned the carpenter's trade, but, finding that less to his taste than agriculture, he turned to the latter pursuit, and has followed it profitably for many years, making a specialty dairying. Careful attention to business does not prevent him, however, from taking an active part in local affairs, and he has served in a number of public offices, including that of assessor. He married Miss Phœbe Noxon, who was born November 24, 1848, in the town of Unionvale. Her ancestors were pioneer settlers in that town, and a record of the three preceding generations is given below. Mr. Vail was educated in the common schools near her home, and at Oswego village. The home of our subject and his wife is brightened by three children: Henry, born May 10, 1877; Hettie, born March 1, 1881; and John, born May 20, 1883.

Mr. Vail's ancestors became identified with Unionvale, Dutchess county, at an early period, and his grandfather, Moses Vail, and father, John Vail, were born there, the latter in November, 1800, at Verbank. After arrivg himself of such educational opportunities the locality afforded, he engaged in farming an early age. He was a man of enterprise, able manager, and he conducted a woolen mill at Verbank at one time, and also engaged mercantile business. His wife was Elizabeth Vincent, daughter of Absalom Vincent, and they had ten children, of whom our subject was the youngest: (1) Sarah, born February 8, 1828, married Jacob Baker, a blacksmith of Freedom Plains. (2) Matilda, born September 14, 1829, married Dewitt C. Noxon, a farmer and storekeeper, who served gallantly in the Civil war; they had two children—Emma (Mrs. John Duncan) and Ada. (3) Loretta, born April 4, 1831, remained unmarried. (4) Samuel, born July 4, 1832, is a carpenter by trade; he married Miss Ann Northrop, and has four children—Libbie (Mrs. Leonard Secord), Charles (who married Carrie Cass), William and Abbie. (5) Mary, born October 13, 1834, married Simon Losee, and has two children—Lezie and Wesley. (6) Martha, born January 1, 1836, was educated in Amenia Seminary, and became a successful teacher. (7) Rebecca, born October 1, 1837, married Richard Hall, a farmer of Beekman, and they have four children—Everett (who married Cora Cypher), Lobie (deceased), Herbert (who married Jenn Chatterton), and Minnie (Mrs. Arthur Holmes). (8) Stephen, born February 23, 1839, is engaged in carpentering, and has remained unmarried. (9) James, born February 2, 1841, is a blacksmith; he married Mary Benjamin, and has one child—Sarah—who married Richard Case, and has one daughter—Hen.

Mrs. George Vail's great-grandfather, Gilbert Noxon, was born in Dutchess county, N. Y. was educated there and engaged in farming. He married Miss Jane Phillips, and had eight children: Egbert, who married Claricy Peterson; Elisha, Mrs. Vail's grandfather; Adam, who married Jane Cornell; Daniel, who married, first, Charlotte Snedeker, and second, Nancy Townsend; Catherine, Mrs. John Dean; Ann, Mrs. Edward Dutcher; Gilbert, who married Sallie Townsend; and James.

Elisha Noxon was born in the town of Unionvale, and after attending the local schools in boyhood became a farmer. He married Miss Phœbe Van Benschoten, daughter of Henry Van Benschoten, and his wife Mary Jackson, whose parents were Richard and Mary (Ingraham) Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. Noxon had two children: (1) Jane, who married John H. Robinson, and had three children—Phœbe, Mrs. John Dorlan; Abram, who married Mary Townsend, and Mavill, who married Minnie Allen. (2) Henry Noxon, father of Mrs. Vail, was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, December 15, 1825, and was educated in the common schools of that town. He engaged in farming, and married Miss Hettie Barlow, daughter of Elisha and Charlotte (Palmer) Barlow. Of their three children Mrs. Vail was the eldest. Of the others, (1) Mary married Eugene Storm, and had one child, Winnefred, who is at home. (2) Elisha Noxon died at an early age.

The Van Benschoten family has an interesting history, and Dominie Elias Van Benschoten was the first Reformed Dutch minister at Schaghticoke more than half a century before Troy, N. Y., was founded. "Tunis, the father of Dominie Van Benschoten, came from Holland with the earliest settlers of the country, and purchased land at Esopus on the Hudson river. Subsequently, with his wife and one child, he removed to what was then a wilderness, purchased a large tract of land, and made a settlement in the town of Fishkill, between the village of that name and the city of Poughkeepsie, near what is known as New Hackensack, in the county of Dutchess. Here he had four sons—Tunis, Matthew, Jacob and Elias—and, we believe, two or more daughters. The eldest son sailed for Europe, but as the vessel in which he sailed was never heard from, it is supposed it was seized by the pirates, and he and the other passengers, together with the officers and crew, were put to death. When the old gentleman died he was buried in the family vault on the homestead farm. His remains, with those of other members of the family, have since been disinterred and buried in the graveyard of the old Dutch church at Hackensack, beneath a costly monument.

"Matthew and Jacob remained upon, and in co-partnership cultivated, the farm. Elias became a Reformed Dutch Church minister, and the daughters married. The following amusing story is told of the Dominie. On one occasion, while at Schaghticoke, he was waited on by a Dutch swain, who wished to secure his services at a wedding. In the interval between the call and the time appointed for the ceremony, a severe storm arose, and the stream became fearfully swollen, so that when the weather cleared and the parties to be married arrived, it was impossible for them to get across the stream. Here was a dilemma. The Dominie was on one side, the anxious couple on the other; neither could cross. 'Stop!' cried the Dominie. 'Stand vere you be, and I will make you man and wife.' The happy couple, thus united in the bonds of matrimony, when the service was over turned to leave. Here was another dilemma, which cast a cloud of deep anxiety over the tranquil features of the good old man. 'Stop, den, my young friends, von moment, if you please. You can leave der guilder at the first house below. Tell them it is Dominie Van Benschooten's marriage fee, and I vill call and get it.'"

FRANKLIN GERMOND is the proprietor of a good farm in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, successful as a tiller of the soil, and prominently identified with local affairs. He was born in that town, April 3, 1846, and is now in the prime of life, and, as the result of good habits, is amply fitted for the duties that lie before him.

Silas Germond, his paternal grandfather, engaged in farming in the towns of Stanford and Pine Plains, and also at one time conducted a store at Attlebury. He was joined in wedlock with Charlotte Knapp Green, by whom he had three children: Hunting, the father of our subject; Silas K.; and Mary Ann, now deceased.

In the town of Stanford, Hunting Germond was born in 1821. He there attended the district schools, and was, later, a student in a school at Red Hook, Dutchess county. In his native town he married Miss Emily Ann Adsit, a daughter of Warren Adsit, and to them were born four children, namely: Gertrude, widow of Elbert Munsell; Franklin, of this sketch; Frederick, and Guy. The father resided for some time upon a farm near Stissing, and then purchased another farm in the same locality, but the later years of his life were passed near Willow Brook. Besides engaging in agricultural pursuits, he was also a dealer in cattle. He used his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party.

After pursuing his studies for some time in the district schools of the town of Stanford, Franklin Germond entered the village school of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, where he completed his education. On reaching his majority he started out in life for himself as clerk in the store of James Husted, of Poughkeepsie, and after leaving his employ worked upon a farm at McIntyre, Dutchess county for a year. After a year then passed at home, he went to Toledo, Ohio, where he was employed as shipping clerk in a wholesale house, and also sold goods on the road for the same firm for two years and a half. Returning to Stanford in the spring of 1877, he remained upon the old homestead for four years; but in 1881 he purchased his present farm in the same town, where he has since resided. He is quite an extensive farmer and stock dealer, and well deserves the success which has come to him.

In 1876, at Litchfield, Litchfield Co. Conn., Mr. Germond was married to Miss Alice Bissell, daughter of Henry Bissell, and to them have been born four children: Henry Bissell, James Husted, Gertrude C. and Par Franklin. In politics Mr. Germond is identified with the Democratic party, which he always supports by his ballot, and is now serving his third term as assessor of his town. He is an honored and respected citizen who contributes his full quota toward the enterprise having for their object the general welfare of the community.

JAMES BARMORE, a leading and representative farmer of the town of Unionvale, belongs to a well-known family of Dutchess county. His grandfather, Nathaniel Barmore, who also carried on agricultural pursuits, by his marriage with Miss Abigail Wall had a family of seven children, namely: Henry, the father of our subject; John; James; Mead; Abram; Betsy; and Eliza, who married Walter Hunter.

Henry Barmore was born in the town of Port Chester, Westchester Co., N. Y., November 17, 1783, was there educated in the common schools, and learned the carpenter trade, at which he worked for some time. Later he turned his attention to farming. In religious belief, he was a Friend. He married Miss Bethany Carpenter, who was born March 10, 1787, and was the daughter of Zebedee and Lydia (Clark) Carpenter. The thirteen children born to them were as follows:

(1) Clark was born in Westchester count

May 25, 1806, and after completing his education engaged in farming. He wedded Miss Mary Alley, by whom he had nine children: he married C. Patterson; Edward married Lucy Wanzer, and they had three children—Clark (who married Gertie Tripp); Mary E.; and Emma (who married Charles Huestis); Stephen died when young; Caroline married Andrew Wanzer; Eliza remained single; Sarah married Cyrus Perkins, and they had one child—John E.; John married Josephine Phillips; Charles died when young; Delia married Gilbert Downing, and had one son—Charles.

(2) Anor Barmore was born in Westchester county, July 11, 1807, and married Jasper Murch, a farmer, but had no children.

(3) Stephen, born August 25, 1808, married Miss Caroline Williams, and they became the parents of two sons—William and James, both of whom died young.

(4) Lydia Barmore was born October 1, 1809, and married David Stringham, an agriculturist, by whom she had five children: (1) Henry married Caturah Gardner, and they had one daughter—Ida C.; after the death of his first wife he married Catherine Briggs. (2) Thomas wedded Mary H. Adams. (3) Isaac married Lucinda Lyon, and had two daughters—Emma, who married Theron Briggs, and his two children—Clara and Arthur; and Mary E., who married Edwin Lloyd. (4) John married Ann E. Barnes, and has five children—Henry D., who is married and has three sons; Irene, who married William Mudge, and had one child; Irving, who married Eleanor Mayo; Eugene; and Norris. (5) James, twin brother of John, married Gertrude Van Curen, and has three children—Willis, Norman (who married Gertrude Marshall), and Ernest.

(5) Annie Barmore was born January 14, 1811, and was united in marriage with Abram Cinby, a farmer.

(6) Sarah Barmore was born January 26, 1814, and became the wife of Underhill Quinton, an agriculturist, but they had no children.

(7) Abigail Barmore, born April 28, 1815, died when young.

(8) Mary Barmore was born August 27, 1816, and married Shadrach Ricketson, a farmer, by whom she had two children: Annie wedded William Barker, and they had two children—Shadrach and Mary F.; Susan first married Theodore Tappen, and they had one daughter—Mary, who wedded Ira Gilmore.

After the death of her first husband, Susan married John Anderson.

(9) Susan Barmore was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, December 11, 1818, was there educated, and married Egbert Vale, a farmer of that town; they had three children: Sarah E. married Theodore Wygant, and had one daughter, Jennie, who became the wife of Thomas Drake, and has one child—Wesley J.; Charles P. married Allie Dorland, and has three children—Willard (who married Lillie Pendley), Susan, and Harold; Henry J. married Maggie Williamson, and has two children—Henrietta and John E.

(10) Henry Barmore was born January 1, 1820, and married Miss Ruth Spencer. Their only child, Minnie, married Thomas Fox, and has one child—Minnie.

(11) Philip Barmore was born February 18, 1822, and married Miss Hannah Gardner; they had two children: Maria married Victor Cornwell, by whom she had two children—Ruth and Frank—and after the death of her first husband married Giles Burgess, by whom she had a son—Philip. Henry married Roselina Griffith, and had seven children—James, Pearl, Edith, Willis, Henry, Beulah, and Willa Rose, two of whom are deceased.

(12) Elizabeth Barmore was born September 23, 1823, and never married.

(13) James Barmore, whose name introduces this sketch, is the youngest of the family. He was born February 27, 1829, in the town of Unionvale, was educated in the common schools of the locality, and has always followed the occupation of farming. He is a member of the Society of Friends, is a straightforward, reliable citizen, and is held in the highest esteem. On reaching manhood he was united in marriage with Miss Abiah Gardner, a daughter of Lewis Gardner, a farmer of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. She died March 26, 1865, and he afterward wedded her sister, Miss Mary Gardner. He has had no children by either marriage.

Resolved Gardner, the grandfather of Mrs. Barmore, engaged in farming throughout life. He married Miss Abiah Sweet, and to them were born eight children: Joshua; Lewis, the father of Mrs. Barmore; Isaac and Resolved, who never married; Seneca; Delwin, who never married; Ann G.; and Herman.

The eldest son, Joshua Gardner, married Jane Doughty, and had four children: (1) Mary A. wedded Samuel Adams, and had four children—Mary H. (who married Thomas Stringham), Lottie (who married Edward Young, and has four children—Mrs. Emma Haight, David, Charles and Mabel), Amelia (who died when young), and George (who married Alice Gardner, and has five children—Lena, Blanche, Samuel, Raymond and Mary H.). (2) Charlotte married Edwin Cabry, and has two children—Frank, and Lavina (wife of Benjamin Sutton). (3) Eliza married David Hoag, and has three children—David, Eva and Angenett. (4) Thomas wedded Mariette Thomas, and has three children—Florence, Frances, and Etta.

Lewis Gardner, the father of Mrs. Barmore, was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, June 9, 1791; obtained his education in the common schools, and learned the tailor's trade, at which he worked most of his life, but also carried on farming. He married Sarah Tiftt, and to them were born thirteen children, of whom the eldest four never married. (1) Catherine S. was born April 20, 1818. (2) Elizabeth C. was born October 14, 1819. (3) Rhoda C. was born July 22, 1821. (4) Ruth S. was born September 1, 1823. (5) Hannah, born December 8, 1824, married Philip Barmore, a farmer. (6) Seneca L., born June 24, 1827, remained single. (7) Abiah, born June 6, 1829, was the first wife of our subject. (8) Nathaniel, born August 17, 1831, was three times married, his first wife being Leah Lynch, by whom he had two children—Sarah E. and George L.; after her death he married Miss Kate Wood, and to them was born a child that died in infancy; his third wife bore the maiden name of Sarah E. Sutton. (9) Elnathan, born March 16, 1833, married Hannah Lynch, and had four children—Hattie (who married Robert Fisher, and had one son, Robert), Sarah (who married William Pierce, and has one child, Harry), Benjamin (who died in infancy), and Mary E. (who married William Brooks, and has two children, Arthur and Mary M.). (10) Caturah, born November 28, 1834, married Henry Stringham, a nephew of our subject, by whom she had a daughter, Ida C. (11) Mary, born September 24, 1836, is the wife of our subject. (12) Matilda, born May 27, 1841, died in infancy. (13) Henry, born August 1, 1843, married Cornelia Cornell, and has one son, Lewis, who married Minnie Totersman, and they have one son, Harry.

Seneca Gardner, the fifth child of Resolved and Abiah (Sweet) Gardner, married Sarah J.

Rockfeller, and to them were born ten children—Julia never married; William; Charles married a Miss Dodge, and after her death he married Sarah A. Brown, by whom he had five children—Julia, Annie, Isaac, Charles and John; Emma never married; Jane married Lewis Cooper; Alice married George Adams; Delwin married Frances Cooper, and had two children—Ida and John; Isaac remained single; John married Emma Ludington, and had one daughter—Nina; and Ann married Fred Benjamin, and they have three children—Fred, Gardner and Isaac.

Ann G. Gardner, the seventh child of Resolved and Abiah (Sweet) Gardner, married David Adams, and they had one son—James—who married Samantha Newett.

Herman Gardner, the youngest of the family, married Eliza Brown, and they had five children—John, Resolved, Daniel, Lydia and Deborah.

JOHN P. ANDERSON is a representative citizen and substantial farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he has now made his home since 1865, when he located upon his present farm of 165 acres of rich and fertile land. He is one of those men who thoroughly understand the business he is pursuing, and is meeting with a well-deserved success. He is the architect of his own fortune, having started in life with but little capital beyond his own industry and a laudable ambition to rise in the world.

Mr. Anderson was born at East Fishkill, Dutchess county, November 23, 1835, and belongs to a family whose ancestors came from Holland at a very early period in the history of this country. In religious belief they are mostly Methodists. His grandfather, John Anderson, was also born at East Fishkill, where after his marriage he located on a farm and reared his six children: Susan, who married Abram Van Vlack, a farmer of East Fishkill; Zillah, wife of Louis Wright, a farmer of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county; Elizabeth, who wedded Harvey Eighmie, an agriculturist of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county; Polly, wife of John Homan, also a farmer of Beekman; Peter, the father of our subject; and John, a farmer of East Fishkill. In the town the grandfather spent his remaining days.

There Peter Anderson, the father of our subject, was born March 21, 1807, and c reaching maturity married Sarah Van De-Water, whose birth occurred in the town of Fishkill, July 25, 1808. Her family was also of Holland origin, and her father was a fruit grower of the town of Fishkill. She was the second in his family of four children, the others being Myers, a farmer of that locality; Phœbe, wife of Nelson Lounsbury, also an agriculturist; and Susan, wife of Stephen Scofield, a resident of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On their farm in East Fishkill five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Peter Anderson, namely: Amanda, wife of William B. Roe, a farmer; Myers, who engaged in agricultural pursuits in both the town of Beekman and East Fishkill, and died September 12, 1872; Sarah, wife of William E. Brinkerhoff, who is engaged in the nursery business; John P., of this sketch; and Elizabeth, wife of William H. Jaycox, a farmer of East Fishkill. The father, who was an earnest Democrat in politics, died in 1890; his wife had departed this life in 1882.

In the usual manner of farmer-lads, our subject spent his childhood, and on reaching his majority went to New York City, where he engaged in the wholesale liquor business on Fifty-first street and Ninth avenue for about six years. In 1865, however, we find him in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he purchased his present farm.

On November 15, 1859, Mr. Anderson was married to Miss Hannah M. White, a native of Dutchess county, N. Y., and a daughter of Alfred and Eliza (Brownell) White, farming people of that county. The founders of the family came from England, and her paternal grandfather, Charles White, was a leading farmer of Greene and Dutchess counties. Her parents later came to the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where they reared their family of four children: Deborah, wife of Myers Anderson, a brother of our subject; Hannah I.; and Charles L. and William, both deceased. The father's death occurred April 3, 1880, and his wife, who survived him some years, died January 7, 1892.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson: Alfred P., who died at the age of our years; William R., who is married and has been commissioner of schools for six years; Alfred J., a resident of the town of Washington; and Eliza W., wife of Leonard Davis, a farmer. The parents are both consistent and faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics Mr. Anderson affiliates with the Democratic party. He is quite prominent in public affairs and has been elected supervisor of his town, which office he held for two terms, and has also been road commissioner.

SANFORD JARVIS BARTLETT is a worthy representative of the farming interests of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, and in all of life's relations has been known as an honorable, straightforward man. He was born December 29, 1842, on the old family homestead, where he still resides, and comes from a family that has taken an active part in promoting the welfare and upbuilding of the county.

The first of the family to locate within the borders of Dutchess county was Daniel C. Bartlett, the great-grandfather of our subject. He was born at Redding, Conn., and was the son of Rev. Nathaniel Bartlett, a Congregational minister, who located at Redding, May 23, 1753, and died January 10, 1810, at the age of eighty-three years. He had three daughters, Anna, Eunice and Lucretia. When the colonies took up arms against the mother country, Rev. Bartlett gave Daniel his sword on the Sabbath day with the instruction to fight for the freedom of his native land. He was with Montgomery at the battle of Quebec, and was at the capture of Fort St. John in November, 1775, and witnessed the burning of Danbury, Conn., in 1777. In 1803 he bought of Joel Gillett the farm in the town of Amenia, which now belongs to our subject. In his family were five children: William, Collins, Mrs. John Barker, Mrs. Thomas Paine and Mrs. William Paine. Sanford J. Bartlett has in his possession the gun bearing the initials of his great-grandfather, Daniel C. Bartlett, and which the latter probably carried and used during the Revolutionary struggle. He also has the original pictures of his great-grandparents, Rev. Nathaniel Bartlett and wife.

William Bartlett, the grandfather of our subject, was born February 13, 1781, and spent most of his life engaged in farming in the town of Amenia. On November 12, 1804, he married Miss Clarissa Sanford, who was born February 23, 1786, and died August 12, 1838. His death occurred December 10, 1821. In their family were three children: William S., the father of our subject; Henry E., who was born August 11, 1813, and died December 27, 1832; and Clarissa Wade, who died May 11, 1863, at the age of forty-two years.

William S. Bartlett, the father, was born in the town of Amenia, January 23, 1809, and was united in marriage October 13, 1830, with Miss Jane E. Reynolds, who was born on Christmas Day, 1812, and was the daughter of Jonathan P. Reynolds. Her death occurred June 1, 1881, and on the 6th of the following November the father also passed away. Their four children were: Jonathan R., born July 15, 1831, married October 5, 1863, to Hannah L. Grant, and died September 8, 1872; Adelaide Amelia, born January 10, 1836, died April 27, 1838; William H., born February 14, 1839, married October 5, 1863, to Lavina Culver, and is now a prominent resident of Amenia; and Sanford J.

The early life of our subject was passed in the usual manner of farmer boys, and, after attending the district schools for some time, he completed his literary training in the Amenia Seminary. Since laying aside his text books, he has devoted his time and attention to agricultural pursuits, operating the old family homestead in the town of Amenia.

At Bridport, Vt., March 12, 1873, Sanford J. Bartlett married Mary Lizzie Hill, daughter of David Edgar Hill, and they are the parents of two children: William Edgar, born February 14, 1874; and Sanford J., born August 14, 1876. In his political views, Mr. Bartlett is a Republican, but takes no active part in public affairs, aside from performing his duties of citizenship.

CHARLES H. TRIPP, M. D., a well-known physician and surgeon of Clinton Corners, Dutchess county, has been engaged in the practice of his profession there during the past twelve years, meeting with remarkable success.

The Doctor was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, on Christmas Day, 1855. His paternal grandfather, John S. Tripp, also a native of Washington town, by his marriage with Sarah Deuel had two sons: Seneca, the father of our subject; and Isaac. His second union was with Sarah Haight, and by her he had a son: Egbert. The grandfather spent his entire life in farming in the town of Washington, and was very successful in his operations, so that at the time of his death the value of the property to be divided among his sons amounted to about $12,000. The family, which was of English ancestry, made its first settlement on Nantucket Island, whence the descendants came to Dutchess county.

Seneca Tripp was born February 15, 1802, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he received a fair education and was given a good start in life. He was first married in that town, October 25, 1821, to Miss Annie Pratt, who died November 15, 1838, and to them were born four children: Milo, deceased; John; and Stephen and Sarah Jane, both deceased. For his second wife Mr. Tripp wedded, October 7, 1839, Mary Louisa Sweet, who was born February 1, 1813, also in Washington town. They became the parents of six children, namely: Annie S., who was born October 4, 1841, and died September 8, 1848; Silas D., born November 11, 1843; Delia L., who was born April 4, 1846, and died September 19, 1851; Lydia Anna, who was born October 27, 1850, and also died September 19, 1851; Samuel Mott, born October 22, 1852; and Charles Henry, the subject of this review. The father continued to carry on agricultural pursuits in the town of Washington, until his death, which occurred December 23, 1876; his wife died in December, 1890. By birth he was a Quaker, his parents having belonged to that Society; he was an active politician, but held no office, preferring to devote his time to his business.

The primary education of our subject was begun in the district schools of the town of Washington, and he later took up Greek and Latin under private instruction, in order to prepare himself for the study of medicine, being ably assisted in his Latin studies by his mother. In 1878 he entered Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York City, where he was graduated March 15, 1881, and immediately began practice at Millbrook, town of Washington, Dutchess county. In February, 1884, he established an office at Clinton Corners, where he has since prosecuted his profession, and has secured a large and lucrative practice. Before entering the college in New York, he had taken up the study of medicine with Dr. John S. Thorne, of Millbrook. He holds a certificate of instruction in operative surgery and surgical dressing under Joseph D. Bryant, now surgeon general of the State.

On June 28, 1881, Dr. Tripp was married to Miss Carrie E. Cunningham, a native of ermont, and four children were the result of this union: Louis C., born March 22, 1884, and died August 29 following; Clayton S., who was born April 15, and died March 2, 1888; Mabel A., born April 13, 1889; and Charles S., born March 21, 1894.

C. H. Trippe M.D.

Mrs. Tripp was born July 4, 1866, in Plainfield, Vt., a daughter of Lewis H. and Harinda D. (Kidder) Cunningham, the latter of whom was born in 1825, in Marshfield, Vt., and died July, 1883. The father was born February 8, 1822, in Rockingham town, Windham Co., Vt., and followed the business of contracting and building. They had a family of eight children, six of whom are yet living: Clara, Fred, Nettie, Samuel, Josephine, and Carrie E.

Dr. Tripp holds membership with the Alumni Association of Bellevue Hospital, and belongs to the Dutchess County Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the Royal Arcanum, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

He has been very successful in his practice, and for three years served as health officer for the town of Clinton; is examining surgeon for the New York Life and Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Companies. He is a member of the Episcopal Church at Millbrook, and he and his estimable wife are popular in society, being numbered among the intelligent and respected people of their community.

GEORGE B. KINNEY is one of the oldest and most highly respected agriculturists of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county. Tracing the ancestral line of our subject, reaching two hundred and seventy years or more into the past, we are able, in the light of reliable records, to follow Henry Kinne, born in 1624, from Holland to Salem, Mass., where he located on a farm in 1651. It is believed that he was born in Norfolk, England, where his father, Sir Thomas Kinne, lived, having been knighted by the government for some signal service rendered, and that following the tide of emigration through Holland, where they sought greater religious liberty, but found less than the fullest freedom, Henry came to Salem at about the age of thirty years. He was a prosperous farmer, and was employed to some extent in ecclesiastical work. His children were eight in number—three sons and five daughters.

The second son, Thomas Kinne, from whom our subject is descended, was born January 1, 1656, and May 23, 1677, was united in marriage with Elizabeth Knight, by whom he had four sons. He died in 1687.

Thomas Kinne, the eldest son of the above couple; was born July 27, 1678, and in 1715, at the age of thirty-seven years, removed to Preston (now Griswold), Conn., where he died in 1756. There his grave-stone now stands on the banks of the Pachang river. He married Martha Peabody, who died October 25, 1747, and they became the parents of sixteen children—ten sons and six daughters.

Stephen Kinne, the third of this family, was born at Griswold, Conn., and January 29, 1730, married Priscilla Herrick, by whom he has six children, namely: Stephen, born December 18, 1732; Tesse, born May 25, 1735; Roswell, born May 4, 1737; Nathaniel, born April 26, 1739; Anna, born June 7, 1741; and Didymus, born August 7, 1743. The father of these children was the first of the Kinne family to come to Dutchess county, N. Y., where in 1740 he located in the northwestern part of the town of Amenia.

The next in direct line to our subject is Roswell Kinne, who was born at Griswold, Conn., but at an early age accompanied his father to the town of Amenia, where he resided up to the time of his death, August 22, 1812. He was a prominent citizen of the locality and served as captain of the militia. He married Miss Annie Burton, who was born August 7, 1739. They were the parents of two children: Roswell and Henry.

Roswell Kinney, Jr., was the father of our subject. He was born in the town of Amenia, September 30, 1776, and was united in marriage with Jerusha Rust, who was born in 1788; to them were born the following children: Albert, Eliza, Tryphenia, George B., Henry and Edwin. All are now deceased with the exception of our subject. The father was killed by runaway oxen, August 28, 1821. He was a strict Presbyterian in religious belief, and would not work after sundown on Saturday nights. His entire life was devoted to farming in his native town. After his death his widow became the wife of Daniel Lorin, and to them were born four children, all now deceased, namely: Harriet, Mary, William and Charles.

The birth of George B. Kinney, subject of this review, occurred in the town of Amenia, March 26, 1816, and there his school days were passed. He remained upon the old homestead until his marriage, which was celebrated in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, October 29, 1840, Miss Elma M. Tripp becoming his wife. She was the daughter of Howard and Phebe Tripp, and died in 1867, at the age of fifty years. By their union were born three children: Elma T.; Howard T., and George H. The eldest son, Howard T., married Minnie Putnam, and has two children, Laura and Roswell.

Since 1840 Mr. Kinney has resided upon his present fine farm in the town of Stanford, and in the community where he has so long made his home he has gained many warm friends. He is entitled to the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens, which he certainly possesses in a high degree. His first vote was cast for the Whig party, but since its organization has been a stanch Republican. Religiously, he is a member in good standing of the Presbyterian Church.

FRANKLIN COLES TOMPKINS. The subject of this history is one of the prominent citizens of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and the owner and proprietor of a fruit farm. He is a native of New York, born in the town of Scarsdale, Westchester county, October 5, 1827, and is a son of Coles Tompkins, whose birth occurred in Mamaroneck town, that county, in October, 1800. His paternal grandfather, Noah Tompkins, was also a native of Westchester county, where his father, Elijah Tompkins, who was from New England, had located at a very early day. The family was founded in this country by three brothers, who came from Wales and made their homes either in Massachusetts or Connecticut.

By trade the grandfather of our subject was a blacksmith, but his later life was devoted to fruit raising in Westchester county, where his death occurred. By his marriage with Rachel Coles, a native of Long Island, he became the father of six children, namely: Samuel, who followed farming and died in Illinois; Elijah, an agriculturist of Westchester county; Joseph, also a farmer of Illinois; Hannah C., who died unmarried; Coles, the father of our subject; and Noah, a carpenter of New York City. In religious belief the family were Friends.

In early life Coles Tompkins learned the tanner's and currier's business, which he followed for many years in this State, but finally removed to Illinois, where he passed away. He married Phœbe Underhill, a native of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and daughter of James Underhill, who engaged in blacksmithing in the town of Clinton. There he began housekeeping in Westchester county. Only one child was born to them: Franklin Coles, subject of this review, who was only two years old when his mother died. The Underhill family was of English origin, and an early period became identified with the history of the New World. One of the first of its members, of which any record appears, Captain John Underhill, who took a leading and prominent part in religious, political and military affairs. He had come to America with Governor Winthrop, arriving at Boston harbor May 18, 1630, in the vessel "John and Mary," which he commanded, and which was named in honor of his father and mother. He espoused the cause of Roger Williams, and participated in many engagements against the hostile Indians of that day. He established the first military company at Boston. In 1667 he bought from the Indians a tract of land at Matinecock, town of Oyster Bay, Queens county, Long Island, where he died in 1667, and was buried on the tract.

The childhood of our subject was passed in Westchester county, and most of his education was acquired in the Old Nine Partners School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. At the age of seventeen, however, he laid aside his text books and began learning the carriage maker's trade at Washington Post Office, which business he followed until 1810, and for nine years there engaged in mercantile pursuits. For three years he owned and conducted a fruit farm of 166 acres in Unionville, then returned to that village, now known as South Millbrook, and there purchased the Wintingham property, that comprises two hundred acres of rich land.

On October 31, 1850, Mr. Tompkins was united in marriage with Miss Ann Eliza Huestis, a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and a daughter of Moses S. and Ann Eliza (Woolley) Huestis, both of English lineage. Her maternal great-grandfather, John Woolley, was one of the first settlers in Dutchess county, arriving there when only a step-path led to Poughkeepsie. His son, Vard Woolley, the grandfather of Mrs. Tompkins, became a prominent merchant and farmer of the town of Washington, and represented his district in the Assembly.

Six children were born to our subject and his worthy wife, who in order of birth are as follows: Mary J., wife of Alfred Seeley, now of Brooklyn, N. Y., but formerly of Washington town; Hannah C., wife of Clark A. Haight, a farmer of Washington town; Phœbe K., who died at the age of seven years; F. Walton, who married Mary Parker Dunsher, of New York City, and lives near Newark, N. Y.; Clara M., at home; and Willard H., an agriculturist of Unionvale, who married Ruth Estelle Hawkins, of Oswego, New York.

Mr. Tompkins is considered a representative man of the town of Washington; he has a fine character; his motives are governed by elevated tastes and aims, and he stands well with his fellowmen. He is frank and open in the expression of his opinions, and in politics he is a sound Democrat. He has held numerous local offices of honor and trust, including those of town clerk and justice of the peace.

JOHN D. TEAL is pleasantly located upon a farm of 108 acres in the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, on what is known as the "inside road", which runs from the stone church to Rock City. The improvements which we see to-day have been effected by his industry and good management, and he has brought the soil to a fine state of cultivation. The farm buildings are neat and substantial, and, with their surroundings, present the picture of the complete country home, where peace and plenty abound.

David Teal, the grandfather of our subject, whose ancestors came to this country from Prussia, Germany, was a native of Ulster county, N. Y. He received a common-school education, and began life as a farmer, which occupation he followed up to the time of his death. Early in life he married Miss Rebecca Soperly, and soon after they became residents of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where their only child, Jacob Teal, was born in 1804. He was the father of our subject. His education was such as the district schools of the locality afforded and he early learned the trades of blacksmithing and wagonmaking, in which he worked more or less all through his life. He also engaged in teaching school for a few years. In the early training days he commanded a company. For his second wife he married Miss Anna Maria Teal, daughter of John I. Teal, of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, who, though bearing the same name, was no relative. Two children were born to them: Mary C., who became the wife of William Moul, of the town of Red Hook, where he is successfully engaged in farming; and John D., subject of this sketch.

Our subject's birth occurred in the town of Red Hook, where he entered the common schools, and, on completing his education, he succeeded his father, who was otherwise engaged, to the management of the farm, and thus began life for himself as an agriculturist. In 1867 Mr. Teal was married to Miss Mary Rossman. They are the parents of three children, all born on the old homestead. Frank L., who was educated at the Hartwick Seminary, and, after his graduation from that institution in 1890, served on the force of civil engineers engaged in the construction of the Broadway Cable road in New York City, at the completion of which he engaged in teaching and land surveying, holding the position of teacher in the public schools of Germantown for two years. He then became principal of the North Germantown Union School, which position he resigned after two years to enter upon a course of studies at St. Stephens College. Agnes received a thorough training in music, and is now a teacher of that art. She is also organist of the Stone Church in the town of Rhinebeck located near the town line of Red Hook. Eve Alice completes the family.

John G. Rossman, the grandfather of Mrs. Teal, was born in Livingston, Columbia Co., N. Y., was there educated, and followed the vocation of a farmer throughout life. He married Miss Catherine Best, daughter of Rev. Lewis Best, a Christian minister of Livingston. Their family consisted of ten children: Susau married Reuben Lapham; George married Johanna Weisman; Jacob was the father of Mrs. Teal; Margaret married Henry Van-etten; Eve married Samuel Lape; Mary married Edward Stickle; Ann married Samuel Shutts; William married Lucy Cunningham, of Georgia; James remained single; and Edward died in infancy.

Jacob Rossman was also a native of Livingston, Columbia county, where he received a good common-school education, and became an agriculturist. He wedded Miss Eve Patrie, by whom he had two children: Mervin J., who married Mary Gardner; and Mary, the estimable wife of our subject. Her maternal grandfather, Christian Patrie, who was also a farmer, married Mary Pinder, daughter of Edward Pinder, second son of Lord Pinder, London, England, and to them were born ten children: Pamilla married Dr. William Jones; Rachel married Rensselaer Livingston; Alexander married Clarissa Bennaham; Rufus married Jane Stickle; Eve was the mother of Mrs. Teal; Susan married Samuel Pender; Mary died at the age of twenty-five years; Edward married Margaret Potts; Seth married Mary Patrie, a cousin; and Fannie married Jacob Miller.

THOMAS WRIGHT, one of the well-to-do and influential citizens of the town of Lagrange, is now occupying a valuable farm that is conspicuous for the manner in which it has been improved and cultivated, and gives every evidence of being the homestead of one of the most enterprising men of Dutchess county.

The Wright family is of English origin, and was founded in this country first on Long Island. Thomas Wright, the grandfather of our subject, and one of the early residents of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, had a family of eight children, all now deceased. As he was in somewhat limited circumstances, his son, Lewis, the father of our subject, was given but an ordinary education, and he started out in life as a poor boy. He was born in the town of East Fishkill, March 22, 1800, and in his twentieth year first became a resident of the town of Lagrange, locating upon the farm now occupied by our subject, which he operated for some time before he was able to purchase it. Upon that place he spent his remaining days.

On November 3, 1820, Lewis Wright was married to Maria Vermilyea, who was born September 26, 1801, and died December 31, 1827, and they became the parents of three children: Mary, born July 24, 1821, died in June, 1894; John G., born May 31, 1824; and Abraham, born in December, 1826, and died October 18, 1828. Mr. Wright was again married, this time on November 13, 1828, to Miss Zillah Anderson, who was born February 24, 1799, and was the daughter of John Anderson. Four children came to this union: Ann Elizabeth, born August 24, 1830, married Draper Hall, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Thomas, subject of this sketch; Susan Jane, born December 25, 1834, married Rutsen Hall, of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county; and Anderson, born May 1, 1838, died May 10, 1867. The mother of these children departed this life in November, 1885.

Thomas Wright, whose name introduces these lines, was born February 26, 1833, on the farm which is now his home, in the town of Lagrange. His education was acquired in the district school, and at a private school of the neighborhood. On April 20, 1859, he was married to Miss Phoebe Rogers, who was born October 18, 1840, a daughter of Laban Rogers, of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county. To this worthy couple were born fourteen children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Charles L., January 21, 1860; Homer A., June 19, 1862; Carrie R., July 31, 1864; Susan A., August 21, 1866; Jennie, October 3, 1868; Mary E., May 12, 1871; Lewis T., March 12, 1873; Alice Z., October 27, 1874; John R., October 11, 1876; Ruema, September 2, 1878; Arthur, October 23, 1880; Augusta M., March 21, 1883; and Josephine and Pauline (twins), August 10, 1885. Of these, Josephine died July 22, 1886. Mrs. Wright's father was born in the town of Beekman, in 1805, married Jane Sincerbox, of East Fishkill, by whom he had five children—two sons and three daughters, of whom, one son and daughter are now deceased. The mother died in 1884, the father in 1886.

In 1859, Mr. Wright became a resident of the town of Beekman, where he remained until 1879, when he removed to the old Vermilyea homestead in the town of Lagrange, which he operated for ten years, when he returned to the farm where his early life was passed, and has there continued to make his home. He is now the owner of three fine farms in the town of Lagrange, and another in Beekman, aggregating 750 acres of as good land as is to be found anywhere in the county. While living in Beekman, he was elected justice of the peace, but declined to qualify. A staunch Democrat in politics, he is recognized as an honorable, upright man, the encourager of educational institutions, and during his young years served as school commissioner in the town of Lagrange. The career of Mr. Wright has ever been such as to warrant the trust and confidence of those with whom has come in contact, for he has ever conducted all transactions on the strictest principles of honor and integrity.

Thelie Wright

Thomas Wright

GEORGE W. HOWELL, a leading and influential member of the agricultural community of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, resides upon his fine farm of 197 acres. Besides the regular duties pertaining to the cultivation of the soil, he also deals quite extensively in stock, which he buys and ships to the city.

Mr. Howell is a native of Dutchess county, having been born at Salt Point, November 12, 1849, and he is a son of Benjamin Howell, at one time also a prominent farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley. He received his education in the common schools of the neighborhood, and lent his assistance to his father in carrying on the farm. On attaining his majority he became postal clerk on the Poughkeepsie & Eastern railroad, which position he filled some thirteen years. In 1878 he married Miss Adelia Hicks, who was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where her father, Frederick Hicks, carried on farming. She died June 20, 1886, leaving two children: Mabel and Grace.

In 1880 Mr. Howell purchased his present farm, and has since resided there. In politics he is a straight and stanch adherent of the principles formulated in the platform of the republican party, and in the exercise of his elective franchise invariably supports the candidates offered by that organization. During President Harrison's administration he served for four years as postmaster of Washington Hollow. He is a public-spirited man, aiding in all kinds of improvements for the good of the community, and is especially active in promoting educational interests. Socially, he belongs to the Masonic fraternity, and he merits and receives the warmest confidence of his fellow-citizens.

ELIAS W. BERRY, a prosperous farmer of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, August 6, 1854. His parents were Lebbens Howe and Wilhelmina (Westervelt) Berry, the latter being a daughter of Elias and Ruth Westervelt.

Nicholas N. Berry, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in 1792, in East Fishkill, N. Y., and settled in the town of Poughkeepsie when a young man. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Ida Vanalts, a native of Fishkill, N. Y., who bore him two children: Lettie Ann and William, both of whom are now deceased. By his second wife, whose maiden name was Ida Howe, he had four children, namely: Lebbens H. and John P. (both deceased), the latter of whom was superintendent of the Street railroad in Elizabeth City; Tunis, a resident of Elizabeth, N. J., was supervisor of the town of Poughkeepsie; and Sarah, who married Tunis Conklin, and lives at Hyde Park. The family were all Presbyterians in their religious belief.

Lebbens H. Berry, the father of our subject, was a school teacher in his younger days, but most of his life was spent in farming. He lived for a year on the plank road, and for ten years farmed on the land now occupied by the State Asylum buildings. He sold this property, and for a year resided in Hyde Park, subsequently going to the town of Clinton, where he remained four years. In 1865 he took up his residence in the town of Lagrange, where he spent the rest of his life, his death occurring in 1887. His wife survived him until 1891. He was a stanch Democrat in his political views, and held several minor town offices, being commissioner of highways in the town of Poughkeepsie, and collector at various times. He was a man of considerable business ability, and during his life accumulated a comfortable fortune. The children born to himself and wife were: William, residing in Danbury, Conn.; Henry, living at Roselle, N. J.; Sarah W.; Lettie Ann, who married Shryver Tompkins, of Lagrange; Elias Westervelt, the subject of this sketch; Lebbens H., living in Lagrange; Mary Frances, wife of the Rev. Edwin C. Bennett, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Seymour, residing in Roselle, N. J.; and Ida Ruth.

Elias W. Berry obtained his education in the district school at Freedom Plains, and lived on the home farm in Lagrange with his parents, until the death of his mother in 1891. On March 9, 1892, he was married to Mrs. Louisa Seaman Brill, a daughter of Jacob and Clara Seaman. Mrs. Berry has three children by her first marriage: Richard, Clara and Frederick. After his marriage Mr. Berry purchased the J. R. Flagler farm near Overlook, in the town of Lagrange, which consists of ninety acres of fine land. Here he carries on general farming, in which he has been quite successful. He is a hard worker, thrifty and energetic, and is highly respected by all his acquaintances. He is a Democrat in politics, has been justice of the peace two terms, and also one of the inspectors of election.

JOSEPH B. ROZELL, a very prominent and energetic farmer of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, was there born April 29, 1859, and secured his education in the schools near his home. His paternal grandfather, Henry Rozell, was a native of Tarrytown, N. Y., where he attended school, but early in life removed to Chestnut Ridge, Dutchess county, where he followed agricultural pursuits. He wedded Miss Eleanor Cypher, and to them were born the following children: Thomas, who married Jennie Strait; Elizabeth married Caleb Oakley; John, who married Miss Black; Samuel, who married Rhoda Rozell; Gilbert, who married Eliza Shear; Henry, who married Catharine Holmes; William, who died in infancy; William, who married Julia Burnett; Alexander, the father of our subject; Jacob, who married Jane Austin; Matilda, who married Dewitt Connor; Annie, who married Harvey Simeon; Egbert, who married Priscilla Cooper; and Maria, who married Robert Hicks.

Alexander Rozell was born at Chestnut Ridge in 1808, and in the common schools of Dutchess county acquired his education. He learned the shoemaker's trade, at which he worked for fourteen years, and then devoted his time and attention to farming, until life's labors were ended. He was a progressive and public-spirited citizen, and enjoyed the respect and confidence of all who knew him.

On January 31, 1854, was celebrated the marriage of Alexander Rozell and Miss Sarah Frances Potter, a daughter of George and Hannah (Baker) Potter, farming people of Nantucket. Four children blessed this union, of whom our subject is third in order of birth: George, born December 8, 1854, in the town of Unionvale, received a common-school education, and learned the carpenter's trade, at which he is now employed. He married Miss Anna M. Syncerbaux, who was born January 30, 1860. Annie was born July 25, 1856, in Unionvale town, and married Jesse Oakley, an agriculturist, by whom she has one child, Alexander, born in 1890. Ella H., born November 4, 1860, is the wife of William E. Ferris, a shoemaker of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and they have one son, William H., who was born October 2, 1895.

George Potter, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was born October 20, 1786, and in September, 1812, married Miss Hannah Baker, whose birth occurred August 1, 1790. They became the parents of five children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Joseph, August 7, 1813; Anthony, April 6, 1815; William B., March 12, 1817; Sarah F., December 27, 1819; and Milton, April 23, 1821.

MRS. MAY LOSEE DUTCHER, of Dover Plains, is descended from well-known families of Dutchess county. Her paternal grandfather, William Losee, a lifelong farmer, was a native of Syracuse, N. Y., and received his education in the schools of that place. He married Miss Mary Watterman, of the same place, and they became the parents of twelve children, namely: Harris married Rachel Butts; William married Anna Carbardt; John married Phœbe Veiley; Henry married Mertha Lake; Joseph married Harriet Haneston; George was the father of Mrs. Dutcher; Julia married J. Cooper; Delia remained unmarried; Caroline married Hicks Hustes; Adelaide married Seneca White; Catherine married Vincent Tripp; and Mary married Egbert Butler.

George Losee, a member of the above family, was born at Dover Plains, February 14, 1817, and in the schools of that village acquired his education. Like his father, he also followed agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Anna Sherman, daughter of Dariu and Myra (Tabor) Sherman, who were residents of the town of Dover, where her father died July 25, 1858. His father was born December 1, 1757, and died May 25, 1847, in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, where for many years he had engaged in farming. He was united in marriage with Abigail Pierce, who was born in 1767 and died in 1818. They became the parents of ten children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Oliver, May 27, 1787; Chloe, November 27, 1788; Isaac, June 15, 1791; Henry, July 17, 1793; Daniel, October, 1795; Stephen, April 1798; Darius, November 7, 1800; Sylvia, December 6, 1802; Lydia, April 16, 1805; and Olive, May 11, 1807.

To the parents of Mrs. Dutcher were born six children: Ella, who became the wife of Frank Secor; May, of this review; George, who wedded Mary Hutchinson; William; Daisy, who married Charles Wyman; and Joseph. Of this family, May was born in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and during her girlhood attended the common schools of the neighborhood, where she acquired an excellent education. She married George Dutcher. She has many friends throughout the county, and is loved and respected by all who know her.

ARVIS C. ROBINSON. Dutchess county has many well-to-do and successful farmers, men who have accumulated what they have of this world's goods through individual effort. Among this class the name of the subject of this notice is entitled to a place. He is residing upon his fine farm in the town of Stanford, where he is industriously engaged in the prosecution of his noble calling, and is meeting with more than ordinary success.

A native of Dutchess county, the birth of Mr. Robinson took place in the town of Fishkill, September 25, 1827, but since the early age of seven years he has been a resident of the town of Stanford, and there his education was obtained in the district schools. As a young man he worked as a farm hand, and at the age of nineteen began work for Mrs. Canfield upon the farm which he now owns. At her death he purchased the place, the improvement and cultivation of which he has since continued with remarkable success. On August 20, 1856, he was married in the town of Stanford to Miss Mary E. Mosher, daughter of Allen Mosher, and to them were born the following children: Fremont (now deceased); Homer E., of whom special mention will presently be made; Leontina, who married Emerson Gregory, by whom she has two children—Jennie and Mable; Tamma, who married Newton J. Barlow, of the town of Stanford, by whom she has a daughter—May; Allen, who married Nellie Northrup, by whom he has two children—Clifton and Clara; and Edward and Amy Alida (both deceased). The mother of these children, who was a faithful member of the Baptist Church, died May 6, 1877, mourned by many warm friends.

Politically Mr. Robinson was first a Whig, later a Republican, and has efficiently served in the offices of inspector and town auditor. He is a self-made man in the truest sense of the term, and in the various relations of life has maintained a character and standing that have impressed all with his sincere and manly purpose to do by others as he would have others do by him.

Homer E. Robinson, the eldest living son of our subject, spent his boyhood days upon the home farm, aiding in its work and attending the district schools of the neighborhood. At the age of twenty-two years he removed to the town of Milan, where for seven years he operated the farm of John Wilson, but since that time has resided upon the old homestead. Like his father, he votes the straight Republican ticket, and socially is a member of Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 43, K. of P. He married Miss Emma Hicks, daughter of Gilbert Hicks, and two children have been born to them: Edward and I. Leslie.

THELON CUTLER, an extensive farmer of Dutchess county, was born in the town of Washington, April 10, 1821, and is the son of Stephen and Sally (Fitch) Cutler.

Stephen Cutler, the father of our subject, was born in Dutchess county, in 1783, a son of Stephen and Amy (Lester) Cutler. He grew up on a farm, and on reaching man's estate married Miss Sally Fitch, a native of Norwalk, Conn. They settled on the old home farm, and reared a family of eight children, namely: Amy, deceased; Philo F. was a farmer in western New York; Rachel, deceased; Stephen, deceased, married Miss Louisa Williams, and followed farming in the town of Washington; Lorenzo, deceased, married Miss Hannah Brown; Theron, our subject; Benjamin A., deceased; and Mordecai L. is a retired resident of Washington. Mr. Cutler remained on the farm all his life, and politically supported the Whig party; he died in 1858; his wife had preceded him, dying in 1853. Stephen Cutler, the grandfather of our subject, was raised in Dutchess county, where he married Amy Lester; he was a son of Jonathan Cutler, a native of Rhode Island, who came to Dutchess county at an early day.

Our subject spent his boyhood on the home farm and on October 28, 1857, was married to Miss Amelia Mitchell, a native of the town of Washington, and a daughter of Josiah and Jane Ann (Elsbree) Mitchell. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Cutler came to their present home, where he carries on general farming on his 220 acres of excellent land. Three children were born to this couple: Dwight, who died in 1869; Olin, whose death occurred in 1891; and Franz S., who is unmarried and lives at home.

In politics Mr. Cutler is a Republican, and religiously he and his wife attend the Episcopal Church. He is one of the progressive and substantial farmers of his county.

Josiah Mitchell, father of Mrs. Cutler, was born in Nantucket in 1807, the son of Benjamin and Eunice (Barney) Mitchell, and came to Dutchess county in 1809, where he afterward made his home and followed the occupation of farming. Benjamin Mitchell was of Scotch extraction, born on Nantucket; he was a relative of the late Maria Mitchell, the famous astronomer of Vassar College. Mrs. Cutler's maternal grandparents were from Rhode Island.

FRANK P. LASHER. In the busy community located in the thriving little village of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, we find several energetic and thoroughgoing business men, who have attained success through their own tact, good judgment and perseverance. Among the number is the gentleman whose name introduces this biographical notice, and who at the present time is a representative of the hardware trade of the place. He deals in stoves, tinware, crockery, glassware and all kinds of house furnishing goods, slate and metal roofing, hot-water and steam-heating apparatus, and, as a member of the Dutchess County Artesian Well & Wind Mill Co., he deals in tanks, pumps and pipes, also well supplies.

Mr. Lasher was born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, July 20, 1852. His father, John Lasher, is a native of Columbia county, N. Y., and one of the four children of Hannah and Samuel Lasher, farming people of that county, where their deaths occurred. Their ancestors were originally from Holland. The children were Edward, who was the proprietor of several hotels in Hudson, N. Y., and Millerton, Dutchess county; John; Sabrina, widow of Caleb Woolcut, who was a farmer of Columbia county; and Elmira, who married and removed west.

In his native county, John Lasher was united in marriage with Sarah Bates, who was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and they began housekeeping upon a farm in Stanford town, where their ten children were born as follows: Alice, who died young; Florence, wife of Lewis Earl, a farmer of Stanford town; Frank P., of this sketch; Samuel J., an agriculturist, who removed to California about twenty years ago; George E., a liveryman of Bangall, Dutchess county; Isaac C., who was a tin and copper smith in Pleasant Valley, and died in 1888; Dora, who died while young; Ida; Allie, wife of Norman Irish, of New York City, and one who died in infancy. The mother of these is deceased; the father has always engaged in farming and contracting, and in politics is an ardent Democrat.

Until eighteen years of age Frank Lasher remained upon the home farm, assisting in its cultivation and improvement, and his education was such as the district schools of the neighborhood afforded. He bought in the time of his father, paying him $200 for the same, and then started out to fight life's battles unaided and empty-handed; and so well did he succeed that by the time he was twenty-one years old he had saved $500. Going first to Bangall, he began learning the tinning and plumbing trade with John June, with whom he remained for about two and one-half years, spending the following three months at Pouquenee. In 1871 he came to Pleasant Valley and engaged in the tin and plumbing business with Henry Sacket, under the name of Lasher & Sacket, the connection continuing for three years, when our subject bought out his partner. He has since been alone, and has built up an extensive business. He is known all over the county as one of its leading business men, and the success he has achieved is well merited.

In 1873 Mr. Lasher married Miss Jere Rogers, who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, and they became the parents of three children: Willis C., Charles and Sadie. The mother departed this life in 1883, and in 1884 Mr. Lasher wedded Miss Mary Miller, a native of Columbia county, N. Y., and a daughter of Allen Miller, a blacksmith by trade. In politics Mr. Lasher strongly adheres to the doctrines of the Republican party, but is no politician, and both he and his wife attend

Frank P. Lasher

Presbyterian Church. By all he is held in the highest respect, and in the estimation of his fellow citizens he is one of the representative men of Pleasant Valley.

JULIUS M. MOUL is a worthy representative of the agricultural interests of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where his ancestors located at an early day, and is engaged in the operation of the homestead farm, comprising 108 acres of fine land situated just off the post road and about one mile from the village of Red Hook. The old house still stands as it was in the earlier days, and is surrounded by good and substantial outbuildings for the accommodation of stock. Among his possessions our subject has an old German Bible printed in 1736, being now one hundred and sixty years old.

On that farm, June 11, 1782, was born John Moul, the grandfather of our subject, and in the common schools of the village of Red Hook he obtained his education. As soon as old enough, however, he began to assist in the labors of the farm and made the vocation of farming his life work. On May 3, 1812, he married Miss Elizabeth Ryfenburgh, of Red Hook, who was born March 15, 1790, and they became the parents of three children: Jacob M., who was born February 7, 1813, and died May 13, 1840; William, born July 17, 1821; and Frederick, born August 1, 1829. These children were all born in the town of Red Hook, and received common-school educations.

On leaving school William Moul, the father of our subject, conducted his father's farm, and on August 29, 1849, was married, the lady of his choice being Miss Mary Teal, daughter of Jacob Teal, a farmer of Red Hook, and four children blessed their union: John Jacob, born September 8, 1852; Julius Martin, of this review; an infant son, who was born December 25, 1856, and died unnamed; and Elizabeth, born July 19, 1858. The mother of these children died December 8, 1865, at the age of thirty-six years. After three years Mr. Moul was again married, August 25, 1868, his second wife being Miss Rosanna Waldorf, daughter of William Waldorf, a farmer of the town of Red Hook.

Our subject was born December 7, 1853, at the old home in Red Hook, and, on completing his education in the common schools of the locality, like his ancestors chose the life of a farmer, continuing the cultivation of the home place. He is a conscientious, earnest, Christian gentleman, a member of the Lutheran Church of Red Hook, and stands to-day one of the respected and highly-esteemed citizens of the community. His friends are legion, and his genial courtesy is calculated to win confidence, which his sterling integrity and unquestioned candor serve to maintain.

On October 3, 1876, Mr. Moul was married to Miss Emma Saulpaugh, who was born in Madalin, town of Red Hook, March 18, 1859, and two children grace their union: Franklin W., born January 18, 1878; and Louis, born February 6, 1879. Mrs. Moul was educated in the schools of Madalin. Her father, Louis Saulpaugh, is one of the well-to-do farmers of that locality, and for two terms served as supervisor for the town of Red Hook. In his family were eight children, namely: Philip, born August 27, 1851; Harmon, born September 3, 1852; Anna, who was born May 3, 1854, and died August 24, following; George, born November 30, 1855; Anna and Emma, twins, born March 18, 1859; Franklin, born July 12, 1862; and Sarah, born January 8, 1870. Anna, the twin sister of Mrs. Moul, died in infancy.

EDWARD LEE CLARK, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, is a native of that county, born July 26, 1861, on the old Lee farm, the homestead of his mother's family, about one mile below Northeast Centre. His great-grandfather, Amos Clark, was a resident of Plainfield, Conn.; his grandfather, Douglass Clark, of Northeast; and his father, Douglass Clark, Jr., born in 1832, is still living at Northeast. He married Mary Lee, daughter of Daniel Lee, a wealthy farmer, and lived at the Lee homestead for thirty years, when he sold it to his son Edward. He has always been a staunch Republican, and he and his wife are leading members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have had three children: Elizabeth, who married Rev. W. R. Moore, of Poughkeepsie; Edward Lee, our subject, and Douglass, who died in childhood.

Mr. Clark was educated in his native place, attending the select school taught by Miss Carrie Knickerbocker, and later the seminary at Amenia, where he studied two years and a half, acquiring a good English education. At sixteen he returned home, and in 1883 bought the old homestead, consisting of ninety acres. Three years later he purchased the Harry Clark farm, near Millerton, containing 258 acres, and moved upon it. This is one of the best farms in the town of Northeast, and for the last nine years Mr. Clark has devoted it chiefly to the dairy business, of which he has made a great success. In 1892 he sold the Lee farm to Sylvester Schook. Mr. Clark married Miss Emma G. Case, daughter of George Case, and a member of one of the oldest families of Pine Plains. They have five children: Edna, Harry D., Hazel, George C. and Edward Lee, Jr.

In public affairs, Mr. Clark is active, endorsing and assisting every progressive movement, and although he is still a young man his early success in business has given him a wider influence than is often exercised by one of his years. He has been a school trustee for seven years. While giving but little attention to strictly political work, he is a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

HENRY S. MOREHOUSE, a representative farmer and leading citizen of Dutchess county, was born at his present residence in the town of Amenia, October 27, 1861. Upon this farm his grandfather, William Morehouse, a native of New Preston, Conn., located at an early day, and there engaged in farming. He married Julia Stone, by whom he had four children: Julius S., Chauncey W. and Orinda, all deceased; and Jane, wife of B. R. Tenney, of Poughkeepsie, New York.

Julius S. Morehouse, the father of our subject, was also born on the old homestead, in the eastern part of the town of Amenia, in 1814, and there his death occurred, June 26, 1885. Like most farmer boys, his early education was received in the district schools, and he later attended a select school at Sharon, Conn. In connection with his father, he erected a brick mill at Leedsville, which he operated for ten years, and still owned at the time of his death. At Redding, Conn., he married Miss Elizabeth Dennison, who was the daughter of James Dennison, and died February 14, 1895. To them were born seven children: Julia R., now the wife of C. M. Prindle, of Sharon, Conn.; Albina, wife of

G. William Van Rensselaer, of New York City; James, of Sharon, Conn.; Joseph J., of Chapinville, Conn., who married Minnie Burchard, of Danbury, Conn.; Anna E.; Henry Stebbins, of this review; and Lillias J., wife of B. St. John, of Sharon, Conn. The father spent the later years of his life engaged in farming in the town of Amenia, and also dealt some in railroad bonds, etc. He was an earnest Christian gentleman, a member and founder of the Episcopal Church at Sharon, Conn. while politically he was a lifelong Democrat.

The present residence of our subject was erected by James Bogardus in 1781, and was rebuilt by Julius S. Morehouse in 1871. There Henry S. has spent his entire life. He attended the common schools of Leedsville, was later a student in the Amenia Seminary, and completed his education at Brown's Business College at Jersey City, N. J. In 1881 he began the management and cultivation of the farm for his father, and continued to work on shares until his mother's death, when he purchased the interests of the other heirs.

Mr. Morehouse was married January 1, 1893, at Northfield, Conn., the lady of his choice being Miss Bertha L. Humphreville, daughter of Garner and Martha A. (Tuttle) Humphreville, and by their union they have two children: Julius Stanley, born November 19, 1894; and Ethel M., born March 18, 1896. Fraternally, Mr. Morehouse is identified with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & M., and the Grange at Amenia Union, which he has twice served as master. He is also a member of the Episcopal Church at Sharon, Conn. By the men of his county is ranked as a skilled farmer and a praiseworthy citizen, and is creditably filling his niche in advancing the welfare and prosperity of the town of Amenia.

PHENIX N. DEUEL, well known throughout the town of Pine Plains and vicinity is one of the intelligent and capable business men and representative farmers. He was born April 23, 1830, in that township, upon the Deuel homestead, which he now owns. The family is of French descent, and the first to come to the New World located on Long Island at an early date. Later some of its members came to Dutchess county, making their home in the neighborhood of where our subject now resides.

Jonathan Deuel, his grandfather, was a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Stanford, and became one of the extensive farmers, large land owners and leading men of the community. By his marriage with Miss Rachel Denton he had seven children, namely: Samuel, Silas, Newton, Jay, Catherine, Rachel and Mary.

Samuel Deuel, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he was reared to agricultural pursuits, and in starting out in life he began farming upon the old Deuel homestead, one-half mile from Bethel. He inherited a small amount from his father, but he accumulated most of his property through his own efforts, being very successful in his business undertakings, and was the owner of 400 acres of valuable land. As a business man he was keen and shrewd, and was possessed of excellent judgment. In early days he was personally identified with public interests, prominent in political circles, being an ardent Democrat, and served as assessor and supervisor. He was united in marriage with Catherine Bockee, daughter of Jacob Bockee, of the town of Pine Plains, and to them were born four children: Jacob, who was a lawyer of Stockbridge, Wis., and died while serving in the Union army during the Civil war; Mary, who is now deceased; Phoenix N., subject of this review; and Silas, who lives upon the old homestead.

After attending the district schools for a time our subject entered the Norwich Academy and Boarding School at Warren, Litchfield Co., Conn., where he completed his literary training at the age of twenty-one. He has always been a great reader, and keeps well informed on current events. After leaving the school room he engaged in farming upon the old homestead until 1870, when he purchased the Gray farm, consisting of 120 acres. It has now been merged into the homestead farm, so that Mr. Deuel has now one of the finest places in the township, comprising 400 acres. Besides general farming, he also deals in hay and saw, and in his undertakings has been remarkably successful. He was married to Miss Margaret Amelia Covey, daughter of Lyman Covey, of St. Lawrence county, N. Y., and they have become the parents of four children: Sara S.; Samuel, married March 25, 1891, to Nellie Dusenberre; Kathryn E., who is attending the Lyndon Hall; and Penelope, at home. Politically Mr. Deuel is a Democrat, and has taken quite an active part in local affairs. He has served as supervisor and assessor of his township, and as justice of the peace. Educational matters always find in him an earnest supporter, and since its beginning he has served as one of the trustees of Seymour Smith Academy. Conscientious, earnest Christians, he and his wife are faithful members of the Presbyterian Church of Pine Plains, in which Mr. Deuel is serving as president of the board of trustees.

ABRAM A. DENTON, a prominent dairyman and agriculturist residing near South Dover, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Dover, December 8, 1838.

Mr. Denton's ancestors settled in Dutchess county in the latter part of the eighteenth century, and his father, Abraham H. Denton, was born in the town of Beekman in 1798. He received a good education for that day, and taught schools successfully for some years previous to his marriage. Politically, he was a Democrat, but he never sought or held official position. His wife was Miss Betsey Allen, born in 1797, the daughter of Charles and Martha Allen, well-to-do residents of the town of Pawling, who assisted the young couple to obtain a farm of their own in that locality. In 1830 this property was exchanged for one in South Dover, belonging to an uncle, Sanford Hoag. Here they made their home throughout the later years. Our subject was the youngest of seven children: (1) Jeremiah was born in 1826, at Pawling, and is now a resident of that town. He married Louisa Ferris, and has two sons—Charles, who married Carrie Wooden, and Frank, who married Grace Sheldon. (2) Martha, born in 1829, died in infancy. (3) Charles, born 1831, first married Emeline Aiken, and, second, Mrs. Elizabeth McMahan. (4) Maria, 1833, married Theron M. Green, and had three sons—Merrick, Seward, and Abraham (who died in infancy). (5) Mahala, 1835, married W. J. Buckingham. (6) Martha (2), 1837, married Hiram S. Sherman, and has six children—Adelle, Eli, Charles, Jerry, Bessie and Allen.

Mr. Denton was educated in the common schools of his native town, and in early manhood engaged in farming. He found a partner for life's joys and sorrows in Miss Anna A. Preston, daughter of Myron and Sarah Preston, wealthy landholders in the town of Dover.

They gave to their daughter a farm of 200 acres, upon which the young couple made their home. They now have about 258 acres in use as a dairy farm besides a large amount of woodland. Their only child, Ida P. Denton, born in 1864, married Elihu Hoag, of Dover, and have had four children: Gertrude, born February 23, 1887; Edith, February 24, 1889; Ida, August 17, 1892, and Annie, June 13, 1895.

FRANK DOUGLASS BROWN, a young, enterprising and successful agriculturist of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, was born September 14, 1867, upon the old family homestead near Millerton, where he now resides. His ancestors were early settlers of that locality, his grandfather, Samuel Brown, having been the owner of the same farm. Noah Brown, the great-grandfather, married Lois Mills, September 20, 1783, but the history of the family cannot be traced further back.

Douglass Brown, our subject's father, was born near Millerton, July 3, 1822, and followed farming during the greater part of his life, having bought of his father 248 acres of land. He was also engaged in speculating in stock, and by the time of his death had accumulated a fair fortune. He had fine mental ability, and was a well-read man, domestic in his tastes, and highly esteemed in the community. In politics he adhered to the Republican party, and he was a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Millerton. His wife was Sarah Holmes, daughter of Reuben Holmes, a leading citizen of Winchell Mountain (now Mt. Pleasant), and they had three children, of whom our subject is the youngest. Martha, born April 19, 1855, married C. F. Hawley, of Millerton; Birdella H., born March 2, 1863, is now the wife of Olin E. Gibbs, of Ore Hill, Connecticut.

Our subject received a good academic education, attending first the district schools of his neighborhood, and later the Millerton High School, afterward spending two years at Wilbraham, Mass., and one at Lakeville, Conn. At the age of seventeen he left school, and has since been engaged in the management of the estate, and conducting an ice business which he established, and in which he has an extensive trade in Millerton and surrounding villages. On March 5, 1890, he married Miss Fannie A. Neville, daughter of William and Julia (Vosburgh) Neville, well-known residents of Boston Corners, and they have four children: Howard D., born December 21, 1890; Mabel C., born May 7, 1892; Marguerite L., born March 19, 1894; and Lois Mills, born November 13, 1895. The mother of these was born September 16, 1867, in Columbia county, N. Y., receiving her education at Boston Corners, and for a time was a teacher in Dutchess county. Her father and mother are still living. Her grandfather, Chauncey Vosburgh, who was also a native of Columbia county, born about 1800, married Miss Fanni Bissell, a native of Winchell Mountain, born about 1790, and they had three children: George E., Julia F. and Carrie L., all yet living.

Politically our subject is a Republican, and takes a keen interest in local politics; but he is not an office seeker, and has withdrawn his name several times when his nomination has been urged. In all questions of local improvement he has shown much public spirit, being always on the side of progress. Like all the members of his family he attends the Methodist Church, and is a generous supporter of its varied activities.

NATHAN CASE SACKETT. While "the race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong," the invariable law of destiny accords to tireless energy, industry and ability a successful career. The truth of this assertion is abundantly verified in the life of our subject, who is one of the prosperous farmers of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county.

His birth took place January 5, 1835, in that town, where the family had long resided. There his grandfather, Samuel Sackett, carried on farming, and reared to maturity a family of nine children, namely: Orville, Aaron, Clara, Ann, Jeannette, Samuel H., Harry, Lucinda and Polly. He was a Baptist in religious views, and in politics was identified with the Democratic party.

Samuel H. Sackett, the father of our subject, was also a native of the town of Stanford where he was reared and educated, and on attaining manhood married Amy Case, daughter of Nathan Case, of the town of Milan, Dutchess county. Seven children blessed this union: Nathan C.; Jane, deceased wife of L. Fradenburg; Sarah, wife of Sanford Adams, of the town of Stanford; Amy Ann; Phebe, who di n infancy; Mary D., wife of Samuel Wheeler, deceased; and Johanna, wife of Cortland Robinson, of Hyde Park, Dutchess county. The father continued to follow farming in the town of Stanford until his death, in 1880, and his wife, who preceded him to the other world, died in 1875. They were members of the Baptist Church, and he was an earnest supporter of the Democratic party.

Like most farmer lads, Nathan C. Sackett spent the days of his childhood and youth attending the district schools and assisting in the labors of the farm, and remained under the parental roof until twenty-six years of age. He was then married to Miss Deborah Ann Morey, daughter of Isaac Morey, and sister of L. L. Morey.

Mr. Sackett operated a farm in the eastern part of the town for a year, and the year previous he had resided in the western part of the same town. He was then for twenty-one years with Gilbert Cooper, and on leaving that gentleman came to his present farm of 200 acres of rich and arable land, where he has now made his home for fifteen years. Essentially he is a self-made man, his entire possessions being the result of his own unaided efforts: Politically, he is a stanch Democrat; religiously, he and his wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church; socially, he holds membership with the Grange.

WILLIAM E. TRAVER, a prominent agriculturist in the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born September 7, 1842, upon the farm which he now owns.

His ancestors have been farmers in that town for several generations, his grandfather, John P. Traver, being a native and lifelong resident. John H. Traver, our subject's father, was born there in 1818, and grew to manhood at the old homestead. In politics he was a Republican, but took no active share in party work. He married Mary Pultz, who was also born at the old homestead, and was the only child of the late Frederick I. Pultz, a well-known citizen of Rhinebeck. After their marriage, our subject's parents continued to reside on the old farm, where they died, the father on February 14, 1891, and the mother on May 13, of the same year. Of their two children, the eldest, Jane E., married John F. Lookingham, a farmer of Rhinebeck, and died March, 1886.

William E. Traver, our subject, has always lived at the homestead. He was married January 6, 1875, to Isie Traver, born May 19, 1851, in the town of Clinton, where her grandfather, Jacob D. Traver, was a leading farmer. Her father, Morgan L. Traver, was born there October 19, 1813, and still lives at the same place; he was a farmer, merchant and school-teacher, and married Phoebe S. Schultz, who was born in the same town in April, 1812, a daughter of Jacob Schultz. Mrs. William E. Traver received her education in the well-known De Garmo Institute of Rhinebeck. Our subject and his wife contribute to the support of the Lutheran Church, and are always ready to promote any worthy cause. They have one son—Clarence, born May 2, 1876, who was graduated from the military school at Claverack, Columbia Co., New York, in June, 1896; he is an accomplished musician on both cornet and drum.

Mr. Traver is one of the most intelligent and progressive farmers in his vicinity, and his 116 acres, which he devotes to general farming, give proof of the wisdom of his management. In politics he is a Republican, and his influence in local affairs is always given on the side of improvement.

WILLIAM E. DALRYMPLE. Among the young men of Dutchess county who have selected agriculture as their vocation in life, and judging from their present indications are bound to succeed in their chosen calling, is the subject of this personal review, who is a resident of the town of Stanford, his farm being pleasantly located near Bangall.

Mr. Dalrymple first opened his eyes to the light of day March 21, 1861, at the home of his parents at Lake Mohonk, Ulster Co., N. Y. For a number of years his father, John Dalrymple, engaged in general farming near New Paltz, Ulster county, and later located on a fruit farm near Highland, N. Y. However, he is now living at Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, where he is running the engine for the Episcopal Church. In politics he casts his votes for the candidates of the Democratic party, and religiously is a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was united in marriage with Sarah M. Lee, a native of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, and to them were born six children: William E., of this review; Frank, deceased; John; George, deceased; Clarence; Myrtle, deceased; and Reginald.

The education of our subject was such as the schools of New Paltz and Highland afforded, but his privileges in this direction were very meagre, as at the age of twelve years he started out in life for himself, being first employed on a farm in Orange county, N. Y., and later at East Fishkill, Dutchess Co. For several years he worked in this way, but a few years after his marriage removed to his present farm, and, although still young, he is one of the representative men of the town of Stanford, occupying a high place in the estimation of his fellow citizens.

In 1880 Mr. Dalrymple was married to Miss Frances C. Jaycox, daughter of Jeremiah Jaycox, and to them was born a son, George A., who died in infancy. Our subject is strong in his faith in the principles of the Republican party, and never falters in his allegiance to that organization, but, although interested in a great degree in all local campaigns, has no desires for the troubles, responsibilities and disquieting influences of political life.

MIRAM T. BEECHER, one of the most genial and whole-souled men of Dutchess county, is engaged in general farming in the town of Pleasant Valley, and also devotes a great deal of attention to the work of the ministry. He belongs to a family that is of English descent, was born at Northampton, then a part of Montgomery (now Fulton) county, N. Y., September 27, 1822, and is a son of Lemam Beecher, whose birth occurred in Sharon, Conn., February 12, 1793; his grandfather, Abraham Beecher, was also a native of Litchfield county, Connecticut.

After his marriage with Lydia Day Fuller, Abraham Beecher located upon a farm in his native State, where he reared his family of nine children, of whom Lemam was the eldest. He was followed by Abraham and Truman, both agriculturists of Illinois; Chauncey, a farmer of Northampton, N. Y., where his death occurred; Jesse, a farmer of Kansas; Lydia, wife of John Sprague, who carries on a farm in Northampton, N. Y.; Desire, wife of James Robinson, a farmer of Northampton; Laura, wife of Dr. Marvin, of Northampton, who served as a surgeon during the Civil war; and Elizabeth, wife of Godfrey Shew, a farmer of Jefferson county, N. Y. The parents of this family were Presbyterians in religious belief, and the father all his life followed agricultural pursuits.

The childhood and youth of Lemam Beecher were passed under the parental roof, and on reaching man's estate he married Katherine Shew, who was born in Northampton, N. Y., May 4, 1794, and was a daughter of Jacob and Hannah Shew, the former a farmer, born April 15, 1763, of Holland extraction. After their marriage the parents removed to a farm near Northampton, where three of their children were born, but the family circle was increased by the birth of six others after their removal to a farm in Kent, Conn. They were as follows: Catherine, born September 26, 1820, first became the wife of Jesse Fuller, a farmer, of Kent, Conn., later wedded S. Slade, a farmer and real-estate and insurance agent and now makes her home in Albany, N. Y. Hiram T. is next in order of birth; James F., born August 30, 1824, is a farmer of Northampton, Fulton Co., N. Y.; Lemam, born December 23, 1826, was a merchant, and died August 24, 1863; Hannah E., born April 5, 1829, is the wife of David B. Giddings, a farmer of Connecticut; Lydia D., born March 9, 1832, married John G. Fenn, an agriculturist of the town of Washington, Litchfield Co., Conn.; Abraham P., born January 16, 1834, is a photographer, of Wilmington, Del. Emily D., born July 23, 1836, is the wife of Henry J. Ufford, a saddle maker of Newark, N. J.; and Jacob S., born February 13, 1839, is also a photographer, of Wilmington, Del. The parents were both members of the Congregational Church, and in Kent, Conn., the father followed farming and merchandising. His political affiliations were with the Whig party. His death occurred in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, October 17, 1848; his wife died August 14, 1879.

Hiram T. Beecher was reared to rural life on the farm in Kent, Conn., and after attending the academies in that place and at Sharon, Conn., entered a law office where he studied for some time. For three years he was employed as clerk in a general store in Kent, and the following year was engaged in farming in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county. In 1846, in connection with a brother, he operated a farm in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, which he continued to cultivate until April, 1867, when he purchased his present farm of ninety-three acres.

On December 20, 1848, Mr. Beecher was married to Miss Mary White, who was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, December 25, 1822, and is a sister of Mrs. Hannah Briggs and of Mrs. Catherine Kinney. Mr. and Mrs. Beecher are widely and favorably known throughout the county, and their circle of friends is only limited by their circle of acquaintances. For many years he has preached early every Sunday at various places in the county, and was the first to hold Sunday service at the county alms house, where he preached for about eleven years. He has officiated at many funerals and Church gatherings of all kinds, and his influence for good is widely felt.

Abraham Beecher, the great-grandfather of our subject, was a native of Connecticut. He married Desire Tolls, and they had a family of nine children, two of whom are yet living, and Abraham, the grandfather of Hiram T., was one of the oldest in the family.

AZARIAH CORNWELL is the proprietor of a good farm located pleasantly in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, and to its cultivation and improvement of which he has devoted his time for a period of over forty-four years, and now has one of the most highly productive places in the locality. He purchased his land of the Vandeburghs, and since it came into his possession has labored unceasingly to make it the valuable farm which we to-day find it.

The early home of Mr. Cornwell was also in the town of Beekman, his birth having there occurred May 19, 1815, and he is a son of Thomas Cornwell, who was there born in 1778, and died in 1856. James Cornwell, the grandfather, was born on Long Island, but was brought to the town of Beekman by his father when only two years old. The latter, who bore the name of Richard Cornwell, obtained his farm from Henry Beekman, the deed for which is still in the possession of our subject, and is dated 1728. He became one of the pioneer settlers of this region, and cleared his land of all those obstructions usually encountered by the pioneer farmer. Upon that farm almost the entire life of James Cornwell was passed. He married Rachel Dennis, a native of the town of Beekman, and they became the parents of five children: Richard, Thomas, James, Letitia and Bebe.

Thomas Cornwell was reared on this farm, attending the district schools of the neighborhood, and on reaching years of maturity received a portion of the old home farm, where his death occurred. He married Miss Annie Crandall, daughter of Azariah Crandall, and by their marriage seven children were born, namely: Amanda, who died in the winter of 1896, at the age of eighty-five years; Harvey, deceased; Azariah, of this review; Rachel, deceased; Sarah, of Chicago; Olive, wife of Elnathan Miller; and Richard, deceased. The mother of these children, who has also passed away, was an earnest Christian woman, a member of the Baptist Church.

The education of our subject was acquired in the Gardner Hollow district school, and he remained under the parental roof until his marriage, which was celebrated in the town of Beekman on May 22, 1844, Miss Delia N. Peters, adopted daughter of James Peters, becoming his wife. The first vote of Mr. Cornwell was in support of the Whig party, and he is now identified with the Republican party, whose principles he most firmly advocates. In religious belief he is a Baptist, with which Church he has been connected for many years, and he is one of the most reliable and conscientious men of the community. For sixteen years he served as commissioner of highways, filling that office to the satisfaction of all concerned, and the bridges which he constructed after the freshet of 1857 are still standing and in general use.

JOHN HENRY FINK. Among the enterprising and wide-awake citizens of America, Dutchess county, whose place of birth was the far-away German Fatherland, and who are rapidly progressing toward that financial condition so much coveted by all, is the subject of this personal history. He was born in Bavaria on the Rhine, November 25, 1843, and is a son of John H. Fink, a stone mason by trade, who died when John Henry was between two and three years old.

In his native land our subject received his education, and learned the shoemaker's trade at Edenkoben, the place of his birth, completing his three-years' apprenticeship at the age of seventeen years. He then traveled for a few years in France, Prussia, and other parts of the German Empire, and in 1866 sailed for America. He first located in Hamilton street, Brooklyn, N. Y., remaining there and in the vicinity for two years, and since 1868 has been a resident of Amenia. For five years he worked at his trade where the bicycle repair shop now stands, and then removed to a building where he conducted business until 1880, at which time he came to his present store. He is now the owner of the buildings running from his corner store down past and including the old Methodist Episcopal Church, with the exception of one. He manufactures and carries a full line of boots and shoes, and also handles cigars, tobacco, toys, etc.

Mr. Fink is a self-made man, having acquired all his property through his own enterprise, perseverance and untiring labor, seconded by a strong determination to succeed. He is a man of genuine worth, enjoying the respect and confidence of his neighbors, and since casting his first vote, after his arrival in Amenia, he has used his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party.

In the fall of 1869, at Amenia, Mr. Fink wedded Mary Leubsdorph, who died August 22, 1870. In that village he was again married, his second union being with Katherine Pfahl, and they have two sons:—J. Henry and George, who compose the firm of Fink Brothers, now engaged in the butcher business. On January 28, 1895, they bought out the business formerly conducted by Joseph Field. The elder son is now connected with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M.

JOSEPH D. COLEMAN, a prominent agriculturist and produce dealer of Stanfordville, Dutchess county, was born July 14, 1820, in the town of Stanford. His family have long been firm adherents of the Quaker faith, and in early times suffered the persecutions common to its followers. His great-grandfather Coleman came from England, and settled on Nantucket Island early in the eighteenth century. His grandfather, Jethro Coleman, was born there, but came to Dutchess county previous to the Revolutionary war, and settled on a farm about two miles southeast of Stanfordville. He was twice married; his first wife died leaving a daughter of the same name, since deceased. His second wife was Deborah Russell, by whom he had four children: Benjamin, Joseph R., Annie and Lydia.

Benjamin Coleman, our subject's father, spent his life in the same locality, attending the district schools in his youth, and succeeding to the old homestead in later years. He married Sara Dean, daughter of Jonathan Dean, a well-known resident of Pleasant Valley. Six children were born of this union: William, Mary, Joseph D., Edward, George, and Robert, of whom the only survivors are our subject, and George, now a resident of Kansas.

Joseph D. Coleman received his early education in the district schools near his home and in the Nine Partners Boarding School in the town of Washington. He was married in 1847, to Miss Anna Carpenter, also a descendant of a highly-esteemed Quaker family. Her grandfather, Samuel Carpenter, was born in Dutchess county, April 22, 1763, and spent the greater part of his life farming in the town of Stanford, where he died November 5, 1844. He married Susanna Carpenter, with whom he spent fifty years and nine months (lacking two days) of happy wedded life. They had eight children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Israel, June 2, 1783; Anne, September 24, 1788; Samuel, October 4, 1790; George, March 6, 1792; Isaac, December 16, 1794; Elias, November 27, 1796; Amy, January 17, 1799, and Daniel S., October 13, 1800. The last named, Mrs. Coleman's father, was born and educated in Westchester county, and in early manhood came to the town of Stanford, and engaged in agriculture first at the home farm, but later at the present home of our subject, where he died October 24, 1873. He married Phœbe Hull, daughter of Henry Hull, a well-known resident of that locality. She was born November 24, 1803 and died May 21, 1856. Four children were born of this marriage: Henry Hull, May 16, 1825; Sarah, June 22, 1827, who died in childhood; Anna (Mrs. Coleman), January 3, 1829 and Caroline, born August 10, 1836, died June 7, 1843.

Mr. Coleman took his bride to the old homestead on his marriage in 1847, but ten years later he sold the place and moved to the farm at Stanfordville, where he built his present residence. His wife died November 24, 1890, leaving one daughter, Cora E., who married Isaac S. Traviss, and has two children—Florence and J. Coleman Traviss. Our subject's integrity, enterprise, and fine discretion in business matters give him a high standing in the community. For many years he has dealt extensively in hay and straw, in addition to his management of his estate. He is, like his forefathers, a Hicksite Quaker. Since the organization of the Prohibition party he has voted their ticket, being at first one of two voters in the township. He has never sought or held public office.

J. D. Coleman

ALBERT AND FRANKLIN CLINE.

Among the enterprising and prosperous farmers of the township of Amenia, Dutchess county, who thoroughly understand the location which they follow, and are therefore enabled to carry on their chosen occupation with profit to themselves, are the brothers whose names introduce this sketch. They are now actively engaged in agricultural pursuits and the milk business in the township which has always been their home, and where they are both widely and favorably known.

The founder of the family in this country was Peter Klein, a native of Germany, who left the Fatherland about 1752 or 1753, and on reaching the shores of the New World first located at Rhinebeck, Dutchess Co., N. Y., but in 1760 removed to the farm now known as the E. E. Cline place, in the town of Amenia, between South Amenia and Amenia Union. He was a "redemptioner," serving his time for his passage to this country.

He left one son, John Cline, who was born at Rhinebeck in 1756, and died in the town of Amenia in 1845. There he acquired his education and on the home farm where he was reared he spent his entire life, engaged in farming. He married Lucy Phillips, and they became the parents of nine children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Etsey, September 25, 1784; Peter, February 2, 1787; Allen, December 9, 1788; Philo, December 6, 1791; Asenath, October 26, 1793; Clarissa, January 12, 1796; Ebenezer E., April 1, 1798; Polly, April 26, 1801; and Julia B., March 30, 1803. Of this family, Asenath lived to an advanced age, dying April 1, 1891.

Philo Cline, the fourth in order of birth, is the father of our subjects. Upon the old home farm in the town of Amenia he was reared, attending the district schools of the neighborhood, and completing his education in a select school at Sharon, Conn. Owing to an accident which injured his foot in his younger days, he was unable to do active farm work, and about 1824 erected the store building at South Amenia now occupied by M. F. Winchester, where he engaged in the mercantile business until 1838, when he sold out. In 1840 he purchased the farm which is still occupied by his son Franklin, and there lived up to the time of his death, which occurred December 26, 1864. In his daily life and action he was ever genial and affable, winning many friends and the respect of all. In politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican, and efficiently served as supervisor of his town. In the town of Amenia in February, 1827, he married Miss Harriet Swift, daughter of Moses Swift, who died April 9, 1838, at the age of seventy-three years. Mrs. Cline was born September 24, 1796, and departed this life April 11, 1861. The only children born of this union were our subjects.

Albert Cline was born on the home farm in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, March 3, 1828, and after finishing his education in the district schools and the Amenia Seminary, for one year was employed as clerk in the store of Judah Swift, at South Amenia. After his marriage, in connection with his brother, they engaged in milling until the spring of 1866, at which time he bought his present farm and residence, where he has since turned his attention to farming and the milk business.

On September 15, 1852, in Amenia, Albert Cline was united in marriage with Eliza S. Reed, who was the adopted daughter of Philo Reed, and died January 18, 1872, at the age of forty-one years. Four children graced this union, namely: (1) Hattie A., born June 13, 1854, is the wife of Franklin Baylis, of Syracuse, N. Y., and they had six children—Albert C., Walter F., Eliza G., Clara R., Helen S., and Freddie, who died in infancy. (2) Philo R., born December 7, 1855, married Grace Collins, by whom he has one son—Albert C., born September 12, 1892, and they make their home at Millerton, N. Y. (3) Charles A., born November 22, 1857, married Fay Sherman, daughter of S. W. Sherman, by whom he has a son—Charles S., born December 22, 1891, and they also live at Millerton. (4) Maria E., born September 1, 1860, is the wife of Walter A. Sherman, and they have five children—Agnes, Walter, Helen, May and Howland. Mr. Cline was again married at Amenia, October 30, 1873, his second union being with S. Rebecca Willson, daughter of Samuel T. and Emeline (Sornborger) Willson. A native of Dutchess county, her father was born at Smithfield, October 3, 1803, and died December 3, 1889.

The first vote of Albert Cline was cast in support of the Whig party, but since the organization of the party he has been a stalwart Republican, and in 1885 and 1886 served as supervisor of the town of Amelia. Socially, he is connected with Amelia Lodge, No. 672, F. & A. M. His estimable wife is a member of the Presbyterian Church at South Amelia.

Franklin Cline was born July 17, 1831, and also spent his boyhood days in the town of Amelia. His primary education was obtained in the district schools, and in 1848 was a student in the Nine Partners Boarding School. He has always turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and, beside his general farm work, is also successfully engaged in the milk business. In the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, on October 1, 1856, he married Lydia A. Sackett, daughter of John Thompson Sackett, and they became the parents of two children: Guernsey Sackett, born April 30, 1858; and Maria L., who was born December 16, 1861, and is now the wife of Frank M. Buck, an attorney at law of Mount Vernon, N. Y., by whom she has two children—Franklin Cline and Helen H. Like the other members of the family, Mr. Cline has been a lifelong Republican, and he has ably served as assessor of his town.

As representative farmers of the town of Amelia, the entire lives of the Cline brothers have been of unusual activity and industry, and they well deserve the high regard in which they are held by their fellow citizens.

ROBERT MORRIS THOMAS, a leading and influential farmer of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, was born October 23, 1848, just across the creek from where he now resides, on the old Thomas homestead, and is a worthy representative of prominent Colonial families. On that farm his father, Hiram Thomas, was born in 1804. When but an infant, the grandfather, Edward Thomas, was brought to Pine Plains by his mother, and he became one of the successful farmers and leading men of the community. He married Anna Landon, a daughter of Jonathan and Isabella (Graham) Landon, and to them were born seven children: Arabella (who married Simeon Culver), Walter, Samuel, John, Richard, Hiram and Mary.

The founder of the Landon family in America was Nathan Landon, who was born in Herefordshire, England, near Wales, at some time prior to November 20, 1668, located at Southold, Suffolk Co., N. Y. where he died March 9, 1718, and his wife, Mary, in 1701. They had three sons: Nathan, James and Samuel. The last name became quite prominent, serving as justice of the peace from 1764 until 1775, was judge of common pleas for his county, and wielded strong influence in courts and convention. He was born May 20, 1699, married May 21, 1721, Bethia Tuthill, by whom he had six sons and four daughters; he died January 21, 1788, probably at Guilford, Conn., where many Long Islanders had taken refuge during the Revolution. His wife, Bethia⁴ Tuthill (Henry,³ John Henry¹), belonged to the Tuthill family of Sandringham, county of Norfolk, England (she was a descendant of Wm. Kinge, of Salem, Mass., of William Wells, Gent., and of Barnabas Horton, of Southold). Their youngest son was Jonathan, born at Southold October 30, 1743; he died at Northeast, Dutchess county, in 1815. He was a staunch patriot during the Revolutionary war, dividing his time between civil and military service. He was a member of the Provincial Convention of New York in 1775-76-77; member of the Council of Safety, 1777-78; State Senator, 1777-1779; major of Dutchess County Militia in 1775, and lieutenant-colonel in 1778 and his brother-in-law, Col. Morris Graham. He was, likely, Dutchess county clerk for some years. ["Southold Town Records;" "New York Civil List;" "Archives of the State of New York;" Revolution: "Journal of the Provincial Convention," and "J. H. Smith, Dutchess Co. His."]

The Graham family trace their ancestry back to James Graham, Marquis of Montrose, who was born in 1612, and died in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1650. His son, John Graham, was the father of James Graham, who came to the New World about 1700, was Attorney General of the Province of New York, and died January 21, 1701. His children were Augustine, May, Sarah, Margaret, John and Isabella, the latter of whom married Hiram Lewis Morris, the first Provincial Governor ew Jersey, and they had a daughter, Arabella. The next in direct line is Augustine Graham, and his son, James, married his cousin, Arabella Morris, by whom he had the following children: James, Augustine, Lewis, Charles, Morris, John, Arabella and Isabella. James was killed by a fall; John, the youngest brother, served as a scout under Gen. Washington in Westchester county. The others were all active in the service of their native land: Augustine was a lieutenant; Charles was a captain and a member of the Society of the Cincinnati; Lewis and Morris were both colonels and both members of the Provincial Convention—Lewis from Westchester county, Morris from Dutchess. [Year Book of the "Society of the Cincinnati;" "Dutchess County History;" "Bolton's Westchester History;" "Journal of the New York Provincial Convention."]

The second son, Augustine, was the father of James Graham, who married Elizabeth Tompson, a daughter of Judge Jesse Thompson, and their daughter, Julia, married George Coventry. Isabella, the daughter of James and Arabella (Morris) Graham, married Jonathan Landon, their marriage license being issued December 11, 1771, and to them were born five children: (1) Richard, born in 1772. (2) Arabella, born in 1773, married, about 1789, Amos¹ Ketchum (Joseph,³ Nathaniel,² Joseph¹), by whom she had several children; she died in 1803, in Saratoga county. (3) Mary, born July 3, 1775, married John Church, and died May 30, 1850. (4) Anna, born in 1771, was the wife of Edward Tomas, the grandfather of the subject of our sketch; she died in 1838, aged sixty-seven years. (5) Rebecca, born March 15, 1783, died November 19, 1844. ["Partial Record of the Landons of Southold," in N. Y. Gen. and Bg. Record, Jan., 1897.]

The grandfather of Mrs. Isabella Landon, Augustine Graham, was surveyor general, and held a major's commission under the Crown in 1700 in Westchester county, and a colonel's commission in Richmond county in 1715 [See "Bolton's Westchester Co. Hist.;" "Colonial MS. of the State of New York".] He was a patentee in the Great Nine Partners Patent of 1707, and also a patentee in the Little Nine Partners of 1706. His death occurred October 18, 1719. Morris Graham built the first house in the village of Pine Plains, now owned by Isaiah Dibble, and Jonathan Landon built the house on the hill in the rear of the home of our subject. The farm owned by Augustine Graham has always been transmitted by will, as it has never passed out of the family.

Hiram Thomas, the father of our subject, was united in marriage with Catherine Coventry, of Deerfield, Oneida Co., N. Y., a daughter of Dr. Alexander Coventry, and they became the parents of five children: Julia, wife of Dr. Lewis D. Hodgekins, of Ellsworth, Maine; Jane, wife of John Veile, of Ancram, N. Y.; Charles, of Pine Plains; Robert M., whose name introduces this sketch; and Alice L. The father followed farming, but was principally engaged in iron manufacturing, being part owner of the Ancram Iron Works, and was also interested in the milling business. He died in 1880, at the age of seventy-six years.

The entire life of Robert M. Thomas has been passed in rural pursuits in the town of Pine Plains, and from the neat and thrifty appearance of his place the passerby knows the owner and manager to be a man of enterprise and progressive ideas. In politics he is a strong advocate of the principles promulgated by the Prohibition party, but formerly was a Republican, and has served his fellow citizens as assessor. He is actively identified with all plans for the social and moral elevation of the community, and has the respect and confidence of all who know him.

EDWIN KNICKERBOCKER, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and a leader in local politics, is a descendant of some of the early settlers of this region, the family having come originally from Holland.

For several generations the homestead of the family has been at Pine Plains, Dutchess county, and here our subject's grandfather, Hugh Knickerbocker, was born, and here he followed farming for many years, moving later to Northeast. He married a Miss Stickle, and reared a family of six children: Peter, Valentine, John, Nancy, Hugh and William, none of whom are now living. Hugh Knickerbocker (2), our subject's father, was born in 1801, and passed his early life at Pine Plains, attending the district schools of the neighborhood, later engaging in farming there and at Northeast, and in the town of Stanford, leading the quiet life of a farmer. For many years he was a member of the New York State Militia. During his residence in Northeast he united with the Baptist Church, of which he remained a consistent member until his death in 1882. He married (first) Miss Mary Payne, of Northeast, and had four children: William, Theron, and Henry, all three residents of the town of Stanford, and Niles (deceased). The mother of these died about 1850, and for his second wife Mr. Knickerbocker married Miss Elizabeth Smith, born in 1817, a daughter of John Smith, a well-known citizen of New Jersey. Four children were born of this union: Edwin, Jennie, Fannie (who married Edward Loomis, of Pittsfield, Mass.), and McClellan.

Edwin Knickerbocker, the subject of our sketch, was born in Stanford, October 17, 1854, and received his early education in the public schools of New York. When a young man he taught successfully in the towns of Stanford, Clinton, Milan and Washington, and then engaged in farming upon land bought of his father. His educational opportunities were good, and he has improved upon them by private reading until he has acquired a wide range of information, and his sterling qualities of character and sound judgment give him great influence in the community. A leading worker in the Democratic party in his locality, he in 1881 was elected justice of the peace, and held the office eleven years, serving in the meantime for four years as justice of sessions in the county court. In the spring of 1893 he was elected supervisor of the town of Stanford, in 1894 was re-elected for two years, and again in 1896 for two years. On June 5, 1889, he was married to Miss Jennie Hooker, daughter of William and Sarah (Cutler) Hooker, well-known residents of the town of Dover, and has had four children: Jay, Asa, Effie, and Sarah. A progressive farmer, he is a member of the Grange, in which he holds the office of master, and he is also affiliated with the K. of P.

GILBERT COOPER, one of the leading and representative citizens of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, was born in Fishkill (now Wappinger) town, Dutchess county, March 23, 1820. His paternal grandfather, Obediah Cooper, who was of English origin, engaged in farming in Wappinger town, where he also followed the trades of a wheelwright and wagonmaker. He married Miss Maria Van Benschoter, and by her had five children: William M., Elias, Nancy, Sarah and Tunis.

Tunis Cooper, the father of our subject, was also a native of the town of Wappinger, his birth occurring there June 25, 1787, and he wedded Mary Budd, a daughter of Underhill Budd, of the same town. She was born April 22, 1793, and died April 10, 1825. They became the parents of the following children: Fletcher, born December 14, 1817, died March 12, 1884; Gilbert, whose name introduces this sketch, is the next in order of birth; Maria, born October 2, 1821, became the wife of John W. Sleight, of Lagrange town, Dutchess county, and was killed by a cannon ball at Nicaragua, Central America, April 15, 1857; John was born July 12, 1823; William, born April 2, 1825, enlisted in an Illinois regiment during the Civil war, served throughout that struggle as hospital steward, and died July 7, 1866. After the death of his first wife Tunis Cooper married Maria Myers, who was born December 17, 1804, and died February 9, 1877. Five children graced this union: Matthew, born November 5, 1828, died September 2, 1850; Amanda, born May 13, 1831, married Benjamin Pugsley, of Alamosa, Colo.; Susan, born March 3, 1836, became the wife of Louis Umlauf, and died August 15, 1873; Martin Luther, born February 23, 1833, died January 25, 1873; and Mary, born June 18, 1841, is the wife of William Pugsley, of Wappinger town.

After his marriage Tunis Cooper purchased the farm next his father's, and continued to live there until 1865, when he removed to the village of Wappingers Falls, where he remained for a couple of years. He next purchased a place between that city and Poughkeepsie, where he resided until his death, October 31, 1868. He had been drafted for the war of 1812, but hostilities ceased before he was called into action. On attaining his majority he supported the Democratic party. After the nomination of President Lincoln, he became a staunch Republican, though he never cared for political preferment. He served as trustee and president of Amenia Seminary; was one of the leading members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the town of Wappinger, with which he was officially connected, and was always faithful in the performance of his duties in both public and private life.

During his boyhood and youth Gilbert Cooper attended the district schools of the town of Wappinger, and in 1842 left the place his nativity, locating at that time upon his present farm; but he was often with his father before the latter's death, caring for him and assisting him in his business. For many years he has rented his farm on shares. His political support is given the Democratic party, and he has served as assessor of the town of Stanford, also as trustee of Amenia Seminary, and was a member of the executive committee of that institution. He has been prominently identified with the upbuilding and welfare of the community, and his circle of friends throughout the county is very wide.

Gilbert Cooper

John Cooper, the brother of our subject, received his primary education in the district schools of the town of Wappinger, after which he attended the Amenia Seminary. In 1844 he removed to Kendall county, Ill., where for forty years he engaged in farming, but is now living with his brother Gilbert in Stanford town, Dutchess county. He was first married in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, to Echel R. Sleight, who died at the end of a year. In Kendall county, Ill., he was again married, this time to Eliza Van Kleeck, a native of Fishkill town, Dutchess county, who died in Iowa. They became the parents of six children: Tunis, now in Minnesota; James Primore, of South Dakota; Gilbert B., of Minnesota; Nellie, wife of Frank Jasinsky; Walter, of Iowa; and Edna, of Stissing, town of Stanford, Dutchess county.

HIRAM A. PULTZ, one of the leading agriculturists of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born December 25, 1821, upon the estate adjoining the one on which he now resides.

His grandfather, David Pultz, purchased the property in the early part of the eighteenth century. He married Miss Tipple, and had nine children: Michael, a farmer and carpenter; Adam, a farmer in Columbia county; Henry, a farmer; Andrew, our subject's father; David, a merchant and farmer; Leah, who married Andrew D. Traver, a farmer; Margaret, who married Fred Dedrick; Christina, who married Philip Traver; and Maria, who married Jacob Pells, a farmer in Rhinebeck. David Pultz and his wife lived at the old farm to an advanced age, and for many years were members of the Lutheran Church at Wurtemberg.

Andrew Pultz, our subject's father, was born May 18, 1792, and always engaged in agriculture. He married Rebecca Cookingham, born January 9, 1798, a daughter of Frederick Cookingham, who came from Holland in early manhood and located upon a farm in Rhinebeck. They had two children, of whom our subject was the younger. Ephraim W., now deceased, was a farmer in Rhinebeck. Andrew Pultz died April 12, 1859, and his wife September 18, 1883. In politics he was a Whig.

Hiram A. Pultz has always lived near the old homestead. His present wife was Miss Annette Pultz, a native of the town of Rhinebeck, where her father, Jacob I. Pultz, was for some years a wagonmaker and farmer. Two children were born of this union: Anna and Minnie (deceased). Mr. Pultz raises general crops, and has done much to improve the homestead, building a beautiful residence about thirteen years ago. In politics he is a Republican, and has served as assessor of the township.

Jacob I. Pultz, father of Mrs. Hiram A. Pultz, died recently at the patriarchal age of ninety-two years, having been born in Rhinebeck in 1805, a son of John Pultz, a prominent farmer, and a member of one of the oldest families in the town. Jacob I. was a farmer in Rhinebeck until 1856, when he removed to a large farm on the Salt Point road, and in 1859 took up his residence in Arlington, where he passed the rest of his days. He was a man of fine literary tastes, and also an excellent musician, and was a member of the band that welcomed La Fayette to Poughkeepsie, on the occasion of that general's visit there in the early part of this century. In politics Mr. Pultz was, in later life, a strong Republican, and served in Rhinebeck as assessor and in Arlington as justice of the peace. He is survived by a widow and two daughters — Annette (Mrs. H. A. Pultz) and Mary, the latter residing at Arlington.

THOMAS BUTTS, an agriculturist of energy and ability, owns the old family homestead in the town of Amenia, where the founder of the family, Thomas Butts, located 160 years ago. He was one of three brothers, who came to the New World from England, and established the family in Dutchess county, where most of his descendants have since made their home.

Richard Butts, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Washington town, and was the son of Thomas Butts. By trade he was a cooper, and lived to the advanced age of ninety years. He married Susan Edmunds, by whom he had nine children: James and Jackson, deceased; Richard S.; George; Rachel, Charlotte and Lois, all three deceased; Hannah, who became the wife of Casper Westervelt, and is now deceased; and Mary Ann, wife of Barlow White, of Tower Hill.

Richard S. Butts, the father of our subject, is also a native of the town of Amenia, and spent his boyhood days on Chestnut Ridge in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, where he attended the district school. He was married in the town of Gallatin, Columbia Co., N. Y., to Miss Eleanor Finkle, daughter of George and Mary (Kilmer) Finkle, and they became the parents of seven children: George and Robert, both of the town of Amenia; Thomas, subject of this sketch; Susan, wife of John Hunter; Phebe, wife of Seneca Miller, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Elizabeth; and Lottie, wife of Millard Coons, of Claverack, New York.

After his marriage, Richard S. Butts purchased a sawmill near Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., which he conducted for many years, and then moved into the village, where he engaged in the butcher business. In 1863 he went to Hudson, N. Y., where he followed the same line of trade for three years, and, returning to Ancram, he there continued to reside until 1895. Now, at the ripe old age of eighty-four years, he finds a pleasant home with our subject. He has been a lifelong Democrat, and has been called upon to fill the positions of justice of the peace and poormaster in Ancram. Socially, he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Copake, New York.

At Ancram, Columbia county, Thomas Butts was born, May 15, 1847, and in the public schools of that locality was educated. Under the able instruction of his father, he early became familiar with the milling and butcher business, and in 1865 left home, going to work for neighboring farmers. Later he followed the same occupation in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, for one year, being employed by his uncle, Jackson Butts, and for two years by Dr. William H. Tanner, but was subsequently with the latter gentleman for ten years. After the first two years passed upon his farm, Mr. Butts was for a time engaged in teaming in the village of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, on the Connecticut & Hartford railroad, after which he returned to Dr. Tanner. On leaving that gentleman, he rented a farm for one year on Skiff Mountain, and for the following two years lived upon the farm now occupied by W. A. Sherman. He was next employed by John R. Thompson, engaged in drilling artesian wells. For the past fifty years he has been superintendent of the Dr. Sherman farm, renting it for six years, the last year of which he had under his management 1000 acres of land. He is a model farmer, thoroughly understanding his business, and has met with excellent success in his chosen calling. He still owns the farm upon which his grandfather lived.

In the town of Amenia, in 1867, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Butts and Miss Sarah E. Wheeler, daughter of Seth Wheeler, and to them were born three sons: Willis R., Edward and Charles. Willis R. married Florence Wheeler, and they now have three children: Ethel, Thomas and George. Mr. Butts is a staunch adherent to the principles of the Republican party in his politics, and supports the candidates offered by that organization on all occasions. He is a most pleasant, agreeable gentleman, who easily wins friends and has the happy faculty of retaining them. He is kind, unaffected and approachable, and every one receives his courteous attention.

ANTHONY H. BARTON is the owner of a fine farm of 200 acres, pleasantly situated in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, which he has been operating successfully since 1864. He has been the architect of his own fortune, and has never been afraid of putting his shoulder to the wheel whenever necessary. His land has been brought to a high state of cultivation, largely by the labor of his own hands, and he is the possessor of good farm buildings, to which each year adds something to enhance the beauty and value of his property. He takes great delight in landscape gardening, and his place is, therefore, one of the most beautiful to be found in the town of Pine Plains.

Mr. Barton was born in Columbia county, N. Y., July 4, 1836, and is a son of George W. Barton. His educational privileges were quite good, and on leaving school at the age of seventeen years he aided his father in the operation of the home farm until his mar-age. In 1858 he wedded Emily M. Sackett, daughter of Allen Sackett, of the town of Stanford, and to them were born five children: Sarah E., born March 18, 1859, married September 13, 1877, to Albert Keller, of Stanford, N. Y. (they have one son, Herbert); one that died in infancy; Frank (proprietor of the "Stissing House" at Pine Plains), born March 1, 1864, married December 4, 1883, to Myra Rosa, of Ulster county (no children); Cora R., born July 18, 1862, married April 25, 1889, to Willis Wright, of Syracuse (they have two children, Herbert and Howard); and Fred, who was born on the present farm of our subject November 13, 1865, married February 28, 1883, to Lizzie Moore, of the town of Milan (has one child, Roy), and is engaged in carpentering and painting in the village of Pine Plains. The mother of these children died in 1876, and Mr. Barton was afterward married to Isophime Wilkinson, daughter of Sidney T. Wilkinson, of Hammerton, New York.

A year after his first marriage Mr. Barton rented the farm now owned by Mrs. Eban Eisted, but at the end of a year he removed to the Dr. Barton farm, in the town of Stanford, owned by his father, and besides its cultivation he also gave considerable attention to stock dealing. He next lived upon the farm owned by his father at Boston Corners, from which he removed to the Joshua Culver place, near Carman's Mills. After residing there for about a year, Mr. Barton purchased for $15,000 the farm of 200 acres which he now occupies. About ten years after locating upon the present farm he began speculating in stock, grain, hay, straw and other farm produce, in which he was quite successful. For a quarter of a century he was also engaged in auctioneering, and does most of the business along that line throughout his section of the county. In his first venture in farming at Boston Corners, Columbia county, he had no capital; but by buying cows on credit and selling them again, secured his first start in life. In his early experience with his father, who was exceedingly economical, he learned the value of a dollar, which came to be worth thousands to him later, and he has always been an able financier.

Mr. Barton has always taken an active part in local politics, and is a strong supporter of the Democratic party, has served as highway commissioner twelve years, assessor two years, and overseer of the poor for about one year. Public-spirited and enterprising, he has taken a foremost part in the upbuilding and advancement of his locality. Socially, he is prominently identified with Stissing Lodge No. 615, F. & A. M., and in religious belief is a Presbyterian, while Mrs. Barton is a Methodist.

George W. Barton, father of our subject, born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, May 14, 1795, died September 17, 1872. He was a very peculiar man; was never known to have but one suit of clothes at a time, which he wore every day of the week, including Sundays. He did his own hair-cutting (with a jack-knife) and shaving (without any mirror), and yet hardly a day passed but what he had from three to five dollars in his pocket. His wife, Elizabeth (Hoffman), born May 28, 1800, died August 26, 1879. They had nine children, to wit: Mariette, born March 1, 1824, married Warden Hoysradt, and died September 12, 1873 (no surviving children); William H., born August 25, 1825, married Cornelia Decker, and died January 24, 1879 (no children); George W., Jr., born May 19, 1827, married (first) Julia Collins (two children), and wedded (second) Mary French (no children); Catherine, born December 15, 1829, married William McArthur (no surviving children); Rachel, born December 16, 1831, married James Collins (one child); Leonard, born December 14, 1834, married Henrietta Pulver (three children); Anthony H., the subject proper of this sketch; Artemus S., born October 30, 1838, married (first) Mariette Rockefeller (no children), and wedded (second) Jane Tripp (two children); and Fred, born May 24, 1841, married (first) Elizabeth Hoysradt (six children), and wedded (second) Zadie Tripp (no children).

REUBEN J. ROBINSON. Among the active farmers of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, the gentleman whose name stands at the beginning of this sketch holds a prominent place. He is a native of the county, born in the town of Clinton, July 5, 1854. His paternal grandfather, John Robinson, was born in the town of Milan, same county, January 31, 1794, and was the son of John Robinson, who emigrated from Ireland to the New World, becoming a resident of Dutchess county. On June 15, 1815, John Robinson, Jr., married Submy Horton, who died June 1, 1818, leaving a son, who was born February 22, 1817, and died June 25, 1867. Mr. Robinson again married on January 22, 1820, his second union being with Esther Ellison, who was born March 22, 1793, and died October 22, 1863. They became the parents of five children, namely: Simmons, born July 16, 1822, is the father of our subject; Eliza Ann, born June 7, 1824, died October 17, 1866; Nancy, born August 14, 1826, married John J. Conklin, of Leonard, Tex.; John, born March 7, 1829, died April 6, 1885; and Smith, born March 15, 1831, died December 18, 1833. The father of this family was educated in his native town and learned the trade of a tanner, which he followed in Stanfordsville until his death, October 26, 1846.

The birth of Simmons Robinson occurred in the town of Stanford, and in the schools of Stanfordsville he acquired his education. He began life for himself at an early age, working for farmers in the neighborhood, and in 1851 was able to purchase a farm in the town of Clinton, where he lived for eleven years. In 1865, he purchased a farm in Stanford, Bear Market-four-corners, and resided there until in 1881, when he deeded this farm to his son, Reuben J., and moved to a small farm adjoining, that had been purchased by his wife.

On August 31, 1845, he was married to Jane Husted, who was born February 13, 1824, the daughter of Reuben Husted. Three children were born of this union: Courtland, born June 26, 1846, has been a teacher, but is now engaged in farming in Hyde Park township, Dutchess county, and in politics is a Prohibitionist; Lavina M., born July 29, 1848, died January 18, 1852; and Reuben J. is the youngest. The mother was called to her final rest on July 30, 1895. Since her death the father returned to his old home, and now lives with our subject. He has always been quite successful in his business ventures, was a faithful member of the Christian Church, and politically, was first a Whig, and is now a firm supporter of the Republican party.

During his boyhood and youth our subject attended the district schools of the towns of Clinton and Stanford, and spent his entire life upon the old homestead, with the exception of one year passed at Pleasant Plains in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county. Besides general farming he was engaged in the milk business. On July 4, 1875, Mr. Robinson was married to Miss Carrie L. Moon, daughter of Franklin Moon, of Saratoga county, N. Y.

Our subject's career as a farmer has been characterized by keen judgment, shrewd common sense and good business habits, and as a man he stands deservedly high in the regard of his fellow-citizens.

MORACE RENNIE POWELL, M. D., one of the most prominent physicians in the city of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born February 16, 1860, at Coeymans, Albany Co., New York.

His family is of Welsh origin, three brothers having come from Wales to this country about 1760, one of whom located in Virginia, one on Long Island and one in Westchester county, N. Y. Many descendants of the latter moved to Albany and Greene counties, and among these were the direct ancestors of our subject. His great-grandfather, John T. Powell, was a native of Coeymans, where he passed his life engaged in farming. Like all of this family he was a Quaker in religious faith, and by a quiet, consistent life he won the high esteem of all who knew him. He married Anna Husted, and had three children: James L., Joshua, now living at the age of eighty years, and Phoebe Ann, who died in 1892, aged forty years. John T. Powell died in 1857, aged sixty-five, and his wife in 1861, at the age of sixty-four.

James H. Powell, grandfather of our subject, was born in 1811, and died in 1891; he was a captain on a line of freight boats on the Hudson between Coxsack and New York, and owned by Reed & Powell, produce dealer. This occupation he followed until old age unfitted him for labor, becoming well known along the river, where his warm heart and constant effort to promote the happiness of others won him universal friendship. He also owned and conducted a farm at Coeymans, and took an influential part there in local affairs, being one of the leading Democratic managers in Dutchess county. He was not an office seeker, and held few official positions, but was for two years—1875 and 1876—supervisor of his township. He married Sally Ann Kelley, who was born in 1812, and died in 1888, a daughter of Sylvanus and Mary (Dodge) Kelley, both of whom were natives of England. Sylvanus Kelley died in 1862, his wife surviving him six years. James H. Powell and his wife had six children: John S.; Jefferson, a resident of Coeymans; Ambrose and Henry (both now deceased); Mary (Mrs. Garrett).

George R. D. Will, M.D.

(Luyck, of Minneapolis, Minn.); and Alexander, a resident of Manchester, New Hampshire.

John S. Powell, father of our subject, was born at Coeymans, N. Y., January 11, 1835, and was educated at the Albany State Normal School. For twenty-five years he followed the occupation of teaching with great success, achieving high reputation throughout the State both as a disciplinarian and as an instructor. After teaching a few years at his native place and in Freehold, Greene county, he became principal of the academy at Nassau, Rensselaer county, and during the last eight years of his professional work he was principal of the Union Free School at "Bath-on-the-Hudson." He was a Democrat in early life, afterward a Republican, and was at one time clerk of the town of Coeymans. In his later years he engaged in the school, church and opera house furniture business.

In 1857 John S. Powell was married to Rachel A. Powell, a descendant of the Long Island branch of the family. Her grandfather, Thomas T. Powell, who died in 1862, at the age of ninety-one years, kept an old-fashioned store at Westerlo, Albany county. His mother was a Titus, and his wife was Mary Ann Greene, who died in 1861 at the age of eighty-five years; she was of Welsh blood, and a direct descendant of Gen. Nathaniel Greene. Six children were born to Thomas Powell and his wife: Ezekiel died in 1882 at the age of twenty-five; Joseph D. died at sixty; Orrin at fifty-five; Jesse D. at thirty; Harriet at fifty-five; and Mary Ann at fifty.

Ezekiel Powell, the maternal grandfather of our subject, married Prudence Halsted, who died in 1884, aged seventy-two years. She was one of the ten children of Stephen and Pe (Decker) Halsted, both of whom were natives of Germantown, Dutchess county. He died in 1835 aged fifty-five, his wife passing away in 1867. Of their children all but three lived in Illinois. Thomas died there at the age of eighty; Bartow at fifty; Stephen D. at forty-five; Samuel at sixty; John now lives there at eighty years of age; Betsey Ann died there at forty-five; Mary Ann is living there at seventy-five. Of those who remained in New York, besides Prudence, there were Sally Maria (Mrs. Blossom), who is living in Westerlo, at the age of sixty-two; and Marilla, who died at South Westerlo when aged twenty-four.

From the foregoing it will be seen that at the time of the birth of Dr. Powell (in 1860) he was blessed with six living grandmothers and four grandfathers. He was the only child of his parents, and they lived to rejoice in his success, his father dying in 1895, his mother now residing with him. Our subject attended the public schools of his native place while his father was teaching there, and at the age of sixteen entered the Albany Normal School, where he took the two-years' course, graduating with the valedictory honors in 1878. For a short time he conducted a drug store at "Bath-on-the-Hudson", and disposing of it he matriculated in the fall of 1878 at the Albany Medical College under Dr. E. T. Rulison (now of Buffalo, N. Y.), the late Dr. Norman L. Snow, of Albany, curator of the college, and Prof. Albert Van Der Veer, as preceptors. He was graduated in 1882, being again awarded the honor of delivering the valedictory address. In the spring of that year he located at Housatonic, Mass.; but in the fall he moved to Poughkeepsie and commenced practice at No. 4 Garden street. Fortune did not at first smile upon him, but his fine abilities and training gradually won recognition, so that at the end of three years he had a fair practice, and now has one of the best in the city. He keeps well abreast of the advances of his profession, his retentive memory being a great advantage to him, and is very successful as a general practitioner.

In 1883 Dr. Powell married Idell H. Champlin, daughter of Charles Champlin, and has two children, Robert Carlisle and Vera Terry. Possessing a genial nature, the Doctor is a leading spirit in local affairs. He takes an ardent interest in the success of the Republican party; was health officer of the city under Mayor Ellsworth, and is now a member of the Board of Education. He belongs to Poughkeepsie Bicycle Club, the K. of P., Triumph Lodge No. 165, and to the Masonic fraternity, Triune Lodge No. 782, being the first man to be admitted to that order at a regular communication of the lodge in the new Masonic Temple. Among his professional brethren he holds a high rank, and is a member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, has been president of the Clinical Society of Poughkeepsie, and in 1892 was president of the Alumni Association of the Albany Medical College. He is U. S. Pension Examining Surgeon; is surgeon of the Nineteenth Separate Company, Third Brigade, New York; has been Police Surgeon, and is now County Physician. He is also a member of the Board of Trade, and of the Retail Merchants Association of the City of Poughkeepsie; is a member of Davy Crockett Hook and Ladder Company No. 1, being ex-president thereof, and at the present time is president of the board of trustees.

JAMES A. MARSHALL. One does not have to pursue his investigations far into the annals of Dutchess county before he finds that the name of this gentleman is conspicuous on the pages of its history. His life is distinctive from the fact that he is one of the oldest native sons of the county, and a representative of one of its most honored pioneer families. In Pleasant Valley, April 26, 1819, he first opened his eyes to the light of day, and his father, Henry S. Marshall, was born in the same town, May 5, 1793. The grandfather, James Marshall, was born in the same locality, March 5, 1765. The great-grandfather, John Marshall, was one of the seven sons of the founder of the family in America, who came to this country from his native England.

James Marshall, the grandfather of our subject, married Catherine Van Vorehis, and located on a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley, where they reared children as follows: John, who was a merchant and school-teacher; Henry S., father of our subject; Stephen, a printer by trade, took charge of the State prison in later life; George, who lived in various localities in Dutchess county; Elizabeth, wife of William Welling, a farmer; Sally, wife of William Allen, a farmer; Catherine, wife of George Ham, an agriculturist; Elsie, wife of Lansing Thorne, who followed the same pursuit; and Julia, wife of Isaac Newcomb, who died in a Rebel prison during the Civil war.

Henry S. Marshall in his early life learned the trade of a bookbinder. He married Sarah Allen, a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, and a daughter of John I. and Esther Allen, whose family numbered twelve children. Her father was an agriculturist, and was of English lineage. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall began house-keeping on a farm in Pleasant Valley town, where they spent their remaining days, their friends and neighbors holding them in the highest esteem for many excellencies of character. Consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, Mr. Marshall served for many years as deacon. In politics he was a Whig. In the family were four children: Catherine E., deceased; James A.; Eliza and Isaac, who have also passed away.

The respected subject of this review, James A. Marshall, lived with his parents through the days of his boyhood and youth, and early became familiar with the duties of farm life. On leaving home he married Cordelia Conover, native of the town of Poughkeepsie, and daughter of Jacob Conover, an enterprising farmer, born in Dutchess county, and descended from an old Holland family. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, which was celebrated October 27, 1843, was blessed with four children: Sarah E., wife of Bartlett Devine, farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Isaac, a farmer of Olive town, Ulster county; Henry J., who operates land near the old homestead; and Nellie, wife of Harvey Halsted, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley.

Mr. Marshall has made farming his life's work. Having resided at various places in Dutchess county, he removed in 1886 to his present home in the town of Pleasant Valley, where he has since lived retired, enjoying the contentment that has come to him as the reward of his earnest and able labors in former years. In September, 1895, he was called upon to mourn the loss of his loved wife, with whom he had traveled life's journey for more than half a century, but he lives in the hope of a blessed reunion in the land where sorrow and death are no more. His religious connection is with the Presbyterian Church, and his political association with the Republican party, by which he was elected road commissioner and assessor. His life is not marked by any events of exciting or thrilling interest, but it is the honorable career of a man who has always faithfully performed his duties to the best of his ability, and with promptness and fidelity discharged every trust reposed in him.

ELIPHAZ DELAMATER, a well-known farmer of the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Esopus, Ulster Co., N. Y., March 21, 1842. His great-great-grandfather on the paternal side came to this State from Holland at an early day, and settled in Esopus. His son John was born there, and the latter's son John was born at Esopus, August 4, 1779, and died September 18, 1858.

This John Delamater, the grandfather of our subject, was married September 13, 1806, to Fanny Decker, who was born August 24, 1780, and died March 6, 1858. Their children were as follows: Catherine, born August 7, 1807; Jacob, September 25, 1810; John (father of our subject), November 26, 1812; Peter, May 24, 1817; Eliza, July 27, 1823. The father of this family was a miller by trade, and followed that occupation for a number of years. He owned a mill which he subsequently sold, and in connection with his father purchased a farm. He was a prominent man in his community, and had the confidence of the public. He was made the trustee of many estates, and managed all his affairs with discretion and good judgment. He was a member of the Reformed Dutch Church, and helped to build the edifice, and was one of its most liberal supporters. For four years before his death he was afflicted with blindness, which he bore with fortitude and uncomplaining patience.

John Delamater, father of our subject, was reared in the town of Esopus, Ulster county, on his father's farm, and attended the district schools of that locality. He carried on farming there until 1865, when he sold out and removed to Lagrange town, Dutchess county, buying the farm on which our subject now resides. Here he made his home until the time of his death, which took place April 27, 1891. He was married in Esopus, June 8, 1833, to Sarah Terpening, who was there born December 5, 1813. Their children were Israel Vanduren, born November 1, 1835, and died May 6, 1868; and Eliphaz, the subject of this review. John Delamater was a member of the Reformed Church, and was highway commissioner in the town of Esopus. He was a man of fine character, and was universally respected.

Our subject spent his boyhood days in Esopus, where he attended the district schools. When twenty-three years old he came with his parents to Lagrange township, and has resided there for the past thirty years, being engaged in farming. He was married October 25, 1822, to Anna M., daughter of Philip Schuyler Andrews, and their family consists of the following children: John and Emott (twins), Harold, Mildred, Wilfred and Cornelia.

Mr. Delamater is a member of the Reformed Church at New Hackensack, and in politics is in sympathy with the Republican party, although he takes no active part in public affairs, and has never been an aspirant for office. He is a quiet, unostentatious man, and is highly respected by all who know him.

GILBERT E. VAN WAGNER, one of the representative farmers of the town of Pleasant Valley, is a native of Dutchess county, born in Hyde Park, January 3, 1838. The kingdom of Holland, which has given to the world one of the hardiest races of people, sheltered the ancestors of our subject, but for many generations they have made their home in the county. The grandfather, Gilbert Van Wagner, was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, and was a son of Evert Van Wagner, who carried on farming there. The former wedded Catherine Schriver, also a native of Dutchess county, and located upon a farm in Hyde Park, where their seven children were born, namely: Hannah first married a cousin by the name of Van Wagner, a farmer by occupation, and after his death became the wife of a Mr. Butts, a resident of the western part of the State; Helen married Charles J. Todd, a farmer of Hyde Park; Mary was the wife of Jacob Tillotson, a wagon maker and farmer of Hyde Park; John, who wedded Lettie Humphrey, also engaged in farming in Dutchess county; Isaac married Jennett Beech, and carried on agricultural pursuits in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county; Evert G. is the father of our subject; and James, a farmer, married Ann Beech.

In Hyde Park Evert G. Van Wagner was born, and on reaching man's estate he married Sarah Humphrey, who was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, a daughter of John Humphrey, who carried on farming there. Her mother, who bore the maiden name of Jane Bregraw, was a native of Newtown, Long Island, and by her marriage had six children, of whom Sarah was the eldest. She was followed by Phœbe, wife of George H. Traver, a retired farmer of Saratoga, N. Y.; Elizabeth, wife of Harris McFarland, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley; Ellen, wife of George Bates, also an agriculturist of Pleasant Valley town; and Thomas, who married Ellen Skidmore. After his marriage the father of our subject took his bride to his farm in Hyde Park town. They became the parents of children as follows: George, who died at the age of twenty-two years; John, who wedded Mary Mosher; Abram, who married Sophia Wagner; Andrew, who married Cordelia Wagner; Gilbert, of this review; and Kate. The sons all followed in the footsteps of their father—engaging in agricultural pursuits as a life work. The parents were both faithful members of the Reformed Church, and in politics Mr. Van Wagner was a Republican. His death occurred July 3, 1884, that of his wife on January 4, 1867.

Gilbert E. Van Wagner received his education in the excellent schools of Dutchess county, where under the able direction of his father he soon became familiar with the duties that fall to the lot of an agriculturist. On December 24, 1862, he was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Ann Barnes, a native of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and a daughter of Edwin and Laura Ann (Van Derburgh) Barnes, also natives of Clinton town, the former born in 1817, and the latter on April 18, 1818. By trade the father was a machinist, and both he and his wife were Presbyterians in religious belief. He died April 3, 1842, his wife passing away February 14, 1874. Their only child was Mrs. Van Wagner. Her paternal grandfather was Samuel Barnes, and her maternal grandfather was John Van Derburgh, a farmer of Clinton town, and a son of Henry Van Derburgh, also an agriculturist of that township, and an officer in the Revolutionary war.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Wagner began their domestic life upon their present farm of 149 acres, which has been in the possession of some member of her family since the year 1800. Three children bless their union: Evert H., who married Ida J. Traver, and engages in farming; Laura Ann; and George E. B., who married Etta M. Young, and lives in Hyde Park. The parents contribute liberally to the support of the Baptist Church, and Mrs. Van Wagner takes an active part in its affairs. They are highly respected throughout the community in which they live, and he is numbered among the most progressive and enterprising citizens of the township. He devotes his entire time and attention to general farming, in which he is meeting with a well-deserved success, and, though not very active in politics, usually votes for the candidates offered by the Republican party.

John Van Derburgh, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Van Wagner, married Ann Mott, a daughter of Ebenezer Mott, who was appointed lieutenant of the Fifth New York Regiment, December 22, 1779, and valiantly aided the Colonies in their struggle for independence. He had been commissioned second-lieutenant by John Hancock on the 21st of November, 1776, and was appointed by John Jay as ensign of the same regiment in June, 1779. At West Point he was taken prisoner, and being placed on board an old battle ship was taken to New York City and incarcerated in the old sugar house. He became very prominent in public affairs, and served as a member of the General Assembly from 1792 to 1793, and from 1798 to 1801. On March 1, 1781, he was married at Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, to Mary Van Vlack, daughter of Jacob and Ann (Stoutenburgh) Van Vlack, and to them were born the following children: Jacob E., who married Margaret Stoutenburgh; James, who died unmarried; Ann, who became the wife of John Van Derburgh; Mrs. Sallie Sammis; Maria, Catherine and Ebenezer, who all died unmarried; and John, who wedded Maria Culver.

Mrs. Van Wagner can trace a relationship back to Anneke Jans, the owner of the property in New York City, where Trinity Church now stands, which is worth many millions of dollars. Her daughter, Sarah, married Har Kiersterd on the 29th of June, 1642, and the daughter, Rachel, became the wife of William Teller, whose daughter, Margaret, married Jacob Stoutenburgh. Their daughter, Ann, was the wife of Jacob Van Vlack, and to them was born a daughter, Mary, who wedded Ebenezer Mott in 1781. Their daughter, Ann, was united in marriage with John Van Derburgh, March 1, 1812, and to them was born a daughter, Laura, who, on the 15th of June, 1841, wedded Edwin Barnes, the father of Mrs. Van Wagner.

WRIGHT B. ODELL, a prominent and representative agriculturist of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Unionvale, same county, June 1, 1860, and is a son of Luman B. Odell, also native of that town. The latter was educated in the district schools, and remained upon the home farm until attaining his majority. In his native township he married Mary Abel, to whom he had three children: Daniel, of Oklahoma, Okla.; Wright B.; and Flora M., wife of Charles Brill, Jr. After residing upon the Abel farm for a time, Mr. Odell removed to Arthursburg, where he engaged in clerking for about two years, and then removed to a farm in the town of Fishkill, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was killed while helping to raise a barn for a neighbor in that town, in 1876. His career was one of honor and respectability, and won for him the high regard of all who knew him. He was a consistent member of the Christian Church in Unionvale town, and a stalwart Republican in politics.

The early school days of Wright B. Odell were spent at Arthursburg, in the town of Lorange, Dutchess county, and at Poughquag. In 1880 the family removed to the present residence of our subject in the town of Beekman, and two years later Mr. Odell assumed control of the farm, which comprises 200 acres of rich and arable land, and which he has placed under a high state of cultivation. He is a most successful and enterprising farmer.

In Chicago, November 25, 1892, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Odell and Miss Elizabeth A. Brill, a daughter of George Brill, a native of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, and they have one daughter, Mary Frances. Mr. Odell supports the principles of the Republican party by his ballot, and he is deeply interested in the welfare and advancement of his native county. He and his wife are widely and favorably known in their locality, and their home is a favorite circle for many friends.

JOHN H. COX, a valued and esteemed agriculturist of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, has his residence upon a farm of the most superior land, which is under excellent culture and improvement. The buildings upon the place are of a neat and substantial character, and betoken thrift and prosperity. He is meeting with well-merited success in his farming operations.

Mr. Cox is a native of New York City, and traces his ancestry back to Isaac Cox, who was born in 1735, and in Kent county, Del., April 1763, was united in marriage with Susanna Hanson. He died December 28, 1773, at the age of thirty-eight years. His son, Isaac, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born in Baltimore, Md., November 10, 1768, and on reaching manhood he there worked at the latter's trade; but most of his life was passed in Pennsylvania. By his marriage with Sarah Hanson he had five children: Eliza, Samuel Daniel, Mary, Henry R. and Rachel.

Henry R. Cox, the father of our subject, was born in 1809, upon a farm in Lycoming county, Penn., where he spent his boyhood days. When a young man he went to New York City, where he became a dry-goods merchant on Greenwich street, and there engaged in business until his death, which occurred May 1, 1851. He wedded Mary Middlemus, and to them were born three children: Joseph M., Henry R. and Eliza H. For his second wife he chose Miss Susan Lake, a native of Lycoming county, Penn., who died in 1857, and they became the parents of two children: John H. and Samuel H. After the father's death the family removed to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county.

As boys, John H. Cox, of this review, and his brother, Samuel H., lived with their uncle, John Hunn, in Stanford township, and received such educational advantages as the district schools of the neighborhood afforded, though the brother had also attended the public schools of New York City. On February 11, 1885, in the town of Stanford, our subject was united in marriage with Eliza H. Striker, a descendant of one of the early settlers of Manhattan Island. Two children bless this union: Ella, born February 19, 1887; and Eliza, born February 18, 1893. For a year after his marriage, Mr. Cox remained upon the Hunn farm, and then for a few months was a resident of Bangall, Dutchess county. Since that time he has made his home upon his present farm on the west side of Hunn's lake. He learned the trade of a machinist in the Roger's axle factory, at Stanfordville, but has always followed farming as a means of livelihood. Success has waited upon the efforts of this gentleman in all his efforts, and the general verdict is that he has well deserved it. Labor and perseverance, coupled with economy and frugality, are bound to win in the long run, and these virtues he possesses to a large extent. Politically, he votes the straight Republican ticket, and has served as assessor of his township, while, socially, he holds membership with the Knights of Pythias.

Samuel H. Cox has lived with our subject since the latter's marriage, and has devoted most of his time to agricultural pursuits and to the cattle trade. He has served as census-taker in his township. The brothers are esteemed and valued members of the community, and possess the entire confidence and regard of their neighbors.

John Hunn, the uncle with whom they lived in boyhood, was born near Dover, Del., September 9, 1785, and was the son of John and Susanna Hunn. He was married in New York City, May 9, 1816, to Sarah S. Willis, and after her death wedded Eliza Cox, February 8, 1837. By trade he was a tanner and currier, and for several years conducted a leather store in New York City, but in 1851 removed to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he made his home until his death, which occurred December 5, 1867. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was an earnest Christian gentleman.

WARREN REYNOLDS. The subject of this sketch, who is a man of more than ordinary intelligence and business capacity, owns two fine farms in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, which aggregate about 400 acres, and is prominent among the agricultural interests of the county, contributing largely to its reputation by making his places two of the most desirable homesteads within its borders. Admired and esteemed by his friends and neighbors, he enjoys, as he deserves, a generous portion of this world's goods.

Mr. Reynolds was born in Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y., September 19, 1821, and is a son of Titus S. Reynolds, whose birth occurred in the same place January 9, 1790. Of that county his grandfather, Solomon Reynolds, was one of the leading agriculturists. The family were members of the Society of Friends.

Titus S. Reynolds was united in marriage with Hannah Brockway, a native of Columbia county, born March 12, 1794, and they began their domestic life in Chatham, where the father followed farming. His political views were in accordance with those held by the Republican party, and religiously he was a Hicksite Quaker. He passed away April 11, 1862, and his wife on August 3, 1881. Their family circle included twelve children: Horace, born August 11, 1814, died at the age of sixteen years; Lester A., born February 16, 1816, is living retired in Iowa; Sylvester (twin brother of Lester) followed blacksmithing and farming, and died in 1890; Elias B., born September 14, 1818, was a drover, and died May 24, 1880; Mary A., born March 23, 1820, became the wife of John Goodenough, a wheelwright by trade, and died in 1889; Warren, of this review, is the next in order of birth; Deborah J., born February 5, 1823, married Erastus Jones, a farmer of Columbia county, and died in 1887; Isaac B., born November 26, 1824, died in infancy; Laura B. (twin sister of Isaac), married a Mr. Brown, and died in 1879; Julina, born October 23, 1828, became the wife of George Williams, a farmer, and died in 1887; Freeman, born April 16, 1831, is an agriculturist of Orleans county, Vt.; and Alida, born May 5, 1833, was the wife of H. W. Williams a farmer of Columbia county, and died August 27, 1864.

Our subject was reared on a farm, and received his first lesson in agriculture from his father, who was a practical, capable farmer. He was married, October 2, 1843, to Hannal Carpenter, who was born in Hudson, N. Y. May 12, 1822, and died in Wayne county, this State, May 24, 1852. Four children graced this union: Lydia J., born October 12, 1844, died in infancy; Francelia, born July 2, 1846, married William Jones, of Chicago, Ill., and later became the wife of George K. Jones, of the same city; Jason C., born March 13, 1849, is employed in the Adams Express office in New York City; and Alvah B., born April 28, 1857, is a milkman of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On September 19, 1859, Mr. Reynolds was again married, his second union being with Mary Morey, who was born February 20, 1819 and died December 7, 1881.

On September 19, 1883, Mr. Reynolds was married to Mrs. H. C. Hunt, a native of Berlin, Vt., who bore the maiden name of Cornelia Bosworth. Her father, Jonathan Bosworth, was born January 21, 1787, in Lebanon N. H., and was a son of Nathaniel Bosworth a Revolutionary hero, and the grandson of Jonathan Bosworth, who came from England and founded the family in this country. All his life the father of Mrs. Reynolds engaged in the manufacture of hoes. By his marriage on July 2, 1811, with Lovisa Vilona Darling who was born November 9, 1791, he had thirteen children, namely: Lovisa V., Mary L., Elisha D., Jonathan E. (1), Sarah D., Jonathan E. (2), Tryphena N., Samuel H. O., Ann M., Lucy D., David B., Joseph S., and Hannah C. The father died April 7, 1879, and the mother passed away August 13, 1872.

Since 1860 Mr. Reynolds has resided in Dutchess county, where he is successfully en aged in general farming, and is one of the most progressive citizens in the community, always identifying himself with all matters for the public welfare. His political support has never been given the Republican party, and he is a member of the Society of Friends, while Mrs. Reynolds is a member of the Presbyterian church of Amenia.

JAMES H. LOVELACE. Among the leading and representative agriculturists of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, stalwart and sturdy tillers of the soil, there is none who stands a more prominent figure than the gentleman of whom this notice is written. He made his appearance upon the stage of life March 26, 1845, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, at the home of his parents, William and Mary (Bates) Lovelace. His paternal grandfather, Peleg Lovelace, was one of the early residents of Putnam county, N. Y., but his last days were spent in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county. He reared to manhood and womanhood a family of ten children—seven sons and three daughters.

William Lovelace was born in the year 1812, in Putnam county, where his boyhood days were passed, and during his youth he learned the carpenter's trade, but did not long follow that occupation, as he soon began farming in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, remaining there several years. Ten years were afterward spent in the town of Washington, at the expiration of which time he returned to Stanford, where he carried on agricultural pursuits for thirteen years. He next located upon a farm on Chestnut Ridge, in the town of Dover, which he still owns, but is now having retired in Millbrook, town of Washington. Although he started out in life with nothing, he has by energy and perseverance become a very successful man. He is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party, but has never cared for political preferment, and is a consistent member of the Baptist Church. On November 14, 1835, in the town of Washington, he led to the marriage altar Miss Mary Bates, a daughter of Joseph Bates, and four children blessed their union: Francis, deceased; James H.; Richard, of the town of Dover; and Asa, of Millbrook.

Our subject accompanied his parents on their various removals during his younger years, and in the public schools of the localities obtained a fair education. For ten years he engaged in agricultural pursuits on Chestnut Ridge, in the town of Dover, remaining upon his father's farm until 1887, when he removed to the Toney farm near Clinton Corners, which he operated until the spring of 1890. He then purchased his present farm in the town of Clinton.

Mr. Lovelace was married in the town of Stanford, March 2, 1870, to Maria E. Wood, daughter of Talmage and Lydia (Mosher) Wood. Previous to the Civil war her father had been a resident of that town, but during that struggle enlisted in the 150th N. Y. V. I., under Gen. A. B. Smith, and while serving with that command was killed at the battle of Gettysburg. Two children were born to our subject and his wife: Alva Wood, and William R., but the latter died in infancy. Mr. Lovelace attends the Christian Church at Stanfordville, is an upright, honorable gentleman, who wins friends wherever he goes, and by all who know him he is held in the highest regard.

CHARLES H. GRIFFEN. Prominent among the more intelligent, active and enterprising citizens of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, is the young man whose name introduces this biography. His reputation for integrity and industry is second to none in the county, and he is a man devoted to farming and fine stock. He was born on the farm which is still his home, May 27, 1868, and since the early age of fifteen years has had the entire management of the place, which attests his progressive spirit, energy and perseverance.

William D. Griffen, the father of our subject, was born at White Plains, Westchester Co., N. Y., and at the age of ten years accompanied the family on their removal to Dutchess county. He attended the Nine Partners Boarding School in the town of Washington, and later became a student in a school at Westtown, Penn. He remained upon the home farm until 1857, when he and his brother Jacob purchased the farm now owned by our subject. This they operated together until 1875, when the brother returned to the old homestead in the town of Clinton, but the father continued its cultivation up to his death in 1877.

On February 1, 1865, in the Friends Church of Standfordville, N. Y., William D. Griffen was married to Phoebe Jane Haight, daughter of Zebulon Haight, of the town of Clinton, and three children blessed their union: Daniel, of Millbrook, Dutchess county, who was born in December, 1865, and by his marriage with Esther A. Purdy has two children—Ira and William; Charles Haight, of this review; and Mary G., wife of F. E. Birdsall, of the town of Clinton. The parents were both sincere and faithful members of the Society of Friends, and the political support of the father was given the Republican party, whose principles he staunchly advocated. He was always a progressive, upright citizen, respected by all his neighbors and friends. His father had given him a good start in life, and as he had made the most of his opportunities he secured a comfortable competence. His wife survived him for some years, and was called to her final rest in 1891.

On reaching a sufficient age, Charles H. Griffen entered the district schools of the town of Clinton, later attended Hoags Boarding School at the head of Upton Lake, was then a student in a private school kept by Miss Tousey, near Clinton Corners, and further continued his studies at Westtown, Penn. His education, however, was completed in the Leslie School, on Academy street, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. On laying aside his text books he entered upon the more difficult lessons of life, and his time is now fully occupied with the labors and duties which fall to the lot of the agriculturist. He is identified with the Republican party, and his religious connection is with the Society of Friends.

RICHARD L. VALENTINE, a leading undertaker of Millerton, Dutchess county, was born December 9, 1851, in Nassau, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. His family is one of the oldest of that locality, his ancestors having settled there during the Colonial period. They came from England, but it is probable that the family originated in France. His great-grandfather, John Valentine, was born February 28, 1761, and was married December 29, 1791, to Amy Brockway, who was born January 30, 1770, and they had nine children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Lucy, September 12, 1792; William, March 30, 1794; Richard, November 11, 1795; Abraham, July 6, 1797; Isaac, August 19, 1799; Jacob, April 19, 1801; Jerusha, April 21, 1806; Elizabeth, April 25, 1808; and Eunice, June 1, 1810.

Richard Valentine, the grandfather of our subject, was a farmer by occupation, and possessed limited means. He was quiet and retiring in disposition, extremely kind-hearted and was highly esteemed for his many admirable traits of character. April 3, 1811, he married Anna Hoag, a native of the same county as himself, and had thirteen children: Anna, born August 31, 1816, died February 24, 1841; Permelia, born February 15, 1818; William H., born September 11, 1819, died March 1, 1820; Hiram B., born January 21, 1821; James A., born October 3, 1822, died March 4, 1855; Jerusha Jane, born June 18, 1824; Lorenzo, born February 16, 1826, died July 21, 1881; Phoebe A., born February 19, 1828; Charles F., born April 22, 1830, died August 29, 1878; John W., born August 5, 1832, died March 5, 1854; Alfred, born July 31, 1834, died August 27, 1835; Henry, born July 24, 1837, died November 28, 1837; and Sylvester, born December 8, 1838, died May 2, 1839.

Lorenzo Valentine, our subject's father was a farm laborer, and, except for five or six years passed in Columbia county, his life was spent in his native place. Although he was not blessed with much of this world's goods he was a good citizen, a kind and affectionate husband and father, and his upright and consistent conduct gained him the respect of all who knew him. He married Amanda Hermance, a descendant of a well-known Columbia county family and the daughter of John R. and Elizabeth (Haightman) Hermance. Four children came of this union: Anna, born August 30, 1850, who married Willis Clark, of Nassau; Richard L. (our subject), born December 9, 1851; Frank, born April 20, 1860, died July 30, 1861; and Edwin E., born August 3, 1862, now residing near Brainard Station, Rensselaer Co., N. Y. The father died July 21, 1881; the mother is now living in Berlin, New York.

Our subject's educational opportunities were limited in his youth to a few years' attendance at the district school. When he was ten years old he began working in a cotton factory at Stuyvesant Falls, and after two years there he went to Valatie with his father, and worked in a cotton factory there some four years. In his eighteenth year he began to learn the trade of wagon making, serving a three-years' apprenticeship with his uncle, Gil ert Hermance, at Nassau. He then went to Mill River, Mass., where he worked as a journeyman for eight months, and in 1873 came to Millerton, and for one and one-half years worked at the trade for John Scutt. On March 30, 1875, he bought Andrew Fish's undertaking business, which he has since conducted, developing and enlarging it until he is now at the head of the principal establishment in that town in Millerton, and one of the most extensive in the county.

Richard L. Valentine

Although Mr. Valentine's business success has been won by his own hard work, he has found time to assist in public affairs, as every good citizen should. He votes the Republican ticket, has been corporation trustee for four years, and he is prominent in the various philanthropic enterprises of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he has been a member for twenty-six years, and is now a leading official. He belongs also to the Royal Arcanum, and the Townspeople Council.

Mr. Valentine has been twice married, first on September 16, 1874, to Miss Libbie J. Kipp, who was born July 21, 1849, a daughter of George and Jane M. (Levy) Kipp, the latter of whom was born in Gallatin, N. Y., and died on November 2, 1886, aged sixty-three years.

Mr. Kipp was born at Red Hook, N. Y., and was a farmer in the town of Northeast for many years, and is now retired. He is a typical self-made man, having begun life a poor boy, but by the aid of his faithful wife became a well-to-do. He is one of the township's best men, and is highly esteemed by his many friends. His second wife (for he was twice married) was Mrs. Washington Hubbell. To our subject and wife were born three children, to wit: George L., born January 17, 1876; Willard J., born August 8, 1880; and Henry, born December 2, 1892. The mother of these died January 7, 1893, and for his second wife Mr. Valentine married Miss Jennie V. K. Giver, a lady of English descent, born July 1, 1865. By this union there was one child, Frank, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Valentine's great-grandfather, William Oliver, married Elizabeth Seech, and reared a family of eleven children: William, Richard, James, Elizabeth, Jane, John, Ann, Jacob, Benjamin, Joseph and Sarah. Of these, Joseph (Mrs. Valentine's grandfather) was born August 22, 1779, at Parish of Horn Church, County of Essex, England, and in early life came to America, locating near Catskill, Greene Co., N. Y., where he died July 20, 1869. He was a paper maker by trade. By his wife, Sarah (Thornton), he had seven children, named respectively: Mary, Sarah, William, Jane, Elizabeth, Abigail and Cynthia. William Oliver (Mrs. Valentine's father) was born October 4, 1816, and followed wagon-making at Catskill, N. Y. He married Anna M. Jennings, who was born February 11, 1828; in Fairfield, Fairfield Co., Conn., and they had a family of four children: William C., born April 5, 1849, is a minister in the M. E. Church, at Hunter, N. Y.; Frank, born April 1, 1852, is in business at Catskill, N. Y.; Mary, born January 18, 1862, died in childhood; Jennie V. K., wife of our subject, being the youngest.

ALFRED S. WILEY, one of the well-to-do and prosperous farmers of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, residing near Clinton Corners, is one of those men who thoroughly understands the business which he is pursuing, and by following that vocation has secured a competence. He is the architect of his own fortune, having started in life with but little capital beyond his own industry and laudable ambition to rise in the world.

Mr. Wiley is a native of Dutchess county, born near Schultsville, in the town of Clinton, April 14, 1829, in which town were married his parents, Samuel and Elizabeth (Green) Wiley, who were also born in Dutchess county, and the latter was the daughter of Tobias Green. In their family were the following children: Emily, deceased wife of Henry Barnes; Chancellor, who has also passed away; Annie, deceased wife of Mark Wilber; Harriet, who first wedded Griffin Snyder, and, after his death, Charles Moon; Alexander and Martin Luther, who have both departed this life; Alfred S., of this review; and Mary, wife of Nelson Sleight. After the death of his first wife Mr. Wiley married Mrs. Eliza Wing. All his life the father engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Clinton with the exception of fourteen years spent in the town of Milan. He was a sincere and faithful member of the Milan Christian Church, and died at the ripe old age of eighty-six years.

Alfred Wiley received his education in the common schools of the towns of Clinton and Milan, and was given the training necessary to a successful pursuit of agriculture upon his father's farm, remaining at home engaged in helping to carry on the labors upon the old homestead until he had attained the age of seventeen. For one year he then lived in the town of Unionvale with his brother, after which he returned to the town of Clinton, and made his home with his brother-in-law, Mark Wilber, for the following two years. His father having again married, he then returned to the parental roof, where the next two years were passed.

Thinking it was about time that he should establish a home of his own, and surround his domestic hearth with family ties, Mr. Wiley married March 5, 1851, in the town of Clinton, Mary A. Pultz, a daughter of Jacob G. Pultz, who was born in the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county. By this union four children were born, namely: Carlinda, deceased, was the wife of John Budd, by whom she had one son—William; Ida is the wife of Monroe S. Eckert; Emma F. married Robert Lawrence, who resides near Salt Point, Dutchess Co., N. Y. (they have two daughters—Alice and Maud); and Frank Wiley died at the age of five years.

For the first year after his marriage, Mr. Wiley worked on the farm of Mark Wilber, after which he purchased land near Clinton Hollow, operating the same for three years, and on disposing of that tract bought another farm about a mile east of Clinton Hollow, where he remained for five years. On selling that place he purchased the Clinton Corners store, which he ran for a couple of years, and then bought a farm a mile and a half northeast of Clinton Hollow. After residing upon that tract for about eight years, he sold soon after the close of the Civil war, and has since made his home upon his present farm near Clinton Corners. There he has erected a fine residence, which he now occupies, and the present highly cultivated state of his land has been brought about by the exercise of great industry, perseverance and excellent management. His improvements are of a substantial character, and everything about the place denotes prosperity and thrift. Though not an office seeker in any sense of the word, Mr. Wiley served for eight consecutive years as justice of the peace, being elected on the Democratic ticket, which he always supports. He has been quite prominently identified with the interests of the community in which he lives, and bears a high character for sterling integrity and genuine worth. Mrs. Wiley is a member in good standing of the Christian Church at Schultsville. William Budd, our subject's grandson, was married December 19, 1894, to Belle Stewart, of the town of Clinton. He now operates his grandfather's farm, the latter having retired from active work.

NATHAN FELLER. As a representative of the agricultural class, and one who has met with good success in his independent calling, we take pleasure in giving a brief sketch of the gentleman whose name appears at the beginning of this notice. He is pleasantly located upon a farm of seventy-eight acres in the town of Red Hook, which he purchased of Bartholomew Gray in 1894. It is well stocked and supplied with everything found upon a model farm of the nineteenth century. His birth occurred in Red Hook on August 15, 1840, and in the common schools of the community he acquired his education. He early became inured to the arduous duties of farm life, and his training along that line was under the able instruction of his father, Philip Feller, a prosperous farmer of Red Hook.

On January 3, 1866, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Feller and Miss Emma Martin, who was born April 12, 1847, and is the daughter of Col. Claudius G. Martin. Her father received his title while serving in the 111th New York Artillery. He was also a native of the town of Red Hook, born February 19, 1799, and was educated in the common schools near his home. He learned the trade of blacksmithing with Fred Barringer, but did not follow that pursuit. He turned his attention to farming, taking the old Martin homestead on the Post road, which had been the historic residence of the family since the Revolutionary war, and there he died March 1, 1875.

Col. Martin was twice married, his first union being with Miss Julia Ring, daughter of Mr. Ring, of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and to them were born two children but one died in infancy. John G. was born January 28, 1828. After the death of his first wife, he remained single for about ten years when he wedded Miss Sarah Webster, daughter of Harry Webster, a shoemaker of Red Hook, June 10, 1835.

Nine children graced the second union of Claudius R., born July 28, 1836, was married ay 27, 1863, to Esther A. Stall, daughter of John Stall, of Clermont, Columbia county; Julia F., born May 13, 1838, became the wife David V. Traver, of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, January 1, 1861; Lucy M., born May 2, 1840, married Alonzo Wood, of Poughkeepsie, November 19, 1862; Clarence W., born September 8, 1842, was educated in the common schools, and learned the trade of a cooper, at which he worked for a time, but afterward was employed on a steamer on the Hudson until 1892, when he returned home and is now living retired; Aurelia W., born January 4, 1845, married William H. Dedrick, of Rhinebeck, December 25, 1866; Emma, wife of Nathan Feller, is next in order of birth; Isabella, born October 6, 1849, died March 2, 1852; Henry A., born April 30, 1852, was united in marriage with Elizabeth M. Traver, daughter of Nelson Traver, of Rhinebeck, January 1, 1880; and Frank, born November 29, 1855, died April 2, 1861. The entire family were born on the old Martin homestead on the West road. The house is still standing, and is now occupied by Sarena Martin, niece of Edward Martin, deceased.

To Mr. Feller and his estimable wife was born a daughter—Isabella M., whose birth occurred September 22, 1871. She was married June 20, 1895, to William R. Carroll, son of Andrew J. Carroll, of Rock City, Dutchess county. Mr. Feller and his wife are worthy members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, at Red Hook, and endeavor to carry out in their lives its moral teachings. They are straightforward and reliable, industrious, energetic and progressive, and are highly esteemed and respected by all who know them. Their daughter, Mrs. Carroll, and her husband are both also members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Red Hook.

HENRY MYGATT, who is one of the prominent agriculturists of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, has spent almost his entire life in that township, his birth having occurred on his father's farm near Sharon Station, August 1, 1846. As a man of influence, public-spirited and liberal, this brief record of his history will be more than ordinarily interesting to those who are identified in any way with the interests of Dutchess county.

Thomas Mygatt, his grandfather, came from New Fairchild, Conn., in 1772, and purchased land near Sharon Station, in Amenia town. He was a descendant in the sixth generation of Deacon Joseph Mygatt, one of that company of Puritans who landed on the shores of New England in 1633, and three years later went with Rev. Mr. Hooker to start a settlement at Hartford, Conn. He became a wise counsellor in that new Commonwealth. The father of Thomas was a citizen of Danbury, Conn., and was distinguished for his enterprise and thrift. After coming to Dutchess county, Thomas Mygatt married Miss Annie Watrous, a native of the town of Amenia, by whom he had two sons, Ambrose and Abram. As a life occupation he followed agricultural pursuits.

In Amenia town, in 1811, Abram Mygatt, the father of our subject, was born, and he was educated in the district schools near his home. He was united in marriage with Miss Louisa Rundall, a daughter of Jacob Rundall, and to them were born four children: Julia, wife of Dr. I. N. Mead; Anna; Henry; and Laura, wife of H. B. Murdock. The father carried on farming near Sharon Station until 1851, when he removed to the present residence of our subject, and there lived until 1869. The remainder of his life was passed in the village of Amenia, where he passed away in 1892. In politics he was identified with the Democratic party, and religiously was one of the active members of the Presbyterian Church at Amenia, being a liberal contributor when the house of worship was erected.

The boyhood and youth of our subject were passed in much the usual manner of farmer lads, his home being at his present residence, while his primary education was obtained in the district schools of the neighborhood. Later, for four or five years, he attended the Amenia Seminary, and then spent one year at the Poughkeepsie Military Institute. On October 30, 1868, Mr. Mygatt married Miss Alice M. Frost, of Connersville, Ind., and they have two daughters, Louisa and Laura, twins.

In October, 1876, our subject removed to Connersville, where he engaged in farming until April, 1886, when he returned to the old home farm in the town of Amenia, and there has since resided. For six years he acceptably served as assessor of his township, being elected on the Democratic ticket, which party he always supports.

DAVID V. MOORE, one of the reliable and progressive young business men of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, is successfully engaged in general merchandising at Clove Valley. A native of Dutchess county, he was born in the town of Unionvale, August 4, 1869. The Moore family, to which our subject belongs, came to this country from County Antrim, Ireland, and they derived their name from living on or near a boggy heath. The first to locate on the Emerald Isle came from Maernen, and from Thomas de Moore, who went to the British Isles in 1066, the year of the Conquest, are descended the Earls of Mount Cashel and Drogheda. In this country the family have principally belonged to the Society of Friends.

Our subject traces his ancestry back to William Moore, who was born on Long Island, and there engaged in farming throughout life. His son, Andrew Moore, was also there born, but when a young man became a resident of Dutchess county, and was a farmer and miller by occupation. He married Miss Elizabeth Dorland, who was born at Hempstead, Long Island, in May, 1740. Her father, Samuel Dorland, was a native of the same place, and the son of Lamerest Dorland, who came from Holland to America in 1663 on the vessel named the "Spotted Cow." To Andrew Moore and wife were born ten children, namely: Annie, who first married a Mr. Merritt, and after his death wedded Isaac Thorn, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and died in 1838; Mary, who wedded Daniel Haight, and died in 1887; William, who married Mary Oakley, and died in 1849; Samuel, who married Elizabeth Pitcher, and died in 1885; Stephen, from whom our subject is descended; Gilbert, who died in infancy; Elizabeth, who married James Ellison, and died in 1824; Arletty, who married Jonathan Holmes, and died in 1814; Allen, who married a Miss Underhill, and after her death wedded Eliza Wooley, and died in 1826; and Andrew, who married Sarah Oakley, and died in 1885.

Stephen Moore, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born at Verbank, the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, and on reaching manhood wedded Miss Ruth Clark, whose birth occurred near New Bedford, Mass. Her people were also members of the Society of Friends, and her grandfather, Lawrence Clark, was a native of England. Her father, Jonathan Clark, was born in Rhode Island, and came to Dutchess county with his family when a young man, where he engaged in farming. For fifteen years after his marriage, Stephen Moore lived at Verbank, and later removed to Moores Mill, where he conducted the milling business, and which place was named in his honor. In his family were twelve children, as follows: (1) Anna married Jesse Congdon, a farmer of Lagrange town. (2) Stephen went to Alabama, where he engaged in the practice of medicine, and there died; he married Emily Brooks, a native of that State. (3) Elizabeth married John Thorn, a farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county. (4) Alfred, who was a farmer and miller of Unionvale town, married Charlotte Haviland. (5) Philip was the grandfather of our subject. (6) Susan married Dr. Willet Dorland, of Canada. (7) Lydia married William Akin, a farmer of Pawling town, Dutchess county. (8) William was an agriculturist, and died unmarried. (9) Jonathan, a farmer of Lagrange town, married Jane Underhill. (10) Ruth married Joseph Flagler. (11) Content married William Osborn, a farmer of Pawling town. (12) Mary is single. The father of these children died June 9, 1851, the mother on December 16, 1868. He was a devout Christian, and left behind him wealth and a good name.

Ruth Moore, of the above family, was born at Moores Mill, and in April, 1835, married Joseph Flagler, who was born in Lagrange town in 1803, and was the son of Paul Flagler, a native of the same town. Joseph grew to manhood on the home farm there, and in that town carried on agricultural pursuit until 1865, when with his wife he removed to Poughkeepsie, where he lived retired until his death, February 13, 1881. He was one of the first directors of the First National Bank of that city, and was a Republican in politics. He was an honorable, upright man and sincere Christian, an elder in the Church with which he was connected. His faithful wife still survives him.

Philip Moore, the grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Unionvale, and was there reared upon a farm. He married Sally A. Losee, a native of Washington town, where her father, Samuel Losee, carried on farming. Her people were of Holland origin. After their marriage they located upon a farm in Unionvale town, where they reared the family of six children—Maria L., who married

David L. Moore

Joseph Wicks, a farmer of Lagrange town; Anna, who married Smith G. Levings, a farmer of Rensselaer county, N. Y.; Stephen, father of our subject; Samuel, who is a miller by trade; Henry C., who was a farmer, but is now deceased; and William, an agriculturist at Moores Mill. The grandfather carried on farming during his entire life, dying in 1892. He was a Republican in politics, and an orthodox Quaker in religious belief. His wife is still living.

Stephen Moore, the father of our subject, was born in the village of Oswego, in the town of Unionvale, October 6, 1839, and there acquired his elementary education. He later attended school in Poughkeepsie, and after finishing his education returned to the home farm. In 1869 he was united in marriage with Miss Martha A. Vincent, a daughter of David D. Vincent, who was supervisor of the town of Unionvale for thirteen years. Our subject was the only child born of this union, and was only four years old when his mother died. His father was again married, this time in 1884, to Florence E. Latten, who died, leaving one son, Oscar, whose death occurred in 1889. In 1890 Stephen Moore married Nellie F. Taber, daughter of William L. Taber, a farmer of Pawling town, and they have two children: Louella P. T. and Elma L. Upon the old home farm in Unionvale the father continued to reside until 1891, when he removed to his present farm in East Ashkill town, comprising 320 acres of good land. For seventeen years he served as road commissioner of the former township, and he is a ardent Republican in politics.

David D. Vincent, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and the son of Isaac and Martha (Duncan) Vincent, the former a merchant on Chestnut Ridge in that town. When a young man David went to the Cove in the town of Unionvale, where for over forty years he engaged in merchandising, and there spent his last days. By his marriage with Phoebe Preston he had three children, namely: (1) Isaac married Mary Albro, by whom he had three children—Phebe, David D. and Martha Louise; (2) Martha A. was the mother of our subject; and (3) Obed married Elizabeth Vincent, by whom he had a daughter, Hazel. The three children are all now deceased.

When thirteen years of age, David V.

Moore, whose name introduces this sketch, went to live with his grandfather, David D. Vincent, in the town of Unionvale, and at the age of eighteen years assumed the management of a farm in the town of Beekman, which is owned by himself and Mrs. Margaret Gallagher. In February, 1894, he began general merchandising at Clove Valley, in Beekman town, where he has since successfully conducted business and erected his present store building. He is a wide-awake, energetic business man, who deals squarely and liberally with his patrons, and merits the confidence of the community.

On December 2, 1891, Mr. Moore was married to Miss Minnie Vincent, daughter of Edwin Vincent, and they have two interesting children: Edna and Vincent. Mr. Moore has always been a staunch Republican, was elected supervisor of Beekman town in the spring of 1892, which position he filled for two successive terms, and in the spring of 1896 was again elected. In September, 1895, he was also appointed assistant postmaster of Clove Valley. He is a popular and influential citizen, and has many warm friends throughout the community.

WALTER B. THOMAS is a leading farmer of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, having resided upon his present place since 1860. Go into any village, town or city in this great country of ours, seek out the men who are the leaders in spirit, thought and action, learn the history of their lives and you will find that nearly all of them are self-made men, who have risen by their efforts to positions of prominence and prosperity. This fact illustrates most aptly one of the salient features of our American civilization. There is an opportunity offered here under our emblem of liberty for every human being to work out and develop the best there is in him. To this class of self-made men belongs Mr. Thomas.

He traces his ancestry back to John Thomas, who was born April 10, 1725, and December 22, 1746, married Sarah Gifford, who was born April 12, 1720. In their family were seven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Mehitabel, October 1, 1747; Charles, November 25, 1749; John, June 20, 1751; Sarah, May 15, 1753; Martha, March 19, 1755; Elizabeth, June 2, 1757; and Stephen, March 28, 1759.

Charles Thomas, the grandfather of our subject, was married December 5, 1770, to Elizabeth Lake, who was born October 15, 1750, and died April 14, 1837. His death occurred January 26, 1824. He was a devout Christian, a faithful member of the Society of Friends. His family consisted of the following children: Phebe, born August 26, 1771; James L., born February 8, 1773; Elizabeth and Sarah, twins, born May 26, 1775, and the latter of whom died October 26, 1826; Anna, born March 24, 1778, and died April 20, 1820; Rebecca, born April 19, 1780; Mary, born July 22, 1782, and died April 21, 1827; Margaret, born April 15, 1785, and died September 29, 1785; Catherine, born September 22, 1786; Charles B., born May 2, 1789; and Jane, born January 11, 1792, and died September 20, 1801.

Charles B. Thomas, the father of our subject, was a native of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and for a companion and helpmeet on life's journey chose Miss Mary Ingraham, who was born March 6, 1791. Their wedding was celebrated November 13, 1813, and they became the parents of six children: Jane Ann, born October 22, 1814, died January 1, 1891; John, born April 5, 1817, died September 19, 1833; Walter B., next in order of birth; Phebe D., born August 1, 1821, married Smith Doughty; Daniel L., born October 23, 1823, died March 29, 1892; and Sarah Maria, born October 28, 1826, died June 14, 1851. The father was educated in the common schools of Unionvale town, and there engaged in farming. By birthright he belonged to the Society of Friends, and was a highly respected and honored citizen of the community where he made his home. He departed this life February 5, 1861, and the mother of our subject had long preceded him to the other world, dying July 15, 1833.

Walter B. Thomas was born in Unionvale town, March 6, 1819, and received such an education as the district schools of the neighborhood afforded. At the age of seventeen years he left the parental roof and began working in a stone quarry at Verbank, Dutchess county, receiving the munificent salary of six cents per day and board, while he was compelled to sleep in a wagon house. The following spring he went to Poughkeepsie, where he was employed by Henry K. Free upon the "Exchange Hotel", which was then being built, and with that gentleman learned the carpenter's trade, which he subsequently followed at Verbank for two years. After remaining a year and a half at Salt Point Dutchess county, he removed to Bangor where he worked at his trade for two years and in 1844 came to Amenia, there engaging in wagon-making in partnership with his brother Daniel. He followed that business until his removal to his present place, and, in connection with its operation, still carried on wagon making for a time. He enjoyed a liberal patronage in that line, and in his agricultural pursuits has also met with a well-deserved success. In early life he supported the Whig party, but since its dissolution has been a steadfast Republican, and is one of the highly esteemed and valued citizens of Amenia town.

In the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, January 21, 1843, Mr. Thomas was united in marriage with Jane Ann McFarlin, daughter of Abram McFarlin, and they had four children: Ann Eliza, born August 2, 1845, married Morgan C. White, and they have one son, Herkimer; Charles B., born March 20, 1847, died August 5, 1851; John D., born June 11, 1850, married Carrie Tabor, by whom he has three children, Walter J., Dudley and Chester; and Henry J., born September 1854, wedded Mary Fields. The wife a mother passed away October 20, 1872, and Amenia, January 18, 1882, Mr. Thomas was again married, his second wife being Jane Wheeler, daughter of Gilbert Noxon, of L. grange, Dutchess county.

CHARLES TOWNSEND, a prominent young agriculturist of the town of Pawling Dutchess county, is one of the most progressive and successful men of that locality. His ability in his chosen calling is not to be wondered at, in view of the fact that many previous generations have followed it with marked success. The old home of the family is in the town of Kent, Putnam county, where a large tract of land, on what has long been known as Townsend Ridge, was acquired by an early ancestor, and has ever since been in the possession of his descendants.

Samuel Townsend, our subject's grandfather, resided there, and his son Warren, our subject's grandfather, who was born in 1800, was one of the most influential men of the locality, holding the office of justice of the peace for many years. He married Betsey

Caldwell, and had seven children: John, our subject's father; Edgar, who lives at Patterson, Putnam county; Mariette, the wife of George Hughson; Charlotte, who married Coleman Hughson; Thomas and Keeler, both deceased; and Eli, who resides at Carmel, Putnam county.

John Townsend was born in 1824, at Townsend Ridge, and inherited a farm of 100 acres, where he lived until 1867, when he moved to Dutchess county, and bought from William Pearce 230 acres of land about half a mile north of the village of Pawling. He made of this one of the best farms of the town, displaying marked ability as a manager, and he made his home there until 1883, when he sold the property to John B. Dutcher. In 1888 he moved to Bound Brook, N. J., and purchased an estate, where he is now successfully engaged in general farming. He is a man of much public spirit, a member of the Baptist Church, and a Republican in politics, being one of the chief advisers of the party in his locality. He is not a seeker after official honors, but has been town auditor and assessor for a number of terms. His first wife, our subject's mother, was Anna Maria Ludington (daughter of Frederic Ludington), by whom he had four children: Fred, a resident of Danbury, Conn.; Harriet, the wife of DeWitt Burr; Charles, our subject; and Warren, who died in infancy. By his second wife, Sarah E. Dykeman, he has had two children: Fannie, the wife of James E. Baldwin; and George L., who is at home.

Charles Townsend was born at the old homestead November 20, 1857, and, after attending the public schools of his native place for some time, spent three years at Wilbraham academy, and one winter at the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie. Of these advantages he has made good use, and his later reading has kept him well posted upon all topics of general interest. His first venture into the world of business was as a clerk in the dry-goods house of Lord & Taylor, on Grand street, New York, and after one year in that capacity he was promoted to the office of cashier. He went nearly three years with this firm, and then engaged in the milk business, but in 1880 he left the city to follow the free and independent life of a farmer, purchasing of Albert Corbin the property near Pawling, Dutchess county, known as the Stockholm farm. It contains 140 acres, and, under Mr. Townsend's skillful management, is one of the best farms in the town.

He was married in November, 1880, to Mary E. Sherwood, daughter of Stephen P. Sherwood, and a descendant of the Stark family, famous for patriotism and valor in Revolutionary times. Three children were born to them: Carrie L.; Anna B., deceased; and Edith A. Mr. Townsend and his family attend the Baptist Church, and he is prominent in local affairs, being pronounced in his views and courageous in expression, traits which characterized his ancestors before him. His well-proved ability and public spirit have gained him the confidence of his neighbors, and he has been elected assessor on the Republican ticket for the last seven years. He is now justice of the peace and president of the village board of health.

MERMAN PULVER, one of the active, prominent and most enterprising citizens of the town of Pine Plains, is there engaged in general farming and carpentering. He was born in Columbia county, N. Y., June 4, 1833, and is of Holland descent. The place which he now occupies has been in the family for many years, and Pulvers Corners was also named in honor of its members.

William W. Pulver, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Pulvers Corners, Dutchess county, August 18, 1773, and lived for many years upon the farm now occupied by Mrs. Carskaden, in the town of Ancram, Columbia county, but his last days were passed at Pulvers Corners, where he departed this life March 22, 1861. As an agriculturist he was very successful, and though he began with nothing, at his death was worth about $100,000. By his marriage with Christiana Millious, who was born May 18, 1780, he had eleven children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: John, 1801; William, 1804; Henry, 1806; Catherine, 1808; Polly, 1810; Jacob, 1812; Levi, 1814; Peter, 1816; Anthony, 1818; Esther, 1821; and Harman W., 1824. These children lived in the vicinity of Pulvers Corners. Their mother died May 28, 1872, aged ninety-two years.

John Pulver, the father of our subject, was born in Columbia county, N. Y., November 10, 1801, and although his school privileges were limited he became a well-informed man as he was ever a great reader. By occupation he was a farmer, and followed that pursuit near Ancram, N. Y., for some time, and then for seven years engaged in the cultivation of a farm three-quarters of a mile from Ancram Lead Mines. He next removed to what is known as the Brookside farm, which is one of the oldest places in the locality, there having been at one time an English church, a grist-mill, tannery and fulling-mill upon the land, and also at three different times blacksmith shops had been located there. It was in 1847 that he purchased that farm, which then consisted of $357\frac{1}{2}$ acres; he added to it until it now comprises 368 acres of the best farming land to be found in the locality. He was an able man, of good business ability and sound judgment, careful and cautious in his dealings, very temperate in his habits, and was held in the highest regard by his fellow-citizens. Though not particularly active in politics, he was a staunch supporter of the Republican party, and for over fifty years he was a faithful member of the Baptist Church. He was twice married, his first union, March 31, 1831, being with Emma Curtis, who was born in Columbia county, August 1, 1807, and died April 11, 1837. To them were born two children: Herman, of this review; and Emma, who was born November 25, 1836. On November 5, 1840, Mr. Pulver wedded Caroline Thompson, who was born October 27, 1816. After a long and useful life he was called to his final rest January 20, 1891, at the advanced age of ninety years.

After pursuing his studies for a time in the district schools, Herman Pulver was for a few months a student at Collinsville, Conn., and completed his education at Saugerties, just across the river in Ulster county, where he remained for five months. Since laying aside his text books he has devoted his time and attention to the cultivation of the old homestead, in which he has been quite successful, and has worked at the carpenter's trade. Being of a mechanical turn of mind, he is able to do almost any kind of labor along that line.

On November 19, 1868, Mr. Pulver was united in marriage with Miss Carrie E. Thompson, who was born in Birmingham, Conn., July 21, 1848, and they have become the parents of four children: John Duncan, who was born October 15, 1869, and is now a carpenter by trade; and Elbertine M., born December 1, 1871; Emma B., born July 23, 1877; and Charles Herbert, born March 4, 1881, all at home.

In the exercise of his elective franchise, Mr. Pulver generally supports the men and measures of the Republican party, but has never taken an active part in political affairs. He is public-spirited and enterprising, aiding in everything for the welfare and advancement of his town and county, and his honor and integrity are unimpeachable. A true and sincere Christian, he is a faithful member of the Baptist Church.

EDMOND BUTLER, a farmer and breeder of blooded stock, is a native of Ireland, born in County Waterford, August 15, 1832, son of Edmond and Ellen (Stack) Butler, both also natives of the Emerald Isle.

Edmond Butler, Sr., the father of our subject, was the youngest in the family of seven children born to John and Mary (Whalen) Butler, the others being: Mary, who married a Mr. Welch, a farmer in Ireland; Abigail, who married John Ormond, a farmer in Ohio; Hanorah, who became the wife of Peter M. Graft, a school teacher, and, later, foreman on a farm; Kate, who died unmarried; Bridget, who married John O'Neal, a farmer in Ireland; and Margaret, who became the wife of Edmund Langley, of Ireland. Edmond Butler, Sr. followed the occupation of a farmer. By his marriage with Ellen, daughter of John and Margaret (Foley) Stack, he became the father of seven children, of whom the following record is given: Margaret married John Marone, formerly a farmer in Unionvale, now deceased; Mary became the wife of Dennis Flynn, resident of St. Joseph, Mo.; Bridget married Nathan Conklin, a farmer; Ellen married Valentine Rickes, a blacksmith in Millbrook; John is a farmer in Ireland; Thomas farms the town of Washington; and Edmond is our subject. The father of this family died in Ireland in 1844, and the mother survived here until 1863. They were faithful and consistent members of the Roman Catholic Church.

John Stack, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a noted horseman. In his family were children, as follows: Thomas, Morris, John (who was one of the finest riders in Ireland), Richard, William, Bridget, Margaret, Ellen, Catherine, and Mary.

Edmond Butler, the subject proper of this sketch, spent his early days in Ireland, and Edmond Butler.

At the age of eighteen (in 1850) he took passage on the "Martha J. Ward," for the New World. On his arrival he went to live with the family of Nicholas Haight, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, remaining with them until Mr. Haight's death, January 15, 1856, and shortly afterward the son, James Haight, made our subject promise to remain with the widowed mother and her two daughters, Sallie and Louisa, until their death, and also asked them to remember Mr. Butler for his kindness to the family. James Haight died October 12, 1859; the widowed mother on December 25, 1864; Louisa on March 5, 1875, and Sallie on April 18, 1891. The sisters, Sallie and Louisa, regarded Mr. Butler for his kindness and long faithfulness to the family by leaving him the homestead and considerable other property. He had only one settlement with the family, and that was in 1865, shortly before his marriage; and when that event took place he brought his bride to live on the Haight family homestead, where they reared their large family, and which they now own and occupy.

On October 8, 1865, Mr. Butler was married to Miss Ellen Cullinan, also a native of county Waterford, Ireland, and a daughter of Michael Cullinan, a farmer in that country. Mr. and Mrs. Butler began their married life on the present homestead, where the following children were born: James H., July 18, 1866; John M., September 6, 1868; Thomas E., April 10, 1871; Sally H., June 24, 1873, who graduated with honors from the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, in 1891, and is now bookkeeper for James Converse; Edmond, Jr., January 29, 1876; William C., August 22, 1878; Louisa H., February 19, 1883; all of whom are single.

At one time Mr. Butler was the owner of about 900 acres of land, and now owns about 100 acres, but farms about 1,000 acres. He has been a general farmer, and has given much attention to the breeding of blooded stock. He has sold a great many fine horses to prominent people, and at present has about thirty head on his place. He is very fond of race stock, especially horses, of which he is an extensive breeder, and owns "Benjamin Harrison," one of the promising stallions of the county. Besides his own work he manages the farm of James Converse, a wealthy farmer, who has always about twenty-five head of horses on the place. In politics Mr. Butler is a Republican, and he and his family are Catholics. Although coming to America without money, he has, by perseverance and hard work, attained the position of one of the wealthy citizens of his township. He is a progressive and representative citizen, and takes an active interest in all public matters.

EVRITT CONOVER occupies a place in the esteem of his fellow townsmen which is a tribute to that genuine worth and true nobleness of character which are universally recognized and honored. Enterprise and industry are numbered among his marked characteristics, and he has been an important factor in advancing the general welfare and securing the material development of the town of Pleasant Valley.

Mr. Conover was born October 10, 1847, in the town of Pleasant Valley. His father, Peter Conover, was a native of the town of Poughkeepsie, and the grandfather, Jacob Conover, was a progressive farmer of Dutchess county. He married Miss Van Kleeck, and took up his abode on a farm in Poughkeepsie town, where they reared a family of five children, namely: Peter, whose sketch follows; Abram, an agriculturist of the town of Hyde Park; Adrian, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley; Barbara A., wife of Merritt A. Marshall, a farmer who is now living in Pleasant Valley; and Catherine, wife of Zachariah Van-Wagner, who devotes his energies to agricultural pursuits in this neighborhood. To the same calling the grandfather of our subject devoted his life, and spent his last days in Pleasant Valley. During the Revolutionary war he was a captain in the home guards.

Peter Conover spent his youth in the usual manner of farmer lads, and after entering upon his business career he chose, as a companion and helpmeet on life's journey, Miss Sarah Van-Wagner, who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, and, like her husband, was of Holland lineage. They established their home upon the farm where our subject now resides, and their union was blessed with five children: Evritt; Martha, wife of Frank Lamoree, who operates a tract of land in the valley; Abram, a farmer of the town of Clinton; Emily, wife of Edwin Husted, a resident of the village of Pleasant Valley; and Nellie, wife of Frank Knapp, a farmer of Clinton town. The parents have both passed away, leaving many warm friends to mourn their loss. They were consistent members of the Presbyterian Church, and Mr. Conover was a Republican in his political belief.

Evratt Conover, whose name introduces this review, early became familiar with all the duties of farm life, for at an early age he performed his quota of the work on the old homestead. He obtained his education in the district schools, and then entered upon the more responsible duties that come to one on laying aside text-books and commencing a business career. He is to-day the owner of 100 acres of cultivable land, conveniently situated about seven miles from Poughkeepsie, and carries on general farming. He has a beautiful home and substantial outbuildings, which are surrounded by fields of waving grain, and are supplemented by all the conveniences and accessories of a model farm of the nineteenth century.

In February, 1878, Evratt Conover was married to Miss Allie Walters, who was born in Cairo, town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess Co., N. Y., a daughter of Edward Walters, a farmer, merchant and miller. They now have four children: Ethelyn, Rose, Robert and Harold. The parents attend the Presbyterian Church, and hold an enviable position in social circles where true worth and intelligence are received as the passports into good society. Mr. Conover is a Republican in political belief, and is deeply and actively interested in those affairs which pertain to the public welfare.

GEORGE S. HALSTED. The subject of this personal narration is one of the successful and progressive farmers resident within the borders of the town of Hyde Park, and may be termed one of the representative men of his section, where he is engaged in general farming. He has made his special field of industry a success, and is highly esteemed and respected by those who know him best. He was born at Crum Elbow, in Hyde Park town, September 14, 1853, and belongs to a family that for several generations has been identified with the history of Dutchess county.

David Halsted, his great-grandfather, was one of the earliest settlers of the town of Beekman, where from the primeval forest he developed a farm and reared his family. He belonged to the Society of Friends. He married, and became the father of seven children:

Stephen, Samuel, David, Jerusha, Prudence Phebe and Eunice.

David H. Halsted, the grandfather, was born in the town of Beekman, where he spent his boyhood days, and there owned two farms. He married Miss Letitia Haviland, daughter of Thomas Haviland, of Pawling, Dutchess county, and the following children were born to them: Thomas, Amy, Moses and Elizabeth, all deceased; David S., father of our subject; and Letitia, wife of Isaac Hewlett. In 1832, the father of this family removed to the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, where he died two years later. In religious belief he was a Friend.

The birth of David Sands Halsted, the father of our subject, occurred in the town of Beekman, March 28, 1819, and he obtained his education in the schools of the neighborhood. He accompanied the family to Clinton town, and remained upon the home farm a few years after his father's death. In his twentieth year he purchased a farm in the town of Hyde Park, on which he located after his marriage September 9, 1846, with Caroline W. Hewlett, who was born in that town, November 12, 1830, and died May 15, 1866, in the town of Lagrange, same county. Two children grace their union: William D., born August 5, 1848, and George S., of this review. In the town of Pleasant Valley he was again married, June 10, 1868, his second union being with Margaret J. Allen Marshall, who was there born March 6, 1832. He engaged in farming in Hyde Park from 1839 until 1859, during which time he was elected inspector of elections for the town on the Democratic ticket. Since the latter year, however, he has made his home in the town of Lagrange, where he has filled the same position. On starting out in life he received about $1,500, and being very successful in his business undertakings has been able to assist his children. He has always attended the Friends Church at Poughkeepsie, and is a gentleman worthy the commendation of all.

For four years George S. Halsted attended the Dutchess County Academy, under Steward Pelham, after which he pursued his studies for two years in the Cary Academy, but completed his education with Mr. Pelham, finishing the entire course in 1872. On leaving school he took up farming, and for many years worked for his father, but in 1880 purchased the Sidney Livingston farm, removing upon that place in the spring of that year. It comprises sixty-five acres of rich and arable land, which he has converted into one of the best farms of the town. In 1880 Mr. Halsted was married to Miss Esther E. Dickinson, of Westchester county, N. Y., daughter of Henry Dickinson, and they have become the parents of three children: Ruth, Caroline W., and George D.

Politically, Mr. Halsted affiliates with the Democratic party, and he is ranked as a man of ability and enterprise, on account of which he holds a good position among the people of the community. In 1884 he was elected justice of the peace to fill a vacancy, and in 1888 and 1892 re-elected to the same office. He has also been school trustee and assessor of his district, and has done much toward getting the postal facilities improved in his section. He is prominently identified with the Dutchess County Farmers Club, and is a charter member and one of the directors of the Farmers Town Co-operative Insurance Company of Hyde Park, while religiously he belongs to the Hicksite Branch of the Society of Friends, attending meeting at Crum Elbow.

JAMES BLAIR. Among the most successful horticulturists, or gardeners, in this country, there are few that are the peers of the representatives of the Scotch-Irish race. In the village of Grange, County Tyrone, Ireland, our subject's birth occurred January 29, 1853, and he is a son of David Blair, who was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1804. His grandfather, Robert Blair, was also a native and farmer of the latter country, belonged to one of its oldest families.

For twenty-five years the father followed teaching at Cloughhag, County Derry, Ireland, and continued to follow that profession until seventy-five years of age. He was a man of more than ordinary ability, highly educated, and proved a competent instructor. He was particularly fine mathematician, and was one of the representative men of the locality in which he lived. He married Agnes, daughter of James Foster, who was born in Ireland, but was of Scotch descent. The parental household included five children: Robert, a gardener, who died in 1889; James, of this sketch; David, who is connected with a boot and shoe business in Ireland; Margaret, who died at the age of six years; and William, who died in 1889. In 1889 the father was called to his final rest, but the mother still makes her home in Ireland.

Under his father's instruction, Mr. Blair, of this review, received a good education, and on leaving school at the age of seventeen had charge of his father's farm for a year. During the following four years he served an apprenticeship at gardening at Killymoon Castle, and then began as a journeyman with Dickson & Co., of Edinburgh, Scotland, with whom he remained a year. Sixteen months were then passed on the estate of Lord Lamington, in Lanarkshire, Scotland, and the following six months he was again with Dickson & Co. Going to Calendar Park, near Falkirk, in Stirlingshire, owned by William Forbes, he remained there a year, after which for a year and a half he worked for Earl Grey, at Howick Hall, in Northumberland. For six years and a half he was then foreman for Lord Belper, of Kingston Hall, in Nottinghamshire, and on leaving his service returned to Ireland for a short time, later gaining his experience in fruit culture in Selkirk, Scotland, at The Tweed Vineyard, where he remained two years.

In the year 1887, Mr. Blair determined to try his fortune in America, and coming to Pawtucket, R. I., he there served as head gardener for Mr. Sales for about a year; but, owing to the death of two brothers and his father, returned to Ireland. In 1889, however, he came again to the New World, this time locating at Yonkers, N. Y., where he was head gardener for Mrs. Lillenthal, at Belvoir Park. It was in 1890 that he came to Staatsburg, and he has since been head gardener for Ogden Mills, giving the best of satisfaction.

In 1889 Mr. Blair was married to Miss Eliza Lloyd, of Shropshire, England, and they have four children: David Edward, Agnes Margaret, William James and Hilda Eliza. Our subject belongs to St. Margaret's Episcopal Church. He has the respect and confidence of all who know him, and January 2, 1895, was elected first president of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society.

WILLIAM HERRICK, an old-time agriculturist of large experience, is now numbered among the most enterprising and prosperous farmers of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, by whose people he is held in that reverence and respect tacitly accorded those whose lives have been distinguished by integrity and usefulness.

The Herricks under consideration come of a prominent family of England, and the descent of our subject is traced as follows: Sir William Herrick, of Beau Manor Park, Leicestershire, England; Henry; Ephraim; Samuel; Stephen; Elijah, who was a captain in the Revolutionary war; Ephraim (our subject's grandfather), who was born at Amenia, Dutchess county, married Anna Dixon, and located in the town of Milan, where he established a Church; Ephraim, our subject's father; and William (our subject). The first of the family to come from England to America located at Beverly Farms, Massachusetts.

Ephraim Herrick, father of William, was born and reared on his father's farm in the town of Milan, Dutchess county. He married Phœbe Albertson, a native of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, where his father, John Albertson, a Hollander by descent, was a farmer. After their marriage Ephraim Herrick and his young wife located upon a farm in the town of Milan, where children as follows were born to them: John is a farmer in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county; William is the next in order of birth; Walter was a practicing physician, and died January 13, 1895; Gurdon, who was an agriculturist in the town of Milan, died April 28, 1894; James is a speculator of that town; Elizabeth is the widow of Isaac Sherwood, at one time a grocer of the village of Rhinebeck; Susan died in infancy; and Caroline married Henry Butts, a farmer of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county. The mother of these died, and four years later, about 1835, Ephraim Herrick married Susan Ann Andrews, by which union there were four children: Anna, George, Edward and Ephraim. The father continued to follow the occupation of farming until his death, in 1867. He was a faithful member of Christ's Church; politically he affiliated with the Democratic party, and served as supervisor of his town, and county superintendent of the poor.

William Herrick, the subject proper of this sketch, was born September 28, 1818, in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, and was reared to manhood on the home farm, where at an early age he became familiar with agricultural pursuits. In 1841 he married Elizabeth Brown, who was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, a daughter of Charles Brown, a native of Pawling, same county, and a farmer and wagon maker by occupation. They began their domestic life upon his father's place, whence at the end of five years they removed to the present farm of our subject, where he has now resided for over half a century. Four children blessed that union; (1) Charles B., in his day a prominent lawyer of Poughkeepsie, married Ada Van-Benschoten, and died July 29, 1896; they had no children. (2) Phœbe A. married Albert P. Smith, a miller of Salt Point, Dutchess county (now deceased), and they had one son, Eugene Herrick Smith, who is in business in New York. (3) Sarah is a school teacher in Pennsylvania. (4) Marshall, one of the leading furniture dealers of Poughkeepsie, married Julia Allen, and they have one son, Harold Allen Herrick. The mother of this family died in 1860, and October 26, 1865, William Herrick married Mary Harris, a daughter of Col. Israel Harris, of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, to which union has been born a daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

Mr. Herrick has an excellent farm of 190 acres, which he has placed under a high state of cultivation, and for many years has followed general farming, including the raising of blooded cattle, in which he makes a specialty of Jersey cows, having at present a fine herd of some thirty head of this breed. He also sells cream to the Co-operative Creamery. By industry and good management he has made his farm one of the most highly cultivated and improved in the locality.

Mr. Herrick is not a member of an Church, but has been interested in the one at Salt Point, N. Y. He is prominently identified with the Democratic party, has served as justice of the peace, and as assessor and supervisor of his town. Surrounded by loving kindred and friends, he is now nearing the last milestone that marks the end of life's journey. His record has been an honorable one, his years have been fruitful with deeds of usefulness and kindness, with malice toward none and friendliness toward all who have come under his influence, and he has gained the respect and honor of the whole community.

BENJAMIN K. WHITE. Among the agriculturists of Dutchess county who have attained success through their own perseverance, enterprise and good management, is the gentleman whose name is here given. He is now engaged in general farming in the town of Stanford, and is complete master of the calling which he is following. His sterling integrity and honorable, upright manhood fully entitle him to the position which he holds in the estimation of the people of the community.

Mr. White is a native of Dutchess county, born October 3, 1859, near the village of Beekman, in the town of Beekman, and is a son of Leonard and Mary (Wright) White, who died when our subject was but an infant, the mother in 1859, and the father the year following. They were earnest members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the father followed the occupation of farming in the town of Beekman up to the time of his death. Our subject was taken by Dr. D. A. Knapp, of North Clove, in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, with whom he continued to live until reaching his majority, and attended school at that place. At the age of twenty-one he went to Fremont county, Iowa, and later took up 160 acres of land at Beatrice, Neb. On disposing of this he went to St. Louis, where he was employed in the stockyards with his brother Thomas for two years and a half, when, being taken ill, he returned to Dutchess county, and operated a farm in the town of Unionvale for a year. He then purchased his present place, to the cultivation and improvement of which he devotes his time and attention, and during the twelve years of his residence there has made it one of the most highly productive farms in the locality.

On January 13, 1880, Mr. White was married to Miss Frances M. Traver, daughter of Milo and Mary Traver, and a son—Frederick—was born to them August 2, 1890. They are devoted to the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which they are members. In his political views Mr. White coincides with the principles of the Republican party, but takes no active part in politics, preferring to give his time to his business affairs, and has never accepted office.

ALBERT J. BUDD is a reliable and intelligent farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, where his birth occurred August 16, 1830. His father, James Budd, was one of the twelve children of John Budd, and our subject is the youngest in a family of twelve. One of his brothers, Joseph, is the father of James H. Budd, the Governor of California, while another brother, Joel Budd, is a prominent resident of Hyde Park. The primary education of our subject was obtained in the district schools, and he later pursued his studies for some time in Amenia Seminary, also at Rhinebeck and Amsterdam, N. Y. After leaving the school room he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits.

On October 16, 1853, Mr. Budd was united in marriage with Miss Kate S. Stoutenburgh, who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, in 1837, and is the eldest child of Tobias and Maria (Albertson) Stoutenburgh, the former born in the town of Hyde Park January 29, 1806, and the latter in the town of Pleasant Valley, July 18, 1809. Her sister, Mary, is the wife of Dr. Merritt Dutcher, a practicing physician of Owego, N. Y. Religiously, her father was a Baptist, and his political support was formerly given to the Whig party, he later becoming a staunch Republican. Her grandfather, Isaac Stoutenburgh, was the son of William Stoutenburgh, one of the Nine Partners who came to this country and took up a large tract of land, thus becoming one of the earliest settlers of this locality.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Budd began their domestic life upon their present farm, and their household was brightened by the presence of eight children: James T., a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Frederick, who was a lawyer and farmer, and died in Pleasant Valley; Caroline, wife of Oliver Wood, also a farmer of the same township; Lillian, deceased wife of Byron Conklin, an agriculturist; Isaac A., a farmer of Clinton town, Dutchess county; Mary A., wife of David S. Van De Water, a farmer of Poughkeepsie town; Walter, an agriculturist of Pleasant Valley town; and Willard, who died in infancy. Mr. Budd has been successful in his life work, and owns a fine farm of 108 acres, where, in connection with general farming, he makes a specialty of the manufacture of butter. He is progressive in his methods, and on his place are seen all the conveniences and accessories of a model farm of the nineteenth century. His political views are in accordance with those of the Republican party, and he has served as justice of the peace. To the Baptist Church he and his wife contribute liberally, and they enjoy the esteem of the entire neighborhood.

JOHN A. MONFORT. The fine farm owned by this gentleman, in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, is a standing monument to his industry, perseverance and good management. He comes under the category of self-made men, having been thrown upon his own resources early in life, and has succeeded only by the exercise of his steady, plodding labors, both mental and physical. At the present time he is one of the prominent representatives of the agricultural interests of Dutchess county.

Our subject was born April 6, 1818, and his boyhood days were passed in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, where he attended school. He remained upon the home farm until his father's death, when, at the age of seventeen years, he was obliged to start out in life for himself. Removing to the town of Lagrange, he there worked for S. L. Lockwood until he was twenty-two. On October 6, 1841, he was married to Miss Julia Ann Phillips, who was born August 6, 1824, daughter of Thomas H. Phillips, of the town of Lagrange, and one child graced their union, Mary Louisa, born February 11, 1845, who, on October 10, 1866, was united in marriage with Frederick I. Knapp, by whom she had two children: John M. and Effie Beatrice; but she was called from this life June 9, 1876.

After his marriage Mr. Monfort operated a farm in the town of Lagrange for a year, after which he followed the same pursuit in Fishkill town, Dutchess county, for six years. For nine years he was then engaged in farming in the southern part of Lagrange town, and on the expiration of that time came to this present farm, which he cultivated for ten years, but the following five years were passed in Poughkeepsie, after which he returned to his farm in Lagrange town, where he has resided since 1874. On October 6, 1891, Mr. Monfort and his faithful wife celebrated their golden wedding, having traveled life's journey together for fifty years, sharing with each other its joys and sorrows, its adversity and prosperity. They are now well advanced in years, and have reason to feel that their lives have not been spent in vain. They have endeavored to exercise the kindly spirit of charity and benevolence, to do good as they have opportunity, and proved the friends and sympathizers of those less fortunate.

Henry A. Monfort, father of our subject, was born in the town of Fishkill, June 25, 1778. On December 2, 1801, he married Miss Maria Phillips, who was born November 27, 1780, and they became the parents of six children: Susan, Eliza, Albert H., Alet Maria, Jane and John Angevine.

Thomas H. Phillips, the father of Mr. Monfort, was a native of Dutchess county born in the town of Fishkill, February 4, 1799. He married Miss Rachel Brower, who was born January 7, 1794, and they became the parents of five children: Mary Ellen, who died March 25, 1836; Cornelius; Julia Ann; a Sylvanius and Susan E., who live on Smith street, Poughkeepsie.

MORACE JENKS, a prominent agriculturist of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, is of English descent on both sides the family. His paternal grandfather, William Jenks, was born October 5, 1775, and was for some time an iron manufacturer on Stat Island. He came to Dutchess county in 1799, and located at Leedsville, where he became interested in the flax business, supplying the material in large quantities to the North Factory. He was married November 3, 1795, to Sarah Mygatt. They died within a year of each other, Mr. Jenks, May 18, 1824, and his wife, February 14, 1825. They had nine children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: George, June 24, 1798; Myrtle, September 29, 1800; Miles, July 30, 1802; William, February 29, 1804; Luther Pardee, May 30, 1806; Sally Ann, November 18, 1808; Thomas M., November 30, 1811; Edward, March 29, 1814; and Eli Starr, April 22, 1816.

Miles Jenks, our subject's father, was a man of great energy, and, although he died in early life, he had given evidence of unusual ability. He engaged in the hotel business and in blacksmithing at Leedsville, and during the summer he also bought and butchered stock. In 1829 he went to Michigan, where he remained for a year, purchasing, while there, 1,000 acres of land in Oakland county. He died September 18, 1836. His wife, formerly Betsey Conkling, to whom he was married January 1, 1803, survived him until September 30, 1853. Of their four children our subject is the only one now living. William H., born October 26, 1804, was a painter in the town of Northeast, where he died August 22, 1893; Selah N., born September 7, 1829, died January 7, 1893; he was a merchant in the village of Millerton, and also a musician and bandmaster, teaching music throughout the neighboring towns and villages. Mary Jane, born August 14, 1833, died August 19, 1884; she married Myron Fletcher, who survived her nine years, dying November 2, 1893.

The subject of our sketch, the second son, was born December 30, 1826, attended the public schools of Amenia during early boyhood, but did not receive much schooling after the age of nine years. After his father's death he lived for one year with his uncle, Horace Conklin, on the farm once owned by the late Ezra Clark, and now owned by Leonard Barton. The next two years he spent with Hiram Wheeler, and in 1838 he accompanied his uncle, Horace Conklin, to Binghamton, Broome Co., N. Y., where he remained four years. In 1842 he came back to his native county, in charge of a drove of cattle, belonging to his uncle, and began to work for Lawrence and Milton Wheeler on their farm in the town of Northeast, and later he apprenticed himself to Daniel Platt, a well-known mason, for two years, at three shillings per day.

On completing his term he formed a partnership with Mr. Platt, which lasted five years, their work extending to different portions of the towns of Amenia and Northeast. For about seven years after the dissolution of their partnership Mr. Jenks carried on his trade alone, and in the spring of 1856 he went to Davenport, Iowa, and then to Henry Co., Ill., where he engaged in buying and herding cattle for a short time. Later he went to Pontiac, Mich., and worked at his trade, but in 1857 he returned to Dutchess county. Until 1864 he was a successful drover, buying his own cattle in Vermont and central New York, and selling to the farmers in Northeast and vicinity. He then entered the employ of C.

Maltby, as wood and coal agent, supplying the Phoenix and Millerton iron furnaces. This responsible position he held for twenty-one years; but since his retirement he has been engaged in farming in a small way. He is a man of sound business judgment, noted for his shrewdness and caution, and his advice is valued in financial circles. For the past three years he has been a director of the Millerton National Bank.

On March 3, 1880, Mr. Jenks was married to Miss Jennie Lord, a descendant of one of the old families of the town of Northeast, and a daughter of Newman and Malinda (Hiserodt) Lord, prominent residents of Spencers Corners. They have one son, Miles Lord Jenks, born May 14, 1883. Newman Lord was born November 12, 1808, in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, and his wife, Malinda (Hiserodt), on January 28, 1828. They were married September 17, 1855, and had four daughters, Mrs. Jenks being the only one who grew to womanhood. She was born August 7, 1856. The father passed from earth June 19, 1894; the mother is yet living. Mr. Lord's father, Ethan Lord, by occupations a painter and a farmer, as was also the son, was born July 14, 1776, in Connecticut, and died July 4, 1866. He married Ruth Dakin, and they had four children: Jenette, Newman, Cornelia and Olivia, all now deceased. Ruth Dakin, wife of Ethan Lord, was born September 8, 1785, and died January 10, 1852; she was a daughter of Simon Dakin, and a granddaughter of Elder Simon Dakin, the first stationed Baptist minister of this place. He was born January 27, 1721, and died September 19, 1803. Simon Dakin, Jr., was born September 16, 1757, and died July 12, 1830.

In public affairs our subject has always shown a generous interest on the side of progress. Politically he is a Republican, but has not taken an active share in the work of the party. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, and has been a member of the Order of American Mechanics.

JACOB S. TOWNSEND, a well-known resident of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, is one of the successful agriculturists of that locality.

Mr. Townsend's ancestors were early settlers in Arthursburg, Dutchess county, and his grandfather, Tredwell Townsend, was born there January 9, 1780, and became a prominent farmer. His educational opportunities were limited to an attendance at the local schools, but he was a man of intelligence, taking much interest in public questions. In politics he was a Democrat, and represented his town on the board of supervisors several terms. He married Miss Anna Dorland, who was born August 31, 1782. They had nine children, whose names, with dates of birth, are as follows: Zachariah F., April 1, 1802; John, September 12, 1803; Edgar, December 14, 1805; Enoch, October 17, 1807; Samuel, August 18, 1811; Gilbert, May 6, 1815; Gilbert D., March 15, 1817; Mary, July 27, 1819; and Catharine, July 13, 1821.

Edgar Townsend, father of our subject, was born in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, and was educated there at the common schools. He taught school for some time in early manhood, and later he engaged in farming. He married Miss Eurana Jolly, and their children were as follows: Jacob S., born November 10, 1834; Mary E., May 22, 1836; and Catharine A., March 11, 1838.

Jacob S. Townsend, our subject, was born and educated in Seneca county, N. Y. In early life he learned the blacksmith trade, at which he worked a few years, engaging later in agriculture. He is a Democrat in politics, but never held any important town office. He married Miss Cordelia Washburn, daughter of Daniel Washburn, a prosperous farmer of Unionvale, and his wife, Sarah Morey. Mr. Townsend's home has been brightened by three daughters: (1) Mary, born December 21, 1860, is at home. (2) Sarah was born February 5, 1863, in Lagrangeville, Dutchess county, and was educated there. She married George W. Gibney, a tinsmith of Pawling, and they have three children—Willie T., born July 8, 1888; Ethel M., born March 8, 1894; and Florence A., born February 18, 1896. (3) Carrie Townsend was born January 2, 1865, in Lagrangeville, Dutchess county, and was educated in the local schools. She married Walter Ellsworth, an employe of the N. Y. C. R. R. They have had one child, Arthur, who was born October 3, 1891, and died February 21, 1893.

GEORGE R. SHAW. The subject of this sketch, one of the prosperous agriculturists of this section, has lived a long and active life, been more than ordinarily successful in his chosen vocation, and reared in intelligence and comfort a large family. He is a native of Dutchess county, being born January 24, 1822, on the farm at that time belonging to his father, in the southern part of what is now the town of East Fishkill. He was the elder of two sons of Enoch and Catherine (Reed) Shaw. The younger son, the Rev. William W. Shaw, is a clergyman of the Methodist Church, and is the pastor of the Church at Spencertown, Columbia county. Mr. Shaw resided with his father until grown to man's estate. The home farm was of about one hundred acres, and, after the death of the father, was divided between the two sons. Mr. Shaw continued, a time upon the old place, working his portion in connection with other land adjoining, but later, the farm was sold, and he resided in other neighborhoods, working different farms, until during the "seventies," he purchased a farm near Washingtonville, Orange county, containing over two hundred acres. Here the farm resided for a few years, until 1882, when he sold the property, and the present home was purchased. This farm is one of the historic ones of this historic town. It is situated on the old "Post Road" laid out by Lord Loudon in 1753, leading from New York to Albany, and is a half mile north of the gateway of the Highlands, known as Wiccopee Pass. The farm is a portion of a tract of 959 acres purchased by Cornelius Van Wyck, of Hempstead, Long Island, of Catherine Brett in 1733. The farm was in the possession of his descendants for nearly 150 years. The farm was divided shortly after the Revolution, and the portion now owned by Mr. Shaw, comprising 216 acres, of which 160 are under cultivation, belonged to Cornelius C. Van Wyck, grandson of the original settler, who built the present mansion. Tradition says that previous to that time a small house had occupied nearly the same site, a part of that structure forming the kitchen wing of the present edifice. The original Van Wyck house stands a few rods toward the south. This dwelling has been made famous by history and romance. It is the "Whispering House" of Cooper's "Spy." It was for many years during the Revolution the residence of John Jay, the chairman of the Committee of Safety, and was at various times occupied by the officers who commanded that considerable part of the American forces which for several years was stationed in this neighborhood to guard this pass through the mountains. The soldiers' barracks stood behind the site of the house now occupied by the Shaw family, and frequently have been found relics of their occupancy, in the shape of corroded bullets, pieces of shells, bayonets and other implements of war. The enlarged house was partially built with timbers taken from these barracks.

Mr. Shaw has been twice married. His first wife was Amy Maria Rickey, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Horton) Rickey. He died leaving five children. Ward is a farmer in Illinois; Catherine Elizabeth is married and lives in Orange county; Julia, married, lives in the town of Wappinger; Sarah G. and Georgiana reside in New York City. Mr. Shaw remarried, his second wife being Susan Jane Wilcox, daughter of George and Tamar (Stevens) Wilcox, of Putnam county. By this marriage there were eleven children, two of whom died in infancy. William G. is the manager of the Elmira Glass Works; Irving is a farmer in Illinois; Amy is a teacher in the academic department of the Fishkill Union School; two sons, George R., Jr., and John, are engaged in brick manufacturing; Frank, a graduate of the Brooklyn Polytechnic School, is attending Harvard University, while Nellie B. and Luella are teaching in district schools near their home.

Geo. W. Shaw.

There was one other son, Adelbert, born in 1870, who met a sad and tragic death at the age of twenty. He was a youth of rare intellectual promise. After studying the ordinary branches at the common schools, he decided to fit himself for the legal profession. For a time he was a student in the law office of J. Hervey Cook, of Fishkill Landing; later, from 1888 to 1890, he attended the Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, at Lima, N. Y., graduating with the highest honors of his class. In 1890 he entered Harvard University. He was blessed with a quick mind, and was a patient, laborious student. More than that, he was a natural athlete, large and of excellent physique. The leaders of athletics of the college demanded his services. He was put on the football team, and was one of the best men on the eleven. Later he was urged to join the "Varsity Crew", then training at the oars in hopes of defeating Yale. As an oarsman he promised to be the strongest of all. On April 6, 1891, he was practicing in a single boat. He passed under the Western Avenue bridge, when, from some unaccountable reason, his boat capsized, and, though an expert swimmer, and scarcely fifty feet from shore, he sank and drowned almost instantly. The next day his remains were brought home for burial. During the time of the funeral services at his home, memorial services were held in the chapel of Harvard College. All college work was suspended, and the professors and students in large numbers attended the obsequies, which were conducted by the Rev. Phillip Brooks, who offered prayer, while the discourse was delivered by the Rev. Frank G.

Peabody, who spoke of the virtues and religious character of the deceased. To his family his mysterious and untimely death was a shock from which none have even yet fully recovered. To the parents, but to the children more especially, it was the first break in the family chain.

Mr. Shaw has nearly all his life been a prominent and enthusiastic member of the Methodist Church, and for years he has been a licensed local preacher of the denomination. Mrs. Shaw and many of the children are also members of that Church. The subject of this sketch has never taken a great interest in public affairs of a political nature, has never held any public office, but, as an individual, has had the courage of his convictions, and labored for the benefit of his country as he saw the right. For the past few years he has voted and worked with the Prohibitionists. After a long life of agricultural labor, he still takes an interest in his farm work, favors advanced ideas, but devotes his energies along well-tried lines, general farming and dairying, keeping from twenty to thirty cows. He is possessed of much general information, is a good business man, an agreeable acquaintance, and a warm and abiding friend.

SAMUEL HASTINGS, though not a native of this country, has lived in the United States nearly all his life, coming here at the age of twelve years. He was born in Dover, County of Kent, England, on the paternal side of English origin, and on the maternal side of Scotch-Irish descent. His mother belonged to an old Scotch-Irish family of the name of Tomb, who were engaged in the manufacture of Irish linen, near Belfast, Ireland, before the days of machinery. The father, who was an officer in the British army, died while stationed in the West Indies, in 1835.

The education of our subject was commenced in his native land, and on reaching the shores of the New World he completed his literary training. For a time he took up the study of law, then that of medicine, from which he drifted into the study of chemistry and pharmacy, graduating in those sciences at the College of Pharmacy in Philadelphia, Penn., with the class of 1849. For twenty years he conducted a large drug business in the city of New Orleans, and on the termination of the Civil war left the South, but still holds interests in that city, which he occasionally visits on business.

In Dutchess county, N. Y., Mr. Hastings was united in marriage with Miss Eliza J., daughter of the late J. Hastings, and in this county has made his home for over twenty-seven years, during which time he has taken much interest in the affairs of his adopted county and State. Though a Democrat in politics, he has no ambition for political preferment, and has held no public office. His religious affiliation is with the Episcopal Church. The elegant place of Mr. Hastings is known as "Fairview," and comprises 825 acres. He superintends the cultivation of this property, employing much labor, thus furthering the material interests of the surrounding section and the county at large. In his family are six children,—two sons and four daughters. The view from his place is most extended and beautiful, indeed is one of the finest in the county; there a grand panorama is spread out before the vision—the Catskill mountains can be seen, commencing at the site of the old "Mountain House," and extending far southward, the coloring of this delightful scene changing as the seasons come and go, from the rich green of the springtime to the brilliant gold and red of autumn, the whole is like a series of beautiful pictures hung up before the beholder. This charming spot not only gladdens the eye, but is one of the most healthful, well watered with springs, and altogether is one of the most highly favored locations in the county.

RALPH A. BARTHOLOMEW. Among the leading and influential farmers of the town of Pleasant Valley, who thoroughly understand their business, and pursue the vocation of their chosen calling in a methodical and workmanlike manner, is the subject of this biography. In reviewing his genealogical record we find his lineage tracing back to the Colonial history of the nation, and to that period which marked the inception of the grandest republic the world has ever known. Through such sources have we attained the true American type, and along this line must our investigations proceed if we would learn of the steadfast, unyielding elements which constitute the basis upon which has been reared the lofty and magnificent superstructure of an enlightened and favored commonwealth.

Among the early emigrants from England, who located in New England, was the Bartholomew family, whose descendants are now very numerous throughout the Eastern States.

John Bartholomew, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Kensington, Conn., but was reared in Litchfield county, that State, where, after his marriage with Lydia Brooks, he located upon a farm. Three children were born to them: Lynus, who died at the age of two years; Lydia S., who became the wife of P. B. Butler, a wheelwright of Burlington, Hartford Co., Conn.; and John B., the father of our subject. The grandfather followed farming exclusively, and valiantly aided the Colonies in their struggle for independence. His death occurred in 1817, that of his wife in 1854. Early in life they were Presbyterians, but later they joined the Congregational Church.

John B. Bartholomew was born October 13, 1793, in Harwinton, Litchfield Co., Conn., and he married Eunice Harrison, who was born at Branford, New Haven Co., Conn., June 19, 1801, a daughter of Augustus Harrison, also a native of New Haven county, and a farmer by occupation. The Harrisons also came from England. To the old family homestead Mr. Bartholomew took his bride, and their four children were there born. Ralph the eldest, died at the age of twelve years; George, a wholesale and retail jeweler, died June 10, 1893; Harriet became the wife of John W. Lattin, a native of Dutchess county N. Y., and a retired farmer. He was killed by the cars September 23, 1890, and his widow now makes her home in the town of Pleasant Valley. Ralph A. is the youngest of the family. Upon his farm in Litchfield county Conn., the father died February 10, 1859; the mother died May 1, 1896, at the patriarchal age of about ninety-four years. In religious belief they were Congregationalists, and in politics he supported the Democratic party.

Ralph A. Bartholomew was born in the town of Harwinton, Litchfield Co., Conn. April 3, 1837, and grew to manhood upon the old ancestral farm, contributing his quota to carrying on the work of the place. At the age of nineteen he started out as a traveling salesman; but at the end of four years he returned to the old farm, which he sold in 1867, and the following year bought his present place in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. He now has ninety-seven acres of fertile an productive land, pleasantly situated about six miles from the city of Poughkeepsie. It is highly cultivated, and well improved with fine large buildings and good fences, and is one of the most beautiful places in the locality.

In his political views, Mr. Bartholomew strongly adheres to the principles of the Democratic party. He is one of the active and progressive men of the county, taking great interest in all matters calculated to enhance its value, or to benefit his fellowmen, and has the respect and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact.

BENJAMIN VAN WAGNER is one of the enterprising, energetic and industrious agriculturists of the town of Pleasant Valley, and is a worthy representative of an honored old family of his section.

The founder of the family in this country was Nicholas Van Wagner, who came from Holland and located in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, where his descendants now live. His son, Evritt Van Wagner, was born on the farm which our subject now owns, where the birth of his son, Benjamin, so occurred. The latter was the grandfather of our subject, and by his marriage with Elizabeth Dyer had several children, six of whom grew to maturity, namely: David, a machinist and carpenter, of Hyde Park; Underhill, who became a speculator in California; Sylvester, who was a landlord in Pleasant Valley town; James, who was killed in a mine in California; Abraham, the father of our subject; and Hannah, wife of Lewis Haight, a farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county. They are all now deceased except Hannah.

On the old family homestead Abraham Van Wagner was born in August, 1816, and on reaching manhood he married Maria Westervelt, a native of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and a daughter of Cornelius Westervelt, a blacksmith by trade. For a time after their marriage they lived upon another farm in Pleasant Valley town, but later returned to the home where Mr. Van Wagner's childhood was passed. In their family were five children: Emeline, widow of Jan W. Lattin, who followed farming; Elma, wife of J. Edward Clapp, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; William, a farmer of Clinton town, Dutchess county; and Benjamin and Elizabeth, twins. The last named died in infancy. The parents were both members of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics the father was a Democrat, and served as commissioner many years. He was called from this life in June, 1885; his estimable wife still survives him.

On December 18, 1843, Benjamin Van Wagner, the subject of this review, was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, and when only a year old was taken by his parents to the family homestead, where he was reared in the usual manner of farmer boys. In 1870 he was united in marriage with Miss Emily B. Wood, a native of Hyde Park, and a daughter of Harvey Wood, and to them was born a son, Mil-lard. The mother died in 1877, and in 1880 Mr. Van Wagner wedded her sister, Miss Josephine Wood. Three children graced this union: Harry, Frank and Ernest, but the last named died in 1888. Our subject is the owner of 106 acres of valuable land, highly cultivated and improved with good and substantial farm buildings. He is an intelligent, wide-awake farmer, enterprising and progressive, always giving his support to any measure for the benefit of the community. He is identified with the Democratic party, and his wife is a consistent member of the Methodist Church.

LUZERNE DUTCHER is a prominent and very highly esteemed citizen of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and is a descendant of the well-known Holland-Dutch family of that name.

Samuel Waldo Dutcher was a native of the town of Washington, and grew to manhood there, engaging in the tanner's trade, which he carried on for many years. He married Miss Maria Edmonds, and had three children: Lawrence, Luzerne and Catherine. The elder son, Lawrence, has always been prominent in local affairs, and is a member of several fraternal orders, the F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F., and the K. of P. He married (first) Miss Eliza McTurk, (second) Miss Catherine Dutcher, and (third) Miss Mary Quimby.

Luzerne Dutcher, our subject, was born in 1824, and after acquiring a common-school education learned the details of the tanner's trade, which he followed throughout his active business life. About twenty years ago he purchased a fine farm near South Dover, Dutchess county, where he now resides, having retired from business a few years ago. He married Miss Harriet Soule, daughter of Lansing Soule, a leading farmer of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. They have had four children: Mary F., who died in infancy; Charles E.; Mary F. (2), who also died in infancy; and Elmer W.

Charles E. was born in Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., and was educated there. He first engaged in farming, later was in the cattle business in Chicago, and in the stock yards at Des Moines. At present he is a mason in Chicago. He married Miss Carrie Sterling, daughter of John and Emeline Sterling, and has one son, Monroe.

Elmer W. was born at Highland Mills, Orange Co., N. Y., in 1863, and attended school in Poughkeepsie during his boyhood. He is very successful as a farmer, and takes much interest in local affairs and in the work of the Masonic order, being a member of Dover Plains Lodge No. 666. In 1893 he was united in matrimony with Miss Hattie Dutcher, daughter of Vanness Dutcher, of Dover. They have one daughter, Mabel.

FREDERICK AUGUSTUS FAUST, M. D., one of the ablest and most successful physicians of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is a native of that city, born March 24, 1865.

Dr. John Faust, our subject's father, who is a prominent veterinary surgeon of Poughkeepsie, was born July 19, 1835, in Hessen-Cassel, Germany, which place has been the home of his ancestors for many generations, and there his grandfather, Barhold Faust, and his father, Conrad Faust, were also born, the latter in 1807. Dr. John Faust acquired a good education in his native place, and while pursuing his studies he decided to come to America, where he could obtain better opportunities. Landing in New York City, he soon after began to learn the cooper's trade, which he followed there until 1859, when he and his brothers went to Poughkeepsie. In 1860 they entered into business there under the firm name of John Faust & Bros. The Doctor was an active worker in this enterprise until 1865, when he became a silent partner, continuing until 1875, when the partnership was dissolved. In 1881 the Doctor went before the examining board of the New York Veterinary Society, and passed the examination, receiving the degree of V. S. He is one of the most careful of the veterinary surgeons of Dutchess county, and has done much to elevate the profession by his scientific researches. In 1854 he married Miss Maria Frietag, also a native of Hessen-Cassel, and has six children: Louis, a physician at Schenectady; Frederick Augustus, our subject; Otto, a veterinary surgeon in Poughkeepsie; William P., a physician in Schenectady; Mary, the wife of F. C. Krueger, of that place; and Christina H., who is at home.

Frederick A. Faust, our subject, after completing the high-school course at the age of sixteen, spent two years in the preliminary study of medicine with his brother, Dr. Louis Faust of Schenectady, as preceptor. He matriculated at the New York Homeopathic College in the fall of 1883, and took the full general course, graduating April 15, 1886, passing his vacations also in studying with his brother. With this thorough preparation he began his professional career, and on May 4, 1886, he took charge of an established practice at Berne Albany county; but a year later he disposed of it to locate in Poughkeepsie, where he opened an office alone on Garden street. He has been very successful in his practice at his native place and after four years in his first office and three at No. 60 Market street, he purchased the property on the northwest corner of Cannon and Liberty streets, to which he removed March 31, 1894. He is a reader, and keeps well-informed upon all the lines of progress in his ever-advancing profession. His clients are among the best in the city, and his success in the past forms ground for firm belief in his future.

In local affairs the Doctor has always taken the side of progress and improvement. Although he adheres to the principles of the Republican party, he has never taken any active share in politics. On January 1, 1891, he was appointed, by Mayor Hull, a member of the city board of health, which position he is still holding. He is a member of the German Methodist Church, and takes great interest in its various enterprises for the welfare of the community. Socially, he belongs to the F. & A. M., Triune Lodge, the Poughkeepsie Chapter and Commandery, and to the Amrit Club. In professional circles he is a leading spirit among the younger element; has twice been vice-president of the Dutchess County Homeopathic Medical Society, and is a prominent member of the New York State Home

Frederick A. Faust M.D.

pathic Society. In the summer of 1896 he spent some six months in Europe, studying at the hospitals of Berlin, specially the diseases of children, and internal diseases, and his knowledge of the German language, which he reads and speaks fluently, enabled him to make rapid progress in his studies. He also improved the opportunity by making a tour through Germany, Switzerland and Italy.

JOHN H. PARMELE. There are found in every community men who are the leaders in public affairs, who are the promoters of all interests that have for their object the public good, and on whom the welfare of the locality depends. Of this class of citizens our subject is a worthy representative, and Dutchess county may well be proud to claim him among her native sons.

Mr. Parmele was born on the farm which is still his home, in the town of Pleasant Valley, February 14, 1846, and is a representative of one of the early families of New England, descended from English ancestry. His grandfather, Joseph Parmele, who was born in Connecticut, August 15, 1776, married Lavina Westervelt, a native of Dutchess county, N. Y., and they located on the old family homestead south of Poughkeepsie. Eight children were born to them, as follows: Richard, who was born June 21, 1802, was a farmer and merchant, and died in Poughkeepsie; John, born February 14, 1804, died at the age of twenty-one; Catherine, born January 13, 1806, became the wife of William H. Calkin; Cornelius, born April 29, 1808, died on the old homestead; Sarah Ann, born November 25, 1809, died unmarried; William was the father of our subject; Elias, born February 13, 1815, was a farmer of Tompkins county, N. Y.; and Elizabeth, born May 20, 1821, died in infancy. The grandfather made farming his life-work, and died August 30, 1842, while his wife passed away March 28, 1847. They were members of the Reformed Church of Poughkeepsie.

William Parmele, father of subject, was born on the old family homestead in the town of Poughkeepsie, March 2, 1812, and was here reared to manhood. On November 23, 1842, he wedded Elizabeth Seaman, who was born in the town of Hyde Park, January 27, 1819, a daughter of William Seaman, a farmer. They began their domestic life on the farm where our subject now resides, and reared a family of four children: Lavina, born January 2, 1844, wife of John C. Wood, who was a farmer of Hyde Park town; John H., subject of this review; Mary, who was born October 12, 1848, and is the deceased wife of Edgar A. Briggs, of Poughkeepsie; and Maria L., who was born July 26, 1854, and died in early life. The father of this family always devoted his energies to agricultural pursuits. His political support was given the Democracy, and he and his wife held membership with the Presbyterian Church. He passed away February 13, 1876, she on November 11, 1892.

John H. Parmele remained in his parent's home until about seventeen years of age, when he became a student in Claverack Institute, supplementing his primary education by a thorough course of study there. When he laid aside his text-books, he returned to the farm, and has since been actively interested in its improvement and cultivation. He now owns and operates 103 acres of rich land, pleasantly situated five miles from Poughkeepsie, and his well-directed efforts bring him a good return.

On November 20, 1878, Mr. Parmele married Miss Mary A. Lyon, daughter of George Lyon, a farmer of this locality. Eight children have been born to them, their names and dates of birth being as follows: Mary L., March 10, 1880; Joseph L., August 31, 1881; Fred, September 21, 1885; Elizabeth, September 2, 1887; George, May 19, 1889; William J., March 7, 1891; Ruth, February 6, 1894; and Ernest, July 20, 1896 (he died April 21, 1897).

The parents are identified with the Presbyterian Church of Pleasant Valley, and are people of prominence in the community, holding an enviable position in social circles. His political support is given the Democratic party, but he has had neither time nor inclination for public office, preferring to devote his best efforts to his farm work, and to the faithful discharge of his duties of citizenship.

THERON R. MARSHALL. Among the leading farmers of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, there is none better known in its history than the individual whose name is here recorded.

Here his birth occurred April 20, 1831, and in the same house his father, Israel Marshall, was born in August 14, 1796, but the farm then comprised a part of the town of Clinton. The grandfather, Zacheus Marshall, was a native of Connecticut, born at Horseneck, February 5, 1746, and was of English descent. On December 14, 1764, he married Anna Totten, who was born October 20, 1747, and they became the parents of the following children: Hannah, born October 5, 1768, became the wife of a Mr. Stoughtenburgh, of Pleasant Valley town; Reuben, born June 14, 1770, was a resident of Hyde Park; David, born May 2, 1773, died while young; Totten, born July 7, 1775, was a farmer of Greene county, N. Y.; Daniel, born February 15, 1778; and Solomon, born January 2, 1783, died in childhood; and Phœbe, born October 25, 1787. For his second wife, Zacheus Marshall wedded Susanna Dean (the grandmother of our subject). She was born in Dutchess county, July 11, 1756, and was a daughter of Stephen Dean, whose ancestors were English. Her marriage with Mr. Marshall was celebrated December 25, 1789, and she became the mother of three sons: Stephen D., born October 27, 1790, was a farmer of Pleasant Valley town, and died in Hyde Park; Henry S., born August 3, 1792, was a farmer of Hyde Park; and Israel was the father of our subject. On April 24, 1806, Zacheus Marshall was married to Jane Quinby, who was born June 27, 1765, and May 2, 1809, was born their son, Isaac P., who was a farmer of Pleasant Valley town, and became a prominent politician. The grandfather was a carpenter by trade, and also carried on farming.

Upon the old home farm Israel Marshall grew to manhood, and on May 26, 1825, he was joined in wedlock with Anna Gifford, whose birth occurred in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, March 23, 1799. Her father, John Gifford, was also a native of Stanford town, where he engaged in farming. After their marriage, the parents of our subject located upon the old farm, where they reared their two children: Susan A., who was born December 11, 1827, and died September 26, 1842; and Theron R. The father gave his exclusive attention to agricultural pursuits, was a Democrat in politics, and died in the faith of the Friends Church, July 13, 1873. His wife, who was also a member of that denomination, died October 25, 1883.

Our subject was reared to the life of a farmer, and received from his parents many a lesson in thrift and honesty, which have been his guiding principles through life. On October 31, 1855, he was married to Elizabeth Marshall, a granddaughter of John Marshall. She was born in the town of Stanford March 7, 1836. Her father, Isaac Marshall, who was born in Pleasant Valley town, January 22, 1816, wedded Eliza A. Lawrence, who was born in that town February 12, 1814. They became the parents of seven children: Elizabeth, wife of our subject; Augusta, wife of Joseph Doty, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; William W., who resides in Poughkeepsie town; Sarah K., wife of Parris Baker, a farmer and carpenter; Permelia; Ellathan G., who operates the old homestead; and Emily J., wife of Clarence Van Wagner, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town.

Theron R. Marshall, the subject proper of this review, began his domestic life on the old homestead where he lived until 1892, when he removed to his present farm, comprising forty five acres; but he still owns the other place whose boundaries contain 120 acres of rich and productive land. He is a thorough Democrat in politics, has served his fellow townsmen as assessor, was justice of the peace from 1891 until 1895, and represented his town on the board of supervisors in 1883, 1884 and 1888. He is highly respected throughout the community, having the confidence of all with whom he comes in contact, and himself and wife are earnest members of the Friends Church. To them were born three children: Israel D., an agriculturist of Pleasant Valley town, who was born August 3, 1857, and married Carrie D. Van De Water; Susan A., who was born December 15, 1858, and died September 10, 1860; and Robert L., also a farmer of Pleasant Valley, who was born August 1, 1860, and wedded Elizabeth W. Conklin.

WILLIAM S. BECKWITH. There are few men more worthy of representation in a work of this kind than the subject of this biography, who has passed his entire life upon the comfortable homestead where he still resides. It is one of the best farms in the town of Red Hook, comprising as it does 144 acres of rich and fertile land, where he is successfully engaged in general farming.

Our subject can trace his ancestry on his father's side to the founder of the family in the New World, who belonged to a prominent family of England dating from the tenth century, and on coming from that country to America located at Hartford, Conn., in 1639. His descendant in the fifth generation, Sylvanus Beckwith, our subject's grandfather, was born in the town of Lyme, Conn., May 2, 1742. He married Amy Sutherland, born in this country in 1743, and who was of Scotch extraction. They located upon a farm in the town of Stanford, and all through the Revolutionary war he valiantly aided the colonies in their struggle for independence, serving as a soldier in the Continental army. He was called from this life May 30, 1839.

Nathan Beckwith, father of our subject, was born September 15, 1778, in the town of Stanford. He married Betsie Gale, a native of Amenia, Dutchess county, and a daughter of Josiah Gale, who came to Dutchess county from Connecticut. The Gale family is of English origin, and one of its members, George V. Gale, was the founder of the city of Galesburg, Ill. In 1807 Mr. Beckwith located upon a farm in the town of Red Hook (at that time part of the town of Rhinebeck), where he continued to make his home until his death, March 1, 1865. His political support was given to the Democratic party, and he served his fellow citizens as supervisor of the township for many years; he served in the war of 1812 as lieutenant, being stationed at Brooklyn Heights, and for services in that war received a grant of land in Herkimer county, N. Y.; was commissioned as colonel of cavalry by Gov. Tompkins in 1820. On the occasion of the visit of Gen. Lafayette to Dutchess county, in 1824, Mr. Beckwith was marshal of the day. He was a classmate of President Martin Van Buren at Kinderhook Academy, and graduated as civil engineer. With Prof. Joseph Henry he surveyed a State road from Hudson river to Lake Erie, afterward adopted as the route of the Erie railway. He was a life member of the American Bible Society, also the Foreign Bible Society, and helped to organize the First Baptist Church of Red Hook. Mrs. Betsie Beckwith in practical life maintained the religious fervor and devotion to Christian principles which characterized her Puritan forefathers, and was a blessing to her family and neighborhood, ministering to the spiritual and temporal wants of the afflicted until her death in 1838.

To Nathan and Betsie Beckwith were born four sons and three daughters. The eldest son, Josiah Gale, graduated from Union College, studied medicine and settled at Litchfield, Conn, where he became eminent in his profession. He was president of the State Medical Society, a delegate to the National Medical Convention, and appointed by the State to the board of medical examiners of the insane at the asylum at Hartford. He was elected several times to the State Legislature, and once nominated Governor. In 1831 he married Jane M. Seymour, a cousin of Governor Horatio Seymour, of New York, and died at Litchfield March 4, 1871.

The fourth son, William S. Beckwith, our subject, was born January 14, 1820, on his present farm in the town of Red Hook. He attended the district schools of the neighborhood until eleven years of age, when he was compelled to give up study and turn his entire attention to agriculture, at the same time taking a few winter terms study in the Red Hook Academy. He is a very intelligent man, most of his knowledge being acquired by study at night, and otherwise, and is well posted on the current events of the day. On March 29, 1848, he was married to Miss Ann M. Collyer, a native of Sing Sing, N. Y., and six children blessed their union: Alice M.; Thomas C.; William, who makes his home in California; Amy, who married Armand De Potter; Leila, wife of Abram Havens, a lawyer of New York City; and George, who died at Pella, Iowa. Mr. Beckwith is a staunch Democrat, and has occupied various positions in his town, including that of poormaster, assessor many years, and supervisor of the town of Red Hook in 1884.

JEREMIAH MEAD, a leading dairyman of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, noted for his successful management of large agricultural interests, is a descendant of one of the oldest families of Putnam county, N. Y. His ancestors came from England four or five generations ago, and made their home on what was then a frontier line in the town of Kent, Putnam county, where their descendants have been prominent in different lines of life. Jeremiah Mead, our subject's grandfather, had so strong a liking for the free life of a pioneer that he left his fine farm of 300 acres, in 1845, to go with his family to the vicinity of Fond du Lac, Wis., then a wilderness, where he entered a large tract of land, upon which he passed his remaining years, dying in 1888, at the age of ninety years. His wife was Sarah Barrett, a member of another old family living near Lake Mahopac. They had seven children: Major, Milan, Morris, Mrs. Mahala Metcalf, Moses, Minerva (who married James Huyatt), and Marrilla (who married Henry Merrick). Major had several sons who are now occupying prominent positions in Wisconsin.

Morris Mead (our subject's father), who was born in 1817, was the only one of the family to remain in Putnam county, and there passed his entire life, following farming as an occupation. He possessed the characteristic good sense of the Mead family, and was highly esteemed in the neighborhood. He was a leading Baptist, helping to found their Church in his vicinity, and holding the office of deacon for many years. He married Sarah Hyatt, daughter of James Hyatt, a well-known resident of Putnam county. His death occurred in 1853; that of his wife in 1890. Of their seven children only three are living. Catherine died in childhood; Marilda is the wife of Eli Smalley, resides in Fishkill, and has one son, Charles, who is now an attorney. Peter and Sarah Ophelia died in childhood; Jeremiah is the subject of this sketch; Jennie died in 1876; and Roselle lives in the town of Dover.

Jeremiah Mead was born at the old homestead in Putnam county, May 9, 1843, and received his education in the district schools of that locality. Being left fatherless at the age of ten years, he was obliged to take up the serious business of life while still a boy in years. At thirteen he left home to work upon a farm, for which he received during his first year $15 and his winter's schooling. For a number of years he continued to work for wages for eight months, and attending school during the winter. When he was twenty-four he returned home and worked the farm for two years, and then sold his interest to his brother. In 1869 he took the old Deacon Campbell homestead on shares, and has now conducted it for twenty-seven years, adding land from time to time until he has 400 acres under his control. He makes a specialty of dairying, and is very successful in that line. He owns a farm of 250 acres near Danbury, Conn., where he keeps fifty cows and other stock.

The Mead family has always taken a patriotic stand upon public questions, and from the grandfather down they became ardent supporters of the Republican party upon its formation. Mr. Mead has been active in local politics, and was supervisor in 1891, 1892 and 1893, serving as chairman of the committee on equalization of taxes. He was also commissioner of highways for two years. He is a ready helper in every worthy cause, and belongs to the Baptist Church.

In 1866 our subject married Miss Amanda Light, daughter of Putnam Light, who was born in Genesee county, N. Y., April 11, 1812, in which same year his mother died, and he was then reared by his uncle, Samuel Hawkins. He attended the public schools, and then worked on a farm. In 1839 he married Miss E. M. Smith, and they had four children, viz.: Cordelia, who lives with Mrs. Mead; Amanda (Mrs. Mead); Edgar D., farming the old homestead in Putnam county; and Ellen M., wife of James H. Cole, residing in Danbury. The mother of these died August 20, 1853, and in November, 1854, Mr. Light married Miss A. J. Light, by whom he had three children: Henry C., who died in infancy; Emma C. and Willis E., both following teaching, the latter being a graduate of Eastman Business College. Mr. Light died March 7, 1888, in full membership with the Baptist Church. In politics he was a Democrat, and he served as assessor three terms. He was a self-made man, and accumulated a comfortable competence, was well liked and generally respected.

WILLIAM H. HAIGHT, proprietor of Haight's Sale and Transient Stables, Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born November 30, 1839, in the town of New Paltz, Ulster Co., N. Y., and there passed his boyhood days, attending the Buttrville district school and New Paltz Academy. Later, for two terms, he studied at the Nine Partners (Quaker) School, near Millbrook, Dutchess county, receiving, in all, a good education.

Mr. Haight remained on his father's farm until of age, at which time he commenced the droving of cattle and sheep, purchasing in Canada and throughout the Western States and finding his markets in all the larger centers of this country, as well as selling man "store cattle" in the Hudson river counties. In 1878-79, during the great Leadville (Colo.) silver excitement, he sold horses, mules and cattle in Denver and Leadville. In 1880 he took up his residence in Chicago, Ill., and engaged in the manufacture of tinware and ware machinery, owning some patents that caused a revolution in the manufacture of tinware, which machines are successfully used to the present day. In this industry he employed from seventy to 100 men and at the same time he owned a membership on the Chicago Board of Trade, in which his deals proved highly satisfactory to both himself and others.

James A. Haight

At the end of two years Mr. Haight returned east, and, in 1882, opened his present larding and sale stables in Poughkeepsie, in which he has met with well-merited success, at this writing owning the largest establishment of the kind in the city. He also owns a 275-acre farm near the corporation line, with a pickyard attached, all of which are running successfully under his personal supervision.

Our subject was brought up under the influence and in the strict lines of the Hicksite (Quaker) faith, which has had its influence in governing all the turning points of his life; never seeking public office or becoming a member of any secret society; never feeling at home in any Church that was not governed by the Hicksite rule—"Do unto others as you would be done by"—inspiration, he says, is the only teacher, and should govern all faith. "Love no man, and love one another," is the watchword in all his business relations.

When a very young man Mr. Haight was married, which marriage, not proving a happy one, was divorced. He then wedded Elma (daughter of Isaac G. Sands), whose death, after ten years of uninterrupted happiness, caused much the greatest sorrow of his life. One child, Meda, was born to them, June 7, 1854.

John N. Haight, our subject's father, was born in Stanford, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he lived until fourteen years of age. His parents, Amos and Eunice (Northrop) Haight, of Aenia, N. Y., dying when he was fourteen years of age, John N. Haight apprenticed himself to Rowland De Garmo, at New Paltz, Ulster county, in order to learn the tanner's and currier's trade. At the age of twenty-seven he married Mary, daughter of Rowland De Garmo (his employer) and Phebe De Garmo, and, besides our subject, they had two daughters, Eza and Mary, who married and settled in Orange county, N. Y. At the age of twenty-four William H. Haight found his parents in straitened circumstances, but by diligence and economy he placed them and his sisters beyond want, and then commenced the battle of life for himself. Recently, when asked how hard times affected him, his answer was that only those who spend their money before they earn it cry about "hard times."

CHARLES G. CUTLER. The ancestors of the Cutler family were among the early settlers of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and the grandfather of the subject of this sketch, William Cutler, was born there in 1760. That locality was then a wilderness, and his youth was spent amid the scenes of pioneer life, in which he took an active part. He traced his ancestry back to one of three brothers—James, Otis and John Cutler—who came over in the "Mayflower." William Cutler lived to a good old age, dying in 1842. He married Elizabeth Gifford, of Pawling, Dutchess county, and had nine children. (1) Bigelow, a farmer near Jamestown, N. Y., married Miss Dennis, and had four children—William, Thursa (Mrs. Johnson), Eliza and Nancy. (2) Abigail married Thomas Tompkins, a farmer of the town of Dover, and had two sons—Enoch, who married Tabitha Humphrey, and William H., who married Abbie Humphrey. (3) Thomas C. married, and was the father of five children, all now deceased excepting George, who is a physician in California. (4) Calvin C. is mentioned below. (5) Robie married Isaac Northrup, a farmer at Copake, N. Y., and had two children—William and Ella. (6) Thurza died at the age of twenty-seven. (7) Mahala did not marry. (8) William S., the father of our subject, was born in 1805 at the old homestead in Dover, where he received his education. He followed farming from an early age, and was a prominent man in that locality; he supported the Democratic party, and held a number of township offices, including that of assessor. In 1858 he married Miss Irene H. Brush, daughter of Amos Brush, a well-known farmer of New Fairfield, Conn. They had three children: William B., Charles G. and Hattie. William was born in 1859, and after completing his education at Wilbraham, Mass., engaged in mercantile business at Dover Furnace, where he also holds the position of station agent. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 666, of Dover. He married Miss Marie Sparks, of Poughkeepsie, but they have no living children. Hattie, the youngest of the trio, was born in 1869, and was educated at Wilbraham, Mass.; she married Otis Arnold, a hotel keeper, who conducted the railroad restaurant at Pawling for a number of years. They have one daughter, Marjorie. William S., the father, died May 26, 1888.

Charles G. Cutler, the subject proper of this sketch, was born November 2, 1861, and was educated in the schools of the town of Dover, and of Wilbraham, Mass. He is a leading farmer in that town, and active in local affairs, holding public office at different times. He belongs to the Masonic order, Dover Lodge No. 666, and at present is senior warden. He married Miss Nellie Stevens, daughter of Thomas A. Stevens, a prominent farmer of Dover, and they have two children, Howard S., born in 1888, and Irene H., born in 1893.

Calvin Cutler, the son of William and Elizabeth (Gifford) Cutler, was born in 1797, and enjoyed the usual educational advantages of a country boy in those days. He engaged in farming in Dover, purchasing an estate which is now owned by his son, Frank. His wife, Keziah Varney, was the daughter of John Varney, one of the well-to-do farmers of that neighborhood. They had eight children, of whom the first, John, and the last, Jerome, died in infancy. The others are: Eleazer and Elihu (twins), born in 1825; Priscilla, 1827; Mary, 1828; Sarah, 1830; and Frank M. Eleazer Cutler was married in 1853 to Amaranth Eggleston, of Dover Plains, who was born in 1828. They have three children.

Frank Cutler was born in 1832 at the old farm, and after attending the common schools for some years completed his studies at a boarding school in Connecticut. He learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for more than twenty years; but after the purchase of the present homestead he took charge of it. An active worker in public affairs, he has held several town offices, including that of collector, and he belongs to Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., in which he was trustee for many years. He married Elizabeth Carey, a daughter of Jeremiah Carey, a prosperous farmer of Connecticut, and has had three children: (1) George, who was born in 1865, was educated at Dover Plains Academy, and taught in Dover for some time. He has now been employed in the New York post office for ten years. Like his father, he is a Mason, and belongs to the Royal Arcanum. He married Miss Bertha Dutcher, daughter of J. Van Ness Dutcher, a well-known agriculturist of Dover, and his wife Harriet, and they have one child, Ethel. (2) John was born in 1868, and also taught school for a time, but since 1890 he has been in the U. S. mail service on the N. Y. C. & H. R. R., from New York to Syracuse. He belongs to Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M. He married Miss Sarah Dutcher, daughter of one of the leading farmers of his native town, John I. Dutcher, and his wife, Ada C. (3) Fred, the youngest son, was born in 1872, and was given the same educational advantage that his brothers had. Since his graduation he has been engaged in farming with his father. He married Miss Mary Northrup, daughter of Edwin R. and Mary Northrup, who are prominent residents of the same township.

Mrs. Frank N. Cutler is a member of an old Connecticut family, and her grandfather, Jeremiah Carey, was a prosperous agriculturist of Fairfield county. He and his wife, Eunice Odell, had eight children: James is the eldest, Elias is an inventor; Robert died at an early age; Lockwood; Lucretia (Mrs. Robert Chestnut Artemisia (Mrs. David Waldron); Sarah (Mrs. Orin Benson), and Jeremiah (Mrs. Cutler's father). He was born and reared in Fairfield county, Conn., engaged in farming there, and married Miss Salina Hunter, daughter of a well-known farmer of the same locality, Joseph Hunter, and his wife, Sylvia. Mrs. Cutler was the second in a family of six children. The eldest, Julia, married (first) Charles Hinman, and (second) Fred Bergman. She has two sons, Lemman Hinman and Frank Bergman. The third daughter, Orvilla, married Henry Eber and has five children: Henry, Will, Salin, Charles and Walter. Sarah J. Carey married Stephen R. Scott, and had six children: Alida (Mrs. Oscar Smith); Abraham, who married Mina Decker; George, who married Abt Decker; Lillie (Mrs. William Decker); Carl (Mrs. Robert Holly), and Gertie, who is now married. George Carey married Mary Trainor and has four children—William, Charles, Minnie, the wife of Harry Dougherty, and Blanch. Silas S. Carey married Laura Conklin, and has three sons: Frank, who married Laura Moore, Fred, who married Edith Wheeler, and Clinton, who is unmarried.

The Brush family, to which the mother of our subject belonged, counts among its members many who have attained distinction on various walks of life. Amos Brush, the grandfather of our subject, was a soldier in the revolutionary army. He was born in Fairfield county, Conn., and had his home there the rest of his life. He married Miss Hannah Bearss, and had eight children: Ezra, who married Betsey Bearss; Amos, Mrs. Cutler's father; my, the wife of Dr. Isaac Knapp; Hannah (Mrs. Smith); Esther (Mrs. Amos Chapman); Abigail, the wife of Mr. Bailey, a Revolutionary soldier; Mary, who died at the age of twenty; and Eli, who married Rilla Davis.

Amos Brush, Jr., was born in New Fairfield, Conn., in 1798, and, after obtaining an education in the local schools, he engaged in farming. He married Miss Aurilla Barnum, daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (Seeley) Barnum, Bethel, Conn., and had seven children: (1) Elizabeth married Daniel Duncan, and has had six children: Austin, Alex, Theo, William, Irene and John, of whom only Theo and William are now living. (2) George never married. (3) Austin married H. Lucetta Rogers, and has three children: Edward, William and Ella. (4) William is mentioned below. (5) Irene was the mother of our subject. (6) Augustus was prominent in public life, and was State school commissioner for six years; member of the Assembly from Dutchess county two terms; agent for the United States Treasury for some time; an employe of the New York Custom House for twelve years, and from 1880 to 1891 was warden of Sing Sing prison. He married Susan Senserbaugh, and had five children: George, Alice, Irene, Augusta and Fred. (7) Harriet married Cornelius Hill, and had three children: Irene, Ernest and George.

(4) Rev. William Brush, D. D., Mrs. Cutler's brother, was born in New Fairfield, Conn., February 19, 1827, and died in Englewood, Chicago, Ill., April 29, 1895, having but a few weeks before passed the sixty-eighth milestone of his life's journey. It is to the circumstances, associations and surroundings of his early life that we must look for the elements that produced his strong character. Born and reared where he was among the rocks and hills, the looms and spindles of New England, we find in him the qualities of energy, industry, self-denial and perseverance. Puritan blood flowed in his veins, and loyal patriotism fired his soul. In his student days he sacrificed the ordinary pleasures and even conveniences of life that he might furnish his mind with higher and nobler attainments. True to his youthful ambition, by dint of earnest toil and hard study he returned at the early age of twenty to knock at the door of Yale College for admission to the sophomore class. In the three remaining years he completed the full classical course with high rank in scholarship. In October, 1850, following his graduation, he was married to Electa J. Brush, the trusted and beloved companion of his after years. They had three children: Frank, a minister; Darley, a banker, and Hattie, who married Dr. O. E. Murray. Dr. Brush's active work in the ministry began, in 1851, in the New York Conference, of which he was a member, and served successful pastorates until 1858, when he took a transfer to the Upper Iowa Conference, and was appointed pastor of the M. E. Church at Dyersville. In 1860 he was called to the presidency of Upper Iowa University, at Fayette, Iowa, which position he held for nine successive years. Entering again upon the active work of the ministry, he served a four-years' term as presiding elder of the Charles City district. In 1873, finding the rigor of the northern winter too severe for his wife's health, he decided to move south, and became presiding elder of the Austin, Tex., district. From the result of his eight-years' labor in this field the Austin Conference was formed. In 1881 he removed north, and filled appointments again as pastor of the churches at Maquoketa and Vinton, Iowa. In 1885 he removed to Dakota, and became one of the founders and first president of Dakota University, which position he occupied for six years, or until his appointment in 1891, by President Harrison, as U. S. Consul to Messina, Italy.

On his return from his foreign mission in 1892, he was elected chancellor of the University of the Northwest, at Sioux City, Iowa, where he labored until a few months previous to his death. He assisted in laying the foundation of three colleges in the West, and when the history of these institutions are written fifty years hence, such men as Dr. Brush will receive due credit for the sacrifices made in their behalf. The Churches and the cause of education are indebted to him for forty-four long years of eminent and efficient service, eighteen years as college president and twenty-six years in the ministry, during which time his name has been associated with many important issues and undertakings. On several occasions he acted as chaplain of the House of Representatives in Washington, D. C., and officiated in the same capacity at the National Republican Convention in 1892. Five times was he elected delegate to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, and once received a large vote for the office of bishop.

JUSTUS P. REYNOLDS, a leading and progressive citizen of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, was there born on what is now known as the J. O. Peters place, January 24, 1833, and belongs to a family that was established in this country soon after the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. The first to arrive in the New World was Robert Reynolds, a native of England, who was living in Watertown, Mass., in 1634, and later became a resident of Boston. His son, Nathaniel Reynolds, was born in that State, and in 1680 emigrated to Bristol, R. I., becoming one of its first settlers. He had previously married Priscilla Brackett, and their son Joseph was born in Massachusetts, December 20, 1676, and died January 16, 1759. The latter wedded Phœbe Leonard, and among their children was Joseph Reynolds, who was born in Rhode Island, November 15, 1719, and died September 14, 1789. He married Lydia Greenwood.

Joseph Reynolds was a prominent patriot during the Revolutionary war. Gen. LaFayette stayed at his house during the occupancy of the town of Bristol. Later, when the British took the place, Mr. Reynolds and his servant were taken prisoners and confined in a prison-ship in the harbor. He suffered great privations in that vermin-infested ship, but was finally exchanged for a British officer. Gen. LaFayette visited him on his return to America in 1824. The house in which he was entertained was built (according to the history of the town) about the year 1700, and is still standing in a fine state of preservation, and is owned and occupied by one of his descendants. The room in which Gen. LaFayette slept is preserved in its original state.

George Reynolds, the son of Joseph and Lydia (Greenwood) Reynolds, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born at Bristol, R. I., November 7, 1756, and at that place was united in marriage with Abigail Peck, by whom he had five children: Jonathan P., Lydia, George, Joseph, and Abigail, who married Philo Reed. In 1794 the grandfather came to the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, locating upon a farm near the village of Amenia, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in April, 1808.

George Reynolds, the father of our subject, was also a native of Bristol, R. I., born November 15, 1788, received a district school education, and remained under the parental roof for some years. At Amenia was celebrated his marriage, May 26, 1819, with Miss Abigail Pennoyer, daughter of Jonathan Pennoyer, and to them were born four children, namely: George Greenwood, born February 7, 1821, is an ex-judge of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Caroline, born January 23, 1826, died March 28, 1829; Mary, born May 18, 1830, became the wife of George Kirby, and died October 15, 1874; Justus Powers, subject of this sketch, completes the family. After his marriage the father bought the Peters farm, north of Amenia village, where he lived until 1834, when he purchased the E. J. Preston place, south of Amenia, there dying January 31, 1873, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church. His political support was first given the Whig and, later, the Republican party, and he acceptably served as assessor of his town. He was a straightforward, honorable man, who had the confidence and esteem of all who knew him.

Justus P. Reynolds spent his boyhood days in the town of Amenia, and acquired his education in the district schools and the Amenia Seminary. In 1860 he purchased the Jordan farm, near South Amenia, where he made his home, until removing to his present place near the same village in 1869. He has continued to follow the occupation to which he was reared, with results that are satisfactory; the reward of well-directed labors.

In the town of Amenia, January 31, 1863, Mr. Reynolds led to the marriage altar Miss Nancy Barlow, daughter of Elisha Barlow and to them were born six children: George who married Clarabel Williams, daughter of William Williams, and has two children, Howard B. and Edward D.; Abbie L.; Lucy B. wife of John T. Sackett, of Brooklyn, N. Y. by whom she has one daughter, Justine R.; Edward G.; Francis B.; and Bertha May, deceased. Mr. Reynolds affiliated with Shekomeko Lodge, when it was at Mabbettsville Dutchess county. In politics he is independent, voting for the man whom he thinks best qualified to fill the office, regardless of parties, but favors Democratic principles. He takes a commendable interest in the prosperity and advancement of his native county.

WILLIAM B. ROE (deceased) was born at New Hackensack, Dutchess county, October 17, 1819, and was of English extraction. His father, William Roe, whose birth occurred June 26, 1790, was married in 1812 to Miss Abby Blatchley, who was born in Connecticut December 27, 1788, and they located upon a farm in New Hackensack, where their four children were born, namely: Joseph B., who died in infancy; William B.; John B., who became a merchant of Maryland; and Sarah, who married Gilbert Hasrouck, a farmer of Michigan. The family were members of the Episcopal Church.

Upon the farm where his widow now resides, William B. Roe passed his boyhood and youth in much the usual manner of farmer's sons, and on November 11, 1846, married Miss Amanda Anderson, who was born in the town of East Fishkill, on the farm known as "Locust Dale," which was also the birthplace of her father, Peter Anderson. Six children were born to our subject and his wife: Abby E., who died May 19, 1852; Sarah E.; Annie E.; Ella K., who died October 25, 1862; William A., who died August 21, 1865; and Winifred A.

At his childhood home, Mr. Roe continued to live until his earthly career was ended June 18, 1873, when he passed to his reward. In connection with general farming he also dealt extensively in stock of all kinds, buying and selling horses, cattle, etc., and did a profitable business along that line up to the time of his death. His ballot was always cast in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party, and he took a commendable interest in public affairs. With his estimable wife, he held membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and faithfully followed its teachings. In all the relations of life he was honorable and upright, never seeking to take advantage of others, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of all with whom he came in contact. He had a comfortable property, including a farm of 225 acres, on which his wife and daughters reside. They are intelligent and highly cultured ladies, and have many friends throughout the community.

EDWIN L. BUSHNELL, a prominent citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, the inventor of the Bushnell spring bed, and founder of the Bushnell Manufacturing Company, was born March 8, 1822, in Stanford, Dutchess county.

His family is of English origin, and he traces his lineage to one of three brothers who came from Saybrook, England, at an early date, the Bushnells of New Haven, Conn., and of Ohio, being also their descendants. Alvah Bushnell, our subject's father, was born in Litchfield county, Conn., in 1796, and in 1817 came to Dutchess county, and engaged in mercantile business; but after two years in Stanfordville and two in Bangall, he gave up that occupation to conduct a hotel at Pulver's Corners, remaining there three years. He then bought the property known as the Solon Lapham farm, where he passed the remainder of his days as a successful farmer. He married Mr. Lapham's daughter, Melinda, and had three children, Julia, Edwin L., and Tamma Josephine. He was an active worker in the Republican party, also in all local movements of importance, and was a regular attendant of the Baptist Church at Bangall. His death occurred November 16, 1865; his wife died October 28, 1861.

Edwin L. Bushnell, our subject, attended the district schools of his vicinity in boyhood, and then studied for one winter at Amenia Seminary. At seventeen he was obliged to leave school, but he has always been an extensive reader; and is an unusually well-informed man. He remained at home until the age of twenty-three, when he left the farm on account of ill health and entered the Poughkeepsie Iron Co., of which he was one of the three first stockholders on the organization of the company, October 31, 1848. This company owned the first anthracite furnace built east of the Alleghanies, and Mr. Bushnell personally supervised its construction. In 1850 he retired to take the business management of the American R. R. Chair Co., and in their interest he spent the winter of 1851-52 in Columbus, Ohio, and four months of 1852 in Montreal, Canada. His mother's failing health caused him to sever his relations with this company, and return to Poughkeepsie. In 1852 he undertook the selling of patents, and visited Bangor, Maine, and Portsmouth, N. H., with a patent window-blind hinge. He had been for some time engaged in perfecting the invention, of which he has since made such a distinguished success; but like most inventors he was obliged to follow occupations which were less congenial, though more remunerative, than fashioning models. A brief venture in the real-estate business in Boston was followed by a few months in the lumber trade with an uncle in New York City; but in the fall of 1853 this business was closed out, and Mr. Bushnell became connected with the Lord's Prayer Association in the same city. The winter of 1853-54 he spent in Richmond, Va., selling machinery. In the spring of 1855 he married Miss Sarah Jane Sherman, of Cambridge, Washington county, N. Y., and settled upon the old homestead farm. Three children were born of this union: Jennie, now at home; James S., a resident of Seattle, Wash.; and Edwin M., the treasurer and general manager of the Bushnell Manufacturing Co., at Easton, Pennsylvania.

In 1860 Mr. Bushnell went to New Preston, Conn., and engaged in a mercantile business; he contributed largely to the support of families whose fathers were in the army during the Rebellion. In the fall of 1865 he sold his business in New Preston, and returned to Poughkeepsie, where in the spring of 1866 he purchased the house in which he still resides. He began the manufacture of scythe ruffles, and patented a mowing-machine sharpener, which he sold in 1869, when he commenced manufacturing his own invention, making a spring bed with four eyes in each end of the springs. This has met with great success, and in 1880 he adapted the idea to car seats, berths and backs, and was awarded the only medal on that line of goods at the National Exposition of Railway Appliances at Chicago in 1883. Though various parties infringed his patents and kept him seven and one-half years defending his rights in the United States Courts, he secured the patronage of the Wagner & Pullman Palace Car Co. His goods have been largely adopted by all the leading railroads and car-builders throughout the country, with several new patents for improvements, and, on tools and machinery for manufacturing, they take the lead. In 1893 Mr. Bushnell removed his factory from Poughkeepsie to Easton, Penn., where there is a fine plant employing a large number of men. This firm furnished the seats for the new "Defender," also the "Black Daimon Train," the finest train in the world. He built the first skylight in Poughkeepsie, for taking pictures.

Mr. Bushnell is a man of great natural ability and energy, and notwithstanding his years is mentally active, his memory being remarkable. He has always taken an interest in the success of the Republican party, but has always refused to accept office. He served out his time with the Davy Crockett Hook & Ladder Company. He attends the Second Reformed Church, to which he is a liberal giver.

ISAAC B. GILDERSLEVE (deceased), who was one of the highly respected and honored citizens of the town of East Fishkill Dutchess county, was born in Scipio, Cayuga Co., N. Y., April 5, 1823, of Holland descent. His father, Solomon Gildersleve, was a native of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, but after his marriage with Margaret Wiltsie located upon a farm in Cayuga county, where their five children were born: Annis, who married Thomas Ketchum, of the town of East Fishkill, but both died in Indiana; Eliza, who first married James Deleree, and after his death wedded Elias Tompkins, and they lived at Cold Spring, N. Y.; Emma, who became the wife of a Mr. Bronson, and lived at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Ann; and Isaac B.

Our subject when a young man came to the town of East Fishkill, where he engaged in teaming, hauling hoop poles to Poughkeepsie, but about 1842 went to Missouri, and worked on the Mississippi until 1865, working his way upward from a deck hand until he was owner of a steamboat, which carried both freight and passengers. In 1865 he began the hotel business in St. Louis, which he continued for five years, and on the expiration of that time returned to Dutchess county, purchasing the farm now owned and occupied by his daughter, RITA A.

Mr. Gildersleve was married in 1865, to Miss Charlotte A. Miller, a native of Berwick, Columbia Co., Penn., and a daughter of Jacob Miller. Five children were born to them, three of whom died in infancy with the exception of Rita A., and the mother departed this life on September 24, 1887, while the father's death occurred on the home farm February 25, 1893.

The farm is a most beautiful place, which Mr. Gildersleve made many improvements and erected excellent buildings. It comprises 146 acres of valuable land, on which he carried on general farming, but his daughter, who now has the management, makes a specialty of milk.

In the career of this gentleman we find excellent example for young men just embarking in the field of active life, of what may be accomplished by a man beginning poor, but honest, prudent and industrious. He was entirely self-made, and left behind him an excellent property, as well as a good name. He was a Democrat in politics, and was one of the prominent and esteemed citizens of the community. His estimable wife held membership in the Episcopal Church.

MONCURE BARTOW was called from earth in the midst of his usefulness, dying on the 19th of April, 1881. He was a leading and honored citizen of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he devoted his energies to the care and cultivation of the farm, and was also connected with the Dutchess county Insurance Company, of Poughkeepsie.

The Bartow family is of French extraction, and was established in Dutchess county at a very early day. Religiously, its members were mostly connected with the Episcopal Church. William A. Bartow, the father of our subject, was a native of the town of East Fishkill, and a farmer by occupation. The mother bore the maiden name of Jane Hasbrouck.

Moncure Bartow was the seventh son in a family of twelve children, and was reared upon the old home farm, where he continued to engage in agricultural pursuits until his marriage, in 1867, to Miss Elizabeth D. Brinckerhoff. They began their domestic life upon the farm where she still resides, and there their two children—Jane D. and Moncure—were born. The parents contributed to the support of the reformed Church, and in politics Mr. Bartow was a decided Democrat, but would never accept public office. His upright, honorable life won him the confidence and esteem of his neighbors, and he was classed among the most respected representative citizens of East Fishkill town.

Mrs. Bartow, a most excellent lady, was born in the house which is still her home, and is the only child of Abraham and Betsey (Delavan) Brinckerhoff, the former born on the farm in the town of East Fishkill (where his daughter now resides), October 6, 1798, and the latter at North Salem, Westchester Co., N. Y., January 11, 1799. The Brinckerhoff family is of Holland origin, and was founded in America in 1638. The first to locate here was Joris Dericksen Brinckerhoff, who married Susanah Dubbles, and from him in direct line to the father of Mrs. Bartow were Abraham Jorisen (married to Altia Stryker), Derick (married to Altia Cowenhoven), Abraham (married to Femmetia Remsen), John A. (married to Elizabeth Brinckerhoff), and Derick (who married Margaret Brett). The Delavan family was of French extraction, and Mrs. Bartow's maternal grandfather, John Delavan, was born February 11, 1744, and became a prominent farmer of Westchester county. He married Martha Keeler, whose birth occurred at Ridgefield, Conn., August 28, 1757, and they became the parents of five children, as follows: Jane, born in 1789, died in 1865; Chauncy, born in 1790, died in 1863; Benjamin, born in 1792, died in 1827; Catherine, born in 1797, died in 1867; and Betsey, the mother of Mrs. Bartow, was the youngest. The father of these children died January 8, 1834, the mother on March 10, 1843. After their marriage, Abraham Brinckerhoff and his wife located upon the farm where Mrs. Bartow yet lives, and there the former died January 5, 1874, and the latter on September 29, 1878. They were prominent members of the community, and had the respect of all who knew them. In early life Mr. Brinckerhoff was a Democrat, but later supported the Republican party.

MIRAM CLARK (deceased). The family name of the subject of this sketch has long been held in high esteem in Dutchess county, and he proved himself to be a worthy representative, displaying in a high degree the keen business judgment and high sense of honor which have characterized the race. Remotely he was of English descent, the head of the American branch being Thomas Clark, who was one of the "Mayflower" pilgrims. The first of the family to come to Dutchess county was our subject's grandfather, Ezra Clark, an energetic, thrifty and prosperous farmer, who was born at Plainfield, Conn., in 1748. He came to Dutchess county about 1795, and his first purchase was a farm of 200 acres, adjoining what is now our subject's estate, he later buying the farm now owned by Leonard Barton, where he passed his later years, and died in 1834. He was married in Connecticut to Mary Douglas, who died in 1837. They had ten children: Douglas; Moses; Ezra; Elijah, a farmer in Amenia; Sarah, who married Samuel Brown; Lidia, who married Jeremiah Conklin; Patty (Mrs. Conklin); Aphia, married to George Brown; and Olive, married to Jacob Dakin.

The two elder sons remained in the town of Northeast, and became prominent in local affairs—business, political and social. Douglas Clark, our subject's father, was born in Plainfield, Conn., July 12, 1774, but spent the greater part of his life on the present Clark farm, near Millerton, Dutchess county, consisting of 400 acres, which he purchased in 1816 from a Mr. Spencer, for whom Spencer's Corners was named. He owned two other estates also, comprising in all about 800 acres. He possessed rare business judgment, and was greatly esteemed throughout the community, being often called upon to assist in the settlement of estates. In 1829, 1830 and 1831 he was supervisor, and for a number of years was commissioner of highways and justice of the peace. He was twice married, (first) to Sarah Collins, and (second) to Elizabeth Wiggins, a lady of English descent, daughter of Arthur and Mary Wiggins, of the town of Northeast. He had eight children, as follows: Of the first family were—Olive, born in 1797, who died at the age of twenty-seven; Sarah (Mrs. Alex. Trowbridge), born in 1798; Perry, born in 1800; Harry, born in 1808; Emeline (Mrs. B. H. Wheeler, of Amenia), born in 1816; and Caroline (Mrs. Caleb Barrett), born in 18—. The second family were: Hiram, born June 1, 1824; and Douglas, born in February, 1832.

Hiram Clark succeeded at his father's death to a portion of the estate, and followed farming. He was a well-informed man, having received a good English education in his boyhood at Amenia Seminary and at Kinderhook, to which he constantly added by reading and observation. An able and entertaining business man, in the management of his farm he was thoroughly successful. He made many improvements, remodeling the house, which was built about 1829, the lumber being brought from Albany. It is now one of the finest farm houses in the town. He was engaged for some years in the breeding of fine horses. Among other business enterprises in which he was interested was the founding of the Millerton National Bank, in which he was one of the original stockholders. Although he took a keen interest in public affairs, and was an ardent Republican in politics, he never sought or held office, being quite content to use his influence quietly. He was an earnest Christian, and a regular attendant at the Congregational Church, but later became an adherent of the Presbyterian Church, and often held official positions in those societies. On November 1, 1847, he married Mary Richter, daughter of John W. and Hannah (Harris) Richter, well known farming people of near Pine Plains. Four children were born to them: Henry, June 28, 1850; John W., December 17, 1854; and two who died in infancy. The father was called from earth December 6, 1890; the mother still resides on the old homestead.

The two surviving sons of this estimable couple inherited the old farm of 400 acres first acquired by their grandfather, where they now conduct an extensive dairy business. They are successful managers, and hold a prominent place among the younger men of their town. HENRY CLARK was educated at Amenia Seminary and at New Marlboro, Mass. He is a Democrat in politics, was assessor from 1880 to 1893, and for two years past he has been director of the Millerton National Bank. On January 11, 1882, JOHN W. CLARK was married to Harriet J. Weed, of Torrington, Conn., and has one daughter, Harriet Emma Clark.

WILLIAM H. DIAMOND, the well known proprietor of the Beveridge Bottling Vaults, at the corner of Main and Clover streets, Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county is one of the most enterprising business men of that city.

His family is of Irish origin, the old home of his ancestors being located at Belfast where his grandfather, James D. Diamond followed the trade of a mason. He had five sons, all of whom came to America. John died in Dutchess county; Hugh was our subject's father; Charles H. was a saloon keeper in Poughkeepsie, and was noted for his generosity; Patrick, a ship builder by trade, enlisted in the army during the Civil war, and rose to the rank of acting major; William was a laboring man; James enlisted in the army 1863, and was one of the "missing."

Hugh Diamond came to Poughkeepsie in 1849, and engaged in the manufacture and sale of boots and shoes at the corner of Dutchess avenue and Albany street, gaining the reputation of being an excellent workman and good business manager. Although he was not formally educated, he had good natural abiland sound judgment, and was highly esteemed. In his later years he went into the wholesale beer business, in which he was engaged at the time of his death, which occurred in 1875. A Democrat in principle, he was interested in the success of the party, but was no politician. He was one of the earliest members of St. Peter's Catholic Church, and for some years was captain of two military companies of the city—the Poughkeepsie Grenadiers and the Jackson Republican Guards. In 1859 he married Miss Jane Reynolds, daughter of Thomas Reynolds, a native of Kilrea, County Derry, Ireland, and had seven children: James (deceased); William Henry, our subject; Margaret Ellen, who is at home; James, a resident of Poughkeepsie; Sarah Jane (deceased); Mary Jane (deceased); and Sarah, an invalid, at home. Three of the family died before reaching adult age.

Com L. Diamond.

W. H. Diamond was born October 24, 1852, at No. 45 Dutchess avenue, Poughkeepsie, and was educated in that city, attending St. Peter's parochial school in Mill street, from the age of seven years until he was thirteen, when he entered the public school at the corner of Mill and Bridge streets, against the strenuous opposition of the priest and the family, with the exception of his father. Notwithstanding threats and hindrances, he prevailed, and attended there for about three years. At fifteen he began to learn the trade of bricklayer and plasterer with William Harlow, of Poughkeepsie, who was then building the print works at Haverstraw. So capable was the young apprentice that he was soon made time-keeper and paymaster, having at times 150 bricklayers, and from seventy-five to one hundred other laborers to keep accounts for, and handling hundreds of thousands of dollars without the loss of a cent. Later he went to New York City with his employer, and worked for the post office, the Jefferson market police station, the Garner warehouse at the corner of Ja and Hudson streets, and other large buildings. After three or four years there he returned to Poughkeepsie, and worked on the steamship for William Sayer. In 1881 he started in the business of wholesaling ale, handling the goods of T. D. Coleman, of Albany, and Kennerly & Murphy, of Troy. On April 1, 1884, he rented the property at the corner of Main and Clover streets, and established his present business, which includes the bottling of Pilsener beer and a wholesale business in ale. He has built up a large trade, one of the best in that line, extending throughout the county and for some distance up and down the river, and he makes a specialty of handling the best goods, the Anheuser Busch and Ballentine Lager, and several brands of fine ale. His property on North Clover street, the John Vail place, is one of the finest in the city. The secret of his success may be found in his close attention to business, and fair dealing with customers.

On September 7, 1884, he married Miss Catherine Hillery, of Poughkeepsie. They have no children. Mrs. Diamond's parents were natives of Ireland, and her father died there in 1862; her mother died in Poughkeepsie in 1879. Mr. Diamond has always been interested in public affairs. On State and National issues he is a Democrat, but in local politics he votes independently. He belongs to Triumph Lodge, K. of P., the Young America Hose Co., the Poughkeepsie Zither Club, and is a leading member of St. Peter's Catholic Church.

WILLIAM J. CARPENTER, a retired merchant of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in New York City, December 10, 1828, a son of Emory and Jane Ann (DuBois) Carpenter. [A genealogical sketch of the Carpenter family will be found in the biography of J. Du Bois Carpenter elsewhere.]

Our subject attended school in an old stone school house until he was fifteen years old, and then came to Poughkeepsie, where he went to the Smith Institute for a year, at the end of that time entering his uncle's store at No. 271 Main street, as clerk, the firm name being L. & J. G. Carpenter, grocers. There Mr. Carpenter clerked until the spring of 1849, when he joined a company going to California. They went via Cape Horn, and consumed five and one-half months in making the trip. In the spring of 1850 Mr. Carpenter returned to Poughkeepsie, and went into the grocery store of his uncle at No. 320 Main street, where he remained some three years, and then he and his brother, J. Du Bois, took the business and conducted it under the name of Carpenter & Bro. After eight years they sold out and engaged in the boating business, running a boat from New Paltz Landing to New York City. This they continued for one year, and then, in 1863, our subject again went into partnership with his brother (J. Du Bois) at the corner of Academy and Main streets, remaining there, under the firm name of Carpenter & Bro., until 1887, when our subject bought a beautiful home on Southeast avenue, and is now living a retired life.

On September 5, 1854, Mr. Carpenter was united in marriage with Miss Sarah E. Boerum, a native of Poughkeepsie and a daughter of David Boerum, the first merchant tailor who did business in Poughkeepsie. Four children came of this union: Amelia, born June 4, 1855, died June 1, 1863; Fred White, a druggist in New York City, born February 16, 1857; Jennie Boerum, born February 4, 1863, married Myron H. Barlow, a furniture dealer of Poughkeepsie; and Hattie W., born April 13, 1872, is unmarried. Of these, Fred W. married Malvina Finch June 3, 1885, and they have three children: William Frederick, Gerald Finch and Margaret. Jennie B. was married, March 1, 1888, to Myron H. Barlow. Mrs. Sarah E. Carpenter died April 18, 1875, and for his second wife our subject married, September 26, 1876, Miss Jane E. Flagler, who was born in the town of Pleasant Valley, a daughter of Isaac Flagler. No children have been born of this marriage. In politics Mr. Carpenter is a Republican, having previously been a Whig. He and his wife have been connected with the First Congregational Church for twenty-five years, and he has been identified with the business interests of Poughkeepsie for half a century. He is enterprising, progressive and highly esteemed by his fellow citizens. In September, 1895, he was stricken with paralysis, and is now (1897) in very feeble health and mostly confined to the house.

D W. ROGERS (deceased) was an enterprising and reliable agriculturist of the town of East Fishkill. These qualities, in connection with his natural industry and perseverance, made him, wherever known, an object of uniform regard. His birth occurred on July 15, 1852, on the farm in the town of East Fishkill, where his widow still resides, and where his great-grandfather, Micah Rogers, located in 1762, at that time purchasing 100 acres. On coming from Holland, the latter made his first home in the town of Beekman, but the greater part of his life was spent upon that farm, where his death occurred. The grandfather of our subject, who also bore the name of Micah Rogers, was there born and throughout life engaged in farming. He wedded Margaret Workman, by whom he had three sons: James W., who was a farmer in this county; Alexander, who carried on agricultural pursuits in the town of East Fishkill and Charles H., the father of our subject.

Upon the old homestead in East Fishkill town, April 9, 1822, Charles H. Rogers was born, grew to manhood, and as a companion on life's journey chose Sarah J. Parmalee. They began their domestic life upon that farm, at there spent their remaining days, the father dying April 16, 1876, and the mother on March 1, 1872. They were sincere and earnest Christians, members of the Reformed Dutch Church. Four children were born to the Margaret, deceased; D. W., of this sketch; Mary P., deceased; and Herbert, a resident of the town of East Fishkill.

The subject of this review was reared in the usual manner of farmer boys, and in early life learned the blacksmith's trade; but owing to his father's ill health, he gave up that pursuit and returned to the home farm, to the cultivation and improvement of which he ever afterward devoted his attention.

On March 22, 1877, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Rogers and Miss Mary Van Nostrand, who was born in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, but came to East Fishkill when quite young. The only child born of their union, Charles H., died in infancy. The parents of Mrs. Rogers, Joseph H. and Mary E. (Berry) Van Nostrand, were both natives of East Fishkill town, and their family were two children, the son being FRANCIS S., a postal clerk on the Hudson River railroad. The father, who was a wagon-maker by trade, died February 29, 1868, while the mother departed this life April 1, 1868. The former was the only child of George and Levina (Gildersleeve) Van Nostrand. The grandfather of Mrs. Rogers was also a wagon-maker, and a native of East Fishkill. There her great-grandfather, Joseph Van Nostrand, was born, and, after his marriage with Elizabeth Mead, located upon a farm, where he reared his six children—George, Phoebe A., Helen M., James, Sarah, and Catherine. The father of Joseph, Sr., was George Van Nostrand, who came from Holland to New World, and located in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, at a very early period in its history. His wife bore the maiden name of Hiltje Dorland. On the maternal side, Mrs. Rogers is also of Holland origin. Her grandfather, Francis Berry, was a native of East Fishkill, where throughout his active life he followed farming, as did also his father, Nicholas Berry. The former wedded Mary Ketcham, of the same township.

Mr. Rogers continued the operation of the old homestead farm up to the time of his death, which occurred March 24, 1880, and his widow has since had its management. It is an excellent place of 152 acres, which includes the original tract of one hundred acres. Politically, Mr. Rogers was a Democrat, while religiously he belonged to the Reformed Dutch church, of which his widow is also a consistent member. He contributed his full quota toward enterprises having for their object the general welfare of the community, and was one of its most highly respected citizens. His widow, so has the love and confidence of those who know her.

DAVID B. WARD, M. D., a prominent physician of Poughkeepsie, and one of the most able and progressive members of his profession, was born in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, March 13, 1853, the son of Jason Ward, now a resident at No. 254 Church street, Poughkeepsie.

Dr. Ward possesses unusual natural qualifications for his chosen calling, and his abilities were developed by thorough intellectual training in youth. He prepared for college at the Review Military Academy, and after three years at Dartmouth College, where he completed the junior year, he entered Hamilton College, and was graduated from the classical course in 1873 with the degree of A. B. With Dr. Parker, of Poughkeepsie, as preceptor, he then began the study of medicine, and a year later became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, completing his studies with the class of 1876. On graduating, in due course of time, he engaged in practice in Wheeling, W. Va., and remained there three years; but in 1879 he moved to Poughkeepsie, where he has built up an extensive general practice. He has the true scientific spirit, and keeps fully informed on every advance in professional research, being himself a original investigator. His work in microscopy is especially worthy of note; he holds a high rank in the profession not only with the public but among his medical brethren, and he is a leading member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, and of the city board of health.

The Doctor is a believer in the principles of the Republican party, but has never taken an active interest in political affairs. He was City Physician from 1880 to 1888, and has given his influence at all times to measures for sanitary improvement. He belongs to the Amrita Club, and to the I. O. O. F., Fall-kill Lodge. He has never married.

CHARLES C. MORE, a retired merchant and real-estate dealer, was born in the town of Blenheim, Schoharie Co., N. Y., September 19, 1828. The name of More first appears about the third century in the northern part of Ireland, and has been variously spelled Moore, Moir, Moor and More, but the last is the proper spelling, Carber Riabha More being the Father of the first chieftains and Kings of Scotland. The Mores probably came first from Norway or Sweden, in Scandinavia. They were Presbyterians and, later, Re-formers.

John More, the great-grandfather of our subject, came to this country and located in Delaware county, N. Y., where he followed the occupation of farming until the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, in which he enlisted and served. After its close he returned to his farm. He was an educated man, taught school gratuitously, was justice of the peace, legal adviser, and drew up many legal documents that are still in existence. He married Betty Taylor, daughter of Robert Taylor and Jean Innis. Robert More, the grandfather, was born at Rothiemurchus, Inverness-shire, Scotland, July 8, 1772, and followed agriculture exclusively. He married Susanna, a daughter of David Fellows, and they reared a family of nine children. Two of Robert's brothers, John T. and Jonas, were members of the New York State Legislature.

Alexander More, father of our subject, was the fourth child, and was born at Roxbury, Delaware Co., N. Y., September 14, 1799. He grew up on a farm, and was the first man to introduce the method of manufacturing butter in Delaware county. He dealt largely in that commodity, buying and selling it in New York City, retiring after several years of successful business. He married Miss Sarah Church, who was born at Salem, Washington Co., N. Y., January 8, 1802, and they moved to Rondout, where he died September 16, 1872, and his wife on April 9, 1862. Alexander was a Democrat in politics, was elected supervisor of his town, and was ensign in the State militia.

Charles C. More, our subject, lived in Schoharie county but a short time, being moved, at the age of three years, to Roxbury, where he grew up and attended the schools and academy. In 1850 he went to Rondout (now Kingston), where he engaged in general merchandising. After selling his interests there he went to Moline, Ill., where he stayed for a few years, manufacturing lumber. In 1876 Mr. More came to Poughkeepsie, where he has since resided. He is owner of many large farms, and, as he says, "runs them by proxy."

On June 13, 1850, Mr. More married Miss Sarah C. LaFevre, who was born at Roxbury, Delaware county, March 4, 1828, and is a daughter of Daniel and Henrietta LaFevre, the former of whom was a tanner by occupation, and descended from persecuted Huguenots, of France, who came to America and settled in Kingston, N. Y. Mr. More is a Republican, but has never held office. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity, and with his wife belongs to the Reformed Church, to which he is a liberal contributor. He is a public-spirited man, and believes in the education of the masses.

Ira C. Church, father of Mrs. Alexander More, was born in Massachusetts, and was a manufacturer of edge tools in Washington and Delaware counties. He married Miss Abigail Burnham, and reared a family of several children, Mrs. More being the only daughter. The Church family is of English extraction.

WILLIAM ANTHONY WHITE, superintendent of the Lee estate, in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, was born at St. Heliers, in the island of Jersey (Channel Islands), May 29, 1840, and on the paternal side is of French descent, while the maternal ancestry were English. His grandfather, Charles Henry White, belonged to one of the old families of Jersey. He was a "warrant officer" in the English navy, and head sailmaker on a man-of-war.

Henry Charles White, the father of our subject, was also born in Jersey, served as gardener for Lord Normandy over ten years; later served as gardener thirty years for Alfred George, Esq., Downside, near Bristol, England; he wedded Mary Barrett, daughter of Rev. Robert Barrett, a clergyman of the Church of England at Withycombe, a small hamlet in Dorsetshire, England. Four children came to bless this union: Aramant, wife of Robert Smith, carpenter and builder Westbury-on-Trym, England; Henry, who was a commissioned officer in the English navy, and was killed at the age of twenty-two years; William A. is the next in order of birth; and Charles Henry, who was born after his brother was killed, learned the trade of a marble mason in Bristol, England, and worked as a boss farmer in England and America, and died February 22, 1896. The father departed this life on February 18, 1879; the mother, Mary (Barrett) White, departed this life December 30, 1883.

William A. White learned the profession of gardener and florist in England, and became gardener for Walter Daubney, Esq., Cote House, Durham Down, near Bristol, England, with whom he remained three years, and during the following two and one-half years he filled the same position with Richard Bassett, Esq., of Bonveston, South Wales, who was commissioner of public works and railroads. Removing to Exeter, Devonshire, England, Mr. White was employed as head gardener by William Cuthbertson, J., over three years.

In February, 1871, he arrived in America and coming to Staatsburgh, Dutchess county, June 8, the same year, was appointed gardener and superintendent of the estate of the late Lawrence Lee, since which time he has filled that position to the satisfaction of all concerned. He is also present owner of the Staatsburgh Greenhouses, and with his son, Samuel William White, is engaged in the culture of the plants, carnations, etc. The plant consists of four houses, 206x20; one large connecting house 30x130; propagating house; and large boiler house fitted with two large cylinder boilers. The houses are fitted with hot-water heating, patented by William A. White, who is also inventor of and patentee of the Acme Water Boilers used on the estates of Archibald Rogers and Ogden Mills, Esquires, and a number of other large estates. William A. White is also the inventor of White's Garden Trellis and a number of other useful appliances; and inventor of an automatic hot-water car-heater, burglar-proof letter-box, etc. He has written many able articles for horticultural papers, and thoroughly understands his work in all departments.

Wm a White

Mr. White was married in November, 1861, to Hester Millard, daughter of Samuel Millard, of Hutton, near Weston-super-Mare, Somersetshire, England, and they have two children: Edith Annie, wife of Jacob Anderson, of Franklin, La., and Samuel William, who wedded Ada Johnson, granddaughter of the late John Bold, of Vineland, N. J., and is now superintending the Staatsburgh Greenhouses with his father.

Politically, Mr. White is an ardent Democrat; socially, he is a member of Rhinebeck Lodge No. 432, F. & A. M. He is a man of great perseverance and industry, and has succeeded in accumulating some property in Vineland, N. J., and at Staatsburgh, N. Y. His family attend the Episcopal Church.

ADAM A. STREVER, proprietor of one of the best farms of the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, comprising 235 acres of improved land, is numbered among the honored residents and most substantial agriculturists of Dutchess county. He has been particularly wise in his investments, and possesses excellent business capacity, making the most of his opportunities. He is one of the most public-spirited and progressive of men, giving his aid to all worthy enterprises for the benefit of his town and county.

Sylvester Strever, the father of our subject, was born in 1822, in the town of Ancram, Columbia county, N. Y., and was but a boy when brought to the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county. He has always engaged in farming, operating his father's place until he had reached the age of twenty-eight; but for forty-three years he has made his home upon a farm of 175 acres at Mt. Ross. He has been more prosperous in his undertakings than the majority of his neighbors, and has accumulated a handsome property, owning another farm in addition to the one on which he lives. He is a man of the strictest integrity, and was a member of the Reformed Dutch Church of Gallatin, Columbia county, and has always been very active in Church matters. Politically he affiliates with the Democratic party.

Mr. Strever was united in marriage with Phoebe Sheldon, and after her death wedded Matilda Sheldon, who died in August, 1895. He became the father of eight children, namely: Clarissa, now the widow of the late Dr. C. E. Cole; Adam A.; Samuel J.; Monroe, a merchant of New York City; Sheldon P., who is located in the southern part of the town of Pine Plains; Lewis, who conducts a store for John Rudd; and Grant and Frank at home.

Our subject received a good education in the district schools at Mt. Ross, and for one year, after laying aside his text-books, aided his father in the labor on the home farm. For four years he then engaged in the cultivation of his grandmother's farm for his father, and for the following two years operated it on his own account. The next year was passed upon his father's farm, after which he went to Illinois, where he remained some six months. On his return he purchased the Nancy Smith farm, which he conducted four years, and at the end of that time bought the old Hiserodt homestead, where he has now lived for eleven years. On March 18, 1880, he married Miss Esther M. Hiserodt. They attend the Presbyterian Church, and in politics Mr. Strever is identified with the Democratic party. He has capably filled several local offices, including that of assessor, in which he served six years.

The first of the Hiserodt family to locate in Dutchess county was John Hiserodt. His son, Hendrick Hiserodt, was the father of Henry I. Hiserodt, the grandfather of Mrs. Strever. Henry I. was one of the leading citizens and wealthy farmers of the county, owning at one time about 800 acres. He married Miss Esther Steckles, by whom he had four children—three sons and one daughter: Bryant H., father of Mrs. Strever; Harmon; Ward, a prominent citizen of New York City; and Esther. After the death of his first wife he wedded Rebecca Schultz, and to them were born the following children: Jane, Caroline, Francis, Christopher, Albert, Sanford and Backus. Bryant H. Hiserodt was born July 13, 1814, in the house in which Mr. and Mrs. Strever now occupy, and with the exception of two years he made his home there during his entire life. He was joined in wedlock with Lavinia C. Hoffman, daughter of Henry Hoffman, and they became the parents of two children: Henry Hoffman, of Millerton, N. Y.; and Esther M., wife of our subject. On June 1, 1856, the father was called to his final rest, and January 2, 1894, the mother followed him to the unknown land.

WILLET J. MARSHALL is an enterprising, wide-awake young business man of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, where, on Garden street, he is successfully conducting a meat market. His birthplace was Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y., where, on December 16, 1871, he first opened his eyes to the light. His father, David Marshall, was a native of Dutchess county, his parents, Hiram and Hannah (Haight) Marshall, there living upon a farm, and was the youngest in their family of seven children, the others being Susan, who married William Finch, an undertaker of Hyde Park, N. Y.; Mary C., wife of John Van Derwater, a farmer of East Park, Dutchess county; Jane, who wedded Jacob DeGroof, an agriculturist of Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county; Ederette, wife of Jerome Myers, a mason of Hyde Park; Willet, a dealer in smoked meats at Newburgh, Orange county, and Henry, a butcher of that place, and the senior member of the firm of Henry Marshall & Sons. The Marshall family is of English ancestry, and Quakers in religious belief. The grandfather continued his farming operations until his death, and was one of the highly-esteemed citizens of the county. His wife, who is still living, has now reached the age of eighty-six years.

The early life, of David Marshall was passed upon a farm in Dutchess county, and on reaching man's estate he was united in marriage with Miss Mary V. Briggs, a native of the same county, and a daughter of William Briggs, also of English descent. To this worthy couple were born two children—Hannah, deceased wife of J. M. Osborn, and Willet J., of this sketch. The parents located at Middletown, N. Y., where the father carried on the butcher's business for some time, and then went to Denver, Colo., where he was similarly employed. Returning to New York, he became owner of three markets in Yonkers, and on disposing of the same bought a farm in Hyde Park township, Dutchess county, to the cultivation of which he has devoted his time for three years. Finally he removed to Poughkeepsie, where he engaged in the butchering business until 1895, since which time he has lived retired, enjoying the fruits of his former toil. He and his wife are members of the Episcopal Church, and their circle of friends is only limited by their circle of acquaintances.

Willet J. Marshall was quite small when his parents removed to Denver, and most of his boyhood was passed at Poughkeepsie, where he attended the Warring Military School, and later served six years as bookkeeper and cashier in his father's market. Going to New York City, in 1892, he formed a partnership with W. H. Baker in the commission business at No. 337 Washington street; but at the end of a year he returned to Poughkeepsie, where he has since conducted his present market. An important event in his life was his marriage with Miss Julia A. Rooney, which was celebrated in 1889. She is a native of England and a daughter of John Rooney, a cabinet-maker. Three children grace this union—David B., Mary C. and John R. Politically Mr. Marshall affiliates with the Republican party, giving full adherence to the principles and doctrines of its platform, and is a supporter of all interests intended to benefit the city in which he resides.

JOHNSCHWARTZ. Among the prominent citizens of German birth in the city of Poughkeepsie, none holds a higher place in the estimation of the community than the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch. He is extensively engaged in the tobacco business, and has an enviable reputation for integrity and fair dealing, as well as for thrift and enterprise.

Mr. Schwartz was born in Bavaria, Germany, September 9, 1839. His father, John Schwartz, died when our subject was a small child, and when he was ten years of age he came with his mother to America, landing in New York City, where the mother had a married sister living, and here they lived for one year. In January, 1850, the entire family came to Poughkeepsie, and he entered school for a short time. He soon became an apprentice to learn the cigar business with George M. Welker, with whom he remained six or seven years, and on May 1, 1864, went into the tobacco business for himself at No. 3 Main street. He made a success of this enterprise, and in 1879 he purchased the store No. 313 Main street, where he has carried his business ever since. Although having some retail trade, he is principally engaged wholesaling, and ships his goods to all points in New York as well as to many other States. His business is the largest of its kind in the county.

On May 6, 1860, Mr. Schwartz was married to Miss Matilda W. Bayer, a native of Troy, N. Y., whose father, Joseph Bayer, was born in Germany, but subsequently came to America. Of this union four sons have been born: Frank J., Charles G., Edward T. and Albert E. Frank is a druggist in Poughkeepsie, and the other sons are in business with their father, having been admitted to partnership in February, 1889. All are intelligent, enterprising young men.

Mr. Schwartz is a Republican, but has ever taken an active interest in political affairs, and in local elections supports the best men irrespective of party. He has been very successful financially, the result of his own exertions, as he began life a poor boy and has steadily worked his way up to his present position as one of the leading business men of Poughkeepsie.

CHARLES HOAG SMITH, who was called "the farmer" from this earth in the midst of his usefulness, was a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Stanford, April 1, 1816, and is remembered by the people of this section as one of its most worthy and influential citizens. His grandfather, Stephen Smith, was an early settler of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and by occupation he was a farmer. In his family were six children, namely: Rufus; David; Daniel; Harris; Martin; and Abbie, who became the wife of Solomon Frost.

Harris Smith, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Clinton, but spent the greater portion of his life in the town of Stanford. In 1855 he removed to Washington town, and the following year purchased the farm on which his son Henry and daughter Julia A. now reside. As a farmer he was quite successful, and was a prominent and representative citizen. He married Anna Hoag, by whom he had five children: Charles and Stephen (twins), Henry Hoag, Jacob and Julia.

Mrs. Smith was the daughter of Charles Hoag. Her paternal grandparents were John and Mercy Hoag, the former born October 5, 1734, and the latter March 16, 1735. They were married February 22, 1759, and became the parents of nine children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: James H., January 10, 1760; Abel H., December 12, 1761; Philip H., December 6, 1764; Lucy, March 17, 1767; Amy H., July 2, 1769; Charles H., December 25, 1771; Ruth H., April 22, 1775; Tripp H., March 26, 1778; and Mary H., May 23, 1782. The mother of this family died in 1807, at the age of sixty-nine years, and the father October 4, 1811.

On November 21, 1793, Charles Hoag was married to Betsey Denton, who was born April 5, 1772, and to them were born eight children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Anna Hoag, October 2, 1794; John H., September 27, 1797; James, February 14, 1799; Henry, May 3, 1801; Phoebe, August 13, 1805; Ezra, December 11, 1807; Benjamin, November 23, 1810; Deborah H., October 18, 1812; and Mary, February 25, 1815. The father of this family was a highly educated man, and for many years was principal of the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, later moving to the town of Pine Plains, and conducted a private school at Bethel.

Mr. Smith, whose name introduces this sketch, was an agriculturist, and spent most of his life upon a farm in about the center of the town of Stanford. He was a good, substantial citizen, who took a warm interest in enterprises calculated to build up his town, was a man of sound judgment, and his untimely death, at the age of thirty-eight years, was deeply mourned throughout the community. In 1840 he was married to Miss Jane A. Peck, who was born November 6, 1819, and they became the parents of two children: Albert, born in 1841, was a patriotic young man, and was one of the first in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, to enlist in the Union army during the Rebellion, becoming a member of the 44th N. Y. V. I. He died December 6, 1862, of typhoid pneumonia, while in the service; Frances, born in 1843, is at home.

Henry Peck, the father of Mrs. Smith, was born April 2, 1791, and the early part of his life was passed in the town of Milan, but he later became a resident of the town of Stanford. By occupation he was both a farmer and merchant. He was the son of Loring Peck, who was born January 19, 1744, and made his home at Bristol, R. I. He was a zealous patriot and became a colonel in the Continental army in the war of the Revolution.

For many years he later served as a member of the State Legislature. He was a son of Jonathan Peck, who was born at Bristol, R. I., September 12, 1698, and his father, who also bore the name of Jonathan, was born November 5, 1666. The latter was a son of Nicholas Peck, who was born April 9, 1630.

The family of which Mrs. Smith is a member numbered five children, four of whom grew to adult age, namely: George, born April 8, 1813, was one of the leading and successful medical practitioners of the town of Stanford; Richard, born May 5, 1815, was a prominent attorney at law of Pine Plains for forty years; Jane A., born November 6, 1819, is the widow of our subject; and Alfred, born January 1, 1822, died in the West.

ORVILLE L. DAVIS, one of the most successful agriculturists of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, is also among the best known, his pleasant home near Clinton Hollow being a favorite resort for summer tourists who wish to enjoy the charms of a genuine country life. He is a native of the town of Washington, where he attended the district school at Shady Dell, and early became familiar with the details of farm work from the thorough, but not always pleasant, teachings of experience.

Seth Lawton, our subject's grandfather, was born in Rhode Island, in 1782, and when a lad of ten summers was brought to Dutchess county, where he passed the rest of his life, dying at an advanced age, in 1869. Henry D. Davis, father of Orville L., was born in Kinderhook, Columbia county, December 25, 1798, and was married, November 27, 1826, to Jane Ann Lawton, daughter of Seth Lawton, of the town of Washington. After engaging in shoemaking and farming in Columbia county he came to Washington town for a time; but, in 1836, he moved to Fort Madison, Iowa, where he died, September 22, 1838, when our subject was eight years old. The widowed mother then returned to her old home in the town of Washington, with her family, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Esther, August 25, 1828; Orville L., November 5, 1830; Betsey, February 25, 1833, died August 5, 1838; William, February 10, 1835, died March 6, 1868; and Seth, April 21, 1837, died September 21, 1838. The mother, who was born May 1, 1809, survived her husband many years, dying May 11, 1886.

Our subject, who has always been a farmer worked upon his grandfather's estate until after he was of age, and later cultivated his inheritance of 116 acres. He served in the army some eighteen months during the Civil war, in Company B, 128th N. Y. V. I. On March 24, 1875, he was married, in the town of Washington, to Maria Eighmey, daughter of James Eighmey, a lifelong resident of the town of Unionvale. He and his wife, Mary Ann Justus, had three daughters: Jane (now Mrs. Jacob Cambran), of Stanford; Maria (Mrs. Davis); and Anna Eliza (Mrs. James Cambran of Milan. After his marriage Mr. Davis moved into a house which he had built upon his estate, where he lived until the spring of 1887, when he sold the property and purchased his present fine farm in the town of Clinton. Her a limited number of summer visitors—about twenty in number—are entertained each year the attractions of the place always bringing a that can be accommodated.

Mr. Davis is a Democrat in political faith in religion he and his wife are prominent members of the Christian Church at Schultsville and are interested in all movements tending to the welfare of the community. They have one son, Henry Thorne Davis.

ROBERT LIVINGSTON MASSONNEAU, president of the First National Bank of Red Hook, Dutchess county, is a worthy representative of an ancestry which has long been prominent in the history of this region. His grandfather, Claudius Germain Massonneau, native of Angouleme, France, left that country at the outbreak of the Revolution, with his twin brother Pierre, both being then in early manhood. They went to San Domingo, but upon the insurrection of the negroes of the island, abandoned their plantation and fled to the United States. After a short stay in New York City they settled, in 1790, in Red Hook, engaging in mercantile enterprise. He married Catherine Gertrude Livingston de Brissac, daughter of Robert Gilbert Livingston, an widow of M. de Brissac. They had three children: Robert Claudius, Edward and Catherine.

Robert C. Massonneau, the father of our subject, was born May 3, 1797, in Red Hook and after enjoying such educational advan ages as the schools of Red Hook then afforded, was sent to the Claverack Academy. At the age of sixteen he began to assist his father in the village store, and soon after had control of the whole business, his father retiring to his farm, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in 1846, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. Robert C. added to his mercantile work the manufacture of cigars and tobacco, which venture proved highly successful from its inception. He married, in 1824, Miss Elizabeth Waldorf, daughter of John Waldorf, a leading citizen of Red Hook, and reared a family of children whose names are as follows: Robert Livingston (our subject), born October 1, 1825; Catherine Elizabeth (now widow of David Sparks); Peter Neilson; Charles Waldorf; Edward Francis; and Mary Alice (now Mrs. George B. Curtis).

MRS. MARIA DAVIS.

ORVILLE L. DAVIS.

Robert L. Massonneau attended the schools of his native place, entering while young his father's store as clerk, serving in that capacity a number of years. On October 27, 1859, he married Emma Clark Strobel, who was born December 19, 1859, in New York City. She was a daughter of Rev. William D. Strobel, D. D., at that time pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church of Red Hook. Five children were born of this union: Robert Livingston, Jr.; William Strobel; Edward Philip; Eliza Franklin and Emma Engs. In 1852 our subject engaged in the tobacco business, established by his father, continuing therein until 1867, when he sold out his interest. His gained business talent and sound judgment have made him a recognized force in business circles. On the organization of the First National Bank of Red Hook, in 1865, he was chosen director and afterward vice-president. On the death of the president, William Chamberlain, he was elected to that position, which he has since filled with distinguished ability. His political preferences he was originally a Democrat, but since the formation of the party has been a Republican.

Mrs. Massonneau, wife of our subject, was born in New York City, where her father at the time was pastor of St. James Lutheran Church. He was born May 17, 1808, at Charleston, S. C., and married Abby Anna Engs, who was born in New York City September 17, 1815. They had seven children, four of whom are yet living, Mrs. Massonneau being the third in order of birth. Her father died December 6, 1884, in Rhinebeck, N. Y., and, with his wife and three children, is buried in the cemetery at Red Hook. John Strobel, great-grandfather of Mrs. Massonneau, owned a large tannery in Charleston, S. C., about the middle of the eighteenth century, serving in the war of the Revolution as a captain in the "German Fusileers," the famed regiment of South Carolina. Her great-grandfather, Col. Jonas Beard, served also in the Revolution.

MERITT HUMESTON, a prominent business man of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, the senior member of the firm of Humeston & Barrett, belongs to a family which has been engaged in the manufacture of wagons in Dutchess county for three generations. His grandfather, Eli Humeston, was born in Waterbury, Conn., in 1795, and after securing an education in the local schools, became a wagonmaker and millwright, and followed those trades throughout his active life. After his removal to Dover he constructed the first milling plant ever built there. He married, and had the following children: George E., our subject's father; James, who married (first) Miss Perry, and (second) Miss Lydia Underhill; Joseph, who married Miss Vandusen; Hannah, the wife of Jacob Palmer; Harriet, who married George Basset; and Edward, who is mentioned below.

George E. Humeston was born in Dutchess county in 1806, and learned the trade of his father during his early years. Later he engaged in it on his own account, and a few years before his death he established a shop at Dover Plains. His wife was Elizabeth Weller, daughter of Jonathan Weller, a prominent citizen of the town of Dover, and they had ten children: Catherine, Mrs. Thomas F. Watson; George, who died at the age of twenty-two; John, who married Ann Eliza Stage; William, who married (first) Elizabeth Vincent, and (second) Harriet Vincent; David L., who married Lavina Howard; Meritt, our subject; Charles, who married Abbie Dennis; Harriet and Sarah, who died in infancy, and one whose stay upon earth was so brief that no name was bestowed.

Meritt Humeston was born in 1842 in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and was educated in Dover Plains. At the age of fifteen he began to work at the blacksmith's trade, and continued until 1862, when he enlisted at Hudson, in Company B, 128th N. Y.

V. I. His first battle was at Port Hudson, on the Mississippi, May 27, 1863, and among other important engagements in which he took part were those of Winchester, Va., Fisher's Hill, Va., Cedar Creek and Cane River Bluff. His regiment was mustered out of the United States service at Savannah, July 15, 1865, and ten days later was discharged from the State service at Albany. On returning home Mr. Humeston established himself in business in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, and later spent four years at his trade in Breenhaven, four in Stormville, and two in Hopewell, and in 1887 he opened the blacksmith and wagon shop at Dover Plains, which he has ever since conducted in partnership with John R. Barrett, under the firm name of Humeston & Barrett. With his war record it will readily be inferred that Mr. Humeston is interested in the G. A. R.; he formerly belonged to Ketcham Post No. 661, and is now a member of C. S. Cowles Post No. 540, of Dover Plains. He has taken an active part in local politics, serving as constable in the town of Beekman, and as overseer of the poor in the town of Dover. On September 16, 1865, he was married to Miss Sarah Lee, a native of Fishkill, born in 1841, and they have had four children: Annie, Mrs. Ellsworth Shultis; Harriet, who died in infancy; and Charles and George, who are at home. Mr. and Mrs. Shultis have three children: George, born in 1888; Frederick, in 1889, and Maude, in 1892.

Mrs. Humeston's ancestors were early settlers in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county. Her grandfather, Jonathan Lee, was born there, and, after profiting by the advantages afforded by the district schools, he engaged in wagon making. He married Miss Mary Ann Slocum, and had twelve children, all of whom lived to adult age. Their names, with those of their respective partners in marriage, are as follows: Harry, married Amelia Griffin; Harriet, James Smith; Abraham, Maria Layne; Martin, Sallie Briggs; George, Mary A. Howe; Alonzo, Zillie Brewer; Eliza, James Howe; Harvey, Marie Van-Haultz; Lucretia, John Brewer; William, Phoebe J. Ferris; Charles, Jane Traverse, and Ashel, Nancy Brown. Ashel Lee, Mrs. Humeston's father, was born at Harpersfield, in 1806, and attended the common schools there. He learned the shoemaker's trade but followed farming as an occupation. His wife was a daughter of Samuel Brown. They had four children: James, who married Cather Dingee; Mary Ann, who died in infancy; Sarah J., Mrs. Humeston; and Montraville, who was born in 1844, and died in Texas during the while in the service of the government.

Edward Humeston, son of Eli, was born 1767, in the town of Washington, Dutch county, and was educated there. He learned the trade of wagon making, and worked at that during his active life. In local affairs he was quite prominent, holding some minor town offices. He married Miss Elizabeth Weller, daughter of Jonathan Weller, a farmer of Amenia, and had eleven children: Catherine, Mrs. Thomas F. Watts; George, who is married; John, who married Miss Stage; William, who married Elizabeth Austin; David, who married Levina Howard; Sarah A., who died young; Merritt, who married Sarah L. Charles, mentioned below; Harriet, who died in childhood; Henry, who was twice married, first to a Miss Rodgers, and, second, to a Miss Stens; and one child died in infancy unnamed.

Charles Humeston was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, in 1844, and was educated in Dover Plains. He learned the shoemaker's trade in 1858, and worked at that a short time; then, in 1859, began working at the carriage-making trade, continuing until 1862. In the latter year he enlisted in Company B, 128th N. Y. V. I. as a private but was mustered in as a sergeant, and held that commission throughout the war. He served under the command of Col. David S. Cowles and was with him in many engagements, among which were the following: Port Hudson, May 27, 1863, and June 14, 1863; Alexandria, Cane River, Monett Bluff, and Marksville, Berryville, Va., September 3, 1864; Winchester, September 19, 1864; Fisher's Hill, September 21, 1864; Mount Jackson, September 23, 1864, and Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864. His command participated in two other notable skirmishes, under Gen. N. P. Banks. At that time it served with Gen. Phil Sheridan. His regiment was mustered out of the United States service at Savannah, Ga., July 12, 1865, and from the State service at Albany July 16, 1865. In 1870 Mr. Humeston married Miss Abbie Dennis, and had seven children: Harry E., Mrs. Frank Talladay; Emma, Mrs. Arthur Kelley; and Joseph, George, Frederick, Bessie and John, who are not married. Mr. Humeston is a descendant of an old family from the town of Dover, and her grandfather, the mon Dennis, was born there and passed his life in that locality, following agricultural pursuits. He married, and had five children: Thomas, Joseph, Henry, one sister (name not known), and Reuben, Mrs. Humeston's father, who was born in the town of Dover and educated in the common schools of that vicinity. He was engaged as a farmer throughout his active years. His wife, Miss Mary Ann Lane, was a daughter of Daniel Lane, of Ballsbridge, Conn. They had the following children: Almira, Mrs. Oliver Potter; Solomon, who married Abbie Cooper; Sarah, Mrs. David Squires; Pollie, Mrs. Albert Flagler; Mary, Mrs. Henry White; Daniel, who is not married; Amy, Mrs. Charles Millard; Reuben, who has not married; Abbie, Mrs. Humeston; Joseph, who married Rebecca Mullen; George, who married Lena Bauer, and one who died in infancy.

BENJAMIN H. RUSSELL has for more than half a century resided in the town of Pleasant Valley, and to-day is living retired, enjoying the fruits of a well-spent life. He was born in the town of Fishkill, December 4, 1816, and is a son of William Russell, a native of Putnam county, N. Y. The grandfather, John Russell, was also a native of that county, and was descended from English ancestry. Upon his marriage he located upon a farm in Putnam county and reared a family of five children, namely: Abijah, Lee, Robert and David, all of whom became farmers of that locality, and William, father of our subject. The agricultural pursuits of the grandfather were interrupted by his service in the Revolutionary war, for when the Colonies attempted to obtain release from the yoke of British oppression, he joined the Colonial troops and valiantly aided in that struggle for independence. The religious views of the family have generally been in accordance with the doctrine of the Baptist Church.

William Russell was reared on the old family homestead, and as a companion and helpmeet on life's journey chose Theodosia Townsend, also a native of Putnam county, and a daughter of Elijah Townsend, who in that locality followed farming. He was descended from English ancestry, but when the war of the Revolution broke out he manifested his loyalty to the Colonies by his opposition to the mother country, and in the service rose to the rank of general.

Shortly after their marriage, William Russell and his wife located on a farm in the town of Fishkill, where they spent their remaining days. They were Baptists in religious belief, and in his political proclivities Mr. Russell was a Republican. They had eight children: James, who was a farmer of the town of Fishkill; Anna, deceased; Austin and John, who were also farmers of Fishkill; Elijah, who carried on that pursuit in Dutchess county for some years, and is now living at Matteawan; William, deceased, who was a farmer of the town of Fishkill; and Elizabeth, who was married, and lived in the town of Dover, and both she and her husband are now dead.

Our subject was sixth in order of birth, and he spent his boyhood days on the parental farmstead, aiding in the labors of the field through the summer months, while his winters were mostly spent in attendance in the district schools of the neighborhood. On attaining his majority he began working as a farm hand for others, and later he became owner of a farm of his own, which he cultivated for many years. He still owns 150 acres of rich and arable land, and also had ninety acres which he gave to his son. He placed upon his farm many excellent improvements in the shape of buildings and machinery, and transformed his land into productive fields.

When twenty-eight years of age, Mr. Russell was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth, a daughter of Everett De Groff. She was born on the farm Mr. Russell now occupies, and here died about 1836. Our subject afterward married Hester J. De Groff, a relative of his first wife, and by this union were born four children: Everett, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; John J. and James, both deceased; and Benjamin, who is also a farmer of that locality. The mother having passed away, Mr. Russell was again married, Miss Helen Stoutenburg becoming his wife. She is a native of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, and a daughter of William Stoutenburg, a farmer of Hyde Park. They have one son, Harry A., who is still at home.

Mr. Russell formerly gave his political support to the Democracy, but now votes with the Republican party. He has served as trustee of the schools, and is deeply interested in the cause of education, and in all matters pertaining to the general welfare. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is serving as elder, and is a most venerable and highly-respected old man, having the regard of all who know him.

GEORGE H. BRIGGS, the genial and enterprising partner of Charles A. Shurter, is a member of the firm of Shurter & Briggs, hardware dealers of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, where our subject was born May 23, 1842. His father, George G. Briggs, was a native of England, and was one of the three children of Isaac Briggs, a tailor of that country, his two sisters being Mary, who married Benjamin Briggs, a hardware merchant of Poughkeepsie, and Sarah. The grandfather came from England to America when his son was about thirteen years of age, and located in Poughkeepsie, where he carried on the tailoring business until his death. He was a straightforward, upright man, and a faithful member of the Baptist Church.

George G. Briggs, the father of our subject, also learned the tailor's trade, which he has made his lifework, and is one of the most highly respected citizens of Poughkeepsie, where he has made his home since crossing the Atlantic. He was married to Miss Mary Kipp, a native of Poughkeepsie, and to them were born nine children, but three died in infancy. The others are George H., of this review; John, who is working in the store of our subject; Albert, also a resident of Poughkeepsie; William, who is employed in the rolling mills; Mary, wife of George Marshall, a carriage maker of Danbury, Conn.; and Kate, wife of Charles Wilson, of Poughkeepsie. The father gives his political support to the Republican party, whose principles he earnestly advocates.

On completing his education in the city schools of Poughkeepsie, George H. Briggs entered the hardware store of his uncle, at the age of sixteen, to learn the tinner's trade, and served an apprenticeship of about five years. He then worked in the store until, in connection with Mr. Shurter, he purchased the business. They are conducting a very large and prosperous business, and the credit of the firm stands high in financial circles.

In 1864 Mr. Briggs married Miss Georgia Macall, who was born in Ireland, but came with her parents to this country when quite young. She was the daughter of Edward Macall, a gardener by occupation, and by her marriage she became the mother of one son, Edward T., who wedded Miss Deavens, and no clerks for his father. Mrs. Briggs was called to her final rest in 1893. In September, 1890, our subject was again married, his second union being with Hattie Williams, a native of Newburgh, New York.

In politics, Mr. Briggs favors the Democratic party with his cordial support, was elected alderman of the Fourth ward, Poughkeepsie, in November, 1892, and is now satisfactorily serving his second term. Socially he is a member of the Odd Fellows Society and the Order of American Firemen. He is a public-spirited, enterprising man, taking an active part in everything that tends toward the promotion of the welfare of the city or county, and is held in the highest regard by all who know him.

CHARLES N. STOWE, who was called to this life February 4, 1893, when in the prime of life, was one of the leading and representative farmers of the town of Beekman. His grandfather, Eliachim Stowe, was a native of Ohio, whence in early life he came to Dutchess county, his last days being passed in retirement in the town of Dover. There he married Deborah Maxim, and they had a family of three children: Vivant, Levi and James.

The last named was the father of our subject. He was born in the town of Dover, December 16, 1817, and was a first cousin to the husband of Harriet Beecher Stowe. Through his boyhood was passed, and his education was received in the district schools of the locality. He continued to engage in agricultural pursuits in the town of Dover until the last years of his life, which was passed in the towns of Beekman and Unionvale. In religious belief he was a Methodist. In the town of Dover, he married Susan Schemerhorn, and they became the parents of four children: Lois, who married Nelson Cook, of the town of Unionvale; Lodema, wife of Charles Whitney, of Scandale, N. Y.; Charles N., of this sketch; and Mary, widow of Lewis Burton.

Charles N. Stowe was born in the town of Dover, February 14, 1846, and spent his school days in that township, in Kent, Connecticut, and in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county. Until attaining his majority he remained with his father, and was married in Unionvale to Miss Phebe Emigh, an adopted daughter of Henry Emigh. Four children graced their union: Susan R., who married Andrew G. Pray, of the town of Beekman, by whom she has two daughters—Mary and Margaret; James H.; Vincent E. and William C.

After his marriage, Mr. Stowe removed to the town of Beekman, where he engaged in farming up to the time of his death; he served as assessor there for four years. His political support was ever given the Republican party, and socially, he affiliated with Shekomeko Lodge, F. & A. M. His influence was great and always for the good; while his sympathy, his benevolence, his kindly greetings, will long be remembered. His duties were performed with the greatest care, and throughout life his personal honor and integrity were without blemish.

GILBERT TABOR, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, is connected by descent or marriage with some of the leading families of that locality. He is a native of the town, and has passed his life there, acquiring his education in the public schools, and, later, engaging in agriculture. His present farm, near Dover Furnace, contains about two hundred acres of fine land, and was purchased in 1881 from H. W. Preston. Mr. Tabor's able management has made it one of the best farms of the neighborhood. He is a leading worker in the local Republican organization, and has held several official positions of the town.

In 1863, he married Miss Nora Hoag, daughter of Philip Hoag, a well-known farmer of South Dover, and his wife, Mary Hoag. Four children were born of this union: George, July 2, 1865, was married in 1894 to Miss Mary Stevens, daughter of Hiram Stevens, of South Dover; William F., December 26, 1867, Wright P., July 2, 1871, and Mary H., June 1876, are at home.

The Tabor family has been prominently identified with the town of Dover for several generations and our subject's great-grandfather, Job Tabor, came from Rhode Island to that locality at an early period to engage in farming. He married, and had the following children: Noah, who married Miss Carpenter; Thomas, who married Fallie Belding; John, our subject's grandfather; and the wife of Joseph Belding. John Tabor was born at Chestnut Ridge in 1778, was educated at Dover Plains, and became a farmer by occupation. His wife, Jane Belding, was a daughter of Silas and Dorcas Belding, her father being a well-to-do farmer of Dover. John and Jane Tabor had six children: Oscar, Charles, William, Emeline, Maria and Ann.

Oscar Tabor, our subject's father, was born in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, August 4, 1809, and completed his education in Poughkeepsie. After his graduation he taught school in Dutchess county for a short time, and then engaged in farming and stock dealing, in which he was rewarded with success. He was an influential Republican, and held a number of township offices, including that of assessor. In religious faith he was a devout Baptist, and he was an active worker in the Dover Plains Church. On March 3, 1836, he married his first wife, Miss Hannah Preston, daughter of John and Amy Preston. Her father was a well-known farmer and hotelkeeper at Dover Plains. She died June 18, 1862, aged forty-four years, and in 1863 Mr. Tabor married a second wife, Mrs. Martha Giddings, née Merwin, who had one son by a former marriage. By Mr. Tabor's first marriage there were four children: Mary E., Gilbert, Myron and Amy J., all of whom lived to adult age, and of the second, one child was born who died in infancy. Mary E. was born in the town of Dover, December 30, 1836, and married Orville Sheldon, a merchant in Dover, and a son of Egbert Sheldon, a cattle dealer. She died October 19, 1861, leaving no children. Myron, who was born in October 9, 1850, is a well-known farmer in the town of Dover; Amy J. was born March 27, 1852, and married Gerry Dennis, a conductor on the Harlem R. R., who has since moved to the West. She died August 12, 1889, and left one son, Fred Dennis. Oscar Tabor had one child by his second marriage, but it died in infancy.

William Tabor, second son of John Tabor, was born in Dover, Dutchess county, in 1820, and was educated in the common schools. He engaged in farming, and was also a great traveler. He married Miss Ann Eliza Chapman, and had eleven children: John and Louisa never married; Jennie died young; Florence married Frank Van Auken; Frank and Harriet did not marry; Mary is the wife of Everett Travers; William died at an early age; Harry and Haddie (twins) died in infancy; and Jennie (2) married Mr. Sepring.

Charles Tabor, third child of John Tabor, was born in Dover, 1817, and after attending the common schools of the town during boyhood he engaged in farming. He married Miss Caroline Vincent, daughter of Absalom and Abigail (Duncan) Vincent, farmers of Dover. Charles Tabor and wife had ten children: Mary married Josiah Elting, a merchant, formerly of Poughkeepsie, now of Mt. Kisco, and they have one son, Charles, unmarried, who is in the feed business in Colorado; Helen married Charles Brower, an electrician of Boston, but has no children; Jennie died at the age of seventeen years; Emma, at the age of thirty-two; Maria, at thirty; Ida, who married Rev. Edwin Rusk, died at twenty-eight; Carrie, Charles and A. Vincent are not married; and Harry died in infancy.

Ann Tabor, fourth child of John Tabor, never married; Emeline, fifth child of John Tabor, married Harvey Preston, a farmer of Dover; they had two children—Charles Preston, who married Annett Sherman, and John, who married Augusta Marcy, and had one child—Fannie, now Mrs. Lines. Maria, sixth child of John Tabor, did not marry.

MYRON P. TABOR, an enterprising and successful agriculturist residing near Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is a member of one of our old and highly-esteemed families. His grandfather, John Tabor, and father, Oscar Tabor, were both well-known residents of Dutchess county, the latter being especially active and influential in public affairs. The accompanying biography of Gilbert Tabor, our subject's brother, gives an interesting history of the family.

Myron Tabor was born October 9, 1850, and has always made his home in the town of Dover. He married Miss Sarah Elizabeth White, a lady of unusual mental endowments, by whom he has had two children: Cora E., born in 1878, and Harry M., born in 1885. Mrs. Tabor, who is a descendant of old pioneer stock, was born in the town of Lagrange in 1856 and was educated in that locality. Her grandfather, Henry White, was a native of Unionvale, where he became a prominent farmer. He married Miss Sarah Doolittle and had six children: (1) Egbert married Irene Losee, and had four children: Emeline, Mrs. Walter Smith; Sarah, who never married; Harrison, who married Addie Lee, and Mary,

Mrs. Richmond Fort. (2) Henry married Catherine McCord, and had three children: William, Leander and Mary. (3) Charles, Mrs. Tabor's father, is mentioned below. (4) Esther married Nicholas Baker, and had five children: Abbie J., the wife of William Cronk Levina, who married first James Scott, and second James Cronk; Nicholas, who married Elizabeth Allen; Sarah, the wife of Albert Cole, and William. (5) Jane married Israel F. Duncan, and had three children: George Egbert, who married Annie Houghteling, and Charles. (6) Lizzie married Mr. Van Cott, but had no children.

Charles White was born in the town of Unionvale in 1834, was educated in the school there, and became a farmer by occupation. His wife was Miss Caroline Van Wyck, daughter of a well-known farmer of Dover, Robert S. Van Wyck, and his wife, Caroline. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. White, of whom Mrs. Tabor was the second in order of birth. Nettie, the eldest, was born in Unionvale in 1854. She married Edwin Velie, farmer of the town of Lagrange, and has two children—Carrie and Frederick. Hattie, the third daughter, was born in 1859, and is now the wife of Elmer Preston, the proprietor of hotel at Dover Plains; they have one son—John C. Preston. Wellington White, the youngest child and only son, was born in the town of Washington in 1862, and is engaged in business as a stock speculator in the town of Fishkill. He married Miss Sarah Vollme and their only child died in infancy.

JAMES CARROLL, a successful business man of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is one of the most progressive and public spirited citizens of that thriving municipality. He was a native of County Louth, Ireland, and a son of Michael C. Carroll, who was born in that county in 1816, and was one of the brothers, namely: Michael, our subject's father; James, who enlisted in the English army at sixteen years of age, and went to the West Indies, where he was employed as a horse shoer and farrier; and Luke.

Michael C. Carroll learned the blacksmith trade in his youth, and in about 1835 came to America, locating first in New York City, where he was employed in the Alum Works for some years. Later he went to Flushing, L. I., and then to South Brooklyn, carrying on the blacksmith, wheelwright and wagon-manufacturing business, making many milk wagons. He was first-class mechanic, and also possessed marked skill as a horse doctor.

He married Margaret Savage, who was also native of County Louth, Ireland, and to their union were born ten children, viz.: Mary, deceased; James, our subject; Thomas, master mechanic, who met his death from an accident in the Roche Iron Works; Luke, a machinist in New York City; Mary Ann, the wife of Joseph Crolley, of Wappingers Falls; Mike, deceased; Mike (2), a machinist, who joined the United States Navy, and died in South America, in 1857, from an accidental injury. In politics he was a Democrat. The other of this family died in 1851.

James Carroll, our subject, was born in the Emerald Isle in 1835, and as his parents came to America in the same year, his education was obtained in this country. He attended the Bishops' Church School in Brooklyn, the School of the Nativity in Concord, and later the public schools, making good use of his advantages. As he was always fond of reading he has gained much additional knowledge since he left school, at the age of eighteen, by private study, and can hold his own argument on the questions of the day. During boyhood he worked for a short time in a factory at the corner of Elizabeth and Mott streets, New York City, for $3.50 per week, and later sold fluid light for Mr. Conklin. He then served a full apprenticeship of five years in the iron moulder's trade at a shop on Third Avenue, where he continued to work for two years after the completion of his term. On leaving this place he worked on Water street, near Ruckster, and then with the McCulloms on Elder street, between Canal, Hester and Eldridge streets. Here he spent fifteen years, being foreman during the last few years. In September, 1865, he came to Poughkeepsie and entered the employ of Thompson and partner. At the end of two weeks he was called to the office and made foreman of the shop. He worked for this firm and their successors, Dudley & Thompson, and Dudley & Bullard, until 1879, at $4.00 per day, having from twenty-two to twenty-eight men under his charge. He left this business reluctantly, and, as he had some funds to invest, he at once engaged in the butcher's business in Union Square. Later he sold out that establishment and located at his present place of business, which he remodeled and improved. For about seventeen years he has enjoyed an extensive patronage, and is regarded as a substantial business man.

In 1864 he was married to Miss Ann Eliza Belton, a daughter of William Belton, whose family is one of the oldest in the city. To them were born the following named children: Mary married a Mr. Clark, of Orange, N. J.; Margaret is a professional nurse at Honolulu, having completed a course in the Post-Graduate School of New York; Eleanor is at home; Annie married John Blynn, of Wassaic; Grace is a trained nurse from the Post-Graduate School; Jennie B.; William Thomas, a graduate of Eastman Business College, of Poughkeepsie, is employed in a dry-goods house in New York; James is in school with a view to studying law; Robert is a graduate of Eastman Business College; and Thomas is at home.

Politically, Mr. Carroll is a Democrat on State and National issues, and he takes great interest in the welfare of the party. He is active and influential in local politics, having served in 1873-74-75 on the Waterworks board, and in 1893 and 1894 as alderman from the Third ward. While on the board of aldermen he was chairman of the committee on streets. His well-proven integrity, no less than his ability, has been the source of his popularity. He is a member of the Order of Good Fellows, of the Queen City.

DR. JOHN FAUST, a prominent veterinary surgeon of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is widely recognized as an authority upon the nature and treatment of the diseases of that noble animal, the horse. He is a native of Hessen-Cassel, Germany, which has been the home of the family for many generations, and there his grandfather, Barhold Faust, and his father Conrad Faust, were also born, the latter in 1807.

Dr. Faust was born July 19, 1835, and while acquiring a good education in the schools of his native place he began to consider the vital question of self-support. He decided to come to America, where, to use his own phrase, he could "secure a bigger piece of bread," or in other words better opportunities. On August 12, 1852, he landed in New York City, and soon after began to learn the cooper's trade, which he followed there until 1859, when he and his brothers, Tobias and Otto, went to Poughkeepsie. In 1860 they started in business there under the firm name of John Faust & Bros. The Doctor was an active worker in this enterprise until 1865, when he became a silent partner, so continuing until 1875, when the partnership was dissolved.

In 1881, our subject went before the examining board of the New York Veterinary Society, and passed the examination, receiving the degree of V. S. He is one of the most careful and studious of the veterinary surgeons of his county, and has done much to elevate the profession by his scientific researches. A number of valuable treatises give evidence of his learning and ability, among them an essay on Hernia read before the N. Y. State Veterinary Society; one on the History of Contagious and Infectious Diseases, Ancient, Medieval, and Modern; and one read in 1894 on the Practical part on Tuberculosis. He also prepared an article on the Darwinian Theory for the "Medical Record" in reply to Prof. Bolenhomer, of New York. At present the Doctor is writing a work on Homeopathic Practice on Domestic Animals. He is a leading member of the U. S. Veterinary Medical Society, and has for two years been the cattle inspector for tuberculosis in this State. He was credited in 1886 with being the first to vaccinate successfully against Anthrax fever, that treatment providing the only means now known for arresting the disease. He has a large practice, and is frequently called in consultation in important difficult cases. In 1854 Dr. Faust married Miss Maria Freitag, also a native of Hessian-Cassel, Germany, and has six children: Louis, a physician at Schenectady; Frederick A., a physician in Poughkeepsie; Otto, a veterinary surgeon in the same city; William P., a physician in Schenectady; Mary, the wife of F. C. Krueger, of that place; and Christina H., who is at home. The Doctor is a Republican in principle and a public-spirited citizen, but takes no part in political wire pulling. He is a member of the K. of P., and is one of the most prominent supporters of the German Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he has been Sunday-school superintendent for several years, and a steward since 1859.

THOMAS EMERSON, head gardener for William Densmore, of the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, is a native of Scotland, born at Thornhill, December 25, 1842, a son of William Emerson, who was also born in that village, in 1811, a son of Thomas and Janet Emerson.

Thomas Emerson, the grandfather of our subject, belonged to one of the old and highly respected families of southwestern Scotland. For many years he served in the British army, being one of the veterans of Waterloo, and after leaving the service he lived in retirement. In his family were five children: William, the father of our subject; Robert, who lived in Scotland until 1860; John, a resident of Glasgow; George, superintendent of an estate in Dumfriesshire; and Elizabeth, who married Mr. Hope, and lived in Edinburgh ("Aur Reekie"), Scotland.

By occupation the father of our subject was a gardener, was engaged in the Stirling nurseries for many years, and was also employed by the Montgomery family. Though he was a general gardener, he gave a great deal of attention to the culture of grapes. He was an honest, trustworthy and reliable man. In 1832, at the age of twenty-one years, he married Isabella McQueen, who was born in 1812, and was of Scotch descent on the paternal side, while her mother belonged to an old Scotch family. Seven children blessed this union: Elizabeth, living in Edinburgh, Scotland; Mary, in Glasgow; Thomas; Jane, also in Edinburgh; David, a blacksmith, Birkenhead, England; Johann, in Ayrshire, Scotland; and William, who died at the age of three years. The father passed away in 1880, at the age of sixty-nine years, and the mother in March, 1893.

The education of Thomas Emerson was begun in the common school near his boyhood home, and completed at a night school. He has ever been a great reader, making a special study of his "profession," as gardening is called in his native land. He began to learn the occupation in Scotland at the age of sixteen years, at a place called Blair Drummond, where he served a three-years' apprenticeship. He then went to Dumfries, and was in the nursery there some six months, afterward, for a year and a-half, being employed by Sir William Jardine. For the same length of time he was at Eglinton Castle, owned by the Earl of Eglinton, and from there went to Rozell, Ayrshire, being within a stone's throw of the cottage of Robert Burns, the poet, for a year. After six months passed at the Williams nursery in London, he secured a position at Hythe, in Kent,

Th^d Emerson

England, the place of Henry B. Mackeson, which he laid out, and continued in charge of for five years. He then returned to Scotland, but in 1870 came to the New World, locating at first in Philadelphia, where he remained for a month. On April 18, of that year, he arrived in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, and became assistant gardener on Mr. Dinsmore's place, under A. L. Black, who, the following year, went to Philadelphia. Our subject succeeded to his position, which he has since most efficiently filled. The place contains one of the finest collections of plants to be found in the State, of which he has complete charge.

Mr. Emerson has been remarkably successful in his chosen calling, and in his present engagement has seventeen men under his charge, during the summer months, while in the winter there are eleven. He is a prominent member of the Society of American Florists, the Florist Club of New York City, and the Free Gardeners. In his political views he is an ardent Republican, giving his earnest support to the party, and is one of the leading representative citizens of the town of Hyde Park. In religious faith he is a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church.

PERRY WHEELER, a worthy member of the agricultural community of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, is the grandson of John B. Wheeler, whose birth occurred there. In the common schools of the locality the grandfather received what was considered at that day a very good education, and at an early age turned his attention to farming. He owned and controlled a large tract of land in the southern portion of Dover town, on which he continued to make his home, and there reared his family. He married Miss Ruth Sampson, and had five children: Sebastian, John, Henry, Belding and Katie.

Henry Wheeler, the father of our subject, was also a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and after securing a common-school education, successfully engaged in farming throughout his entire life, accumulating by that means considerable wealth. He married Miss Catherine Wing, a daughter of Thomas Wing, and his wife, Hannah White, who were the parents of three children: Amy, Katie and Hannah. Her father, who was one of the Revolutionary heroes, was born in the town of Dover, where during manhood he engaged in agricultural pursuits. To the parents of our subject were born nine children, namely: Harvey, Thomas and John, all deceased; Shandanette; Bailey; Perry; Amy, who married Lathic Brown; Hannah; and Mariette. To the marriage of Lathic Brown and wife was born a son, Alexander (who married Ethel Wheeler, an adopted daughter of Perry Wheeler), who was a policeman in New York City for sixteen years. His death occurred at South Dover in 1873. Lathic Brown was born in Onondaga county, N. Y., and his death occurred in 1866 in the City of New York. He was a farmer by occupation.

Mr. Wheeler, whose name introduces this review, was born in Dover town, May 29, 1819, and after completing his education started out in life as a farmer, but he later learned the wheelwright's trade, at which he worked for eight years. Owing to ill health, he again took up the occupation of farming, which he has since continued. Since its organization he has been identified with the Republican party, and has acceptably served in several township offices, including those of assessor and commissioner. His life has been manly, his actions sincere, his manner unaffected, and his example is well worthy of emulation.

Mr. Wheeler was united in marriage with Miss Ann Ross, a daughter of Zebulon and Rhoda Ross, of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, and to this worthy couple were born two children: Catharine, who was born in 1850, educated in Dutchess county, and is now the wife of Charles Hawes, a farmer of Sherman, Conn.; and George R., who died at the age of three years. After a long and happy married life, the wife and mother was called to her final rest in 1895.

John Ross, the grandfather of Mrs. Wheeler, was born in Dover town, Dutchess county, where he followed farming and married Miss Hannah White. In their family were six children: Fannie; Mrs. Eliza Prentice; Mrs. Sallie Butts; William; one whose name is not given; and Zebulon, the father of Mrs. Wheeler.

Zebulon Ross, an agriculturist, was also born, reared, educated and married in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, Miss Rhoda Wing becoming his wife. Mrs. Wheeler was one of their five children, the others being as follows: John wedded Mary Stark, of Pawling, Dutchess county, by whom he had six children: Katie, Addie, Rhoda, Theodore, Charles and William. George, who married Miss Mariette Wheeler, had no children. Theodore was united in marriage with Miss Sarah A. Arnold, and they, too, had no family. Eliza became the wife of Harvey Buckingham, of Northville, Conn., and to them were born three children, namely: (1) Theodore first married Eliza Whitley, and their one child died in infancy. For his second wife he chose Phœbe Rennis, by whom he had four children: Estelle, May, Herman and Frederick. His third wife bore the maiden name of Annie Martin. (2) Herman was killed while valiantly serving in the Union army during the Civil war. (3) Ann Eliza married Orville Sheldon, who died in May, 1896, a son of Egbert Sheldon, and they had no children.

MRS. RHODA L. SHERMAN, a most estimable lady, whose home is in the town of Unionvale, belongs to a family that has been prominently identified with the interests of Dutchess county from an early period in its history. Her paternal grandfather, Hiram Rozell, was a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, received his education in its common schools, and engaged in farming during his active business career. By his marriage with Miss Catharine Buck he had three children: Martin, Hiram and Peter. After the death of his first wife he again married, and to the marriage were born the following children: Henry; James, who married a Miss Wight; Beekman, who married a Miss Morey; Albro, who married a Miss Rozell; Mrs. Catharine Leroy; Mrs. Helen Van Vleck; Mrs. Meville Hewett; Mrs. Mary Whitehead; Mrs. Phœbe Dennis; and Mrs. Cordelia Reed.

Martin Rozell, the father of Mrs. Sherman, was born in the town of Dover, in 1793, attended the public schools of the locality, and engaged in farming as a lifework. He was united in marriage with Miss Deborah Cypher, an agriculturist of Beekman town, Dutchess county.

Twelve children blessed their union, namely: (1) Peter, born in 1818, married Phœbe Giles, by whom he had five children—Allison, Phœbe, Amelia, Deborah and Ida. (2) Thomas, born in 1819, married Sarah J. Cypher, by whom he had one daughter—Harriet. (3) Elizabeth, born in 1823, married James Wesley, and they had one son, George, now deceased. (4) Jane A., born in 1821, married Ephraim Hewett, by whom she had six children—Sarah, Cecelia, William, Edward, Emma and Obe. (5) Maria, born in 1825, married John Doan, and has three children—Samuel, Lewis and Frank. (6) Smith, born in 1827, married Ellen Ball, by whom he has five children—Charles, Etta, Edith, Ella and Willie. (7) Rhoda L. is next in order of birth. (8) Drusilla, born in 1833, married John Flagler and has three daughters—Carrie, Arcelia and Alda. (9) Wicks, born in 1831, wedded Miss Maria J. Brooks, by whom he had three children—Edward, Charles and Carrie, and after the death of his first wife he married Mary E. Clark, by whom he had a daughter—Annie. (10) David, born in 1836, married Phœbe Lake, and they had two children—Mamie and Remsen. (11) Caroline, born in 1839, married Theodore Cypher, and they have a daughter—Cora. (12) Cecelia, born in 1842, died when young.

Mrs. Rhoda L. (Rozell) Sherman is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Lagrange, in 1829, and pursued her studies in the schools near her home. On reaching womanhood she was united in marriage with Samuel Rozell, a farmer of Unionvale town, who died in 1869, at the age of seventy-three years. Later she became the wife of Isaac W. Sherman, who was by occupation a painter and farmer, and whose death occurred in 1880. Mrs. Sherman enjoys the respect of all who know her, and her many virtues and loving disposition have gained her many warm friends in the community where she has so long made her home.

JAMES H. RUSSELL, a prosperous and honored citizen of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits, started out in life poor and everything but pluck and indomitable will-power, and is now one of the well-to-do farmers of the community.

John Russell, his great-grandfather, in an early day came, along with two of his brothers from England to this country, one of the three settling in Dutchess county, one in Massachusetts, and the other, John, in Orange county, N. Y. The last named was twice married and by his first wife had five sons, one named William (the grandfather of our subject), and three daughters; by his second wife he had but one child, a son. John Russell moved from Orange county to Phillipstown, Putnam county, where he passed the rest of his days. He was a lifelong farmer, and during the Revolutionary war served as major-general.

William Russell, grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he passed his entire life in agricultural pursuits. He was thrice married, the names of his wives being Theodosia Townsend, Amy Cronk and Helen Champlain, respectively, the first of whom was the grandmother of James H. William Russell had ten children in all, as follows: Bradford, James, Annie, Austin and John, all five deceased; Elijah, father of our subject; William, deceased; Benjamin; Betsey, deceased; and a daughter who died while young.

Elijah Russell was born in the town of Fishkill, June 12, 1813, and attended the district schools of the neighborhood. He remained at home until his marriage with Miss Margaret Wright, daughter of Isaac Wright. Her death occurred June 20, 1892, and she was mourned by many warm friends as well as by her immediate family. The family circle included five children: Ann Jeanette, wife of Robert Southard, of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county; George Isaac, who makes his home in Matteawan, N. Y., but is a keeper of the prison at Sing Sing; Alphonza, who married D. W. Haight, of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county; James H., subject of this sketch; and Maria Amelia, wife of William Wolcott, of Matteawan. The father has always engaged in farming upon many places in Dutchess county. After his marriage he resided in the town of Lagrange, whence he removed to the town of Poughkeepsie, and for a time was a resident of Peekskill, N. Y.; then he moved to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, and now makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Haight, in the town of East Fishkill. Until recently he had always supported the Democratic party, but is now a stalwart Prohibitionist on account of his views on the temperance question. He has never aspired to public office, but faithfully discharges his duties of citizenship. When young he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has since been one of its active and faithful members.

James H. Russell, the subject proper of these pages, was born June 7, 1845, and his school days were there passed. His educational privileges, however, were quite limited, a fact which he has always deeply regretted. On leaving home at the age of twenty years, he entered the drug store of Van Valkenburg & Brown, of Poughkeepsie, where he engaged in clerking for a year; then, with his father and brother bought out the Denton restaurant, at No. 270 Main street, in that city, which they remodeled and conducted for a year. On selling out he engaged in the fire-insurance business for two years, representing the Lorillard Company, of New York City, being located at Arthursburg, N. Y. He was next employed on the farm of J. W. Van Tassell for a year, and during the following four years operated land for W. S. Verplanck; removing to the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, he rented E. H. Clark's farm for two years, whence he went to the farm of Benson J. Lossing, the historian, on Chestnut Ridge, in the town of Dover, which he worked on shares for three years, and rented during the following six years. In 1886 he purchased a 255-acre farm of W. E. Haxtun, in the town of Beekman, on which he has since resided, and which he has placed under a high state of cultivation. He is ranked among the most progressive agriculturists of the county, and he thoroughly understands his business in all its departments.

In 1864, in the town of East Fishkill, Mr. Russell was married to Miss Hester A. Haight, daughter of Henry Haight, and two children were born to them, the elder being Walter G., now in the grocery business in New York City. He married Lillian Greenthall, by whom he has three sons—James H., Vincent L., and Percy (deceased).

Mr. Russell has ever taken a prominent part in public affairs, casting his ballot in support of the Democratic party, and on that ticket was elected superintendent of the county poor in the fall of 1883, and again in the fall of 1886, serving altogether six years. For two terms he was commissioner of highways in the town of Dover, and in the town of Beekman has been supervisor one term, and also commissioner of highways one term. Twice he has been the nominee of his party for the Assembly, and came within eighteen votes of being elected in a district which has usually a 1,800 majority for the Republicans, a fact which plainly indicates his popularity and the confidence reposed in him. In all the various relations of life, Mr. Russell has been true and faithful in every trust, and justly merits the high regard in which he is held. He is a member of the F. & A. M., Lodge No. 458, Shekomeko, Dutchess county, and also a charter member and master of Sylvan Grange, of the town of Beekman, organized in December, 1896.

JOHN GEORGE BODENSTEIN. Among the valued German-born citizens of Staatsburg, Dutchess county, stands prominent in progressiveness, industry and popularity, this gentleman. He was born in Hossen-Cassel, Germany, June 20, 1850, a son of John H. and Dorothea (Boerner) Bodenstein, natives of the same place.

By trade the father was a blacksmith, which occupation he continued to follow after coming to America in 1858, first locating at Rockland Lake, Rockland Co., N. Y., where he remained until 1863, when he removed to Piermont, N. Y. There he worked at his trade for one year, spending the following seven months as a journeyman in Jersey City, N. J. In 1864 he came to Staatsburg, where for three years he worked for the Eagle Ice Company, and at Athens, N. Y., he was employed by the same company until 1868. In Staatsburg he then opened a shop for the manufacture of ice tools and general blacksmithing, which business he continued up to his death in 1875. He was very successful, and made many improvements in ice tools, though he took out no patents. Among the many implements manufactured by him were ice plows. In his family were seven children, all yet living, namely: Eliza Catherine, John George, Henry, Frederick, Sophia, Amelia and Charles. The mother died November 25, 1891.

For four years prior to coming to this country our subject attended school in the Fatherland, and completed his literary education by two years and a half attendance at the common schools at Rockland Lake and Piermont. Although his privileges in that direction were somewhat meager, he has by subsequent reading become a well-informed man. With his father he learned the blacksmith's trade, and from 1866 to 1868 worked as a journeyman in Newburg, Fishkill Plains and Kingston, N. Y. In 1868 he started a shop for his father on the site where his brother Henry now carries on business, and although he owned no interest in the shop had full control until two years after his father's death. He and his brother Henry then formed a partnership, and under the style of J. G. & H. Bodenstein engaged in the manufacture of ice tools until March 22, 1890, when the partnership was dissolved. Our subject then established his present shop, where he does a great deal of forging for the Poughkeepsie foundries, and has furnished all the iron work for the Ogden Mills summer residence, which required nearly a hundred tons of iron and steel. However, the manufacture of ice tools is still his main business, in which he has a large trade, extending all over the country, from Maine to the Pacific. He is essentially a self-made man, having been the architect of his own fortune, and is deserving of the highest commendation.

In 1873 Mr. Bodenstein was united in marriage with Louisa Hess, of Staatsburg, a daughter of John George Hess, and they have been born two sons: Fred, who associated with his father in business; and John George. Mr. Bodenstein is an ardent supporter of Republican principles, though he takes no very active interest in politics; socially he is identified with the F. & A. M. at Rhinebeck. He is a member of the Episcopal Church at Staatsburg, of which he has been vestryman since its incorporation; has been school trustee for many years, and a member of the Staatsburg fire department. He is a member and one of the organizers of the Staatsburg Gun Club, and is a noted crack shot, having captured many money prizes and borne away the first prize medal from a company, put up by the Third Brigade of the National Guard of the State of New York, in two-days' "shoot," making a score of 48 out of a possible 50, with military arms, off-hand at 200 yards, Creedmore targets. The competition was one of the sharpest. Mr. Bodenstein's honor and integrity are unimpeachable, his word being considered as good as his bond.

WILLIS HAVILAND CASE. The name of this lamented citizen of the town of Clinton, who passed to his rest on Sunday, February 12, 1893, is remembered as that of one of the most prominent and energetic men of the community, one who assisted greatly in its development and prosperity. Besides general farming he also devoted considerable time to the practice of veterinary surgery, and the day of his death all of the family, with the exception of himself and wife, had gone to Church. Feeling ill, he took what he supposed to be some medicine, but which the instant afterward he knew to be some aconite he had prepared for a sick horse, and he died soon afterward. No man is more worthy of representation in a work of this kind, and there is none whose name is held in more general remembrance.

J. G. Budenstein

The early home of Mr. Case was in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, where he was born September 12, 1829, to Ephraim and Mary (Haviland) Case, who were farming people of that township, where the birth of the father also occurred. The paternal grandfather, Nathan Case, who was a minister in the Society of Friends, married a Miss Hicks. The boyhood days of our subject were spent in the place of his nativity, where he also received his educational advantages in the district schools.

At the age of twenty-six years Mr. Case was united in marriage with Phœbe Collins, widow of Mr. Ackerman, of the town of Unionale, Dutchess county, and to them were born two children: Oscar J., and Olive Augusta, wife of George N. Bowman. For his second wife he wedded Hannah M. Wiley, and their wedding was celebrated in the town of Clinton, January 23, 1867. One son graced this union: Homer, who married Florence E. Vail, daughter of Israel Vail, of the town of Unionale. Mrs. Case is the fifth in the family of eight children born to John and Sarah (Allen) Wiley, the former a native of the town of Clinton, the latter of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. In order of birth the children are as follows: Ensign (deceased); Allen; Reuben, who was killed at the battle of Petersburg during the Civil war; Mary J., wife of Burtis Hicks; Hannah M.; Martin W.; and William A. and Adeline (both deceased). The father always carried on farming in the town of Clinton, where he died at the age of forty-six years; he was also a grain and cattle dealer. His parents were Reuben and Drusilla (Covill) Wiley, who always made their home in the same township.

By birthright Mr. Case was a member of the Society of Friends. He was a man universally respected, one whose word was considered as good as his bond, and on his death the county lost one of its most honored and useful citizens. Mrs. Case proved herself full worthy as the companion and helpmeet of this excellent man, and is a lady greatly esteemed in the community in which she lives.

TIMOTHY GARRICK KELLY. According to tradition, the Kelly family had its origin in Spain, and emigrated to Ireland at a very early period, the branch of which our subject is a descendant making its home for many generations in County Galway.

His grandfather, Patrick Kelly, and father, Michael Kelly, were both natives of that county. The latter was born in 1803, received a good practical education in the schools of his neighborhood, and after his marriage to his first wife, a Miss Egan, came to America. For some time he lived in Brooklyn, and then went to Albany, but about 1835 he settled in Poughkeepsie. He had learned the carpenter's trade, but never followed it, being engaged in the grocery business both in Albany and Poughkeepsie, where he located first at the corner of Jefferson and Church streets, and later at the corner of Church and South Bridge streets. He was a man of fine natural ability, a great reader, and a good judge of men and affairs, and was associated in his time with the best men in the city. Aside from his mercantile business he was interested in banking and in real estate, of which he owned a large amount in the Second ward. He gave the land for the opening of Church street. In politics he was always a strong Democrat, and, although he was never an office-holder, he was quite influential in party affairs. He was one of the original promoters of St. Peter's Catholic Church, the first meeting of the congregation being held at his house. To the end of his life he was regarded as a leader and counselor by the men of his faith. Thoroughly loyal to his adopted city, he was the means of bringing many of his people here. On the death of his first wife, who left four children, namely: John, born in 1830, was educated at Fordham College, New York, was ordained a priest, and at the time of his death, in 1891, was Dean and Vicar General of the Trenton Diocese; Barnard; Mary, now Mrs. Jacob Kuhn, of New York City; and Annie, who died at the age of eighteen. Mr. Kelly's second wife was Miss Mary Garrick, a native of Ireland and a daughter of Timothy Garrick, who was a resident of New York City in later years. Of the three children of the second marriage, Timothy G., our subject, is the eldest; Catherine died in 1881 at the age of twenty-six; and Eliza Regina is still living. The father died in 1861, and the mother survived him twenty-seven years, dying in 1888.

Timothy G. Kelly was born February 16, 1852, in Poughkeepsie, and attended Dutchess County Academy in boyhood, until Prof. McGeorge left that institution. He then spent one year at Riverview Seminary. As he was naturally a good student he made fine progress, but at sixteen his school days ended. He was only nine years old when his father died, and as the clerk, upon whom entire reliance had been placed, was stricken with paralysis not long afterward, he was obliged to make himself useful in the store. As he grew older he assumed the management of the business, to which he finally succeeded, and he has displayed the characteristic business faculty of the family in his successful career. The store is of the old-fashioned sort, with a bar in the rear.

In September, 1874, he married Miss Mary Cunningham, daughter of Patrick and Catherine Cunningham, formerly of Beekman, and they have four children: Mary, John, Frank and Paul. Mr. Kelly has always been a Democrat, and in 1873 and '74, although having only just attained his majority, served as alderman. He takes great interest in the success of his party and in public affairs generally. He belongs to St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, of which he is a trustee, and he is also a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

HOWARD C. MILLARD, a prominent business man of New Hamburg, Dutchess county, and a member of the well-known firm of Millard Lumber Co., was born in that town December 17, 1846.

His family is of French descent, and his ancestors were early settlers at Cornwall, Conn., where his grandfather, Charles Millard, was born in 1763. The latter settled in Marlboro, Ulster county, where he was engaged in the lumber business until 1824, when he moved to New Hamburg and opened a lumber yard. He manufactured his lumber from the raw material, and had an extensive trade for that early day, the distance from our own times being more easily realized when the fact is recalled that he witnessed the trial of Robert Fulton's steamer on the Hudson in 1807. He was prominent in local affairs, and a leading member of the Presbyterian Church. On June 17, 1816, his first wife, Lydia Pride, native of Poughkeepsie, died leaving six children, and October 22, 1818, he married Sarah Miller, by whom he had two children. His own death occurred April 30, 1827. He was the first family the eldest son (1), John, born May 21, 1789, became a merchant and speculator in Brooklyn. (2) Charles, born in 1790, located in New Orleans, where he acquired a large fortune; he was a man of unusual energy and business ability, and took a prominent part in affairs in his adopted city. (3) James, born in 1795, was a wholesale dealer in lumber and coal at Catskill. (4) Cornelia, born in 1797, married Hezekiah Purdy, of Marlboro. (5) William, born in 1800, settled in Gale, Ill., and became a leading business man there, holding the office of postmaster at one time. His later years were spent in traveling through Europe and America, and he died while in Jacksonville, Fla. (6) Walter, our subject's father, is mentioned below. (7) Catherine, born in 1803, married Elem Dunbar, then of Poughkeepsie and later of Cortland county. The children of the second family were Margaret G. and Franklin.

Walter Millard was born in Marlboro in 1802, and remained there until the removal of the family to New Hamburg. Until 1834 he was engaged in the lumber business exclusively, but at that time he became interested in freighting, and built the barge "Lexington," which ran between New York and New Hamburg. In 1844 he purchased the steamboat "Spadid," which carried freight from New Hamburg to Marlboro. About 1855 he disposed of this line of business to give attention to dealing in lumber and coal, which he continued until his death, August 20, 1880, building up an immense trade with large contracts. He was a man of remarkable business acumen, and possessed the energy and enterprise to carry his projects to completion. A strict Presbyterian in religious faith, his life was marked by integrity and fair dealing. In politics, he was in early years a Whig, and later a Democrat. He was married November 4, 1834, to Martha Hyer Bull, a native of New York City, who died June 14, 1896. Her father, William Bull, who was of English birth, was a well-known saddle and harness dealer in New York, and was the first to import coats from England. To Walter Millard and wife were born children as follows: Sarah, William B., Walter P., Edward J., Fenwick T., Howard C. and Charles.

Howard C. Millard, the subject proper of this review, was educated in the schools of Poughkeepsie and Fairfield, N. Y., and on returning home he began his business career as a dealer in cement pipe. He followed this until the death of his father, in 1880, when he acquired an interest in the lumber and coal business. The Millard Lumber Co. is one of the most substantial firms of this region, manufacturing and dealing both at wholesale and retail, and commanding an immense trade. The brothers are prominently identified with the leading interests of their locality, and Howard C. Millard has taken generous pride in assisting every movement tending to promote the public welfare.

On September 20, 1870, Mr. Millard married Miss Catherine Jane LeRoy, daughter of Jacob and Angeline LeRoy, of New Hamburg. The LeRois are of French Huguenot descent, and are among the oldest and most highly-respected families of Dutchess county. Two children were born of this union: Jacob L. and Katie, both at home. Mr. Millard and his wife are leading members of the Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee. In politics he is known as a Democrat, but he is a believer in Protection. He has taken great interest in the work of the Masonic order, and he and his son Jacob are both members of the Wappinger Falls Lodge No. 671.

JOSEPH I. VAIL, a leading mason and contractor, of Poughkeepsie, is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Fishkill, September 20, 1835. His father, Joseph Vail, Sr., was also born in that township, July 27, 1803, and was a son of Isaac and Deborah Vail, farming people of that locality, where they reared their family of seven children—four sons and three daughters. The sons were: Abram, who engaged in agricultural pursuits in the town of Fishkill; Joseph, the father of our subject; William, a farmer, who is still living at the age of ninety years; and Platt, who followed the same occupation. The grandfather, whose ancestors were from Holland, was a native of Dutchess county, and lived upon the old homestead farm in the town of Fishkill, where his wife also departed this life. They were earnest and sincere members of the Presbyterian Church.

On that farm the father of our subject grew to manhood, and married Mrs. Sarah N. (Simmons) Waterhouse, a native of Coxsackie, Greene Co., N. Y., whose father, Isaac Simmons, was born in 1786, of English lineage, and was a boatman by occupation. After their marriage the parents located upon a farm in the town of Fishkill, where their ten children were born: Stephen S., born October 27, 1830, operates the old homestead farm; Elizabeth A., born July 29, 1832, wedded William Abel, a farmer of Illinois; Isaac S., born September 20, 1835, is a commercial traveler; Joseph I., the subject of this review, is the twin brother of Isaac; Sarah J., born May 6, 1838, is the wife of George Cornell, a farmer of Virginia; Mary L., born July 29, 1840, is the wife of Walter Van Namberg, a farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie; Harriet M., born June 25, 1842, married George Sprague, a farmer of Ohio; Deborah, born March 1, 1844, is the wife of Nicholas Chatton, an agriculturist; Malissa, born March 23, 1846, is the wife of Ira Van Kleeck, a farmer of Orange county, N. Y.; and Willett, born July 11, 1848, is engaged in merchandising at Florida, Orange county. The father carried on farming up to his death, which occurred September 20, 1877; the mother passed away March 1, 1882. They held membership with the Presbyterian Church, and in politics he was an ardent Republican.

Joseph I. Vail passed his early life upon the farm, aiding in its cultivation as soon as old enough, and acquired his education in the district schools. At the age of eighteen he came to Poughkeepsie, where he served an apprenticeship to the mason's trade with Isaac Broas, and about 1860 began contracting in that line for himself, since which time he has erected almost half of the buildings put up in the city. From a mere hamlet he has watched the growth of Poughkeepsie, and during his long residence here has been one of the important factors in its progress and upbuilding.

On January 11, 1866, Mr. Vail was united in marriage with Miss Susan A. Sloane, a native of Poughkeepsie. Her father, James Sloane, was born in Ireland, and wedded Hannah Davidson, also of Irish extraction. To them were born seven children: Thomas D. (1) and William J., who died while young; Thomas D. (2), who became a merchant of

New York City; William J., who died in childhood; Mary J., who wedded Archie Hawloe, a sea captain on the Pacific coast; Susan A., the honored wife of our subject; and Margaret D., who married James E. Kirk, a railroad man.

Mr. Vail is a Republican in his political convictions, and is one of the broad-minded business men of the city, whose prosperity cannot be attributed to a combination of lucky circumstances, but who has risen from energy, enterprise, integrity and intellectual effort well directed. His business has ever been conducted on the strictest principles of honesty. He and his wife hold a high position in the esteem of their fellow citizens, and they give their support to the Second Reformed Church of Poughkeepsie.

MORRIS BAKER, for many years a well-known citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in Bamberg, Bavaria, Germany, in 1842, and came to America with his parents in 1844.

Heyman Baker, the father of our subject, was a native of Exin, Germany, born in the year 1815. He was a merchant tailor by occupation, and after coming to this country first located in New York City, later coming to Poughkeepsie. In addition to his custom work, Mr. Baker was interested in manufacturing goods for the California and Mexico trade, making the fanciful and highly-colored fabrics which the people of the latter country, especially, use so profusely. This was in 1849; some time later he established a factory in Poughkeepsie, which he carried on for about eight years, and after giving up this line of trade he continued in the clothing business until his death, in 1866. Mr. Baker was well known in commercial circles, where he held a high reputation for integrity and straightforward methods of dealing, and was very successful in his enterprises. He was a worthy citizen, highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a charter member of the Masonic order, and of the Odd Fellows. Mr. Baker was married to Caroline Gillett, a native of Bamberg, Germany, and two children were born to them, one of whom died when nine months old. The father passed from earth in 1866, and the mother in February, 1891.

Morris Baker had good advantages for an education, first attending the primary school held in the old Bond street school house, in the Sixth ward, New York City. From there he went to a private school taught by Miss Filkins, and then to a grammar school under A. Underhill, finishing his education at the Poughkeepsie Academy. He has always been a reader, and is a well-informed man. After leaving school he went into business with his father, and after the latter's death carried on the establishment until the winter of 1867-68, when he took up the business of an auctioneer in which he has been engaged until the present time. This occupation carries him all over the county, and he has become not only well known, but is considered one of the best of that line. His sales comprise real estate, chattels and other property, and he has been remarkably successful in making large sales of lands and personal property. He is popular with all classes, and is a public-spirited and enterprising citizen. In 1865 Mr. Baker was married to Miss Marie Boyd, of Plainfield, N. J., and seven children have blessed their union, namely: Rebecca, the wife of Walter Todd of Poughkeepsie; Ettie, at home; Henry, cigar manufacturer at Wappingers Falls; Sophia, employed in the silk works at Matteawan; Albert, a commercial traveler; and Belle and Pauline, at home.

In politics Mr. Baker believes in the principles of the Democratic party, but has never taken an active part in public affairs. He is a member of the Jewish Synagogue, and of the Royal Good Fellows.

SAMUEL J. TANNER. Among the active farmers and stock-raisers in the town of Pine Plains, Dutchess county, this gentleman holds prominent place. He belongs to one of the pioneer families of the county, his grandfather having been one of the early settlers of the town of Dover. He was a native of England, and while serving in the British army he was captured by the Spaniards and would have starved to death had it not been for the Spanish women.

The grandfather of our subject, Samuel Tanner, was born in the town of Dover, and early located on the old Tanner farm, east of the village of Pine Plains, and became a leading and influential man. He wedded Mary McIntosh, and to them were born four children: William, John, Alex, Reuben, Morris, Anthony, Henry, James, Samuel, Margaret, Eliza, Myra, Clarissa, and Mary Magdalen.

Samuel J. Farmer

most of whom resided in Columbia county, New York.

Samuel S. Tanner, father of our subject, succeeded to the old homestead in the town of Pine Plains, and by the careful management of his business affairs accumulated a comfortable property, having in the neighborhood of 150 acres of land, comprising one of the best farms in the town. He was a man of good natural ability, strong and rugged, of sound judgment and well informed for his time. His fortune was the result of his own diligence and enterprise, and his upright, honorable life won him the high regard of all. For his first wife he married Fannie Streaver, and after her death was united in marriage with Miss Mary Betsy Brown, by whom he had four children: William; Fannie, wife of Henry Palmer; Mary, wife of John Head; and Samuel J., subject of this sketch. His third union was with Julia Heldon, and to them were born three children: Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Titus; George, of Pine Plains; and Julia. The father voted the Democratic ticket, though never particularly active in political matters, and was often urged to take office, but declining the honor he only served as assessor one term. In religious life his support was given to the Presbyterian Church, which he attended. He was called from this earth February 7, 1891, at the ripe age of eighty-six years.

Our subject was born in 1845, on the old homestead in the town of Pine Plains, and received a fair education in the district schools of the locality, which education in later years was improved by reading and observation. He always remained upon the old homestead, aiding in its operation, and successfully managed the same for several years. After the death of his father he purchased the interest of the other heirs, and his career as a farmer and stock-raiser has been characterized by keen judgment, shrewd common sense and good business habits. He raises cattle, sheep and hogs, and is a careful, conservative business man and substantial farmer, owning 450 acres of valuable and productive land.

On November 28, 1894, Mr. Tanner was united in marriage with Fannie E. Van Aken, who was born April 22, 1860, in Ulster county, N. Y., daughter of Solomon and Catherine Ann (Atkins) Van Aken, highly respectable and famous people of the town of Esopus, Ulster county. The father died in 1879, aged fifty-nine years; the mother in 1891, aged sixty-six years. They are the parents of eight children, three of whom are yet living. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Tanner has come one child: Charles S., born November 8, 1895. They are also caring for the orphan son of Mrs. Tanner's sister, Aurelia (Mrs. William Swartout), who died September 15, 1890. Our subject is strictly temperate in every sense of the word, thus following in the footsteps of his father, and is a liberal contributor to the Presbyterian Church. In politics he is a Democrat, but cares nothing for political preferment, desiring rather to devote his time and attention to his business interests.

NATHANIEL SMITH, a prominent merchant of Low Point, Dutchess county, has been for many years the postmaster at that place, and his able administration of the affairs of the office has served to confirm his popularity and influence in that locality. He is a native of Dutchess county, born in New Hackensack, September 18, 1840. His father, Nathaniel Smith, was of English descent, and was born on Long Island in 1777. He married Eustacia Weeks, a native of Westchester county, and settled in New York City, where he followed the carpenter's trade for some years, the old Trinity church being among the most important structures which he helped to build. In 1832 he moved to New Hackensack, and continued his trade until his death in 1850, his wife surviving only six years. Politically he was a Democrat, and he and Mrs. Smith were both consistent members of the Reformed Church. Of their five children, some of whom were born in New York City, our subject is the only one now living. William was a carpenter, and spent most of his life in New York City; Susan married Oliver Van Dyne; Ann married Abram Stoutenburgh, a farmer in western New York, and Maria was the wife of Samuel Van Forte, a shoemaker.

The subject of our sketch spent his school days mainly in Pittsford, N. Y., where he enjoyed the ordinary educational advantages of the time. His first entrance into mercantile life was as a clerk at New Hamburg and Hyde Park, but in 1856 he became station agent at Low Point, then known as Carthage Landing. After four years there he was transferred to Dutchess Junction, and later to Fishkill Landing, where he remained until 1871, when he again turned to the mercantile life, opening a grocery at Low Point. His success in this venture soon warranted the enlargement of his stock, and he now conducts a general store, with a good trade. In 1868 he was appointed postmaster, and has held the office without interruption since that time, with satisfaction to all concerned. Politically Mr. Smith is a Republican, and, as one of the substantial and progressive citizens of the town, he takes a leading part in local affairs.

In 1864 our subject was united in matrimony with Miss Maria DeGroot, a lady of French descent, but a native of New Hamburg. One daughter blessed this union, Estelle, who married George Terwilliger, of Wappingers Falls.

GEORGE W. DUTCHER. The Dutcher family has held a prominent position in this section for many years, various members taking an influential part in business and political life. The different branches of the family trace their descent from one or another of six or seven brothers who came from Holland to America in the latter part of the eighteenth century and located on Long Island, where some of them remained. Derrick Dutcher, our subject's grandfather, came from Long Island to Dutchess county, and settled upon a farm in the town of Dover. He married Miss Edith Chapman, daughter of William Chapman, and reared a family of eight children: Israel, the eldest; Ransom, who never married; Wilbur, who married Mary Hoag; Luther, our subject's father; Amy, who was twice married, her second husband being Daniel White; Esther, Mrs. Ellis Benson; Elizabeth, Mrs. E. B. Sommers; and Ann, Mrs. Willis Benson. Derrick Dutcher and wife are dead, his wife dying in 1861, aged eighty-three years.

Luther Dutcher was born in the town of Dover in 1806, and received his education in the common schools there. He learned the wheelwright's trade, becoming an expert finisher and polisher, and later engaged in the iron business at Dover Furnace, being one of the founders of that industry there. Later he became connected with the Novelty Iron Works, located at the foot of Twelfth street, in New York City. On retiring from this business he followed farming for three or four years, and then resumed his former business at Napanoch, Ulster county, remaining two years. He then moved to Poughkeepsie, where he occupied the residence at 471 Main street, the present location of the Electric Light Company. From that place he moved to Dover Plains, and spent two years in the business of carriage manufacturing. He was a very benevolent man, a leader in many public movements, and took an active part in the work of the Masonic fraternity and in military affairs, serving as captain in the old militia. An ardent Democrat, he was a popular candidate of his party, and held a number of township offices, including that of justice of the peace. In 1892 he was elected to the State Assembly, defeating John B. Dutcher, who had been confident of success. He married Miss Adelia A. Geddings, who was born in 1809, the daughter of Buell and Sarah Geddings, well-known residents of the town of Dover. Of the four children of this union the eldest, Hiram W., born in 1834, was a farmer. He never married. Gilbert J., born in 1835, was in the employ of the government. He married Miss Mary Watson, of Ulster county, in 1863, and had one child, who died at the age of six months. The third son is the subject of this memoir, and the fourth, William G., was born in 1848, and after receiving an education in the seminaries of the locality, entered the service of the Harlem railroad as conductor, and was regarded for many years as one of their best and most trustworthy employes. He married Miss Kate S. Swords, daughter of Henry Swords, of Pawling, and had two children: Sarah and Adelia, both of whom died in infancy.

George W. Dutcher was born August 2, 1839, and was educated in the academies at Amenia and Fort Plain. After graduating, he learned the trade of a carpenter and joiner, which he followed for twenty-five years. He was engaged to some extent in the undertaking business during that time, and in 1888 he opened such an establishment at Wing's Station, where he makes a specialty of that line of work, in which he is a leader, and carries large stock of materials, having about $2,000 invested. He owns a farm of fifty-two acres in that vicinity. His first wife was Miss Nettie Hill, daughter of Thomas Hill, a well-known resident of the town of Olive, Ulster county, and of this marriage three children were born: (1) Frederick died when six months old. (2) Eva is the wife of George A. Trowbridge, and has two children, William L. and Nettie; and (3) Luther T. died at the age of fifteen years. The mother of this family died March 5, 1878, and Mr. Dutcher married Miss Sarah A. Webb, daughter of a prominent commission merchant of Wing's Station, Alexander Webb, who was born in Pawling, September 5, 1813, and after receiving his education there learned the miller's trade. He spent some years in that business at Rochester before settling at Wing's Station. He married Miss Elizabeth Lane, of Unionvale, and had two children: Sarah (Mrs. Dutcher), and Mary J., who married William S. Jones, and has two children: Nellie E. and Annie M.

On his mother's side Mr. Dutcher is descended from the well-known Geddings family. His grandfather, Buell Geddings, was a native of the town of Sherman, Dutchess county, where he was educated and learned the trade of a wagonmaker, at which he worked during the greater part of his life. His last years were passed upon a farm in the town of Dover. He married Miss Sarah Reasoner, and has five children: (1) Noble married Harriet Cox, of Crum Elbow, and had three children: Theo F., Nina and Frank. (2) Delia married Luther S. Dutcher. (3) Jackson married Debora Hoag, and had four children: John H., who married Maria Oliver; George W., who married Jennie Villinger; Myra, Mrs. James Reynolds; and Andrew, who is not married. (4) Martin married Mary Hoag. (5) William is not married.

In politics Mr. Dutcher has always been a staunch Democrat, and has held a number of offices. He has been inspector of elections in his district for nineteen years, school trustee for the same length of time, and is now serving his sixteenth term as justice of the peace.

THEODORE S. HORTON is proprietor of one of the most noticeable homesteads in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, pleasantly situated about eight miles from Poughkeepsie. His pleasant residence is flanked by a good barn and the various other buildings required by the progressive agriculturist. As a tiller of the soil he is thorough and skillful, and has been uniformly fortunate in his investments.

Mr. Horton spent his boyhood days in the town of Esopus, Ulster county, where his birth took place August 19, 1848, at the home of his parents, John and Phœbe (Stoutenburgh) Horton, both natives of Ulster county. His paternal grandfather, David Horton, was a farmer of that county, where he was married and spent his remaining days. The Stoutenburghs were of Holland descent, formerly bearing the name of Van Stoutenburgh. The maternal grandfather, Herman Stoutenburgh, was also an agriculturist of Ulster county. After their marriage the parents of our subject located on a farm in the town of Esopus, where they reared their two children: Elizabeth and Theodore S. Besides his farming operations the father also conducted a grist and saw mill. His political support was given the Republican party, while he and his wife attended the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was called from this life in 1855, and his wife, who survived him for many years, died January 13, 1895.

The early days of Theodore S. Horton were spent upon the farm where his birth occurred; but at the age of eight years he came to the town of Pleasant Valley, to live with his grandfather, and here obtained a fair education. In 1866 he went to Poughkeepsie town, Dutchess county, where he lived on the farm of his uncle, David Stoutenburgh, and there followed farming.

On November 6, 1873, was consummated the marriage of Mr. Horton and Miss Jennie Underwood, who was born on the farm where she now resides, and is a daughter of Gerald Underwood, also a native of the town of Pleasant Valley, and of Holland lineage. To them have been born three children, all at home, namely: G. Kendel, Lispnard S. and Flavius. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Horton continued to live on a farm in the town of Poughkeepsie until the spring of 1891, when they removed to their present fine farm of 188 acres of rich and fertile land. He is a progressive and enterprising farmer, public-spirited to a high degree, and an ardent supporter of the Democratic party. Both he and his wife attend the Baptist Church, to which they are liberal contributors. They hold a high position in the social circles of the community.

JOHN W. LINK is one of the most prominent among the energetic and successful farmers of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county. His life history clearly illustrates what may be attained by faith and continued effort in carrying out an honest purpose. Integrity, activity and energy have been the crowning points of his success, and have enabled him to accumulate all that he now possesses.

William Link, his father, was born about 1798 in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, of which locality the grandparents, Philip and ——— (Cookingham) Link, were early residents and farming people. William was the second in their family of seven children, and in the common schools of the neighborhood received his education. On attaining manhood he was married, in the town of Milan, to Elizabeth Pells, a daughter of John Pells, and to them were born six children: John W., the subject of this review; Eliza Ann (deceased); Jeremiah; Henry (deceased); Helen and Charles. For some time after his marriage the father worked by the day, but later engaged in farming on his own account, and from no source whatever did he ever receive financial assistance.

In the town of Milan, December 11, 1817, John W. Link was born, and he there attended school. On starting out in life for himself he first worked as a farm hand, later learning the carpenter's trade, at which he was employed some twenty-five years. His first purchase of land comprised a farm in his native township, which he operated for twelve years; but in 1864 he bought his present farm in the town of Clinton, to the improvement and cultivation of which he has since devoted his time and attention with remarkable success.

In Albany, N. Y., November 13, 1851, Mr. Link was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Hicks, who was born June 20, 1823, in the town of Milan, Dutchess county. Her father, David Hicks, was born in the town of Pine Plains, in 1797, and in the town of Clinton he was married in the Quaker faith to Miss Mary Gildersleeve, who was born in that township in 1798. He died in 1884, she in 1889, and they were the parents of nine children, Mrs. Link being third in the family and eldest of those yet living. Benjamin Hicks, grandfather of Mrs. Link, born in 1751, became an early settler of Dutchess county. He married Deborah Doty, and to them were born eight children, all now deceased. The family were Quakers in religious belief. Mr. and Mrs. Link rank among the oldest living pioneers of Dutchess county, the family having been connected therewith about 200 years, and they command the respect and esteem of all with whom they come in contact. Mr. Link has been a lifelong Democrat, and has served as road master in the town of Clinton. At all times he has taken an active interest in the welfare and prosperity of his town and county.

GEORGE F. PHESAY, a leading watchmaker and jeweler of Matteawan, Dutchess county, and one of the most enterprising of the young business men of that place, is the proprietor of an establishment which compares favorably for equipment and variety of stock with any of its kind along the Hudson river. His success is the more worthy of note because it is founded upon his own efforts, and his term of apprenticeship was served at the same place which he now occupies as owner.

His parents, John and Ellen (Rhine) Phesay, were both born in England, his father at Kidderminster, his mother in London. On coming to America in 1856, his father, who was a gardener by occupation, located first at Matteawan and except for some years at Troy, N. Y., the greater portion of his time was spent there. Our subject was one of eight children, of whom two died in childhood. The survivors are Carrie Emma (Mrs. Albert Yates), John K., James K., Ellen Nora, George F. and Mary Elizabeth (Mrs. Frederick Way).

George F. Phesay was born at Lansingburg, N. Y., September 13, 1864, and was educated in the public schools of Matteawan, his parents having returned from Troy where he was about five years old. After leaving school he entered the employ of Capt. Fairbanks of the steamer "Martin," plying between Newburg and Albany, and took charge of his conservatories, the fine collection of orchids being his especial care. He remained there about a year, and then spent a few months in the Matteawan Manufacturing Company's works, but finally found thoroughly congenial employment in the jewelry store of the late A. Townsend, where he learned the business in all its branches. After the death of Mr. Townsend in 1894, Mr. Phesay remained in charge of the store for a time, and in November of that year he bought the fixtures from the heirs and started in business on his own account at the same location, opening on December 1, 1894, with an entirely new stock, his choice selection displaying artistic taste as well as sound business judgment.

Mr. Phesay married Miss Louise Ticehurst daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Tomlins) Ficehurst, prominent residents of Matteawan, and has two sons, Charles Frederick and George Simms Pheasay. He and his wife attend the Episcopal Church, and are among the leaders in the various social and charitable activities of the Church. In politics Mr. Pheasay is a Republican, and he is a member of Hudson River Lodge No. 57, of the fraternal order of Knights of Pythias.

EGBERT DOTY. We are now permitted to touch briefly upon the life history of one who has retained a personal association with the affairs of Dutchess county since his infancy, and one whose ancestral line traces back to the Colonial period. His life has been one of honest and earnest endeavor, and no success has not been denied him. He is a native son of the county, his birth having occurred in the town of Pleasant Valley, January 23, 1827; but his entire married life has been passed in the town of Clinton, where he owns a valuable farm, highly cultivated and well improved, with all the accessories to be found upon a model farm of the nineteenth century.

Samuel Doty, father of our subject, was so born in the town of Pleasant Valley, and was a son of Stephen Doty, an early resident of that locality. On reaching maturity Samuel was married in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, to Elizabeth Briggs, and eight children were born to them, in order of birth as follows: George, Henry and Martha (deceased); Stephen, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Egbert, of this sketch; Joseph, of the town of Pleasant Valley; Mary, wife of Paul Flagler; and Hiram (deceased). In his native township the father continued to follow farming until his death, which occurred in 1872; his wife died in 1845. He was a self-made man, who by sheer force of will and untiring effort worked his way upward until he has secured a comfortable competence.

Egbert Doty grew up on the home farm, receiving his primary education in the district schools, and later was a student in the Amenia Academy. On November 19, 1856, he was united in marriage, in the town of Hyde Park, with Mary B. Wood, a daughter of George R. Wood, and was called to her final rest March 22, 1892, leaving a loving husband and two children, besides innumerable friends, to mourn their loss. The daughter, Josephine W., is the wife of Abram J. Conover. The son, Norman J., acquired his education in the public school of the town of Clinton, and the Poughkeepsie Military Institute. He still remains upon the home farm with his father, and on November 5, 1891, in Clinton town, he wedded Carrie M. Hicks, a daughter of George S. and Emma (Foster) Hicks. They have a son, Foster W., born August 24, 1893.

A man of unswerving integrity and honor, one who has a perfect appreciation of the higher ethics of life, Mr. Doty has gained and retained the confidence and respect of his fellow men, and is distinctively one of the leading citizens of the town of Clinton, with whose interests he has always been identified.

FRANK P. MEAD. Among the wide-awake young farmers of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, there is probably none more energetic and reliable than the gentleman whose name begins this sketch. He has made many valuable and useful improvements upon his place, and has the land under a high state of cultivation.

John Franklin Mead, father of our subject, was a native of the town of Amenia, born March 16, 1836, and died there on the home-stead farm, September 1, 1890. His boyhood days were there passed, much in the usual manner of farmer lads, and he attended the district schools and the Amenia Seminary, acquiring a good practical education. His life was devoted to the pursuit to which he was reared, and he also served as director of the First National Bank of Amenia, and president of the Amenia and Sharon Land Co., of North Dakota. He was numbered among the public-spirited men of the county, and was one of the most interested in its development and progress. A conscientious Christian, he was a member of the Baptist Church of Amenia, in which he served as deacon; politically he was a Republican, and for one term filled the office of supervisor of his township. In the town of Amenia he married Mary Mygatt, daughter of Ambrose Mygatt, and three children blessed their union: Emma, now the wife of Jacob Peters, of Amenia; Edward, of the same place, and Frank Presson, of this review.

The birth of our subject occurred in the town of Amenia, December 13, 1869, and on reaching a sufficient age he attended school at Perry's Corners, in Northeast, was later a student in the Amenia Seminary and the Reed school at Lakeville, Conn., and completed his education at the Housatonic Valley Institute at Cornwall, Conn. On December 15, 1892, in Amenia town, he was united in marriage with Miss Laura Belle Bartram, only daughter of Barney and Laura G. (Culver) Bartram. He has always turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and is now operating the old Bartram farm.

Barney Bartram was born at Redding, Conn., in 1808, and was a cattle broker in New York City the greater part of his business life. In 1867 he came to Amenia, where he built the present residence of our subject, and resided there during the summer months, but the winter seasons he still spent in New York. At Pine Plains, Dutchess county, he married Miss Laura G. Culver, who survived him some time, dying in 1887, while his death occurred in 1878. In religious belief he was a Methodist, and he was a most highly esteemed and honored citizen.

THEODORE WHEELER, a prosperous agriculturist, residing near South Dover, Dutchess county, is one of the substantial citizens of the town of Dover.

His father, Thomas Wheeler, was a well-known drover and farmer, residing near Wing Station, and owned about 1,000 acres of fine land. He was born in Dover in 1814, and in 1837 was married to Rhoda Ann Oney, of Otsego county, who was born in 1812. They had three sons: Theodore, Obed and William.

Theodore Wheeler was born in 1837 at the old homestead in Dover, and, in 1858, he was united in matrimony with Miss Jane A. Chapman. They have one son, Thomas S. Wheeler, who was born in Dover, May 22, 1862, and was educated at Peekskill, N. Y. Since his graduation he has been engaged in business in New York City as a broker, and he is a member of the Produce Exchange of that place. He married Miss Addie Mayer, daughter of Gilford Mayer, a well-known insurance agent of Plainfield, N. J., and his wife, Ophelia. Mrs. Jane A. Wheeler, was born in Dover, March 16, 1837, and was educated in the local schools. She is a lady of unusual ability and force of character, and is descended from an old Connecticut family. Her grandfather, John Chapman, was born and educated in that State, whence he came to the town of Dover. He and his wife, Catherine (Briggs), reared a family of four children: Henry, Richard, Ann (now Mrs. Bishop) and Sarah A. (now Mrs. Henry Fiero).

Richard Chapman, Mrs. Wheeler's father, was a native of the town of Dover, born in 1810. He was carefully educated, and as he possessed mechanical ability of a high order he decided to learn the carpenter's trade, which he followed until he was forty years old. He then moved to Pawling, Dutchess county, and engaged in the restaurant business. No desire for political distinction was ever manifested by him, but he ardently believed in the principles of the Democratic party, and never failed to support them as occasion permitted. He married Miss Sarah Wheeler, daughter of Sebastian Wheeler, a prosperous farmer, and his wife, Phœbe (Wing). The five children of Richard and Sarah Chapman were: Francis, Jane A., Sarah L., Perry M. and Emma M. Of these, (1) Francis, born July 11, 1835, was educated in the schools of his native town, and then engaged in the mercantile business in Pawling. After some years he went to New York City as a bookkeeper, and died there. His wife was Miss Jennie M. Bishop, daughter of Rev. Bishop. They had no children. (3) Sarah L., born May 14, 1839, married William B. Ross, a merchant of the town of Dover, and they have three children: William J., Charles (who married Miss Ida Woodman) and George W. (4) Perry M., born March 27, 1841, engaged in the restaurant business with his father, after he had completed his course of study in the local schools. During the Civil war he served as a soldier in defense of the Union cause. He married Miss Ann Thomas, daughter of Charles Thomas, a well-known farmer and blacksmith of Dover. Five children were born of this union: Cora T. (now Mrs. George Daniels), Albert, Ross, Fred and Emma. (5) Emma M. married George W. Chase, cashier of the Pawling Bank, and they have had two children: Nellie T. and George CLARENCE E. YOUNG. The subject of this sketch was born in Poughkeepsie Dutchess county, August 14, 1851, and is the son of Edward H. and Phœbe (Frost) Young the former of whom was born in the town of Milton, Ulster county, and the latter in Dutchess county.

Our subject spent his boyhood on the farm and attending the public schools and the Dutchess County Academy. After finishing his education he worked on the farm, where he is at present occupied in the business of gardener and florist. He was married in 1876 to Miss Rebecca U. Underhill, who was born in Queens county, L. I. Her father, Jacob Underhill, was a farmer, and came of Irish ancestors. Two children have been born to our subject and wife: Edith M. and Blanch. Mr. Young has a farm just outside the city limits, where he raises vegetables, garden supplies and flowers. He has a fine residence on the place. He is a progressive citizen, a Prohibitionist, and, with his wife, is a member of the Reformed Church.

Edward H. Young grew up in Ulster county and married Miss Frost, who was the daughter of James Frost, a farmer. They lived for some time in Ulster county, and then moved to Poughkeepsie and purchased their farm in 1850, on which their present house was built in 1851. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Young: Annie, who married William M. DuBois, a farmer of Charles county, Maryland; Thoebe, unmarried; Hannah, who died in 1885; and Clarence E., our subject. Mr. Young died in 1878, and his wife in 1887. He was a Republican.

Edward Young, grandfather of our subject, was also born in Ulster county. He married Miss Cromwell, and they reared the following children: John, a farmer in Ulster county, now deceased; David was a farmer in Pleasant valley, and is now deceased; Alexander is a farmer in Orange county; William is on a farm in the town of Marlborough, Ulster Co., New York.

JOHN R. BARRETT, the junior member of the well-known firm of Humeston & Barrett, leading blacksmiths and wagon makers of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is one of the prominent young business men of that village. He is a native of the place, born in 1865, and after acquiring his education in the public schools he learned the blacksmith's trade of William Barhite, of Amenia. In 1878 he established his present shop at Dover Plains in partnership with Meritt Humeston, and his success in this enterprise has given him excellent standing in financial circles.

His family is of Irish origin, the home of his ancestors being at Doneraile, County Cork, Ireland. James Barrett, his grandfather, was born and educated there and became a farmer by occupation. He married Margaret Mahoney and had five children, of whom the youngest died in infancy. The others were: James and Mary, who never married; Ellen, Mrs. James Cullen, and Richard, our subject's father, who, after attending the schools of Doneraile until the age of fourteen, came to America and settled, in 1851, at Dover Plains. For a number of years he was employed by the Belding estate, and then he went to New York City and engaged in the mercantile business for one year, and, on returning to the town of Dover, followed farming during his later years, with J. K. Mabbet. He always took an intelligent interest in public questions, but was not actively engaged in politics. He and his wife, Mary Gorings, reared a family of seven children: Maggie, Mrs. William Donovan; Ellen, Mrs. William Burns; Mary, Mrs. Thomas Whalen; James, who married Della Murray; John, our subject; George, who married Nellie Dahoney; and Richard, who married Annie Donley.

The subject of our sketch found a worthy helpmeet in Miss Anna Quinlan, a lady of Irish descent, and their home is brightened by three children: Frank, born December 21, 1885; Arthur, September 22, 1890; and Gertrude, October 6, 1892. Mrs. Barrett's father, Martin Quinlan, was a native of Ireland, but came to America in boyhood with his parents, who located upon a farm in town of Unionvale, Dutchess Co. He attended the schools of that locality for some time, and in early manhood purchased a farm near Burbank, where he still resides. He married Miss Mary McLaughlin, who was also born in the Emerald Isle, and they have eleven children: William, who married Sarah Quinlan; Maggie, Mrs. Thomas Mullen; Daniel, who married Annie Donley; Martin, Charles, Terrance, Ella and Hattie, who are not married; Delia, the wife of John McKenna; George, unmarried; and Annie, now Mrs. Barrett.

ALEXANDER BISHOP, JR., a prominent agriculturist of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, residing near New Hackensack, is one of the most highly respected citizens of that locality, a long life of quiet, unobtrusive usefulness having gained him the esteem of a large circle of acquaintances.

His family is among the oldest in Dutchess county. His great-grandfather, an Englishman by birth, was a pioneer farmer in the town of Fishkill, where Caleb Bishop, our subject's father, was born. By occupation he was a farmer and lime burner. He married Hannah Phillips, and settled on a farm in the town of Poughkeepsie, where they reared a family of nine children.

Gabriel Bishop, their fourth child, grew to manhood at the old homestead and engaged in the business of boating for some years. Politically he was a Democrat. He married Hester Yates, a native of the same town, and daughter of John Yates, a well-known hotel-keeper. Her grandfather came to Dutchess county from Ireland. After his marriage Gabriel Bishop settled in his native town, and of his nine children the majority located upon farms in Dutchess county. The eldest, William, was a boatman on the Hudson; Jackson was a farmer in his native town; John, Alexander, Samuel and Caleb all engaged in farming; Mary Ann married Joseph Randolph, a jeweler; Catherine married Charles Deering, a farmer; and Hester never married. The family has always been identified with the Reformed Dutch Church, and various members have taken an active part in local affairs.

Alexander Bishop was born February 4, 1820, and lived at the old farm until he was twenty-four years of age, when he married Miss Jane Kirkland, the daughter of a farmer of Greene county, N. Y., who died when she was a mere infant. She was adopted and reared by the Rev. Van Cleef. The young couple made their first home upon a farm in the town of Lagrange, but in 1876 they moved to their present property, a fine farm of 110 acres devoted to mixed crops. Mrs. Bishop died in 1886, leaving a family of four children: Alexander, Jr., assists his father in the management of the farm, and is one of the influential young men of that vicinity, holding the office of commissioner of highways; Cornelius Van-Cleef is an undertaker in Wappinger Falls; Gertrude and Nellie are at home. Mr. Bishop has always been an interested student of public questions, and in politics is a Democrat.

CHARLES S. HEANEY, the enterprising proprietor of the "Oak Hotel and Café" at Fishkill Landing, and of another popular café on Main street, Fishkill, was born September 8, 1867, in Bucks county, Penn., where his parents, who were both natives of that locality, now reside.

William Heaney, his father, has been engaged in agriculture, and in boating on the canal for many years, and is well known in that section. In politics he is a Democrat, and he and his wife, Emily (Buck), are devout members of the Roman Catholic Church. They had five children: Henry, a canal man in Pennsylvania; Isaac, a blacksmith and butcher by trade; John, who met his death at the age of twenty-seven in a street-car fire at Trenton, N. J.; Charles S., our subject; and Anna, wife of George Mich, a boatman, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

Charles S. Heaney spent the first sixteen years of his life at home, and then began work upon the canal, contributing his wages, until he was twenty-one, toward the support of the family. On attaining his majority he went to New York City, and for some time ran a barge for the Montrose Brick Co., but since December, 1891, he has been engaged in the hotel business at Fishkill Landing, and has also been interested in the wholesale beer trade as agent for Quinn & Nolan, of Albany, N. Y. On July 29, 1896, he added to these lines of enterprise a café in the Opera House block at Fishkill, his business sagacity being supported by an apparently limitless energy.

On January 4, 1898, he was married to Miss Mary Quirk, daughter of Michael Quirk, a well-known resident of Fishkill Landing, who is of Irish descent. Two children, Lillian and Ellen, bless this union. In his political views Mr. Heaney is not hampered by partisan ties, and his vote is cast according to the requirements of the times. He is a prominent member of the Church of St. John The Evangelist (Roman Catholic), at Fishkill Landing, and is identified with the Catholic Benevolent League and Catholic Order of Foresters.

OLIVER KEES SMITH. This gentleman is generally known as one of the substantial farmers of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, but he now leases his land, and devotes his time and attention to the fire-insurance business, having represented the Continental Company for about ten years. He was eminently successful as a tiller of the soil, and is a man of keen intellect, sound judgment and business ability. His early home was at Bear Market, in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where his birth took place July 1, 1834.

Q. H. Smith

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Stephen R. Smith, was born about 1768, in Rhode Island, where he married Miss Rhoda Harris. On leaving his native State he came to Dutchess county on horseback, his wife and three children accompanying him, locating first in the town of Stanford, where he followed the occupation of a farmer, later becoming a resident of the town of Clinton. He held membership with the Society of Friends. In his family of nine children, Rufus Smith, the father of our subject, was next to the youngest, and was born in the town of Stanford, June 8, 1805. In the schools of that township and at Clinton Corners he received his education, and he continued to remain on the old homestead farm for two years after his marriage. On December 3, 1828, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, Mr. Smith married Elizabeth Thorne, who was born December 19, 1808, and they became the parents of three children, namely: (1) Cynthia T., who married Thomas I. Wing, and they have two daughters—Annie and Carrie. (2) Caroline, who married Welcome Johnson, of Minneapolis, Minn., and they have three children—Frank (who is married, and has two daughters, Marie and Elizabeth); Elizabeth and George S. (3) Oliver K., subject of this sketch. The entire business career of the father was spent in farming in the town of Stanford, where he served as supervisor about 1847, and there his death occurred January 8, 1881. He was a member of the Friends church. The mother of our subject is a daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Thorn) Thorne, while her paternal and maternal grandfathers bore the name of Joseph Thorne and Joseph Thorn, respectively, although the former was of French and the latter was of English origin. Joseph Thorne was born in 1745, and married Sarah Kees; Joseph Thorn was born in 1749. The entire life of Stephen Thorne was passed in the town of Washington, where he was married, and where were born to him five children: Anne K., Cynthia, Elizabeth, Hannah and Joseph.

Oliver K. Smith, the subject proper of these lines, acquired his education in part at a school at New Milford, Conn., in part at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, and became familiar with the various phases of farm life under the capable instruction of his father. He remained under the parental roof until his marriage, when he removed to his present residence in the town of Stanford. On September 24, 1863, in the town of Pleasant Valley, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Hannah P. Halstead, a daughter of Joseph G. Halstead, of Clinton town, and to them were born three children: Lizzie, wife of Harry Decker, of New York City, by whom she has one child—Elaine; and Thorne and Florence, both deceased.

Mr. Smith is a progressive man, pre-eminently public-spirited, and all that pertains to the public welfare receives his hearty endorsement. For three terms he served as assessor of his township, being elected on the Republican ticket, and by the Democratic party was elected supervisor, filling that position for one term. He is emphatically a man of enterprise, positive character, indomitable energy, strict integrity and liberal views, thoroughly identified with the prosperity and welfare of his town and county. He is a stanch and loyal friend, fond of good fellowship, and devoted to those who have his confidence.

ALBERT R. BRYANT, a prominent young business man of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is a descendant of an old English family long established at Bristol, England, where many of his ancestors were connected with the business of hat manufacturing.

His great-grandfather, Richard Bryant, and grandfather, Jonathan Bryant, were thus engaged throughout their manhood, and his father, the late George Bryant, who was born in Bristol, learned the same trade there, and on coming to America, at the age of eighteen, continued it for many years. He located first at Newark, N. J., where he met and married Miss Elizabeth Simmonds, a native of England, whose father, John Simmonds, brought his family to the United States during her youth and settled at Bloomfield, N. J. The early years of their wedded life were spent in Newark, but later they removed to Yonkers, N. Y., and finally to Matteawan, where Mr. George Bryant followed the hotel business for about seventeen years. He was a man who took a generous interest in everything that pertained to the welfare of his adopted country, and in politics was a stanch Republican. He and his wife and business ability. His early home was at Bear Market, in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where his birth took place July 1, 1834.

The paternal grandfather of our subject, Stephen R. Smith, was born about 1768, in Rhode Island, where he married Miss Rhoda Harris. On leaving his native State he came to Dutchess county on horseback, his wife and three children accompanying him, locating first in the town of Stanford, where he followed the occupation of a farmer, later becoming a resident of the town of Clinton. He held membership with the Society of Friends. In his family of nine children, Rufus Smith, the father of our subject, was next to the youngest, and was born in the town of Stanford, June 8, 1805. In the schools of that township and at Clinton Corners he received his education, and he continued to remain on the old homestead farm for two years after his marriage. On December 3, 1828, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, Mr. Smith married Elizabeth Thorne, who was born December 19, 1808, and they became the parents of three children, namely: (1) Cynthia T., who married Thomas I. Wing, and they have two daughters—Annie and Carrie. (2) Caroline, who married Welcome Johnson, of Minneapolis, Minn., and they have three children—Frank (who is married, and has two daughters, Marie and Elizabeth); Elizabeth and George S. (3) Oliver K., subject of this sketch. The entire business career of the father was spent in farming in the town of Stanford, where he served as supervisor about 1847, and there his death occurred January 8, 1881. He was a member of the Friends Church. The mother of our subject is a daughter of Stephen and Sarah (Thorn) Thorne, while her paternal and maternal grandfathers bore the name of Joseph Thorne and Joseph Thorn, respectively, although the former was of French and the latter was of English origin. Joseph Thorne was born in 1745, and married Sarah Kees; Joseph Thorn was born in 1749. The entire life of Stephen Thorne was passed in the town of Washington, where he was married, and where were born to him five children: Anne K., Cynthia, Elizabeth, Hannah and Joseph.

Oliver K. Smith, the subject proper of these pages, acquired his education in part at a school at New Milford, Conn., in part at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, and became familiar with the various phases of farm life under the capable instruction of his father. He remained under the parental roof until his marriage, when he removed to his present residence in the town of Stanford. On September 24, 1863, in the town of Pleasant Valley, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Hannah P. Halstead, a daughter of Joseph G. Halstead, of Clinton town, and to them were born three children: Lizzie, wife of Harry Decker, of New York City, by whom she has one child—Elaine; and Thorne and Florence, both deceased.

Mr. Smith is a progressive man, pre-eminently public-spirited, and all that pertains to the public welfare receives his hearty endorsement. For three terms he served as assessor of his township, being elected on the Republican ticket, and by the Democratic party was elected supervisor, filling that position for one term. He is emphatically a man of enterprise, positive character, indomitable energy, strict integrity and liberal views, thoroughly identified with the prosperity and welfare of his town and county. He is a staunch and loyal friend, fond of good fellowship, and devoted to those who have his confidence.

ALBERT R. BRYANT, a prominent young business man of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is a descendant of an old English family long established at Bristol, England, where many of his ancestors were connected with the business of hat manufacturing.

His great-grandfather, Richard Bryant, and grandfather, Jonathan Bryant, were thus engaged throughout their manhood, and his father, the late George Bryant, who was born in Bristol, learned the same trade there, and on coming to America, at the age of eighteen, continued it for many years. He located first at Newark, N. J., where he met and married Miss Elizabeth Simmonds, a native of England, whose father, John Simmonds, brought his family to the United States during her youth and settled at Bloomfield, N. J. The early years of their wedded life were spent in Newark, but later they removed to Yonkers, N. Y., and finally to Matteawan, where Mr. George Bryant followed the hotel business for about seventeen years. He was a man who took a generous interest in everything that pertained to the welfare of his adopted country, and in politics was a staunch Republican. He and his wife were members of the M. E. Church. She passed to the unseen life in 1871, and his death occurred March 11, 1888. They had five children: George H., who is now in the Marine Hospital at Stapleton, L. I.; John Edward, a hatter by occupation; Lucy, now Mrs. Newton Quick, of Yonkers; Albert, our subject, and Robert, who died at the age of five years.

Albert R. Bryant was born at Yonkers, N. Y., July 7, 1862, and was about five years old when his parents removed to Matteawan. He attended school at that place for a time, and then entered a private school in New York City, where he remained about twelve years. On completing his course he returned to Matteawan and learned the hatter's trade, which may be said to be hereditary in his family, preferring the hotel business, in which he was engaged for nine years at the corner of Water and Fountain streets. In March, 1888, he opened a saloon at the same site, and has ever since conducted it. He has gained the friendship of many people, and is also successful financially, owning a large amount of valuable real estate at Matteawan, including the "Commercial House."

In 1881, Mr. Bryant was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Forsyth, a native of Orange county, N. Y., and a daughter of Joseph Forsyth, a well-known resident of that locality. Two children were born of this union: Edna E. and George A. Mr. Bryant is an ardent advocate of Republican principles, and socially is connected with various organizations, being an active member of the B. P. O. E., the Foresters of America, and the Beacon Hose Co., of which he was foreman for three years and is now chief engineer.

JAMES B. TRIPP, the able manager of an extensive stock farm at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is considered an authority upon all questions relating to the training and care of that noble animal, the horse. His experience as foreman of large stock farms at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Danbury, Conn., has admirably fitted him for his present responsible position with H. N. Bain, of Dover Plains.

Mr. Tripp is a descendant of one of our old families, his grandfather, John Tripp, having been a native of Dutchess county. He became a farmer by occupation and for many years lived at Ancram, Columbia county. His wife was Cynthia Adzit, of Bangall, Dutchess county, and they reared a family of nine children: Daniel I. married (first) Dameris Myers, and (second) Mrs. Adaline Sharp; David K.; Elisha married Miss West; Benjamin, Miss Shultz; Mariette, Henry Keefer; Anthony, Rebecca Keefer; Rachel, Myron Hamblin; Loretta, Henry Dayton; and James, our subject's father, chose for his life partner Emma Card, daughter of Esson and Lottie (Wetherill) Card, of Ancram. He was engaged in farming in that vicinity all his life, and died there January 14, 1896. Of his six children our subject is the eldest. The others are: Cynthia, Mrs. James R. Paine; Mary K., Mrs. George Mitchell; Emma L., Mrs. Marks Senigo; Sarah, Mrs. Howard Thompson; and Myra, Mrs. Harry Dewsnap.

The subject of our sketch was born in Ancram in 1854, and for some time after leaving school was engaged in farming, but in early manhood acquired a high reputation in his present calling. He has always been a Democrat in politics, and takes an intelligent interest in public affairs. On November 3, 1886, he was married to Miss Ella Van Steenberg, a lady of fine mental ability and culture, who previous to her marriage was a successful teacher at Millerton and in Columbia county. She was born in Amenia in 1867, and was educated by her father, George Steenberg, a well-known resident of that place. Her ancestors were among the early settlers in that vicinity, and her grandfather, Henry Van Steenberg, was born and reared there, and became a prominent farmer. He married Miss Anna Blass, of the same town, and had eight children, whose names, with those of their partners in matrimony, are as follows: Philip, Sarah Hunt; Ezra, Nellie Berrian; John, Harriet Green; George, Mary Rowe; Hampton, Hattie Melloy; Gernsey, Mary Drake; Emmett, Phœbe Odell; and Coralie, Henry Pitcher. George Van Steenberg grew to manhood at the old farm, and was graduated from the Amenia Seminary. He learned the carpenter's trade, but, finding teaching more to his liking, he followed that calling nineteen years. In politics he was a steadfast Democrat, and never lacked the courage to express his convictions upon any subject. Mrs. Tripp is the only living child, two sons having died, Walter in infancy, and Hubert at the age of nineteen. Her mother, Mrs. Mar Rowe, was a direct descendant of the Moravia missionaries of that name who came to this country to instruct the Indians in the Christian faith. Orville Rowe, one of Mary Rowe's ancestors, was a prominent farmer of White Plains, Dutchess county, and his wife was Miss Elizabeth Pitcher, of Johnson's Corners.

CHARLES E. BOYCE, a prominent resident of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, at present holding the office of constable, is the proprietor of a popular meat market in Dover Plains. He is a native of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where several generations of his family have made their home. His grandfather, Jacob Boyce, was born and educated there, and spent his life in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Holmes, and reared a family of nine children: Margaret, Mrs. Henry Van Dewater; Sarah A., Mrs. Alfred Van Dewater; Olive, Mrs. Levi Ambler; Eliza and Nargette, who never married; Amy, Mrs. Drury; Edwin, our subject's father; Isaac, who married Miss Allen; and Levi, who married Catherine Ambler.

Edwin Boyce was born at the old homestead in the town of Stanford, September 19, 1812, and died May 13, 1861. He was educated in the district schools of that locality, and afterward engaged in farming. He was married to Miss Sabrina Betts, who was born in 1820, and of this union four children were born: James H., Henrietta, Charles E. and Mary F.

The subject of our sketch enjoyed the usual educational privileges of a farmer's boy, later learned the butcher's trade, and also worked at carpentering for some time. Since his removal to Dover Plains he has conducted a meat market with gratifying success, and has taken an active part in local affairs. His partner in life's journey is Kate Titus, daughter of Alexander Titus, and they have had three children: Ethel May, born January 1, 1882; Alice Titus, born April 8, 1888, and Eugene Holmes, born May 15, 1890.

The Titus family has been prominent in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, for many years, and Mrs. Boyce's grandfather, Jackson Titus, was born and educated there, and later became a prosperous miller. He and his wife, Hannah Conklin, reared a family of four children: Alexander, Mrs. Boyce's father; Stephen, who married (first) Harriet Burlingame, and (second) Mary Burlingame; Mott, who never married; and Ruth Amelia, Mrs. Joseph Titus. Alexander Titus was born in 1821, and received his early education in the district schools of Washington town. He engaged in the milling business for a time, but the greater part of his life was spent in farming. He married Letitia Strang, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Adriance) Strang, and had six children: Kate, Mrs. Boyce; Edward, who married Josephine Stansbury; Anna, Mrs. Charles Rich; Eleanor, the wife of Charles Gilbert; Stephen, who married Estella Out-house; and Lillian, the wife of Charles Lewis. Mr. Titus was a prominent Republican, and held all the important offices in his town at different times, from supervisor down. He was also an active member of the order of Odd Fellows.

JOHAN B. WALDO is the owner of one of the finest fruit farms in East Fishkill town, Dutchess county. Around his handsome residence the grounds are beautifully laid out, and altogether it presents a most attractive picture. He was born upon this place at Johnsville, on June 2, 1846. It comprises 175 acres of rich land, and was the last farm to be parted with or left by the Indians, and was used by them also as a burying ground. A part of an old Indian orchard, which at one time was four miles long, is still standing, and when the father of our subject was a boy a party of Indians returned here from the West and camped on the farm near the mountains for the purpose of viewing their former home.

Charles Waldo, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Windham, Conn., and after his marriage with Elizabeth Besley located in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, but the latter part of his life was passed in the West, where his death occurred. By profession he was a physician and surgeon.

William B. Waldo, the father of our subject, was an only child, and was born at Brinckerhoff, in Fishkill town, May 5, 1805. He grew to manhood on the farm now owned by our subject, and was a graduate of Union College, at Newburg, N. Y. He studied law, was admitted to the bar at Poughkeepsie, and began practice at Brooklyn, but owing to ill health he gave up his profession, returning to the farm in the spring of 1838, where he continued to reside up to the time of his death, on June 14, 1867. He took an active interest in the success and welfare of the Whig party, which he always supported by his ballot, and was a most influential and prominent citizen of the community.

The mother of our subject, who bore the maiden name of Jane Ann Bruce, is a native of New York City, and is still living. Her father, John M. Bruce, was a prominent merchant of that place, and was among the first to import tin and sheet iron in Dutchess county. The Bruce family principally were members of the Baptist Church, while the Waldos were Presbyterians. Only two children were born to the parents of our subject, his sister being Elizabeth, who married Rev. G. T. Woodhull, now professor of languages in Lincoln University, Pennsylvania:

The boyhood of John B. Waldo was spent upon his present farm, and, after attending the local schools, he became a student in an academy at Newburgh, N. Y. On the death of his father, however, he returned home, and has since had charge of the farm, where he now devotes special attention to fruit culture, raising grapes, apples, peaches, etc., with most gratifying results, which fact shows that he thoroughly understands his business.

On January 14, 1872, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Waldo and Miss Helen Brett, whose birth occurred at Johnsville. Her father, James Brett, and her grandfather, Robert Rombout Brett, were also natives of the town of East Fishkill, and farmers by occupation. They were descended from the old patentee, Madam Brett. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Waldo: Jane Ann, who was born October 30, 1873, and died December 14 following; an infant, who died unnamed; William B., who was born November 23, 1874, and has been an engineer on the Long Island railroad since sixteen years of age; Lewis H., who was born March 5, 1877, and is at this writing at home; James B., who was born April 21, 1878, and died May 30, 1893; John M., who was born May 3, 1879, and has just graduated from the Albany Business College; Oliver W., born May 20, 1880; Elizabeth W., born January 1, 1882, and Helen A., born January 27, 1883. The wife and mother was called to her final rest October 11, 1890. Politically, Mr. Waldo is a Republican, and does all in his power to promote the welfare and prosperity of his native town and county.

WILLIAM W. BAKER, a prominent agriculturist and business man of Clinton Hollow, Dutchess county, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born September 25, 1843, in Poughkeepsie, New York.

His family has long been well known in the county. His grandfather, Jesse Baker, was born in the town of Beekman, N. Y., in 1778 and died in Lagrange, N. Y., January 22, 1849, having passed his life in agricultural pursuits. He was an elder of the Presbyterian Church of Freedom Plains, and held an influential position in the community. He married Sarah Morgan, and reared a family of six children, all now deceased, giving to all of them good educations. Their names are Thomas D., Abram, Susan, Maria, Catherine and John M.

The youngest son, our subject's father, was born in the town of Beekman, November 16, 1815. His boyhood was spent in the town of Lagrange, where he attended schools, and in early manhood he engaged in the grocery business in Poughkeepsie, at the corner of Main and South Hamilton streets. Later he followed the carpenter's trade in the town of Lagrange. He was married July 17, 1839, at No. 97 Orchard street, New York, by Rev. S. Benedict, to Eunice M. Wolvern, and by this union there were two sons: Jesse I. and William W. Of these, Jesse I., born March 20, 1841, attended the schools of Lagrange in early life, and learned the blacksmith's trade. On August 19, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, 128th N. Y. V. I., and died February 4, 1863, at Camp Chalmette, Louisiana.

William W. Baker, our subject, grew to manhood in Lagrange, enjoying the ordinary life of the country boy, and making the most of the advantages offered by the district schools. At the age of eighteen he enlisted on the same day with his brother, and in the same company, the regiment being assigned first to the Department of the Gulf, and later to the forces in the Shenandoah Valley. He served throughout the war, fortunately escaping his brother's sad fate, and after being mustered out, June 7, 1865, he returned home. He worked at the painter's trade for two years in Lagrange, also for four years in the town of Clinton, later engaging in agriculture near Clinton Hollow, buying a farm after working it on shares for two years. His progressive ideas and energetic management have brought him marked success, and he now owns two

Carrie S Baker

William H Baker
Late of Co I 128th M G S A good farms in that vicinity. In 1875 he engaged in pork packing in a small way, and has increased the business until he now enjoys an extensive trade.

On September 12, 1865, Mr. Baker was married at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by Rev. Sumner Mandeville, to Miss Carrie S. Baker, who was born September 26, 1846, a daughter of Thomas D. Baker, our subject's uncle. Two children came of this union: Jesse A., born in 1866, married Miss Ida Wooley, and has three children—George W., William and Viola; and Orrie J., born in 1868, now a farmer, married Vernie J. Cookingham, and has two children—Carrie E. and Olive J. In politics Mr. Baker is a Republican, and he and his wife are members of the Christian Church at Schultsville, New York.

LEWIS H. CHASE, an enterprising business man of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is the proprietor of a popular meat market, and is also successfully engaged in the ice trade, his custom extending through Matteawan, Fishkill, Fishkill Landing and Fishkill Village. He was born March 1, 1854, in Westchester county, N. Y., and is of English descent in both paternal and maternal lines. His paternal grandparents settled in Putnam county shortly after their marriage, and reared eight children: John and Wright are farmers in Kansas; James is a laborer in Ulster county, N. Y.; Robert is mentioned more fully below; Fred, deceased, was a laborer; Adella is married to Philip Van Buren, a livery man at Valdon, Orange Co., N. Y.; William is a farmer in Ulster county; and Elijah went West, and nothing is now known of him.

Robert Chase, the father of our subject, first saw the light at the old home in Putnam county, and in early life engaged in farming. Since the war, however, he has been in the rubber hose and belt factory. He is a highly esteemed citizen. His wife, Phœbe J. Ellis, who is also a native of Putnam county, is a daughter of Abraham Ellis, a well-known agriculturist. Robert Chase is a Republican in politics, and he and his wife are leading members of the Baptist Church. Of their five children our subject is the youngest. Caroline married Lewis Glover, of Connecticut; Catherine, who was married to Theodore Post, of Putnam county; Laura is the wife of Charles Ives, of Matteawan; and Hattie married Clark Mackey, of the same place.

Lewis H. Chase had the advantage of country life in his youth, remaining upon a farm until he was about twenty-five years old. In 1880 he went to Matteawan to engage in business, forming a partnership with Abram Biker in a meat market. Two years later the firm was dissolved, and Mr. Chase purchased his present market on Main street, Matteawan, where he has built up a fine trade. His ice business was added in 1890, and both, under his able management, are constantly increasing. He has a pleasant home in Matteawan. His wife, formerly Miss Hattie Bogardus, to whom he was married in 1882, is a daughter of Oliver Bogardus, a well-known citizen of Fishkill Village, and a descendant of one of the old Holland-Dutch families. Nine children have blessed their union: May, Etta, Arthur, Ralph, Walter, Robert, Lewis, Rowland and Mildred. Public affairs receive from Mr. Chase the intelligent attention which it is the duty of every good citizen to give. He is a Republican in his political views, and in local matters he is always to be found on the side of progress. Fraternally, he is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Order of American Mechanics, and the Order of Red Men.

NATHANIEL PARKER. The excellent farm of 175 acres in the town of Dover, belonging to our subject, is conspicuous for the manner in which it has been improved and cultivated, and is evidently the homestead of one of the most enterprising men of Dutchess county. He is a native of New York, born in 1818, in the town of Kent, Putnam county, where his grandfather, Nathaniel Parker, whose birth occurred in Connecticut, had located when a young man, there owning a good farm. The latter wedded Miss Mary Rhodes, a daughter of John Rhodes, a farmer of Peekskill, Putnam county, and in their family were three sons: John, the father of our subject; Nathaniel, who remained single; and Platt, who married Rhoda Post, but had no children.

John Parker was born and educated in Kent town, Putnam county, where he later followed farming, and in the war of 1812 served as a private. He married Miss Elsie Lee, daughter of Joseph and Abigail (Emmons) Lee, agriculturists of Dutchess county, and to them were born eleven children, three of whom died in infancy, the others being as follows: (1) Rhodes married Miss Adaline Poley, by whom he had two children—John P. and Orpheus. (2) William married Eliza Russell, and had three children—Isaac, John and Alpheus. (3) Nathaniel is next in order of birth. (4) Mary married Aaron Wright, and to them were born three children—John, Eli and Rodin. (5) Abigail married Joseph Fisher, and their children were accidentally killed. (6) Phœbe A. married George Fisher, and has four children—William H., Nathaniel, and two daughters whose names are unknown. (7) Sarah became the wife of Leroy Hewitt, and reared a family. (8) Clarinda married Augustus Lee.

The education of our subject was such as the district schools of his native town afforded. During his younger years he learned the carpenter's trade, which he continued to follow for twenty years, and then for about eight years operated land in the town of Kent, Putnam county, where he owned three different farms. On the expiration of that time he came to Dutchess county and purchased the Levans farm in the town of Dover, where he still continues to make his home and successfully engages in its cultivation. He is a prominent and influential citizen of genuine worth and sterling integrity. In politics he is an uncompromising Republican, but has never aspired to official position.

Mr. Parker was united in marriage with Miss Hulda Patrick, daughter of Jehial and Lucinda (Finch) Patrick, and they now have one son, Jehial, whose birth occurred in the town of Kent, Putnam county, but his education was secured in Dover town, Dutchess county. He is now successfully following the teacher's profession. He was married to Miss Amy Russell, and to them has been born one child—Wilbur.

John Patrick, the grandfather of Mrs. Parker, was a native of Putnam county, where he carried on farming, and by his marriage with Jemima Tyler had eight children: Bathia, Rhoda, Hannah, Hulda, Betsy, Jehial, David and John. Jehial Patrick, her father, was also born, reared and educated in Putnam county, and as a life work also turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Lucinda Finch, a native of Connecticut, and they became the parents of seven children: Lewis, who remained single; Sarah, who married Niles Sturdevant; Hulda, the estimable wife of our subject; Samantha, who married Samuel Ros-co; Jemima, who never married; Finch, who died in infancy; and Emmorett, who became the wife of Amos Merritt.

ALBERT S. EMANS, one of the wide-awake and progressive business men of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, is profitably conducting a good general store at Gayhead. He was born at that place, January 30, 1854, and is the son of John S. Emans. His boyhood was there passed upon the home farm, and at an early age he became station agent at Hopewell Junction, Dutchess county, for the Newburgh, Dutchess & Connecticut railroad, holding that position for about a year. For a short time he was then with the New York & Erie railroad at Newburgh, and was later employed on a steamer for a few months, running between Newburgh and Nyack, New York.

Subsequently Mr. Emans became interested with his father in farming, which they continued up to the time of the latter's death, when our subject began dealing in agricultural implements. These he still sells in connection with other general merchandise, including groceries, dry goods, boots and shoes, wagons, harness, etc. His strict attention to his business interests and his unswerving integrity have aided him in securing the liberal patronage which he now receives, and he is ranked among the most reliable and straightforward business men in Dutchess county.

On March 4, 1880, Mr. Emans was united in marriage with Miss Laura T. Thomas, who was born in the village of Fishkill, and is a graduate of the State Normal School at Albany, N. Y. Her father, E. V. B. Thomas, who was of Scotch extraction, was a leading carriage manufacturer of Fishkill. Two children have come to bless their union: Blanche A., born March 4, 1880; and Albert S., born October 2, 1889.

Mr. and Mrs. Emans began their domestic life upon the farm, but in 1891 he purchased their present home, and also his good store property at Gayhead. In religious affairs they take an active interest, being consistent members of the Reformed Dutch Church, and he has served as treasurer of the Hopewell Y. M. C. A., and was one of the three members of the building committee. In politics he is an earnest Democrat, for three terms has been collector of the town of East Fishkill, wa-town clerk five years, and for the same length of time was notary public, while since 1891 he has served as postmaster. He takes an active interest in all social affairs, being a prominent member of local clubs and like organizations, and is one of the valued citizens of the community where he is so widely and favorably known.

ABRAMHAM A. BOGARDUS, a substantial and reliable agriculturist of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born at Johnsville, in the same town, April 26, 1830, and on the paternal side comes of good old Holland ancestry. The birth of his grandfather, Cornelius Bogardus, occurred at what was then called Stonykiln, in Fishkill town, and throughout life he followed agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Elizabeth Roe, by whom he had four children: Cornelius, who became a car man in New York City; James, a farmer of East Fishkill town; William, a minister of the Reformed Dutch Church, and Elias, the father of our subject.

The last named was born in the town of Fishkill August 16, 1784, was reared upon a farm, and in early life learned the carpenter's trade, which he always followed. He was married May 3, 1815, to Miss Hannah Montfort, whose birth took place at Johnsville October 25, 1791. Her family were of French extraction. Her father, Adrian Montfort, was born at Fishkill Plains, in Fishkill town, September 6, 1755, and was the son of John Montfort, a native of the same town. Upon their marriage, Elias Bogardus and his wife located on a farm in the town of Fishkill, where they reared their six children: Adrian, who has always followed carpentering in that vicinity; John C., who was a harness-maker of New York City, and died there May 9, 1884; Lettie E., who married Henry Burroughs, a farmer of the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county; Susan A.; Abraham A.; and Mary J., wife of Aaron Woodruff, a traveling salesman of New York City. Before his marriage the father worked at the carpenter's trade in New York, but subsequently followed that occupation at Johnsville and Fishkill, Dutchess county. He voted the Democratic ticket, and both himself and wife were sincere and faithful members of the Reformed Dutch Church. She was called from this life November 9, 1839, and he passed away August 28, 1853.

Upon the farm at Johnsville, Abraham A. Bogardus passed his childhood, early becoming familiar with the duties that fall to the lot of the agriculturist, and, in 1862, he and his brother Adrian purchased their present place, which was known as the "Horton farm." It comprises 178 acres of fertile land, and to its cultivation and improvement our subject has devoted his time with results so satisfactory that to-day he is one of the prosperous farmers of the community. In political belief he is an unswerving Democrat, and for thirty-three years he capably filled the office of commissioner of highways. By the exercise of integrity, industry and intelligence, he has become a substantial and honored citizen, one who stands high in the estimation of his fellow men. In religious faith the family hold membership with the Reformed Dutch Church.

JOHAN F. JEWELL, a prominent agriculturist of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, is a self-made man who learned in early years the difficult art of making farming pay, and has throughout his long life been putting his knowledge into successful practice. He was born April 15, 1816, in the town of Poughkeepsie, and his family has long been known in the county, his grandfather, Harmon Jewell, being an early resident. The last named had three sons: George, John and Henry.

Henry Jewell, our subject's father, lived to the age of ninety-six years. He was a lifelong resident of the county, and farmed for many years in the towns of Poughkeepsie and Lagrange. He was a man of excellent habits, and a member of the Reformed Dutch Church. In politics he was in early days a Democrat, but later a Republican, and he took an active interest at times in local affairs, serving as constable for many years. He married Betsey Van Kleeck, and had eight children: (1) Bernard; (2) Maria (Mrs. Richard Grant); (3) Martha (Mrs. Jacob Nelson); (4) Catharine, who married (first) Casper Dusenberry, and (second) John McNeal; (5) Gertrude; (6) Eliza (Mrs. Harvey Grant); (7) Henry E., a resident of Newburg, and married to Rachel Lewis; and (8) John F., our subject. Of this family the first and the two youngest are the only survivors.

Our subject moved to the town of Lagrange in boyhood, and his school days were spent near Lagrange. At an early age he began working for farmers in that vicinity, and on attaining his majority he went to the town of Olive, Ulster county, and followed the same employment for four years. He then took a farm on shares, and later bought one in the town of Rosendale, where he lived eleven years. Returning to Poughkeepsie he spent a year, and in September, 1868, he purchased his present farm near Rowland, where he has resided since March, 1869. He started out in life without help from his relatives, and his accumulations are the result of hard work and wise management. As a speculator he displays unusual judgment, and he has dealt profitably in cattle and horses for many years.

Mr. Jewell was married, January 18, 1838, to Miss Ann Eliza Merrihew, who was born December 11, 1816, in the town of Olive, Ulster county, a daughter of Stephen and Rebecca (Krum) Merrihew, well-known farmers of that locality. Two children came of this union: (1) Martha, born October 6, 1839, married Abram Hill, of Newburg, and has two children—Willet and Mary (Mrs. Samuel Brown). (2) Andrew, born April 2, 1843, is the proprietor of a livery and boarding stable on Main street, Poughkeepsie. He married Aurelia Cookingham. In politics our subject is a Democrat, and has been from his first vote. He is progressive in his ideas, always ready to help forward any worthy movement, and he contributes to several Churches in his neighborhood.

WILLIAM HALL HART, an extensive fruit grower and farmer in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, was born there March 3, 1853. He attended the private schools of Poughkeepsie, and later went to Dartmouth College, where he was graduated in 1875, taking the degree of A. B. Returning to Lagrange, he has since given his attention to his farm. He has a fine orchard, and makes a specialty of growing apples.

Benjamin Hall Hart, father of our subject, was born in Hempstead, L. I., February 13, 1811, and attended school at Richmond, Va. Later he went to sea on account of his health, acting as mate on the Liverpool line for six years. In 1836 he was married at Hempstead to Miss Elizabeth Nichols, and the following children were born to them: (1) Mary Amelia. (2) Edmund Hall married Isabella M. Howland; they live at Federal Point, Fla., and have had four children—Theodora, Adelia, Lucy Eleanor and Amy, the last named having died. (3) Walter Nichols married Cornelia D. Storm, and lived at Federal Point, Fla.; their children are Mary Louisa, Cornelia Brinckerhoff and Abram Percival; W. N. Hart died in 1884. (4) Ambrose Burnham, who lives at Lake City, Fla. (Walter and Ambrose each served three years in the Union army, and each was honorably promoted). (5) Louisa Abigail married Edwin S. Hubbard, of Federal Point, Fla., and had two children—Edith Louisa and Ervin Stuart. (6) Elizabeth Emily. (7) William Hall. In 1839 the father of this family moved to the town of Lagrange, where he spent the remainder of his days farming, except that he visited California twice, in 1849 and 1850, and spent the winters after 1867 at his orange grove in Florida. He died in 1875, a member of the Episcopal Church, a staunch Republican, and an active and respected citizen.

Seth Hart, grandfather of William H., was born June 21, 1763, at Kensington, Conn., was educated at Yale College, where he was graduated in 1784, after which he studied medicine, and for a time practiced as a physician. He went in that capacity with the surveying party that laid out the city of Cleveland, Ohio. Desiring to become a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, he studied to that end, and in 1791 was admitted to the order of deacons, in 1792 to the order of priests by Bishop Seabury. He became rector, consecutively, of St. John's Church, Waterbury; St. Paul's, Wallingford, Conn.; and for twenty-eight years of St. George's, Hempstead, L. I., at which latter place he also kept a private school. He died there March 16, 1832, and his wife, who in her maidenhood was Ruth Hall, daughter of Hon. Benjamin Hall, of Cheshire, Conn., passed away November 3, 1841. They were the parents of the following children: (1) William Henry, born January 5, 1790, married (first) Lydia Hubbard Moore, of New York, and (second) Maria Graham, of Shawangunk, N. Y.; he died July 28, 1852. (2) Ambrose Gustavus, born October 13, 1792, died October 15, 1816. (3) Hannah Burnham, born July 16, 1797, died in September, 1798. (4) Henry William, born October 26, 1799, died January 9, 1813. (5) Elizabeth Anne, born May 9, 1809, died December 24, 1840, married William J. Clowes, of Hempstead, L. I., and their daughter, Caroline Morgan, makes her home with our subject (she is well known as an artist of much talent, and has made painting her life work). (6) Benjamin Hall. (7) Edmund Hall, born August 7, 1813, died August 22, 1838.

William H. Hart

Matthew Hart, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born in Kensington, Conn., January 23, 1737, and was married November 5, 1759, to Miss Elizabeth Hopkins. He died in 1811. The following children were born to him and his wife: Matthew, Seth, Sarah, Elizabeth (who married Dr. James Perival, by whom she was mother of James G. Percival, the poet), and Oliver.

Matthew Hart, Sr., great-great-grandfather, was born in 1690 at Farmington, Conn., and was married January 10, 1725, to Miss Sarah Cooker. He died October 30, 1736. Five children were born: Ruth, Mary, Lois, Oliver and Matthew.

Capt. John Hart, the great-great-great-grandfather, was born at Farmington about the year 1655. He married Miss Mary Moore. He belonged to the Farmington train-band, of which he became lieutenant and captain, besides holding other important offices in the community. He died November 11, 1714, and Mrs. Hart on September 19, 1738. Their children were John, Isaac, Sarah, Matthew, Samuel, Nathaniel and Mary.

John Hart, great-great-great-grandfather, was born in Braintree, England. He came to America and located at Farmington, Conn., where one night in 1666 his house was on fire by the Indians and he and all his family, with the exception of the eldest son, John, who, but eleven years old, was away from home caring for stock on an outlying farm, were burned to death.

Deacon Stephen Hart was born in 1605 in Braintree, England, and married (2) Margaret, the widow of Arthur Smith. About 1632 he was one of the fifty-four settlers of Cambridge, Mass., and was one of the original proprietors of Hartford, Conn., in 1635, it being a tradition that the name of Hartford originated from a ford in the Connecticut river which he discovered and used, and which was called Hart's ford. He was one of the leading settlers of Farmington, about 1640, where he died in 1683. He was a man of great force and influence in public affairs. Six children were born to him and his first wife: (1) Sarah, married November 20, 1644, to Thomas Porter; (2) Mary, married (first) to John Lee, (second) to Jedediah Strong; (3) John; (4) Steven; (5) Mehitabel, married to John Cole; and (6) Thomas, born in 1643, married to Ruth Hawkins.

ISAAC BRYAN (deceased). Among the enterprising and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, the subject of this sketch held a prominent place, maintaining in his day the reputation for energy and sound judgment which his father and grandfather had established at an earlier time.

The family is of English origin, and the earlier generations were residents of Newtown, Conn., where our subject's great-grandfather, Alexander Bryan, was born. A family record exists which was written by him in 1759. Ezra Bryan, our subject's grandfather, was born at Newtown, November 30, 1740, and was the first of the family to come to Dutchess county.

He became the owner of a large tract of land in the Nine Partners territory, which since his death has been divided into several good-sized farms. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and engaged for a time in the manufacture of coffins, but later invented a fanning-mill, which he manufactured on quite a large scale at the old farm, employing three or four men. As may be inferred, he was a man of much talent, noted for his practical business ability. He was a Quaker in religion, and his death occurred while on his way to meeting, July 9, 1825. He was married May 21, 1761, at Newtown, Conn., by David Judson, minister, to Sarah Beck, who was born April 12, 1738, and died November 19, 1829, and their remains now rest in the family burial lot at Shekomeko. They had six children, whose names with dates of birth and death are as follows: Alexander, March 23, 1762—December 14, 1781; Eliza, September 13, 1764—October 9, 1842; David, July 18, 1767—June 30, 1848; Isaac, July 4, 1772—July 30, 1776; Isaac, August 18, 1776—June 25, 1854; and Amos, January 31, 1779—April 12, 1863.

Amos Bryan, our subject's father, succeeded to his father's business, and carried on the manufacture of fanning-mills, at the same time operating a large farm, having inherited the old homestead and bought in other portions of the estate. He was successful in business and prominent in public affairs, and his integrity and ability won for him the entire confidence of the community. He helped to settle a number of estates, was a justice of the peace for many years, and in 1840 was a member of the State Assembly. He died April 12, 1863, followed on the 24th of the next month by his wife, formerly Betsey Finch, of Angram, to whom he was married October 1, 1804. Nine children were born of their union, whose names with dates of birth and death are here given: Laura, October 5, 1805—May 20, 1831; Ward, April 12, 1807—December 14, 1863; Eliza (Mrs. Henry Sisson), March 16, 1810—September 3, 1884; Ezra, March 4, 1812—March 22, 1876; Isaac, August 25, 1815—September 14, 1885; James, November 27, 1817—March 16, 1839; David, September 22, 1819—now living; Mary (Mrs. James Carman), December 9, 1822—November 1, 1853; and Sarah (Mrs. James E. Mott), April 10, 1825—April 15, 1872.

Isaac Bryan was educated at Warren, Conn., and at Peekskill-on-the-Hudson, receiving a good education for the time, and was throughout life an intelligent reader on general topics. He engaged in farming at the old homestead, but in 1860 bought the farm near Shekomeko where his family now reside. It consists of 240 acres of fine land, and is said to be one of the best farms in the town of Northeast. He possessed excellent business judgment, and accumulated a large property. He was a public-spirited man, but although he was a staunch Republican and greatly interested in the success of his party, he was no office seeker, the only position ever held by him being that of commissioner of highways. He had been reared a Quaker, but in later years he attended the Pine Plains Presbyterian Church. In 1861 he married Miss Mary Hoffman, daughter of Henry Hoffman, a well-known citizen of Pine Plains. Two children were born to this union: Ward, November 11, 1863, and Edward, September 4, 1866, who conduct the farm. Edward received a good English education at the Pine Plains Academy, and at twenty returned to the farm. In 1895 he was married to Miss Angie Smith.

J G. DAWSON, M. D., of Matteawan. The Dawson family originated in England, and the first to come to the New World was William Dawson, who, with his wife, Isabella, crossed the Atlantic about 1760. According to family tradition they were Friends or Quakers, and fled from their native land in order to escape the persecution to which the followers of that faith were then subjected. They settled in Caroline county, Maryland, and being isolated from the Friends, they united with a new society called "Nicholites," after its founder and head, Joseph Nichols, of Kent county, Delaware. This sect was spreading rapidly in eastern Maryland about the time of their coming, but by the end of the century it had merged into the Society of Friends. William and Isabella Dawson reared a family of eleven children: John, Elizabeth, William, Margaret, Jonas, Edward, Elijah, Elisha, Shachar, Frederick and Joseph.

Elijah Dawson, the great-grandfather of the gentleman whose name opens this biography, was born in Caroline county, Maryland, March 9, 1764. He married Catherine Broadway, daughter of Robert and Sara (Russum) Broadway, and made his home near Sandtown, Kent county, Delaware, where he died leaving two children—Greenbury and Sarah.

Greenbury Dawson, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Kent county, Delaware, born in April, 1785, and engaged in farming in the same county, near Camden. In religious faith he was a Friend. His death occurred April 6, 1847, and his wife, Mary Smith, daughter of Major Thomas Smith, died March 12, 1846. They had six children: Catherine, William, Thomas, Willard H. Mary S. and Ezekiel. None are now living except the last named, who is a prominent physician at Baltimore, Maryland.

William Dawson, our subject's father, was born June 24, 1817, near Camden, Delaware, and became one of the most successful agriculturists in that region, accumulating a handsome competence. He possessed unusual force of character, and was a leader in local affairs, and in the Whig party. On December 29, 1840, he married Elizabeth G. Brittain, whose father, a prosperous farmer, came from England about 1815, and settled in Kent county, Delaware. William Dawson established his home near Smyrna, Delaware, where he died, September 30, 1854, but his widow still resides there. Of their eight children our subject was the youngest. Ann and Sarah died in infancy; Thomas G. is a dentist in California; Mary J. married I. John M. Smith, of Cheswold, Del.; Margaret married John M. Bishop, a farmer of the same locality; William H. is an agriculturist Maryland, and Ezekiel is a manufacturer of butter, at Newark, Delaware.

With this introduction we may the better trace the history of our subject, who is a worthy representative of an ancestry noted for ability and high character. During his boyhood Dr. Dawson lived at the old farm near Smyrna, Del., attending the local schools, with one year in the Classical Academy at Smyrna. In 1872 he entered the State Normal School at Millersville, Penn., and on completing his course in 1875, he engaged in teaching in the country districts. Deciding upon the medical profession as a lifework, he began his preparation in 1877, at Smyrna, and in the following year he was enrolled as a student in the Hahnemann Medical College at Chicago, from which he was graduated in 1880. Locating at Milford, Del., he practiced successfully until 1892, when, realizing the necessity for change and rest, he went to New York City for a time. In February, 1892, he settled at Matteawan, where he speedily won a high place in the esteem of the people, both as a citizen and a practitioner. He has never joined the ranks of the happy Benedicts. In public questions he takes an intelligence interest, and he is active in local affairs. Politically he is a Republican, and he is now serving as health officer of the town of Fishkill. For some time past he has been a member of the Masonic order, and he is also an active worker in the American Institute of Homeopathy.

ALSON OSTRANDER, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is a representative of a family which has long been prominent in this region.

The ancestors of our subject who first represented this branch of the family in America was Pieter Pieterse Ostrander, who left Amsterdam, Holland, on the ship "Spotted Cow," April 16, 1660. Landing in June following, he settled at Kingston, N. Y., where, on January 19, 1679, he was married to Rebecca Traphagen. Their son, Arend, who was baptized at Hurley, N. Y., October 5, 1684, married Gertrude Massen Van Bloomenal, daughter of Maas Van Bloomendahl. His son, Alson Ostrander, a son of Arend, was baptized at Albany, N. Y., April 11, 1714, married Catharine Swartwout, and their son Cornelius, who became the grandfather of our subject, was born July 22, 1742; he married, April 25, 1764, Mary Luyster Brinkerhoff. Their son Cornelius, our subject's father, was born at Fishkill, May 22, 1775, and was reared at the old farm, attending school in the neighborhood during boyhood. He learned the shoemaker's trade, and followed it for some years, going from one farm to another in winter and making shoes. His later years were spent upon his farm; he died January 17, 1853. He married Mary Way, and had eight children, of whom only two are now living: Alson, the subject of this sketch; and Melinda, who married James E. Smith, of Fishkill.

Alson Ostrander was born at Fishkill March 9, 1818, and spent his boyhood there attending the public schools near his home. At the age of fifteen he went to New York City, and found employment as a clerk in the grocery store of N. D. Hurder. In 1838 he returned home, and remained with his father (who then lived near Freedom Plains) until 1840, when he went to Genesee county, making the journey with a horse and wagon. There he worked on his brother's farm for three years, and on October 1, 1844, he came to Poughkeepsie, where he has since resided. Until 1847 he was with Slocum, Jilson & Co., in their pin factory, the ruins of which still stand on Bayeay street. Mr. Ostrander left this employment to become assistant postmaster at Poughkeepsie for Egbert B. Kelley, with whom he remained three years, and so well and faithfully did he discharge his duties that the two succeeding postmasters found him indispensable. He was next employed in the county clerk's office during the term of George H. Tompkins, and in 1860 he became connected with the firm of William W. and James Reynolds, Jr. (now Reynolds & Cramer), with whom he remained twenty-eight years, when he retired from active business. He is a man of quiet tastes and reserved manners; but while he has never sought prominence, he has more than once taken an influential part in advancing measures which he believed to be beneficial to the public. He is an ardent friend to the temperance cause; has voted the Prohibition ticket ever since the organization of the party, and is now the senior resident member of the Sons of Temperance. His connection with that body dates back to 1846 when he became a member of Howard Division No. 45, and when that society gave up its charter, Mr. Ostrander, with William Schrum, Judson D. Case, Richard Brittain, Lazarus V. Brinck, Thomas Platt, John M. Cable, Isaac Butler, Dennis C. Clemishire, and James Brower, took their cards and joined Poughkeepsie Division No. 9, which was instituted August 4, 1843.

On June 3, 1841, Mr. Ostrander was married in Genesee county to Miss Harriet Arnold, who died leaving one son, Alson B., born February 2, 1846, at Poughkeepsie, who was a soldier in the Civil war and is now a resident of New York City. He was married at Bergen, N. Y., to Hettie Gifford. Mr. Alson Ostrander was again married, this time at Leon, N. Y., February 7, 1854, to Miss Frances E. Evarts, who was born February 14, 1825, a daughter of Rev. Renaldo M. and Eliza (Morley) Evarts. Two sons (twins) were born of this union at Poughkeepsie, February 7, 1863—James Henry and Charles Melville, both of whom are successfully established in life, the latter being now in the insurance business at Omaha, Nebraska.

JAMES HENRY OSTRANDER has chosen to remain in his native city, where he now conducts an extensive undertaking and embalming business. His early education was obtained in the public schools of Poughkeepsie, and on leaving the high school he entered the telegraph office as messenger, and later was employed as salesman for a New York firm, and then began to learn the undertaking business with Stephen Merritts, with whom he worked three years. In 1888 he returned to Poughkeepsie where he had already won a high standing in business circles. He was married there June 5, 1888, to Miss Lavinia S. Cluett (born November 28, 1864), daughter of George W. and Lavinia Cluett, and has one son, Cornelius, born January 11, 1892. He is a member of Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 268, Chapter No. 172, King Solomon Council No. 31, Commandery No. 43, Mecca Temple A. A. O. N. M. S.

BOYD FAMILY, THE, which has been prominent in this section for several generations, originated in Scotland, and the head of this branch was among the "Scotch Seceders" who went to the North of Ireland about the year 1700 to avoid the religious persecutions of the time in his native land. He settled in County Down, but the exact locality cannot now be ascertained. The coat of arms found in the possession of some of his descendants is the same as that of the Kilmarnock Boyd, and without doubt if the record had been kept all could trace their lineage to the same source in Scotland. The name of this ancestor is not known, but his family, as far as can be learned, consisted of five children—Samuel, Robert, James, Nathaniel and Mary.

Samuel Boyd came to New York City early in the eighteenth century, and finding the country a haven of rest from the hardships and religious wars of the Old World, he assisted his brothers and sisters to come. They remained but a short time in New York City and most of them made their permanent home at New Windsor, Orange Co., N. Y. With the exception of Samuel the brothers were all married and had large families, which shows that they were well advanced in years. Nathaniel Boyd was born in County Down, Ireland. He married (first) Margaret Beck, (second) Martha Monsel, but whether the latter marriage took place in Ireland or America there is now no means of knowing, and (third) Jane Johnston. He settled in Little Britain, Orange county, where he passed the remainder of his days. There were seven children by the first marriage, and nine by the second.

John Boyd, his first son by the first marriage, was born in County Down, March 2, 1746, and came to America with his parents at the age of eight years, and removed to Amsterdam, Dutchess county, from his home in Orange county, about 1769. On August 10, 1769, he married Elizabeth Winager, who was born April 3, 1754, and was a daughter of Courtenay Winager, an extensive landholder of Dutchess county, and made his home at Amenia where he followed the tailor's trade. As he is said to have owned a large tract of land there at the time of his death, on August 29, 1817, he probably received a portion of his father-in-law's estate. His wife died October 5, 1822. He was known as Capt. John Boyd, and his name appears among 300 others on the "Roll of Honor" during the Revolutionary war. The records of the State of New York show him first as a lieutenant in Capt. Colby Chamberlain's company in the 6th Dutchess County Regiment, March 20, 1778, and later as captain in the 5th Dutchess County Regiment under Col. William Humphrey. Capt. Boyd's name is on the records of the old Presbyterian Church at Amenia, and he was connected with the Society during the building of the church edifice in 1796. He was a man highly esteemed and trusted by his fellow-citizens. In his time people did not know the meaning of bills, checks and drafts, and they learned by sad experience the worthlessness of Continental bills. Capt. Reed at one time when making a large purchase of wheat requested his neighbor, Lieut. John Boyd, to bring from Poughkeepsie a certain bag of silver money. Mr. Boyd brought it on horseback on the pommel of his saddle, and when he rode up to the store an attendant lifted it down, not without some exertion, and carried it in. His family consisted of eleven children, most of whom died in early life. The two who survived and settled in Amenia were Samuel, who married Sarah, daughter of Judge Ephraim Payne, and Gilbert, who married Abigail Chamberlain; none of their descendants are now living in Dutchess county. The youngest son, David Boyd, for forty-six years known as a prominent tanner, was born in Amenia, N. Y., May 21, 1795, and remained in his native place, with the exception of a few years of his childhood passed in Little Britain, until he was seventeen years of age. He had the usual advantages offered by the common schools of the day, of which he was a regular attendant until he reached the age of seventeen. He left home in the year 1812 determined to acquaint himself with some branch of industry in which he might become self-supporting. His brother James was already engaged in the tanning business in Brooklyn, N. Y., and thither David directed his steps and apprenticed himself to learn the trade. The custom of drinking which was then so common in all classes of society, especially in the cities, was new to young Boyd, and being surrounded with temptation was not long before he determined to return to his quiet country home. His parents, having a just appreciation of his motives, approved of his resolution to look in another direction for a chance to fit himself for the tanner's trade. While visiting some relatives in Poughkeepsie, he was introduced to Mr. John Gary, a practical tanner of that place, who had a tan-yard on Washington street, near the corner of Main, in what is now the center of the city. No vestige of it remains to-day. With Mr. Gary he resumed his labors, acquiring a thorough knowledge of the trade, and remained with him several years until after Mr. Gary removed his business to Troy, N. Y. During this time his home was with his employer's family, where he met Mr. Gary's sister-in-law, Rhoba Pettis, who was born June 1, 1792, at Foster, R. I., and died February 12, 1836. They were married in Troy, April 27, 1817, and having now a family to provide for, Mr. Boyd was desirous to commence business for himself, and he returned to Poughkeepsie to run the same yard where he had learned the trade a few years previous. In 1821 he opened a leather store on Main street, in the building now owned by John J. Bahret, the clothier, and lately occupied by him. Here he retailed all kinds of leather, employing his leisure in finishing such stock as he could purchase in the rough from country tanners. He soon determined to make a more permanent arrangement for carrying on business, and for that purpose built himself a store and tannery, at No. 360 Main street, where he tanned most of the hides, calf and sheep skins, bought by him in the Poughkeepsie market, besides finishing calf and kipskins, picked up in New York while purchasing his stock of sole leather. He followed this business during the remainder of his life, his industry and integrity being rewarded by the acquisition of a considerable property. He lived during the most of this time where Southwick's place of business now stands; later he removed to the corner of Cannon and Hamilton streets, where he died May 10, 1851.

A just appreciation of the probable growth of the city induced him to purchase at different times several acres of land in the suburbs of the town which he disposed of at such times as he found opportunities for making profitable sales, and he realized from these investments all and even more than he had at first anticipated. He built a more extensive tannery, at the place known as the Red Mills. Years of trial followed those of prosperity, and the financial crisis of '36 and '37 was a season of heavy losses for him, but it was always a matter of honest satisfaction to Mr. Boyd that he had been able to meet his indebtedness paying one hundred cents on the dollar in every case. It was his maxim during life to live honestly, and deal justly with all men. He continued in active business until the years of his death, enjoying the regular routine of a busy life and the intercourses of those with whom he had so long been associated. He was a director in the Bank of Poughkeepsie for many years. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and he aided in the building of the church, and was one of the substantial members and trustees. He was a member of "Old Protection No. 1" Fire Engine Company in the year 1821.

By his first wife he had three children, Mary Eliza, who married Abram Wiltsie; John Gary, and Julia who married Alson Ward. His second wife was Clarissa Lewis, who died April 11, 1856, leaving no children. According to his desire he was succeeded in business by his son and son-in-law, under the firm name of Boyd & Wiltsie, his plans for the future being well-known to them.

John G. Boyd, the only son of David Boyd, was born February 12, 1825, at the place now known as No. 16 Washington street, Poughkeepsie. As a young man he became engaged with his father in business, beginning as an apprentice. He had good advantages in youth, and was given a fine business education. At eleven years of age he was sent to Dover to study with Mr. Jeliffe, and later he attended Fay's school at New Paltz. After leaving school he went into the tannery with a view of becoming acquainted with the trade, his time being divided between store and tannery. He succeeded to a share in the business in his twenty-eighth year, at his father's death. In the same year he married Phebe E. Trowbridge, daughter of Stephen B. Trowbridge and Eliza Conklin. The firm of Boyd & Wiltsie continued in business twenty-five years, and the real-estate interest was continued even after that time. The old enterprise is still carried on by Messrs. Dick & Dobb, Mr. Dick having been an employe for many years. Previous to May, 1853, he was a member of Howard Hose Company, No. 2. For twenty-nine years Mr. Boyd was trustee of the Presbyterian Church, and was always ready to do his duty. He was connected with the Poughkeepsie National Bank for twenty-two years, having held the office of vice-president for some time, and that of president for two years, until compelled by failing health to decline a re-election. He was a member of the Water board, and trustee of Poughkeepsie Rural Cemetery for many years previous to his death, which occurred April 6, 1886. There are not many to be found through the conflicts of an active business life who have gained and retained to the last the friendship and respect of all with whom they have come in contact. Mr. Boyd, from his natural benevolence of disposition, accomplished this in a remarkable degree without effort. A born gentleman, it was easy for him to make and retain friendship. His kindly nature was free from restraint in all his intercourse with men, and he left upon all the impression of inherent modesty and true affection, excellent purpose, broad views and sound judgment. He sought to cultivate the good feeling of others. He loved the bright and beautiful side of life and would fain have others share his joyous disposition. Enemies he had none, for his gentle ways forbade their creation. He had three children—Nathan T., Henry S., who died in infancy and Frederick J.

NATHAN T. BOYD was born April 17, 1856 in his grandfather's house on Mill street. He was educated in Poughkeepsie, his first teacher being Mrs. Herrick, and later he attended the old Quaker School, Riverview Academy, and Bishop's Select School. In 1875 he went into the First National Bank as bookkeeper, under Zebulon Rudd as cashier. After two and a half years there, he took a position as bookkeeper in the store of Trowbridge & Co., remaining about three years, when he took an interest with George Dick in the old leather store. Later he sold out his share to Mr. Dobbs, and went to Illinois where he was interested in the Illinois Central R. R. for two and a-half years. He came back, practically at the request of Trowbridge & Co., and took his former place in that firm, continuing a clerk until the partnership was dissolved February 1, 1888. The firm then became Kirby Du Bois & Boyd, and continued until February 1, 1895, when Mr. Boyd retired. Since that time he has been engaged in business in New York City. In 1884 he became a member of Phoenix Hose Company No. 1, and continued until October 21, 1889, serving as treasurer for the full term of five years. He was married October 24, 1889, to Miss Anice M. White, only daughter of Charles D. White and Mary A. Haynes, of Brinckerhoff, New York.

Frederick J. Boyd was born March 18, 1868, and was educated at Bisbee's Military School, and at the Eastman Business College. In 1888 he took a position as clerk in the office of Adriance Platt & Co., remaining about three years, and then went to New York City with the Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Refining Company. He was with them for some time, and then was sent to St. Louis as its manager. He is now the agent and manager of the International Metal Company, at St. Louis. In 1889 he joined the 15th Separate Company under Capt. B. Myers, and received his discharge from the State of New York November 1, 1894, having filled the office of sergeant before resigning.

MRS. HANNAH DOUGHTY (deceased), late a resident of Webatuck, town of Dover, Dutchess county, was a scion of an excellent old family who have wisely preserved their record through several generations. They became residents of Dartmouth, Mass., in 1632.

Philip Sherman (son of Samuel, a son of Henry, whose father Henry is the first we have of this name, and is mentioned as a clothier of Dedham, England), was born February 10, 1610, at Dedham, England. He came to this country about the year 1632, and became the first Secretary of the State of Rhode Island. He was one of the leading men of his day. Many of his descendants settled in Dartmouth, Mass., one, whose name was Michael, was born there in 1719; he married Deborah Briggs July 29, 1740, and they settled in Dutchess county, N. Y., in the spring of 1742. They had several children, among whom was Jeremiah, born March 29, 1743, and died March 2, 1812. He married Elizabeth Mosher, by whom he had nine children. Among them was John, the father of the subject of this sketch. Most of the ancestors of Mrs. Hannah Doughty were members of the Society of Friends.

John Sherman, her father, was born May 1, 1783, and acquired a good common-school education in the town of Washington, where he also learned the trade of saddle and harness making, which he continued to follow through the greater part of his life. He was one of the prominent Democrats of the locality, and for a number of years held town offices, giving the best of satisfaction.

On February 23, 1806, John Sherman was married to Mary Briggs, daughter of Edward and Anna Briggs, prosperous farming people of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. Eight children came to this union: (1) Elizabeth, born April 3, 1807, never married. (2) Anaron, born September 28, 1808, was a tanner by trade, and in 1828 married Jane A. Dnley, of Newburgh, N. Y., by whom he had six children—Evelyn, Mary, John, Andrew, Eliza A. and Albert. (3) Adaline, born September 30, 1810, never married. (4) Deborah, born December 17, 1811, also remained single. (5) Catharine, born December 13, 1813, was married, in 1833, to Ichabod Prosser, and now lives at Hampton, Neb. (6) Phœbe, born November 30, 1815, became the wife of Damon Whaley, a wagon maker of Pawling, Dutchess county, and to them were born four children—Sherman, who remained single; George, who married Jane Ross; Frances, who married William Shaw, and after his death wedded Henry Lenney; and Franklin. (7) Albert, born July 3, 1817, was a tanner by trade, and was married September 23, 1837, to Miss Phœbe Rider, by whom he had five children—John, a tanner, who wedded Mary Smith; Mary, who became the wife of Rev. Henry Hayter; Albert; Addie, who married Frank Finger; and William, who never married. (8) Hannah was the youngest of the family.

Mrs. Doughty was born in the town of Dover, January 27, 1826, and died June 30, 1896; she received her primary education in the public schools, supplementing same with a course in the Friends School of Washington town, where she graduated at the age of sixteen years. Four years later she was united in marriage with Daniel Doughty, a mechanic of the town of Washington, who died in 1852. He was a son of Stephen and Mary (Ellis) Doughty, the former of whom was a native of Washington town, and a wagon maker by trade. In their family were five children: Ira, who married Zillah Doughty; Maria; Mrs. Sarah Smedes; Daniel; and George. For over forty years Mrs. Doughty was successfully engaged in teaching. She merited and received the esteem of the whole community, and was much beloved by every one with whom she came in contact.

DAVID C. DRISLANE, one of the energetic and influential citizens of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is now engaged in the wholesale and retail grocery and liquor business, in which he is meeting with a well-deserved success, and owns the substantial brick block which he occupies. He was born June 7, 1857, at Tarrytown, Westchester county, New York.

Cornelius Drislane, father of our subject, is a native of County Cork, Ireland, where his childhood and youth were passed, and he there learned the business of florist. When a young man he came to America, making his first location at Manhattan, N. Y., where he followed his occupation and married Catherine Cummings, who was also born in County Cork. After remaining at Manhattan a short time, they removed to Tarrytown, N. Y., where for a time he continued his calling, and on leaving that place he became gardener for John Jacob Astor, in Ulster county, N. Y., near West Park, by whom he was employed some fifteen years. He then purchased a farm in Orange county, N. Y., which he operated for ten years, at the expiration of which time he returned to Tarrytown, where he still makes his home. He is a stalwart Democrat in politics, and for the past ten years has been trustee of Tarrytown; in religious faith he is a Roman Catholic. His wife, who held membership with the same denomination, died in 1892. They were the parents of nine children, namely: William E. is a groceryman of Albany, N. Y.; Lena (deceased) was the wife of Robert Ludford, who conducted a grocery store at Sing Sing, N. Y.; Lizzie married James Quinn, of Tarrytown; David C. is next in order of birth; Kate is the wife of William Fallon, of Tarrytown; Frank died while young; Mary is the wife of George Yerks, an undertaker of Tarrytown; John died in infancy; and Cornelius is a groceryman of Tarrytown.

At the age of two years David C. Drislane accompanied his parents to the town of Esopus, Ulster county, where the following fifteen years of his life were passed mostly in attendance at the district schools of the neighborhood. After their removal to Orange county, he continued his studies for some time, and for about eight years assisted in the cultivation of the farm. On leaving home he went to Newburg, N. Y., where he entered the grocery store of his brother, William E., with whom he remained for about a year and a half, when he went to Tarrytown, being there employed by a brother for three years. He then went to Sing Sing, and formed a partnership with Robert Lynford in the grocery business, under the firm name of Drislane & Lynford, which connection was continued for a year and a half. Going to Peekskill, N. Y., he and his brother, William E., carried on a grocery store under the style of Drislane Brothers, and in 1882 they also started another store in the same line at No. 249 Main street, Poughkeepsie, owning at the same time an establishment at Albany. This partnership lasted until 1888; when it was dissolved, our subject taking the store at Poughkeepsie, and his brother the one at Albany; the one at Peekskill had previously been sold.

In 1885 David C. Drislane was married to Miss Matilda M. Gregg, who was born in Poughkeepsie, a daughter of William Gregg, a contractor. In politics our subject is a radical Democrat, and in religion a member of the Roman Catholic Church. In 1889 he purchased his pleasant residence at No. 21 Mill street, and a year later bought his store building. His fair dealing and systematic methods of doing business have won him the confidence and respect of all with whom he has had occasion to transact business. His property has been acquired through the exercise of sound judgment, good business talent and industry.

JOHAN M. JULIAN, M. D., an eminent physician and surgeon, of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, is a native of New Jersey, born at Hoboken, April 25, 1851. He traces his ancestry to John M. Julian (his great-grandfather), a native of France, who spent his entire life there engaged in the silk business, an occupation that was followed by many of the family.

John Marius Julian, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Avignon, France, in 1766 and by profession was a physician. He went with Napoleon Bonaparte all through his various wars, and was a member of the "grand old guard," being six feet, seven inches height; was at Moscow, Russia, also on "the fatal field of Waterloo," and was wounded several times—in fact his military career was brilliant one. At its close he came to America locating in New Jersey, where his death occurred in 1864, when he had reached the patriarchal age of ninety-eight years; he had married Maria Francisco Eunri, by whom he had fourteen children: Maria, Francisco, Cecelia, Matilda, Antoinette, Adrian, Jenia, John M. Thomas, Felis, and four who died in infancy. All have now passed away with the exception of Adrian, who, like most of his ancestors, following the silk business.

At Avignon, France, February 13, 1811, was born John M. Julian, Sr., the father

John W. Julian M.D.

our subject. In the common schools of his native land he obtained his literary education, and with his father began the study of medicine. He was the only child of the family to come to the New World, arriving in 1828, and making his home in New Jersey. Entering the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, he graduated from that institution with the class of '31, and became a member of the Medical Society of the city and county of New York, also of the State Medical Society of New Jersey. Shortly after his graduation he entered a hospital in New York City, securing much practical knowledge in his profession, and in 1838 he settled at Hoboken, N. J., where he successfully engaged in practice up to his death, January 1, 1879. His wife, Cornelia A. (Mount) was born in New York City, November 22, 1815, and was a daughter of John D. P. Mount, also a native of that city, where he was engaged in the banking business. The Mount family was originally from Holland, as were also the maternal ancestors of Mrs. Julian, though her mother, who bore the maiden name of Christian Stagg, was born in America. In the large family of fourteen children born to the parents of our subject only three reached adult age, namely: Mary B., wife of Stephen E. Brown, a lawyer of New York City; John M.; and Claude E., a dentist and farmer of Flemington, N. J. In religious belief the members of the family have either been Catholics or Episcopalians, and in politics the father was a stalwart Republican. His widow, who is still living, has now reached the age of eighty years.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed at Hoboken, N. J., where he attended the city schools and the gymnasium. At the age of fifteen he was sent to Paris, France, to the Polytechnic Institute, where he remained for two years and a half, and then began the study of medicine in that city, graduating in 1870. On the breaking out of the Franco-Prussian war, the Doctor served as orderly in the hospital corps of the 105th Regiment of the line for three years, during which time he traveled over a great deal of Europe, and gained much valuable experience in his chosen profession, and was honorably discharged in October, 1873. He then took a course of lectures at Heidelberg, Germany, while the remainder of the year was spent at Bonn, Prussia, and the next year at Zurich, all of which time he spent in the study of medicine, while the following two years were spent in visiting many hospitals of the Old World. In December, 1875, he returned to the United States, and for a time practiced at Hoboken, N. J.; but in 1877 he went to Brooklyn, N. Y., entering the out-door department of the Long Island College Hospital, where he graduated.

On January 31, 1880, Dr. John M. Julian was married to Miss Katie A. Powderly, a native of Dublin, Ireland, and on the 7th of the following October, they located at Moores Mill, Dutchess county, where he continued practice until 1892, in which year he came to Pleasant Valley. Politically, the Doctor has always been a Republican; socially he is a member of the F. & A. M. As a physician he enjoys the honor of being the peer of any in the county. His life has been characterized by energy, perseverance and labor, and to these principles his success is due. He is prominently identified with the Dutchess County Medical Association, and with the New York State Medical Association.

STORM H. CONKLIN for a number of years has been prominently identified with the business interests of Poughkeepsie. From 1891 to January 1, 1894, he was connected with John Leeming in the undertaking business, and since has been associated in the same line with Frank B. Van Dyne.

For one hundred and fifty years the Conklin family have been residents of Dutchess county, living upon a farm at Van Wagners, in the town of Hyde Park, where the father of our subject, William Conklin, was born January 2, 1800. He was a son of John and Susan (Storm) Conklin, farming people. The grandfather was born on August 15, 1762, and his death occurred February 3, 1803. In Poughkeepsie was celebrated the marriage of William Conklin and Maria Mott, and they became the parents of two sons, John, and Storm H., of this review. The father was reared to agricultural pursuits, but later learned the latter's business with Tunis Van Kleeck, of Poughkeepsie, and carried on the manufacture of hats at Lyons and Geneva, N. Y. He died at Bridgeport, Conn., in 1837.

The birth of Storm H. Conklin occurred at Sharon, Conn., September 17, 1833, but was only five years of age when brought to Poughkeepsie, where he began his education and attended the Lancaster and Cornish schools.

During his early life he was apprenticed to J. P. Nelson to learn the cabinetmaker's trade, and remained with that gentleman about twenty-eight years. He was also employed in the same business with Nelson, Seward & McGregor and Charles F. McGregor. However, since 1891 he has engaged in his present business, being an undertaker and funeral director. For twenty years he has engaged in undertaking, so that he thoroughly understands his business in all its details.

In 1850 Mr. Conklin joined the Phoenix Hose Company, with which he has since been prominently connected, serving as its secretary and representative in the Board of the Associated Fire Department for twenty-six years. He is to-day the oldest active member on Phoenix's roll. He has served on about all the important committees that have had the welfare of the company at heart, and Phoenix takes great pleasure in claiming him as a member to-day. For twenty-eight years he has been an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Poughkeepsie, being the treasurer of the lodge for thirteen years. He is a staunch supporter of the men and measures of the Democratic party, and has served as supervisor from the Fifth ward, and police commissioner under Mayor Ellsworth. His success in life is attributable to his own indomitable energy, and the close and assiduous attention he has paid to the minute portions of his affairs.

ALBERT F. BOOTH, a prominent resident of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and a well-known dealer in tea, coffee and spices, is one of the substantial self-made men of that city. Like many other successful business men he comes of an ancestry which had been for several generations devoted to agricultural pursuits.

His grandfather, Daniel Booth, a farmer, was an early settler near Mooresville, Delaware Co., N. Y. John H. Booth, our subject's father, was born and reared at the homestead there, attending the district schools of the neighborhood. In early manhood he located on Green Island, between Albany and Troy, where he was engaged in gardening for many years. His later years were spent upon a farm near Albany, where he died in 1880. He was married in Watervliet, N. Y., to Miss Sarah Bigelow, who survives him and is hale and hearty at the age of seventy-eight. They were leading members of the First Reformed Church at Bethlehem. Six children were born to them: Oscar, Albert F., Edward (deceased), Andrew (now living at the old homestead), Emma and Theresa.

Albert F. Booth first saw the light February 21, 1841, on Green Island, where he spent his boyhood, attending the schools of Bethlehem. At the age of eighteen he went to New York City and clerked in a store for two years, returning afterward to his father's farm. In February, 1861, when he was twenty years old, he was married to Miss Sarah Bender, a daughter of Wendel Bender, a well-known citizen of Bethlehem. He purchased a farm for $8,000, for which he went in debt, and in four years he cleared off the obligation from the proceeds of the farm and the increase in value of the land. His health having become impaired he sold the farm, and for two years did no business except looking after his interest in a tea business, toward which he had advanced some money. In 1865 he took charge of a tea store in Albany for Mr. Cunningham, of Troy, becoming well-posted in the details of its management, and when the store was sold a year and a half later he determined to establish a similar enterprise for himself. In 1867 he came to Poughkeepsie, and through the influence of Robert Slee, located at No. 270 Main street, where he opened the first tea, coffee and spice store in the city. In 1872 he moved to his present store at No. 368 Main street, and for twenty-five years has enjoyed an extensive patronage. He conducts the business on a "cash" principle, and his able management has brought him well-deserved success.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth have had two children: (1) Wendell, who married a daughter of J. S. Vandorn, and is now in the advertising commission business with his father-in-law; and (2) Satie, who died October 8, 1885, at the age of twenty-one years. In politics Mr. Booth is a staunch Republican, having cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln; socially he is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Triune Lodge.

GEORGE DAKIN, one of the most prominent agriculturists and real-estate holders of the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, was born February 13, 1817, at Mount Riga (Harlem R. R. Station), town of Northeast.

The Dakins have been among the leading families of that vicinity for several generations, and are related by marriage to a number of other old families. George Dakin, our subject's grandfather, owned a large farm at the site of the village of Mt. Riga, west of the depot. He had three children: Jacob, our subject's father, born in 1775; Hannah (Mrs. John Culver), and Charity (Mrs. Driggs).

Jacob Dakin inherited this farm and settled there, and afterward increased his possessions until he was the largest land holder in that locality. His first purchase was the Haywood farm, where the family now lives, and later by buying the Lucas Hotchkiss property, foreclosing on the Simon Dakin farm where the Maltby iron mine is, and buying the Birch and the Tankery farms, he acquired in all over 1,800 acres. He was a man of unusual ability and wide information, an independent thinker and a strong believer in the doctrines of the Universalist Church. In politics he was a Whig, and took an active and influential part in local affairs. He married Miss Olive Clark, a descendant of one of the oldest families, and daughter of Elijah Clark. He died July 9, 1836, followed four years later by his wife. They had eleven children: Harriet, Orville, Joshua, Maria, Mary Ann, Myron, De Witt C., Emeline, George, Cornelia and Caroline.

George Dakin has always lived upon his present farm, having inherited 200 acres from his father. He has, however, added to this nucleus until he owns 520 acres, and he is known as one of the most enterprising and successful managers. He was married September 22, 1847, to Eliza M. Kelsey, daughter of William Kelsey, a well-known resident of Salisbury, Conn., and a representative of one of the leading families there. Six children were born of this union, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: William, July 23, 1848; George, January 18, 1850, deceased, who married Fannie Bishop; Julia, December 18, 1852, the wife of Alexander Griffin; John D., May 1, 1856; Carrie D., May 21, 1861, the wife of Oliver Burr; and Jennie, January 18, 1867, the wife of Peter McGill, whose farm adjoins the homestead on the north.

WILLIAM DAKIN, the eldest son, is now conducting the entire tract of 520 acres, having assumed the responsibility on his own account about fifteen years ago. Previous to that he had spent ten years in clerking in a store at Mt. Riga, five for his father and five for W. B. Gray. He has been very successful in his management of the farm, which is next to the largest in the town. He married Miss Jennie Pulver, daughter of Jacob Pulver, but has no children. Although he has never cared for office, he is at times active in the local work of the Republican party. He and his wife attend the Methodist Church at Millerton, and he has taken a generous interest in many important movements for the good of the community.

THERON H. CALDWELL. At the time of the French Crusade, the great-grandfather of our subject was driven out of France on account of his religious views, and went to the north of Ireland, where he was married. Later he came to America. The grandfather was among the first settlers of Poughkeepsie, where he worked as a chair maker for many years.

There the father of our subject, George B. Caldwell, was born, and in the common schools he received his education. He learned the tailor's trade with George Mead, and became the first merchant tailor in the city who kept cloth on hand. His store was located at No. 289 Main street, where he conducted business many years, and in 1860 moved to the store now occupied by J. B. Flagler. There he engaged in the jewelry business with his son, Edward O., who had learned the trade with Van Keuren Brothers. In Poughkeepsie Mr. Caldwell led to the marriage altar Miss Eliza M. Coffin, daughter of Robert Coffin, Esq., and both were called from this earth in 1886. In their family were five children, namely: Helen, deceased; Edward O.; Frederick, deceased; Theron H.; and Malcolm, deceased. The father served as internal revenue collector, and took quite an active part in political affairs, first voting with the Whig and later with the Republican party, but he would never accept public office. He was captain of the Davy Crockett Hook & Ladder Company, belonged to the Masonic Order, and was a member of the Episcopal Church. Physically he was well developed, and was known as the straightest built man in the city.

Theron H. Caldwell first opened his eyes to the light of day April 24, 1854, at Poughkeepsie, in the same house on Main street which is still his home. Like most boys he spent his childhood in attending school and engaging in youthful sports. After pursuing his studies for a short time in the public schools, he entered a boarding school at Fishkill, N. Y., and later was a student in the Friends Boarding School at Oswego, N. Y. On laying aside his text books, he worked for two years in a carriage shop at Amenia, and the following year was spent at the same occupation at Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county. He next clerked in a grocery and feed store at New Haven, Conn., after which he returned to Poughkeepsie and learned the printer's trade with Platt & Platt, for whom he worked for five years. The following two years he conducted a printing office for George D. Eighmie, and then opened one for himself at No. 363 Main street in 1862. Two years later, however, he went to Pittsburg, Penn., where for the same length of time he filled different positions on the Western Division of the Pennsylvania railroad.

In 1866 Mr. Caldwell returned to Poughkeepsie, and again engaged in the printing business, being first located at No. 5 Academy street, but later removed to No. 16, where he increased his plant. He formed a partnership with A. H. Hasbrouck, now foreman for A. V. Haight, and the present firm is composed of our subject and William G. Hansman. For a year and a half they have published The Search Light, and also have a large trade in the job department, and are now working on a contract for the Imperial Pattern Company. Their work is all first-class, giving general satisfaction, and they are doing an extensive business.

Mr. Caldwell was married in Poughkeepsie to Annie M. Bolton, daughter of John Bolton, and she died in 1886, leaving three children: Eleanor, Albert and Edna. Mr. Caldwell was again married at Hyde Park, Dutchess county, his second union being with Alice Kelley, daughter of George Kelley. Politically, Mr. Caldwell affiliates with the Republican party, is a member of the O. H. Booth and Veteran Fire Companies, and religiously he is an Episcopalian. Courteous, genial, well informed, alert and enterprising, he stands to-day one of the leading representative men of Poughkeepsie—a man who is a power in his community.

MON. JOSIAH SUTHERLAND was a representative of that rare element in modern life, which, although an invaluable part of it, yet rests upon a basis of something ideal and philosophical. In a worldly sense he certainly made his mark, becoming one of the foremost lawyers and prominent judges of New York City. Whenever he came in contact with men of note, not only was he valued as an equal of practical strength and resources, but also as one whose integrity was beyond question.

The Judge was born in the village of Bangall, Dutchess county, June 12, 1806, and was the son of Josiah and Abigail (Duncan) Sutherland, who were the parents of six children, all now deceased: Walter, Sarah, Mary, Hannah, Josiah and Birch. The father was a native of the town of Stanford, where his father had located at an early day on coming from Scotland—his native land—to America. In that town the son carried on farming until his death. He had served as colonel in the war of 1812, was a strong Democrat in politics, and a Baptist in religious belief.

The boyhood days of Judge Sutherland were passed at Bangall, and he prepared for college in New York City under the guidance of Judge Parker's father. After his graduation from Union College in 1826, he studied law for a year in the office of Samuel G. Huntington, at Waterford, Saratoga Co., N. Y., but finished his studies in the office of Bushnell & Stebbins, at Hudson, Columbia Co., N. Y. Shortly after his admission to the bar in 1829 he went to South Carolina on account of ill health, and there remained for a year. Returning north, he entered into partnership, at Johnstown, N. Y., with Robert H. Morris, former mayor and recorder of New York City.

In 1831 Mr. Sutherland was appointed district attorney of Columbia county, which office he continued to fill for about fifteen years and in 1856 he was elected to Congress to represent the Thirty-second Congressional District, having run against Judge Coles. In 1838 he had removed to Hudson City, N. Y., where he occupied the office of the late Ambrose L. Jordan, who had removed to New York City, where in the spring of 1851 Mr. Sutherland also located, there forming a partnership with Judge Morrell. He was elected judge of the supreme court in 1857 to fill vacancy caused by the death of Judge Whiting, and held that position for six years. On the resignation of Charles O'Connor from the office of United States District Attorney, it was tendered that position by President Buchanan, but declined it. In the fall of 186 he was re-elected to the supreme court without opposition, and continued to fill the position on the bench for the full term of seven years.

By an act of the Legislature, the Judge was appointed one of the three commissioners to decide a certain claim against the City of New York, and though millions of dollars were involved, so impartial were all his decisions, that all parties felt satisfied with their correctness. In 1872 he was elected city judge of New York. He retired from the bench on the 1st of January, 1879, carrying with him not only the respect of the entire legal fraternity, but an enviable reputation as a jurist. One of the most extraordinary events was the meeting of the New York bench and bar to express their regret at the retirement of the Hon. Josiah Sutherland from the bench, which he had occupied with distinguished rectitude and simplicity of character for over twenty years of a busy and honored life. Few men have lived to experience such a vocation as this from the most critical and scrutinizing of professional and judicial contemporaries.

That a man born and bred in country life could go to New York City when there was on his arrival, already in existence, strongly entrenched, a ring of corrupt political tricksters, surrounded by an outer ring of a corrupt and powerful system almost irresistible, and win and occupy one of the highest seats of justice, was a credit to the better sense and intelligence of the people. That a judge could in all these years sit in calm rectitude and severe and inflexible justice when almost all else was corrupt and partial, is a wonder in our day. The honor of Judge Sutherland was never assailed. Enemies may have ridiculed him, and even friends criticised his ways, but no man ever hinted at anything dishonorable or unjust in his character as a man or judge. The constitutional limit of seventy years, as the end of judicial service, cut him off, as it did Spencer and Chancellor Kent, in the full maturity of intellectual capacity, at the threshold of the beauties of an honorable and venerable old age, but we can still point to his record with pride. From the time of his retirement from the bench until his death he resided in New York City. He died May 25, 1887.

At Johnstown, N. Y., was celebrated the marriage of Judge Sutherland and Miss Jane, youngest daughter of Dr. John McClellan. She was born in the Manor of Livingston, February 22, 1811, and died February 22, 1876. To them were born fourteen children, of whom two are now living—Robert and Mrs. Sarah A. Eddy.

The birth of ROBERT SUTHERLAND occurred at Hudson, Columbia Co., N. Y., March 11, 1838, and there his early school days were passed. He attended the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and when the Civil war broke out he was appointed by President Lincoln to the position of 1st Lieutenant, 18th U. S. I., in which he served for three years, when he was discharged on account of physical disability. In New York City in 1866, he was united in marriage with Miss Lucy A. Mills, a native of Ireland, and to them were born four daughters: Jane Douglas, who is now the wife of Rev. D. S. Hamilton, rector of St. Paul's Church, at Paterson, N. J.; Florence, deceased; Sarah E. and Blanche. For the past twenty years Mr. Sutherland has lived retired in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he is surrounded by a host of warm friends and acquaintances.

WILLIAM H. TANNER, M. D., a worthy representative of the farming interests of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, is a native of same, born September 12, 1836. The family had long been established there, his great-grandfather, James Tanner, being one of its earliest residents.

William Tanner, the grandfather, was born in the town of Dover, January 9, 1786, was brought up on a farm, and received the education afforded by the district schools. He was an agriculturist, and spent the latter part of his life in the town of Amenia, where he died in 1856. In religious belief he was a Baptist. He was married March 13, 1806, to Mary Uhl, who was born December 29, 1786, and they became the parents of three children: James U., the father of our subject; Mary Eighmy, who was born May 4, 1814, and wedded Abram White; and Catherine E., who was born May 8, 1824, and married Swift Nase.

James Uhl Tanner, also a native of the town of Dover, was born April 22, 1807, there secured his elementary education, and continued his studies at the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. He was married December 4, 1831, to Miss Rhoda Ann Hubbell, who was born May 31, 1814, and was a daughter of Cushman and Tamma Hubbell. Their family consisted of three children: James H., born November 25, 1835, died February 10, 1837; William H., of this sketch; and Annie Maria, who was born August 5, 1842, and married S. H. Hedges. About 1840 the father removed to the town of Amenia, building the present residence of our subject, and there engaged in farming up to his death, which occurred July 28, 1886. He was one of the most wide-awake and progressive farmers of the locality, and met with a well-deserved success in his vocation. In early life he was identified with the Whig party, and later was a Republican. His strict integrity and kindly nature endeared him to all his associates, and for many years his hospitable home was a place dear to many, both young and old, by reason of the kindly welcome extended to them by him and his faithful helpmeet. He lived upon the farm, where he died, for over fifty years.

The early life of Dr. Tanner was spent after the manner of most farmers' sons, comparatively uneventful, and after attending the district schools for a time, he pursued his studies at the Amenia Seminary, at the Loweville Academy, in Lewis county, N. Y., at the Susquehanna Seminary, in Binghamton, N. Y., and at the Oxford Academy, of Chenango county, this State. He then entered the medical department of the University of New York, where he graduated in 1860. After Fort Sumter was fired upon, the Doctor laid aside personal interest, and in 1861 joined the 47th N. Y. V. I., as assistant-surgeon. In the following year he was promoted surgeon, and served with the rank of major of cavalry until hostilities ceased, when he was honorably discharged and returned home.

On April 26, 1866, Dr. Tanner was married to Miss Achsa York, of Chenango county, N. Y., and they became the parents of three children, as follows: (1) James E., of Coleman Station, Dutchess county, born December 8, 1868, was married June 20, 1889, to Emma Gridley Lewis, and they have three children: Lewis W., born May 19, 1890; Margaret, born October 16, 1892; and Frederick, born October 29, 1895. (2) Frederick, born January 24, 1871, died June 14, 1875. (3) Mary Mabel, born January 1, 1874, was married December 27, 1890, to Louis M. Allerton, and they have one son, James K., born November 5, 1892.

After his marriage, Dr. Tanner removed to Louisiana, where for two years he engaged in cotton raising, but in 1868 returned to the home farm, which he has since operated with good success. He is also engaged in the milk business, which he finds to be a profitable source of income. Fraternaly he is connected with Shekomeko Lodge No. 458, F. & A. M., at Washington Hollow, Dutchess county. A man of strong individuality, whose influence has been directed toward the good, the true and the beautiful, this honored veteran of the Civil war well merits representation in this volume.

WING J. MARTIN AND JAMES H. MARTIN. The head of the Martin family which has been prominently identified with the history of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, for many years, was Agrippa Martin, who came from England when a young man, and became one of the early settlers of Dover. His son James was a farmer by occupation and an adherent of the Quaker faith. He married Sarah Kelley, daughter of Samuel Kelley, of Poughkeepsie, a seafaring man, and had four children: Wing, mentioned below; John, who never married; Phoebe A. (Mrs. Joseph Haviland), and Ruth A. (Mrs. Samuel Hallack).

Wing Martin was born in 1798, and on attaining manhood's estate engaged in farming and in brick manufacturing. He possessed decided mechanical ability, and was an excellent business man, his enterprises meeting with success. Some of the oldest houses in the town of Dover were built of brick from his kiln. In politics he was a Republican, and in religion a Quaker. His first wife was Hannah Whitley, and his second was her sister Elizabeth, both daughters of Joseph Whitley. Three children were born of the first marriage: John J., James H., and Ann E., who died at the age of eighteen.

John J. Martin was born in 1824, and received his education in the schools of his native town. Until he was twenty-eight years old he assisted his father, and he then became the owner of a part of the farm which has been in the possession of the family since 1776. He cared nothing for politics, preferring a quiet life. He married Miss Lydia Haviland, daughter of Isaac Haviland, and had one son—WING J. MARTIN, who was born at the old homestead May 20, 1850, was educated at the academies in that vicinity, and then engaged in farming. He has been twice married, first in 1871, to Miss Sarah E. Tabor, daughter of a well-known farmer of Dover, John Tabor, and his wife, Cordelia Ross. Three children were born of this union: Anne T., born in 1871; Sarah E., born in 1875; and Mary D., who died in infancy. Mr. Martin's wife died in 1875, and in 1884 he married Miss Catherine C. Corey, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth Corey, prominent residents of Port Jarvis, Pennsylvania. Both daughters are at home. They are accomplished young ladies; Anne T. was for a time in attendance at a school in Brooklyn, and one at Stanford, and Sarah E. was for a time at the same school at the latter place. Their main education, however, was received at home under a governess.

After his marriage, in 1871, Mr. Martin settled on the farm on which he now resides, which is a fine tract of 108 acres. In 1895 he erected here a fine house, and has a modern home. The main part of the old house was one of the oldest houses built in the locality, being upward of one hundred and seventy-five years old. In addition to the farm on which he resides, Mr. Wing Martin is the possessor of another farm comprising 234 acres located three miles south of his present home. In addition to general farming, Mr. Martin carries on a dairy business, keeping fifty cows. In politics he is a Republican.

Isaac Haviland, the father of Mrs. John J. Martin, was a prosperous farmer of the town of Pawling. He married Miss Lydia Weever, and had nine children: (1) Joseph was married four times, first to Hannah Martin, by whom he had one son—James M., deceased; his second wife was Sarah G. Griffin, and they had one daughter, Mary, who married the late Noal Tompkins, and has two children; by the third wife, Lydia Oakley, and by the fourth, Lydia Haviland, there were no offspring. (2) Daniel married Lillias Akin, and seven children were born—Lydia, Lillie, Lillias, Joseph, Jonathan (who married Angeline Hungerford), Daniel J., and Abigail (the wife of Philip Haviland). (3) Isaac married Maria Swift, but had no children. (4) Jacob married Elizabeth Shove, and had one daughter—Minnie, now Mrs. Morris. (5) Abraham married Ann Bowdish, and had one child—Nellie, who married William Well. (6) Alexander married Judith Griffin, and had two children—Phœbe, now

Mrs. Elmer Gildersleeve, and Lydia, who died in youth. (7) Lydia married John J. Martin. (8) Charlotte married Alfred Moore. (9) Sarah never married. Charlotte Moore had four children: Lydia married Daniel Willits, and has three children—Lottie, Hannah and Amy; Ruth married Peter A. Skidmore, and has had four children—Libbie, Susie, Jessie and Alfred, of whom, the last named is the only one living; Susan is at home; Alfred H. married Phœbe Willits, and has had three children—Herman, Willits and Daniel.

Joseph Whitley, the father-in-law of Wing Martin, was a native of the town of Dover, and became a prominent farmer there. He owned a number of slaves, whom he freed, but they refused to leave the place, and he voluntarily paid them wages. He married, and had five children: Phœbe, who died at an early age; Hiram, who married Mary Preston; Elizabeth and Hannah, mentioned above; and Joseph J., who married Jane Ross.

JAMES H. MARTIN, the second son of Wing Martin, was born in 1833, and was educated in Amenia Seminary, and at Gaylordsville. After graduation he engaged in farming with his father, and is now the owner of a fine farm of 124 acres, and 2,000 acres of timber land. He also owns a house and ten lots in Oakland, Cal. He married Miss Sarah H. Stevens, daughter of David W. Stevens, a leading farmer of the town of Dover, and a deacon in the Baptist Church. They have two children: (1) Eugene H., born in 1857, was educated at Grand Rapids, Mich., and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and is now a prosperous farmer. He married Miss Jennie Jones, daughter of John C. and Mary E. (Murton) Jones, of Port Washington, N. Y. Her father is a successful music teacher. They have four children: Bessie A., born in 1885; Jennie S., 1887; James B., 1890, and Franklin E., 1893. (2) Annie Martin was born in 1859, and, like her brother, was educated at Grand Rapids and at Poughkeepsie. She married Theo Buckingham, a merchant of Dover, and son of Harvey and Eliza (Ross) Buckingham. They have no children.

Mrs. James H. Martin is a member of the well-known Stevens family of the town of Dover. Her grandfather, Thomas Stevens, kept an inn at South Dover in the early days. He married Sarah Howard, and had seven children: Samuel was married three times; Edward married Amanda Hunt; William married Hannah Hunt; Phœbe was the wife of a

Mr. Holloway; Sallie died at the age of seventeen; Thomas did not marry; and David, who was born in Dover in 1798 and became a farmer there, married (first) Miss Nancy Geddings, and (second) Mrs. Lydia A. Camp. His first wife was a daughter of Hon. Gamaliel Geddings, a prominent farmer of Dover, and his wife, Eunice Barns. There were seven children by the first marriage: Orin, who married Ann Wheeler; Eliza, Mrs. Alice Geddings; Baldwin, who married Julia Dutcher; Hiram (1), who died in childhood; Mary, Mrs. Emery Cole; Sarah H., Mrs. Martin; and Hiram (2), who married Ann E. Camp.

URIAH TEATOR, who in his lifetime was one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Milan, Dutchess county, residing near Cokertown, was a native of that town, born March 26, 1825.

The first of the name in this country came from Holland, and passed some years in Dutchess county, settling later in Columbia county, where Philip Teator, our subject's grandfather, was probably born. He spent the most of his life there, following farming, but died in Dutchess county. He married Miss Friese, and reared a family of six children, of whom our subject's father was the eldest; Frederick J. and Robert were farmers in Wayne county, N. Y.; Catherine married Zachariah Pulver, a farmer in Columbia county; Maria married Philip Coon, a shoemaker in Milan. Of this family the only survivors are the two younger daughters.

Jacob P. Teator, our subject's father, was born in the town of Gallatin, Columbia county, and grew to manhood at the old farm there, learning the shoemaker's trade. For many years he was a farmer in Dutchess county, and died upon a farm in the town of Red Hook, where he had been one of the leading men in local affairs, commissioner of highways, and an active supporter of the Democratic party. His wife was Catherine Plass, a descendant of an old Holland family, and daughter of Philip Plass, a well-known farmer of the town of Red Hook. Their first home was on a farm in the town of Milan, where they reared a family of seven children, our subject being the eldest; Margaret A. is the widow of Philip R. Boice, formerly a farmer; John N. is a carpenter in the town of Red Hook; Mary is the widow of Nicholas Holsapple, a farmer in the town of Milan; Robert is a farmer in Red Hook; Catherine is unmarried; and Freeman is a farmer in the town of Red Hook.

Mr. Teator enjoyed the usual advantages of a country boy, and attended the district schools of Milan and Red Hook. In 1853 he married Miss Emeline Boice, a descendant of another Holland family, and daughter of Simeon Boice, a leading farmer of Red Hook. For two years after their marriage the young couple lived upon a farm in the same locality, but for forty years thereafter they resided upon the present farm of 312 acres, which is devoted to general farming, and is one of the finest estates in the vicinity. Eight children were born to them: Oliver is a farmer in the town of Red Hook; Douglas A. and Frederick J. are farmers in the town of Milan; Warren is employed in a factory in Columbia county; John S. is at home; Mary A. married Sylvanus Coon; Kate is the wife of Stewart Teator; and Esther married Sylvester Palmeteer. The Teator family have been connected with the Lutheran Church for generations, and the present representatives are among its most active supporters in this locality.

Politically Mr. Teator was a Democrat and an influential one. He served as justice of the peace for twelve years; in 1878 was elected township supervisor, and a vacancy occurring in 1885, he was appointed to the same office, for which his well-proved ability so well fitted him that he was re-elected for each succeeding term afterward. He died June 27, 1896, and was buried in the Lutheran cemetery at Red Hook.

LESLIE A. SUTTON, M. D., a leading young physician and surgeon of the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, was born June 10, 1866, upon the farm at Louisville, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., where his grandfather, Benjamin Sutton, had located when a young man, the locality at that time being an unbroken wilderness. The latter was a native of England, and on landing in this country at once went to St. Lawrence county, where the remainder of his life was passed in clearing, developing and improving his farm, which was covered with a dense forest.

By his marriage with Miss Sarah Brunt, Benjamin Sutton had a family of seven children, as follows: (1) Henry is a fruit farmer of Minneapolis, Kans. (2) George L. received his education at Castleton, Vt., after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeon, New York City, where he graduated in 1860, and was then a surgeon in the army for four years; on leaving the service he came to the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, where he engaged in the practice of medicine up to his death, in the spring of 1889. (3) Benjamin was a farmer and drover in Louisville, St. Lawrence county. (4) William was a prominent lawyer of Kansas City, Mo., where his death occurred; he faithfully served throughout the Civil war, and filled many official positions, including that of circuit judge. (5) Franklin J. (the father of our subject) was next in order of birth. (6) Sarah married Daniel Smith, a carpenter and ship-builder. (7) Webster laid down his life on the altar of his country during the war of the Rebellion.

L. A. Jettou. M.D.

Upon the old homestead Franklin J. Sutton was born, and was engaged in its operation until thirty-eight years of age, when he turned his attention to the cream and milk business, having five creameries, and doing an extensive business, which proved very profitable. In politics he was an ardent Republican. He married Miss Clarissa Shoen, also a native of Louisville, St. Lawrence county, and the daughter of Sheppard Shoen, who was born in Scotland, and was there married. To this union were born eight children, as follows: Franklin J., a farmer in St. Lawrence county; Guy H., who is engaged in mining in Colorado; Sarah P., who became the wife of Rolf Wells, a fruit grower of California, and died in February, 1884; Lillian E., the wife of Herbert Bell, a carpenter and builder of Louisville, N. Y.; Leslie A., our subject; George L., a farmer in Louisville, N. Y.; Elizabeth, wife of Nelson Tucker, a carpenter and builder; and Jennie, widow of Anson Wager, who was a merchant of Louisville. The mother of this family is still living. The father passed from earth in 1884.

Dr. Sutton spent his boyhood upon the home farm, attending the district schools until fifteen years of age, at which time he entered the Massena Academy, where he graduated with the class of 1883. The following two years were passed at the Ogdensburg Free Academy, and in April, 1886, he began the study of medicine with his uncle, Dr. George L. Sutton, in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county. In the fall of that year he became a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, but after a year he entered the medical department of the University of the City of New York, graduating March 4, 1889. After receiving his degree he came to East Fishkill town, where he has since been successfully engaged in practice.

On March 26, 1890, Dr. Sutton was married to Miss Lillian E. Emans, a sister of Storm Emans, and they have one child, Leslie Emans, who was born May 1, 1893. The Doctor stands in the front rank of the medical fraternity of Dutchess county, is one of the examining surgeons of the United States Pension Office, and for six years has been health officer of East Fishkill town. In social as well as in professional circles he stands high, and he has many friends throughout the community. Like his father, his ballot is cast in support of the principles of the Republican party.

ALVA SHELLEY, a wealthy and public-spirited citizen, whose beautiful estate near Rock City, Dutchess county, is one of the finest in that vicinity, was born in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, March 27, 1852.

His family originated in Holland, his great-great-grandfather having come from that country in Colonial times. His great-grandfather, Samuel Shelley, was born in America and was an early settler in Westchester county, where his descendants have since held a prominent place. His son, Joseph Shelley, our subject's grandfather, although a Quaker in faith, served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Most of his life was spent in Westchester county, where he followed the shoemaker's trade, but he died in Columbia county. He married Miss Cole, by whom he had five children: Sarah, who married a farmer in Columbia county; Louisa, the wife of a carpenter in the same county; Benjamin, our subject's father; Henry, who was a soldier in the Civil war, and is now a farmer in Kansas; and John W., who lost his life in defense of the Union.

Benjamin Shelley was born at the old homestead in Westchester county in 1834, but in early manhood came to Dutchess county and married Miss Phœbe Ireland, daughter of Isaac Ireland, a well-known farmer of the town of Clinton. Her ancestors were also from Holland originally. After their marriage they settled upon a farm in the town of Milan, where they passed the remainder of their lives exemplifying in their daily conduct the simple faith of the Quakers, but not uniting with any Church. Mr. Shelley was a firm supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but was not interested in partisan work. He died March 10, 1893, his wife passing away in 1855. They had three sons: Isaac, George and Alva, all of whom settled upon farms in the town of Milan, and two daughters—Phœbe and Armena, who died in childhood.

The subject of this sketch was educated in the district schools near his father's home, and has always been identified with the interests of his native town. He lives upon a farm of 270 acres situated some three miles from Rock City, and has built there the finest dwelling house to be found in Milan township. His holdings in real estate are extensive in Dutchess county and elsewhere; in fact, he does not know exactly how much he does own, but estimates it roughly at "about 1500 acres." His fortune is largely invested in mortgages and similar securities, and he ranks as the wealthiest man in the town. He is one of the prominent Republicans of his locality, and is a generous contributor to every measure for local improvement and to religious and philanthropic movements, giving freely to all of the Churches of the neighborhood.

On March 13, 1887, Mr. Shelley married Miss Eliza Carroll, a native of Dutchess county, born March 30, 1870, and a daughter of Michael and Adelia Carroll, the former of whom is now deceased, the latter making her home with Mr. and Mrs. Shelley. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Shelley: Alva, Phœbe A. and Ruth.

The grandfather of Mrs. Shelley is a large landowner in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county. The Carroll family is of Irish extraction.

JAMES O. PINGRY, M. D., a well-known and prominent physician of Millbrook, Dutchess county, was born in the village of Fishkill, July 21, 1843. The family is of English descent, and the Doctor traces his ancestry back for seven generations, as follows: John F., his father, born in Newburyport, Mass., September 26, 1818. John, his father, was probably born in the same place. Then came Francis, Job, Aaron and Moses; the Doctor makes the seventh.

The grandfather of our subject, John Pingry, was a shoemaker by trade, and came from Massachusetts to Fishkill, where he died. He was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. He married Miss Little, and had a family of four children: John F.; Julia M., who died unmarried; Mary E., the wife of Richard Coffin; and Margaret A., who married the Rev. Charles M. Oakley.

John F. Pingry grew to manhood in Newburyport, Mass., and was a graduate of Dartmouth College, and also of the Union Theological Seminary of New York. He married Caroline, daughter of James Oakley, and a native of New York City. Her family was of English descent. After marriage the young couple settled at Fishkill village, where Mr. Pingry preached for four years. In 1846 he established a school in that place which he superintended until 1853, when he removed to Newark, N. J., where he was pastor of a church for seven years, and also carried on a school. He then removed to Elizabeth, N. J., where he taught until his death, February 16, 1894. His wife passed away October 4, 1856. Their children were five in number: James O., the subject of this sketch; John, who resides with his brother James; Frank K. is a civil engineer, and lives in Elizabeth, N. J.; Julia married Charles M. Schott, Jr.; and Mary E.

John F. Pingry was a prominent factor in the history of Dutchess county. He had as many as one hundred students under his instruction at one time, and these included many who became influential citizens of the county. He was a man of fine tastes, high principles, and consistent life, and was greatly respected and esteemed in the different communities in which he lived. He was a Presbyterian in his religious faith, and politically affiliated with the Republicans.

James O. Pingry was ten years old when his parents removed from Fishkill to Newark and eighteen when they went to Elizabeth. He was graduated from the University of New York in the Class of '62, and then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, receiving his diploma from that institution in 1868. He practiced in Bellevue Hospital in New York City, until November 1, 1870, at which date he took up his residence in Millbrook, Dutchess county, where he has since made his home.

Dr. Pingry was married June 28, 1876, at Millbrook, to Ida L., daughter of R. G. Coffin whose biography appears elsewhere in this volume, and ten children have been born to them, eight of whom are living, namely: Julia, Lizzie, Caroline, John, Clarence, Van Wagenen, James O., Jr., and Robert. The Doctor is a Republican, and has been a member of the school board for about four years. Socially he is a member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, and of the Society of the Alumni of Bellevue Hospital; he also belongs to the Millbrook Club of Millbrook, and takes an active interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the community. He is progressive and liberal in his views, and his opinions have weight with his fellow-citizens. As a physician he ranks among the best, and his large practice testifies to the confidence felt in his knowledge and skill. He owns a handsome residence where he and his estimable wife dispense a most genial hospitality to their large circle of friends.

JOHN S. WING. This gentleman is accredited with the ownership of one of the best farms in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, comprising 165 acres of rich and arable land, and he is numbered among the most progressive and industrious agriculturists of the locality. His farm buildings and machinery are in keeping with the neat and thrifty appearance of his place. He was born in Washington town, June 9, 1857, and is a son of Thurston Wing, a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. His paternal grandfather, Jason Wing, a native of Holland, after his marriage located in the town of Dover, where he reared his family.

On reaching manhood the father of our subject was united in marriage with Ann Tripp, a native of Washington town, where her father was engaged in agricultural pursuits. On a farm in the same town the young couple began their domestic life, and there were born to them six children, namely: Charles, deceased, was a farmer of the town of Washington, where he wedded Mary Faroney; Thurston J. married Hattie Cutter, and operates a farm in Dover town; Elias makes his home in Washington town; Mary is the wife of Joseph Talmadge, a farmer of the town of Lagrange; John S. is next in order of birth; and George died in infancy. In politics the father of these was a staunch Democrat, and was called from this life in 1875. While his wife, who preceded him to the other world, died in 1869.

The boyhood of our subject was spent upon the old home farm, assisting in its cultivation and improvement during the summer months, while in the winter season he attended the common schools of the locality. The lady who now shares his name and fortune was in her maidenhood Miss Maggie Learey, a native of the Emerald Isle, and a daughter of John Learey, a farmer of that country. After their marriage Mr. Wing and his bride lived for two years and eight months at Verbank, Dutchess county, and in 1890 removed to his present farm. Three children have been born to them: George W., Lucy H. and Anna.

Besides general farming, Mr. Wing is also engaged in the milk business, and sells that product quite extensively to the Wassaic Condensary. He is an earnest supporter of Democratic principles; is public spirited and progressive, and contributes his share to improvements of various kinds in the community.

JAMES V. BENSON. The splendid farm owned by this gentleman in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, is a standing monument to his industry, perseverance and good management. It is pleasantly situated on one of the picturesque hills near the village of Dover Plains, and invariably attracts the eyes as being under the supervision of a thorough and skillful agriculturist, and a man of otherwise good business qualifications.

His grandfather, Samuel Benson, was a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, where he received a good common-school education, and always followed the occupation of farming there. He was there married, and became the father of six children: Phila, who wedded Preserved Cooper; Jemima; Paltire; Joshua, who married Amanda Hopkins; Samuel and John.

Samuel Benson, Jr., the father of our subject, was also born in the town of Dover, and like his ancestors had a common-school education and followed farming throughout his life. He wedded Miss Sallie Knapp, of Danbury, Conn., and in their family were the following children: Joseph married Helen Hall; Samuel married Ruth Wheeler; John married Margaret Irish; James V.; Joshua married Susan Tappin; Darius married Polly J. Dutcher; Charles died at the age of eighteen years; Ebenezer married Emily Deuel; Sallie J. married Elias Irish; Ada married John D.

Dutcher; and Harriet married Van Ness Dutcher.

The birth of Mr. Benson, whose name introduces this record, occurred in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, April 20, 1823, and in the village of Dover Plains he received a good common-school education. After his graduation he took up the pursuit of farming, to which he had been reared, and has since given most of his time and attention to that occupation. He is a man of more than ordinary business ability, and is at present one of the stockholders and directors of the Dover Plains National Bank. He has always taken a deep interest in political affairs, favoring the Democratic party with his support, but has never aspired to public office, preferring the quiet life which he has always led, though he has often been urged to accept official positions. He is an earnest Christian gentleman, having the respect and confidence of all who know him.

Mr. Benson has been twice married, his first union being with Miss Mariette Hufcut, daughter of John and Mary Hufcut, who were prosperous farmers of Denmark, Lewis Co., N. Y. They became the parents of seven children: Clark H., who married Nina Oxley; George V., who wedded Carrie Fry; Martha A., who died at the age of sixteen years; Mary, who became the wife of James Bird; Carrie and Sarah, who died in infancy; and Hattie. In 1872, the mother of these children died, and two years later Mr. Benson married a sister of his former wife, Miss Caroline Hufcut, by whom he has one son, Horatio S., who was born December 24, 1874, and since completing his education in Dover Plains, has engaged in teaching school in one of the district schools of the town of Dover, Dutchess county.

The family to which Mrs. Benson belongs have also been prominent agriculturists of Dutchess county. Her grandfather, George Hufcut, was a native of Dover town, and received his education in the school of Dover Plains, where he also studied law. He practiced to some extent in connection with farming, but gave most of his time to the latter pursuit. He married Miss Hannah Benson, of Dover Plains, and to them were born the following children: Martha married William Howard; John B. was the second in order of birth; George B. married Sallie Dennis; Obed was also married; Shedrish married Susan Tappency; Henry first married a Miss Dixon, and, after her death, Eliza Wheeler; William married Pattie Preston; Perry married Sarah Schammerhorn; Jane married Aaron Benson; Caroline first married Myron Knickerbocker, and, for her second husband, Samuel Edward; and Betsy married Andrew Pitcher.

John B. Hufcut, the father of Mrs. Benson, was a native of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, where he attended school, and like his father, followed the occupation of farming. In early life he married Miss Mary Simpson, daughter of Ambrose and Elizabeth Simpson, prosperous farmers of Dover Plains, and to them were born seven children: Ambrose, who married Lurinna Wilson; Henry, who married Elizabeth Butterworth; George, who wedded Melvina Barnum; Delia, who became the wife of Samuel Worm; Martha, who remained single; Mariette, the first wife of our subject; and Caroline, the present Mrs. Benson.

SAMUEL P. TEN BROECK, a prominent agriculturist of the town of Wappinger, Dutchess county, and a descendant of one of the oldest and most distinguished families of that locality, was born March 20, 1839, in the town of Livingston, Columbia county, N. Y. His father, the late Samuel Ten Broeck, was also a native of Columbia county, and passed his early years there, removing to the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, when the subject of this sketch was only six years old.

Mr. Ten Broeck has spent most of his years in Dutchess county. On October 25, 1876, he was united in marriage with Miss Adeline Montfort, and settled upon the farm near New Hackensack where she was born. Her family has been prominent in this region for several generations, her ancestors being among the earliest settlers. Her grandfather was a leading farmer in the town of Fishkill, and her father, the late John Montfort, followed the same pursuit. He married Miss Martha Emmons, a member of another well-known family and daughter of Cornelius Emmons, a prosperous agriculturist of the same locality. They established their home at the farm now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ten-Broeck, and reared a family of four children: Catherine, deceased; Adeline, Mrs. Ten Broeck; Gertrude, now residing in Chicago; and John Jacob, deceased. Mr. Montfort was never active in political life, but he was a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party, and was influential in local movements of various kinds.

Our subject has resided at this farm since 1877, and is considered one of the successful farmers of the vicinity. He has no specialty, his 114 acres being devoted to general crops. Mrs. Ten Broeck is an Episcopalian, but they attend the Reformed Church. Their four children—Catherine, Samuel M., Charles and Walter L.—are all at home. In politics, Mr. Ten Broeck, like his ancestors before him, adheres to the Democratic faith.

COLLINS SHELDON, a leading lawyer of Millerton, and an ex-surrogate of Dutchess county, was born July 26, 1839, in Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y. The Sheldon family is of English origin, but on the maternal side the ancestry is Irish. Agrippa Sheldon, our subject's great-grandfather, was born in South Dover, Dutchess county, and was a blacksmith there for many years.

Gideon Sheldon, our subject's grandfather, was born at South Dover, and lived there until he was about twenty-five years old, when he moved to Copake, and purchased a farm of 200 acres on which he spent the remainder of his life. He was a man of note in that locality, a Whig in politics, and for a number of years was a justice of the peace. He died in 1835, his wife, Lydia Lake, surviving him until 1850. They had nine children: Henry; Isaiah; Eliza, wife of Thomas Trafford; Daniel; Emma, wife of Jacob Vosburgh; James; and three who died in childhood.

Henry Sheldon, the father of our subject, was born at the old homestead in South Dover, July 23, 1812, but his life was passed mainly at Copake. He inherited his father's farm, and was largely engaged in cattle raising, being noted for his excellent judgment in this line. He was a man of fine natural ability, possessing an unusually good memory, and his strong and positive nature made him a leader in the community. In early life he was a Whig, and later a Republican, but he never sought political position for himself. He was greatly interested in educational work and in the temperance movement, taking advanced ground in both, and he was an active and generous supporter of the Methodist Church. He married Selina Cook, daughter of Lot Cook, a well-known citizen of Amenia. His death occurred in December, 1865, his wife surviving him until 1892. Of their nine children all were carefully educated to fill honorable positions in life. They are: Eveline, living at Brooklyn; Collins; Wilson, a farmer at Hillsdale, N. Y.; Allen, a farmer and speculator at the same place; Miranda, who married Chester Dayton, of Northampton, Mass.; Otis, a farmer of Copake; Franklin, living at Glens Falls, N. Y.; Frances, living at Northampton; and George, a resident of New Briton, Connecticut.

Collins Sheldon attended the public schools of Copake for some years, and in 1860 was a student at the Hudson River Institute at Claverack. He then took the regular course in the Albany Law School, graduating May 23, 1862, and after some months of preparatory work in the office of Maynard, Wright & Moore, he went to Millerton and opened an office of his own, February 23, 1863. Since that time he has been successfully engaged in practice, making no specialty of any particular branch, although his business consists mainly of the settlement of estates, in which he has gained a high reputation. In 1864 he was elected clerk of the town of Northeast, and in the fall of 1877 was chosen surrogate of Dutchess county, taking office January 1, 1878, and serving for six years with entire satisfaction to the public. He was offered a re-nomination, but declined it. He has taken a leading part in various local movements, especially those which relate to educational affairs, and was a town trustee at the time of the building of the Union Free School house, and was a trustee of Millerton Academy. Possessing keen perceptions and strong convictions, he is a forcible and pungent speaker, and a most positive man.

In June, 1867, Mr. Sheldon was married to Miss Maria Pulver, daughter of Henry Pulver, a prominent resident of Stanford, and has two children—Harriet, who is at home, and is a graduate of Mrs. Gynn's Seminary in Poughkeepsie, and Wallace A., a graduate of the Albany Law School, who is now in practice with his father, under the firm name of C. & W. A. Sheldon.

EDWARD JEFFERSON HALL, M. D., of Moores Mill, Dutchess county, a rising young physician whose abilities are already winning recognition, is a descendant of an old English family, being of the seventh generation in the direct line from Col. Harry Hall, who came from England about 1690, and settled in Connecticut. By his activity during Queen Anne's War he gained the name of "Harry, the Indian Killer," and is so mentioned in history. His son, Ichabod Hall, settled in Enfield, Conn., and was married May 31, 1730, to Lois Kibbie, of that place. Their son, Ebenezer Hall, moved to Massachusetts, and died there in 1817. His son, Gen. Isaac Hall, married Vashti Johnson, of New Marlboro, Mass., and moved to Pompey, N. Y., in 1797. Their son, Johnson Hall, was born at Sheffield, Mass., January 6, 1794, and became a hardware merchant at Syracuse, N. Y., where he died October 27, 1870. He was known as Judge Hall. He was married in 1816 to Polly Andrews, and their son, Johnson LaFayette Hall, our subject's father, was born at La Fayette, N. Y., September 16, 1825. He obtained a district-school education, and then went into the hardware business with his father, but later engaged in forwarding freight on the canal, owning a fleet of boats at Oswego. He is now an expert accountant at Syracuse. On August 22, 1848, he was married in that city to Marcella Wood, daughter of Noah and Pauline (Holmes) Wood. Her father was a well-known business man at Buffalo and Chicago. Mrs. Hall died December 6, 1890, leaving three children, viz.: (1) Florence Elizabeth, born June 4, 1849, married Henry Cory, of New York City, and has one daughter—Florence Pauline. (2) Irene Virginia, born April 17, 1853, married John Clark Howe, of St. Louis, and has one child—Guy La Fayette.

E. J. Hall, the third and youngest member of this family, was born at Oswego, N. Y., March 6, 1855, and after attending the public schools of that city for some years he studied at St. John's Military School in Manlius, N. Y. He then entered the business world, spending five years with the St. Paul's Harvester Works at St. Paul, Minn., six years in a drug store at Syracuse, and twelve years in a hardware store at St. Louis, Mo. During this time the desire to follow his present profession became too strong to be overcome by his unpromising circumstances, and he began his preparation by private study. Three years of reading fitted him to undertake practical work in anatomy with profit, and he spent two years in dissecting at night at St. Louis Medical College. To this preliminary work he added three full years of study at the Homeopathic College of Missouri, graduating in the spring of 1894. April 17, 1895, he passed the Regent's examination in this State, and December 16, 1895, he located at Moores Mill, purchasing the practice of Dr. Warren C. McFarland. He is the fourth physician to occupy his present residence in Moores Mill.

Dr. Hall was married at St. Louis to Miss Ellen Frances Cooper, daughter of the late William Fenimore Cooper, who was formerly a well-known hosiery at Watertown, N. Y., and a member of the Masonic fraternity. He enlisted in the 100th N. Y. V. I., and lost his life in the Union cause.

JHYATT LYKE, D. D. S., a leading dentist of the town of Millerton, Dutchess county, was born September 9, 1864, in Copake, Columbia Co., N. Y. He is a son of John Lyke, now a prominent resident of Poughkeepsie, who retired from business some years ago, and his academic education was obtained there, with the exception of two years at Wilbur, Mass. During the last year of his course in the Poughkeepsie high school he left, only a month or two before the graduation day, to begin the study of dentistry in the office of Dr. Mills, and, after seven months of preparation, he entered the New York College of Dentistry. After one year there he went to the Philadelphia Dental College, where he also remained a year and was graduated, the youngest member of the class.

Immediately after his graduation he began the practice of his profession at Pine Plains, succeeding Dr. Seaman. He remained there several years, and enjoyed a lucrative practice but seeing an opportunity for more rapid advancement and a larger business, he moved to Millerton, in May, 1891, taking the practice of Dr. C. I. Bailey. He has been more than ordinarily successful, his practice including many of the best people of Millerton and vicinity, and extending for some distance up and down the Harlem railroad. He was married in 1889 to Miss Georgia Rowe, daughter of Clinton Rowe, a well-known resident of Pine Plains, and has had two children—Clinton and Stewart.

While he is an earnest advocate of local improvement, and a staunch believer in the principles of the Republican party, the Doctor has never taken an active part in public affairs.

He is much interested in the breeding of the English greyhound, and owns two famous specimens—"Southern Rhymes" and "Bestwood Daisy." The former has won ten first prizes in England and seven in this country—three in the challenge class and four in the open class. He has defeated the "Gem of the Season," owned in Toronto, Canada, the winner of 175 first prizes, and without doubt is the best of his breed to-day in America. "Bestwood Daisy" is the winner of fifty-one first premiums in this country and is the best of three well-known dogs, "Southern Beauty" and "Spinaway" being the other members of the trio.

HENRY M. SWIFT, a highly esteemed resident of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, residing near Verbank, is a man of liberal education who, preferring a country life to the more exciting scenes of a professional career, has devoted his time to agricultural pursuits.

He is a descendant of William Swift, a native of the County of Essex, England, who came to Boston during the immigration of 1630-1631. On his arrival in Massachusetts, he located at Watertown, but he sold his possessions there in 1637, and removed to Sandwich, Mass., on the Cape, purchasing the largest farm in that vicinity, which is still in the possession of his lineal descendants. He had three children: William (2), Hannah and Esther. William Swift (2) was born in England, and came to this country with his father. He married, and became the father of eleven children: Hannah, William, Jireh, Josiah, Temperance, Esther, Dinah, Ephraim, Samuel, Ruth and Mary. Ephraim was born at the old homestead in Sandwich, Mass., June 6, 1656, and became a carpenter and cooper by occupation. He died in January, 1742. Their seven children were: Elizabeth, Joham, Samuel, Ephraim, Sarah, Hannah and Moses. Samuel Swift was born at Sandwich April 9, 1686, and died in December, 1757. By trade he was a carpenter and blacksmith. He was married December 24, 1712, at Falmouth, Mass., to Miss Ruth Hatch and they reared a family of nine children: Ephraim, Manassa, Judah, Reuben, Moses, Mary, Joanna, Joan and Lydia. Judah Swift, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born September 3, 1716, at the old home on Cape Cod, and in 1769 came to Dutchess county, with his wife, Elizabeth Morton, of Falmouth, Mass., to whom he was wedded December 14, 1738. They were accompanied by their children, and made the journey with an ox-team. Mr. Swift settled in the town of Amenia, purchasing first the property now known as the Barlow farm, but later he exchanged it for a larger tract, now owned by N. W. Smith. At the time of his death, January 17, 1807, he was one of the most extensive land holders of Dutchess county, owning 1800 acres. In politics he was a Tory. His wife died in 1802 at the age of eighty-two. They had eight children: Lois, Samuel, Nathaniel, Moses, Rebecca, Seth, Elizabeth and Moses (2).

Samuel Swift went west, and bought the land where the city of Auburn, N. Y., now stands. Elizabeth married (first) Sam Jarvis, and (second) a Mr. Hawkins. Seth Swift, our subject's grandfather, was born at Falmouth, Mass., March 16, 1757, and on arriving at manhood's estate he engaged in farming upon a portion of his father's property. In 1782 he married Mary Wells, by whom he had six children: Henry, who married Rebecca Warner; Moses, who married Hannah Payne; E. Morton, our subject's father; Thomas, who married Emma Gront; Ann, the wife of William T. Hobson; and Maria, Mrs. Allen Cline.

E. Morton Swift, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Amenia, in 1790, and after acquiring a common-school education in the local schools studied law, engaging in the practice of the profession at Poughkeepsie and Dover Plains. He married Miss Belinda Barlow, daughter of Thomas Barlow, a well-known farmer of Amenia. Our subject was the eldest of seven children, the names of the others with dates of birth being as follows: Ann, December 18, 1814; Rebecca, February 28, 1818; Maria, July 4, 1820; Harriet, November 13, 1822; Amie, December 13, 1825; and Mary, August 25, 1829. The father passed to his eternal rest May 10, 1859, at the age of sixty-nine.

Capt. Swift first saw the light July 17, 1810, at the old farm in Amenia. His literary education was completed by a course at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., and he then studied law, but he never practiced his profession. He is one of the prosperous agriculturists of his locality, and is prominent in local affairs. Although he has not aspired to office for himself, he has always been influential in political movements in his section, as is well shown by the history of the nomination of Killian Miller for Congress. During the Civil war our subject was appointed on the staff of General Clark, the Commissary General of the Army of the Potomac, with the rank of Cavalry Captain, and he still has in his possession the original commission signed by Edwin M. Stanton and President Abraham Lincoln. Capt. Swift enlisted April 14, 1862, and served until 1864. He reported for his first duty at the White House. He participated in many engagements, and his reminiscences of the war are very interesting. At the time of the battle of Fair Oaks he was at the White House, where he met Gen. Clark, and was ordered to the scene of battle, and after remaining there one week he joined the forces on the Potomac.

In 1834 Capt. Swift was married to Miss Sarah Coffin, daughter of Robert and Magdaline (Bently) Coffin, and they have had six children: (1) Belinda, born January 22, 1836, died in infancy. (2) Robert, born June 16, 1837, was educated in the common schools of Amenia township, and is now a trusted employe of the Harlem R. R. He married Miss Maggie Elliot, and has two children: Samuel E. and Sarah. (4) Morton, born April 14, 1840, received a common-school education, and is now engaged in the postal service. He married Miss Francesca Cooke, and has three children: Lucy, Belinda and Harriet. (4) Henry and (5) JANE have never married.

HARVEY J. FRENCH, a prominent and successful merchant tailor of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, is a native of New York State, born in the city of Albany, August 12, 1862.

The family of which our subject is a member is of English origin, and his grandfather, Samuel French, was a merchant tailor in London, England, during the early part of the present century, and died there. He had but one child, Samuel (the father of our subject), who was born in 1825, learned of his father the trade of tailor in the Mother Country, and in 1857 came to the United States, settling in Albany, N. Y., where he commenced business as a merchant tailor, continuing in that line some thirty-five years, or until 1892, when he retired from active work, and now makes his home in Syracuse, N. Y. In England he had married Miss Ann Barnett, who survives him, and nine children (all living) were born of this union, to wit: Samuel H., a merchant tailor in Albany, N. Y.; Kate, the wife of Dr. W. H. Todd, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.; Annie, wife of George Barnhart, of Columbus, Ohio; Mabel, the wife of Fred L. Geer, a well-known merchant of Albany; Harvey J., our subject; Harriet, the wife of T. Rockwood Cutler, a prominent architect in New York City; Grace, the wife of Frederick Hemming, a merchant of Syracuse, N. Y.; Bertha, at home; and Clarence, living in Syracuse.

Harvey J. French, whose name introduces this sketch, passed his boyhood in Albany, at the public schools of which city he received his primary education, later attending All Saints Cathedral school, an institution conducted under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, and presided over by Bishop Doane. From that school Mr. French was graduated, and he then entered his father's place of business as an apprentice to the tailoring trade, making himself a thorough master of the business, especially in the cutting department. Later he graduated from a "cutting school" in New York City, and then opened out a tailoring establishment in Albany, N. Y., which he conducted some six years; but owing to impaired health was compelled to abandon work and recuperate for a year. His health being re-established, he took charge of the custom department of Julius Saul's tailoring business in Troy, N. Y., the largest of the kind in that city.

In March, 1892, Mr. French came to Poughkeepsie, where he accepted the position of cutter for Peter B. Hayt & Co., which he filled two years, at the end of that time resigning to engage in a similar capacity with M. Swartz. In the winter of 1895 he commenced his present successfully-conducted business on the corner of Main and Garden streets, and in the face of strong competition has advanced rapidly to the position of one of the leading merchant tailors of the city. He employs only skilled workmen, which fact, together with his genial good nature and painstaking methods, as well as determination to please his patrons at whatever cost of time and trouble, have secured for him, and retain, a liberal portion of the best business of the county.

In Albany, New York, in June, 1883, Mr. French was united in marriage with Miss May W. Nichols, daughter of Charles C. Nichols, a prominent architect of that city, and to them have been born three children: Clifford, Harold, and Harvey, Jr. While a resident of Albany our subject was a member of Company A, N. G. N. Y., Albany Zouave Cadets. After a service of six years Mr. French applied for and received an honorable discharge; he then joined the Old Guard of Company A, a leading social organization of that city, which numbers among its members nearly all the prominent professional and business men of the city. In Poughkeepsie he is a member of Armor Lodge, K. of P., of the Booth Hose Co., and of the Century Bicycle Club. He was once elected lieutenant of the Nineteenth Separate Company, N. Y. S. N. G., but declined to accept the honor. In religious faith he and his wife are members of Christ Episcopal Church, of Poughkeepsie.

H. J. French

IRVING DEYO LE ROY, M. D., a prominent physician and surgeon of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, by his devotion to his work, and the careful study and diagnosis of the various diseases that have come under his observation, has been unusually successful, and has gained an enviable reputation as a skilled practitioner. He belongs to a family long prominently connected with the history of Dutchess county, although his birth occurred at Highland, Ulster Co., N. Y., on April 18, 1859.

The founder of the family in this country was Frans LeRoy, who was of French Huguenot descent, the family having emigrated from France with the Huguenots, and taken up their abode in Canada. Frans settled at Kingston, N. Y., about the year 1700. John S., a descendant of Frans, settled in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county. One of his sons, Levi, established the town of LeRoy in the western part of the State, and Simeon became a resident of Canada, while John I. established LeRoys Mills in Dutchess county.

The last named, who was a great-grandfather of our subject, was born in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, and by his marriage with Hannah Westervelt, of Holland origin, he became the father of twelve children, among whom was Joseph LeRoy. He was born in Fishkill, N. Y., in 1801, and was united in marriage with Miss Clarissa Traver, also a native of Dutchess county. They began their domestic life upon a farm in the town of Clinton, where were born their six children; one of whom, Abram, was the father of our subject. Upon their farm in the town of Clinton the grandparents spent their remaining days, faithful and consistent members of the Presbyterian Church.

Abram Leroy, the father of our subject, was born August 20, 1829, in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, where he grew to manhood and married Miss Cornelia Cookingham, who was born there in 1831, a descendant of Daniel Cookingham, a native of Holland, who on crossing the Atlantic took up a tract of land in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, on which his son Michael and grandson Daniel were born, the last being the father of Mrs. LeRoy. After their marriage the parents of our subject located at Highland, Ulster county, where the father engaged in farming and milling for about ten years, when they returned to LeRoys Mills. Besides the operation of the mill, Abram LeRoy also dealt in grain, following those pursuits until his death, August 3, 1870. In religious faith he held membership with the Presbyterian Church, and his political support was unswervingly given the Republican party. His widow is also a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Irving D. Leroy, whose name introduces this sketch, was the only child of his parents, who took him to LeRoys Mills when six years of age. After pursuing his studies for some time in the district schools of the locality, at the Poughkeepsie high school and the public schools of Lansing, Mich., he entered the Hungerford Collegiate Institute at Adams, N. Y., taking the regular college course and graduating with the class of '76. He was next a student in the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, and after his graduation there, in 1878, he became bookkeeper and cashier for Dobbs & Herrick, of that city, remaining with them for a short time. In 1880 he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. H. L. Cookingham, of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he remained for a year, and then entered the Albany Medical College, graduating March 9, 1883. The following winter he took a post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic, being at the time established in practice at Poughkeepsie. He was also a student of Drs. S. B. Ward, of Albany, N. Y., and James R. Leaming, of New York City. Since 1884 he has followed his chosen profession in Pleasant Valley, and has built up a large and lucrative practice. During the years 1870-71 the Doctor, then a student, traveled quite extensively through the Western States.

On April 7, 1886, Dr. LeRoy was married to Miss Jennie Duncan (a lady of Scotch extraction), born in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, as was also her father, John B. Duncan, a merchant of that village. The Doctor and his wife are active workers in the Presbyterian Church, and he is now serving as one of its elders. Dr. LeRoy is a member of the Dutchess County Medical Society, a founder of the New York State Medical Association, and a permanent member of the American Medical Association. He is at present, and has been for many years, health officer of his district, and is one of the most progressive physicians of the county, standing deservedly high among his professional brethren. In politics he is a hearty supporter of the Republican party.

PALVERSON LEE. Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, numbers this able young lawyer among her native sons, as he first saw the light in that city on the 8th of August, 1870. His father, Lewis Alverson, was born there in 1843, and was a son of Samuel and Caroline E. Alverson, the former a native of Connecticut. Lewis was the eldest in a family of four children, the others being: Mrs. Josephine Woodworth; Mrs. Ellen Smith (deceased); and Samuel, who enlisted during the Civil war in the 128th N. Y. V. I., and died in a hospital in Louisiana. The father of our subject obtained his education in the public schools of Poughkeepsie, where he also learned the machinist's trade, and on reaching man's estate was united in marriage with Mary E. Lee, a daughter of Bezaleel Lee. He departed this life in 1872, his wife surviving him about a year.

Thus at the age of three years our subject was left an orphan, and his little baby sister died at the age of six months. After the death of his mother Per Lee Alverson was taken to the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Lee, who still make their home in Poughkeepsie, where they are held in the highest esteem. By trade the uncle is a carpenter, but is now county canvasser for the Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle.

During his childhood our subject attended the public schools of Poughkeepsie, and December 3, 1888, was graduated from the Eastman Business College. For one year thereafter he studied law with J. S. Van Cleef, and then entered the office of C. W. H. Arnold, with whom he remained two years. On being admitted to the bar in 1892, he at once began practice, opening an office at No. 54 Market street. He makes a specialty of realty law and probate practice, and his ability and industry make his services valuable. In argument he is logical and eloquent, and his words always carry weight with judge and jury, seldom failing to result in victory.

Mr. Lee has a large circle of warm personal friends, the regard of the entire legal profession, and has won the respect of all with whom business or social relations have brought him in contact. In November, 1896, he was elected to the office of justice of the peace, on the Republican ticket.

WILLIAM J. BEARDSLEY, a leading architect of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, and one of the most promising young business men of that locality, is of English descent. His ancestors were early settlers in Connecticut, and his grandfather, William E. Beardsley, was the first of the family to locate in Dutchess county. He conducted a sash and blind factory at the Upper Landing, in Poughkeepsie, and at the time of his death resided upon a farm on the inside road near Morgan Lake. He had a family of seven children, to wit: William J. (our subject's father), Abbott, Martha (now Mrs. Stephen Wilkinson), Hannah (now Mrs. Eli Ranson), Mary, Ophelia Fanny, and Miranda. In politics he was a Republican, in religion a Congregationalist. He died at the age of eighty-seven years.

William J. Beardsley, our subject's father, succeeded to his father's business in Poughkeepsie, and conducted it at the same place until 1887, when he built a factory on the corner of Main and Harris streets, where he carried on a large milling business successfully until his death, which occurred July 2, 1887. He was a Republican in politics, and a member of the M. E. Church. He married Miss Louise McLean, a lady of Scotch descent, daughter of Samuel McLean, a well-known resident of Poughkeepsie, who conducted a store and, later, a commission business in that city. Three sons were born of this union: Charles, William J., and Ralph (deceased).

William J. Beardsley.

On the death of the father the business was continued by his son Charles until February 14, 1891, when the property was destroyed by fire. Since that time Charles Beardsley has been in the employ of the government as a railway mail clerk.

William J. Beardsley, our subject, followed his father's occupation, and made himself thoroughly acquainted with all branches of interior building work, until his father's death, when he discontinued the sash and blind business, and proceeded with architectural work, for which he had a natural talent. He had had practical instruction and experience in the art of building in different places throughout the country, and, being thus thoroughly versed and schooled in architecture, decided to locate in Poughkeepsie for the practice of that profession. He has one of the largest architectural offices in the city, located at No. 42 Market street, and equipped with all necessary devices, together with a corps of competent assistants.

Up to the present time Mr. Beardsley has shown great talent in his chosen calling, having built many of the fine residences throughout the counties of Dutchess and Ulster, and throughout the Hudson River Valley—some of the best people in the above named counties being among his clients. Mr. Beardsley is prominent in the fire department of Poughkeepsie as a member of the Crockett Hook and Ladder Co., and he also affiliates with the Knights of Pythias, Uniform Rank, and and of the Masonic Fraternity.

JAMES E. BALDWIN, a prominent agriculturist of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, is well-known as a business man, having spent a number of years as a successful speculator previous to settling down to his present calling. He was born July 13, 1829, in the town of Patterson, Putnam Co., N. Y., and his early education was acquired in the schools of that town. He made his entrance into the business arena as a speculator at an early age, and after a time went to New York City, where his abilities had wider scope. In 1874 he purchased the farm in the town of Pawling, where he has since made his home. On November 5, 1884, he married Miss Fannie Townsend, who was born in the town of Kent, Putnam county, in 1865, but was educated in Pawling. To this union, one child, Susie, was born November 27, 1885. Mrs. Baldwin's father, John Townsend, was born in 1824, in the town of Kent, Putnam county, and passed his early life there. He married (first) Anna M. Luddington, and (second) Sarah Dykeman (Mrs. Baldwin's mother), who was born in Patterson, Putnam county, in 1827. Both parents are now living at Boundbrook, New Jersey.

Mr. Baldwin's great-grandfather, James Baldwin, was born in Cheshire, England, in 1700, of parents who traced their ancestry to old English stock. He came to America in 1730, and settled in Carmel, Putnam Co., N. Y., where he acquired a large farm and passed the remainder of his days engaged in agriculture and dealing in cattle. Successful as he was in the management of his private business, he was an active and able worker in public affairs, and at one time held the office of judge of Westchester county. His wife, Hannah Golden, of Goldens Bridge, N. Y., died in 1802, and he followed her two years later. They had eleven children, whose names with dates of birth are here given: James, 1734; Ephraim, 1736; Phœbe, 1738; Elisha, 1740; Pearce, 1742; Daniel, 1744; Catherine, 1746; Elizabeth, 1748; Henry, 1750; Hannah, 1752; and James, 1760. The members of the Baldwin family, with but few exceptions, have been Whigs, and in later times Republicans, and although in the old days they adhered to the Baptist faith, some of this generation are Congregationalists.

James Baldwin, our subject's grandfather, was born in Carmel, N. Y., and after enjoying such educational opportunities as that locality afforded in those days he engaged in farming, having inherited Starr Ridge farm, a portion of his father's property. Although he was deeply interested in political questions, he never sought or held office. He married Miss Susan Vail, who was born in 1764, in the town of Carmel, a daughter of Aaron Vail. Twelve children were born to them: Daniel, Fannie, Henry, Polly, Aaron, James, Dorcas, Betsy, Nathan Cole, Susan, Hannah Jane and Hannah N. The father died in 1827, the mother surviving him four years. The grandfather's descendants are numerous:

(1) Daniel, who was born at the old home February 4, 1782, and became a well-to-do farmer of the same locality, married Miss Field, and had four children, namely: Henry F., a farmer, married Jane Dykeman, and had one child—Mrs. Mary Huston, who has one son, Henry Huston, not married. (2) Perry married Eliza Nickerson, and had no children. (3) Laura married Isaac Haviland, and had three sons: Baldwin, who died many years since; Comfort Haviland, living in Ohio; and William, who married Miss Rogers. (4) Phœbe married Lansing Rodgers, and reared a large family.

(II) Fannie, born March 2, 1784, married Peter Dykeman, and had five children: (1) James B., born in 1821, married Annie Mabe, and had eight children—Nellie, wife of Charles Travers; Willard, who married Jessie Kelley; Annie B., wife of Charles Nichols; James, who died young; Frank, who is now married; Mary A., wife of Sam Cornish; Peter, unmarried; and James H., who died at an early age. (2) Nathan C., born in 1823, married Ruth Mabe, and has one son, Alex, who married Antoinette Barns, and has two sons—Nathan B., who married Miss Bloomer; and Henry, still single. (3) Susan, born in 1820, married J. Patrick, and has had four children—Mary and Sarah, at home; Fannie, who died in childhood; and Charles, who married Bessie Utter, and has one daughter, Susie. (4) Ruth, born in 1825, died at an early age. (5) Sarah, born in 1825, married John Townsend (Mrs. Baldwin's father), who had by his first marriage to Anna M. Luddington, four children—Fred, who married Lillie Hopkins; Hattie, wife of Dewitt Burr; Charles, who married Mary Sherwood; and Warren, who died in infancy. By the second union there were two children—Mrs. Baldwin, and her brother, George H., unmarried.

(III) Henry Baldwin, our subject's father, was born September 21, 1787, at the homestead, to which he succeeded at his father's death. His early education was obtained in the common schools of the neighborhood, and and to this he added greatly by extensive travel in later years. Among other trips taken was one to New Orleans, made before the days of railroads and steamboats, and the greater part of the journey was made on foot. He married Miss Pollie Smith, a daughter of Edward and Abbie (Northrup) Smith. Her father was a well-known farmer of Putnam county, and a man who was prominent in public life, serving as county judge and for two terms as a member of the State Legislature. Seven children were born of this marriage, their names, dates of birth, etc., being given: (1) Susan E. (March 17, 1823) married Isaac Akin, but had no children. (2) Hannah (May, 1826) married James M. Baldwin, and had four children—Burdette, Elisha Bell and Jodia. (3) James E. (July 13, 1829) is the subject proper of this sketch. (4) Elizabeth (June, 1832) married Elijah Budd, but had no children. (5) Henry C. (1834), a farmer, married Phœbe I. Homan, and had four children—Jerome V. and Herbert, who are not married; Edward S., who married Sarah Beecher; and Mary, who is at home. (6) Josephine (March, 1838) married Alex Homan, and had three children—Charles, who married; and Henry and Clara, who are single. (7) Sarah J. (June, 1843) married Isaac Akin, but has no children.

(IV) Pollie, born December 23, 1798, was married in 1812 to James Townsend, and had eleven children—Aaron, 1813; Caroline, 1815; Fannie, 1818; Henry, 1820; Betsey, 1822; Susan and Elizabeth, twins, 1824, who lived less than one year; Sarah, 1826; Mary, 1830; Jane, 1832; and James, 1835.

(V) Aaron, born January 13, 1791, was killed in the war of 1812 (he never married).

(VI) James, born April 4, 1793, married Cornelia Luddington, and had seven children.

(VII) Dorcas, born December 28, 1795, was married in 1839, to Peter Whitney, but had no children.

(VIII) Betsey, born February 11, 1798, married Allen Light, born in 1805, and had five children—Mary D., March 22, 1834; Fannie E., 1835, who married Charles Barber, the eldest of twenty-one children of one father and mother; Flora E., 1837, wife of William Pugsley; Susan E., 1839, wife of Loren Wilcox; and Allen D., August, 1841.

(IX) Nathan Cole spent his boyhood at Starr Ridge farm, where he was born May 27, 1800. He engaged in farming in the town of Kent, Putnam county, owning about 300 acres of land; but while he was recognized as a leading agriculturist, he was not especially prominent in political affairs, and, preferring to exert his influence as a citizen in a quiet way, he refused all invitations to run for office. Strong and athletic, physically, and gifted with an active mind, and the retentive memory for which his family is noted, he held an influential position in the community. His reading was extensive, his knowledge of the Scriptures being unusually thorough, and he was a Baptist in religious faith. He married Eliza daughter of John Smith, of the town of Kent, Putnam county, and had five children. (1) Sarah Ann, December 23, 1826, died at the age of thirteen. (2) Peter W. is mentioned more fully below. (3) L. Nathan, February 11, 1838, fell from a wall when he was five years old, dislodging a stone which fell upon him and killed him. (4) William R., May 24, 1841, a farmer and a lawyer at Boundbrook, N. J., married Hattie Young. (5) Dorcas Elivia, March 2, 1843, died at six years of age.

(X) Susan, born December 29, 1802, married David Russell, and had four children—Baldwin married Miss Smith; Robert married Miss Holmes; Louisa, wife of Caleb Smalley; and Henry, unmarried.

(XI) Hannah Jane, born in 1804, died in 1806.

(XII) Hannah N., born April 11, 1807, married Jacob Sunderland, who was murdered.

PETER W. BALDWIN, son of Nathan C. Baldwin, was born in the town of Kent, Putnam county, May 13, 1830, and on attaining to manhood's estate he engaged in agriculture, later in cattle dealing, which he has now followed successfully for about twenty years, his speciality being the buying of milch cows for the local trade. Until 1860 he lived in his native township, and he then moved to Norwich, Chenango Co., N. Y., where he spent ten years. In 1870 he purchased the Aiken Faber farm of 307 acres in the town of Pawling, now one of the best estates in Dutchess county. He makes a specialty of dairying, and raises Holstein stock exclusively, his herd of ninety-three being the largest in the locality. He also keeps eight horses. Fond of reading, he is well posted upon the questions of the day, and as he is of an analytical turn of mind he does his own thinking. He is not an office holder, but takes keen interest in the political contests of the time, supporting Republican principles. He is a member of the Baptist church of Towners. In 1854 he married Miss Nancy Wells, daughter of Jonathan Wells, a leading citizen of Norwich, N. Y., and a prominent Republican. Two children were born of this union: Lucy E. and Wells L., both of whom are at home.

farm from 1802 up to the time of his death, and also conducting a blacksmith shop. He was born in what was then the town of Beekman, but is now Unionvale, on August 15, 1768, and in its common schools received his education. He was a valued and reliable citizen, one who had the confidence and respect of all with whom he came in contact.

His grandfather, Michael Vincent, was a native of Westchester county, N. Y., where he was reared and educated, and as a life work chose the vocation of farming. In his family were five sons, namely: Michael, Levi, Leonard, Richard and Philip.

Levi Vincent, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, and here obtained his education, and later followed farming. He married Miss Sarah Hoxie, and to them were born seven children: Reuben, whose name introduces this review; Levi, who married Evaline Snivens; Samuel; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Samuel Carey; Mrs. Annie Jennings; Hannah and Tabitha.

Reuben Vincent was united in marriage with Miss Deborah Bowerman, daughter of Ichabod and Jane (Richmond) Bowerman, who were the parents of twelve children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Thomas, May 22, 1758; Lydia, January 15, 1762; Phebe, September 9, 1763; Mary, June 30, 1765; Ichabod, September 2, 1767; Jonathan, August 10, 1769; Deborah, January 8, 1771; Stephen, October 22, 1773; Gideon, June 29, 1775; Israel, August 21, 1777; Judah, July 16, 1779; and Nancy, November 27, 1780. The oldest of these children—Thomas Bowerman—married Sarah Vincent, a sister of our subject.

Twelve children also blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent, namely: (1) Pauline, born August 22, 1791, married George Darling, a tanner and currier, of Connecticut, and they had three children—Jane; Phœbe A.; and Deborah, deceased. (2) Elizabeth, born July 9, 1793, married Stewart Christy, a farmer, and they had five children—Reuben; William; John; Gideon, who wedded Mary Cunningham; and Mrs. Jane Burlingham. (3) Hoxie, born March 24, 1795, married Abigail Stone, and they had five children—Reuben, Mrs. Antoinette Sheldon, Philo, John and Henry. (4) Jane was born February 24, 1797. (5) Levi, born February 16, 1799, wedded Miss Mary Vale, and had nine children—Phœbe; Isaac; Deborah; Gideon, who married Ophelia Lodre;

REUBEN VINCENT (deceased) was long connected with the farming and industrial interests of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, there operating the old homestead

Levina; Platt; Albert; Chester; and Mary J. George Vincent, the son of Gideon and Ophelia (Lodre) Vincent, married Miss Ella Matteson, by whom he has a daughter, Edna, born in 1883. (6) Gideon was born December 13, 1800. (7) Lydia was born November 12, 1802. (8) Mary, born May 25, 1805, wedded Cyrus Perkins, and had six children—Charles, Delila, Jane, Elizabeth, and Hoxie and Edwin, both of whom died in infancy. (9) Margaret, born May 3, 1807, married Seth Barmore, and had three children—Deborah, Elizabeth and Abigail. (10) Platt was born February 8, 1809. (11) Phebe A. was born February 28, 1811. (12) Thomas, born January 11, 1817, died at the age of two years.

SMITH D. HARRIS. Like many other residents within the bounds of Dutchess county, who started out in life with naught save an abundance of determination and an indefatigable industry, combined with a strong and healthy constitution, and who have succeeded through their own deligence, energy and economy, is to be classified the gentleman whose name here appears.

Smith Harris, father of our subject, was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where for many years he conducted a grocery business, the latter part of his life, however, being devoted to shoemaking. As an unswerving Democrat, he was very active in political matters, while in social life he was a member of the Masonic fraternity. In New York City he married Miss Eliza Mealy, and they both departed this life in 1879.

Smith D. Harris, our subject, was born August 8, 1841, on Pine street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the schools of which city he attended until he was sixteen years of age. Being now prepared for life work, he set out for the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he secured employment on the farm of Paul Upton, and continued thereon some sixteen years, having the entire management of the place after his employer's death. In 1873, at Schultsville, in the town of Clinton, Mr. Harris wedded Mary H. Doughty, a daughter of Oliver Doughty, and three children bless their union: Mrs. Leonora Murch, Paul D. and Laura. The mother of these died July 28, 1896.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Harris located upon their present farm in the town of Clinton, known as "The Maples", and have since made that place their home. After renting the land for one year, Mr. Harris purchased the same for $7,000, giving his personal note for it, and went steadily to work to clear it from all encumbrance. He has not only paid off the amount, but has another fine farm in the town of Stanford, known as "Lake Side." The improvements upon the places are of a neat and substantial character, and bear witness to the fact that the owner thoroughly understands his business, and that he is industrious and enterprising. He is an earnest, Christian gentleman, a faithful member of the Friends Church, and an active worker in the Endeavor Society. He uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Prohibition party; is an earnest advocate of moral reform and the utter overthrow of the liquor traffic, which he considers the chief barrier to the advancement of Church work.

WILLIAM W. HAXTUN. The subject of this sketch is one of the leading citizens of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, where he is successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits, and where his birth occurred on March 19, 1829. His great-grandfather, who was a resident of Greene county, N. Y., was killed by the Indians, being attacked while repairing the roof of his mill. The rest of the family, with the exception of one son, then removed to the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, where they were numbered among the early settlers. They located in the eastern part of the town, where they at first leased land of the Beekmans, but later purchased property. The great-grandmother was buried there.

Jeremiah Haxtun, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Greene county, and after the death of his father became the mainstay of the family. In the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, was celebrated his marriage with Rhoda Akin, a native of that town, and they began their domestic life upon a farm a mile east of Gardner Hollow in the town of Beekman, where they were living at the time of the Revolutionary war. Their family included the following children: Benjamin, William, Louisa, Emily and Rhoda.

The birth of Benjamin Haxtun, the father of our subject, occurred in the town of Beekman, where his father always carried on farming, and there his boyhood days were passed in assisting in the work of the farm, and in attending the district schools. He was married in that town to Almira Vanderburg, daughter of Colonel Vanderburg, and after her death he was united in marriage with Sarah Wooley, daughter of William and granddaughter of Joseph Wooley. Two children graced the second union—William W., of this review; and Almira, who died in infancy. The father always continued to reside upon the old home farm at Gardner Hollow, there dying in October, 1857, at the age of eighty years, while his wife passed away in 1870. An influential and popular man, he represented his district for two terms in the General Assembly.

After the usual manner of farmer boys, William W. Haxtun spent his early life at Gardner Hollow, in the town of Beekman, and received his primary education in the district schools. Later, for four years and one term, he attended the old Amenia Seminary, after which he was a student in the Dutchess County Academy on South Hamilton street, Poughkeepsie, but on account of ill health was obliged to give up his studies and return home. In the town of Beekman he wedded Miss Maria De Long, whose birth occurred there, and they have become the parents of two children—Benjamin, now of Stormville, Dutchess county, who married Dorothea Storm, by whom he has a daughter, Maria; and William, Jr.

In 1873 Mr. Haxtun left the old homestead, and for the past fifteen years has resided near Green Haven, in Beekman town, where he is engaged in farming. He is very fond of travel, and has visited many points of interest in the West. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and has taken a prominent part in public affairs, representing Beekman on the board of supervisors for two terms. For three years he was president of the Dutchess County Agricultural Society, treasurer for seven years, and had charge of the ladies hall for four years.

BENJAMIN HOWELL (deceased). Among the representatives of the Pine Tree State, who traveling westward have established homes in Dutchess county, N. Y., none are more worthy of mention in a work of this character, devoted to the biographies of the best citizens, than the gentleman whose name introduces this review. He was born in Portland, Maine, May 29, 1818, and was a son of Benjamin Howell, whose birth occurred in 1784, on Cape Elizabeth, which now forms a part of the city of Portland. The grandfather, Isaac Howell, was a native of the same place, and was descended from English ancestors, who, on crossing the Atlantic to America, took up their residence in Portland. There he was reared, and for many years was identified with the business interests of the city as a clothing merchant. When the colonists, no longer able to bear the tyrannical oppression of the mother country, fought for independence, he was numbered among the valiant troops that followed the leadership of George Washington. All his life was passed in Portland, and both he and his wife were connected with the Baptist Church of that city. They became the parents of four children: John, who was a grocer of Portland, Maine; George, who followed the sea; Benjamin; and a daughter of whom no specific record can be found.

Benjamin Howell was reared in Portland, learned the carpenter's trade, and was the architect and builder of his own home. He married Rebecca Dyer, a native of that city, and a daughter of Nathaniel Dyer, and after his marriage established a home in Portland, while as a means of livelihood he followed the sea. He died of yellow fever in the West Indies in 1828, and his wife passed away in February, 1835. They had six children: Emily, who died unmarried; Harriet, who became the wife of Joseph Russell, a carriage maker; Rebecca, who married Samuel Chester, a clothier; Mary, who died unmarried; John, who became a minister of Christ Church; and Benjamin.

The subject of this review spent his early boyhood in the city of his birth, and at the age of fifteen started out in life for himself, going to New York City, where he engaged in the milk business, which he followed for ten years. In 1845 he wedded Mary Lamoree, who was born in Dutchess county, and is a sister of George Lamoree. In the spring of 1845 they removed to the farm on which Mr. Howell ever afterward made his home. They had five children: Harrison, who died at the age of three years; Walter, who died at the age of nine years; George W., a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; Augustus C., an agriculturist; and Emily C., wife of James T. Budd, who is a farmer of Pleasant Valley town. The mother of this family was called to the home beyond in April, 1888, and many friends mourned the loss of her whom they had so deeply respected. The father has died during the preparation of this book.

Mr. Howell gave his attention to agricultural pursuits after coming to Dutchess county, and was at the time of his death the owner of 101 acres of valuable land, which is highly cultivated and improved. He never held office, but faithfully performed his duties of citizenship, and was one of the supporters of the Baptist Church. He was a self-made man, starting out in life empty-handed, and steadily worked his way upward, overcoming all obstacles and difficulties that barred his progress to success.

CAPTAIN JOHN H. BRINCKERHOFF, one of the best-known men along the Hudson river, was born in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, November 24, 1827, a son of Henry I. and Freelove (Serene) Brinckerhoff, who were both also born in the town of Fishkill. The father, who followed agricultural pursuits, died July 4, 1852, the mother passing away December 26, 1891, at the advanced age of ninety-five years. They were the parents of eight children, three of whom are yet living: Abram, John H. and Eliza.

When our subject was eleven years old his parents moved to Esopus, Ulster county, where he spent the rest of his boyhood days, attending the common schools. At the age of twenty years, on account of the failing health of his father, the management of the farm devolved upon our subject, and he remained there until he was twenty-four years old, at which time he was married at Esopus to Miss Angeline Terpenning, who was born there in 1831, and died in 1880, leaving no issue. After marriage he moved to Highland, Ulster county, and bought some property, including a mill at Esopus, which he operated for some time, at the same time carrying on factories at Highland and Pine Bush, Orange county. After continuing in the milling business some twenty years he bought the "J. C. Doughty," a ferry boat plying between Highland and Poughkeepsie, of which he was captain for four years. In 1883 he bought, from Thomas Cornell, the "Mary Powell," the fastest passenger steamer on the river in those days, and later he sold an interest in this vessel to Capt. Anderson and Capt. Wicks. In 1878 Capt. Brinckerhoff purchased the interests of Thomas Doughty, Augustus Doughty and Capt. I. E. Wicks in the Poughkeepsie Transportation Co., in 1888 buying the interest of Homer Ramsdell, in same company, and becoming president of the company, which at that time owned the steamers "John L. Hasbrouck" and "Andrew Harda," which latter our subject rebuilt, renaming her the "P. D. Lefever." By 1888 the Captain had also built the river boats: "Gracie," "Gypsy" and "Queen City," and also the ferry "J. H. Brinckerhoff." He has accomplished a great deal for the transportation facilities of Poughkeepsie, doing all his freighting business there. By purchase he has become the owner of the entire dockage on the west side of the river, between Lewisburg and Highland, also much dockage on the east side of the river, and altogether he is a large owner of property at various places.

From its earliest inception the Captain has taken a lively interest in the Poughkeepsie Electric Light & Power Co., and is the heaviest stockholder in same; is also a stockholder in, and treasurer of, the Delamater Carriage Co., at Poughkeepsie. His comfortable home on Hamilton street, Poughkeepsie, he has rebuilt and much improved and beautified. Capt. Brinckerhoff is a member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church.

IRA E. WILBUR, a well-known and honored citizen of Amenia, Dutchess county, has here spent almost his entire life. His grandfather, David Wilbur, who was born in Rhode Island in 1770, was brought to Amenia the following year, and throughout life he there followed the trade of a tanner, dying in 1852.

Rutledge Wilbur, the father of our subject, is a native of Dutchess county, born at South Dover, on August 29, 1809, and there acquired his education in the district schools. For a time he made his home in Sharon, Conn., but about 1834 came to Amenia, and six years later was appointed superintendent of contract work in Capt. Weed's, Palmer's and Gridley's mines, with which he was connected for about fifty years. Politically he is a pronounced Republican. In 1833 he was united in marriage with Miss Betsey A. White, whose death occurred November 2, 1879, and to them were born six children: Albert B., born in 1834, ex-superintendent of the schools of Middletown, N. Y.; Electa C., deceased; Sarah B., born in 1840; Charles R., deceased; and Ira E. and Ida E., twins, the latter being now deceased.

John H. Brinckerhoff

The educational advantages afforded our subject were those of the public schools and the Amenia Seminary. Later, for the long period of twenty-two years and three months he was secretary of the Barnum-Richardson Mining Company or the Amenia Mining Company, since which time he has been variously employed, being in the carpet business at Brooklyn and the publishing business at Chicago. Subsequently he purchased land in Florida, 230 miles south of Jacksonville, where he engaged in raising oranges and lemons, and also pineapples. He holds a patent on the Berkshire cough syrup, which he manufactured at Amenia.

In that village Mr. Wilbur led to the marriage altar Mrs. Anna (Wickes) Wakeman, widow of James M. Wakeman, by whom she has one son—Raymond; and by her marriage with our subject she is the mother of a daughter—Bessie. The family is greatly esteemed in the community, as representing the best type of its moral and social element. Mr. Wilbur is prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, has been a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., since 1869, in which for six years he served as master, and is also connected with the chapter and commandery at Poughkeepsie, New York.

STOUTENBURGH.—The ancestor of this family, the first of the name in this country, was Pieter Stoutenburgh, who settled in New Amsterdam.* The date of his arrival does not appear, but it was probably before 1649. He was a schoolmaster, and therefore a man of education; and his family was of good standing, as indicated by their marriage connections and the offices they held in the city and colony. He had a house and a large garden on the east side of Broadway, just north of Wall street, as mentioned on old records and shown on the early maps. He married 25 July, 1649, Aefje (Eve) Van Tienhoven, a near relative, perhaps sister, of Cornelis Van Tienhoven, the secretary and treasurer of the Colony), by whom he had nine children. By a note on the list of members of the Dutch church it appears that Pieter Stoutenburgh “Obyt den 9 Mart. 1698-9,” aged eighty-six years.

Tobias Stoutenburgh, the sixth child of Peter, was baptized 18th January, 1660, his sponsor being Judith Stuyvesant. He lived all his life in New York, where he married 2 July, 1684, Anneke (or Anna) Van Rollegom, who was baptized 15 July, 1665, daughter of Jan Joosten Van Rollegom, from Haerlem, Holland. She was one of a large family; but when her brother, Jacobus, died intestate, his three sisters, Mary, Anna and Gertrude, were his only heirs, to be referred to later, as he left estates in Dutchess county. Tobias and Anna had twelve children, all baptized in the Dutch Church, New York, and several left descendants; but only the line of Jacobus, the sixth child, will be followed in this account. The codicil to the will of Tobias Stoutenburgh is dated 29 December, 1715, and it was proved 15 January, 1716. His widow survived him many years.

Jacobus Stoutenburgh, the sixth child of Tobias and Anna, was baptized 7 June, 1696, his sponsors being Jacobus Van Rollegom and Jannetje Van Feurden, wife of Evert Byvanck. He married in New York 25 May, 1717, Margaret, daughter of William Teller, of Teller's Point, Westchester county, and Rachel Kierstede; the latter being a daughter of Dr. Hans Kierstede by Sarah, daughter of Rollof Jansen and the celebrated Anneke Jans. The portraits of Jacobus and Margaret were painted by a good artist, about the time of their marriage. They are on “panel,” and are now treasured by their descendant, Mrs. Eugene Wells (Mary Teller), of Rhinebeck. Jacobus and Margaret had nine children: Tobias, baptized, New York, 12 February, 1718, married Catharine Van Vleck; Rachel, baptized, New York, 16 March, 1720, died young; William, baptized, New York, 3 June, 1722, married Maria Van Vleck; Anna, baptized, New York 11 November, 1724, married James Van Vleck; Jacobus married Josina Teller; John, baptized, Philipsburg, 29 March, 1729, married Catharine Teller; Peter married Rachel Van Steenburgh; Margaret, baptized, Philipsburg, 14 April, 1734, married John Teller; Luke, baptized, Phillipsburg, 5 June, 1736, married (first) Rachel Teller, and (second) Mary (Van Vleck) Minthorne.

From the above it will be seen that Jacobus removed, sometime after his marriage, to the Manor of Philipsburg, Westchester county, near his wife's relatives. In a deed, as late as 1741, he is called of that place "shopkeeper," and he must have been successful in that calling. In a deed of 1742, he is called "of the county of Dutchess," and that is doubtless the date of his removal. What led to this change of residence may now be briefly stated: The celebrated "Nine Partners Patent," in Dutchess county, was granted 27 May, 1697, to Col. Caleb Heathcote, Augustine Graham, James Emmot, Col. Henry Filkin, David Jamison, Hendrick Ten Eyck, John Aertson, William Creed and Jarvis Marshall. Nearly all these men held some office, high or low, in the colony. By the Civil List of the Province of New York, it appears that in 1693 Jarvis Marshall was "Doorkeeper and Messenger of ye Council," at a salary of £30 a year. This grant was an extensive one, now including the greater part of seven townships. In 1699 surveys were made, and the lands divided among the partners, or then owners. That part of the patent bounded on the west by the Hudson river was divided into "the Nine Water Lots." These lots varied from thirty to thirty-two chains in width, and ran back about four and a half miles "into the woods." Lot No. 9, at the north end, fell to Jarvis Marshall, who also had "Great Lots" Nos. 1, 15, 24, and 35, in the interior. He had already sold one-half his interest in the patent to Jacobus Van Rollegom, and, in 1700, he sold the other half to John Croke, of New York, merchant. Van Rollegom died before 1722, intestate, as before stated, and his estate fell to his three sisters: Mary, wife of Henry Kermer (or Carmer), Anne Stoutenburgh, widow, and Gertrude, widow of Bartholomew Le Roux. The latter was mother of Charles Le Roux, goldsmith, in New York, whose name so often appears as one of the attorneys for the proprietors of the Nine Partners Patent.

*It has been sometimes stated that the first Jacobus Stoutenburgh, of Dutchess county, was a native of Holland, whereas records, easily accessible, show that he was of the third generation.

By a deed, 25 August, 1722, Anne Stoutenburgh sold her interest to her son Jacobus, for £65. Subsequently, by a number of conveyances, Jacobus Stoutenburgh seems, by 1743, to have become the owner of all, or nearly all, the share that fell to Jarvis Marshall. It was twenty years from the date of his first purchase before Jacobus Stoutenburgh removed to what is now the town of Hyde Park; as in 1741 he was still "of Philipsburgh." His first house, probably the one named in old abstracts of title as "built in 1723," was of stone and logs, and stood a short distance south of the present village, near a spring, where some remains of it are still to be seen. It is probably that it was built for the use of the men who cleared the land, and for his occasional stopping place. The wood cut doubtless found a ready market in New York, when coal was yet unknown; and some years would naturally be spent in thus clearing the land. Very likely he did not remove his family until he built the stone mansion which stood until 1864, west of the post road, near the "Lower Corners." It was a fine house for that day, the rooms being spacious, and the paneling and wood work handsomely finished.

During the remainder of his lifetime he was engaged in disposing of a part of his lands and in settling his children on homestead farms; and he also deeded to them other lands. He was called upon to take some part in public affairs, and was for some time County Judge. In the deed to his son, Luke, he reserves the well-known "Stoutenburgh Burying-ground" as a burial place for his family forever. The will of Jacobus Stoutenburgh is dated 24 January, 1770, and it was proved 19 December, 1772. He gives his eldest son Tobias, "besides what I have given him," £25, and a silver teapot. As he has given his daughter Annatje a silver teapot of the value of £14 he gives "one now in my family" to Margaret, and orders one for each of the five younger sons; desiring if any of his children should die leaving a daughter Margaret, such teapot should descend to her. His wife, Margaret, is to enjoy all his estate, rents, etc., for life, with remainder to the seven younger children. This will is recorded in New York.

The account which follows, of his descendants, is founded on a "Family Tree," and papers now in the possession of Dr. James L. Prichard, with the assistance of Church records where available. It is believed to be correct as far as it goes; but the order of births in some families, where dates are wanting, is not certain; and there may be omissions, for which the "tree" must be held responsible.

Tobias Stoutenburgh, son of Jacobus, married in New York, 6 July, 1745, Catharine daughter of Abraham Van Vleck, and Maria Kip, baptized in New York, 30 November 1718. To him his father gave a farm lying on the river front of the Ninth Water Lot. It is probable that the large house that stood until about 1860, opposite the present railway station, was his residence. This house was oc upied at the beginning of this century by his on-in-law, Richard De Cantillon, who carried on here a mercantile and shipping business; sending cargoes as far as the West Indies, to be exchanged for sugar, molasses and rum. Few particulars of this eldest son seem to have come down to this day. Children: Margaret, baptized, New York, 30 March, 1746; married Jacob Schryver, and had Jane, and Sarah, who married her cousin, Tobias S. De Cantillon. Abraham, who left two children, Tobias and Mary. Mary married in 1770 Richard De-Cantillon, and had Tobias S. (married Sarah Schryver), Richard, Catherine (married Patrick B. Collins), and Maria (married Capt. Humphrey Wood). Jacobus T., who died after 1807. Tobias Stoutenburgh was commissioned colonel of the 4th Regiment, Dutchess county, 7 October, 1775.

William Stoutenburgh, a son of Jacobus, received from his father a homestead farm of large extent, lying on both sides of the Creek road, and taking in the whole breadth of the Ninth Water Lot. On this he built a large stone house, which is still standing, and in a good state of preservation, a short distance south of Union Corners, with the date, 1765, cut in a stone on the front. He married in New York, 5 July, 1753, Maria, daughter of Abraham Van Vleck and Maria Kip; baptized in New York, 5 July, 1725. Children: James, who died 1807, married three times; Abraham W., married Margaret Van Vleck; William W., died 1829, married Elizabeth Conklin; Tobias W., married Mary Hill; Mary W., married Harmon Van Benschoten, and had Mary, born 25 October, 1789, and Catharine, baptized 3 December, 1797; John W., baptized, Hughkeepsie, 22 September, 1765; Isaac, born 17 December, 1767, married Elsie Schryver; Henry, born 22 June, 1770, died early.

James Stoutenburgh, son of William, owned a farm on a road now closed, northeast of Union Corners. He was married three times, first 31 December, 1782, to Mary Moss; and second: Polly, married James Culver. Margaret. He married a second, 30 December, 1790, Hannah Marshall, and had Richard, born 9 July, 1791 (married, and had Richard and John T. B.); Hannah ("Nancy"), born 2 August, 1792; Herman; Marshall, died in Hughkeepsie, 19 August, 1849, aged fifty-seven, leaving children. He married (third) Comfort Bell, by whom he had one child, Elizabeth, married John Hendricks. In his will, 19

May, proved 25 June, 1807, he names wife Comfort, and all the above children. "The widow Comfort Stoutenburgh" survived her husband many years, residing on the homestead.

Abraham W. Stoutenburgh, son of William, married Margaret, daughter of James Van Vleck and Anna Stoutenburgh. Children: James; Margaret, married Tunis, son of William W. Stoutenburgh; William, born 23 March, 1783; Ann; Harmon; Elizabeth, born 7 March, 1789; Catharine, Maria, born 5 September, 1790; Abraham, born 25 August, 1791; Mary, born 10 December, 1797. Abraham W. Stoutenburgh lived in the town of Clinton. On May 1, 1795, Ebenezer Mott, of Stanford, and Mary, his wife, conveyed 211 acres in Clinton to Abraham Stoutenburgh, of Clinton, and Margaret, his wife, "it being the homestead farm their mother, Ann Van Vleck, possessed and resided on at the time of her decease."

William W. Stoutenburgh, son of William, died 19 August, 1829, aged seventy years. He had from his father a farm and mills a mile east of Union Corners. He married 28 January, 1783, Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Conklin and Catalyntje Van Benschoten, born 14 May, 1766, died 7 November, 1835. Children: William W., Jr., married Maria De Groff, and left a family. Isaac, born 12 February, 1786, not married. Catalyntje, born 22 December, 1789. Maria, born 9 January, 1792, died 28 May, 1884, aged ninety-two, married John E. De Groff, who died 20 September, 1846, aged fifty-nine. Jacob Van Benschoten, born 25 June, 1794, died 18 May, 1879, married Hester Travis, who died 14 May, 1883, aged eighty-five. Tunis married Margaret, daughter, of Abraham W. Stoutenburgh. Sarah, born 13 May, 1798, married—Mosher, and removed to "the West," died in fall of 1848. Susan C., born 29 May, 1800, died 23 June, 1889, married John A. De Groff, who died 2 February, 1876, in his eighty-first year. Ann Eliza, born 1804, died 29 November, 1822, aged eighteen years, three months. Henry, killed in 1841, by being thrown from a wagon; not married. Elias Van Benschoten, born 14 March, 1810; married 11 March, 1835, Huldah Swartwout.

Tobias W. Stoutenburgh, son of William, had the north part of the homestead of his father, 121 acres, at Union Corners, and other lands. In 1820 he advertised this property for sale. He sold not long after and removed, with a part of his family, to Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y. He married Mary Hill. Children: Barbara, born 29 June, 1792, married James Hall, of Stanford. George, of New York, married three times. William, of New York, married and left a family. Mary Van Vleck ("Maria"), born 4 November, 1797, never married. Abraham, removed to Texas, never married. John T., born 21 September, 1799, married Mary Van Wagner, 3 December, 1823. Sarah, born 19 September, 1801, married Peter Reese. Isaac married Miss Reese. Jane married Benjamin Prichard, son of James Prichard. Cornelia Mott removed to Phelps, Ontario county, had six children. Eliphalet, born 15 October, 1811 (living, 1897), of Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., married Clementine Knapp, and has a family.

Isaac Stoutenburgh, son of William, was born 17 December, 1767, and baptized at Poughkeepsie 14 February, 1768; his sponsors being Johannes Eiman and Catharina Van Deusen, widow of his uncle Isaac Van Vleck. He inherited the homestead of his father, with the stone house before mentioned. He was a prominent man in his day, in town and Church affairs. He died 1 November, 1859, aged ninety-two. He married 29 September, 1791, Elsie, daughter of John P. Schryver and Eleanor Van Benschoten, baptized at Rhinebeck, 15 August, 1773, died 6 July, 1845, aged seventy-two. Children: William I., born 5 September, 1792, died 21 September, 1859, unmarried. John Schryver, born 7 November, 1794, died 15 March, 1874, married Maria, daughter of John Albertson, who died 22 September, 1865, in her sixty-fifth year, and had John Albert, counsellor at law, of Hyde Park and New York, born 6 September, 1820, died 11 April, 1887; James De Cantillon, counsellor at law (now of Washington, D. C.); Susan Caroline, died 1864, aged thirty-five, married Col. Orrin Travis; Willet E. (now of Washington); Walter H. (also of Washington); Isaac, died 1841, aged three years; and Mary, married Abram Hyatt, of Sing Sing. Catharine De Cantillon, born 25 May, 1797, died 13 May, 1858, unmarried. Richard De Cantillon (twin), born 25 May, 1797, died 24 May, 1875, married (first) Eliza Sophia Sleight, of Fishkill, and (second) Eliza, daughter of Alexander McClellan. By the latter he had Isaac, of San Francisco, deceased; George Washington, of Chicago, died 1884; and Catharine Eliza, who married Edgar Van Kleck, of Poughkeepsie.

R. D. C. Stoutenburgh was long a merchant in Poughkeepsie. Eleanor, born 20 December, 1800, died 25 September, 1876; married Richard Lewis Prichard, son of James Prichard, and Cornelia Mott, born 1 August, 1804, died 22 November, 1882. His commission as captain in the 84th Regiment was signed by Gov. Marcy, 5 August, 1837. Richard L. and Eleanor Prichard had three children: Isaac DeCantillon Prichard, late one of the Associate Judges of Dutchess county, who died 9 February, 1894; JAMES L. PRICHARD, M. D., of Hyde Park, and Elsie Cornelia Prichard. James C. died 20 June, 1815, aged thirteen. Tobias I., born 29 January, 1806, died 25 October, 1888; married Maria, daughter of Isaac Albertson, and settled in the town of Pleasant Valley. Children: Sarah C. married Albert J. Budd, and Mary married Dr. Merritt Dutcher, of Owego, N. Y. Mary Elsie, born 17 July, 1809, died 16 January, 1833; married Jacob T. Sleight. Henry Cuyler, born 1 August, 1812, living 1897, of Poughkeepsie; married Amelia, sister of Col. Orrin Travis, and has Mary, Edward, Walter, Juliet, Anne and Henry. Caroline, born 23 June, 1815, died 20 June, 1829, aged fourteen. William I., son of Isaac Stoutenburgh, served in the war of 1812, being then about twenty years of age. For his services he had a pension, in later years, and a grant of land. A homemade blanket with the date "1812" woven in it, and which he had with him at Harlem Heights, is still preserved by a niece.

Anna Stoutenburgh, daughter of Jacobus, married June, 1755, Jacobus (James) Van Vleck, son of Abraham Van Vleck, of New York, and Maria Kip, baptized in New York 18 September, 1720. She inherited lands in the town of Clinton, near her brother Peter, and died there before 1795, leaving two children, viz.: Mary, wife of Ebenezer Mott, of Stanford, Margaret, wife of Abraham, son of the first William Stoutenburgh. The husband of Anna died before 1772. "Ebenezer Mott, Esq." died January 9, 1813, aged sixty-two. Mary, his wife, died December 2, 1840, aged eighty-two.

Jacobus Stoutenburgh, Jr., son of Jacobus, married 23 June, 1764, Josina, daughter of John Teller, of Teller's Point, and Aeltje (Alida) Vermilye. He lived in the stone house at the Lower Corners, which he inherited, together with a considerable farm adjoining. At the close of the Revolution he purchased the confiscated estate of Christian Bergh, which joined his own on the south, and which Mr. Bergh had intended for the portion of his daughter, Maria Barbara, wife of Martin Dob, who built the stone house, still standing, east of the road. Children: James I. (Captain), born February 1, 1767, married (first) 3 March, 1793, Catharine E., daughter of Richard Snediker, of Spacken Kill, in the town of Poughkeepsie, who died 4 August, 1815, aged forty; and (second), 15 April, 1824, Sarah Patchen. He inherited part of the late Bergh estate, and built the first part of the house afterward the residence of the late Daniel S. Miller; but soon sold the property. He was an active man, and made many changes during his life. Alida, born 19 April, 1769; married, first, 13 October, 1794, Dr. Hiram Walker (who settled at Hyde Park, but died early), and, second, Walton Street, of Coxsackie. Margaret, born 26 December, 1771; married, first, John L., son of Luke Stoutenburgh, and, second, John I. Teller, son of John Teller and Margaret Stoutenburgh. John I., baptized 24 May, 1774, died 18 March, 1822; married Sarah Griffin, of Lyme, Conn., and had Margaret, born 1797, died 6 March, 1802, and Sarah Catharine, born 8 February, 1807, died 14 March, 1888; married William B. Platt, of Rhinebeck. The homestead of John I. Stoutenburgh was on the east side of the road, at the Lower Corners, on the property now owned by Mrs. Calista Jones. The house stood until after 1850. Luke I., born 28 January, 1779; married Elizabeth Catharine, daughter of Anthony A. Hoffman and Elizabeth Snediker, and niece of his brother James' wife. They had, Josina, married Storm Truesdell, of Coxsackie; Walton Street, of Coxsackie, who died about 1872; Edgar, died 29 July, 1811, aged one year four months; Richard Anthony, born August, 1816, and Cortland Augustus, born January, 1820. Luke I. Stoutenburgh lived in the house late the residence of his father. In later years this became the property of John I. Teller; and after having had several owners, and a long list of tenants, was finally destroyed by an incendiary fire, on the night of August 6, 1864. Then for some years it formed a picturesque ruin.

John Stoutenburgh, son of the first Jacobus, married by license dated 25 November, 1773, Catharine, daughter of John Teller and Aeltje Vermilye, who died 27 August, 1805, in her seven-sixth year. They had no children. He had from his father, besides other property, valuable mill privileges on Crumelbow creek. He was one of the chief founders of the Reformed Dutch Church of Hyde Park, and one of its first officers. He died at Hyde Park, 21 February, 1808, in his seventy-ninth year. In his will, dated 3 January, 1807, after directing a wall five feet high to be built around the family burying ground (it still stands), and freeing his slaves, to whom he gave legacies, he distributed a considerable estate among his heirs, who were his surviving sister, Margaret Teller, and his nephews and nieces.

Peter Stoutenburgh, son of the first Jacobus, was settled on a tract of land (it is said 1,600 acres) in "Great Lot No. 1," in the northwestern part of the town of Clinton. He married Rachel Van Steenburgh. Children: James P., married and had John, James P., Jr., Joseph, Mary, Rachel, Margaret and Sarah. Tobias P., baptized, Poughkeepsie, 17 November, 1765. William P., married 5 June, 1803, Elizabeth, daughter of Maj. John Pawling, and had Alfred and Julia. Peter P., who married and had William T., Peter P., Margaret, Maria Affie, Catharine and Sarah. Luke P. Benjamin. Rachel P. Margaret married ——— Row, and had Mark, Catharine, Margaret, Rachel, and "W. P. Row," who married Rachel, daughter of James L. Stoutenburgh. John, born 22 October, 1768, baptized, Poughkeepsie.

Margaret Stoutenburgh, daughter of the first Jacobus, married 8 October, 1764, John Teller, born 1741, son of John Teller and Aeltje Vermilye. Children, all baptized at Poughkeepsie: John I., born 16 November, 1765, married Margaret, daughter of Jacobus Stoutenburgh, Jr., and widow of John L. Stoutenburgh; had a son, the late William Teller, of Rhinebeck, father of Mrs. Eugene Wells. James, born 2 July, 1768, married, and had John, Morris and Margaret. Tobias, born 27 January, 1772, died 19 October, 1854, of Red Hook; married Paulina ———, and had B. Franklin, Monroe and Margaret. William, born 29 December, 1775, married, and had Jacobus and Tobias. Most of the family of John Teller and Aeltje Vermilye came early to what is now the town of Hyde Park. Their chief residence was at "Teller's Hill," on the "Fourth Water Lot," where the large mansion of the family stood until 1830. Of the brothers, James died without issue; Luke left a large family, and John married as above stated; while Dr. Abraham Teller, who died in 1803, aged fifty-nine, was, perhaps, about the earliest settled physician in the neighborhood.

Luke Stoutenburgh, youngest son of the first Jacobus, married, first, 2 August, 1762, Rachel, daughter of John Teller and Aeltje Vermilye, by whom he had eight children. He married, second, 24 November, 1782, Mary Van Vleck, widow of Henry Minthorne, who survived him. To Luke he gave that portion of his estate lying between the lands given to Tobias and William; the creek bounding it on the north, while on the south were the lands of Jacobus, Jr. An abstract of title says this deed of gift was made in 1758, and confirmed by will. Luke died before 1789, and in 1791 his farm was divided by commissioners into forty-two lots, and apportioned among the heirs; two lots, comprising the mansion and its environs, being left undivided. It was this division, and the establishment of a Church that decided the site of the village, now Hyde Park; some of the smaller lots being soon disposed of. Luke lived in the stone house built by him, or his father, on the brow of the hill at the end of an avenue of cherry trees leading from the Post road. Some say Jacobus, himself, lived in this house in his later years. The avenue became a thoroughfare to the "Upper", or "DeCantillon's Landing;" the road curving around the north side of the house and thence down the hill; and in 1791 lots were laid out along it. It is now known as Market street. The house was fully equal to the one at the Lower Corners, and perhaps a little larger. It was visible from the river, and in 1777 the British vessels, passing up to burn Kingston, fired on it. Several cannon balls were afterward found, and are still preserved in the town. In 1872 this house, long in a neglected condition, was taken down in order to straighten the road.

Luke Stoutenburgh and Rachel Teller had: James L., died 16 December, 1831, aged sixty-seven years, eight months, nineteen days; married Sarah Morris, who died 15 March, 1846, aged seventy-one years, nine months, eleven days. John L., baptized 1 February, 1767, died 1 December, 1794; married Margaret, daughter of Jacobus Stoutenburgh, Jr.; had one child, John, died 15 September, 1797, aged three years; and his widow married John

I. Teller. Luke L., born 28 January, 1770; never married. Tobias L., born 2 September, 1772; died March 27, 1846; married Esther Rogers. William L., born 10 September, 1775, died in Brooklyn 22 January, 1864; married Mary Juliet Dutton. Peter L., born —, married Pamela —, removed to New York. Margaret, born 27 February, 1779, died 28 August, 1835, married 18 January, 1797, Richard Teller, son of Luke Teller, and Sarah Snediker, born 28 July, 1775; and had Catharine, Eleanor and Margaret, all died unmarried, and the late Col. Richard Teller (born 1822) of New York. Eleanor married Samuel Van Vleck, of Pittston, Rensselaer, Co., N. Y., and had Mary and Catharine.

James L. Stoutenburgh, son of Luke, owned the farm lying north of the road, and next east of Union Corners. He and his wife, Sarah Morris, had eleven children, as follows (Bible record): Catharine, born 2 December, 1793. Rachel I., born 29 May, 1796; married W. P. Row. Margaret I., born 28 April, 1798. John, born 29 April, 1800, died 15 December 1800. Eleanor C., born 21 February, 1802. William I., born 12 June, 1804. Tobias M., born 2 August, 1806, died in Poughkeepsie, 23 October, 1884, married (first) Mary L. Van Wagner, who died 20 August, 1845, aged thirty-five; and (second) Serena Velie, who survived him. He had a large collection of family documents, parchments and papers, which he left to a nephew, son of the Rev. Luke. Sarah Mary Juliet, born 14 August, 1808. Richard T., born 21 December, 1810. James, born 18 October, 1812; died young. Luke, born 29 December, 1815; the Rev. Luke I. Stoutenburgh, of Schooley's Mountain, N. J., who died in Washington, D. C., 13 March, 1891, leaving a family.

Tobias L. Stoutenburgh, son of Luke, became the owner of the homestead of his father, and lived there until his removal to New York. He represented his district in the Legislature, in 1807-8. In 1813 he built the first store in the village, on the corner of Albany and Market streets, and conducted business there, as a merchant, for several years. About 1830 he removed to New York, where he became a "public weigher and measurer," and continued to reside there, until his death. He married 28 November, 1812, Esther, daughter of Capt. Jeremiah Rogers and Mary Jones. Capt. Rogers [for whose ancestry refer to the N. Y. Genealogical and Biographical Record, 1884-1885] owned the estate, on the Post road, next south of Teller's Hill, where he died in 1810, and is buried, with several of his family, on the place. Mrs. Esther Stoutenburgh died in New York 28 July, 1842, aged sixty-two. Children: Elizabeth, born 20 November, 1813, died 11 August, 1893; married 8 February, 1837, Richard Aurelius Tebault, of South Carolina, and had two children, who died young. Mary, born 9 April, 1815, died 1 June, 1865; not married. Edmund Jones married Mary Lowry, who died 16 December, 1847, aged thirty; no surviving issue. Margaret died 9 September, 1844, aged twenty-six; married Thomas Rudd Lowry, of New York. Cornelia Jones, born 6 April, 1821, died 9 July, 1848; married J. Warren Rogers.

William L. Stoutenburgh, son of Luke, lived many years on the Post road, just north of the village, and near the Stoutenburgh burying ground; but removed to New York, and engaged in business. He married 11 October, 1807, Mary Juliet, daughter of Capt. Titus Dutton, a soldier of the Revolution. She died on Staten Island, 24 November, 1861. Children: William Tobias, died in New York, 28 October, 1884, aged seventy-three, leaving four children. He was twice married. Mary Elizabeth died 1 June, 1891, aged seventy-nine; married Rev. Robert A. Quin (of the Reformed Dutch Church), chaplain of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, Staten Island, and had a family. Peter Augustus, M. D., settled at Oyster Bay, L. I.; he died of blood poisoning, caught from a sick horse. Thomas DeWitt, born 23 March, 1818, died 12 November, 1855. Anna, born 23 February, 1820, died 29 March, 1845; married Edwin Sturges. Richard Teller, born 20 May, 1822; married —. Ferdinand Vanderveer, baptized 27 March, 1824. Martha Catharine, baptized 30 March, 1826, died 10 October, 1844.

Peter L. Stoutenburgh, son of Luke, had, by Pamela, his wife: Wright, Joseph, Mary, Sarah, David, Jacob, Samuel and James.

MARTIN W. PAINE, a leading business man of Millerton, Dutchess county, the proprietor of the well-known feed store and of the Benedict Mills, was born in the same locality June 12, 1841, in the house now occupied by Mr. Hotchkiss. His father, Platt A. Paine, was one of the most prominent citizens of the town of Northeast, and a farmer by occupation.

Mr. Paine's early life was that of the average country boy, his time being spent in the healthful exercise of "doing up the chores," and in attending the district schools of Spencers Corners and Millerton. After leaving school he remained with his father for a year, and then engaged in farming on his own account, spending four years near Boston Corners and five on the Paine farm, just below the old family homestead. In 1870 he purchased the Benedict Mills, which he has ever since conducted, together with a small farm adjoining them. He has done a large custom business in milling, and dealt extensively in flour, and in 1893 opened a flour and feed store in Millerton, which is the principal establishment of the kind in that vicinity. His enterprises have all been successful, and he has accumulated a fine property.

Notwithstanding the close attention required by his business, Mr. Paine has found time for reading, and is well informed upon the questions of the day. Politically, he is a strong Republican, but he does not take an active share in party work, although in many progressive movements in his neighborhood he has been among the chief promoters. He married Miss Emily Eggleston, daughter of Nicholas D. Eggleston, and both are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They have had three children: Berkeley, a resident of Buchanan, Va.; Grace A., who married D. C. Dakin, of Millerton; and Fred L., an enterprising young blacksmith in Millerton.

MIRAM GEDDINGS STEVENS (deceased). The subject of this memoir, formerly a prominent agriculturist of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, was a worthy representative of two of the oldest and best-known families.

His father, the late Hon. David W. Stevens, was a man of fine ability and wide influence. His first wife, our subject's mother, was Nancy A. Geddings, daughter of Hon. Gamaliel B. Geddings, of Sherman, Conn., and for some years after their marriage he resided at her father's farm there, taking meantime a leading part in local affairs. In 1846 he represented that district in the Legislature of Connecticut. Later he moved to a farm in South Dover, Dutchess county, and identified himself with the best interests of that locality, helping in many public movements, and especially in the work of building up the Baptist Church of South Dover. Mrs. Nancy Stevens died at Palmyra, Ohio, March 18, 1858, and April 18, 1860, he married Mrs. Lydia Ann Camp, a lady of exemplary Christian character, the widow of the late William T. Camp, and daughter of Jonathan and Philomela Geddings. She survives him and resides in South Dover, where his death occurred November 16, 1868. There were the following children by the first marriage, whose dates of birth are given: Orrin, 1821, who married Phœbe A. Wheeler; Eunice, 1823, Mrs. Jonathan A. Geddings; Hiram, 1826, who died in 1833; Gamaliel, 1829, who married Julia Dutcher; Frances, 1832, Mrs. Emery Cole; Sarah, 1834, Mrs. James H. Martin; Hiram G., May 29, 1839, the subject of this sketch.

The Geddings family is well known in different parts of the United States, its members playing an honorable and often a distinguished part in their various lines of life. Hon. Gamaliel Baldwin Geddings, our subject's maternal grandfather, was born at Sherman, Conn., October 6, 1766. He was an extensive land holder in the Geddings district, and possessed great political influence, serving as constable and justice of the peace for about twenty years, and as a member of the Legislature in 1805, 1812 and 1813. On November 24, 1790, he married Miss Tabitha Eunice Barnes, daughter of Stephen and Ann (Phinney) Barnes. They had five children: Harriet, born September 9, 1791, died in Palmyra, Ohio, March 8, 1876; Solomon, born October 5, 1793, died in 1838; Hiram, born September 14, 1795, married Miss Rebecca Geddings; Nancy A., born May 30, 1798, was the mother of our subject; and Sally M., born February 23, 1800, married David W. Stevens. Gamaliel B. Geddings removed to Palmyra, Ohio, in 1845, and died there at an advanced age.

Mr. Stevens was born at the old homestead in South Dover, and in his youth received an excellent education. He was married March 3, 1863, to Miss Ann Elizabeth Camp, daughter of William T. and Lydia A. (Geddings) Camp, and settled upon a farm near Wings Station, where he lived a peaceful and happy life until death called him February 21, 1893. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stevens: Florence Bell, July 26, 1864;

THOMAS HOWARD, January 9, 1873, and Nannie May, November 19, 1874, now the wife of George Tabor, of South Dover. The elder daughter, Florence, died May 25, 1871, at the age of seven, and her death was deeply felt by the entire family, but especially by her father, who was led by it to seek consolation in communion with the only Friend who can bring lasting peace to the afflicted, and although he never made a public profession of faith he became a consistent follower of Christ, and took the Golden Rule for the law of his life. His stern integrity, which commanded the respect of all who knew him, was combined with a kindly sympathy for others that won the affectionate regard of his more intimate acquaintances, and his death was mourned throughout the community. His son, Thomas H. Stevens, is one of the most intelligent young men of South Dover, and is already noted for possessing the admirable characteristics of his ancestry.

SMITH J. SACKETT is one of the most prosperous and successful farmers of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, owning 300 acres of valuable land there. He is numbered among the self-made men of the county, his accumulations being the result of his own industry, obtained by self-denial and economy, and the exercise of a naturally good judgment, both in regard to agricultural pursuits and business matters. Stanford town has always been the field of his operations, and the center of his hopes and interests, for since his birth, which occurred March 19, 1844, he has there made his home.

His father, Leonard Sackett, was born in the town of Stanford, September 7, 1797. In the schools of the neighborhood of his boyhood home he obtained his education, and he remained upon the home farm until his marriage. He married Ruth Gildersleeve, a native of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, and they had the following children: Joel, born June 29, 1828, is now deceased; Cordelia, born April 28, 1830, is the wife of Elias Thompson, of Pine Plains, Dutchess county; Eunice was born March 8, 1832; Jane Elizabeth, born August 10, 1834, has passed away; Hiram L. was born August 15, 1837; Emily, born August 13, 1839, is the wife of Theron Knickerbocker; Sarah M., born February 17, 1842, is also deceased; Smith J. is next in order of birth, and Henry, born in December, 1847, has departed this life. The father's death occurred May 17, 1866, that of the mother on July 25, 1878. Most of their married life was passed on a farm near Stissing, Dutchess county, which Mr. Sackett operated. With the Baptist Church of Bangall they held membership, and in his political views the father was first a Whig, later a Republican.

Smith J Sackell

The education of Smith J. Sackett was such as the district schools of the town of Stanford afforded, and on reaching his majority he left his parental roof, starting out in life with no capital. For some time he operated farms on shares, but in 1880, in connection with his brother Henry, he purchased his present farm, and the following year bought another. With him, his brother Hiram and sister Eunice find a pleasant home.

Mr. Sackett has never taken an active part in politics, although keeping himself well informed on matters of general interest, and uniformly votes the straight Republican ticket. To enterprises calculated for the general welfare of the people around him he has ever been a cheerful and liberal contributor.

SAMUEL LYNCH. This capitalist is living at his ease in Pleasant Valley village, Dutchess county, his only occupation being the care of the property he in his younger days accumulated by untiring industry and judicious economy.

Mr. Lynch was born September 18, 1823, in the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and is a son of William and Elizabeth (Campbell) Lynch, both natives of Ireland, where they married. On leaving the Emerald Isle they sailed for Nova Scotia, where the father was engaged in the lumber business for about a year, and then removed to Long Island, there following farming during the next three years. Removing thence to Dutchess county, he became a resident of the town of Pleasant Valley, where during the remainder of his life he devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits. He died about 1880, his wife several years before. They were earnest and consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in his political affiliations Mr Lynch was a stanch Whig and Republican. They had the following children: Martha married Henry Phillips, a tanner of Dutchess county; Samuel comes next; Betsy Jane became the wife of Silas Ward, a shoemaker; Leah married a Mr. Gardiner, a merchant; Margaret wedded Ebenezer Whitney, a carpenter; Harriet married John Delany, a car conductor; Hanna became the wife of a Mr. Gardiner, a milkman; Alexander went to California when young, and nothing is known of him; and George was a carpenter and wheelwright.

The subject of this memoir received the education common to farmer's sons, his boyhood being passed in the town of Pleasant Valley, but after his school days were over he went to Unionvale, where he learned the carpenter's trade with Joseph Wait, by whom he was employed for about six years. He then began business for himself in the town of Pleasant Valley, but in 1849 went to New York City, where for forty years he was engaged in contracting and building with good success, erecting many houses in that city. On laying aside business cares he returned to Pleasant Valley, where, since 1889, he has lived retired, having accumulated sufficiently of this world's goods to enable him to pass his remaining days in ease, surrounded by the comforts of life, and enjoying the respect and confidence of his fellow men in the highest degree.

In 1852 Mr. Lynch was married to Miss Anna M. Wyles, who was born and reared in Philadelphia, Penn., and is a daughter of Joseph Shaw Wyles. Four children blessed this union: Clara; Anna, wife of George E. Stuart, of New York City; Frank, a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Emma. Mr. Lynch is a true-hearted man, an earnest believer in the doctrines of Christianity, and both he and his wife are faithful members of the Presbyterian Church. Politically he is a stanch Republican, and in 1895 was elected supervisor, serving one year. He is a public-spirited, enterprising man, and in all matters tending to benefit the people of his community, morally, socially or financially, he has ever been an earnest and cheerful worker.

MARCUS D. MARCY, a prominent resident of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, who was for many years a valued employe on the Harlem railroad, was born March 29, 1848, in the town of Dover, Dutchess county. He took advantage of the educational opportunities afforded by the schools of his native place, and in early manhood entered the service of the railroad company, and remained twenty-five years working first as a brakeman and afterward as a conductor. In the latter position he was unusually successful, a fact which speaks well for his tact, and intelligence. Realizing the value of a clear brain, he is a firm opponent of intemperance, and for fifteen years he has been a member of the order of Good Templars. He married Miss Hattie A. Fero, daughter of John and Adelaide Fero, and has one daughter, Bertha, born in 1886.

His ancestors have been agriculturists in the town of Dover, Dutchess county, for several generations. His grandfather, Moses Marcy, was a native of the town, and followed farming all his life. He and his wife, Susan Cutler, reared a family of eight children: Rogers went to Michigan, made a home in the forest, and became well-to-do; George; Robey married Fred Summers; Abbie married Brigg Tanner; Hannah was the wife of Seneca White; Lucretia never married; Moses married Fannie Addis; and Mary married Orisey Wolsey, and had one son, Moses Wolsey.

Moses Marcy, our subject's father, was a native of Dover Plains, where he was educated and later engaged in farming and in the butcher's trade. His wife, Fannie Addis, was a native of New Preston, Conn. They had seven children: Oliver W., who married Alvira Halleck; Griffin C., who married Jane Sherwood; Andrew A., who never married; Garwood G., who married Caroline Summers; Alvin B., who married first, Emma Lee; Marcus D., our subject; and Samantha A., the wife of John Bristow.

Mrs. Marcy's ancestors on both sides were early settlers in Dutchess county. A great-great-grandfather, Israel Chapman, was a farmer in the town of Dover, where he and his wife Esther reared a family of three children: (1) John; (2) William, who married Rachel Cherrytree; and (3) Nathan. John Chapman, Mrs. Marcy's great-grandfather, was a lifelong resident of the town of Dover, where he followed the shoemaker's trade. He married Catherine Briggs, of Connecticut, and had four children: Ann, Mrs. Bishop Smith; Sallie A., Mrs. William H. Fero; Harry, who married Pollie Gregory; and Richard, who married Sarah Wheeler. Sallie A., Mrs. Marcy's grandmother, was born in South Dover, in 1807, and married Mr. Fero, November 8, 1827. He was a farmer in Dover town, and a son of Jacob Fero, a well-to-do farmer of Columbia county. Five children were born of this union: Hattie, Mrs. Jerry Waldron; Oscar, who married (first) Mary Anson, and (second) Christina Wilcox; John, Mrs. Marcy's father; Akin, whose wife's name is not known; and William, who died in infancy. John Fero was born in South Dover in 1838, and in early manhood engaged in farming, but later was employed for twenty years as a conductor on the Harlem railroad. He now lives a retired life. He and his brother Oscar both enlisted at Poughkeepsie during the Civil war in Company E, 150th N. Y. V. I. Although he takes an active interest in public affairs he has never aspired to office. He belongs to the Masonic Lodge No. 666, of Dover, and also to the order of Good Templars Lodge No. 433. He married Miss Adelaide Leonard, and had four children: (1) Jennie, born in 1859, married Edward Davis, and has had three children: May, born in 1886; Bessie, in 1890; and John, who died in infancy. (2) Hattie, born in 1862, wife of our subject. (3) William, mentioned below. (4) Ida, born in 1869, died in infancy.

Mrs. John Fero, Mrs. Marcy's mother, is of English descent, her grandparents, Enoch and Elsie Leonard, cousins, having come from the mother country to settle in Dutchess county. Her grandfather was a soldier in the war of 1812. Their three children were: Joshua; William, who never married; and Maria, Mrs. Joseph Worden. Joshua Leonard, Mrs. Fero's father, was born in Dutchess county in 1810, and after attending the schools of that time, engaged in farming in the town of Pawling. In 1862 he enlisted in Company E, 150th N. Y. V. I., and died in the service in 1864. His wife was Miss Eliza Olivet, daughter of James Olivet, a prominent farmer of Pawling town, and his wife Mary. Three children were born to them: Mary Ann, who died in infancy; William; and Adelaide, Mrs. Fero.

William Fero, the third child and first son of John and Adelaide Fero, was born in 1865, and is now an engineer on the Harlem railroad. He married Minnie Rider, by whom he has had four children: Addie, born in 1875, died young; Ida, born in 1885; John, born in 1890; and William, in 1893. Mrs. William Fero is a descendant of one of the old families of Bangall, and her grandfather, Thompson Rider, was a native of that place. He was a carpenter by trade, and was an active member of the Masonic Lodge of Bangall. His first wife, Sarah Bailey, was a daughter of Joseph Bailey, a well-known resident of that village, and his second wife was a Miss Davis. There were five children by the first marriage. (1) Emma married George Tompkins, a carpenter, and had six children: Annie, George, Jennie, and three others whose names are not known. (2) Landon died in the army. (3) David, a carpenter by trade, married Miss Eliza Platt, and had one son, Harry. (4) Legrand died at the age of twenty-two. Albert, Mrs. Fero's father, was born at Bangall, in 1843, and after receiving a common-school education in his native village, he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for many years. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity. His wife, Sarah Sackett, was a daughter of George and Rachel Sackett, and her father was a leading farmer in the town of Washington. Eleven children were born of this union: Emma married Harry Hardstay, and has had four children; Anna is at home; Lillie married George Coolman, and has had one daughter, Anna; Agnes is not married; Minnie married Mr. Fero; Josie died in infancy; and Bert, Charles, John, William and Albert are not married.

MARTHA T. WING. Among the successful agriculturists of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, Miss Martha Wing is noted for her scientific and progressive management. A constant reader of agricultural journals, as well as general literature, she keeps well informed on the latest and best methods in all branches of her work, and her farm shows the results of her practical investigations. She is especially interested in horticulture.

The Wing family has long been prominent in the town of Pawling. Jedediah Wing, Miss Wing's great-great-grandfather, came from Rhode Island at an early period and settled upon a farm north of Quaker Hill. He was a man of quiet tastes and a leading member of the Society of Friends. Their son, Elihu, Miss Wing's great-grandfather, was a millwright by trade, and lived upon a farm east of the old Friends meeting house. He and his wife, Keziah Wing, reared a family of eight children: Abigail, Sybil, Phoebe, Elizabeth, Sarah, Lydia, Keziah and Abram.

Abram Wing was only seven years of age when his father died. He became a farmer, locating about one-half mile south of the present homestead, and was very successful, owning about 500 acres of land at the time of his death. He was prominent in local affairs, although not especially active, and was always interested in religious progress. He married Rose Irish, who was born July 4, 1789, and had four sons: Elihu, born August 20, 1806; Charles, April 6, 1808; Daniel, September 23, 1809; and David I., March 22, 1811. Abram Wing died in 1846, but his widow survived him many years, passing to her rest in 1838. Of the sons, Elihu and Daniel spent their lives at the old home farm. They never married. Charles married Eliza Deuel, and had three children: Sarah H., Abram D. and Elihu S.

David I., Miss Wing's father, lived at the old home until his marriage to Mary Irish, daughter of David Irish, when he settled upon the present homestead, which contains 120 acres. Thrifty and successful in business, he was also active as a citizen and as a member of the Friends Society. Like the majority of his family, he was a Republican and took much interest in the success of his party. He died November 27, 1888, and his wife followed him September 25, 1893. They had four children: Elizabeth, the wife of Edward Rider, of Peach Pond; Martha T., our subject; Phoebe, who married Edward Henry Wilcox, of Pawling; and Carrie, who died in 1894.

ROBERT CASS, a prominent educator, whose professional work has covered a period of over a quarter of a century, is a leading resident of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. A man of fine culture and literary ability, he has found time aside from the exacting duties of the school room to use his pen effectively, and as a correspondent of the American Agriculturist, the Poughkeepsie Eagle, the New Milford Gazette, and other papers, he has done valuable work. He comes of a brainy, energetic family. His grandfather, Richard Cass, was one of four brothers who came from the central part of Scotland and settled in different parts of the United States: one in Ohio, two in Illinois, and one in Michigan, the latter being the father of Gen. Lewis Cass, so well known in military and political affairs.

Allen Cass, our subject's father, was born in 1806, near Xenia, Ohio, and in early manhood engaged in his father's occupation of farming, at Danville, Ill., where he owned 200 acres of land. He was influential in local affairs, and a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, and more than once was a juror where Lincoln was conducting cases at the bar. Politically, he was a Whig until the organization of the Republican party, to which he at once gave his allegiance. He was a leading member of the Methodist Church. He married Miss Martha Payton, a descendant of one of the first families of Virginia, whose father, Valentine Payton, was a pioneer settler at Danville. Eleven children were born to them: William Henry, John Milton, Elisha, Alpheus, Charles, Willis Allen, Robert, Mary Frances, Lucy, Margaret and Caroline.

The subject of this sketch was born at Danville, Ill., April 23, 1845, and was educated mainly in the high school at Homer, Ill., under H. A. Coffeen, now a member of Congress from Colorado. After leaving school he engaged in teaching, following the profession successfully in the school at Sherman, Conn., the Farnont school at Danville, Ill., and in the schools at Pawling, Dutchess Co. N. Y. He is actively interested in all that tends to promote the welfare of the community, and takes a leading part in Church work, having served as Sunday-school superintendent for twenty years.

Mr. Cass married a member of one of the most highly respected families of this section, Miss Emma G. Chamberlain, and has two daughters, Carrie Belle and Lillie May.

George H. Chamberlain, the father of Mrs. Cass, was born in 1820, in Kent, Conn., where his ancestors had made their home for several generations. His father, Harvey Chamberlain, and grandfather Chamberlain, were farmers there. Harvey Chamberlain was extremely popular, and held various offices in his town, including that of selectman. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat. He died in 18—, and his wife, whose maiden name was Polly Morgan, passed away in her fifty-third year. They had six children: George H.; John, deceased; Helen, wife of Daniel Vincent; Flora (Mrs. Sterling, of Sharon, Conn.); Mary, wife of Smith Stewart, of Kent, Conn.; and Emeline (Mrs. Frederick Bull).

George H. Chamberlain was educated in the district school near his birth place and in a select school at Milton, Conn. Possessing more than average mental ability, he made good use of these opportunities, and in later years kept well abreast with the times by his reading. He taught for three or four seasons after leaving school, but engaged in farming after his marriage, in 1843, to Miss Mary Ann Tompkins, daughter of Benjamin Tompkins, a leading citizen of Kent, Conn. Their first home was on a farm about a mile below the old homestead, but after four years he purchased another piece of land in the same neighborhood, where they spent about five years. He then sold that farm, and in 1857 moved to a tract of land which he had previously bought near Cerro Gordo, Ill.; but two years later he returned to his native State, and lived for two years at New Milford. In 1869 he purchased the Sherman Howard farm, in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, containing 125 acres, where he passed the remainder of his days. He had excellent judgment, and was successful in business and influential as a citizen, although he invariably declined to become a candidate for office when urged to do so by his fellow workers in the Democratic party.

Mrs. Cass was the only child of her parents. Her mother's family, which like the Chamberlains, was of English origin, was prominent in East Kent, Conn., from early times. Her maternal great-grandfather, Philip Tompkins, was a cooper by trade, and her grandfather, Benjamin Tompkins, was an extensive agriculturist, and a man of note in local politics. He married Ophelia Blakesley, and had six children: Augustus E.; Mary Ann; Emeline (Mrs. Luke Putnam); Laura (Mrs. Peter Riley); Martha, who married Rufus Lovell, of Washington, Conn.; and Eber W. Of this family only one is now living.

ALLEXANDER R. BECKER, a prominent contractor and agriculturist of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, is a native of the county, born at Rock City September 13, 1828. His father, Christian Becker, was born in the town of Red Hook October 16, 1800, and there received a common-school education. He learned the trade of blacksmithing, at which he worked in connection with farming. In Red Hook, on November 14, 1824, was celebrated his marriage with Miss Elizabeth Near, who was born June 22, 1802, and they became the parents of four children, namely: Mary A., who became the wife of Myron A. Badgley; Juliet, who married John T. Stall;

William H., who married Catherine Sagendorf; and Alexander R., of this review.

In the place of his nativity our subject attended the public schools, where he acquired a fair education, and after leaving school he learned the trade of a blacksmith with his father; but as this was not to his taste, he went to Elizaville, N. Y., where he for a time engaged in merchandising. Disposing of his business there, he next conducted a store in New York City. He was also engaged in the brewing business at Brooklyn, under the firm name of Becker & Foster, and for some time ran a brewery at Albany, N. Y. He was next employed as freight agent for a line of steamers on the Hudson, and later turned his attention to contracting in New York City. Since returning to Dutchess county he has made his home in the town of Red Hook, where he successfully carries on contracting and farming. He wins the respect and confidence of ail with whom he comes in contact, and occupies a leading position among the influential citizens of the community.

Mr. Becker was united in marriage with Miss Celinda Mull, a daughter of Captain Mull, a hay merchant of New York City, who is a member of the firm of Mull & Lawton. In 1893 Mr. Becker was called to mourn the loss of his estimable wife.

Mary Ann Becker, the sister of our subject, was born at Rock City, August 30, 1831, was there educated and married Myron A. Badgley, son of Squire and Hannah (Wing) Badgley. By occupation Myron Badgley was a farmer. He was three times married, his first union being with Miss Elizabeth Near. He next wedded Miss Becker, by whom he had one daughter—Minnie L. For his third wife he chose Miss Sarah Haines, and to them was born a daughter—Lizzie E., whose birth occurred October 28, 1868. She is now the wife of Willard E. Link, and they have two children—Ethel and Roy C.

Minnie L. Badgley, the niece of our subject, was born June 15, 1863, in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, attended the schools of the locality, and was united in marriage with William Augustus Lown, who was born at Madalin, Dutchess county, November 9, 1863, and is the son of Richard and Hannah (Grunther) Lown, of Barrytown, N. Y. Their marriage was celebrated June 27, 1886, and previous to that time Mr. Lown had followed the trade of a mason for several years, but is now engaged in farming in the town of Red Hook. Mr. and Mrs. Lown have become the parents of three children: Alexander R., born April 10, 1887; Florence, who was born May 25, 1891, and died in infancy; and Bertram E., born December 19, 1894.

JOHAN W. HOFFMAN (deceased) was for many years prominently connected with the history of Dutchess county. His birth occurred in the town of Red Hook, March 10, 1826, where the family is numbered among the very oldest and most substantial in the locality, being among the pioneers. His father, George C. Hoffman, was a farmer and butcher of Red Hook. On June 7, 1807, he was united in marriage with Lydia Beekman, and after her death wedded Maria Waldorf. By the second union were born twelve children: Gitty Elizabeth, born January 15, 1809; Rebecca M., born February 25, 1812; Helen S., born January 23, 1814; Sarah A., born May 7, 1817; Lydia C., born April 6, 1819; Benjamin B., born March 15, 1821; Margarie L., born April 4, 1823; John W., of this review; George L., born September 11, 1829; Edward M., born January 5, 1831; J. Robert, born August 9, 1833; and Regina E.

The boyhood days of our subject were spent mostly after the manner of farmers' sons, and when he had attained a sufficient age he entered the public schools of Red Hook, where his education was acquired. When he had arrived at years of maturity he was united in marriage with Lydia S. Manning, daughter of John and Margaret (Raffenburgh) Manning. After the death of Mr. Manning, her mother was again married, becoming the wife of Thomas Welsh, who died September 31, 1841. In her family were nine children: J. Manning, born in 1781; Margaret, born July 10, 1788; Elizabeth J., born October 27, 1805; Sarah R., born October 14, 1807; Sophia, born February 21, 1811; Mary M., born October 9, 1813; John A., born May 7, 1822; Martin H., born June 18, 1827; and Lydia S., born February 18, 1830.

The maternal grandmother of Mrs. Hoffman, who bore the maiden name of Jennie McGregor, was a native of Scotland, and while quite young, in 1773, came to the United States. Having the welfare of the people at heart, she joined the force of nurses who were at that time caring for the wounded soldiers of the Revolutionary war, and while serving in that capacity she met and fell in love with a handsome lieutenant who was wounded and brought to the hospital for treatment. The name of this officer was Peter Raffenburg, who was born June 17, 1746. They were afterward married and became the parents of five children, among whom was Margaret, the mother of Mrs. Hoffman.

In early life Mr. Hoffman spent most of his time in freighting on the Hudson, where he owned two steamers—the "R. Donaldson" and the "Clifton"—which he commanded. During the Civil war the United States Government wanted the R. "Donaldson" to fit out as a war vessel. The purchase being completed, he was on his way to New York City to make the necessary transfer, when he received word that the steamer had run ashore in a fog, and was burned. The financial loss was very heavy. He then turned his attention to the hotel business at Barrytown, Dutchess county, which proved very successful. He also engaged in the manufacture of tobacco at Red Hook for some time.

Eleven children graced the union of Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, namely: Orison G., born October 25, 1854; Elizabeth H., born October 2, 1856; William M., born May 31, 1858; Allen H., born January 19, 1861; George E., born January 14, 1863; Horace A., born October 23, 1864; C. Otis and Otto, twins, born November 14, 1866; Robert M., born June 29, 1868; Maggie J., born May 5, 1872; and Hattie C., born August 27, 1873. The youngest son, Robert M. Hoffman, was born in Red Hook, and in 1881 entered the De Garmo Institute of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, which school has since been removed to Fishkill-on-Hudson. He later attended the Holbrook Military Academy at Sing Sing, N. Y., and in 1888, became a student at Yale College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1891. After his graduation he went to Chicago, Ill., where for a few years he practiced mechanical engineering.

On December 26, 1883, the earthly career of Mr. Hoffman was ended, his death being deeply regretted by many warm friends as well as his sorrowing family. His personal integrity both in public and private life, was of the highest order, and both he and his estimable wife enjoyed the friendship and acquaintance of a large number of the best people of Red Hook and vicinity.

ARTHUR H. BOLLES. Although the subject of this sketch has resided at Pawling, Dutchess county, but a few years, he has won an enviable position in business circles, the trade of his marble and stone cutting establishment extending beyond the limits of his immediate locality into Putnam county, N. Y., and Fairfield and Litchfield counties, Conn. He is a native of the last-named county, having first seen the light at New Preston, November 11, 1857, and two previous generations have been prominent there in the same line of business. His grandfather, Reuben Bolles, was born in Colebrook, Conn., in 1790, but about 1813 went to New Preston and learned the trade of engraving marble and granite, which he followed for sixty years, or until his death, February 1, 1874. He became one of the principal marble dealers of that region, owning a quarry of what is known as New Preston marble, much in demand for cemeteries. A man of great energy, his activities were not confined to the management of his business, as he took an active share in the work of the Democratic party, and held numerous official positions. In religious faith he was a Congregationalist. He married a native of New Preston, Miss Amanda Meeker, and had seven children, four sons—George W., Noble, Henry N. and Andrew J., all of whom engaged in the stone and marble trade—and three daughters—Caroline, who married William Dowler; Maria, the wife of Henry Peck; and Jeanette, who married Julius A. Glover, of New Preston.

Henry M. Bolles, our subject's father, was born at New Preston, in 1825, and since 1843 has carried on at the same place his extensive marble works, now the only establishment of the kind in the neighborhood. His trade covers a radius of forty or fifty miles, and he is one of the substantial business men of the town. He is an active member of the Congregational Church, and in politics has always been influential as a Democrat, holding the office of assessor and justice of the peace for many years. His partner in life was Miss Sophia Kinney, daughter of Gilbert Kinney, a well-known resident of New Preston, and they have had three children, of whom, our subject, the youngest, is the only survivor. Edward H. died in infancy, and William in his boyhood.

Arthur H. Bolles was educated in the Connecticut Literary Institute at Suffield, where he received excellent training with the view of pursuing a more advanced course; but at the age of nineteen he left school to engage in business. His first employment was as a traveling salesman, and in this work he was very successful, handling some large contracts in various localities, and superintending their completion. After eight years with his father, he spent six years with firms in Springfield and Hartford and then returned to New Preston, where he remained two years. In 1891 he went to Pawling, purchasing the business formerly owned by George W. Turner. This was an old and well-known enterprise, established about thirty-five years ago, and Mr. Bolles has enlarged the plant and increased his trade greatly. He makes a specialty of granite work. Like all of his family, he is public-spirited and loyal to the best interests of his town; he attends the Baptist Church, and takes a generous interest in all progressive movements. In politics he is a Democrat, but has not sought office or taken a prominent part in political strife.

Mr. Bolles was united in matrimony with Miss Christina Richards, daughter of James Richards, of London, England, but no children have blessed their union.

ISAAC VERMILYEA BILLINGS (deceased). In the intensified energy of the successful man fighting the every-day battle of existence there is but little to attract the idle observer, but to the mind fully awake to the realities of life and their meaning, there are noble lessons to be learned from the history of a man who without other aid than a clear head, a strong arm, and a true heart, conquers adversity, and while securing an honorable competency leaves to his family the priceless memory of a good name.

The subject of this memoir, formerly a prominent resident of Billings, Dutchess county, was a grandson of one of the earliest settlers of the town of Lagrange—John Billings, who was a tanner and shoemaker by trade in early life, and later became well known as an auctioneer. He was a Whig in politics, and a member of the M. E. Church at Lagrangeville. His wife, Rachel Jay, was a native of Hudson, N. Y., and they had four children: Isaac, who lived in Lagrange; Daniel, our subject's father; Rachel (Mrs. Thurston), and Fannie (Mrs. Paul Durando).

Daniel Billings resided during his entire life in the town of Lagrange, receiving his education in the district schools and, later, followed the occupation of farming. He became a Republican in politics when the war issues caused the formation of new party lines. He married Elizabeth Vermilyea, and had four children, of whom the subject of our sketch was the eldest: (2) Sarah Ann married Hubbard Colwell, and died leaving three children—Chauncey P., Elizabeth and Elvena. (3) John D. is now deceased. (4) Catherine (deceased) was formerly the wife of Samuel Colwell.

The late Isaac V. Billings was born September 28, 1816, in the town of Lagrange, and spent his boyhood at the old farm attending the district schools and assisting in the work at home. He learned the shoemaker's trade with Edgar Hawkins, at Oswego Village, Dutchess county, and followed it at Billings during the most of his life. In early life he was a Democrat in politics; but the temperance reform seemed to him one of the vital issues of the day, and he became one of the first Prohibitionists in his town. He was a supporter of the M. E. Church at Lagrangeville for many years previous to his death, which occurred April 19, 1825. On October 30, 1860, he was married at Billings to Miss Susan Storm, who survives him. No children were born of their union.

Mrs. Billings is a member of one of the oldest and most substantial families. Her great-grandfather, Derrick Storm, was a native of the town of Fishkill, and became a farmer in Pleasant Valley, where his son Peter, Mrs. Billings' grandfather, was born and passed his entire life, engaging in agriculture as an occupation. He married Catalina Van Dyck, and had six children: John P., who married Miss Mott; Margaret (Mrs. Peter Le Roy), Lena, James, Polly, and Francis, none of whom are now living. James Storm, the father of Mrs. Billings, was born at the homestead in Pleasant Valley, and grew to manhood there. He married Miss Johanna Van Voorhees, daughter of John Van Voorhees, a leading resident of Pleasant Valley, and for four years after his marriage he lived upon a farm in that locality. He then sold his property and moved to Alburg, Grand Isle Co., Vt., where he followed agricultural pursuits for many years; but his last years were spent in his native county, in the town of Lagrange. He was a Whig in politics, and he and his wife were Presbyterians in religious faith. They had nine children, of whom Mrs. Billings was the youngest: (1) Caroline (deceased) married Benjamin Marvin, and had three children—Albert, Sarah E. and Mary E. (2) John (deceased) married Mary E. Conger. (3) Peter (deceased) married Lucinda Palmer, and had two children—Solon and Caroline. (4) Henry (deceased) married Abigail Smith, and had five children—James, Mary Jane, Helen (deceased), Henry and Minerva. (5) Catherine has never married. (6) James, Jr., a resident of Stockbridge, Wis., married Emily Prentiss, and has three children—Helen, David H. and Frederick P. (7) Helen (deceased) never married. (8) David (deceased) married Jennie Dates.

ALBERT CARTER SMITH (deceased). Among those who have been prominently identified with the agricultural interests of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, and whose perseverance and industry gained for him not only a foothold in the world, but made him one of the largest land holders in the locality, was the subject of this review. He belongs to that class of men peculiar to this Republic—the self-made men—and his property was due not to any lucky speculation, to any inheritance, or to any gift, but to his own continual struggles, and his indomitable pluck under adversity.

Phineas Smith, his grandfather, was a leading physician and resident of Litchfield county, Conn., where his death occurred at the age of forty years. He married Miss Clemens, and to them were born four children, all now deceased: Whiting, Eleazer, Lorentz and Phineas.

Lorentz, the father of our subject, was born at Mt. Tom, Litchfield Co., Conn., June 29, 1789, and in the schools of that county received his education. As a young man he worked in a woolen-mill, which is still standing on the old home farm, becoming a weaver and spinner, and at the age of thirty years went to Livingston Manor, Columbia Co., N. Y., where he engaged in that business until 1826, at which time he returned to the town of Amenia, having purchased the place containing the mill in which he had worked in his younger days. His return dated from February 22, 1826, and until 1840 he manufactured woolen cloth and flannels. He also conducted his farm of 100 acres until his death, July 18, 1864. At Amenia he had married Miss Sally Fields, a daughter of Jesse Fields, a carpenter and builder. Four children graced this union: (1) Albert Carter, of this sketch; (2) George G., of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, who first married Charity Miller, by whom he had four children—Hewitt, Mary, Lawrence and Carrie—and for his second wife he wedded Nellie Haynes, and by this union has one son—George. (3) Louisa, who is the widow of Nathaniel Hewitt (he died December 11, 1865), by whom she had four children—Mary, wife of Mr. Colburn; Albertina, wife of Herbert Fowler; and Emma and Sarah, both deceased in infancy. Mrs. Hewitt resides on the home farm, where she was born in 1829; and (4) Julia Ann, who died at the age of two years. The mother of this family died in 1848.

Albert Carter Smith was born at Livingston Manor, Columbia county, April 4, 1820, but his early life was passed mainly in the town of Amenia, where he attended the district schools, and was employed in the woolen-mill of his father as long as it was conducted. Ever an industrious, energetic man, he steadily increased his estate until he became the owner of one thousand acres of valuable land in Amenia, Stanford and Washington town, all of which property was acquired after he had attained his fortieth year.

Politically Mr. Smith was an adherent of Jeffersonian Democracy, but cared nothing for public office. He stood in his mature years—a strong man—strong in the consciousness of a well-spent life, strong to plan and perform, strong in his credit and in his good name, and for the younger generation a worthy example to imitate, as illustrating that success in life that may be attained by industry and perseverance. His death occurred October 5, 1896.

IRVING FRALEIGH. The subject of this biography is one of the honored sons of Dutchess county, and a prominent resident of the town of Red Hook, where his birth took place February 4, 1837. He began life with a definite purpose in view, worked faithfully, honestly, and with a will for its accomplishment, and has now gained a comfortable competence.

Our subject is descended from Putnam and Elizabeth (Felder) Fraleigh, whose name appears in the records of the German Reformed

ALBERT C. SMITH.

Church for the first time July 9, 1780, when their son Johannes was baptized. The names, and dates of the baptism, of three of their other children are as follows: Elizabeth, April 12, 1782; George, September 3, 1784; and Phillippus, December 3, 1786. They also had another son and daughter, Peter and Hannah.

The primary education of our subject was obtained in the district schools of the town of Red Hook, and the knowledge there acquired was supplemented by a course in the Hartwick Seminary. After completing his studies there he followed farming until twenty-six years of age, when he engaged in freighting between Barrytown and New York City, under the firm name of P. L. Tyler & Co., which, later, was dissolved, and the firm of Carnwright & Fraleigh was organized. The name was changed to Carnwright, Fraleigh & Company; but the firm subsequently assumed the former style, which they retained as long as the business was conducted. Mr. Fraleigh was also engaged in the milling business with a Mr. Curtis under the firm style of Curtis & Fraleigh, which connection was continued some six years, or until the death of Mr. Curtis. Our subject then purchased the latter's interest, and for two years conducted the Oriole Mills at Rock City, after which he bought of Charles White a one-half interest in the Red Hook Mills, which, together with the Oriole mill's, were conducted under the firm name of Irving, Fraleigh & Co., Sheridan Shook owning an interest. They now operate both mills, which they have greatly enlarged and improved, and are also engaged in the distillery business. Mr. Fraleigh conducts a fine stock farm situated a short distance from the village of Red Hook, which is one of the model farms of the county and a source of great pleasure and pride to him. He is a thorough business man, upright and honorable in all his dealings, and well deserves the success that has come to him.

On December 9, 1862, Mr. Fraleigh was married to Miss A. I. Cookingham, daughter of Andrew Cookingham, of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and two children have been born to them: Sheridan, born November 11, 1868, died July 24, 1876, and Irving, born October 17, 1877. In politics Mr. Fraleigh is a Democrat.

Peter H. Fraleigh, father of our subject, was born September 2, 1813, in the town of Red Hook, and January 28, 1835, he married Miss Lydia C. Shook, who was born July 31, 1815, and died August 5, 1885. Our subject is their only child. The father was called from earth February 10, 1893. He had been a lifelong agriculturist, and the farm upon which he passed his entire married life is now owned by his son.

WILLIAM CARROLL, a leading business man of Rhinebeck, a manufacturer of furniture and the proprietor of the oldest undertaking establishment in Dutchess county, was born in Rochester, N. Y., August 25, 1821.

John Carroll, his father, married Mary Hauver, of Dutchess county, and had three children: Christian Hauver, Mary Hauver, and William, of whom, the two sons lived to adult age. The father died in Ulster county when our subject was an infant, and the mother removed to Dutchess county, and lived for some years in the town of Cinton, near the slate quarry. Here our subject attended the district school until the age of twelve years, when his mother removed to Rhinebeck. After four years in the schools there, he began clerking for Quick & Traver, and at nineteen went to Poughkeepsie to learn the cabinetmaker's trade with John De Pue. He remained in that city four or five years, working for Taylor & Nelson after his apprenticeship ended, and then returned to Rhinebeck. September 1, 1844, he opened a cabinet-making shop two doors below his present location, but after the fire of 1862, he bought a lot and erected the three-story brick building which he has occupied since that time. As his business developed, undertaking and the manufacture of furniture became leading features, and in the former line he is now the oldest worker in the county. He has probably buried more people than any two of his fellow craftsmen. His store is one of the most complete in northern Dutchess county. A careful, conservative manager, Mr. Carroll's enterprises have always been successful, and his advice is valued in business circles and in local affairs. He was one of the incorporators of the Rhinebeck Savings Bank, and has always been a trustee in that institution.

In 1845, Mr. Carroll married Miss Olevia Van Tassell, a descendant of one of the old families of the town of Fishkill, born March 27, 1829, and has had five children, of whom, three are living: (1) Henry died at the age of twenty-three; (2) Arthur died in infancy; (3) Julia married Dr. Banker, of Elizabeth, N. J.; (4) William R., now in partnership with his father, married Amelia Davis, of Stone Ridge, Ulster county, and has three children—Grace, William H. and Jessie; and (5) Harriet is the widow of the late Dr. Allen, of Columbus, Ohio.

Although he is a firm believer in Republican principles Mr. Carroll is an independent voter in local politics. He has never sought office, his attention being devoted to his business, but he has served as trustee of the village, and is always ready to forward any measure for local improvement. He and his wife are leading members of the M. E. Church, with which he united fifty-five years ago, and has been for most of that time an official. He is also a member of the F. & A. M.

WILLIAM A. TRIPP, the well-known forwarding and freighting merchant, of Rhinebeck, successor to the old New York State Co., established in 1812, is descended from one of the pioneer families of Dutchess county, his ancestors having come from England at an early period. His grandfather, Timothy Tripp, was born in Dutchess county, but moved to Otsego county in his later years, and engaged in farming there during the remainder of his life. He married Miss White, and reared a family of seven children: John, Alfred, Silas, William, Eunice, Hannah and Ruby, and by a second wife he had another son, Briggs.

Alfred Tripp, our subject's father, was born in 1807, on the present site of Millbrook station, in the town of Washington, and about 1840 engaged in a general merchandise business at Oak Hill, Greene county, which he carried on until a short time before his death. He was also a stockholder in one of the foundries at that place, and was one of the leading business men of the locality. His first wife was a Miss Hopson, by whom he had one daughter—Mary Ellen, and his second wife was Maria Utter, daughter of James Utter, a prominent resident of Oak Hill. Eleven children were born of this union: Elizabeth (deceased); Alice (deceased); James, captain of the barge "Enterprise" and a resident of Schultsville; Amanda (deceased); Delia (deceased); William A., our subject; Helen, who lives at Oak Hill; Edward (deceased); and Isaac, Hattie and Carrie, who are all living at Oak Hill.

Mr. Tripp first saw the light May 18, 1851, and received his education in the district and select schools of his native town. His advantages in this respect were quite good; he has since been a constant reader, and his information is varied and extensive. At nineteen he entered his father's store as clerk, and remained two years, and April 1, 1872, came to Rhinebeck as clerk for Capt. J. H. Baldwin, who then owned the freighting and commission business which had been founded by the New York State Company sixty years before, and continued without interruption. Capt. Baldwin sold it in 1875 to the Cornell Steamboat Co., who disposed of it March 1, 1876, to Hoffman & Pitcher. This firm continued the business until March 1, 1884, when it was purchased by Hoffman, Tripp & Co. On April 1, 1895, Mr. Tripp bought out his partners, and has since been the sole proprietor of the business, and the barge "Enterprise." He is also engaged in the coal business and has, perhaps, the largest aggregate trade in that locality. In all his enterprises Mr. Tripp has displayed excellent judgment, and he is regarded as one of the most reliable young business men of the town.

In politics he is a strong Republican, as was his father before him, and he has been a leading worker in local politics, serving as a member of the Republican County Committee for several years, and he has served also on the Town Committee. He was at one time the party candidate for supervisor. He belongs to the F. & A. M., and is master of the Rhinebeck Lodge No. 432, and he holds the office of master of finance in the K. of P., Rhinebeck Lodge No. 345.

MICHAEL A. MULDOWNEY. Everywhere in our land are men who have worked their own way from humble beginnings to leadership in commerce, the great productive industries, the management of financial affairs, and in controlling the veins and arteries of the traffic and exchanges of the country. It is one of the glories of our nation that it is so. Prominent among the self-made men of Poughkeepsie is the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Muldowney was born at Madison Morris Co., N. J., September 15, 1850. Hi father, Edward Muldowney, was a native of Ireland, and came to America when about twenty-six years old, locating on a farm in New Jersey. He was married to Anna Tierney, also a native of the Emerald Isle, and they began their domestic life upon a farm, where their six children were born: Michael, of this review; Mary, widow of Frederick Miller, an engineer, who was killed on the railroad; Martin, who located in the West; Edward, a resident of New York City; John, who died in infancy; and Joseph, who is engaged in the grocery business in Albany, N. Y. The father always engaged in agricultural pursuits, and died in Poughkeepsie. His political support was given the Democratic party, and he and his wife were devout members of the Roman Catholic Church. Her death occurred in New York City.

The early life of our subject was passed at Madison, N. J., until thirteen years of age, during which time he attended the public schools, and then went to New York City, where he secured the position of check clerk in the "Hoffman House," remaining there for three years. Going to Newark, N. J., he learned the carpenter's trade with Reeve, Howard & Battin, at No. 8 Walnut street. At the end of three years, however, he returned to New York City, where he followed that occupation in various shops until coming to Poughkeepsie in 1876. Entering into the grocery business with his brother Joseph, at No. 54 Union street, that partnership was continued for five years, when our subject assumed complete charge. In the winter of 1885-6 he erected his present brick block at the corner of Union and John streets, Nos. 47 and 49 John street, and 50 Union street. After its completion he there removed his stock of groceries, and now does a large and paying retail business; he also resides in the building.

On November 8, 1871, Mr. Muldowney was married to Miss Mary E. Driscoll, a native of New York City, and a daughter of John Driscoll, a sailor, who was born in Ireland. Their family circle now includes ten children; one died in infancy. The others are all at home, namely: Mary, Joseph, Edward, Jennie, John, Frank, Hugh, Winnie, Rosamond and William.

Following in the footsteps of his father, Mr. Muldowney casts his ballot in support of the Democratic party, and has been twice elected alderman of the Second ward of Poughkeepsie, the last time in 1892, being president of the council that term. He has been quite successful in his business undertakings, and is now a member of the Board of Trade and the Business Men's Association. He is one of the most public-spirited and progressive men of the city, and he and his wife are faithful members of the Roman Catholic Church.

GILBERT FOWLER, one of the most prominent and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born October 15, 1840, in the town of Clinton, where at least three previous generations of the family had lived.

His first American ancestor came from England at an early date, and his grandfather, Gilbert Fowler, was born in Dutchess county, and became a farmer in the town of Clinton, but later in life he moved to Illinois, where his death occurred. He married Miss Powell, a native of Clinton, and reared a family of seven children: Gilbert, our subject's father; Weeden, a merchant and truckman in New York City; James, a cooper in the town of Hyde Park; Amond, a resident of New York City; Derinda, who married Dr. Braidy, of Little Rock, Ill.; Anna, who married Jesse Braidy, of Illinois; and Mary, the wife of Henry Abbey, a wagon maker in Little Rock.

Gilbert Fowler (2), the father of our subject, grew to manhood in the town of Clinton, and married Hannah Frost, a lady of English descent, and a daughter of William Frost, a well-known farmer there. Shortly after his marriage he took his young wife to New York City and engaged in the trucking business, but he did not live long, his death occurring before the birth of our subject. His wife survived him many years; dying in 1894.

The subject of our sketch was reared in the town of Clinton, and October 31, 1867, he was united in marriage with Amanda DeWint, a descendant of one of the early French settlers, and daughter of George DeWint, a leading farmer of Rhinebeck. The first year after his marriage they went to Illinois, where Mr. Fowler farmed for a year; but in 1868 he returned, and has since been contented with the fertile fields and picturesque scenes of his native county. He first purchased a farm of 118 acres, where he lived until 1889, when he bought the Pultz farm of 103 acres near Rhinebeck, all of which he devotes to general farming. Mrs. Fowler died July 23, 1892, leaving four children bereft of her loving care: Emory, Jesse, Gilbert and Edna Mae, all of whom are at home. Two others had died in infancy. Mr. Fowler's ancestors on both sides were Quakers in faith, but he and his lamented wife had united with the Lutheran Church.

In politics our subject is a Republican, and while he is no politician he takes an influential part in local affairs, befriending every progressive movement.

PETER M. CORNELL. The subject of this sketch was born on his present homestead in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, November 20, 1815, and is the son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Hoffman) Cornell.

Isaac Cornell was born at Bushwick, Long Island, and at the age of three years was brought by his parents to Lagrange. Here he grew to manhood, receiving his education in the district schools. He was married to Miss Hoffman, who was a native of the town of Poughkeepsie, and the following children were born: Peter M., our subject; William A., Margaret, Mary, and Elizabeth, all deceased; Isabella; and Frederick, living in Kansas. Mr. Cornell died in Lagrange in 1875, and his wife in 1878.

Peter Cornell, the grandfather of our subject, was one of the earliest settlers of the town of Lagrange. He married Miss Marcia Messarole, and to them were born the following children: Cornelius, Margaret, Eliza, Jane, Sarah and Isaac, all of whom are deceased. Mr. Cornell was of French ancestors, who were exiled from France at the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. They went to Bavaria, and from there came to America. Mr. Cornell died on his farm in Lagrange.

Peter M. Cornell, our subject, remained on the old homestead in Lagrange with his father, and in his youth went to the district schools. He has devoted all his time to farming. At one time he was justice of the peace of Lagrange. He has never married.

William A., brother of our subject, married Miss Helen Wickoff, and had four children: Isaac, William, Elizabeth, and Jacob W. Frederick, another brother, married Miss Alice Barnes, and three children were born to them: Edward, Ann, and Peter M.

ROBERT HUTCHISON, one of the representative farmers of Lagrange, was born in Perthshire, Scotland, July 24, 1857, and remained there during his boyhood, receiving his education in the parish schools. He served a three-years' apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade in Enochdhu, Scotland, and then worked in Glasgow for four years, and at Newcastle-upon-Tyne for three and a half years.

In 1882 our subject emigrated to America and located in New York City, where he followed his trade for nine years. In 1891 he moved to the town of Lagrange and bought his present farm, on which he has since lived. He was married in New York City May 11, 1887, to Miss Maggie J. Forbes, a native of Wappingers Falls. Mr. Hutchison owes his present prosperous condition to his own enterprise and energy. He is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Reformed Dutch Church at New Hackensack.

Robert Hutchison, father of our subject, was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, where he is still living on the farm, pursuing the occupation he has always followed. He married Miss Jeannette Petrie, by whom he had three children, namely: Elsie, Robert and George. James Hutchison, our subject's grandfather, was born in Fifeshire also, where he followed farming.

JOHN SELLECK LANDON, one of the substantial farmers of Dutchess county, was born in the town of Lagrange, Dutchess county, April 25, 1843. As a boy he attended the district schools of his native town and, later, the Irving Institute at Tarrytown, N. Y., and Bisbee's school at Poughkeepsie. He remained upon the farm with his father until his marriage, in Poughkeepsie, to Miss Jane Kenworthy, a daughter of Richard Kenworthy. Of this union one child was born, Edith, now the wife of John Townsend.

Mr. Landon farmed for seven years after his marriage, and then followed the milling business at Manchester Bridge, Lagrange town, for nine years. In 1890 he bought his present farm, to which he has since devoted his time and attention. He is a member of the Farmers Alliance, is a staunch Democrat, and has held the office of town auditor for several years.

James H. Landon, the father of our subject, was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, June 23, 1814. He attended school there and, later, in Lagrange, and at the Willets Boarding School in the town of Washington. He remained on the farm with his father until the death of the latter, and has lived at his present residence for thirty-seven years. He was married January 19, 1842, to Jane A., daughter of Reuben Tanner. Of this union the following children were born: John Selleck, our subject; Mary T., born February 5, 1848, married Galen Overocker, and they had two children, Daniel W., born August 13, 1883, and Mary, born October 23, 1884. Mrs. Overocker died November 8, 1884. Mr. Landon was assessor of the town of Lagrange for many years, and also held the office of town auditor, being elected on the Democratic ticket. Mr. and Mrs. Landon celebrated their golden wedding January 19, 1892, and are as bright and lively as many people twenty years younger.

Joel Landon, the grandfather of John Selleck, was a native of Connecticut, born July 22, 1771, married Deborah Selleck (born October 3, 1773), May 30, 1812, and their children were: John S., born March 30, 1813, died December 16, 1837; and James H., mentioned above. Joel Landon died August 23, 1839, and his wife, Deborah, October 10, 1871.

WILLIAM J. WELLING, a substantial farmer of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, was born in that locality, March 22, 1833. The first person bearing the name of Welling in this country came from Wales and settled in Dutchess county. From him descended Thomas, the great-grandfather of our subject, who was born probably in Pleasant Valley.

William, his son, was also born there, and his son, James M., the father of our subject, was born in the town of Clinton, January 19, 1807. Thomas Welling married a Miss Gernond, and they settled in what was then a wilderness, where five children were born to them. Of these, William married Elizabeth Marshall, and settled on a farm. Two children were born to them—James M. and Caroline C. The latter married William C. Smith, a farmer in the town of Northeast, and is now deceased. William Welling was a stanch Democrat.

James M. was reared on a farm, and married Susan Vail. She was born in Unionvale, and was the daughter of Joseph and Mary Vail, the former a farmer and a son of Israel Vail. The Vails are among the oldest families in Dutchess county. For some time after his marriage our subject's father ran on the Hudson river as captain of the steamer "Gazelle," and subsequently for several years was a stock salesman in New York City. Later in life he spent his time upon his farm, where he died July 31, 1882. His wife died September 23, 1886. He was a Democrat and held the office of justice of the peace for some years. In their religious belief the family have all been Presbyterians. To James M. Welling and his wife four children were born, namely: Caroline C., who married Mark H. Wheeler, a farmer in Lagrange; William J., our subject; Edgar P., who died in the Civil war; and Frances E., deceased.

When our subject was nine years old he went with his parents to Poughkeepsie, where they made their home while the father was engaged in steamboating. There he attended the city schools for some years, and in 1846, the family went back to their farm in the town of Washington. William completed his education in the Richmondville school in Schoharie county, N. Y., and for a while taught school in the neighborhood of his old home. He then took up farming, at which he has been engaged ever since. He owns a fine place of 200 acres which is highly cultivated, and carries on general farming, in which he has been very successful. Although a man of agreeable manners and excellent character, and standing high in his community, Mr. Welling has never married. He is a Republican and a strong temperance advocate, and does all in his power for the good of his fellow-men.

MILES K. LEWIS. There can be found no biographies more interesting to read than those of the industrious and enterprising, who have risen from a state of comparative poverty to a position of affluence. Prominent among the men of Dutchess county who have thus laboriously toiled onward and upward, is the individual of whom this sketch is written. He is now a successful business man of Wassaic, where for over thirty years he has conducted a general store.

Mr. Lewis was born at Sharon, Conn., August 15, 1842, and traces his ancestry back to Benjamin Lewis, who came from England with two brothers and located at Wallingford, Conn., being one of forty families who laid out that town. His name appears on the Congregational Church records in 1677. He married Miss Hannah ———, and their son James wedded a Miss Judson, by whom he had four children—James, John, David and Ephraim, the eldest of whom married a Miss Sherman, and their son Ephraim was the father of Birdseye, the great-grandfather of our subject.

Birdseye Lewis was born at Huntington, Conn., February 20, 1750, and died November 27, 1822. On November 11, 1773, he married Miss Jerusha Thompson, whose death occurred June 8, 1821. Their son, Cyrus Lewis, the grandfather of our subject, was born at Trumbull, Conn., November 15, 1778, and on November 28, 1809, wedded Alice Hawley, who was born October 29, 1793, and died May 26, 1861. He departed this life August 25, 1861.

Miles B. Lewis, the father, was also a native of Trumbull, Conn., where he secured his education in the district schools, and served an apprenticeship to the blacksmith's trade, which he followed some forty years at Sharon, Conn. At Milford, in that State, he was united in marriage with Miss Maria Kelsey, daughter of Horace Kelsey, and they became the parents of four children, namely: William S., of Chicago, Ill.; Miles Kelsey, of this sketch; Eliza (deceased); and Charles, of Carpentersville, Ill. The parents were good Christian people, very earnest workers in the Methodist Church, and were held in the highest regard. The father's death occurred in April, 1892; the widowed mother now finds a pleasant home with our subject.

Miles K. Lewis passed his boyhood at Sharon, Conn., attending the public schools, and at the age of fifteen years left the parental roof, coming to Amenia, Dutchess county, where he clerked for George Conklin in a general merchandise store until the spring of 1862. He was then in the employ of Seward, Vail & Haight, merchant tailors, as bookkeeper and cashier.

Filled with patriotic ardor, Mr. Lewis enlisted, in September, 1862, in Company A, 150th N. Y. V. I., and was a member of the regimental band until mustered out at Poughkeepsie, in June, 1865. Returning to Dutchess county, he was engaged in clerking in Dover until January, 1866, when he opened his present general store at Wassaic. In 1894 he admitted J. G. Doyle to a partnership in the business. For fifteen years he was also connected with the New York Condensed Milk Factory at Wassaic as bookkeeper and superintendent, and was administrator of the Gridley estate for seven years. In all his dealing he is straightforward and honorable, and is justly entitled to the high regard in which he is held by all.

At Amenia, on October 24, 1867, Mr. Lewis wedded Miss Julia C. Reed, daughter of Lester and Margaret Reed, and to them have been born four children: Emma Gridley, who married E. J. Tanner, and has three children—Lewis, Margaret and Frederick; Nina, wife of Albert Hicks, of Wassaic; Alice and Roland. Socially, Mr. Lewis affiliates with Dover Plains Lodge No. 666, F. & A. M., of which he became a member in 1867; and of J. M. Gregory Post, G. A. R., of Sharon, Conn. He is a member of the choir of the Presbyterian Church at Amenia, as he takes great delight in music; in politics he is an ardent Republican.

ROBERT H. TITUS, one of the substantial farmers of Dutchess county, was born in the town of Lagrange, August 5, 1835. He spent his boyhood in the place of his birth, and attended the public schools and the Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington.

At the early age of ten years he went to work in his father's woolen-factory, and after the latter's death he continued the business with his brothers until 1891, when he sold out his interest to his brother Henry, and has since devoted his time to farming. He was married in 1864 to Miss Frances Sweet, a daughter of Nehemiah and Millie Sweet, of Poughkeepsie. Of this marriage were born the following children: Mary Annette, Frances Adele, Helen Lossing and Warner Hatch. Mr. Titus built his present beautiful residence in the spring of 1864.

Elias Titus, father of our subject, was born in the town of Washington, where he received his education. He was married in the town of Pine Plains to Miss Mary A. Hoag, a daughter of Robert Hoag, a farmer of that town, and the following children were born: Frances married James E. Sleight, and four children were born (both parents are deceased); Robert Hoag, our subject; Richard, deceased; Henry lives in Poughkeepsie; Sarah resides in Lagrange; Caroline Alida. Mr. Titus was living at Lagrange at the time of his marriage, where he was running the woolen-factory with his father and brothers. He continued in that business from 1828 until the time of his death in 1881. In the early days the goods were shipped by boat in summer and overland in winter. As a business man he kept out of politics, and was a member of the Quaker Church. His wife died in 1838 or 1840.

John Titus, the grandfather, was born in the town of Washington. He was married three times, the grandmother of our subject being his third wife. He was known as "Squire Titus," and ran a factory for the manufacture of woolen cloth.

The great-grandfather of our subject was one of the early settlers of the town of Washington. The family came from Long Island.

JOHN R. THOMPSON. Success in any line of occupation, in any avenue of business, is not a matter of spontaneity, but is the legitimate offspring of subjective effort in the proper utilization of the means at hand, the improvement of opportunity and the exercise of the highest function made possible by the specific ability in any case. In view of this condition, the study of biography becomes valuable, and its lessons of practical use. Mr. Thompson to-day stands at the head of several important enterprises, and is one of the most enterprising and successful business men of Dutchess county, making his home in Amenia.

In the town of Amenia, our subject was born July 8, 1851, and he is a son of Robert R. and Catherine (Sanford) Thompson, the latter of whom died in 1892. His father was born in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, December 15, 1815, a son of James Thompson and a grandson of Elias Thompson, also residents of Dutchess county. For forty years the father has been engaged in the insurance business at Smithfield, and he is a highly respected citizen. Our subject is the third in a family of four children, the others being: Ellen C., wife of William J. Clanney, of Amenia; George (deceased); and Edward B., who is engaged in the poultry business in the town of Amenia.

The early life of John R. Thompson was passed upon a farm at Smithfield, and in attending the district schools of the neighborhood. On leaving the parental roof in 1874 he took charge of a general store at Shekomeke, Dutchess county, and was also operator, station agent and postmaster for a year. He then engaged in the insurance business with his father at Smithfield, town of Amenia, for some seven years, on the expiration of which time he there turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, and also owned a large farm in Nebraska, but never resided thereon. While purchasing a windmill for the latter place, he became interested in the windmill business, and since that time has engaged in selling those machines all through the State; he also erected the largest windmill plant in the world, located at Chatham, Columbia Co., New York.

Until 1885 Mr. Thompson continued to engage in agricultural pursuits at Smithfield, and then removed to the village of Amenia, where he has since resided. Together with B. H. Fry, Charles Walsh, A. M. Card, of Sharon, Conn., and M. K. Lewis, of Wassaic, he assisted in the incorporation of the Amenia Water Co., in 1881, and, with Mr. Lewis, also owns the Wassiac water works, being now the efficient superintendent of both water works, as well as the one at Pine Plains. In 1885 he entered the steam-heating business, and, in advancing his individual prosperity, he has materially promoted the welfare of his county and State.

In the town of Amenia, October 11, 1877, Mr. Thompson was married to Miss Mary F. Bertine, daughter of Robert Bertine, of Amenia, and they have three children: Katie, John R. and Annie Frances. For over twenty years Mr. Thompson has been prominently identified with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M., and he also holds membership in the Royal Arcanum at Wassaic. Like his father, he is an ardent Democrat, and is one of the leading and representative citizens of the community.

DE WITT C. AYRES, a progressive and successful young agriculturist of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born February 12, 1860, in Clinton Hollow.

His grandfather Ayres came from England and located upon a farm in Dutchess county, where he spent his remaining years. Joseph Ayres, our subject's father, was born in Oxford, England, and was nineteen years old when he accompanied his parents to this country. He married Margaret Marquet, a native of the town of Rhinebeck, and located in Clinton Hollow, where he followed the butcher's trade for some years. In 1879 he moved to the farm which is now owned by our subject, and here he carried on his trade in connection with farming. His wife died in 1878, and ten years later he, too, departed this life. They had four children: Charles, who died in 1888; De Witt C., our subject; George D., a farmer in Rhinebeck, and one who died in infancy.

De Witt Ayres was trained in youth to the habits of industry upon which his success is based, and for a short time he followed the butcher's trade successfully. On November 2, 1882, he married Miss Lelia Mills, a lady of English descent, the daughter of William Mills, a well-known blacksmith of Red Hook. After their marriage they settled upon the farm near Rhinebeck, where they have since remained. They have two children, Elsie and Ruth.

Mr. Ayres devotes his one hundred acres of land to general farming, and is regarded as one of the most enterprising and judicious of the young men of his locality. In politics he follows the faith of his father and is a staunch Republican.

JOHAN H. BOICE, one of the active, prominent and most enterprising citizens of Dutchess county, is at present engaged in general farming and fruit growing in the town of Red Hook. His birth occurred June 16, 1850, on a farm in Milan town, Dutchess county, where his father, William Boice, and his grandfather, Henry I. Boice, were also born. The latter was a son of John Boice, who was of Holland origin, and is supposed to have been born in this country. After his marriage with Miss Lown, Henry I. Boice began his domestic life upon the old family homestead, where his three children were born, one son and two daughters; but William was the only one who reached years of maturity. To the cultivation of that farm the grandfather gave his time and attention up to his death.

On reaching manhood the father of our subject was united in marriage with Catherine C. Pultz, a native of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, and a daughter of David Pultz, a farmer, who was of Holland lineage. On the old homestead in Milan town, they began house-keeping, and there remained until 1869, when the father purchased the farm on which our subject now resides, there continuing to make his home until his death in 1881, while his wife also died there on July 12, 1895. He was identified with the Republican party. The family circle included three children—Elmer A., a retired farmer, who now makes his home in the village of Red Hook; Ida C., wife of Henry Finger, an agriculturist of Columbia county, N. Y.; and John H.

John H. Boice, of this review, obtained his elementary education in the district schools near his home, but completed his literary training at Rhinebeck, and was a resident of the town of Milan until nineteen years of age. Being reared a farmer's boy, he has followed this vocation through life, and since 1869 has lived upon his present farm, where in 1882 he erected a beautiful residence. He has 109 acres of fertile and productive land, where he has been engaged in general farming, though he makes a specialty of fruit raising. He is a progressive, scientific farmer, who thoroughly understands his business, and thus secures the best results from his labors.

On May 8, 1872, Mr. Boice was married to Miss Mary E. Hoffman, a daughter of Theodore Hoffman, and sister of T. A. Hoffman, the present county clerk of Dutchess county. They have one child, William H., who was born March 22, 1874. They are surrounded by many warm friends, whom they delight to entertain, and have the esteem and confidence of all who know them. Politically, Mr. Boice affiliates with the Republican party, and maintains his principles in this regard with the same steadfastness which has characterized him in all the relations of life.

IRVING HAPEMAN, a reliable and intelligent young agriculturist of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, is the owner of a fine farm of eighty-seven acres of highly productive and fertile land, which he has by industry and good management, with its attendant hard labor, brought to a high state of cultivation, and his stock are of the best grades. His uprightness, integrity and public-spiritedness have won him the confidence and esteem of his neighbors, and he is classed among the most respected representative citizens of the community.

Philip Hapeman, his grandfather, was a native of the town of Red Hook, where he conducted a farm throughout life, and by his marriage with Catherine Phillips had six children, of whom Nicholas Hapeman, the father of our subject, was one. His birth also occurred in the town of Red Hook, where he received a common-school education, and like his father he also turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Lucy N. Straut, daughter of Anthony Straut, by whom he had four children: Estella, wife of Willard Rowe; Jerleau; Irving and Mary.

In 1890 was celebrated the marriage of Irving Hapeman and Miss Cordelia A. Stevens, who was born in Claverack, N. Y., and was there educated. Her paternal grandfather, William Stevens, was a native of Hollowville, Columbia Co., N. Y. and while serving in the war of 1812 was killed. He married Catherine Stickle, and to them were born two children—William A. and Jane E. The former was also born in Hollowville, Columbia county, and after completing his education in the common schools he worked upon a farm until the breaking out of the Rebellion in 1861, when he joined the Union forces, though at that time only sixteen years old. All through that struggle he served as a private, and at its close received an honorable discharge. After his return home, Mr. Stevens was united in marriage with Miss Hannah Elizabeth Morrison, daughter of William E. and Samantha Morrison, and they now have a family of nine children: Cordelia A., William A., Annie A., Fannie A., Henry A., Charles A., Herbert A., Frank A. and Milo A. The father, who is an agriculturist, is now engaged in the cultivation of land in Claverack, Columbia county.

ISAAC P. CONKLIN, one of the wealthy farmers of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, was born in Chestnut Ridge in that town, April 1, 1820. The Conklin family is of Scotch descent, and many of its members are old residents of Dutchess county.

Charles Conklin, great-grandfather of Isaac P., was a Quaker preacher and lived in Westchester county, where his son Timothy was born. The latter married Mary Tamer, a native of the same county, and settled in Washington town, Dutchess county, where thirteen children were born, of whom the following record is given: David was a miller in Little Rest, town of Washington; Hiram was a seafaring man; Timothy was a farmer in Westchester county; Tristram (deceased) farmed for a while in the town of Washington, but later went to New York City, finally to Westchester county; James was a farmer in Westchester county; Merritt was a physician in Washington town; Nathaniel was father of subject; Charles died in infancy; Hannah married a Mr. Titus, and they removed to New York City and afterward to Ohio, where they died; Ruth and Sarah died unmarried; two others died in childhood.

Nathaniel Conklin was born in the town of Washington, and there spent his entire life. He was a Republican in his political views, and served as a justice of the peace and in other local official positions. He died in 1887. He married Susan Edmunds, a native of the town of Dover, daughter of Canada Edmunds, a farmer, whose family were of old Holland stock. The young couple located on Chestnut Ridge, where they carried on farming and reared a family of nine children. These were: Benjamin is a farmer in Washington town; Tamer married George Sullivan, a farmer also of that town; Timothy was a farmer in the town of Washington; Phoebe married Mosher Sherman, a miller in Little Rest; Isaac P.; Elmira married Uriah Simmons, a farmer in Stanford; Nathaniel went to Dakota and carried on farming there; Hannah is unmarried; Sarah is the wife of Andrew P. Hammond, a farmer in Washington town.

Isaac P. Conklin worked at Denning for several years after arriving at manhood, and then began buying and selling farm and other property, in which business he has made good profits and has become a wealthy man. He is full of enterprise, possesses keen judgment and great sagacity, and has carved his own way to success. Although arrived at an age when most men give over active life, he shows no signs of relaxing his efforts, and keeps abreast of the times with a vigor and interest which a younger man might envy. He is genial in his nature, a good conversationalist and very companionable, drawing about him a large circle of friends who appreciate his many good qualities.

In February, 1860, Mr. Conklin was united in marriage with Fannie J., daughter of David Winans, and a native of the town of Stanford. Five children have been born to them, of whom, George and Nathan, the eldest two, died in childhood; the others are: Susan, who married Virgil Winans; Augusta (deceased) and Jennie. Mr. Conklin owns a fine farm of 336 acres in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county. In politics he is a Republican, but he has never been an office-seeker.

EDWARD COUSE. One of the active, prominent and enterprising citizens of the town of Red Hook, is the gentleman whose name introduces this sketch, who is at present engaged in general farming and fruit raising. He made his first appearance upon the stage of life beneath the roof of his parents, Jacob and Susan (Robison) Couse, in the town of Milan, Dutchess county.

His paternal grandfather, Henry J. Couse, was a prominent farmer in the town of Milan, and there married Miss Sarah Lynn, by whom he had seven children, namely: Hannah, who became the wife of a Mr. Wolcott; Betsy, who married Peter Stickle; Mary; Jacob, the father of our subject; Henry, who wedded Kittie Near; John, who married Miss Kilmer, and Edward. To the parents of our subject were born six children: Sarena first became the wife of John Teator, and after his death married Charles Miller; Henry wedded Rachel Hood; Elizabeth married John Haines; Charles; Sarah was united in marriage with Emery Coon; and Edward completes the family.

Upon his father's farm our subject was reared and early taught those habits of industry which have had such an important bearing upon his entire life. He obtained his education in the district school, in the meantime assisting his father in such work as his age and strength would permit. He became interested in agricultural pursuits, and now operates a fine farm of 123 acres of land, which he purchased in 1889, it being then known as the Benner farm. He makes a specialty of fruit raising, and has been quite successful. He has made good use of his opportunities, has prospered from year to year, has conducted all business matters carefully and capably, and in all his acts displays an aptitude for successful management.

Mr. Couse was united in marriage with Miss Kittie Feller, daughter of Henry A. and Catherine (Snyder) Feller, who were farming people of the town of Milan, and the parents of the following children: Alice, wife of Wriget Kilmer; Mary, wife of Charles Palse; Sylvester, who married Grace Levenworth; Seward; Hattie, wife of Henry Burns; Kittie;

Henry, who married Annie Bathrick; and Annie, wife of John Smith. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Couse, Philip Snyder, was the only child of Isaac and Catherine Snyder. He was joined in wedlock with Miss Christina Near, of the town of Red Hook, and they became the parents of two daughters—Catherine, the mother of Mrs. Couse; and Elizabeth, who married Isaac Fulton.

JOSEPH BATES, a general farmer and ex-stock-dealer, was born in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, July 11, 1822. His father, Joseph Bates, was born in Nantucket, R. I., and moved to Dutchess county, where he married Miss Lydia Dickerson, who was a native of North Salem, Mass. They settled on a farm in the town of Washington, and reared a family of twelve children, five of whom died in infancy. The others were: Joseph, our subject; George, a farmer in Missouri; John, a farmer of this town at one time, is deceased; Stephen died in 1894; Henry was a farmer in Saginaw, Mich., where he died; Mary married William Lovelace, a farmer in the town of Dover; Ruth became the wife of Isaac Lovelace, a mason by trade. Mr. Bates farmed all his life, and died about 1863. Politically he was a Democrat. His wife died about 1879.

John Bates, grandfather of our subject, was born in Rhode Island. He married a Miss Hill, and they reared a family of twelve children.

Joseph Bates, the subject of this sketch, grew to manhood in the town of Washington, worked by the day for various farmers, saved his money and gradually invested it in land, until to-day he has one of the largest farms in the town. In 1844 he married Miss Sarah Smith, a native of the town of Washington, and a daughter of Joseph Smith, who was a farmer of that town. He married Miss Susan Marshall. In 1852 Mr. Bates bought his present farm, on which they have reared their two children: Charles, who married Louise Ruger, and lives with his parents; Josephine, who became the wife of Townsend Coles, a farmer in Lagrange, where she died in April, 1881. Mr. Bates has a large farm of 300 or 400 acres, which is planted principally in potatoes, he being the largest producer of that vegetable in Dutchess county. He also formerly bought and sold stock. He is a Democrat, and a self-made man, and has acquired his money by hard work and good management. He enjoys the esteem of all who know him.

JUDSON A. DENTON, a representative farmer of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, is actively engaged in his profitable occupation on his homestead, where he has resided since the spring of 1888, and where his energetic labors have met with due reward. His childhood was also spent upon the same farm, his birth taking place at his present residence February 8, 1853. His grandfather, Solomon Denton, was the founder of the family in this country, and for many years followed agricultural pursuits in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. His wife lived to the advanced age of ninety-three years.

Amos Denton, the father of our subject, was born in Pawling town, October 13, 1808, and there spent his boyhood days attending the district schools. He remained upon the home farm until thirty years of age, when he wedded Mary Seaman, daughter of Sutton Seaman, and then removed to the town of East Fishkill, where he conducted a general store for two years. On selling out, he went west to hunt up a location, but finally decided to remain in his native county, purchasing the old Benjamin Smith farm in Beekman town, upon which he made his home up to the time of his death, which occurred November 13, 1887. His wife departed this life in the spring of 1885. Seven children were born to them: Edgar, who is superintendent of a division of the stock yards of Chicago; Emily, who is the widow of Leonard Townsend, and is now a resident of Unionvale town; Melia, deceased wife of Jonathan Spencer; Judson Amos, of this sketch; Frederick S., of Staten Island; Weston Eugene, of New York city; and Sarah M., who died in infancy. In political sentiment the father was first a Whig, and later a supporter of the Republican party, while religiously he was a devout member of the Baptist Church at Beekman, for many years serving as a deacon. He was a highly respected citizen, and for over twenty years he efficiently filled the office of justice of the peace.

The education of our subject was such as the district schools of the town of Beekman afforded, and at the age of thirteen years he began working as a farm hand for neighbors, being employed in this way for four seasons. When seventeen years of age he was united in marriage with Miss Alice M. Wiley, daughter of George Wiley, and they became the parents of four children: George W., who died in infancy; Gertrude L.; Eliza A., who married Austin Bierce, Jr.; and George Weston. The wife and mother was called to her final rest on August 24, 1880. In 1882, Mr. Denton was married in the town of Unionvale, the lady of his choice being Miss Ella F. Bierce, daughter of Austin Bierce, and to them was born a daughter—Louie J., who died in infancy.

After his first marriage, Mr. Denton operated a farm on shares, and also engaged in teaming for the furnace company. For five or six years he engaged in butchering, and for the same length of time lived upon a farm in Unionvale town; but in the spring of 1888 he purchased his present fine farm in Beekman town, to the cultivation and improvement of which he has since devoted his attention. In the fall of 1895 he also engaged in the coal business in the same town. He is a stalwart Republican in politics, and since the spring of 1889 has acceptably served as justice of the peace. He is an honorable, upright citizen, who gains and retains the confidence and esteem of those with whom he comes in contact.

JOHN C. BARRINGER, a leading agriculturist of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, is a direct descendant of the pioneer who, according to tradition, suggested the name for that town.

Our subject's great-grandfather Barringer came to that vicinity from Germany in company with Col. Beekman, and the story goes that as they were talking about naming the town Mr. Barringer said: "Colonel, you name it; or, since we both came from the Rhine and your name is Beekman, call it Rhinebeekman, or Rhinebeck." George Barringer, our subject's grandfather, was a lifelong resident of the town. He married Miss Ackert, and had two children—Julia, who married Stephen Champlain, of Kingston, and Ephraim, our subject's father. By a second wife he had four children: Catherine, Maria, Elizabeth, and Elias, who married Miss Shoemaker and settled on a farm near the village of Rhinebeck. They had three children: Jeremiah, Mary and Elizabeth.

Ephraim Barringer grew to manhood at the old homestead, and married Alice F. Champlain, who was born in Hudson, N. Y., September 21, 1821, but came here with her parents when only one year old. Her father, Joseph Champlain, was a native of Connecticut. After his marriage Ephraim Barringer bought the family estate, which he farmed during the remainder of his life. Five children were born to him and his wife: Florence, who married Rev. Keyser, a Methodist minister in Westchester county; Catherine; Frances; John C., our subject; and Martha P., who died February 3, 1872. The mother of this family is dead, and of the father's death we take the following account from the Eagle, under date of January 20, 1892: "Ephraim Barringer died at his home in Rhinebeck on Saturday, January 2, 1892. He was born there October 12, 1811, on a place obtained by his grandfather from the English King. Mr. Barringer belonged to one of the oldest families in Rhinebeck, his grandfather and Col. Beekman having named the town."

John C. Barringer was born September 1, 1856, and has always lived upon the old farm. Under a survey made in 1834 the portion now in his possession contained eighty-eight and a half acres, but it is certain that it contains more than that. He is a general farmer, and is considered one of the most progressive and successful managers in the neighborhood.

On March 18, 1882, he married Miss Rosa De Wint, a daughter of George De Wint, a well-known resident of Rhinebeck. They have no children. The Barringers have always been Lutherans, but our subject and his wife now contribute to the M. E. Church. In politics he is a Republican, as was his father also in later years, and although he is no office-seeker, there are few among the younger men in the vicinity who have more influence than John C. Barringer.

ROBERT HURD. Among the enterprising and prosperous young business men of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, the well-known commission merchant and cattle dealer whose name introduces this sketch may well be regarded as a leader. His shrewd judgment and untiring energy have already won him wide recognition in business circles.

He was born October 5, 1869, on the Hurd homestead, formerly the Campbell homestead, in Pawling town, and is related to several of the oldest families. On the paternal side, his great-grandfather Hurd came from Scotland at an early period to settle in the town of Pawling, where he followed agriculture, as did also his son, Benjamin D. Hurd, our subject's grandfather, who was born in that town. Hurd's Corners was named in honor of the family, and Benjamin Hurd was a prominent man of that locality, a leading supporter of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Whig party. He was not, however, an office-seeker, although he was justice of the peace for many years. Both he and his wife, Mary Campbell, are dead. She was a daughter of Jeremiah Campbell, who was prominent in his time in religious and civil affairs in Dutchess county, and her grandfather Campbell was an officer in charge of the British forces at the battle of White Plains, where he met his death. Of the seven children of this marriage all lived to adult age: Harriet married Leonard Hall, of Po'quag; William T. was a merchant for many years at Hurd's Corners, and died there; Archibald never engaged in business, as he was not strong, and his death occurred in Cuba; Edgar I. is mentioned below; Mary, deceased, married Thomas Brill, of Po'quag; Stacia married Groe Dodge, of Pawling; and Julia G. married James Longhead, of the same place.

Edgar I. Hurd, our subject's father, was born at Hurd's Corners, and in early manhood engaged in mercantile business in Pawling. Later he purchased the old Campbell homestead and settled here at farming, establishing at the same time a commission business in all kinds of country produce, which he has conducted successfully for forty years. His goods are shipped to New York City, and he has sold large quantities on the present site of the Grand Central Depot and Madison Garden. He is accounted a shrewd business man, and his property has been accumulated through his own good management. He and his family are Episcopalians in religion, and, politically, he is a Democrat, but has not been very active in party work, although he has held most of the minor offices in the town and has served as supervisor and highway commissioner. He married Caroline A. Howard, a descendant of one of the old families of the county, and a daughter of James Howard, of Pawling. Five children were born of this union—James William, deceased; Jay; Robert; and Lucy who married Dr. Arthur Degaris, a leading dentist of Millbrook, N. Y. The three surviving sons are all at home and engaged in business with their father, a partnership having been formed in 1889.

Robert Hurd was educated in the district school near his home and in the select schools of Dover and Pawling. His remarkable business abilities were displayed at an early age, and at fifteen he went into partnership with Mr. Smith in the cattle business, and going to western New York they bought 225 head, which they drove east, selling along the route and closing out the lot at Pawling. This business he has continued ever since, buying in Buffalo to supply the demand in his vicinity for milch cows. In addition to his work in this line he is active in the business of the firm. His success in his various enterprises may be attributed to a rare combination of conservatism in judgment and energy in action. These characteristics are shown also in public affairs, making him a valued worker in the Democratic party. He has been a delegate to many State, county and district conventions, and in 1896 he was elected commissioner of highways, being the only successful candidate on his ticket that year. That his excellent business judgment is appreciated may be still farther seen by his appointment, by Judge Barnard in 1895, as receiver for the Akindole estate, and his friends may well feel justified in their high hopes for his future.

PATRICK WHALEN, a prominent resident of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, has been for many years a successful stock dealer, but is now enjoying a well-earned leisure at his beautiful home in the mountains. It is situated in a picturesque ravine on the spot known as the Stone Church, from its resemblance to a church door, a point greatly admired by tourists and often visited by picnic parties from the surrounding country.

Mr. Whalen is of Irish birth, and his family has long held a leading place in County Limerick, Ireland. His grandfather, John Whalen, was a well-educated man, and a farmer by occupation. He married Catherine Burk, and had seven children: Jeremiah, our subject's father; Johanna, the wife of Edward Quinn; Patrick, who married Mary O'Donnel; Catherine, the wife of Dennis O'Brien; John, who never married; Bridget, Mrs. William Sheehan; and Maggie, who died at the age of nineteen.

Jeremiah Whalen was born in 1792, and received an excellent education in his youth. He became a well-known agitator for the liberation of his native land from the British yoke, being a valued co-worker with Daniel O'Connell, and serving two terms as a member of Parliament. For some years he was engaged in farming in Ireland, and also took contracts for the working of the highways, subletting them and keeping a number of men constantly employed. He married Miss Catherine Hefferaman, daughter of John Hefferaman, a farmer in County Limerick, and had twelve children: Catherine died at the age of three; Mary; John, born in 1827, married Mary Manix; Patrick, subject of this sketch; Jeremiah D. married Bridget Grace; Dennis married (first) Hanora Morone, and (second) Delia Hogan; Michael died at the age of twelve; William married Ellen McCoid; James married Johanna Morrissee; Thomas died at five years of age; and Stephen and David died in early childhood. All of these children were born at the old homestead in County Limerick, and in 1847 the family came to America, settling first in New York City, and later upon a farm in Dutchess county, near Dover Plains.

Our subject was born in 1830, and was given the best educational opportunities that his native parish afforded. On his arrival in this country he found employment upon the Harlem railroad, which had then been recently surveyed, receiving five shillings per day for his work, and paying three shillings per day for board. He remembers well the first train which passed over the road. After a year and a half at this work he engaged in farm labor with a farmer in Dover, and later became a stock dealer. In this business he was very successful, his trade extending over several States, and he bought and sold some of the finest cattle ever shipped from Dover. At one time he owned a farm of 235 acres in that town, but he disposed of it, and his present farm contains only seventy-five acres. He has taken an active interest in politics, has been assessor for five years, and has held other town offices including that of road commissioner. As a devout Catholic he did much to establish that Church in Dover Plains, and in 1858 subscribed $50.00 toward the building of their edifice. He was married in 1857 to Miss Selina Deviney, and has had four children, of whom two are living: (1) Catherine A., born in 1862, is at home. (2) William D., born in 1863, died in infancy. (3) Thomas, born in 1864, married Miss Mamie Doyle, and has one child—Selina, born June 16, 1893. (4) Jeremiah, born in 1866, died in infancy. Mrs. Whalen is a native of Walworth, County Londonderry, Ireland, and was born in 1835. She received her education at her native place, and in 1851 came to Dover Plains, where she met and married our subject. Her grandfather, Thomas Deviney, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, where he was for many years a well-known machinist. He married Miss Jennie Livingston, by whom he had five children: Jennie, who married John Berrisford, Margaret, Sarah, Thomas, who married Ann Craig, and William, Mrs. Whalen's father, who was born in County Londonderry, Ireland. He was a cattle buyer by occupation, and was quite prominent in Masonic circles, being a Master Mason. His first wife was Miss Mary Malia, daughter of John and Mollie Malia, of Walworth, Ireland, and his second was Miss Hannah McCornica. Seven children were born of the first marriage: Jennie, Eliza and Isabella, whose husbands' names are not known; Mary, who married (first) David Begley, and (second) William Bleekley; Selina, Mrs. Whalen; William, who married Elizabeth McGolrich; and David, who married Martha Scott. There were two children by the second marriage: Thomas, who married Martha Shaw, and Margaret, the wife of Mr. McNariland.

OSBORN ROBINSON, a general farmer and dealer in dairy products, was born in Putnam county, N. Y., December 3, 1820. He grew up in the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where in 1848, he was married to Miss Wealthy Mott, who, too, was born in the town of Stanford. Her father, Jonathan Mott, was also a native of Stanford, and married Miss Armenia Walters, whose birth took place in the town of Milan. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Mott: Benjamin, Nelson, Sarah, Betsy A., and Armenia.

Mr. Robinson worked on various farms in Washington town, and in 1871 bought the farm on which he now resides. The following children were born to our subject and his wife: Martha, who married Milo Dickerman, a milk dealer of Chicago; Stephen is on the home place; George married Miss Kitty Reynoldson and lives in Chicago; Phœbe is at home; John works on the farm; Carrie became the wife of Edward D. Smith. Our subject has a farm of 320 acres, and owns forty-six head of cattle, fifty-one sheep and nine horses. He deals extensively in milk and has a model dairy, with all the modern improvements. He is a Republican and has held, among other offices of the town, that of postmaster. He is a well-known farmer in the community, and is respected by all with whom he comes in contact.

Stephen Robinson, father of our subject, was a native of Putnam county, where he grew to manhood. He married Miss Hattie Kelley, who was born in Putnam county, and who was a daughter of Seth Kelley. Mr. Robinson and his wife located on a farm in Putnam county, and the following children were born to them: Chapel, a farmer in Stanford; Kelley, a retired citizen of Stanford; Osborn is our subject; Ennis, who was a farmer of Stanford, died about the year 1870; Jarvis, a farmer; Robert, a farmer in the town of Poughkeepsie; William, following the same occupation in Stanford; Nathaniel, deceased, Emily married Walter Winans, a farmer in Amenia, and is deceased; Zilla became the wife of Charles Barrett, who is deceased; Ada married Henry Thompson, who was a farmer in the town of Stanford; Priscilla (unmarried); Catherine, the wife of Isaac Sincerbox, a farmer of Sharon, Conn. Mr. Robinson was a Whig and later a Republican. He was a member of the Baptist Church. His death occurred in 1870.

Chapel Robinson, the grandfather, was born in Putnam county, where he married settled on a farm and reared a large family of children.

WILLIAM H. ALLEN, a wide-awake and industrious farmer of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, was born upon the old family homestead in that township, November 27, 1856. The town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, was the birthplace of the grandfather of our subject, William Henry Allen, who served as captain of the State militia, and in later life engaged in the cultivation and improvement of a farm in the town of Clinton. He married Sarah Marshall, and to them were born five children, all of whom have now passed away, namely: William Henry, Catherine, Julia, Henry and James D.

The last-named, who was the father of our subject, was born in the town of Clinton in 1810, and on reaching manhood wedded Mary Clapp, daughter of James Clapp, the ceremony being performed in the town of Pleasant Valley. Their family circle included four children: Julia, wife of Marshall Herrick; William H.; Mary Emily, wife of Elmer Van Vliet, of Hudson, N. Y.; and James C. The father continued to operate the old family homestead until his death; politically, he was one of the warmest adherents of the Republican party.

William H. Allen grew to man's estate upon his father's farm in the town of Clinton, attending the school of the neighborhood, and supplemented the knowledge thus acquired by a course in the Poughkeepsie Military Institute. When his school days were over he continued to follow the pursuit to which he had been reared, and for four years after his marriage had the care and management of the old homestead. He then removed to his present farm, whose neat and thrifty appearance indicates his progressive spirit and industrious habits.

In the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, Mr. Allen married Susan Barnes, a daughter of David Barnes, and to them was born a daughter, Annette E. For his second wife he wedded in the town of Pleasant Valley, Miss Cora A. Van De Water, a daughter of William Van De Water. Two children bless their union: James Henry, born February 6, 1893; and William Marshall, born January 3, 1895.

Mr. Allen uses his elective franchise in support of the men and measures of the Republican party, but takes no very active part in political affairs. His energy and industry are proverbial, and he is numbered among the men who have been instrumental in promoting the progress and prosperity of his town and county.

EPHRAIM HERRICK, the genial and popular proprietor of "The Rhinebeck," one of the best and most pleasant hotels along the Hudson, was born May 17, 1848, on the old family homestead in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, a son of Ephraim Herrick. His primary education was received in the district schools, and he later pursued his studies in the Rhinebeck Academy, thus obtaining a practical education, which well fitted him for the duties of life. After laying aside his text books he operated the home farm until the death of his father, which occurred in 1868, having charge of that place for twenty-four years, as he continued its cultivation for some time later.

For twelve years Mr. Herrick then superintended the Dutchess County Gold farm, owned by Dr. Martin G. Freligh, which was sold during that time for a large sum. In the fall of 1888 he purchased his present hotel at Rhinecliff, which he has conducted very successfully since, and the place well merits the liberal patronage accorded it. The house is well fitted up, is convenient and comfortable, and the cuisine is unexceptionable.

In 1872 our subject was joined in wedlock with Henrietta Hermance, daughter of Joseph Hermance, of Salt Point, in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county. Our subject is a staunch adherent of the principles formulated by the Democratic party, and is one of the most progressive and public-spirited men of the community, where he is widely and favorably known.

BAILEY WHEELER, a well-known and prominent citizen of the town of Dover, belongs to a family that has long been connected with the history of Dutchess county. He is the son of Henry, and grandson of John B. Wheeler, an account of whom is given in the sketch of Perry Wheeler.

The birth of our subject occurred May 3, 1825, in the town of Dover, and his education was received at South Dover. After leaving school, he engaged in farming for about forty years, and then turned his attention to speculating in tobacco, cattle and stock generally, with good success. Although he takes no active part in political affairs, his ballot is always cast in support of the principles of the Republican party, and he ever faithfully discharges his duties of citizenship.

In 1860 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Wheeler and Miss Juliet Hungerford, daughter of Delazon and Hannah Hungerford, of Connecticut, and two children came to bless their union, a son and daughter. George B., the former, was born in Dover township, in 1866, and obtained an excellent education in Eastman Business College, and in 1887 at Fort Edward. The six months following his graduation were spent in California, and on his return to the East he was for two years employed in the "Plaza Hotel" of New York City. He was then offered the position of teller in the Plaza Bank of that city, where he is now located. The daughter, Nellie A., was born in the town of Dover, in 1869, and attended school at Poughkeepsie. She is now the wife of William S. McKean, a wholesale confectioner of Altoona, Penn., and has one child, William Wheeler, born April 2, 1894.

Thomas Hungerford, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Wheeler, was a native of Connecticut, and by his marriage with Miss Diana Hungerford was the father of six children. (1) Harriet married George Shove, by whom she has three children; Eliza, Henry and Edward. (2) Edwin married Susan Geddings, and had five children: Martin, who married Julia Jackson; Phoebe, who married Charles Hine; George, who married Emily Babcock; Lewis, who married Elizabeth Treat; and Anna, who married John Duncan. (3) Emily married Carlisle Smith, and was the mother of four children: Clark; Susan, wife of Asa Camp; Harriet, who died in infancy; and Oliver. (4) Thomas married Rachel Smith, and they had six children: Mills, who was three times married, his first wife being Allie Hendricks, his second a Miss Cable, and the third Mary Stewart; Sophia, who married Edward Teedwell; Ophelia, who married Daniel Mallory; Jay, who married Sarah Hoag; Neilson, who married Lucy Durfey; and Allen, who died unmarried. (5) Orin married Wealthy White, and had two children: Francis and Charles. (6) Hannah is the mother of Mrs. Wheeler.

Hannah Hungerford was born in Connecticut, and married Delazon Hungerford, a farmer, who though bearing the same name was no relative. They became the parents of seven children. (1) Angeline, born in 1832, married Jonathan Haviland, and has four children: Elsie, wife of Abram Henley; Lillian; Lottie, wife of George Rice; and Walter. (2) Watson, born in 1835, died in infancy. (3) Juliet, born in 1838, is the wife of our subject. (4) Sarah, born in 1841, married George W. Squires, and has four children: Robert, who married Jennie Stevens; Lewis, Walter and Bell. (5) Beach, born in 1844, married Fannie Hoag, and has three children: Nettie, wife of Frank Cable; May and Eva. (6) Mary, born in 1848, wedded Lafayette Joyce, and has one son, Howard. (7) Frederick, born in 1852, married Lucinda Sprague, and has three children: Ward, Bessie and Grace.

DE WITT C. KETTERER, the well-known proprietor of the "Ketterer Hotel" at Pine Plains, Dutchess county, was born March 7, 1858, in the town of Milan.

The family originated in Baden, Germany, where his grandfather, F. Ketterer, passed his entire life. Of his two sons, Charles, our subject's father, was the first of the family to come to America. Charles Ketterer was born January 3, 1828, and received a good education in the schools of his native land, where a strict compulsory system prevails, and afterward learned and followed the weaver's trade. In 1853 he emigrated to this country, locating first at Milan, in Dutchess county, and later in the town of Clinton. He married Margaretha Dorothy Mindline, also a native of Germany, who came to Dutchess county in the same year on account of ill health. Being thrifty and energetic, Charles Ketterer made rapid progress in business, and before the breaking out of the war had bought a farm in the town of Clinton. In 1862 he enlisted in the 128th N. Y. V. I., and served as a private until the Rebellion ended, taking part in the Red River campaign and in the operations in the Shenandoah Valley, and although he was in all the principal engagements in which his regiment participated he was not injured in any way. On his return home in 1865, he removed to Pine Plains and opened a barber shop, the first in the town, having learned the business by shaving his comrades in the army and taking a one month's course of instruction in New York City. For seven years he followed this trade successfully at various locations in the town, and, in 1872, exchanged the business for the hotel now owned by his heirs. He owned this property until his death which occurred December 28, 1888. He was the first to introduce beer into the village, ale having been the only drink known previously. A self-made man and a hard worker, he was also generous, and public-spirited, showing a hearty interest in the improvement of the village. He was an enthusiastic Republican, and one of the leading members of the Lutheran Church, with which he had been connected from early childhood.

De Witt C. Ketterer was the only child of his parents, and after attending the district school at Pine Plains until the age of fourteen he took charge of his father's barber-shop on his own responsibility. He possesses good natural abilities, and with due preparation would have been successful in almost any undertaking. His early limitations in education have been largely made good by an extensive course of reading upon general subjects. After following the barber's trade for seven years he and his father, in 1879, exchanged work, and he took the hotel which he has now conducted for seventeen years, making extensive improvements and keeping well in advance of any competitors. He is prominent in local affairs, an earnest advocate of progressive movements, and in politics he is an Independent. On January 6, 1891, he married Miss Jennie M. Boice, daughter of John Boice, of Ancram, Columbia county, New York.

JAMES NEWMAN. In this free land of ours many of the inhabitants are of foreign birth, who have come here for the purpose of securing homes, and these valuable additions to the native population have, by their industry, economy and honest methods, become essential factors in the growth and prosperity of the country. They furnish not only needed workmen, skilled and unskilled, but enterprising merchants, manufacturers, artists and apt dealers upon our marts of trade.

Mr. Newman is a native of Germany, born in New Bavaria, July 23, 1845. His father, George M. Newman, was a hotel keeper and groceryman at Herxheim by Landau, in the Rhine Pfaltz, and in 1854 came to America, where he died two years later. He was a man of wealth, had traveled extensively in France, and had also visited Africa. By his marriage with Vernika Seither, who died in Bavaria, he had four children: Frederick, James, Caroline and George, all now deceased with the exception of our subject.

At the age of fifteen years James Newman left his native land, crossing the Atlantic to America to hunt up his brothers, one of whom he found in New York City, and the other in St. Louis. At the former place he bound himself out to learn cigar making with John Paul Ohrt, at No. 113 Vest Broadway, where he remained about one year. When the war broke out he enlisted in the Anderson Zouaves, but was prevented from going to the front by Mr. Ohrt, as he was not yet of age. He then ran away, coming to the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, where he soon afterward enlisted in the 150th N. Y. V. I., under Capt. Gildersleeve, and was with that regiment until mustered out at Poughkeepsie in 1865. He now holds membership with John M. Gregory Post No. 59, G. A. R., Department of Connecticut, of which he has served as commander, and also belongs to the Officers Association of the 150th Regiment, at Poughkeepsie, as he had attained the rank of corporal.

After gallantly aiding his adopted country in her struggle to preserve the Union until he saw the flag once more float over a united nation, Mr. Newman came to Amenia, living with Henry Tripp, his former employer, for a year, after which he worked for A. B. Rice for the same length of time, and subsequently was employed at the "Amenia House" by Morgan Tripp for a year. Since that time he has successfully engaged in the cigar business for himself at Amenia, and is at the head of a large and constantly increasing trade.

At Poughkeepsie, December 20, 1868, Mr. Newman was married to Miss Margaret E. Gaul, a native of New York City, and a daughter of John Gaul, a blacksmith of Amenia. They have four children: Charles H., who married Carrie Whyland; Carrie E.; Mary; and James Arthur. In his political views, Mr. Newman is a Republican; socially he is a member of Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M.

DAVID HANNA. Quite a number of the leading and prominent citizens of Dutchess county are of alien birth, and have transported to this land of plenty the thrifty habits of their native country. Among these there are none better known, or more widely respected, than the gentleman whose name appears at the beginning of this sketch.

Our subject was a native of Mayhaland, County Londonderry, Ireland, where his father, Samuel Hanna, was also born, reared and educated. The latter was a farmer, but also engaged in the operation of a flax and grist mill at that place. He was united in marriage with Matilda Fargerson, and to them were born thirteen children, namely: Jane, who became the wife of James Sergent;

Thomas, who married Margaret Hutchinson; James and John, who died in infancy; Isabella, who became the wife of James Hutchinson; Nancy, who married William Hanna; John (2), who remained single; Robert, who wedded Matilda Dixon; Eliza, who died in girlhood; Peggy, who died in infancy; David, who married Eliza Hutchinson; Sarah, who married a Mr. Livingston; and Alex.

During his boyhood and youth David Hanna attended the schools of his native land, and assisted his father in the work of the mills. On March 15, 1852, was celebrated his marriage with Miss Eliza Hutchinson, a daughter of Samuel and Abella (Greer) Hutchinson, who lived upon a farm in County Londonderry. Her father was one of the seven children born to Robert and Nancy (Patterson) Hutchinson, who were also agriculturists of the same locality, the others being John, William, James, Bettie, Alex and Thomas.

In 1852, Mr. Hanna, with his bride, sailed from the Emerald Isle for the New World, and made their first location at Paterson, N. J., where they remained for some time. On leaving that city, they went to New York, and for forty-three years our subject was in the employ of the Harlem railroad, being fireman for seven years and five months, and was then given a position as watchman, which he held until his resignation a short time ago, owing to his age. His long continued service well indicates his faithful discharge of duty, and the implicit confidence which his employers placed in him.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanna became the parents of seven children, of whom, Arabella is the eldest. Samuel, who is a conductor on the Harlem railroad, married Minnie McLassen, and they have one child, Herbert J. Matilda is now deceased. John married Miss Ada Preston, by whom he has one daughter, Julia; he is a prominent Republican, and in 1894 was elected a member of the General Assembly, and has also filled the position of supervisor of Poughkeepsie for three terms. David wedded Mary Hutchinson, and is also a conductor on the Harlem railroad. Dorly is now deceased. Lizzie A. completes the family.

JOHAN D. BARNUM, now living retired at Amenia Union, Dutchess county, was for many years one of the most energetic and wide-awake business men of Dutchess county, where his entire life has been passed, his birth having occurred August 7, 1834, at South Amenia, in the house now owned by Franklin Cline.

Andrew Barnum, his father, was born at Danbury, Conn., January 3, 1790, and was the son of Daniel Barnum, a chairmaker of Bethel, Conn. Here Andrew attended school. On reaching years of maturity he engaged in farming and lime-burning at Ridgefield, that State. He married Miss Sally Chapman, who was born at Redding, Conn., February 8, 1792, a daughter of Phineas Chapman, and died in July, 1852. Eight children were born of this union, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Milo, February 29, 1816; Joshua, September 15, 1818; Daniel, September 27, 1820; Lucinda, September 2, 1823; Sarah, November 28, 1825; Mary, July 3, 1828; Andrew, August 27, 1829; and John D., August 7, 1834. All are now deceased with the exception of our subject, and Mary, the wife of Daniel Sharpsteen, of Battle Creek, Michigan.

In 1830 the father removed to the town of Amenia, purchasing the place at South Amenia now occupied by Franklin Cline, and there conducted a flouring-mill. In 1839 he sold to Philo Cline, giving possession the following year, and then went to Cortland county, N. Y., where he purchased a farm of 300 acres, which he continued to cultivate for ten years. On the expiration of that period he returned to Amenia Union, and there lived retired until his death, which occurred December 31, 1869. He was again married, his second union being December 8, 1852, with Mrs. Eliza Stevens, who was born April 12, 1801, and died April 10, 1870. In politics he was first a Whig, later a Republican.

The early education of our subject was obtained in Cortlandville Academy, and at the age of sixteen years he started out in life for himself, being engaged in the pump business with his brother at Danboro, Penn., for two years. The following summer he spent at Little York, Cortland Co., N. Y., while the winter was passed by him in the village of Cortland. He was then employed in selling tin for Cicero Beach, of Kent, Conn., for a year.

Subsequently, Mr. Barnum, with his brother Andrew, established the firm of Barnum & Co., and engaged in the stationery business, traveling by wagon with paper supplies, and gathering material for the manufacture of paper. This they continued from 1853 until the death of Andrew in 1865, after which our subject conducted the business alone until 1885, running five peddling wagons on the road as far east as Hartford, Conn., west to Oneonta, N. Y., north to Utica, N. Y., and south to Bridgeport, Conn. He was also engaged in the manufacture of cigars at Amenia Union, which he sold to the retail trade from his wagons, a business he continued to carry on after he had stopped the paper trade. Later he went on the road for Morgan L. Potts, to whom he had sold out, and while thus employed he, in 1891, contracted gangrene, which grew rapidly worse, and resulted in his losing both legs. Since that time he has necessarily led a retired life.

Mr. Barnum was first married September 1, 1857, to Anna J. Stevens, who was born October 12, 1840, and was the daughter of his stepmother. She died September 18, 1866, leaving one son, William S., now of Tarrytown, N. Y., who was born November 23, 1859, and married Caroline Andrews. At Livingston Manor, N. Y., September 2, 1868, Mr. Barnum was again married, this time to Harriet Ann Potts, who was born August 11, 1833, and they have two children: J. Edmund, who was born November 20, 1869, and is now with the Wagner Palace Car Co., in New York City, and John Dibble, Jr., born July 21, 1871. In political sentiment, Mr. Barnum has always been an ardent Republican, and he is devoted to the best interests of his town and county, being numbered among the most public-spirited and progressive citizens of the community.

FRANK E. BURNETT, one of the leading business men of Red Hook, Dutchess county, the senior member of the firm of Burnett Bros., is a descendant of a family which has long been prominent in that place.

His father, Stephen R. Burnett, was born here in the year 1829, and from that time to the present has had his residence there. Early in life he learned the carpenter's trade, and followed it successfully for some years, and in 1865 he engaged in the furniture and undertaking business, conducting it with increasing trade and profit until 1886, when he transferred it to his two sons. He is a man who stands high in the esteem of the community, and although he has never sought public office he fields an influence in a quiet way in every progressive movement. He was a charter member of Christian Lodge No. 379, I. O. O. F., organized January 28, 1874, and he is now a Past Grand of the Lodge and Past Deputy Grand Master of the District of Dutchess. He was married in 1853 to Miss Sarah Eighmy, a daughter of George Eighmy, a prominent resident of Rhinebeck. The two children of this union are Frank E., our subject, born April 27, 1855, and William E., born March 12, 1860. Both were educated in the common schools of their native place, and after completing the course Frank E. Burnett entered the employ of his father and learned the details of the business. The younger brother engaged in mercantile business for different parties until the time of the father's retirement from active life. Under the able management of the two the firm has maintained its prestige, and its growing business gives evidence of their energy and judgment.

On October 30, 1879, Frank E. Burnett married Miss Estella C. Lasher, a daughter of Jacob Lasher, a well-known citizen of Madalin. William E. Burnett is also married, his wife being formerly Miss Ella Hermance, a daughter of Edward Hermance, of Red Hook. Neither couple have had any children.

Our subject takes an active part in local affairs, giving his influence to all movements which promise to aid the community. At the age of twenty-one, he became a member of the I. O. O. F., Christian Lodge No. 379, and is a Past Grand and Past District Deputy Grand Master of the order. He is also one of the charter members of Shiloh Encampment No. 68, and has the distinction of being Past Chief Patriarch, and was District Deputy Grand Patriarch for the year 1896.

FRANK E. BIRDSALL, one of the reliable and progressive young farmers and representative men of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, is actively engaged in general farming upon the place which he purchased in the spring of 1895. A native of Dutchess county, he was born August 6, 1867, in the town where he still resides.

On coming to America the founders of the family first located in Westchester county, N. Y., whence they removed to Orange county, where Solomon Birdsall, the grandfather of our subject, located on a farm granted by King George of England to Mr. Lepton, from whom the great-grandfather purchased it.

There Solomon spent his entire life in agricultural pursuits, and was a faithful member of the Society of Friends. He was married in Ulster county, N. Y., to Phœbe Young, and to them were born seven children, Abram Y. Birdsall, the father of our subject, being third in order of birth. He was born March 19, 18—, at Leptondale, Orange Co., and there on a farm his boyhood days were passed. After attending the district schools for a time he entered Union Springs Boarding School in New York State, and was then a student in the Friends Boarding School at Providence, R. I. After graduating from the Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., he secured a position as bookkeeper in New York City, and later was a commission merchant. For fifteen years he carried on the feed business, but is now living upon a farm in the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and devotes his time to its cultivation.

In that township he married Elizabeth Haight, a daughter of Lewis Haight, and two children graced their union: Frank E. and Gertrude. The parents both hold membership with the Friends Church, and the father always casts his ballot with the Republican party.

The childhood of Frank E. Birdsall was spent in Brooklyn, N. Y., until he was seven years of age, when he accompanied his parents to Orange county, where the following sixteen years were passed. He secured an excellent education in the district schools, at the Union Springs Boarding School, and completed his literary training with an academic course in the New Paltz Normal. For four years he remained upon his father's farm at Millbrook, Dutchess county, thus becoming familiar with farm life in all its details. His practical knowledge of agriculture, combined with his sound judgment and good business ability, no doubt wins him success in his chosen calling, and we predict for him a brilliant future.

On October 16, 1894, in the town of Clinton, Mr. Birdsall was united in marriage to Miss Mary G. Griffen, daughter of William D. Griffen. In his political affiliations he is an inflexible adherent of the doctrines and principles of the Republican party, and he is an earnest member of the Friends Church. He enjoys the esteem and confidence of his neighbors, and, with his excellent wife, is a valued addition to the society of the township.

WILLIAM J. BROOKS, one of the prominent and reliable business men of Hibernia, Dutchess county, was born in Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., August 19, 1861. His father, who was born in England, in 1831, bore the name of Henry Brooks, and was the youngest of the six children that comprised the family of John and Mary (Ross) Brooks, the former also a native of England, and the latter the daughter of Alexander Ross, of Poughkeepsie.

When Henry Brooks was about eight years of age, his father brought the family to America and located in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he established himself in business. After completing his education in the schools of that city, Henry Brooks took up farming, and was also employed as watchman at the Livingston Rolling Mill in Poughkeepsie, in 1870. At Millbrook, Dutchess county, he was united in marriage with Rachel Butts, a daughter of James Butts, and five children were born to them: Lydia, who was born August 19, 1856, and is the wife of Jay White, of Wassaic, N. Y.; William J. comes next; Amy, wife of George Siegler, of Ancram, N. Y.; Fred; Susie, wife of Thomas McCarthy; and Eddie. For many years the father has now made his home at Ancram, Columbia county, where he is engaged in agricultural pursuits. His religious views are those of the Methodist Church, and in politics he is a staunch Republican.

The education of our subject was obtained in the schools of Ancram and Poughkeepsie, and on laying aside his text books to take up the more arduous duties of life, he was first engaged either in farming on the old homestead or being employed by others. In 1890, however, he came to Hibernia, Dutchess county, where he purchased land and erected his present house and store. He at once began the coal and livery business, but February, 1, 1895, he opened his general store, where he carries a complete assortment of general merchandise such as can be found in a first-class store of the kind. He is a wide-awake, energetic business man, honorable in all his dealings, thus winning the confidence and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact, either in a business or social way.

On June 12, 1889, in Troy, N. Y., Mr. Brooks married Miss Cora B. Duncan, daughter of Cyrus Duncan, of the town of Washington, Dutchess county, and to them was born a son, Henry. Mr. Brooks is a warm advocate of Republican principles, although he has very little time to devote to politics, and he is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

JAMES REYNOLDS. Among Poughkeepsie's most active and progressive business men of to-day is the subject of this brief review, whose successful career of twenty-five years in business in that city has been such as to recommend him for the presidency of one of the leading and substantial business interests of Poughkeepsie—James Reynolds Elevator Company.

Mr. Reynolds was born at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, June 7, 1858. He attended school in his native city, and in 1873 was graduated from Riverview Military Academy. After his graduation he at once began his business career as a clerk in the wholesale grain and feed store of Reynolds & Co., which was located opposite the depot of the Hudson River railroad. He remained with this firm thirteen years, then purchased a retail business in the same line, the location of which was in Union street. Under the judicious management and popularity of Mr. Reynolds the business increased so that more room was required, and in November, 1888, he purchased the Parker mill and the surrounding property, and converted the mill into a complete grain elevator. Large and commodious warehouses were erected in connection with the elevator, and largely increased switching facilities added; and also another retail store opened on Main street. This business so increased that in February, 1896, it was incorporated under the name of James Reynolds Elevator Company, and has so continued to the present, our subject being the president of the company. The other officers are: George E. Cramer, of Reynolds & Cramer, vice-president, and Willard C. Vail, secretary. The main office, elevator and warehouse are on the corner of North and Garden streets, and the retail stores at Nos. 226 and 228 Union street, and No. 17 Catherine street. The company does an extensive business in flour, feed, grain, hay, straw, salt and fertilizers; also in poultry, kennel and beekeepers' supplies.

Mr. Reynolds is not only one of the substantial business men of Poughkeepsie, but one of the popular and esteemed citizens.

WILLIAM B. DINSMORE (deceased). The first ancestor of the Dinsmore family of whom we have any record was John Dinsmoor, who went from Scotland to Ireland in the seventeenth century, having run away from home at the age of seventeen because his father had compelled him, as the second son, to hold the stirrup while his elder brother mounted a horse. Unwilling to submit to such an indignity, he sought a new home in County Antrim, Ireland, where he lived to the age of ninety-nine years, and was distinguished for his piety. His son John (2) married, and had two children, Robert, born in 1692, and Elizabeth.

America was then receiving many emigrants of the hardy Scotch-Irish race, and leaving his little family, John Dinsmoor sailed across the Atlantic, landing at a fort at the islands known as "the Gorges," off the coast of Maine. There he began to build a house, but while shingling it he was captured by the Indians. By making himself useful to the chief he gained his favor; but the other members of the tribe were not so well disposed, and one day, in the absence of the chief, the captive was accused of holding a conference with some Englishmen on the coast, and was condemned to die by fire. He had already been bound to a tree, and the brush was piled about him, when his friend, the chief, returned and commanded his torturers to cease their preparations until an investigation of the charge could be made, as he said there would certainly be tracks found in the sand if the alleged conference had been held upon the shore. None were discovered by a careful search, and Dinsmoor was accordingly released. Later the tribe left that part of the country, and on coming to a stream which crossed their line of march the chief entered his canoe; but as Dinsmore was about to push it off and step into the stern the chief told him that he must go no further. John pleaded that the Indians would kill him if he lost the chief's protection, but the latter said: "No, you much honest man, John. You walk to Boston," and giving him some nuts and bear's grease he told him where he could conceal himself in a cave until the rest of the Indians had crossed the river. His parting words were: "Indian and French have all this country. You walk to Boston, take English canoe and walk to your own country: you much honest man, John." Dinsmoor found the cave, and waited there for three days watching tribe after tribe pass until all were gone. He then started to make his way to "the Gorges," but nearly perished from hunger, and would have succumbed had it not been for some cranberries which he found in a swamp. He reached the fort in safety, and then took passage by sea to Boston. From there he went to Rockingham county, N. H., where a colony of Scotch-Irish had settled in Nutfield township, now Derry. Here he found old friends from Londonderry, Ireland, and either through sympathy for his sufferings, or as an inducement for him to stay there, the proprietors of the settlement deeded to him and his heirs sixty acres of land in Jee. As he was a mason by trade, he built a stone house for himself and sent for his family. After their arrival in 1730 he divided the farm between the two children, both of whom were married and had families, and he and his wife lived in the stone house with his son-in-law. This house was a noted point between Derry and Windham, and until recently the location of the front door stone was marked by an early apple tree in the garden of P. D. Scott, generally known as the Hopkins place. John Dinsmoor, or "Daddy Dinsmoor," as he was called, died in 1741.

His son Robert brought to America his wife, Margaret Orr, and four children, and lived upon what is now known as the Barnet field, the westerly field south of the brook near the Scott house, and by the railroad. It is near or was a part of the land given to John Dinsmoor. The house stood on the top of the hill a few rods west of an old cellar, about fifteen rods north of the railroad, and some forty rods west of the old highway, now discontinued. Soon after the death of his father he moved to a farm in Windham, N. H., which has ever since been in the possession of some of his descendants, and is now the residence of Edwin O. Dinsmoor. The dwelling house is on or near the site selected by Robert on a fine swell of land, and commands a wide view to the east and south. The town records of Windham show that he was prominent in local affairs. He was one of three commissioners appointed to organize the town, March 8, 1742, and was elected a selectman on that day. The next year he served on the committee on lawsuits, formed presumably to protect the actual settlers from claims made by patentees of the Crown. In 1744-45-46-47 and 50 he was moderator at the annual town meetings, which as is well said in the "History of Windham, N. Y.," from which these historical facts have been taken, "not only indicates his urbanity of manners, his knowledge of parliamentary law and his tact in governing men, but also the esteem of his fellow citizens." He died of fever and ague October 14, 1751, at the age of fifty-nine years. His widow survived him until June 2, 1752. Of their four sons, Samuel died November 12, 1753, aged twenty. The estate was divided by lot among the other three, John, the eldest, drawing the land north of the homestead, comprising the farms lately occupied by John and Daniel Kelly. Robert, the second son, drew the homestead, and William, the west portion lying south and west of "Jenny's Hill" and extending to Cobbett's pond.

John Dinsmoor married Martha, daughter of Justice James McKeen, of Londonderry, and passed his life at Windham, where he held many prominent official positions, having been town clerk, moderator of the town meeting, selectman, justice of peace, delegate to the Provincial Congress at Exeter in 1775, and elder in the Presbyterian Church. He had thirteen children, of whom, the youngest, William, was born at Windham in 1767. As a young man of twenty years he went to Charlestown, Mass., and engaged in mercantile business. He wedded Catherine H., daughter of Gavin Brown, an Englishman, who resided in State street, Boston, on the north side, at the point now occupied by the Merchants Bank. At the time of the Boston Massacre the family, hearing the firing in the streets, fled from the house and did not return for two days, when, to their surprise they found it just as they had left it, which speaks well for the honesty of the citizens of that town. Mrs. Dinsmoor died at Boston in 1830, and her husband followed her six years later. They had three children: Catherine, born in 1805, died in 1857, who married Charles E. Bowers, of the Adams Express Co.; Eliza, born in 1807, died in 1827; and William B.

The late William B. Dinsmore was born in Boston in 1810, and was sent in boyhood to Pinkerton Academy, at Derry, N. H. After completing his course there he returned home, but his father discovered, on testing his acquirements, that he was a very poor penman, and knowing the importance of a good handwriting to a business man he selected a good teacher of penmanship, with whom the young man gained unusual proficiency in the art. In this painstaking attention to detail on the part of both father and son may be found the secret of their success, and the quality was constantly shown in William B. Dinsmore's work in the Adams Express Company, to which the best part of his life was given. It would not be possible to give the history of one without outlining that of the other, so closely are they identified. In 1840 when Mr. Alvin Adams, of Boston, established an express business over the Norwich line from Boston to New York, Mr. Dinsmore was employed as bookkeeper, and soon afterward a partnership was formed between them under the name of Adams & Co. Mr. Dinsmore went to New York to look after the firm's interest, and his innate conservatism and caution is evidenced by his statement to his host at the "United States" hotel, that he was by no means sure of the success of the enterprise. In 1842 and 1843 the amount of business justified an extension of the company's lines, and Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburg were included in the service, and other parties entered the company as proprietors. In a few years they covered every railway in the Southern States, and had made rapid progress in the West, and July 1, 1854, the Adams Express Co., a joint-stock association, was organized with Mr. Adams as president, and Mr. Dinsmore as treasurer, the headquarters being located at New York. The business continued to prosper; but a few years later the difficulties between the North and South made it necessary to sell the Southern lines to the stockholders in that section. When the disagreements culminated in war, the Adams Express Company rose to the occasion, and their agents accompanied the Union armies, establishing their offices wherever the tents were pitched, thus giving the soldiers an opportunity to send or receive money or packages. Over five millions of money parcels were forwarded from the soldiers to their families or friends without the loss of a dollar. The agents were so active and zealous in the discharge of their duties that they often transgressed military rules; and it is said that at the surrender of Vicksburg the Adams Express agent, in his desire to secure a good location, rushed forward to an unoccupied house, and was about to raise the company's flag, when Gen. Grant rode up and said in his quiet way, and with a characteristic twinkle of the eye, "Will you do me the favor to allow me to hoist my flag first?"

The Adams Express Company now traverses 72,162 miles of railway, and has agencies at all places on the various lines, and as the authorized agent of the United States Treasury it has safely transported thousands of millions of its treasures and securities. In 1856 Mr. Dinsmore became president of the company, and for many years he remained at his post in New York City, never permitting himself to engage in any enterprise which would divert his attention from the company's interests; and this devotion was an acknowledged factor in the rapid growth of the business. His sound, conservative judgment led him to firmly oppose any precarious investments, and carried the company through the financial storms of thirty years with less loss than has been sustained under the same conditions by any other large corporation. His integrity was unquestioned, and united with his force of character, wealth and ability, placed him among the leading business men of the time. His death was widely deplored.

On October 19, 1842, Mr. Dinsmore was married to Miss Augusta M. Snow, of Brewster, Mass., and had two sons: William B., Jr., born in 1844, and CLARENCE GRAY, born in 1847. In ordinary conversation he was somewhat reserved in manner, but among friends he was always frank, and genial, and his remarks overflowed with "mother wit." As a correspondent he was noted for charm of style and inexhaustible humor. His beautiful country seat on the Hudson, at Staatsburg, was the scene of unbounded hospitality, for although naturally economical he always lived in accordance with his circumstances, and made wise use of his wealth instead of hoarding it unduly. He had a generous heart, and his assistance was freely given to many an unfortunate, although his quiet benefactions were never heralded to the world.

CHARLES EDWARD FREDERICK SCHUBERT, a wealthy retired manufacturer residing at Glenham, Dutchess county, has held for many years a leading place among the modern artists in tapestries, and to his fine taste and rare executive ability much credit is due for the advance of this branch of art in different manufacturing centers both in Europe and America.

Mr. Schubert was born in Berlin, Germany, January 30, 1817, the only child of Charles and Dorothea (Fisher) Schubert. The father was the proprietor of a livery stable there, and also ran a line of stages. During the reign of Frederick William he was drafted in the Prussian army, and served some forty months under Blucher, and on June 18, 1815, at the battle of Waterloo, he was struck in the forehead by a spent shot, in consequence of which he became blind shortly afterward.

Charles E. F. Schubert, our subject, received his early education in the public schools of Berlin, and in 1830 entered the Academy of Fine Arts under Prof. Schadow, remaining four years, and graduating in 1834. He then entered the factory of Louis Fonobert & Truckner, India rubber manufacturers, as a designer, and remained with them in that capacity, and also as a manager, for seven years. During this time Mr. Truckner, the junior member of the firm, invented the Mosaic tapestry, and in 1841 sold the patent and machinery to a French firm, Louis Vaison & Poirait, and the plant was removed to Paris, Mr. Schubert being appointed as foreman and designer. He continued in their employ until 1847, when the breaking out of the revolution in February, 1848, brought the industry to a standstill, which they never afterward resumed. In consequence Mr. Schubert found himself in the market for employment, and was engaged by Recillaud Roussel & Clioquil, one of the then largest carpet-manufacturing firms in France, at Tourcoing, Department du Nord, on the borders of Belgium. Here he remained from 1847 to 1851, and then accepted a situation with the firm of John Crossley & Son, Halifax, Yorkshire, England, where he remained as chief designer in the tapestry and Brussels department from 1851 until 1870. In 1855 he had the honor to represent his firm at the Universal Exposition held at Paris, and obtained the second prize, a silver medal, as a colorist and designer, which medal is still in his possession; on one side is a bust of Napoleon III, and on the other are the coats of arms of all nations competing at the Exposition. This firm of John Crossley & Son went into the manufacturing of mosaic tapestry, in connection with their other manufacturing, after Mr. Schubert became their manager, as he alone understood the manufacture of this particular branch. One of the directors of this company, by name John Leach, gave in his will a great collection of these mosaics (which had been manufactured under the supervision of Mr. Schubert) to the museum at Clare Hall in Halifax, England, where they are still on exhibition to the public.

Prior to 1870 the well-known carpet manufacturer, Michael Protzen & Son, of Berlin, Prussia, had bought their printed yarns at J. Crossley & Sons; but during that year, they decided to print their own carpet yarns, and secured the services of Mr. Schubert as their superintendent and general manager. Consequently, he again removed to Berlin, and from that time date the first printed yarns manufactured in Prussia. Mr. Schubert remained with this mill three years, filling his term of contract, and then proceeded to Kidderminster, Worcestershire, England, under a three-years' contract with John Brinton & Co., as superintendent, to establish a tapestry department. In 1876, when his engagement with the latter firm came to a close, he received a proposal from the agent of A. T. Stewart, of New York, to superintend their carpet department at their mills in Glenham, Dutchess Co., N. Y. He accepted the proposition and conducted the department with marked success until the year 1889, covering a period of fifteen years, when he resigned. In 1890 Mr. Schubert began on his own account to manufacture mosaic tapestry, mats, labels and banners, and followed the business for the three years, when owing to the depressed financial state of the country he foresaw that he was not warranted in continuing, and accordingly he closed his factory. In politics he is an Independent.

In 1843 our subject was married to an old schoolmate of his, Miss Wilhelmina Berner, whose father was a soldier in the Prussian army, and who was in the siege before Paris in 1814, also in Waterloo with Blucher in 1815. They were wedded in Paris in the Protestant Chapel. Mr. and Mrs. Schubert have had ten children, three of whom died in childhood, the remaining seven being as follows: (1) Charles Eugene, a merchant in Manchester, England, married Emma Tankard, and has one child—May. (2) Emil Heliodore, who is a designer and lives at Matteawan, married Mary Ann Bingley, daughter of Richard Bingley, of Leeds, Yorkshire, England; they have two children—Edith and Ethel. (3) Ernest Walter is in the hotel business at Poughkeepsie. (4) William Albert is with his brother in Poughkeepsie. (5) Kate Louisa lives at home. (6) Louis Hector is a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, University Chapel, Chapel Hill, N. C. (7) Edith Jane married Edward A. Underhill, of Glenham. In their religious belief the family are Episcopalians.

In 1889, after Mr. Schubert resigned the superintendency of the carpet mill of A. T. Stewart & Co., he felt a desire to visit the scenes of his former activities in Europe. In company with his daughter, Edith Jane (then unmarried), he left New York July 4, 1889, on one of the Cunard steamers, and arrived in Liverpool after a voyage of nine days. They immediately went from there to Manchester, where they remained with his son for a fortnight, from there visiting Leeds, Bradford, Blackpool, Brixton and Matlock, the famous watering place in Derbyshire; from Manchester they went to London, and from London to Calais, France, and thence to Tourcoing, where they remained a few days before going to Paris, at which city they attended the World's Fair, and then visited other points of interest in France. After a sojourn of three months, they returned by way of London and Liverpool, taking passage via the Cunard Line again to New York. Although Mr. Schubert is in his eightieth year, he is still hale and hearty, possessing a clear mind and steady hand. His favorite pastime is making designs for industrial purposes, being solicited by carpet manufacturers in different parts of the country for his handiwork. He is a man of unusual vigor for his years.

WALTER A. SHERMAN, one of the prosperous and enterprising agriculturists of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, was born on the old homestead at Amenia Union, May 27, 1861, and can trace his ancestry back to Henry Sherman, who died in England in 1589. Of his five children, Henry, the eldest, removed from the county of Suffolk to Dedham, in the county of Essex, England, where his death occurred in 1610. He married Susan Hills, and of their twelve children, Samuel, the second, was born in 1537, and died at Dedham, in 1615.

Hon. Philip Sherman, the youngest of the seven children of Samuel, was born at Dedham, February 5, 1610, and in 1634 he emigrated to Roxbury, Mass., being the founder of the family in this country. With Roger Williams and others, he helped to purchase Rhode Island, March 24, 1638, and when the government was established July 1, 1639, Mr. Coddington became governor, with Philip Sherman as secretary. His death occurred at Portsmouth, R. I., in 1687. By his marriage with Miss Sarah Odding, he had thirteen children, John being the eighth in the order of birth.

John Sherman was born at Portsmouth, R. I., in 1644, and by occupation was a blacksmith and farmer, living on land inherited from his father at South Dartmouth, Mass., where he died in 1734. He wedded Sarah Spooner, and to them were born eight children. Philip Sherman, the eldest, followed farming upon the old homestead at Dartmouth, Mass., and there his death occurred in 1740. His son, Jabez Sherman, born October 3, 1704, at one time served as lieutenant in the navy of Great Britain, but most of his life was passed at South Dartmouth, where he died in 1774. Of his eleven children, Benjamin Sherman, the fifth, was born February 3, 1736, at Dartmouth, and during his boyhood attended the common schools. He was the first of the family to come to Dutchess county, N. Y., arriving at Pawling in 1764, where he worked at the carpenter's trade, building the Hicksite meeting house. He then returned to Dartmouth, Mass., for his wife, who bore the maiden name of Deborah Dilnoe, and he later engaged in farming and wagon making at Pawling, where he died in 1805. In his family of eleven children, Shadrach Sherman was the seventh in order of birth. He was born at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, in 1769, and by occupation was a farmer and drover. He became quite a prominent and influential man of the county, serving as a member of the General Assembly in 1811. His death occurred December 11, 1812. He married Diadama Howland, and they became the parents of eight children: Amy, David, Howland, Alfred, Benjamin E., Richard H., Walter and Shadrach.

Walter Sherman, the next to the youngest in the above named family, was the grandfather of our subject. He was born February 21, 1806, at Dover Plains, and there remained until he was eighteen years of age, when he removed to Amenia Union, where he carried on merchandising for some time, and also engaged in farming and stock dealing. He was very successful in his undertakings, becoming quite well-to-do, and his property was all the result of his own unaided efforts. He took an active part in political affairs, in early life supporting the Whig party, later becoming an ardent Republican, and he served as a member of the General Assembly in 1845 and 1847. He departed this life March 11, 1880. At Amenia, August 31, 1834, he married Miss Cornelia Allerton, and to them three children were born: Mary, who was born June 8, 1835, and died December 29, 1868; David H., the father of our subject; and Samuel W., born September 20, 1844.

David H. Sherman was born on the old homestead at Amenia Union, June 25, 1837, began his education in the district schools of the neighborhood, and completed his literary training at the old Nine Partners Boarding School, in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. Subsequently he went to Newark, N. Y., where he engaged in clerking for a time, and was there united in marriage with Miss Cecelia Mayer, by whom he has five children: Walter Alfred, whose name opens this sketch, being the fourth in the order of birth. Returning to Amenia, the father here engaged in farming, but later removed to Jersey City, N. J., in the interests of the Central Stock Yard and Transit Co., of which he is treasurer and general manager. Like his father, he also supports the Republican party.

Walter A. Sherman spent his boyhood days in Amenia Union, attending the schools of Amenia, later supplementing the knowledge there acquired by a course in a private school in New York City. He has always been connected with his father in business, and now has charge of one of the finest farms in his section of Dutchess county, located in the town of Amenia. At South Amenia, he was married September 27, 1882, to Miss Maria E. Cline, daughter of Albert Cline, and five children grace their union: Agnes C., Walter C., Helen M., May N. and Howland N.

Since casting his first vote, Mr. Sherman has always taken an active interest in political affairs, supporting the principles of the Republican party, and for two terms he has been called upon to service as supervisor of his township. Socially, he is connected with Amenia Lodge No. 672, F. & A. M. He is of a genial disposition and affable manners, and is a keen and sagacious business man.

CCLINTON J. ROCKEFELLER. Among the active farmers and stock dealers of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, the gentleman whose name stands at the beginning of this sketch holds a prominent place. His birthplace was in the town of German-town, Columbia Co., N. Y., and the date thereof October 1, 1839. He is of Holland lineage, and for many generations the family have resided in Columbia county, where the grandfather, Philip S. Rockefeller, was born, and in that county the birth of the father, Philip P. Rockefeller, occurred. In his native county the latter grew to manhood and married Catherine Elmondorf, who was born in Albany county, N. Y., and was a daughter of Jacob Elmondorf, who was also of Holland descent. Mr. Rockefeller took his bride to his home in Columbia county, where they reared their four children: Edmond, who died at Rochester, N. Y.; Harmond, who held official positions under President Lincoln, and is now a prominent resident of Texas; Clinton J., of this review, and Anna, who is married and makes her home in Columbia county. On his farm there the father died about 1841, and his wife survived him until 1874, when she, too, was called to her final rest. He affiliated with the Whig party.

The early days of our subject were spent upon the home farm, which he assisted in operating, and attended the district schools of the neighborhood. He completed his education, however, under the direction of General De Peyster, and on laying aside his books worked as a printer for two years in Albany, N. Y. Later he carried on a photograph gallery in New York, but in 1861 he came to the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, and located upon the farm where he has since resided. Besides general farming he also turns his attention to buying and selling live stock, which he ships to New York City, and finds this a profitable source of income. He also ships fruit to European markets.

In 1871 Mr. Rockefeller was married, the lady of his choice being Catherine Dederick, of Dutchess county, a daughter of John Dederick, who is engaged in farming. To them were born three children: Carrie; Romer, who is married, and is engaged in agricultural pursuits in Red Hook township, and one child that died at the age of thirteen years.

Mr. Rockefeller is one of the leading and influential Republicans of the town whose opinions are invariably held in respect, and in 1888 he was first elected supervisor of Red Hook. With the exception of two years, when he withdrew his name, he has since filled that position with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituents. He is a man of sound judgment, upright and honorable in all his dealings, and has the well wishes of all.

WALTER G. STORM, a farmer of the town of East Fishkill, and one of the representative citizens of Dutchess county, comes from one of its oldest and most highly respected families. He first opened his eyes to the light in that town, April 8, 1854, and there his grandfather, Garret Storm, was also born, and upon a farm reared his family of six children, namely: John P., the father of our subject; Isaac, who was an agriculturalist of East Fishkill town; Garret, a coal dealer of Matteawan, Dutchess county; Eliza, who married John S. Emans; Catherine, who married Edmund Luyster, a farmer and cattle dealer of East Fishkill town, who is now deceased; and Charles T., who was a merchant of Poughkeepsie. Throughout his life the grandfather always followed the occupation of farming.

John P. Storm was born in East Fishkill township, January 1, 1826, there grew to manhood and married Miss Sarah R. Hasbrouck, a native of the same place, and the daughter of Francis Hasbrouck, who was a merchant of East Fishkill. Upon their marriage they located upon a farm in their native township, where their two children were born—Walter G., of this sketch; and Jennie E., now the wife of Du Bois Bartow, a farmer of East Fishkill township. The father is still living, and is engaged in the operation of his land. His political support is ever given the men and measures of the Democratic party.

On the home farm in the town of East Fishkill, Mr. Storm, whose name introduces this review, remained until he reached maturity, and in 1887 he was married, the lady of his choice being Miss Bessie C. Cooper, who was born in Putnam county, N. Y., but was reared at Matteawan, Dutchess county. Her father, James Cooper, was a hatter by trade. Two children grace their union—John C. and W. Bartow.

With his bride, Mr. Storm migrated to North Dakota, where for six years they resided upon a farm; but in 1892 they returned east, and have since been residents of East Fishkill town. Their fine farm of 100 acres is highly cultivated and improved, and to general farming Mr. Storm devotes his time and attention exclusively. They are true Christians, members of the Reformed Church, and in politics he is an earnest supporter of the Democratic party. An energetic and reliable citizen, he has fully established himself in the confidence and esteem of the people, and is ready to respond to calls made upon him to promote the interests of his town and county.

THOMAS J. CUNNINGHAM. But few young men have as enviable a reputation for enterprise and business acumen as the subject of this biography, a prosperous produce dealer at Matteawan, Dutchess county. He was born October 9, 1866, at Peekskill, Westchester county, N. Y., and is a descendant of a Scotch family that located in Westchester county at an early day.

His grandfather Cunningham was a farmer there, and the late Edward H. Cunningham, our subject's father, was born there and passed his life in the same locality, engaged in the business of stove molding. He was an expert in his line, and for many years was superintendent of the Peekskill Stove Company. In later life he retired to a farm to end his days in the peaceful occupation of agriculture, his death occurring in 1886. His wife, Miss Phœbe A. Sutton, a member of one of the old pioneer families of Westchester county, died in 1870. She was born in Peekskill, where her father, a gas manufacturer, was a leading citizen. Our subject was the youngest in a family of nine children, the others being: Letitia, deceased; John, a resident of Peekskill; Louisa, Mrs. Charles H. Hall, of Croton Landing; James, who resides in New York City; Ada, lately deceased, was the wife of Frank Norton, of Croton Landing; Dirlin, the sixth in order of birth; George, a resident of Arkansas City, Kans.; and Fannie, deceased. Both parents were devout and consistent members of the M. E. Church, and were held in high esteem among their associates.

The early life of our subject was spent in his native town, his education being mainly acquired in the local schools. In 1884 he went to Matteawan and after a short course of study in the schools there, engaged in business at the corner of Fountain and Leonard streets as a wholesale and retail dealer in flour, feed, grain, baled hay, straw, and similar commodities. Starting practically without capital of his own, he has made his way to success, and is recognized as one of the leading business men of the town. His present extensive trade is still on the increase, and he devotes his attention to it, paying but little heed to politics. On June 3, 1896, he was married to Miss Jennie McCallin, an attractive young lady, the daughter of F. McCallin, a well-known citizen of Fishkill Landing.

WILLIAM J. WOOD, a prominent mason of Dover Plains, Dutchess county, whose skillful work in his chosen calling has given him more than a local reputation, is one of the rising young business men of that place.

His family originated in Scotland, where his grandfather, Thomas Wood, was born and educated. He came to America in early manhood and settled in Dutchess county, and he and his wife, Amy Elliot, reared a family of three children: John, who married (first) Miss Carlo, and (second) Miss Lottie Thomas; Lettie, who married Amos Jenkins; and William, our subject's father, who was born in 1832, and received a common-school education in the town of Dover. He then learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for many years. He was also interested in quarrying in the same town, and as an energetic business man took an influential part in local affairs. His first wife was Miss Helen Birch, daughter of Ethel and Gettie (Knickerbocker) Birch. Of the two children of this marriage our subject was the younger. The elder, Lettie D., born in 1861, died at the age of twenty. Mrs. Wood died in 1869, and our subject's father formed a second matrimonial union, this time with Mrs. Mary Allen, who died in 1890, leaving no children.

William J. Wood was born in 1863, and was educated in the public schools of his native town of Dover. He learned the mason's trade, and has now been successfully engaged in it for seven years, his business extending to all the neighboring towns. Politically he has always favored the Republican party, but he has not been an aspirant for public office. In 1883 he married Miss Emma Brown, and they have had two children: Lettia A., born in 1888, and David B., born in 1891.

Mrs. Wood's father, George H. Brown, was born and reared in Dover Plains, and afterward became a prominent farmer of that vicinity. In 1861 he enlisted at Poughkeepsie in the 150th N. Y. V. I., and served throughout the war, taking part in many important battles and gaining a commission. He married Rachel Ostrander, and had nine children: Maggie, who married Egbert Morey, and has one child—Mabel; (2) William, who married Martha Vincent, and has two children—Allen and Frank; (3) Emma, Mrs. Wood; (4) Lotheria, who married William Dennis, and has three children—Hazel, Louis, and one whose name is not given; (5) Elizabeth, who married George Root, and has one child—Nellie. The four remaining children, Charles, George, Myron and John, are not married. Rachel Ostrander, Mrs. Wood's mother, was born and educated in Amenia. Her father, Jacob Ostrander, was a native of the town of Milan, and received his education there, engaging afterward in agriculture. He married, and reared a family of children, of whom Mrs. Wood's mother was the youngest. The others are: James; Mary, Mrs. Adam Waldron; Lottie, Mrs. Royal Halleck; Carrie, Mrs. George Murphy; Kittie, and Amy.

THOMAS G. ALDRIDGE, of the firm of Aldridge & Covert, leading merchants at Dutchess Junction, Dutchess county, is one of the self-made business men, whose ability and enterprise have done so much to build up the trade of their respective communities.

His grandfather, Daniel Aldridge, a man highly esteemed in his day, married Jane Edwards, and had four children: (1) Thomas, who married, and had eight children—Benjamin, William H., Thomas, Jr., Aaron E., Theresa J., Alfraetta, George L. and Gertrude. (2) William, our subject's father. (3) Edward. (4) Ella.

William Aldridge was a native of Orange county; he married Jeannette Simpson, by whom he had seven children: Edward L. (deceased), Lemuel E., Ella A., Jennie (deceased), Thomas G., Charles and William S. During the Civil war Mr. Aldridge enlisted in the United States service for three years. Before he left Albany on his way to the front his wife died, leaving the little family bereft of the care of both parents. At the expiration of his first term the father re-enlisted, and served until the close of the war, when he returned home and resumed his business of brick-making, in which he was very successful, being a thorough master of all branches of the trade. He died in Kansas City, Mo., in 1878.

Thomas G. Aldridge was born December 12, 1853, at Dutchess Junction, N. Y., and has made his own way in life from the time of his mother's death, when he was only twelve years old. He secured employment upon a schooner which was engaged in the brick carrying trade between Dutchess Junction and New York City. After three years at this work he made a practical study of steam engineering, and at eighteen was put in charge of a brick plant at Dutchess Junction. He held this position until 1892, when he formed his present partnership and engaged in the grocery and meat business, of which he has made a success. On December 8, 1880, he married Miss Alida Covert, daughter of Nathaniel and Catherine (Jones) Covert; their only child died in infancy.

Mr. Aldridge is not a politician in the strict sense of the word, but he takes a patriotic interest in public affairs, and is an earnest supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

EVAN BRYANT, of Bryant Bros., proprietors of the "Standard House," Fishkill, Dutchess county, is one of the most enterprising young business men of that vicinity. He is of English descent, the old home of his family being in Gloucestershire, England, where his great-grandfather, Richard Bryant, and his grandfather, Jonathan Bryant, were born and spent their lives in the hatter's business. His father, Samuel Bryant, was also born in England, and previous to coming to America in 1855, learned the same trade. He is now a resident of Matteawan.

Evan Bryant was born in Brewster, Putnam county, July 14, 1863, and was but two years old when his parents moved to Matteawan, where he grew to manhood, attending the public schools. He also acquired a knowledge of the hatter's trade, and for fourteen years followed it there and in different places in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Canada. On November 13, 1894, he established his present hotel and saloon business at Fishkill, in partnership with his brother Edward. Neither is married. They take great interest in public questions, and while they are steadfast supporters of the Republican party so far as national issues are concerned, Mr. Bryant is not bound by partisan ties in local affairs, voting for men and measures which, in his judgment, will advance the best interests of the community.

GEORGE S. AUCOCK is one of the representative and prominent merchants of Red Hook, Dutchess county, N. Y., where his birth occurred in 1862. His educational privileges were quite good, he having been able to attend the De Garmo Institute, Rhinebeck, N. Y. In 1889 he established his present general store in the village of Red Hook, which sprang at once into public favor, and he is now at the head of a large and constantly increasing business. In 1886 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Vosburgh, a daughter of Ward Vosburgh, one of the leading farmers of the town of Ancram, Columbia county, N. Y., and they have become the parents of one child, Bessie, born in 1888.

Robert Stephenson, the great-grandfather of our subject, was born in Snaith, Yorkshire, England, where he was educated, and when quite a young man began dealing in live stock. Later, in connection with this, he also engaged in the butcher's business at that place. He wedded Miss Watson, of Scotland; and to them were born five children: William, who for his second wife married a Miss Collins; Sarah, Mrs. Anna Oxenforth; Jane; and Eliza, who became the wife of Charles Bean. The second child, Sarah Stephenson, was born in 1804, at Snaith, of which place the other children were also natives, and in the common schools there she received her education. She married William Aucock, a son of Jonathan Aucock, of Snaith, Yorkshire. At that place the son engaged in carpentering most of his life, and was a prominent member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in his native land. Eleven children were born to William Aucock and his worthy wife, namely, Elizabeth, who became the wife of Henry Siberan; Christina, who wedded Jeremiah Needham; Jonathan, who married Ann Morgan; John and Robert, who died in infancy; William, the father of our subject; Robert, who married Catherine Martin; Eleanor, who became the wife of Joseph Green; Sarah, who, after the death of her first husband, Thomas Hanpson, became the wife of a Mr. Jones; and George and John, who were also married. The mother of these children died in England in 1881.

The father of our subject was born in Snaith in 1831, and after completing his education in the public schools he learned the art of fancy gardening and plant culture on the estates of the Campbells, in Sheffield, England, where he was employed for some time. Like his ancestors, he became a member of the Odd Fellows Society of his native place, and stood quite high in the order. In 1855 he emigrated to the United States, making his first location on Hunters Island, where he remained for about two months, and then went to Toronto, Canada. At the end of ten months, however, he returned to the States, locating this time at Annandale, Dutchess county, where the following two years were passed. After a year spent at Newark, N. J., he came again to Dutchess county, and has now made his home in the town of Red Hook for thirty-seven years, being employed there on the estate of the Tynpsons. He was joined in wedlock with Miss Eliza Cooper, daughter of Robert and Anna Cooper, of New York City. They became the parents of four children: Mary, born in 1859; George S., of this sketch; Sarah, born in 1865, and William C., born in 1868. The third child of this family, Sarah, is now the wife of Charles Burnea, son of Charles E. and Mary Burnea, of Philadelphia, where the son is engaged as a decorator and designer. Two children grace this union—Marie Gerard, born in 1891, and William A., born in 1894.

On his mother's side, our subject is also descended from English ancestry, his great-grandfather, Robert Cooper, being born in England, and there married. In his family were the following children: Joseph, James, Robert, Mary, Eliza, Sarah, Betsy and Nancy. Of these, Robert Cooper, Jr., was born in Manchester, England, whence he removed to the North of Ireland, and there engaged in farming. He was married to Miss Anna Morehead, a daughter of John Morehead, of England, and to them were born the following children: Mattie, who was three times married, her first husband being James Lawrence, the second, Claudius Dord, and the third Robert Dunlap; James, who wedded Mary Liddle; Joseph, who married a Miss Cooper; Robert, who remained single; Mary, who became the wife of Pierson Hyde; and Eliza, the mother of our subject.

CHARLES REDAVATS, proprietor of a boarding and training stable at Green Haven, was born in the town of Beekman, March 29, 1833, and is the son of John J. Redavats, a native of Italy, who left home at the age of eighteen years, coming to America, where he enlisted in the United States navy. For a number of years he was on a man-of-war, and after leaving the service came to Beekman town, Dutchess county, locating at Green Haven, where he followed the carpenter's trade for the remainder of his life. Here he married Miss Ann Clarkson, a daughter of Charles Clarkson, and to them were born four children: Mary Jane, who wedded Aldest Terwilliger, but both are now deceased; George, deceased; Charles, of this sketch; and Joseph, of Danbury, Conn. The father was first a Whig in politics, but joined the Republican party on its organization, with which he continued to affiliate up to the time of his death, which occurred when he was sixty years of age. His wife departed this life at the age of sixty-five years.

The boyhood days of our subject were passed at Green Haven, he living with W. B. Sheldon for seven years in order to pay for two acres of land on which his father had erected a house, and later worked for George B. Foote for five years. In the town of Beekman, he was married to Miss Mary Jane Griffen, and they became the parents of six children, as follows: William, who was a conductor on a construction train on the New England railroad, was killed by accident; Theodore died at the age of five years; Charles died at the age of two years; Clara is the wife of William E. Williams, by whom she has two children, Charles and Leland; Frank is in the office of the Old Colony Line railroad, at Boston, Mass.; and Jennie.

For six years after his marriage, Mr. Redavats made his home near Rahway, N. J., being superintendent of the farm and stable of George F. Fellows, and then returned to Beekman township, where he engaged in the horse business at the stock farm belonging to Merritt & Allerton for four years. After their failure he remained with their successors for one year, and then purchased his present place and went into business for himself. He conducts a good boarding and training stable, and is now at the head of a large and constantly increasing business. Like his father was, he is an ardent Republican in politics, and takes an active interest in the success of his party. He is numbered among the best citizens of the community, and is a wide-awake, energetic business man and the architect of his own fortune.

CRAWFORD C. MACNEIL, of Matteawan, a leading wholesale and retail dealer in confectionery and ice cream, and proprietor of a popular restaurant on Union street, is a descendant of the famous Scottish Clan MacNeil, one of his ancestors in the direct line being Sir John MacNeil.

Crawford C. MacNeil was born at Red Hook, Dutchess county, May 30, 1844, the son of Hector and Jane (Craig) MacNeil. They had nine children: Jane, John, Kate, Agnes, Crawford C., Serena, Hector, Robert and Charles.

Our subject was educated in the public schools near his early home, and on the removal of the family to Poughkeepsie in 1850, he entered the employ of Smith Bros., confectioners and caterers, remaining until 1873, when he opened a similar establishment of his own. He was burned out during the first year, and in the spring of 1874 he removed to Matteawan and again started in business, this time in a small way. As success rewarded his efforts, he gradually enlarged and improved his establishment until it is now one of the most complete of its kind in the county. Mr. MacNeil has an inventive turn of mind, and is the originator of that far-famed drink, ice-cream soda water. He introduced it to the public while he was with the Smith Bros. and the beverage soon became a favorite in all parts of the country. He has also originated a number of new popular styles of candy, including the American mixed candy, for which there has been a large demand. His present prosperity is well deserved as it is based upon his own industry and judicious management.

Mr. MacNeil married Miss Alice Trow, daughter of William and Jane Trow, of Poughkeepsie, and they have one son. They are prominent members of the Presbyterian Church of Matteawan, and take a generous interest in all progressive movements in the locality. Although he is a Republican in principle, Mr. MacNeil has never taken any part in political work or aspired to office. He is active in many non-political enterprises, however, and is a member of Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 266,

F. & A. M., of Hudson River Lodge, K. of P., and of the Nineteenth Separate Company of Poughkeepsie, in which he won an elegant gold medal presented by the State for long and faithful service, the records placing him twentieth in rank among 13,000 men. He has also been a member of the National Guard for thirty-four years, and was in the volunteer service during the Civil war.

WILLIAM C. CRAMER. The subject of this personal history is a resident of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he is successfully carrying on a boot and shoe store, and is well esteemed as a man of industry and enterprise, besides being a worthy citizen and having to his credit an unblemished war record. He was born in the town of Red Hook, May 11, 1844, and is a son of Henry A. and Catherine (Waldorf) Cramer, who were the parents of five children, the others being: Balinda, John V. R., George H. and James. The father was a son of George Cramer, and was a prosperous farmer and carpenter of Red Hook.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, John Waldorf, was born and educated in Red Hook town, where he later followed the occupation of a farmer, owning and conducting the large and well-stocked farm which had belonged to his father, who had erected the commodious and substantial stone house that is still standing. The place comprised 500 acres of valuable land, and thereon John Waldorf reared his family of seven children, namely: David, Christopher, John, William, Catherine, Maria and Betsey. In that old house Mrs. Cramer was born and spent her early girlhood, being educated at the schools of the neighborhood.

In his boyhood William C. Cramer also drew his education from the common schools of the town of Red Hook, and on laying aside his text books assisted in the cultivation and improvement of the home farm until the breaking out of the Civil war in 1861, when he enlisted in the 91st N. Y. V. I., and remained in the service until after the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomatox. He participated in various engagements, and signalized himself by bravery and fidelity to duty, receiving the approval of his officers and the warm friendship of his comrades. After the close of the war he went to the oil fields of Pennsylvania, where he remained for some time, and then conducted a general trucking business in New York City for a while. After disposing of that, however, he returned to Red Hook.

On August 28, 1868, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Cramer and Miss Isabella D. Barringer, daughter of Robert Barringer, of Red Hook, and to them was born a daughter, Ida L., who died at the age of six years. After his marriage, our subject learned the cooper's trade, at which he worked until 1888, when he established his present boot and shoe business at Red Hook, and this venture has proved very successful.

Mr. Cramer is quite prominently identified with the Odd Fellows Society, belonging to Christian Lodge, in which he has served as past grand and passed through all the chairs; is also a member of Jazar Encampment, of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county; and the Odd Fellows Mutual Benefit Association. He now affiliates with Armstrong Post, G. A. R., of Rhinebeck, but was formerly a member of Ward B. Bennett Post, of Tarrytown, Westchester Co., N. Y. He is a public-spirited, progressive man, and takes an active interest in the welfare of his town and county.

HENRY D. CYPHER, who is engaged in general farming at Poughquag, town of Beekman, Dutchess county, is looked upon as a useful and honorable citizen, who has the best interests of the county at heart, and does all in his power to advance its welfare. Of Holland ancestry, his birth occurred at Poughquag, December 18, 1836, and there almost his entire life has been passed.

Thomas Cypher, his grandfather, was a native of Westchester county, and when a young man came to Beekman town, locating on Clapp Hill, where he engaged in farming on rented land. His political support was given the Whig party. He wedded Mary Hillaker, by whom he had seven children, all now deceased: John, Deborah, Thomas, David, William, Mary and one daughter, who died in childhood.

On Clapp Hill, William Cypher, the father of our subject, was born in 1806, and in the common schools of Beekman town he secured his education. When he had reached maturity he was united in marriage with Emily Armstrong, a native of Connecticut, after which he purchased a small farm at Poughquag, which he operated for one year, and then removed to the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, where he followed the same occupation until called from this life February 2, 1849. Like his father he was a Whig in politics. In his family were these children: Henry D., of this sketch; George and Elisha, deceased; and two sons, who died in infancy.

The early school days of Henry D. Cypher were passed at Poughquag, and after the death of his father he, with the other members of the family, returned to that place, being at the time thirteen years of age. In 1851 he began clerking for James A. Vanderburg, at Poughquag, which position he held for one year, and in 1853 went to New York City, where he was employed in a grocery store for the same length of time. Returning to his native place, he learned the carpenter's trade with Henry Armstrong, which he followed for eight years.

In the town of Beekman, July 1, 1863, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Cypher and Miss Maria Noxon, daughter of Elmer R. Noxon, and they became the parents of four children: Lavert, of Brooklyn, who married Mr. Devine, by whom she has one daughter; George; Emily, wife of Fred Coleman, of Dover town, Dutchess county, by whom she has two children—Delmer Clayton and Ann Dutcher; and Robert.

Until 1871 Mr. Cypher carried on agricultural pursuits in the western part of the town of Beekman, after which he removed to his present farm at Poughquag, which was cleared by Mrs. Cypher's great-grandfather Noxon, and has since devoted his attention to its cultivation and improvement. His ballot is cast in support of the men and measures of the Republican party. He has been assessor of his town, and is still acceptably filling the offices of commissioner of highways and justice of the peace. His career has been one of the strictest integrity and honor.

CHARLES F. WANZER, a wealthy business man of Matteawan, Dutchess county, and the proprietor of one of the oldest groceries in that town, was born January 29, 1828, on the "Wheeloche Farm" near Garrison, Putnam Co., N. Y. His grandfather, Abraham Wanzer, married Lydia Beers, and their son, Floyd, our subject's father, was a well-known farmer of Putnam county. He married Jane Foster, daughter of Joseph Foster, a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and had five children, of whom the first two died in infancy. The others are Charles F., Elizabeth and Colista Jane.

Charles F. Wanzer attended the district schools near his home during boyhood, and spent much of his time in working upon his father's farm. At the age of twenty-one he left home to make his own way in the world, and coming to Matteawan he worked for several years at various employments, as opportunity favored him. In 1854 he became a clerk in the grocery store then belonging to Jacob Palmer, and after the death of the latter in 1856 he conducted the business for his widow for one year. He then purchased the store, and for thirty-eight years has continued the business at the old location. His success is a result of untiring industry, and although he is an ardent Republican, he has invariably declined when urged to accept nomination for office, because he could not see his way clear to attend to his own affairs and at the same time meet satisfactorily the demands which official position would bring. He is interested in various lines of business, having a large amount of money invested in real estate in the village, and he has been for many years a member of the Board of Trade and the Merchants Protective Association. He is also a stockholder in the First National Bank of Fishkill Landing. Being an enthusiastic hunter, Mr. Wanzer spends considerable time during the duck-shooting season in hunting this most palatable fowl. He is an unerring marksman, and woe betide the unlucky bird upon which he sets his "weather eye," for its doom is sealed.

ROBERT JOHNSTON. Among the most prominent of the early residents of Lake Mahopac, Putnam county, was Robert Johnston, the grandfather of the subject of this sketch. He came to this country from Ireland in early manhood, and engaged in mercantile business, first in New York City, and later in Putnam county, where he became a leader in political as well as in commercial circles. He was an influential Democrat, and served as county judge, member of the State Senate, and member of the Council of Appointment and Revision. He was married after coming to the United States, and reared a family of six children: One son, William H. Johnston (our subject's father), and five daughters, one of whom became the grandmother of Chauncey M. Depew.

William H. Johnston followed farming and spent his life at Lake Mahopac, his native place. Like his father, he was an active and influential worker in the Democratic party, and he held the offices of sheriff and surrogate of Putnam county. His death occurred in 1828, but his wife, Susan Van Wyck, lived to the age of ninety-eight years, passing to her eternal reward in 1885; she was born in the town of East Fishkill, Dutchess county, in the house now occupied by our subject, the old home of her family. Her grandfather, William Van Wyck, a native of Dutchess county, was a farmer there. He had four sons: William, a politician of note, and a Congressman from his district, was a farmer by occupation, first in his native place and later in Virginia; Theodorus is mentioned below; Samuel was a lawyer in New York City; and John followed farming near the old home. Theodorus Van Wyck (Mrs. Johnston's father) married Miss Young, of Westchester county, N. Y., and settled at the homestead, where they reared a family of six children: Two sons—Theodorus and William—who both followed agriculture in their native town, and four daughters—Martha, Susan, Sarah and Ann.

Robert Johnston, our subject, was born at Lake Mahopac, November 24, 1824, the second of the three children of his parents, and is now the only surviving member of the family. The eldest, Sarah, never married, and the youngest died in infancy. When Robert was five years old he came to his mother's old home, and has lived there ever since. He owns an estate of about 300 acres, and is engaged in general farming, also giving considerable attention to horticulture. An intelligent, progressive man, he is highly esteemed among his neighbors. In politics he was originally a Whig, voting for Henry Clay, and on the organization of the Republican party he gave it his allegiance.

EDWARD L. RYMPH, a retired farmer and fruit raiser of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Hyde Park, Dutchess county, March 29, 1831.

James Rymph, grandfather of our subject, was born in Holland, came to America when a young man and settled on a farm in Hyde Park, where he built his own house in the wilderness, married, and reared a family of several children. John Rymph, one of these, was reared on the farm, and boated on the Hudson river. He was united in marriage with Miss Wynche Hasbrouck, who was born in Ulster county, in the town of New Paltz, October 21, 1787. They were married February 11, 1808. She was a descendant of the old Hasbrouck family of New Paltz. Mr. and Mrs. Rymph settled down on the farm, and the following children were born to them: Mariah, born November 4, 1808, married Abram S. Du Bois, a farmer in the town of Lloyd, Ulster county; James, born May 28, 1810, was a farmer in Dutchess county; Margaret, born May 28, 1812, married Benjamin L. Hasbrouck, a farmer of Ulster county; Sarah, born October 1, 1814, married Joseph Chambers, of Ulster county; William H., born October 4, 1816, was a farmer in the town of Clinton; Rachel B., born April 12, 1819, married John V. Schryver, a farmer of Hyde Park; John, Jr., born June 19, 1822, was a farmer; George, born April 7, 1824, followed farming in Ulster county; David H., born July 22, 1827, is still living, unmarried; Susan A., born September 20, 1829, died unmarried; Edward L. is our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Rymph were members of the Reformed Church. He died on the old farm.

Edward L. Rymph remained on the old homestead during his early life, and attended the district schools. In 1860 he married Miss Jane E. Palmer, who was born in Clintondale, Ulster county. She was a daughter of Harvey Palmer, a farmer and merchant of the same place, who came of English ancestors. Three children were born to our subject and his wife: Henry L. and Edwin H. (twins), and Mary E. Henry L. married Miss Smalley, and is farming in Poughkeepsie; Edwin H. died in infancy; Mary E. married Carl C. Todd, a farmer in the town of Hyde Park. Shortly after his marriage our subject went to Poughkeepsie, where he engaged in the photograph business for some time. Mrs. Rymph died March 24, 1864, and our subject went to the South and was with the construction corps in the Civil war, building bridges, etc., for one year. He then returned and bought a farm in New Paltz, on which he lived for two years, and then sold it. Coming to Dutchess county, he lived in Poughkeepsie for a year, later moving to Hyde Park and residing there for four years. In the spring of 1875 Mr. Rymph came to Poughkeepsie again, erected three fine buildings and has since resided here.

On October 24, 1866, our subject married Miss Martha A. Roosa, who was born in the town of Rochester, Ulster county, January 9, 1838. Her first husband was George Kelder, by whom she had one child, Simon J., who married Miss Jennie Sutton, of Newburgh. Jacob B. Roosa, Mrs. Rymph's father, was born in Rochester, April 27, 1810, and was married to Miss Nancy Anderson, of the same place. Two children were born to them: Elizabeth, November 27, 1831, married James J. Shurter, a farmer in Rochester; and Martha A., the wife of our subject. Mr. Roosa was a Democrat, and he and his wife were members of the Methodist Church. He died in 1874, his wife in 1844. Simon Roosa, the grandfather, was born on the homestead in Rochester, and followed farming. He was in the war of 1812. The great-grandfather, Jacob Roosa, was the original settler on the farm in Rochester. He came of Holland stock. James Anderson, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Rymph, was a farmer in Rochester, and married Miss Martha Merrit, of Marlborough. The Andersons were of English ancestry.

Our subject and his second wife had one child, William, born February 18, 1876, and died in April, 1876. Mr. Rymph has a farm of sixty-five acres on which he formerly raised fruit, but he is now living a retired life. In politics he is affiliated with the Republican party. He and his wife both attend the Methodist Church. Mr. Rymph is an energetic citizen, and has identified himself with many progressive movements.

EDWARD ENGLEHARDT. The subject of this sketch was born in the city of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, December 16, 1861. He attended school for a time at Lexington, Greene county, and at the Eastman Night School, but his opportunities were limited, and most of his education was acquired by private study. He has always been a constant reader and is a well-informed young man.

Our subject's first employment was with Alexander Ross at the age of thirteen years. One day when coming through the railroad yards he was run over and lost his right leg. Upon his recovery he again worked for Mr. Ross, remaining with him until nineteen years old. He then secured the position of flagman on the Hudson River railroad, which he retained for five months, and then went to work at Poughkeepsie making boxes. He kept at that for a year, and then learned the coopering trade, working for Atto Faust, for whom he worked as a journeyman until 1885. He next went into the saloon business for a year, but returned to his trade and was employed by James Buckhurst until 1891, when he went to Sing Sing as a keeper, being appointed to that position by Governor Flower. He resigned July 22, 1892, and came to Poughkeepsie and again worked for Mr. Buckhurst. In the fall of 1893 he was elected supervisor of the First ward for two years. He was chairman of the printer's committee, member of the committee on coroners and accounts and on committee on public institutions in the session of 1894. He held other positions of trust and responsibility. He was janitor of the board of supplies for one session, and has filled the office of county sealer for two successive terms. He has taken an active part in politics, and is a leader among the people of his ward.

In March, 1880, Mr. Englehardt was married to Miss Rosanna Kirby, of Poughkeepsie, and the following children were born to them: Carrie died at the age of three years; Lucy, Elizabeth, George, Augusta, Gertrude, Edmond. Our subject is a member of the Catholic Benevolent Legion and, with his wife, is a member of the Roman Catholic Church.

Christian Englehardt, father of our subject, was born in Denmark in 1814, and came to America and engaged for a time in the cooper business in New York City, then went to Albany. He came to Poughkeepsie upward of fifty years ago, and worked as journeyman cooper for Sleight & Paulding, who started their shop in 1847, and with whom he has been ever since. He was married in Germany, and the following children were born to them: Charles, living in Elizabeth, N. J.; Martha, who became the wife of Mathew Benhardt, of Poughkeepsie; Henry lives in Prattsville; Mary married Jacob Benhardt; Christian resides in Poughkeepsie; Elizabeth is the wife of Charles Adams, of Poughkeepsie; Alma married John Decker, and lives in Poughkeepsie; William, who lives in Poughkeepsie; Abram; George, deceased; and Edward. Christian Englehardt is one of the oldest citizens of Poughkeepsie. He is a Democrat, and a member of the German Lutheran Church.

JACOB SCHRAUTH, a retired merchant of Poughkeepsie and one of its most popular German citizens, was born at Kreuznach, in the Rhine Province, April 18, 1834, a son of John and Margaret (Wcyell) Schrauth, the former of whom was also born in Kreuznach, the latter in Waluff on the Rhine, Prussia.

John Schrauth, the grandfather of our subject, was a hotel-keeper at Kreuznach, of which place he was a native. He married, and to the union was born a large family of children. Their son, John, father of our subject, was also a hotel-keeper, and in connection with it followed the occupation of a farmer. In 1816, for his second wife, he married, Margaret Wcyell, and they became the parents of eight children, as follows: Jacob, Laura, Kate, Minnie, Julia, Louis, Eliza and Benia. Of these, Louis is a resident of Boston, and Eliza is the widow of Conrad Lembke, formerly a saloon-keeper in Highland. Our subject's parents spent their entire lives in their native land, where the father died in 1875 and the mother in 1885. They were members of the Lutheran Church.

Jacob Schrauth lived in his native town until twenty years of age, during which time he learned the cooper's trade. In 1854 he came to America, landing in New York City where he remained three years, and there learned the trade of a baker. In 1857 he came to Poughkeepsie, and for six years was employed as a baker by Robert High, the three following years working for P. S. Rowland. In 1866 Mr. Schrauth went into business for himself, renting a building at No. 153 Main street. In the following two years he made many improvements in the place and expanded his business by the introduction of ice-cream, confectionery, etc., carrying on two stores with all modern improvements, doing, in fact, an extensive trade. On May 1, 1897, his sons Edward L. and William H. purchased the business of their father, forming a co-partnership under the name of J. Schrauth's Sons. Being brought up under their father's careful training, they are well fitted to succeed him, and a successful future is predicted for them, especially if they follow in the footsteps of their predecessor, who is known to be an enterprising, progressive man, keeping abreast of the times, thoroughly understanding his business, courteous and obliging, and not only securing the best class of customers, but knowing how to retain them.

In 1860 Jacob Schrauth was married to Miss Kate Schneider, who was born at Kaiserslautern, Bavaria, Germany, and seven children have blessed this union: Charles, engaged in the confectionery business at Union-hill, N. Y.; one who died in infancy; Minnie, who married William H. Frank, a brewer at Poughkeepsie; Edward L., of the firm of J. Schrauth's Sons; Kate, married to William La Paugh, of the firm of La Paugh & Son, in Poughkeepsie; William H., of the firm of J. Schrauth's Sons, and Cora, at home. Charles married Barbara Seifts, an orphan, and they had three children—Charles, Katie and Louis; Edward L. married Josephine C. Beigle, daughter of the late Leonard Beigle; William H. wedded Matilda Seeholtzer, daughter of Berthold Seeholtzer, and they have one child—Edna. Edward L. and William H. are both members of Fallkill Lodge No. 297, I. O. O. F., and the former is also identified with the Phoenix Hose Co., Poughkeepsie.

Our subject and his amiable wife are consistent members of the German Lutheran Church, in the work of which they are always ready to assist. In his political views he is a Republican, and for two years was a member of the board of water works of Poughkeepsie. Like most Germans, he is a lover of music, and for twelve years was president of the German Singing Society. He is a member of Adler Lodge No. 388, I. O. O. F.

DAVID V. HAGGERTY, the leading florist of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in that city August 3, 1867, and although still a young man has shown more than average business ability, which has enabled him to push forward the enterprise begun by his father to a wonderful degree of success.

The Haggerty family is of Irish descent. The father of our subject, James Haggerty, was born in Brooksborough, Ireland. His father was a native of that place also, where he carried on farming or gardening. He had a family of six children, as follows: James; William, a farmer in Rhinebeck; Thomas, a florist in New York City; Jennie and Sarah, deceased; Mary, living in New York City. The family came to the United States and settled in Rhinebeck, where the father died.

James Haggerty had but meagre advantages for an education in his native country, but after coming to America he improved every opportunity to store his mind with useful knowledge. He was naturally gifted with a fine intellect, and was a great reader of all kinds of literature, but more especially of such as bore upon the vocation he adopted, that of a florist. During his life he kept well-posted on all topics relating to this branch of gardening, and was among the most progressive men in his business.

Mr. Haggerty's first employment was on the Ellerslie farm, which is now owned by Governor Morton, where he worked for Mr. James. He then went to Newburgh and was in the employ of Mr. Bridgman, who subsequently placed him in his large florist establishment in New York City. There he remained until removing to Poughkeepsie and going into business for himself. He first built a small greenhouse just south of the old reservoir on South Clinton street, which was the first of the kind in the city. From there he moved to No. 181 Main street, where he built a greenhouse and also carried on a seed store, then bought the property at No. 381 on the same street, and erected the large and commodious building which he afterward occupied. In 1867 he bought the T. H. Leggett property of ten acres near Poughkeepsie, to which he added from time to time until it comprised thirty acres. On this he built an extensive greenhouse covering two acres, the largest probably in the county, and here carried on a most flourishing business until his death, which event took place December 17, 1881. He was a man of great energy and unflagging industry. He was successful in almost everything he attempted, and accumulated a comfortable fortune. In his political views he was a Republican, but never took an active interest in public affairs other than that which every good citizen should. Both he and his wife belonged to the Methodist Church, and were members of the choir. He was for many years one of the most prominent members of the New York Horticultural Society, and served one term as its president. In all the relations of life he was generous, kind and helpful, and stood high both among his associates in business and in social circles. He was married to Miss Rebecca Vail Hyde, daughter of Liberty Hyde, of Pleasant Valley. Five children were born of this union: William, deceased; John, David Vail, Susanna and Margaret.

David V. Haggerty obtained his education in the Poughkeepsie schools, and then went to Washington, Conn., where he studied the florist's business. He left school in 1885 in the last year of his course, and the following year took charge of the property for his mother until he became of age in 1889, when he and his brother John bought the entire property with the exception of his mother's interest, she remaining a member of the firm, which is known as R. V. Haggerty & Sons. Our subject has taken the active management of the business, which has steadily increased. He has become one of the largest producers in the county, and the greenhouses are the largest in the State. He has inherited much of his father's ability and persistence, and is fully as progressive and interested in his work. He keeps abreast of the times in all discoveries and experiments in his line, and by his fair methods of dealing and courteous manners to all has drawn about him a large number of steady customers as well as many personal friends. Like his father was, he is a Republican and a Methodist, and is prominent in both these organizations. He is a member of the order of St. John, and for eight or nine years has been a member of the Davy Crockett Hook and Ladder Company. In 1889, he was married to Miss Isabella, daughter of Frank Robson, and three children have been born to them: Gladys, James Donald and John Francis.

ABRAM V. V. HAIGHT, the able secretary of the Poughkeepsie Transportation Co., and one of the leading citizens of the county seat (Dutchess county), was born August 24, 1842, in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, on an estate which had been in the possession of his family for many years. His ancestors came from Connecticut at an early period, locating in the town of Fishkill, where his grandfather, Joseph Haight, was a prominent farmer. He married Hannah Dudley, a member of an old and highly esteemed family of that vicinity, and had four children: Elizabeth, who married Henry Van Voorhis; Minerva, who married Thomas Burrows; Cornelius J., our subject's father; and Hannah, the wife of Peter Burchen, who was for some time the principal of Dutchess County Academy.

Cornelius J. Haight was born June 22, 1817, at the old homestead, five miles from the village of Fishkill, and lived there until he was thirty-three years old, when he went to Buffalo and engaged in the commission business on the dock, dealing in flour, grain and other commodities, his firm being known as Ward & Haight. In 1857 he returned to Poughkeepsie and engaged in the wholesale flour trade, continuing in same line for several years. Later he took charge of the interests of the Manhattan Iron Co., first in Pawling and then at Sharon Station, in which latter place he remained until his retirement from active business in 1883. Since that time he has made his home in Poughkeepsie. He is a well-read man, notwithstanding the cares and distractions of his years of successful business life. He is a leading member of the First Reformed Church, and is held in high regard among all classes for his sterling characteristics. Politically he is a Democrat, and his active interest in party affairs has caused him to be chosen to public office at different times. He married Elizabeth Van Vorhis, a descendant of a pioneer family of the town of Fishkill, and a daughter of Abram Van Vorhis, a leading resident there. They had five sons: Henry E., who resides at Sharon; Abram V. V., our subject; Joseph F., assistant cashier of the Pawling Bank; Lewis, who died at the age of two years; and Edward S., the assistant postmaster at Poughkeepsie, and who for two years previous to receiving that appointment was city treasurer.

Abram V. V. Haight received his early education in the schools of his native district, graduating in 1856 from school No. 10. When he was examined for admission to the high school, only twenty-seven out of a class of fifty passed the examination. He possesses fine natural abilities, and has kept well-informed upon a wide range of subjects. His first employment was with his father in Poughkeepsie, but at the age of twenty he went to New York City, where for over a year he was clerk in a commission house. In 1863 he enlisted in the U. S. Navy, and served "before the mast" until the close of the war. Returning to Poughkeepsie, he was employed as a clerk for seven years by Carpenter & Bro., and for one year was clerk of the "Morgan House." In 1871 he engaged in the freighting business with Doughty, Cornell & Co., at the Upper Dock, but on the consolidation of the Upper and Main street docks in 1874, he took the position of head bookkeeper for the Poughkeepsie Transportation Co. In 1880 he was elected secretary of the company, in which he had become a shareholder, and has discharged his duties with energy and judgment, his success winning for him a high standing among the business men of the city.

On December 1, 1875, Mr. Haight married Miss Ida T. Paulding, a daughter of William Cooper, formerly a leading cooper of Poughkeepsie. Three sons were born of this union: Burton C., who died at eighteen years of age; Harry Lown, and Abraham Van Vorhis, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Haight attend the First Reformed Church, and contribute to the support of various worthy movements in the community. On State and National issues Mr. Haight votes the Republican ticket, but in local affairs he gives his influence and his ballot to the best man. He served as police commissioner under Mayor Rowley, and has been urged to accept the nomination for mayor on two different occasions. Socially, he belongs to the Veteran Firemen's Association and to the F. & A. M., Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 266.

SELWYN A. RUSSELL, M. D. This well-known and popular physician was born in Jay, Essex Co., N. Y., February 12, 1851, and attended the district and private schools of that town. In 1874 he went to Albany and began the study of medicine, graduating with the class of 1877.

After graduating Dr. Russell was appointed resident physician of the Albany Hospital, and remained there until 1879, when he accepted a position on the medical staff at the State Hospital at Utica, holding that position until 1883, at which time he resigned and went to Europe for the purpose of completing his medical education. He spent one winter in London and one in Vienna, where he had a great deal of practical experience. He remained in Vienna until the spring of 1884, and then returned to Albany and began the practice of medicine there in partnership with Samuel B. Ward, a prominent physician, with whom he practiced until 1888, when our subject, in connection with his medical work, made a tour of the world, sailing from New York in February, around Cape Horn, arriving at San Francisco in June. Thence he went to China and Japan, returning to Albany in 1889.

On April 25, 1889, Dr. Russell was united in marriage with Miss Lucy H. Harris, a daughter of the Hon. Hamilton Harris, the prominent politician and lawyer. After his marriage, the Doctor continued his practice in Albany until 1891, when he accepted a position in the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie, where he remained until April, 1894, at which time he resigned on account of ill health, and has since been occupied with a general practice. Previous to his trip around the world Dr. Russell was the attending physician of St. Peter's Hospital, and an instructor in physical diagnosis in the Albany Medical College. Dr. and Mrs. Russell have two children, Selwyn, born in 1890, and Hamilton H., born in 1893. Fraternally our subject is a Mason.

G. B. Russell, father of our subject, was born in Essex county, January 2, 1822, and grew to manhood on the old home place. He married Miss Charlotte Fisher, whose birth took place in Beekmantown, Clinton Co., N. Y., October 11, 1821. After their marriage the couple settled on a farm in Essex county, and the following children were born to them: Marcus, who is a resident of Baltimore and a manufacturer of iron ware; Selwyn, our subject; Lottie became the wife of Frank Bruce, of Jay, who was a painter, and she died in 1880; John is a school teacher at Spartanburg, S. C. In early life Mr. Russell was a farmer and later became an iron maker at Jay. He was a Republican and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he took an active part. He died in 1883. Mrs. Russell died in 1867.

Sidney Russell, the grandfather, was also born in Essex county, where he grew up and was married. They had a family of eight children. He remained on his farm in Essex county, where his death occurred. Dr. Russell's maternal grandfather was a farmer. Both sides of the family were of English descent.

MORATIO N. BAIN, the well-known and popular hotel proprietor in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y., December 20, 1857, where he lived until he was seven years old. He first went to school at Palmyra, N. Y., then at Brewster, N. Y., later at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, and for a time at the Connecticut Literary Institute, Suffield, Conn., and then to a select school.

Upon finishing his education Mr. Bain remained at home until the death of his parents, after which he continued his father's hotel business until the lease expired of the "Poughkeepsie Hotel." In 1884 he leased the "Nelson House," a fine, large, brick building, capable of accommodating about two hundred people, and considered the best hotel in Poughkeepsie. In connection with the "Nelson House" Mr. Bain has a half-interest in the "Palatine Hotel" at Newburg, N. Y., which is considered the finest hotel on the Hudson, and which will accommodate some two hundred and twenty-five guests. His eldest brother, Francis N. Bain, is connected with him at the "Palatine" under the firm name of H. N. Bain & Co. Besides his interest in the two most popular hotels of the Hudson Valley, Mr. Bain is largely engaged in farming and stock raising, having two farms in the eastern part of the county, where he is successfully breeding high-class road and carriage horses, having exhibited his young stock at the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden for three years past with marked success.

Mr. Bain was united in marriage July 20, 1882, with Miss Carrie Belding, who is a native of Dover Plains, a daughter of David L. Belding, a farmer and stock dealer, and for several years president of the Dover Plains Bank. Our subject is a Republican, and a public-spirited man. He is a member of the F. & A. M., and of the Amrita Club, of Poughkeepsie.

Milton Bain (the father of our subject), who was born in Columbia county, married Miss Charlotte N. Nash, also a native of Columbia county. After their marriage they located at Chatham, where three children were born to them: Francis N., now one of the proprietors of the "Palatine Hotel," at Newburgh; Horatio, our subject; and F. R., a real-estate dealer in Poughkeepsie. Milton Bain was landlord of the "Stanwix Hall Hotel," at Chatham, for twelve or fourteen years, and sold out to take charge of a hotel in Palmyra, Wayne Co., N. Y., later going to Brewster, N. Y., where he conducted the "Brewster House," and then to Dover Plains, continuing in the same business, at the "Dover Plains Hotel" for about twelve years. In 1878 Mr. Bain came to Poughkeepsie and became proprietor of the "Poughkeepsie Hotel," which he carried on until his death, in 1880; his wife had passed away one year previously. In politics Mr. Bain was a Republican, and at one time held the office of assessor of the county, and of deputy sheriff. The Bain family is of Scotch descent.

Alfred Nash, the maternal grandfather of our subject, was a native of Columbia county, where he practiced law. His father, Francis Nash, was a farmer in Columbia county.

NELSON DENTON. The branch of the Denton family of which the subject of this biography is a worthy representative, has been prominent in the vicinity of Whaley Pond, Dutchess county, for several generations. The first of the name to locate there was his great-grandfather, Solomon Denton, who came from Nova Scotia at a very early period. The tract of 365 acres which he acquired has never been alienated from the family, and in its entirety is now in the possession of George F. Denton, a brother of our subject. Solomon Denton's son, Solomon, and grandson, Solomon B., our subject's father, each in turn cultivated this estate, and were among the leading farmers of the locality. The members of this family have never taken a very active part in public affairs, although they have been interested in the questions of their time and have been regular voters, being Whigs in the early days and Republicans since the war issues arose. In their business management they were all thrifty and successful, and they have been active in religious work as members of the Second Baptist Church of Pawling.

Solomon the second, grandfather of our subject, and wife had six children, namely: Samuel, Amos, Josiah, Pattie (Mrs. Wright), Abram and Solomon B. Solomon B. Denton died September 20, 1885, at the age of seventy-five years, eight months and nine days. He was a deacon in the Baptist Church for about forty years, and no man in that vicinity was more highly esteemed. His wife was Harriet Luddington, a daughter of Frederick Luddington, a leading citizen of Luddingtonville, Putnam Co., N. Y. Six children were born to them, of whom our subject is the eldest. The others were: Augustus, now deceased; George, a hatter at Danbury, Conn.; Cecelia, who married Theodore Purdy, a carpenter of the same place; Emma, the wife of William F. Purdy, an engineer of East Orange, N. J.; and Carrie, who died at the age of four years.

Nelson Denton was born at the old homestead near Whaley Pond, May 26, 1845, and was educated in the schools of district No. 9, Pawling town, and in the old Poughkeepsie Academy. After completing his studies he engaged in mercantile business at Ludingtonville in 1864, forming a partnership with Joshua Griffith under the firm name of Denton & Griffith. They continued some time, when Mr. Denton sold his interest and bought a feed mill at Ludingtonville, which he conducted for three years. Disposing of this he followed agricultural pursuits for two years in Putnam county, N. Y., with his father-in-law, James Robinson, but later went to Danbury and was with H. A. Addis & Son for a year and a half. He then purchased a store at Pecksville, Dutchess county, and after three years rented another store where he spent two years; but in 1887 he erected his present convenient store building, where he has a trade in general merchandise such as is enjoyed by few country stores in southeastern Dutchess county. As a business man he has been very successful, and is one of the principal property holders in that section.

On August 3, 1871, Mr. Denton was united in marriage with Miss Albertine Robinson, who was born September 2, 1853, the daughter of a prominent farmer of Putnam county. They have had two children—Frederick S., born March 11, 1872; and Grace L., born December 27, 1882, both of whom are at home.

In politics, Mr. Denton is a Republican, but he has not given much attention to party work. He is public-spirited, however, thoroughly loyal to the best interests of his locality, and he is a leading member of the Baptist Church at Ludingtonville.

MARTIN LASHER, proprietor of a first-class hotel pleasantly situated at Upper Red Hook, Dutchess county, is a man of much experience and a good knowledge of business, and is conducting his present enterprise with marked success, winning popularity as a host who understands well how to cater to the wants of the public.

Mr. Lasher was born in 1822, at Clermont, Columbia Co., N. Y., where the birth of his father, Jonas Lasher, also occurred. There the latter was educated and followed the occupation of farming. He wedded Miss Barbara Sagendorph, and to them were born nine children: George, who married a Miss Barringer; Margaret, wife of Stephen Lasher; Mary, wife of Peter Fraleigh; Henry, who wedded Miss Proper; Helen, wife of Edward Coon; Martin, of this sketch; Augustus; Catherine, wife of John Morgan; and John.

In the common schools of Clermont, Martin Lasher acquired a practical education, which would fit him for the responsible duties of life, and began his business career as a farmer, following that occupation until 1850, when he opened a hotel at Red Hook, Dutchess county, which he continued to carry on until 1873. At that time he came to Upper Red Hook, where he purchased the buildings in which he now conducts a hotel with good success. He is a good citizen, an obliging landlord, and has the respect of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Lasher was united in marriage with Miss Mary Proper, daughter of Jonas and Eliza (Ten Broeck) Proper, and four children bless their union: Fannie, Lida, Maggie and Grace. Mrs. Lasher's parents were also natives of Columbia county, where the father followed farming. In their family were seven children, namely: Leonard, who wedded a Miss Hoffman; Mary, honored wife of our subject; Samuel, Edward, Philip and Walter, all of whom died at an early age; and Sarah, who became the wife of a Mr. Miller.

ANSON A. PLASS, an enterprising and successful business man of Red Hook, Dutchess county, and the proprietor of a well-known meat market there, was born in Clermont, Columbia county, in 1850.

Philip H. Plass, his father, was born and reared in the same locality, engaging in farming as he grew to manhood. Later he became the captain of a barge on the Hudson river, and followed boating for many years. He married Miss Catherine Stall, a daughter of William Stall, a prominent resident of Clermont, and reared a family of five children: William, Anson, Hermon, Mary E. and Elizabeth.

Our subject received his early education in the schools of his native place, and for a time was a farmer, and then followed his father's example and engaged in boating upon the Hudson. At the age of twenty-six years he learned the butcher's trade with Peter Rifenburgh, of Madalin, and started in business for himself at Clermont, continuing successfully for a number of years. Later he moved to Red Hook, and established a first-class business there, his ability and energy gaining for him the esteem of all classes. In 1874 he was united in marriage with Miss Hannah C. Rifenburg, a well-known resident of Clermont. Seven children were born of this union: Mary E., Fannie, Maud, Ina, Wilbur, Homer, and Foster.

EUGENE FOX is numbered among the prominent and progressive young men of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. He was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Benson, who was born in 1879, and belongs to a family whose identification with the interests of Dutchess county dates back several generations. Her great-great-grandfather, Jacob Benson, was born in Amenia, where he was reared and educated, and as a life work followed farming. He married Miss Lydia Thompson, and they had six children: Benjamin, who for his second wife, married Deborah Mackam; David, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Fox; Jacob, who married Martha Smith; Lydia, who married Daniel Darling; Susan, who married John Benson; and Hannah, who married Peter Hunt.

David Benson, an agriculturist, was also born at Amenia, and wedded Miss Susan Sprague, of Vermont. To them were born seven children: Jefferson; Joseph; Lansing, who married Rachel Patchin; William and Jacob, who remained single; David, who married Julia Cook; and Mary, who wedded Egbert Watts. Jefferson, the oldest son, was born, reared and educated in Amenia, Dutchess county, and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. By his marriage with Miss Fannie Glenn, he had five children: Jacob, who married Ruth White; Manassa, who never married; Eliza, who became the wife of Charles Davis; Phœbe, who married Phil Watts; and Sylvia, who remained single.

Joseph Benson, the second son, was the grandfather of Mrs. Fox. He was also a native of Amenia, and after his common-school education was completed followed the pursuit to which he had been reared—that of farming. He married Miss Helen Gillet, daughter of Richard and Mercy Gillet, agriculturists of the town of Dover. Five children graced this union. (1) Silas and (2) Charles never married. (3) Susan, who was born and educated in Amenia, married Albert Watts, a mason of Dover, and they have five children: Frances, who married Frank Silver, and has four children, Walter, Mary, Ethel and Mabel; Ellen, who married Shed Bates, and has three children, Carrie, Ellen and Wealthy; Carrie, who married Platt Reynolds, and has two children, Charles and Fred; Annie, who is single; and Charles, who married Miss Ford, and has one child, Mary. (4) Eleanor, who was also born and educated at Amenia, married Edwin Nightingale, a stone cutter of Massachusetts, and they have three children: John, who married Sadie Bates; Walter; and Helen. (5) Edwin, the father of Mrs. Fox, completes the family.

Edwin Benson was born in Amenia, in 1840, and obtained a common-school education there. When a young man he entered the employ of the Harlem railroad, with which he has been connected the greater part of his life. He is a prominent citizen, and has held a number of minor offices. He was married to Miss Adaline Powers, and they became the parents of two children: David, who was born in 1862, and married Henrietta Benson, by whom he has one son, Herbert; and Ellen, the wife of Eugene Fox.

John Powers, the grandfather of Mrs. Edwin Benson, and son of Joseph Powers, was a farmer of the town of Amenia, Dutchess county. By his marriage with Miss Clara Smith, he had one son, Gaylord, who was born and educated in the town of Amenia, where he also followed farming throughout life. He married Miss Abigail Watts, a daughter of David Watts, also an agriculturist of Amenia town, and seven children were born to them. (1) William, a native of Amenia, learned the machinist's trade, at which he worked for a number of years. He married Miss Delia Gordon. (2) Charles, a farmer, wedded Miss Mary Storms, and they had six children—Gusta, who married Benjamin Milton; Irving; Edwin; Flora; William and Arthur. (3) George never married. (4) John married Miss Josephine Vice, and to them was born a daughter—Sylvia. (5) Emma married Edwin Davis, a machinist of Pennsylvania, and they had seven children—Edward; Edna, who married Albert Norton, and has two children, Mabel and Sarah; Ella; Carrie; Frank; Lillie and Chester. (6) Mary wedded James Wheeler, a farmer and carpenter, and to them were born three children, who died when young—C. Edwin, William and John. (7) Adaline, the mother of Mrs. Fox, completes the family.

JOHAN MITCHELL, the well-known blacksmith and manufacturer of carriages and wagons, at Fishkill village, Dutchess county, is one of the most respected and influential residents of that place, his public spirit and efficiency as a citizen being no less marked than his ability in business. He was born October 29, 1821, in New York City, where he received his education in the public schools. In 1840 he came to Dutchess county and learned the blacksmith's trade, and later opened a shop at Fishkill which he conducted for several years. In 1844 he married Miss Elizabeth Webb, daughter of Henry Webb, a prominent resident of Fishkill, and established his home there. On the breaking out of the "Gold Fever," in 1849, he went to California to seek his fortune, and made a large amount of money in a short time. At first he worked at his trade for $12 per day, but soon went into business for himself and cleared on the average $50 daily for months. Sickness compelled him to return home in 1851, and he then purchased the property which he has since occupied as a wagon and blacksmith shop.

His high character and reputation for good judgment have given him the confidence of his fellow citizens to a gratifying degree. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has held several township offices, including those of commissioner, town clerk for eight years, collector for two years, and member of the Board of Excise for eighteen years. He has served on the Board of Education for thirty years. In 1890 Mrs. Mitchell died of pneumonia, after nearly half a century of wedded life. Of their seven children, the first two, Emerett and Mary Frances, are deceased. The survivors are Frederick, Walter, Laura, Bertha and John, Jr. The family has always been identified with the Reformed Dutch Church of Fishkill, and various members have taken active part in helpful movements in the community.

MRS. MARGARET TOFFEY CRAFT. The homestead of the Toffey family on Quaker Hill, near the famous "Mizzentop Hotel," is one of the beautiful country estates for which Dutchess county is noted, being situated in one of the most picturesque spots in this favored locality. John Toffey, the grandfather of our subject, Mrs. Craft, was the first of the name to occupy the farm, his last years being spent there in agricultural pursuits. He was a native of Long Island and received his education there, but in early manhood settled in Putnam county, N. Y., where he was engaged in the manufacture of hats for many years. He was married there to Miss Fowler, who died a few years later, leaving no children. His second wife was Miss Abigail Aiken, and to them five children were born, of whom the youngest was Daniel, Mrs. Craft's father. Of the others, Hewlit married (first) Miss Howland, and (second) Miss Scofield; Aiken married Ann Aiken; John married Esther Aiken; and George married Catherine Vandeburgh.

Hon. Daniel Toffey was born at the homestead and attended the common schools of the town of Pawling during his boyhood. He began farming at an early age, and later became a speculator in cattle for the New York City markets. In local politics his influence was marked, first as a Whig and afterward as a Republican, and he held numerous town offices, and served one term in the State Legislature. He married Miss Betsy Hollaway, daughter of Joseph and Olive (Aiken) Hollaway, her father being one of the prominent farmers of Hurd's Corners, Dutchess county.

Mrs. Craft was the eldest of a family of six children. Born in 1810, she was reared at the old home, enjoying the educational opportunities afforded by the neighboring schools. She married James Craft, a prominent merchant of Pawling, Dutchess county, and in their family are three children: Mary, born in 1834, is at home; Lydia, born in 1836, married Dr. Charles Taylor; and Anna, born in 1839, is the wife of Aiken Thomas.

Of the younger children of Daniel Toffey (2), George, born in 1811, became a well-known farmer and speculator. He and his wife, formerly Miss Mary Cook, reared a family of five children, all of whom married, as follows: Daniel—Miss Adaline Wilson; George—Miss Bessie Rodger; John—Miss Elizabeth Sip; William—Miss Emma Sip; and Mary—William B. Wheeler. (3) Ransom, born in 18—, and (4) Elizabeth, born in 18—, both deceased, were never married. (5) Olive, born in 1826, at the old homestead, was educated in Poughkeepsie. She married John L. Worden, then a midshipman in the United States navy, who rose by frequent promotions from that humble position to the rank of admiral, and distinguished himself during the Civil war by his ability and courage. He was born in 1818, at Sing Sing, and is now on the retired list with full pay, but unfortunately, through old age and over-anxiety, he has lost his mental balance. He is the only surviving admiral of all the gallant group that served so nobly in the Civil war. Two sons and two daughters were born to him. The eldest, John Lorimer Worden, Jr., was born in Washington, D. C., and was educated at West Point, receiving a commission as lieutenant, and was in command of troops at Sackett's Harbor, where his death occurred. He married Miss Annie Edison, but left no children. Daniel T. Worden was born and educated in New York City, and is now engaged in business there as a broker. He married Miss Emily Neilson, of Philadelphia, and has one daughter, Florence. Of Admiral Worden's daughters, Grace is at home, and Olivia married Lieut. Theron Busby, of the United States navy, a Southerner by birth, and has four children: Daniel, Gaston, Olive and Grace. (6) Daniel Toffey, Jr., Mrs. Craft's youngest brother, was born on Quaker Hill, in 1828, and after completing his studies in the local schools engaged in mercantile business in New York City. He married Miss Annie Robinson, and has no children.

JOHAN J. SPAULDING, a leading agriculturist of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, residing near Quaker Hill, is a man whose quiet influence had always tended to promote the progress of that locality. Born in that town in 1837, and educated in the common schools there, he has chosen to make it his permanent home, and has been engaged in his present calling since early manhood. He married Miss Phœbe J. Light, and has had three children: Henry, born in 1881, and Warren, born in 1889, are at home; and an only daughter, Agnes, born in 1886, died at an early age.

The Spaulding family has been identified with Dutchess county for several generations. Abram Spaulding, our subject's grandfather, was born and reared in the town of Dover, and later engaged in farming there. He and his wife, Elizabeth, reared a family of five children:

Uriah, who never married; John, our subject's father; Sallie, wife of Sanford Hoag; Lydia, wife of Warren Kerry; and Ann, who remained single.

John Spaulding first saw the light at the old homestead in the town of Dover, and after enjoying the usual educational privileges of a country boy, he made farming his occupation. He married Miss Marilla Elsworth, daughter of Platt Elsworth, and had thirteen children: George, who is not married; Jane, wife of James Evans; John J., our subject; Frank, who married Minerva Beers; Harrison, who married Lizzie Donehew; Abram, who died in childhood; William, who married Mary Miller; Nathaniel, who married Helen Osborne; Uriah, unmarried; Mary A., wife of Albert Redney; Sarah, deceased; Warren, who is single; and Myron, who married Juliette Light.

Mrs. Spaulding's paternal grandfather, John Light, was a native of Putnam county, N. Y., and was educated there, following afterward the business of farming. He married, and had three children: Mosman; Henry, who married Jane Ferris; and Jeremiah. Mosman Light, Mrs. Spaulding's father, was born in the town of Kent, Putnam county, and received his education in the common schools of the town. He also engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Sallie Ferris, daughter of John Ferris, a well-known farmer of Putnam county, and his wife, Phœbe. Eight children were born to this marriage: William, who married Mary J. Russell; John, who married Emily Smalley; Susan, wife of Enos Adams; Joseph, who married Phœbe Lee; Lansing, unmarried; Mrs. Phœbe Spaulding; George, deceased, who never married; and Charles, who married Laura Roscoe.

WILLIAM B. HUTTON, a well-known business man of Red Hook, Dutchess county, is a native of that town, his ancestors having been for many years engaged there in mercantile pursuits.

The late Jacob R. Hutton, his grandfather, was born there in 1816, and early in life became a merchant, dealing in general merchandise, boots and shoes and similar commodities, his store being located on East Market street. He continued the business until 1876, when he moved to Poughkeepsie and entered the employ of Howes & Co., manufacturers of shoes. He remained with them in a position of trust until his death, in 1890, after an exemplary and religious life of seventy-eight years. He was married at the age of eighteen to Miss Lydia C. Hoffman, of Red Hook, and reared a family of four children: William E., our subject's father; Nicholas R., who was married in 1865, to Miss Mary Hobbs; Fannie E., who married John ———, of Red Hook, in 1863; and Elizabeth H., who married Campbell B. Hicks in 1875.

William E. Hutton was born March 12, 1841, and after graduating from the Upper Red Hook Academy he entered his father's store as a clerk, and soon became a partner. On the dissolution of the partnership, in 1876, he established a general drug business at the same location, and conducted it until 1892, when he disposed of it to Claude E. Hicks, who sold it to Walter Van Steenburgh, the present proprietor. He married Miss Emeline C. Dunham, of Catskill, N. Y., in March, 1864, and has had six children: William B., born September 26, 1866; Grace M., September 27, 1869; Frank B., September 29, 1872; Emma, October 4, 1874; Mary, in January, 1876; and J. H., in January, 1876. The two younger daughters, Emma and Mary, died in infancy.

William B. Hutton, the subject proper of this sketch, attended the Upper Red Hook Academy for some time, and then entered St. Stephen's College at Annandale, graduating from the classical course in 1888. In 1890 he was graduated from the ——— Medical College at Albany, and soon after entered his father's drug store as prescription clerk, remaining until the disposal of the business, in 1892. Since that time he has been engaged in the stationery and news business, with a constantly growing trade. He was married March 23, 1890, to Miss Ida Yager, of Saugerties, their union being blessed with one child, Anna C. Hutton. A quiet gentleman, of scholarly tastes, Mr. Hutton holds the friendship of an exclusive circle of intimates, and the esteem of the entire community.

JOHN O. WIXOM, of the well-known firm of Wixom & Townsend, of Matteawan, Dutchess county, is one of the substantial young business men of that town. He is a descendant of one of the old families of Putnam county, N. Y., and was born there in the town of Kent, November 2, 1862. His great-grandfather was Elijah Wixom, whose son Elijah (2) married Hannah Robinson. Their son, Charles, our subject's father, was a farmer by occupation. He married Miriam Barrett, a daughter of Knowlton and Fanetta (Hazleton) Barrett, and had seven children, two of whom died in infancy. The others are Elijah K., Edwin C., Russell B., John O. and Cynthia F. The father is dead, but the mother is still living.

John O. Wixom attended the public schools near his home during his boyhood, and worked in the meantime upon the farm. At the age of sixteen he began his business career as a clerk in R. R. Meade's general store at Pecksville, Dutchess county, and after a year and a half there he entered the employ of S. G. & J. T. Smith, of Fishkill and Matteawan, and remained with them for eleven years. January 1, 1890, he purchased the interest of P. D. Holmes in the grocery firm of Holmes & Townsend, forming the present partnership. They carried a full line of groceries, and in the latter part of 1895 they added to this a well-stocked meat market, their expanding trade fully justifying them in the venture. The business interests of Mr. Wixom have occupied his attention too closely for him to take an active part in public affairs, but he is thoroughly loyal to his town, and is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He married Miss Jennie Haight, daughter of Theodorus Haight, a well-known farmer, and his wife, Deborah Lockwood, and they have one daughter, Ruth A. They are leading members of the M. E. Church at Matteawan, and take a generous interest in its work. Mr. Wixom is also a member of Beacon Lodge No. 283, F. & A. M.

JOHN L. WHITE, the well-known florist of Pawling, Dutchess county, is one of the most enterprising business men, and, beginning his career as a general farmer, he has developed a profitable and pleasing specialty. He was born in 1834, in Glenham, Dutchess county, and passed his youth there, his education being acquired in the public schools. He married Miss Lucy A. Turner, daughter of Stephen Turner, a leading agriculturist of the town of Pawling, and his wife, Sarah Eastwood. Of the three children of this union, the first two, Sarah and Ezra, deceased, never married. George the only surviving son, is the proprietor of a printing office at Pawling. He is a member of Patterson Lodge No. 173, I. O. O. F., and now holds the office of secretary. His wife, formerly Miss Alpha Mosier, is a daughter of Milton and Mary (Brown) Mosier, well-known farmers of the town of Pawling, and has one son, Clifton J.

The great-grandfather of our subject, Joseph White, was born and reared at Johnsville, N. Y., and became a farmer by occupation. He and his wife, Sarah, had several children, among whom was a son, Philip, our subject's grandfather, who was born in Dutchess county, and passed his life here, engaging in the business of clock making and in agriculture, which he followed for many years. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. He married, and reared a family of six children: Amsey, who married Miss West; Joseph; John, who married Polly Werden; Eli, our subject's father; Warren, who married Polly Turner; and Lucy A., deceased, who never married.

Eli White was a native of the town of Pawling, and the schools of that locality afforded him his only educational advantages. He became a painter by occupation. His wife was Miss Elizabeth Canif Hagaman, daughter of David Canif, and they had three children, of whom our subject was the youngest. Emma never married, and Cornelia married Kent Henyon, and had five children—Leona, who is now married; Coleman, who married Annie Merritt; William, who married Hattie Loeucs; Chester and Grace, unmarried.

Mrs. White is descended from a patriotic family, her father having served in the war of 1812, and her grandfather, Stephen Turner, in the Revolutionary war. The latter followed agriculture as an occupation. He and his wife, Amie, reared a family of six children: John; Caleb, who never married; Stephen, Mrs. White's father; Sarah, wife of Elijah Eastwood; Rhoda, wife of James Eastwood; and Maria, wife of Robert Brockway.

Stephen Turner was born in 1793, in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, and grew to manhood there. His gallant service in the war of 1812 entitled him to a pension, and he also drew 160 acres of land which he cultivated in his later years. He married Miss Sarah Eastwood, daughter of George and Rachel Eastwood. Her father was a well-known school teacher. Mrs. White was one of eleven children, who all married as follows: Alexander—Miss Margaret Brent; Caleb—Miss Catherine Morse; Lyman—Miss Pattie Daiken; Lydia—John Werdon; Henry—Miss Catherine Lent; Ferman—Miss Charlotte Turner; Robert—Miss Charlotte Fairchild; Peter—Miss Eliza Bullard; Lucy A.—John White; Emma J.—Gilbert Bullard; and Bennett—Miss Ann Eliza Washburn.

GEORGE FRANKLIN LEE, the genial and enterprising proprietor of the "Lee House," at Pawling, Dutchess county, has made that well-known hotel one of the best houses of its class in that locality. Energetic in action and sound in business judgment, his success is a natural result of his practical and effective management.

His family is of English origin, and several generations have made their home in Litchfield county, Conn., where George Lee, our subject's grandfather, was born. He passed his life there as a farmer. To him and his wife were born six children: Ward, the eldest; Jane, who married George Ferris and moved to Wisconsin; Sarah, wife of Charles Travis, of Yates county, N. Y.; Louisa, wife of George Travis, of Penn Yan, N. Y.; Emma, wife of George Wickam, of Havana, Schuyler Co., N. Y.; and Egbert, our subject's father, who was born at the old home, in Litchfield county, Conn. Egbert learned the blacksmith's trade, and, coming to Dutchess county in early manhood, followed that business in the town of Dover, and later in Clang Hollow, town of Unionvale, where he located about 1852. In 1865 he returned to Dover and worked for three years, and in 1874 gave up his trade to go into the hotel business at the old "Fowler House," in Hyde Park, in partnership with our subject. He remained there two years, and then moved to Poughkeepsie and bought a saloon and livery stable, which he sold two years later, when he moved to Pawling to spend his remaining years, his death occurring there about 1881. He was a Democrat, and took a great interest in local politics, serving as supervisor and collector in the town of Dover, and as collector in the town of Unionvale. A man of generous disposition and much public spirit, he had many friends, while in business circles he was regarded as a shrewd and successful manager of his varied enterprises, and he certainly was one of the best blacksmiths in the county. During the war he worked in the South on a Mississippi river boat, for a man named Bostwick. He married Abbie Jane Cary, and seven children were born to the union: Egbert M., a blacksmith, formerly of the town of Amenia, later of Waterbury, Conn.; George F., our subject; Janie, who married (first) William Wright, (second) Charles Villinger, and (third) George Geddings, who is in the United States mail service; Sarah Ann, deceased, formerly the wife of Myron Wickam; Maryette, deceased, who married William R. Lee; Martha; and Perry, a painter, of Amenia. The Carey family have been residents of Litchfield county, Conn., for many years.

George F. Lee was born in the town of Dover, December 19, 1848, and his education was mainly acquired in the district schools of Unionvale, which he attended until he was about eighteen years old. He had learned the blacksmith's trade in the meantime, and after leaving school conducted a shop on Chestnut Ridge for two years, when he sold out and went to Dover Plains to work at the trade with Matthew Borden. A year later he entered the employ of Milton Bain, then the proprietor of the "Dover House," and, after one year with him, he spent about a year and a half as clerk for Jud Landing, just across the street. The next three years he spent at Falls Village, Conn., as clerk for Ezra Dudley, and Mr. Lee then purchased a saloon and put in billiard tables, the first that had ever been brought to the town. He remained there some time, boarding with Mr. Dudley, and then sold the business and went to Hyde Park, where he rented the old "Fowler House" of J. T. Stoughtenburgh, and conducted it for three years, his father being a partner for a time, as has been stated. On selling out this business to J. W. Hinkley, of the News, Mr. Lee went to Poughkeepsie, and for one year ran a restaurant under the old "Poughkeepsie House," and a livery stable in the rear, but in 1878 he sold these enterprises and moved to Pawling. There he rented a bar room of George Norton, which he conducted for three years, and then he bought the "Travelers' House" and spent eight years in managing it, with Henry Wheeler as partner for one year, and H. C. Brooks for another. During this time Mr. Lee had established the first bottling works ever opened in Pawling, and when the building was burned in 1889 he determined to erect a hotel upon the same site, and accordingly the "Lee House" was completed in the following year. With the exception of one year when the hotel was rented to Mr. Gardner, he has managed it himself, meeting with marked success.

Politically, Mr. Lee has always been a Democrat, and gives active support to the party in his locality. He has been a member of the county committee for five years, and has held the office of school trustee for three years. In 1890 he was elected supervisor for one term, and in 1893 was chosen, for a term, highway commissioner. In local affairs of a non-political sort he is active also, and he belongs to Patterson Lodge No. 173, I. O. O. F., of Pawling. He has a pleasant home in Pawling, his family not residing in the hotel. His wife, to whom he was married in 1873, was formerly Miss Mary A. Beden, whose father, Henry Beden, was a well-known citizen of Falls Village, Conn. Two sons were born of this union—Henry A. and Philo B.

PHILIP H. STICKLE. The subject of this sketch has been for some years prominent among the farmers of Dutchess county, having a fine estate pleasantly located in the town of Red Hook, it being one of the best-appointed homesteads in the locality, and on account of his strict integrity and high character, he is numbered among its most valued citizens.

John F. Stickle, his paternal grandfather, was a native of Red Hook town, where he was engaged in farming during his manhood, and he there married Hannah Fraleigh. Their son, Peter Stickle, was the father of our subject. He was also born in Red Hook town, where on reaching a sufficient age he attended the district schools, and as a means of livelihood he followed farming. By his marriage with Miss Sarah Feller, he had two sons: John W., who married a Mrs. Shook; and Philip H., of this review.

Our subject was born upon the old Stickle homestead in the town of Red Hook, which has now been in the possession of the family for over a century and a half. His school days being over, he took up the occupation which his ancestors had followed, and now owns the old farm, which comprises 250 acres of valuable land. Although a general farmer, he makes a specialty of fruit culture, having upon his place fine varieties of peaches, grapes, apples, currants, etc.

As a companion and helpmeet on life's journey, Mr. Stickle chose Miss Nellie R. Ring.

and by their marriage they have two children: Alva R., born July 5, 1868; and Frank W., born March, 1873. Moses Ring, Mrs. Stickle's father, was a son of George and Elizabeth Ring, the latter of New York City, and in his family were six children, namely: Elizabeth, who became the wife of George Fellows; Nellie R., the wife of our subject; Eugene, who first wedded Sarah Hunt, and, after her death, Emma Hunt; Alonzo, who married Balinda Cramer; John, who married Lizzie Reinsburgh, and, after her death, Mary Dolle; and George Lewis.

Mr. Stickle takes quite an active interest in politics, believing in the principles of the Democratic party, and to these gives his honest support. He has been quite prominent in local affairs, officiating as supervisor of Red Hook town, and as excise commissioner. Socially, he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and religiously holds membership with the Lutheran Church. His industry and enterprise have secured for him an enviable position among the progressive and well-to-do farmers of the town of Red Hook.

JOHN W. BUTTS, one of the most prominent and successful business men of the town of Stanford, Dutchess county, was born May 19, 1835, upon the farm where he now resides, which has been for several generations the home of the Butts family.

William Butts, our subject's father, was born in Stanford, November 15, 1808, a son of Moses Butts, and died there May 28, 1882, having been engaged all his life in farming. He attended the Christian Church, and was an exemplary citizen, holding the high regard of all who knew him. He belonged to the Masonic order, and was buried with their impressive ritual. In politics he was a Democrat. On June 3, 1831, he was married to his first wife, Miss Eliza J. Truesdale, and their children were: William, born March 4, 1832, now a resident of Valley Falls, Kans.; John W., our subject; Walter D., born July 19, 1839, married Catherine Humphrey, and died on October 22, 1870, followed August 16, next year, by his wife; and Eliza Jane, born July 19, 1839, died September 28, 1839. On January 23, 1840, Mr. Butts married for his second wife Miss Deborah Case, a daughter of Nathan Case. She was born December 21, 1802, and died February 6, 1892.

John W. Butts, our subject, attended a district school near Cold Spring during boyhood, and laid the foundation for a good practical education which his native ability and habits of observation have enabled him to acquire. He has always lived upon the old homestead, having assisted his father until the latter's death. March 21, 1861, he was married to Miss Tamma Humphrey, a descendant of one of the old families of the town of Stanford, her great-grandfather Humphrey having settled there in the eighteenth century. Her grandfather, James Humphrey, a farmer there, married Abigail Canfield, and had eight children: Nathan, John, Henry, William, Asabel, Ira, Dama and Tamma, of whom, Ira is now the only survivor. William Humphrey, Mrs. Butt's father, was born in 1804, and died in 1882. He was a shoemaker by trade, but in later years followed farming in Stanford until his retirement from active business, when he moved to Bangall. He married Eliza Johnson, of New Paltz, a descendant of one of the early Huguenot settlers of Ulster county, and had three children: Charles H., a merchant of Bangall; Abbie J., Mrs. Walter Adsit; and Tamma, Mrs. Butts. Three children were born to our subject and his wife: (1) Ella Jane, July 17, 1862, was married June 1, 1887, to Elmer G. Story, of Bay Side, L. I. (now in the Custom House in New York City), and has two children—Ethel B. and Ernest D. (2) Mary, February 24, 1864, was married December 16, 1891, to Lincoln Husted, of Stanford, and has one child, Lee J. (3) William H., July 21, 1868, now a farmer near the homestead, was married December 7, 1892, to Adelaide Deyo, and has one son, John W., Jr.

The farm belonging to Mr. Butts is one of the largest in the county, comprising 350 acres of choice land, which is kept in fine order under his energetic and judicious management. Within the past few years he has erected a handsome mansion and farm buildings of modern plan. For twenty years he has been extensively engaged in the commission and freighting business, dealing in farm produce. His known responsibility and high reputation for fair dealing have brought him a large patronage, the greater part of the produce of the town being handled by him, as the farmers prefer to sell to him rather than to strangers there or in New York. In politics he is a Democrat, and he takes an active and influential part in all local affairs. He has been commissioner of highways, town supervisor for three terms, and for the last twenty-three years he has been postmaster at McIntyre.

WILLIAM DOLAN, an energetic and efficient employe of the Harlem Division, New York Central & Hudson River R. R., was born September 19, 1862, in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, and received his education in the schools of that locality. His father, John Dolan, is a prominent agriculturist there, and until the age of twenty-nine our subject worked upon the farm, but in 1891 he entered the service of the railroad company as brakeman, and still holds that position. In 1891 he was married to Miss Bridget Callnan, daughter of Michael and Bridget Callnan, of Carconlish, County Limerick, Ireland, and they have a pleasant home in Dover Plains, brightened by the merry voices of three children: William A., born in 1891; Rebecca, in 1893; and John E., in 1895.

The Dolan family is of Irish origin, the old home being in County Roscommon. Thomas Dolan, our subject's grandfather, was a life-long resident there, and was engaged in farming for many years. He and his wife had five children: Thomas, who married Bridget Carol; John, our subject's father; and three daughters, Bridget, Anna and Mary, who never married. John Dolan was born in 1812, and received a good education in the schools of his native county. He assisted his father, learning the details of farm work, and on attaining his majority in 1833, came to America in search of wider opportunities. About a year after his arrival he settled in South Amenia, Dutchess county, and purchased the farm where he now resides at the good old age of eighty-four. He married Miss Rebecca Kelley, a native of County Roscommon, Ireland, and daughter of Charles and Anna Kelley. Eleven children were born of this marriage: Thomas, who died in Memphis, Tenn.; John, who married Maggie Lary; Charles, who married Ellen Powers; James, who married Kate Kelley; William, our subject; Edward, unmarried; Maggie, who died at the age of thirty years; Rebecca, living at home; Eliza, who died in infancy; Annie, the wife of Lawrence Dahoney; and Eliza (2) who is at home.

Mrs. Dolan's father, Michael Callnan, was a farmer at Carconlish, Ireland, where the ancestors of her mother, Bridget Murnan, also had their home. Cue Murnan, her grandfather, was born and educated there, and was a laborer during the greater part of his life. His wife's name is unknown, but their seven children were: Cue, who married Miss Geary; Patrick; John; Margaret, who married a Mr. Geary; Mary, Mrs. Pat Roach; Kate, Mrs. Michael Welch; and Bridget, Mrs. Dolan's mother. Michael and Bridget Callnan had five children, of whom, Mrs. Dolan was the youngest. The others are Michael, who married Johanna Shine; John, who is not married; Kate, Mrs. Thomas Kelley; and Mary, Mrs. John Welch.

GEORGE PEATTIE, an enterprising and prosperous business citizen of Fishkill-on-Hudson, Dutchess county, is a member of the well-known firm of Peattie Brothers, who are manufacturers of sleighs and carriages, dealers in harness and fittings, proprietors of an extensive livery stable, and large holders of real estate. It would be difficult to find a firm which has covered so varied a field of effort with such uniform success. He was born in New York City June 11, 1852. His father (the late George Peattie) was born in 1814 at St. Andrews, Fifeshire, Scotland, and at one time owned the land on the corner of West Broadway and Hudson street, New York City, now occupied by H. K. Thurber & Co., and carried on the blacksmith's trade there. Later he moved to Cold Spring, N. Y., and in October, 1855, he came to Fishkill-on-Hudson. He met his death June 22, 1881, at the Hudson River Depot, in New York City, a trunk falling upon him. His wife was a lady of Irish blood, Miss Ann McCormick, by whom he had six children: James, William H., George, Charles, Robert and Margaret A.

After acquiring a good English education in the schools of Fishkill, the subject of this sketch, at the age of seventeen, went to New York City, and spent three years with N. H. Gray, of No. 27 Wooster street, learning the wagon and sleighmaker's trade, and then went to Yorkville and worked two years with W. H. Dunns, a manufacturer of coach bodies. In 1871 he and his brothers, James and William, built a wagon and sleigh factory in Fishkill, at the corner of Main and Cedar streets, and two years later added to it the livery business.

Both enterprises were carried on successfully until February 8, 1895, when the entire plant was destroyed by fire. Nothing daunted, the firm resumed business in a shed at their present location, and proceeded to build their handsome new repository and livery stable, covering 100x150 feet of space. They have also been extensively engaged in the building of houses and business blocks, and have done much to improve and develop the town. Since 1875 they have erected forty-one detached dwelling houses, which they rent, and in 1892 they built the Peattie Block, a brick structure three stories high, containing eight flats and three stores, all fitted up according to modern ideas of comfort and convenience. On September 1, 1894, they opened to the public the Academy of Music, another large building costing $35,000, which is managed by Clark & Peattie. The latter is William Peattie, who, in addition to his care of the interests of the firm, is a director in one of the banks, and for fifteen years past has been auditor of the town.

The subject of this sketch is prominent in local affairs, and a valued adviser in the Democratic party. In the spring of 1894 he was a candidate for the office of president of the village, but was defeated by a small majority, and for the past year he has been a member of the board of education. Mr. Peattie married Miss Bridget Meeley, daughter of Patrick Meeley, and has had ten children: Mary, Charles, Lauretta, Edward, Maggie, Hugh, Celia, Lenna, Ruth, and Alice, of whom, all but Lenna and Ruth are living. The family are leading members of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Peattie belongs to the Order of Foresters and to the Catholic Benevolent League.

ARNOUD CANNON (deceased). To the artistic taste and faithful workmanship of the late Arnout Cannon, a prominent contractor and builder of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, the "Queen City of the Hudson" owes many of her most notable structures. During the forty-six years of his active business life there, he erected public buildings and private residences which will long remain as monuments of his skill, among which may be specially mentioned the Home for the Friendless.

Mr. Cannon was born July 13, 1805, in New York City, and there learned the trade of a mechanic. In 1836 he came to Poughkeepsie and engaged in the building business, in which he continued until his death, September 12, 1882. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, Lodge No. 266, Poughkeepsie, and held a leading place in many of the progressive movements of the day in his locality. In New York City he was married to Miss Naomi Chilson, a native of Orange county, N. Y., born June 11, 1812, and eight children came of this union: Hester (deceased); George W., a retired business man of Poughkeepsie; Charles H., a well-known carpenter there; Arnout, Jr., our subject; William H., a resident of Chicago; Maria, widow of James Gifford; Cornelius L., a leading contractor and builder of Poughkeepsie; and Emma Kate, the wife of Charles E. Schon. The mother of this family is still living in Poughkeepsie.

ARNOUT CANNON, JR., was born August 3, 1839, in the city of Poughkeepsie, and after acquiring an education in the public schools and the Dutchess County Academy, he at the age of fifteen began to learn his father's trade, spending four years with him. He then went to New York City, where for two years he was in the office of Frederick Diaper, studying architecture; in the spring of 1862 he returned to his native place and established himself in business as an architect in an office at the corner of Main and Catherine streets. In August of the same year he enlisted in the 128th N. Y. V. I. and served in that regiment until after the siege of Port Hudson; he also took part in the siege of Mobile. He was usually assigned to duty as an engineer, and among other works on which he was engaged was the dam on the Red river. In 1863 he was transferred to the command of some colored troops who fought so nobly in that campaign, and became second lieutenant, first lieutenant, captain, and lieutenant-colonel of the gallant Ninety-seventh U. S. Col. Inf. On receiving his discharge in April, 1865, he returned to resume work as an architect, and has been in active business ever since. In 1893 Walter Scofield became his partner; in 1894 Percival Lloyd entered the firm, and since Mr. Scofield's retirement in April, 1895, the firm has been known as Cannon & Lloyd. Mr. Cannon is in the front rank in his profession, and has executed with marked ability some very important commissions. Among his largest buildings are the Vassar Brothers' Home for Aged Men, the Vassar Brothers'

Institute, the Vassar Brothers' Library, the Masonic Temple, and the Nelson House Annex.

In February, 1862, Mr. Cannon was married to Miss Ann E. Davis, who died leaving three children: Ida Frances, Howard and Grace. In 1879 he was married to Miss Emily J. Pelton, by whom he has one son, Pelton. With his war record it may be supposed that Mr. Cannon is an enthusiastic G. A. R. man. He belongs to D. B. Sleight Post, Poughkeepsie, and to the military order of the Loyal Legion. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., Fallkill Lodge, and Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 266, F. & A. M.

JOSEPH H. MULCOX, the well-known contractor and builder, holds a leading place among the enterprising and prominent men of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, materially aiding the development and progress of the municipality. He is a native of that city, having been born there July 17, 1834, and he is a son of Joseph Mulcox, who was born in the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, December 16, 1802.

Benjamin Mulcox, the grandfather of our subject, was a native of Yorkshire, England, and after coming to this country was for many years engaged in farming and cheese making in Dutchess county, N. Y. In his family were two sons, Benjamin and Joseph. By occupation the latter was a truckman of Poughkeepsie, and in politics he was an ardent Republican. He married Miss Cornelia Kipp, who was born in Dutchess county, of Holland lineage, and was a daughter of Jacob Kipp, an agriculturist. She departed this life in 1892, and January 3, 1893, her husband was also called to his long home.

Joseph H. Mulcox, whose name introduces this sketch, is the third in order of birth in the family of nine children born to Joseph and Cornelia Mulcox, the others being as follows: Theodore, formerly an extensive contractor and builder of Poughkeepsie, died in 1880; Mathias was a carpenter, member of the firm of Mulcox Brothers of that city; George, who was a commission merchant of New York, died in 1893; Sylvester is a policeman of Jersey City, N. J.; Frederick is a carpenter of Poughkeepsie; Benjamin died in infancy; Celia A. is married, and lives in Poughkeepsie; and Mary E. died in 1859 at the age of twenty-four years. Our subject spent his boyhood days in Poughkeepsie midst play, work and study, and March 1, 1853, began learning the carpenter's trade with James S. Post, for whom he worked seventeen years. He then formed a partnership with his brothers under the name of Mulcox Brothers, this connection lasting five years, since when our subject has engaged in contracting for himself, and has erected many fine dwelling houses. He speculates in real estate to a considerable extent, erecting buildings for himself which he sells to advantage.

In 1858, Mr. Mulcox was married to Miss Rachel Van Kureon, who was born at Camelot, Dutchess county, daughter of Mathew and Margaret Van Kureon, the former of whom, who was of Holland extraction, was engaged in the boating business. One child, Frank, deceased in infancy, was born of our subject and his wife. Politically Mr. Mulcox affiliates with the Republican party, giving full adherence to the principles and doctrines of its platforms. He is public-spirited and enterprising, taking an active interest in the welfare and advancement of his native city and county, and is prominently identified with their improvement.

WILLIAM H. S. BRINKERHOFF, a well-known builder and contractor of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in December, 1861, at Bedford, Ohio, and is the son of Benjamin F. Brinkerhoff, who was a native of Poughkeepsie.

Benjamin F. Brinkerhoff was a mason by trade, which calling he followed in various places, being at different times a resident of Newburg, Kingston and Poughkeepsie, in this State, and in other cities in Massachusetts and Ohio. He is now engaged as an agent for William B. King, in introducing a patent plastering, and has been fairly successful in business matters. He was married to Miss Sarah E., a daughter of Eli Sutcliff, a well-known grocer of Poughkeepsie, and four children have been born to them: William H. S.; John S., living in Staten Island; Eli (deceased); and Herbert D., also living in Staten Island. The father is a staunch Republican and an active worker in his party. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the Masonic order.

William H. S. Brinkerhoff obtained the most of his education at Lowell, Mass., where he attended school until sixteen years of age. Soon afterward he learned the trade of a carpenter with Arnout Cannon, and for some two years was employed in sash and door making, learning all branches of that business. In 1888 Mr. Brinkerhoff began business for himself, having for a short time a partner. He now conducts the business alone, and employs from three to eight men, and finds plenty to do, his reputation as a skillful, reliable workman, and a man who is honest and upright in his dealings, being well-established in the community. He is self-made, well posted on all topics of the day, and by his industry and energy is on the high road to financial success.

On December 6, 1883, Mr. Brinkerhoff was married to Miss Isabella, daughter of John Bodden. She died November 11, 1892, leaving one child, Roy W. Mr. Brinkerhoff's second marriage took place December 25, 1894, when he was united to Miss Mary Bigel, of Poughkeepsie. In politics Mr. Brinkerhoff is an ardent Republican; socially he belongs to Triumph Lodge, K. of P., at Poughkeepsie. He attends the Episcopal Church, to which he is a liberal contributor, and as a citizen is public-spirited and progressive. He is the youngest builder and contractor in the city, and has shown great business ability. Mr. Brinkerhoff is much interested in military matters, and for twelve years has been a member of the Nineteenth Separate Company, in which for nine years he was a non-commissioned officer, going in as a private and rising to the rank of quartermaster sergeant.

FRANKLIN S. EASTMEAD, senior member of the firm of Eastmead Bros., leading tobacconists of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is one of the best-known residents of that city, his interest in social, religious, educational and political affairs making him an active worker in many organizations. He is a native of Poughkeepsie, born May 21, 1856, and is of English descent, the ancient home of his family being at Wotton-Under-Edge, a suburb of London, England.

His paternal grandparents were born at that place, and spent many years of their married life there, later coming to America, and settling at Poughkeepsie, where the grandfather, Thomas Eastmead, followed the mason's trade. He built the print works at Wappingers Falls, and the old edifice known as Christ's church, in Poughkeepsie, which occupied the present site of the State Armory at the corner of Market and Church streets. The family had always been members of the Church of England, and after coming to this country he adhered to the Episcopal Church. He had five sons, all of whom were born in England and accompanied him to America: James died in early manhood in New York City, and was buried at Poughkeepsie; Charles is mentioned more fully farther on; Horatio was an engraver and lithographer in New York City, and died there; John was a musician and composer of sacred music; and Joseph was a mason in New York City.

Charles Eastmead, the father of our subject, was about thirty years old when he came to America. Although he learned the mason's trade in the old country he did not follow it here, but engaged in the boot and shoe business on Main street, Poughkeepsie. Being burned out at that location, he moved his business up town where he carried it on successfully for many years, making a specialty of handling the Burt shoes. Disposing of his establishment, he spent a year in England, and on his return to Poughkeepsie in 1866 engaged in the tobacco and tea business at the corner of Main and Washington streets, where Eastmead Bros. now conduct their business. As a staunch Republican, he was active in the service of his party, and was once elected from the Third ward to the board of aldermen. He was an exempt member of the Cataract Fire Company. His death occurred in 1882; his wife, formerly Miss Jeannette B. Smith, survives him. She was born in Pittenweem, Fifeshire, Scotland, and is a sister of William W. Smith, of Smith Bros. Our subject is the eldest of five children, the others being: Florin (deceased), who married Frank L. Scofield; Elmer E., head bookkeeper for Adriance Platt & Co., Mower and Reaper Works; Charles M., in partnership with our subject; and Annie M., who died in infancy.

Franklin S. Eastmead has always had his residence in the city of his birth, and after learning the details of the drug business with Brown, Doty & Co., he became a prescription clerk, following the occupation fourteen years, first with Charles S. Bowne, and later with Mr. Doty. On the death of his father he engaged in his present business under the firm name of Franklin S. Eastmead & Co., the name of Eastmead Bros. having been adopted in 1892. In 1885 Mr. Eastman married Miss Annie L. Gillen, a lady of Scotch-Irish descent, and a daughter of Joseph Gillen, a well-known citizen of Poughkeepsie. They have two children: Hazel Belle and Herbert Andrew. Politically Mr. Eastman is a Republican, and he belongs to the following organizations: The R. A., No. 391; the I. O. O. F., Fallkill Lodge, in which he is past grand; Siloam Encampment No. 36, and Canton Dilks No. 19, of which he is now past captain. He is first lieutenant of the 15th Separate Co.; lieutenant of Poughkeepsie Bicycle Club; active exempt member of Davy Crockett Hook & Ladder Fire Company; honorary member of the Young America Hose Company, No. 6; and a member of the Apokeeping Boat Club, the League of American Wheelmen, and the Century Road Club of America. He also represents the Sixth ward in the common council of the city.

HENRY CLIFFORD, an honored and esteemed citizen of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, passed to his rest February 3, 1893. He was a native of England, born at Bristol, December 11, 1840, and was the son of James and Sarah (Wolfe) Clifford, in whose family were three children: Henry, Joseph and Sarah, all now deceased. The birth of the father also occurred at Bristol, and when our subject was ten years of age he brought his family to America, locating at Poughkeepsie, where he worked at his trade of blacksmithing until his removal to Vermont. There he spent his remaining days.

The early education of Henry Clifford was secured in the schools of Poughkeepsie, where, later, he engaged as a stationary engineer, for thirteen years being employed by the city water works. While fixing some steam pipes at the Hudson River State Hospital he was injured by falling from a step-ladder, which caused his death a week later. His death was widely and deeply mourned, for he had the respect of all with whom he came in contact. In politics he was an earnest supporter of the Republican party; socially he was identified with the Masonic order; religiously he was a faithful member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

In the city of Poughkeepsie, on May 20, 1869, Mr. Clifford was married to Miss Annie Mellor, also a native of England, and to them were born two children: Jennie Clarkson, now the wife of Harry M. Rupley; and Harry Wolfe (deceased). Mrs. Clifford's father, William Mellor, was born in Yorkshire, England, in which country he married Ellen Hanson, by whom he had four children: Annie C.; Hanson, superintendent of the freight depot of the Hudson River railroad at Poughkeepsie; Jennie; and Ellen (deceased). For forty-five years the father has been a resident of Poughkeepsie, where he has always engaged in general labor.

JOSEPH THEODORE LAMB, M. D., a prominent and leading physician and surgeon of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in New York City, July 9, 1834, and is of Irish descent.

John Lamb, his paternal grandfather, was a merchant in Ireland, where he spent his entire life. In 1798, in County Monaghan, Ireland, Francis Lamb, the father of our subject, was born, and in 1814 he came to America, arriving at New York, securing on the day he landed employment in a shoe factory in that city. Later he engaged quite extensively in the grocery business, so that his last days were spent in retirement, and he left his family a handsome property. In course of time he sent for his mother, brothers and sisters—seven in number—who joined him in New York City. At the age of twenty-one years he was there married to Ann Quin, and to them were born fourteen children, six of whom are still living. The father died in October, 1861. He and his family were devout members of the Roman Catholic Church.

The early education of our subject was obtained in the private classical institute of John Young, in New York City, and he completed his literary studies with the French Pensionate, an academy conducted by the Christian Brothers. He then taught for a time in the Jesuit College in Sixteenth street, New York, and in that city studied medicine with Dr. Bedford for three years. Entering Bellevue Hospital he attended three courses of lectures there, was graduated in 1867, and at once began the practice of his profession in New York City. His business so rapidly increased, and he devoted himself so untiringly to his work, that he became broken down in health, and was forced to leave the city. Removing to Hudson, N. Y., he continued practicing there until 1880, when he came to Poughkeepsie, where he established an office, and has secured a liberal patronage; he is now serving as alms-house physician. The Doctor holds membership with the Alumni Association of Bellevue Hospital, and the Dutchess County Medical Society. He is a close and thorough student, and his investigations into the science of medicine, and his skillful application of the knowledge he has thereby obtained, have won him a place in the foremost ranks of the medical fraternity.

In New York City, Dr. Lamb was united in marriage with Catherine Gibney, and to them were born five children, as follows: Francis, a member of the Jesuit Order, of Woodstock, Md.; James A., an attorney in New York City; Charles V., also a member of the Jesuit Order, located at Grand Coteau, La.; Mary; and Edward, a graduate of St. John's College. The family are all members of the Roman Catholic Church, and in politics the Doctor is an ardent Democrat.

ISAAC S. HEWLETT, a representative farmer residing in the town of Pleasant Valley, is a man whose sound common sense and vigorous, able management of his affairs have been important factors in leading him to success, and with his undoubted integrity have given him an honorable position among his fellowmen. He is a native of Dutchess county, born in the town of Hyde Park, November 27, 1822.

His paternal grandfather was born in Holland, and after coming to the New World was married and located on a farm in Westchester county, N. Y., where he reared a family of several children, among whom was Samuel Hewlett, the father of our subject. The latter's birth occurred in Westchester county, where he married Charlotte Kipp, and for some time operated a farm there. At length he decided to come to Dutchess county, and his wife made the trip on horseback, carrying her baby in her arms. They first located on a farm in the town of Pleasant Valley, in the midst of the wilderness, but later removed to the town of Hyde Park, where the father carried on farming until his death in 1825. The mother passed away in 1866. In the family were ten children, namely: William, a farmer of Hyde Park town, who died at Poughkeepsie; Elizabeth, widow of Johnson Baker, a farmer of the town of Hyde Park; Hiram, deceased, who was also an agriculturist of the same town; Phœbe, who is the widow of Stephen D. Briggs, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, and now makes her home in Hyde Park; Hannah, who became the wife of George Holmes, a farmer of Pleasant Valley town, but both are now deceased; James, deceased, who was a farmer of Hyde Park; Caleb C., deceased, who carried on agricultural pursuits in the West; Zyprah, who became the wife of Isaac Wood, a farmer, merchant and railroad man, and both are now deceased; John K., deceased, who engaged in merchandising in Hyde Park; and Isaac S., of this sketch.

The last-named spent his boyhood days in Hyde Park, and when large enough began working for neighboring farmers. He grew to be an active, ambitious young man, and early established a home of his own. He was married in 1845 to Letitia Halstead, a native of the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, and a daughter of David Halstead, an agriculturist. After their marriage they lived for about eight years on a farm in the town of Hyde Park, which Mr. Hewlett then sold, and in 1854 located on his present fine farm of 105 acres. Two children were born to them, namely: Samuel D., a farmer of Pleasant Valley town; and W. Irwin, who for several years operated a farm, but is now engaged in the milk business in Poughkeepsie.

To general farming Mr. Hewlett now devotes his attention, and the well-cultivated fields indicate to the passerby the thrift and enterprise of the owner, who is numbered among the most progressive agriculturists of the locality. His first ballot was cast for the Whig party, but since its organization he has been a stalwart Republican, and always takes an active part in politics. Mrs. Hewlett is a Hicksite Quaker, and her husband, though not a member, gives liberally toward the support of the Church.

EMERY COLE, a prominent business man of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, is the founder of the village at Coles Mills, and the proprietor of the manufacturing establishments there. A man of great energy and fine mechanical ability, he has been unusually successful in the varied business enterprises, and has contributed largely to the development of that locality.

He is of English descent on the paternal side, and was born April 19, 1811, in the town of Wilton, Fairfield Co., Conn. His great-grandfather, Alexander Cole, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and was with Washington at the time New York was taken by the British forces. His grandfather, Thomas Cole, was a lifelong resident of Wilton, where he owned a farm and sawmill, and took a leading part in local affairs. He was probably a Presbyterian in religious faith. He and his wife, whose maiden name was Riggs, are dead. They reared a family of seven children, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: Thomas, October 22, 1780, was a farmer at the old homestead; Ira, February 10, 1782, lived near Binghamton, N. Y.; Timothy, August 28, 1784; Sally, February 9, 1788, married David Nichols; Curtis, May 10, 1790, lived in Stepney, Fairfield Co., Conn.; Samuel, October 22, 1791, was a resident of Wilton; and Sherman, June 4, 1804, lived at Norwalk, Conn., and had a large family of children, several of whom became prominent in different lines of effort. Timothy Cole, our subject's father, was a farmer and wagon maker by occupation. He married Eliza Sterling, a daughter of Thaddeus Sterling, a leading resident of Wilton, and soon afterward removed to Southeast, Putnam county, where he carried on his trade successfully, employing his brothers in his shop. He and his wife attended the services of the Presbyterian Church, of which our subject is also an adherent, and they were highly esteemed in the neighborhood. Of their nine children the subject of this sketch is the eldest, the names of the others being as follows: George, born in 1813, was a wagon maker; Mary, 1815, died at the age of twenty; Sally, 1817, was the second wife of Warren Collamour, of Saratoga, N. Y.; Jane, 1819, married Charles Marsh, and died in Rockford, Ill.; Eliza Ann, 1821, was the first wife of Warren Collamour; Minerva died in childhood; Angeline is still living; and Edwin is a resident of Chestnut Ridge.

Our subject's early education was limited to an attendance at the district schools near his home, and to one year in a select school. He began to learn the wagon maker's trade with his father when very young, and worked for him until the age of twenty-one. He then started in business for himself at Amenia, taking the shop of John A. Allen on shares, the profits being equally divided. He did all branches of the work except ironing the wagons, and soon built up a fine trade, employing two or three men after the first year. His work being of the most substantial and satisfactory kind, it acquired a high reputation during the eleven years of his stay at Amenia, his trade extending to Poughkeepsie. In September, 1842, he moved to Pawling, and built the gristmill and wagon shop at Coles Mills, and established his present extensive business, which affords employment to about fifteen men. He built all the houses at Coles Mills, including the "Chapman House," and still owns three or four of them. He ran a placer mill for some time, and indeed has been engaged in a number of business ventures, in which he has been uniformly successful, and his eighty-five years do not seem to diminish his spirit of enterprise. Politically he has always been a Republican, and in local affairs is a steadfast friend to progress.

On May 10, 1841, Mr. Cole was united in the bonds of matrimony with Mary Ann Sutton, who was born March 11, 1819, the daughter of Gabriel Sutton. Four children were born to them, whose names with dates of birth are as follows: George E., December, 1843, is a successful business man of Bethel, Conn.; Francis Eugene, September 19, 1848, is in partnership with his father, and is married to Helen Wanzer; Edward Charles, July 20, 1850, is a traveling salesman for a carriage firm of Buffalo, N. Y.; and Mary Eliza, May 1, 1856, married (first) August Penley, and (second) Myron Andrews. The mother of this family died June 23, 1856, and Mr. Cole subsequently was married to Mary Frances Stevens, a member of one of the oldest families of South Dover. They have three children: Albert Stevens, born May 21, 1863, is a carriage maker by trade; William Wallace, September 15, 1864, is a traveling salesman for a millinery firm in St. Louis; and Elida Belle, January 27, 1870, is at home.

Mrs. Cole's father, David W. Stevens, was one of the most prominent men of South Dover, a leading farmer and one of the founders and chief supporters of the Baptist Church. He was active in political affairs also, and served one term as a member of the State Assembly. He married Nancy A. Giddings, a daughter of Gamaliel Giddings, and a cousin of Joshua R. Giddings, who was for many years United States Senator from Ohio. Seven children were born to them, their names with dates of birth being as follows: Orrin S., May 4, 1821, is a prominent resident of Ravenna, Ohio; Emma Eliza, March 30, 1823, married Allen Giddings, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Hiram G., April 9, 1826, was killed by a horse August 8, 1833; Gamaliel B., March 13, 1829; Mary Frances, April 3, 1832; Sarah H., November 12, 1834, married James Moolen, of South Dover; and Hiram G., May 29, 1839, died in South Dover.

VIRTUS H. CORNELIUS, an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born January 5, 1853, in the town of Milan, where his ancestors have been farmers for several generations, the family having come originally from Holland.

His grandfather was born at the old homestead in Milan, and married a Miss Cookingham, also a native of that town. They had the following children: Jephthah, our subject's father; Alfred, a farmer in the town of Stanford; Peter, a farmer; Owen, a farmer in Iowa; Emily, a resident of Stanford, who married (first) Nelson Almendorf, and (second) David Nicholas (both now deceased); Mary B., who married (first) Ambrose Smith, and (second) Jacob Fowler, of Clinton Corners; Phœbe L., the wife of Elbert Fowler, a farmer; and Thirzah R., the wife of George Marshall, also a farmer.

Jephthah Cornelius, the father of our subject, was born in 1829. He married Eliza Ann Haines, a daughter of William Haines, a prominent farmer of Milan, and reared a family of six children, of whom our subject is the eldest. Alva N. is a farmer in Otsego county; Lavilla is a physician in Hyde Park; Clark J. is a farmer in Schoharie county; and Milton W. and Emma are at home. The mother of this family died October 1, 1886, but the father still survives, remaining on the old farm in Milan. He is a Republican, and while he has never been a party worker, he has always taken a keen interest in political questions.

The subject of this sketch was reared in the town of Milan, and December 18, 1878, at the age of twenty-six, he married Eudora Boise, a descendant of one of the old Dutch families of that locality. Her great-grandfather, John I. Boise, her grandfather, Henry I. Boise, and her father, George A. Boise, were all farmers there. For a year after their marriage Mr. Cornelius and his wife lived on a farm in their native town, and then they moved to the town of Rhinebeck. They lived for eight years on their first farm there, and in 1886 moved to their present home near Rhinebeck. They have had five children: Harry, Vernie, Raymond, and two who died in infancy.

Mr. Cornelius is one of the representative farmers of his vicinity, conducting his seventy-three acres, which are devoted to general farming, in a model manner. Politically, he is a Republican, and takes a generous interest in all matters of public concern. He and his wife contribute to the support of the Christian Church.

CHRISTIAN ALLENDORF (deceased) had long been identified with the interests of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he was born June 16, 1819, and where he had spent his entire life. His father, Christian Allendorf, Sr., who was a native of Germany, on crossing the Atlantic to this country, came direct to Dutchess county, N. Y., where he worked at the carpenter's trade for a number of years, but spent the remainder of his life upon a farm which he owned in the town of Red Hook. He was twice married, his first union being with a Miss Fraleigh, by whom he had four children: Philip, who married Elizabeth Stickle; Henry C., who married a Miss Fraleigh; William, who married Miss Stickle; and Maria, who became the wife of Daniel Paults. After the death of his first wife the father wedded Miss Margaret Cole, and to them were born two children: Elizabeth, who married Daniel C. Perine; and Christian, of this review.

Christian Allendorf developed into manhood amid the scenes of his native town, receiving his education in the district schools of the neighborhood. He had quite an eventful life. For many years he was engaged in the mercantile business at Upper Red Hook, and filled many public offices in the town. For some time before his death he had a contract for carrying the United States mail from the depot to the post office at Upper Red Hook, a distance of about three miles, and, although he was seventy-seven years old at the time, he attended to the business with promptness and dispatch. He had the respect of all, both young and old, rich and poor, and in his declining days he enjoyed the reward of a well-ordered life, in which he had been faithful to the trusts reposed in him.

On reaching manhood Mr. Allendorf was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Lown, and five children were born of this union: Elizabeth, wife of Philip Allendorf; Eugene, who married Anna Smith; John; Caroline; and one who died in infancy. For his second wife our subject married Mrs. Permelia Wheeler, widow of Samuel Wheeler. Her father, Philip Feller, was a prominent farmer of Columbia county, N. Y. He was three times married, his first wife being Hannah Hapeman, his second Catherine Miller, and the third Mary Ringsdorf, the mother of Mrs. Allendorf, who was a native of Columbia county. Eight children were born of the third union, namely: Mary became the wife of Randall Judd; Lucinda wedded Ephraim Wheeler; Philip married Cornelia Pulver; Andrew married (first) Mary Hayner, (second) Catherine Allen, and his third wife is unknown; Marilla became the wife of John Stearns; William married Susan Allen, and, after her death, Miss Groves; Permelia became the wife of our subject; and John remained single.

The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Allendorf, John Ringsdorf, was a native of the Fatherland, and on emigrating to the New World located in Columbia county, N. Y., where he married Miss Mary Lasher, and to them were born six children: Mary, the mother of Mrs. Allendorf; Catherine, who married Jeremiah Cronk; Christiana, who wedded John Finger; Elizabeth, who became the wife of Baltis Wheeler; Andrew, who never married; and Simon (or Simeon), who married Elizabeth Coon.

DR. CHAS. H. PERKINS. The subject of this sketch, one of the successful young business men of Dutchess county, was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, said county, April 27, 1865, and is one of a family of five children born to Alexander W. and Elsie A. (Kay) Perkins, whose homestead was situated on the old Post road, about three miles south of Poughkeepsie. Their five children were as follows: Amelia, wife of Joseph Doughty, of Salt Point, Dutchess county; Edward E., of whom sketch is elsewhere in this volume; Charles H., our subject; Warren J., residing in Brooklyn, N. Y., and Lena E. The mother of these children died some years ago, and the father, having left the old homestead, makes his home in Brooklyn, New York.

Charles H., our subject, spent his boyhood on the old farm and attended the common school at the old Spackenkill school house in the neighborhood, and then for four years was a pupil in Poughkeepsie at the old Pelham Institute and Poughkeepsie Military Academy. In 1882 he became an apprentice, with the then well-known jewelry firm of Myers & Marble, of Poughkeepsie, to learn the trade of watch making, and after three years of careful application with them, in which he mastered the business, he became the general watchmaker and engraver for the firm of Quintard Bros., in the same city, and continued in said capacity for three years. While with them he was offered, by the Non-Magnetic Watch Co. of America, a position as their traveling expert and demonstrator, his business being to introduce their non-magnetic watch throughout the United States. He traveled throughout the Union showing and explaining the watch for about a year, when he was offered the position of chief time inspector for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railroad. His duties were to inspect and superintend changes each month on all the railroad watches and clocks, thus traveling over both roads. This position he filled for two years, giving eminent satisfaction to the managers of both roads. While thus employed he became an intimate friend of General Superintendent Tyler of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, and with him purchased some real estate at Montrose, a suburban town of Chicago, on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. The then approaching World's Fair in Chicago rapidly increased the value of suburban property, and by the sale of his recent purchases Dr. Perkins made valuable profits. Just previous to this he had associated himself, as partner, with C. S. Durfee & Co., jewelers at Davenport, Iowa, and thus continued three years. At the end of this time, owing to close application to his work at the bench, his eyes began failing, and on the advice of his physician he entered the Chicago Ophthalmic Hospital for treatment. While here he became deeply interested in the study of optics and the optical profession, and selling his jewelry business he at once took up the study of the eye, ear and throat at said hospital, and was graduated therefrom in 1892.

Chas H Perkins

After finishing his studies he was united in marriage with Miss Lydia Stark Day, daughter of John and Katherine M. (Stark) Day, of Tunkhannock, Penn., whom he had met while she was a student at Vassar College. Mrs. Perkins is a direct descendant from old Gen. Stark of Revolutionary fame, and her grandfather, Samuel Stark, of Tunkhannock, was one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Wyoming county.

After his marriage Dr. Perkins came back to Dutchess county, and forming a partnership with his half brother, J. A. Perkins, opened a jewelry and optical business at 292½ Main street, paying especial attention to the optical branch of the business. Their business rapidly increasing necessitated larger quarters, and the same year (1892) they removed to their commodious store at 322 Main street, where under the name of Perkins & Company their business has since been conducted. As general jewelers and manufacturing opticians their business ranks among the foremost in the county, and their fully equipped plant for grinding complicated lenses is, without doubt, the finest along the Hudson river; the skill evinced in this line of work has caused that branch of the business to grow to such an extent that up to 1896 they had examined the eyes and fitted glasses for over ten thousand people. Among the cases that have come to him for examination and treatment have been many that others had pronounced hopeless, and that yet owing to his skill have been either entirely cured or greatly relieved. Cases of epilepsy have been cured by the careful and proper fitting of glasses. In connection with his study of optics Dr. Perkins began the study of general medicine, and for several years devoted his leisure moments to advancing himself in that science, and by the advice of some of his medical friends he took the requisite examination at a medical college, passing with a grade of ninety per cent., being considerably above the average, and securing the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He has since become a registered M. D. in several States. But not for a moment has Dr. Perkins relinquished his study of optometry, but instead has been greatly aided therein by his added knowledge of the human system, and to still further perfect himself in this branch he frequently attends the New York Ophthalmic Hospital, and assists in operations there. Dr. Perkins has also prepared and placed on the market a wash for sore and inflamed eyes, known as "Dr. Perkins' Antiseptic Eyewater," which is wonderfully effective in the cure of Catarrhal Conjunctivitis, commonly known as "Pink Eye."

Dr. Perkins is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and is vice-chancellor of Triumph Lodge, K. of P., of Poughkeepsie, besides belonging to several optical and medical societies. Dr. Perkins and his estimable wife occupy a prominent place in Poughkeepsie's social circle, and at their modern and commodious home, which they have purchased on South Hamilton street, they are always pleased to entertain their many friends.

BROOKS VERMILYEA, a most highly respected citizen of the town of Unionvale, is numbered among the elderly residents of the community, and is held in that reverence and esteem which is accorded those whose lives have been characterized by integrity and usefulness. A native of Dutchess county, he was born in the town of Beekman, in 1811, and has here passed his entire life.

His father, Isaac G. Vermilyea, was born in what was then Beekman town, but is now Lagrange, in July, 1768, and after the completion of his education engaged in agricultural pursuits. He married Miss Catherine _____, whose birth occurred on the 4th of July, 1776—the day so dear to the hearts of the American people, when they announced to the world their independence.

Nine children were born to the parents of our subject: (1) Elizabeth, born October 23, 1794, married Daniel Billings, a shoemaker, and they had four children—Isaac, John, Sarah and Catherine. (2) Jane, born March 2, 1796, married Alex Homan, a farmer, and they had two children—Alexander and Phoebe. (3) Peter, born September 25, 1797, in the town of Beekman, followed farming as a life work, and married Miss Van Nostran, by whom he had two sons—George and John. (4) Maria, born April 7, 1799, married Ench G. Dorland, a farmer, and they had four children—Gilbert, Catherine, Vermilyea and Samuel. (5) Gerardus, born in the town of Beekman, January 26, 1801, engaged in farming, but was a shoemaker by trade; he married Miss Van Nostran, by whom he had eight children—Cromwell, Isaac, Oscar, Walter, Calle (who married Irving Vermilyea), Jane, Minnie and Catherine. The father of these children is still living in Lagrange town, Dutchess county, at the advanced age of ninety-five years, and is quite active. (6) John K., born September 16, 1802, was educated at both Williams and Yale Colleges, later studied medicine and engaged in its practice in the town of East Fishkill, near Hopewell Junction. He had four children by his first wife—Dupertrain, Gerardus, Anna R. and Lucy. (7) Caroline, born January 29, 1804, died when young. (8) Brooks, of this sketch, was born February 27, 1811. (9) Valentine, born April 4, 1818, attended the New York Medical College, and, after his graduation, engaged in practice in Illinois. He married a Miss Davis.

The primary education of Brooks Vermilyea was obtained in the district schools near his early home, and he was, later, a student in a boarding school. By trade he is a weaver, at which he worked for a time, but his attention has been principally given to agricultural pursuits. On attaining to man's estate he was united in marriage with Miss Charity Shear, whose death occurred in 1851; she left three children, all of whom were born, reared and educated in Lagrange town, Dutchess county: (1) ADDISON, born in 1841, follows farming. (2) Irving, born in 1843, engaged in the same pursuit at Low Point. He married Callie Vermilyea, a cousin, and they have one son, Horatio S. (3) Abram, born in 1848, also carries on farming. After the death of his first wife, Brooks Vermilyea was again married, his second union being with Miss Lydia A. Donaldson, who was born August 19, 1827, and died in 1893.

WILLIAM T. PHILLIPS, one of the successful agriculturists of this section, owning a large farm near Red Hook, Dutchess county, is descended from a family which is noted for those practical qualities of thrift and industry which distinguish the tillers of the soil.

His grandfather, Jacob Phillips, was a farmer in Columbia county in his early manhood, but shortly after his marriage he and his wife moved to Dutchess county and settled upon a farm there. Their son, Theodore Phillips, our subject's father, was born in Columbia county, September 25, 1845, and was only one year old when he was brought to Dutchess county, where he passed his life. He became a prosperous agriculturist, raising grain, hay, and live stock, and in 1878 he purchased from Gilbert Fraleigh a farm containing 228 acres of fine land, well-stocked, which his energy and enterprise enabled him to improve greatly. Politically he was an ardent believer in the principles of the Democratic party.

He was married (first) to Rachel Link, and (second) to Matilda Coon, daughter of William Coon, a farmer of the town of Milan. Two children were born to the second union: William T. and Merrick. The mother of these passed to her eternal rest in 1885; the father survived her ten years, breathing his last in 1895.

William T. Phillips was born in the town of Milan, Dutchess county, and received excellent educational advantages in youth, attending Hartwick Seminary. He was initiated into the details of farm work under his father's able guidance, and remained at the homestead, to which he succeeded in 1895. He married Miss Edna Case, daughter of Socatell Case, a well-known farmer of the town of Milan, Dutchess county. They have no children.

EDGAR VINCENT, formerly the popular proprietor of the "Vincent House," Madalin, belongs to one of the very oldest families of Dutchess county. He was born in the town of Washington, April 19, 1832, and there the birth of his father, Moriorty Vincent, also occurred. The latter married Phœbe Fowler, of Columbia county, N. Y., after which they located upon a farm in Washington town, where their entire married life was passed. Their household included ten children: Ruth, wife of Dr. Holden; Israel, a retired farmer living at Morse, Ill.; Washington, George and Franklin, all now deceased; Theodore, a school teacher, of New Jersey; Edgar, of this sketch; Moriorty, deceased; Philo, a carriage manufacturer, of Danbury, Conn.; and Benjamin, who died while young. The father, who was an ardent Republican in politics, served as supervisor of the town of Washington, and was one of the successful farmers and stock raisers of the locality.

The childhood and youth of our subject was passed in the usual manner of farmer lads, and he remained upon the home farm until thirty-eight years of age. In 1870 he removed to Annandale, Dutchess county, where for two years he carried on a grocery store and hotel. For nine years he then kept a saloon at Barry-town, after which he went to Tivoli, there purchasing the "Farmers Hotel," which he conducted for ten years and which he still owns. On the expiration of that time, however, he bought the hotel at Madalin, which is now known as the "Vincent House," which he has since sold. The interests and comforts of his guests were always carefully looked after, and he is one of the best-known business men in the northern part of the county.

In 1875 was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Vincent and Miss Estella Sagendorf, who was born in the town of Red Hook, where her father, Robert Sagendorf, engaged in farming, and they now have three children: Lula, George and Hazel. Although Mr. Vincent is a strong Republican in politics, he prefers to vote independently at local elections; supporting the man whom he thinks best able to fill the position. His personal integrity, both in public and private life, is of the highest order, and he has the respect of all with whom he comes in contact.

EDMUND DE WITT MULFORD, a prominent resident of Hopewell Junction, and one of Dutchess county's most intelligent and progressive citizens, is descended from a family which has long been identified with the development of this section.

He is a great-great-grandson of Capt. David Mulford, who came from Long Island in 1776, and purchased a tract of land at Staatsburg. He left a large family. One son, Job, remained on the farm, and died and was buried there with his father. He left one son, David, and one daughter, Margaret, who married Dr. Hunting Sherrill. David married Margaret Van Hoevenberg, and left ten children. His eldest son, David Henry, remained on part of the original farm purchased by Capt. David Mulford, and died there, and was buried in Poughkeepsie cemetery. He was the founder of Staatsburg, and when the Hudson River railroad was built he gave the land for the station, and built the first store and hotel. He opened the road and built the docks and st. re-houses at both Staatsburg and Hyde Park, and was among the first to build ice-houses, and gather ice from the river.

Possessing an unusually able and active intellect, he was influential in varied lines of effort, and was several times elected supervisor of the town of Hyde Park, and twice to the Assembly. His first wife, Caroline Balding (Van Wagner), died leaving two sons, Edmund De Witt and Francis Henry. He afterward married Cynthia Van Benschoten, by whom he had one daughter, Harriet Vanderbilt.

SAMUEL K. RUPLEY, the well-known superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Co., and Hudson River Co., at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in the city of Lancaster, Penn., July 17, 1843.

After going through the public schools of Lancaster, our subject learned telegraphy in the office of the National Ohio Telegraph Co. At the age of fifteen years he came to Poughkeepsie and was employed as operator at the depot of the Hudson River Co., and remained with same until 1862, when he joined Co. F, 150th N. Y. S. V. I., and was appointed Col. Ketcham's orderly. In 1863 he was detailed as operator in the United States military service, where he remained until July, 1865, when he was mustered out. He was connected with the Second Army Corps, headquarters with the Army of the Potomac. After the war Mr. Rupley returned to Poughkeepsie and was appointed manager of the Hudson River R. R. Telegraph Co., and also took charge of the Western Union Telegraph office in the city of Poughkeepsie. In 1890 he was made superintendent of the New York Central and Hudson River Telegraph offices, whose wires run from New York City to Buffalo. He also has charge of the Western Union interests of the P. R. & N. E., Newburgh, Dutchess & Columbia, and Poughkeepsie & Eastern railways. In 1882 the Poughkeepsie Telephone Co. was organized by Mr. Platt, H. Innis, N. Taylor, Henry Frost and Mr. Rupley. It was finally merged into the Hudson River Telephone Co., and our subject is manager of its interests in Poughkeepsie.

Mr. Rupley was married in that city August 30, 1865, to Miss Jane E. Shurter, a daughter of Isaac H. Shurter, and the following children were born: Harry Mortimer married Jennie Clifford, and they have one child—Clifford; Mary C. married Albert E. Schwartz, and they have one child—John R.; Grace died in the spring of 1895; and Howard R. Mr. Rupley is a Republican, and was commissioner of the city alms house for twelve years. He is a member of the Poughkeepsie Commandery of the Masonic order, and of the Royal Arcanum. He is a member of the Church of the Holy Comforter, in which he is a trustee.

The father of our subject, Samuel Rupley, was born in Lancaster, Penn., where he attended school. He was one of the early engineers of the Pennsylvania Central R. R. His wife was a Miss Mary Martha Kendig, who died in June, 1892. He died in 1856. Two of their seven children besides our subject are now living. Rev. E. E. Rupley, of Esprey, Penn., and Nellie M. Rupley, of Lancaster, Penn. The grandfather of our subject was also born in Lancaster, and was of English and German ancestry.

WILLIAM E. TRAVER, the genial and popular proprietor of the "Traver House," at New Hamburg, Dutchess county, was born in the town of Hyde Park, March 31, 1864.

The family, originally from Holland, is one of the oldest in Dutchess county. William Traver, our subject's grandfather, was born in this country, probably in the town of Unionvale, and became an influential and prosperous citizen. He was a farmer, and was also engaged in speculating, and took an active and generous interest in the Methodist Church of his locality. His son, James L. Traver, our subject's father, was born in the town of Pleasant Valley in 1834, and still resides upon his farm in Hyde Park. He married Miss Phœbe Jane Laird, a lady of Scotch descent, and daughter of John and Sarah (Leak) Laird. Her father was at one time a teanster in Pleasant Valley, and, later, a farmer in Hyde Park. The Lairds and the Travers are all Democrats in politics, and are among the most progressive and public-spirited members of the community.

William E. Traver is the elder of two children, his brother Irving being still at home. After a boyhood spent upon the farm, Mr. Traver, at the age of twenty-one, was appointed jailer under C. W. Belding, and served in that capacity for three years. In 1889 he engaged in the laundry business at No. 14 Washington street, Poughkeepsie, and after nearly two years there he purchased the "Perrine House," at New Hamburg, which he has since conducted as the "Traver House," his active and business-like management bringing him a gratifying degree of success.

On June 17, 1890, he was married to Miss

Evadna Robman, a native of New York City, and a daughter of Thomson Robman. This family is of English origin. Mr. Traver is a Democrat in political faith, but has never sought official preferment. He is a member of the B. P. O. Elks, Poughkeepsie Lodge No. 275.

THOMAS W. JAYCOX (deceased). The subject of this sketch was born in the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, December 17, 1826, and was the son of Christopher Jaycox.

Our subject was reared upon the farm of his father, and on December 17, 1850, he was married to Miss Sarah M. Rose, who was born in Hyde Park. She is the daughter of Abram Rose, and lived in Hyde Park until sixteen years old, when her parents bought a farm in the town of Clinton, where she resided until her marriage. Mr. Rose was born in Ulster county, September 12, 1802, and married Miss Eliza Van Wagener, who was born in the same county, February 20, 1805, a daughter of Minard Van Wagener, also a native of Ulster county. They reared the following children: Lewis H., a school teacher, who was a colonel in the Civil war, and died in Louisiana in 1865; John M. was a moulder by trade; during the gold fever he went to California, and nothing more was heard of him; William G., and George H., twins (the former died in infancy, George lives in Waterbury, Conn.); Sarah M., Mrs. Jaycox; Daniel V. W. died young; Innis E. lives in Oregon. The grandfather of Mrs. Jaycox was named John, and was of Holland descent.

Mr. and Mrs. Jaycox settled on the old homestead after their marriage, where they lived until 1859, when he bought the present farm, and resided there until his death, which took place December 21, 1887. Five children were born to our subject and his wife, namely: Thomas W. is a civil engineer in Leadville, Colo.; Mary R. died April 30, 1860; Clinton is on the home farm; Anna E. married I. T. N. Harcourt, a grocer in Wappingers Falls; Cora I. became the wife of Elmore L. Pryor, an engraver at Wappingers Falls. Mr. Jaycox had 100 acres, on which he did general farming. He was a Republican and a prominent man in politics, and held the offices of Internal Revenue collector, and supervisor for two terms. He was a progressive citizen and took an active part in public affairs, holding at one time the office of president and treasurer of the Dutchess County Agricultural Society.

Christopher Jaycox was born in Poughkeepsie, where he married Miss Antoinette Van Dyne and settled on a farm in Poughkeepsie town, where the following children were born: James W. is a farmer and boatman; Hannah J. married William Luckey, a hotel keeper in Wappingers Falls; Thomas W. is our subject; Eliphalet is living retired at Sandwich, Ill.; Mary G. died young.

Thomas W. Jaycox, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Holland. He was one of three brothers who came to America and settled in Dutchess county. One of the boys died, and another disappeared.

J A. PERKINS, of the well-known firm of Perkins & Co., jewelers and opticians, Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, was born in that county, November 4, 1841, a son of Alexander W. and Rebecca M. (Akerley) Perkins.

His early life was passed on a farm with the usual advantages in the way of schools and work. He acquired his education in the common schools of his native town, and supplemented the knowledge there obtained by attendance at the Dutchess County Academy, in Poughkeepsie. After leaving school he entered the arena of business by accepting a position as clerk in a store. For five years he was connected with the freight depot of the New York Central railroad, and, later, he entered the employ of the Poughkeepsie & Eastern railroad, with which he remained two years as general passenger agent, after which he was made superintendent and general manager. In this capacity, through all the changes and vicissitudes of the road, he served for eighteen years, his long term of service being the best of all testimonials for the faithful discharge of his duties. In 1891 he resigned, and for a short time engaged in the ice business with his brother, Stephen A., in which he was very successful; but he now entered a co-partnership with his brother, Charles H. Perkins, in the general jewelry business, and the manufacturing of optical supplies. They have met with success far beyond all expectations, and have rapidly advanced to the front rank. The pleasant reception given their customers at their modern store at No. 322 Main street, Poughkeepsie, has secured them an extensive and lucrative trade among the wealthiest citizens along the Hudson river. Careful attention to the filling of orders, and the superior work given, has brought its reward in the satisfaction to and the good will of the public.

In 1865 Mr. Perkins was united in marriage with Anna A. Morey, a daughter of George and Rachel Morey, of Poughkeepsie. They have become the parents of two children: Fred V., of Chicago, and Grace T., wife of Edward Quintard, of Poughkeepsie. Socially, our subject and his wife occupy an enviable position, and in their charming home their friends ever find a hospitable welcome. Mr. Perkins is a member of the Masonic fraternity, of Triune Lodge, Poughkeepsie. As a public-spirited, progressive citizen, he is the peer of any man in the county.

ROBERT SANDERS. The subject of this sketch is a native of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, born April 3, 1847. He went to the city schools, and later attended the Dutchess County Academy.

On July 22, 1862, at the age of fifteen years, Mr. Sanders enlisted in Company D, 128th N. Y. V. I., with which he remained all through the war. He was wounded while serving in the Shenandoah Valley. In 1865 he was honorably discharged and returned to Poughkeepsie and finished his education, after which he went into the trucking business, in which he continued twenty-one years. In connection with this occupation he also for a time engaged in scalping railroad tickets. He remained in business until rheumatism compelled him to give it up, and, since 1887, he has lived retired from active life.

In 1867 the subject of this sketch was married to Miss Amelia Elsworth, who was born in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county. Her parents were Buhl and Sarah Elsworth, farmers, who came of Holland ancestors. One daughter, Sarah E., was born to Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, and died at the age of two years. In politics Mr. Sanders is a Republican, and he is a member of the G. A. R. and of the K. of P. He and his wife attend the Baptist Church to the support of which he is a liberal contributor. Mr. Sanders owns considerable real estate, having five houses and lots on Washington street, and store property on Main street in Poughkeepsie, and also 140 acres of land in Florida, on which there is a well-cultivated orange grove. He is a self-made man, and has achieved success by hard work and perseverance.

Simon Sanders, the father of our subject, was born in Ireland, where he learned the stone mason's trade, which he followed after coming to America. He married, in Canada, Miss Mary Marian, also a native of Ireland, and they came to Poughkeepsie where Mr. Sanders followed his trade. The following children were born to them: James, a machinist, who was an engineer for the Standard Oil Company in New Orleans, where he died; John, who was captain of the police in New York City, where he died in 1889; Robert, our subject; and Simon, who is a blacksmith in New Jersey. The father of these died about 1852, and the mother departed this life in 1885.

JOHN M. DORLAND is one of the ablest lawyers practicing at the Poughkeepsie bar, being possessed of a mind which enables him to at once discover the points in a case. A man of sound judgment, he manages his cases with masterly skill and tact. He is a logical reasoner, and has a ready command of the English language. He claims Matteawan, Dutchess county, as his native city, the date of his birth being June 30, 1846.

Mr. Dorland remained in Matteawan, attending school until twelve years of age, at which time he accompanied his parents to Poughkeepsie, where he pursued his studies in the high school and the Dutchess County Academy, completing his education at the Eastman Business College, where he graduated in the class of '66. He was then employed for two years in the surrogate's office, after which he was engaged in the livery business until 1870, when he entered the law office of Dorland & Williams, with whom he remained for about two years. On the expiration of that time he again held a position in the surrogate's office, where he was employed until January 1, 1877. In September, 1878, he was admitted to the bar, and has since successfully practiced law in Poughkeepsie.

On September 5, 1875, Mr. Dorland was married to Miss Phœbe J. Robinson, a native of Fishkill, and a daughter of John H. and Jane Robinson, the former of whom was of Irish extraction, and by occupation a general farmer. In religious belief our subject and his wife are Methodists and are identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Politically, Mr. Dorland votes the straight Republican ticket. His powers as an advocate have been demonstrated by his success on many occasions; he is an able lawyer of large and varied experience in all the courts. Thoroughness characterizes all his efforts, and he conducts his business with a strict regard to a high standard of professional ethics.

WILLIAM HENRY WHITE. The family to which the subject of this sketch belongs is one of the oldest in the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, his great-great-grandfather, Joseph White, having settled in the southwestern part of the town before the Revolutionary war, upon a tract of land which he cleared and cultivated. This land has ever since been in the possession of the descendants, and is now owned by Warren White. Joshua, son of Joseph White, was a prominent resident of Pawling town, holding various offices, including that of supervisor, and he for many years was a justice of the peace. Sewell, another son of Joseph White, and our subject's great-grandfather, was born there in 1781, and, as did his father, he followed agriculture throughout his life. He died in 1859, and his remains are buried at Ludingtonville. He married Sallie Lounsbury, and had seven children, of whom John B., the grandfather of our subject, was the eldest. (2) Eli lived and died in the town of Pawling; (3) Joseph R. moved to Pennsylvania, where he made his permanent home; (4) Amzy lived at Bluffton, Wells Co., Ind.; (5) Warren occupies the old homestead; and (6) Lucy died at the age of twelve years. In politics the male members of the family have always been Whigs and Republicans; and in their religious views they have inclined toward the Methodist form of worship.

John B. White was born at the old farm in 1809, and although his educational advantages were not of the best, his fine natural ability made up for that to a great extent, and his judgment, in business affairs and other matters, was much sought by his associates. His farm was not large, but he was regarded as an excellent manager. Political office had no charms for him, although his high standing in the community would have insured his success as a candidate. He married Mary P. Worden, a daughter of Dr. Stephen Worden, a leading physician of his day in that locality. Of their eight children our subject's father, Sewell White, was the eldest. (2) Stephen died in 1886; (3) Sarah Ann married Timothy Flannelly; (4) Elizabeth married Russell Ballard; (5) Joshua left home, and his present location is not known (he probably died in Andersonville prison during the Civil war); (6) Abigail married William Peck; (7) Maria married George Ballard; and (8) Esther became the wife of Samuel Humphrey. The father died in 1888, in his eightieth year, the mother surviving him only two years.

Sewell White was born September 2, 1834, at the old home farm, and he was given fair educational advantages in the district schools at Reynoldsville, although, with his mental gifts, he could have done justice to better opportunities. His later reading has been extensive and thorough, thus making good many early limitations. At the age of seventeen he was apprenticed to C. H. DeGraff, of Patterson, N. Y., to learn the blacksmith's trade, and after three years there, he worked two and a half years for Matthew Worden, of Dover Plains. He then entered the service of the Harlem Railroad Co., spending twelve years in the repair shops at Dover Plains, with the exception of two years as conductor of a freight train. After severing his connection with the railroad he engaged in blacksmithing on his own account, opening a shop in Pawling about 1870, and he followed the trade at different locations in the town until 1888, when the firm of White & Ragan was formed, and their present successful business as wagon makers and blacksmiths was established. Their new shop, which was built in 1892, is one of the largest in that part of the county, and their trade extends through a large territory. Mr. White is a member of the M. E. Church, and has always shown much public spirit. He takes an active interest in the success of the Democratic party, and has been town sealer, town clerk, road commissioner and justice of the peace. As a self-made man, his reputation in the business world is an enviable one, while his able discharge of every duty as a public official has been no less creditable to him. He married Miss Nancy Amy, daughter of Gilbert Amy, a leading citizen of Union-vale, and had three children: (1) William Henry; (2) Sarah, who married George T. Chapman, of Pawling, and has four children—Mary, Cordelia, Grace and George; and (3) Cora, who is at home.

William Henry White, one of the successful business men of Pawling, holds the responsible position of assistant purchasing agent for the N. Y. & N. H. R. R. He was born at Dover Plains, N. Y., September 20, 1855; educated at the private school of George N. Perry, and at the public schools. He learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, and after serving his time he took up the business of telegraphing; was in the employ of the Housatonic Railroad Co. at New Milford, for a period of eight years as agent and telegrapher, becoming during this time a shorthand writer and machine operator. In 1885 he was appointed trainmaster of the Housatonic railroad, which position he resigned in 1887 to accept his present one.

Our subject married Mary Augusta Senior, daughter of Joseph D. Senior and Adelia E. Wright, and their children are: Grace Dale, Clifford Sewell, Daisy Edith, Jessie Bishop and Ruth Marion. Joseph Dale Senior was born in Danbury in 1830, son of William Senior, who came from Dorsetshire, England, in 1830. The family of Adelia E. Wright (Mrs. White's mother) is connected with the early history of New England, originating (to present knowledge) with John Shaw and his wife Martha (Knowles), 1744, different members having been of the towns of Washington, Kent, Hartford, Haddam, New Milford, and Danbury, Conn. The family is connected with the old Beecher and Ward families of Litchfield county, Connecticut.

JAMES B. HAIGHT, a prominent agriculturist and miller of Bangall, Dutchess county, was born July 23, 1837, in the town of Stanford. His family has for many years held a leading place in that vicinity. His ancestral history is given in the biography of James Haight.

The late Leonard Haight, our subject's father, passed his life in the town of Stanford, attending its schools in youth, and, later, engaging in farming. He was a Democrat in politics, but was not active in party work. He married Miss Phœbe Griffin, and had six children, of whom our subject is the youngest.

Of the others—Margaret, George, Hannah, John and William—the only survivor is Hannah, who is now Mrs. Simon Losee.

James B. Haight was reared upon a farm, enjoying the educational advantages of the neighboring schools. At the age of thirty-five he left the farm to engage in milling at Bangall, where he has since resided. He owns and operates grist, saw and cider mills, and also manages the old homestead. Possessing unusual business ability and energy, which will push to a successful termination any undertaking, he stands high in the esteem of his associates. He married Miss Susan Hart, a daughter of R. Hart, one of Stanford's leading residents, and has two children—William J., and Pæbe, now the wife of Charles Hicks. In politics Mr. Haight is a Democrat.

FREDERICK C. WHITE, a well-known citizen of Pawling, Dutchess county, now in the employ of the Harlem Railroad Co., is one of those men whose quiet and constant attention to the "duty which lies nearest" makes their lives pass without extraordinary incident. For some years he followed the carpenter's trade in Canaan, Columbia Co., N. Y., previous to entering upon his present business. He married Miss Cornelia Brusie Traver, who was born and reared in the town of Northeast, Dutchess county, receiving her education in the common schools there. Of their two children, the elder, Wilbur White, was born in 1858, at Sharon, Conn., and, after securing his education in the schools of that town, learned the business of painting and paper hanging. He and his wife, formerly Miss Kate Northrup, have one child, Raymond, born in 1881. Estella White, our subject's younger child, was born in 1863, in Millerton, N. Y., where she attended school. She married Fred Fletcher, a painter at Patterson, N. Y., and has three children: Harold, born in 1886; Clarence, born in 1889; and Leon, born in 1896.

Mrs. Cornelia B. White's ancestors were early residents at Ancram, Columbia Co., N. Y., where her grandfather, Charles Traver, was born. His education was obtained in the local schools, and later he engaged in agriculture there, passing his life in that pursuit. He was a private soldier in the war of 1812. A family of six children was born to him and his wife Elizabeth, all of whom lived to adult age and married as follows: Hiram—Eliza Brusie; John—Salina Summers; Freeman—Sarah Colby; James—Betsy Race; Elizabeth—William Cannam; and Polly—Ebenezer Guernsey.

Hiram Traver, Mrs. White's father, was born in Ancram in 1805, and the common schools of that town furnished him his educational opportunities. Engaging in early manhood in farming, he followed that occupation all his life, and, for twenty years, he also carried the mail from Sharon to Cornwall, Conn., and from Poughkeepsie to New Paltz, N. Y. His wife was a daughter of Nicholas and Loretta (Egleston) Brusie, her father being the well-known wagon maker of Boston Corners, N. Y. Mrs. White was born in 1838, the second of a family of four children—Charles, Cornelia, Mary and Alva. The eldest, Charles, was born in 1836, in Sharon, Conn., studied in the public schools there, and learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed the greater part of his life. Shortly after the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted in the 19th 2d C. V. H. A., as a corporal, and served throughout the war with honor, being mustered out, in 1865, as a lieutenant. He received a wound in the battle of the Wilderness. He married Miss Susan Kellog, and has had four children: Julia, wife of Eugene Halleck; Frederick, who married Paulina Halleck; Fannie, wife of John Platt; and William, who is not married. Of the two younger children of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Traver, Mary Brusie was born in 1840, at Dover Furnace, married Sanford Palmer, and had two children: (1) Emma, who married William Root, and has three children—May, Claude and Bertha; (2) Dora, who married Fred Calkins, and has four children—Charles, Emma, Eugene and LeRoy. Alva Brusie Traver was born in 1855, at Sharon, Conn., and, after attending the public schools there for some years, studied music, and is now a professor in that art at Central Valley, Orange Co., N. Y. He married Miss Adelaide Strickland, and has had two children—Levern and Carl, both at home.

ABEL SMITH, one of the substantial agriculturists of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, is a descendant of an old and patriotic family of Westchester county, N. Y. His grandfather, Richard Smith, was born in North Castle, and followed agriculture there. He did good service in the Revolutionary war, and, as the locality in which he lived was the scene of much disturbance, many memories of that trying period are connected with his farm. On one occasion a man was shot in his house, and the blood stains can still be seen upon the floor. He and his wife, Elizabeth Miller, reared a family of seven children: Jacob, Richard, Isaac, Benjamin, Sophia, Het-tie and Phœbe.

Jacob Smith, our subject's father, was born and educated at North Castle, and he gave evidence of his patriotism, by serving as a soldier in the war of 1812. By occupation he was a farmer and shoemaker. He married Miss Betsy Carpenter, and had ten children, of whom our subject was the youngest. The others all lived to adult age, and married as follows: Ruth—Hiram Lewis; Esther A.—Merritt Sarls; Abigail—Chauncy Hall; Morris C.—Charlotte Foster; Mary—William Wright; Deborah L.—John Griffin; Richard—Mary Peck; Sarah S.—Griffin Hunter; and Eleanor—Edward Simmonds.

Our subject was born March 5, 1831; he was reared at the old homestead at North Castle, and attended the public schools of that town. He learned the blacksmith's trade, and followed it there for several years, but, in 1860, he moved to the town of Pawling, and he has since devoted his attention to farming. He married Miss Ann Maria Odell, and has had five children: (1) Benson was born at Mount Pleasant, Westchester county, in 1854, and, after receiving a common-school education, engaged in farming, but later became interested in shirt manufacturing. He and his wife, formerly Miss M. Frances Reynolds, have four children—Herbert; Belle (Mrs. Watson Ballard); Lilly M., and Wilby; of these, the first and the last two are not married. (2) Elnora, born in 1856, married Casper Davis, a wheelwright, of Connecticut, and has five children—Maude, Della, Edna, Abel and Casper, all at home. (3) Lemuel, born in 1860, married Miss Alice Carrey, but has no children. (4) Ida, born in 1863, is at home. (5) Grace, born in 1870, married Riley Peck, and has three children—Arthur, Everett L. and Odell.

The wife of our subject is also descended from a well-known Westchester family. Her grandfather, Benjamin Odell, was born there, and lived and died there, following in his mature years the occupations of farming and blacksmithing. He married, and had seven children: Jacob, Isaac, Benjamin, Clinton, Rosette, Mary and Lackey. Jacob Odell, Mrs. Smith's father, was also a native of Westchester county, and on completing his common-school course there engaged in farming and blacksmithing at Mount Pleasant. He married (first) Miss Taner, and (second) Miss Jane Lint, daughter of Peter and Maria Lint. Seven children were born of the second union: Abram married Esther Angevine; Peter married Lutetia Yearkes; William married Charity Nodine; Jackson married Mary Buckhaupt; Julia A. is not married; Ann Maria is now Mrs. Smith; and Benjamin married Martha Whitney.

GEORGE J. LEE, a prosperous farmer of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, is a representative of the well-known Lee family, who long made their home in the town of Washington, Dutchess county. His grandfather, Samuel Lee, was there born, reared and educated. He learned the trade of a mason, which he followed throughout life, and was an expert workman. In Unionvale there is a house still standing, now over one hundred years old, which was erected by him. He married Miss Pattie Haight, by whom he had nine children: John, the father of our subject; Frederick, who wedded Margaret Crouse; James; Joseph; Herman; Moses; Isaac, who married Mary Lee; George; and Phœbe A., who became the wife of Talmadge Sutherland.

The birth of John Lee occurred in the town of Washington, in 1805. He received a common-school education, and learned the carpenter's trade. Many of the finest residences of Dutchess county are the work of his hands. His vote was cast in support of the principles of the Whig party, but he cared nothing for political preferment. He married Miss Ann Wilbur, daughter of Enoch Wilbur, a farmer of Washington town, and they became the parents of four children, namely: (1) Enoch H., who after the completion of his education, engaged in painting in Washington town. On the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion he enlisted in the 44th N. Y. V. I., and was, later, transferred to the 146th regiment; he was killed in the last battle of the war, at the time of Lee's surrender. (2) Brownell W., the second son, learned the wheelwright's trade, at which he has since been employed, having a shop at Arlington, N. Y. He also served in the Civil war, becoming a member of the 61st N. Y. V. I., and on his re-enlistment joined the 66th New York Cavalry, with which he served until hostilities had ceased, when he was mustered out with the rank of sergeant. At one time he was confined in Libby prison and endured all the privations and hardships of army life. He married Miss Jane Owen, by whom he has ten children—George; Ida, wife of Clinton Kerry; Eva; Harvey; Weston; John; Mabel; Oneta; Myron; and Louis, who died in infancy. (3) Our subject is next in order of birth. (4) Elizabeth, the only daughter, died at the age of five years.

George J. Lee, of this review, was born in the town of Washington, in 1847, and there obtained a common-school education. In early life he learned the blacksmith's trade, which he followed only to a limited extent, giving his attention principally to his farming interests. In 1896 he purchased the Caroline Congdon farm in Unionvale town, which comprises 223 acres of fine land, and is now engaged in its cultivation and improvement. He is an enterprising and progressive agriculturist, thoroughly understanding his business, and well deserves the success which has come to him. He is a valued citizen of the community, one who has the esteem and confidence of those with whom he comes in contact.

In 1875 Mr. Lee was married to Miss Carrie Jones, whose birth occurred in the town of Clinton, Dutchess county, June 6, 1854, and whose education was obtained in Broome county, N. Y. They have an interesting family of three children: Enoch J., born January 19, 1880; Estella, born June 28, 1883, and Minnie A., born August 21, 1892.

The paternal great-grandfather of Mrs. Lee spent his entire life in Columbia county, N. Y., and reared his six children, namely: Hugh; Mary; Margaret; John; Thomas, who married Jane Allen; and William, who married Abigail. Hugh Jones, the eldest of the children, and the grandfather of Mrs. Lee, was a native of Columbia county, and throughout life followed the occupation of farming. He was united in marriage with Miss Matilda Burrows, a daughter of Benjamin Burrows, and to them were born children as follows:

(1) Sarah M. Jones was born in Columbia county in 1829, but was educated in Dutchess county, where her parents had removed when she was quite young. She became the wife of George Morey, a native of the town of Clinton, Dutchess county. However, most of his life was devoted to farming in Washington town. He was the son of Joseph Morey, who was born and reared in the town of Clinton, and was also a farmer by occupation. By his marriage with Miss Mary Winslow, Joseph Morey had six children: Benjamin, who married Janè Burhans; Edmond, who died when young; George; Jane A.; Margaret; and Elizabeth. The eldest daughter, Jane A., married Robert Buck, and they have two children: Elizabeth, who married Godfrey Wolven, and they have two children: Lottie, wife of Paul Burger, and Annie; and George, the only son of Mrs. Jane Buck. Three children were born to George and Sarah M. (Jones) Morey, as follows: (a) Robert, who was born and educated in Washington town, and during his youth learned the blacksmith trade, at which he has since worked. For his first wife he married Delia Bishop, and they had one child, Georgiana, who wedded Amos Thorn, a carpenter, and to them has been born a son, Harry. After the death of his first wife, Robert Morey was joined in wedlock with Minnie Clement, and they have two children: Oakley and Allerton. (b) Egbert Morey was also born, reared and educated in Washington town, and follows the pursuit of blacksmithing. He married Ella Travis, and they have one son, Chester. (c) Annie Morey, the only daughter, died at the age of eight years. The family are widely and favorably known throughout the community where they make their homes, and have the regard of all who know them.

(2) Darius was a native of Columbia county, N. Y., and a carpenter by trade. He married Miss Jane Gallagher, and had four children: Ida; Charles; Mrs. Viola Horn; and Elry.

(3) Michael Jones is the father of Mrs. Lee. He was born in Columbia county, but acquired his education in the common schools of Dutchess county, and throughout life has been employed at the mason's trade. He wedded Miss Adaline Gildersleeve, daughter of Alfred Gildersleeve, a farmer of the town of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess county, and they became the parents of the following children: Lemuel, a machinist of Oneonta, N. Y., who is married and has three children, Lillie, Dora and Effie; Carrie, the wife of our subject; Emma, wife of Augustus West (an employe on the Albany & Susquehanna railroad), by whom she has two sons—Herbert and Harry; George; Hugh;

Paul; John; Laura; Harry; and one who died at the age of two years.

(4) David Jones, a native of Columbia county, carried on farming. He married Het-tie Davis, and in their family were five chil-dren: Annie, who married Irving Jones; Mary, who wedded Byron Robinson; Dora; Alfrette, who married William Robinson; and Alice, who became the wife of Arthur Haight.

(5) Diana Jones married Cornelius Morris, and had two children: William, who married Annie Shaw; and Annie, who married William Martin. (6) Elizabeth married Walter Stew-art, and had three children: Mrs. Mary Hop-kins; Harry; and Zadie. (7) Lydia married Orlando Monroe, and had three children: Frank O.; Elizabeth, who married Hiram Tripp; and Clark, who married a Miss Hor-ton. (8) Josiah Jones, an agriculturist, mar-ried Elizabeth Horn, and has one son, Will-iam. (9) Mary Jones wedded William Cham-berlain, and had two children: Willis and Hugh. (10) Alonzo Jones died when young. (11) Louisa Jones married Henry Briggs, by whom she had one child, Orlando. (12) Rodger T. Jones, the youngest of the family, married Diana Davis, and they have two chil-dren: Judson and Eva.

GEORGE INNIS, a son of Aaron Innis, mention of whom is made in the sketch of a son, Aaron, elsewhere in this volume, where will also be found the ancestral history of the family, is a representative manufacturer of Dutchess county, born in Poughkeepsie, where his early life was spent and where he received his education.

In 1842 our subject became associated with Gifford & Sherman in the dye-wood business, in which he has continued ever since. That year the style of the firm became Gifford, Sherman & Innis, and so continued until the death of Mr. Sherman in 1858; the firm name stood as formerly until 1884, when it was Innis & Co. Our subject has been one of the lead-ers in all matters relating to public improve-ment, and among other projects he contributed a large sum of money for the construction of the Poughkeepsie & Eastern R. R., which he was instrumental in getting through Pough-keepsie. Mr. Innis was elected president of the old village of Poughkeepsie in the "50's," was mayor of the city for three terms of two years each, during the Civil war, and has held the office of village trustee and supervisor. He has always been a staunch Republican in politics, and was a Presidential elector at the first election of General Grant. Religiously he is a member of the First Reformed Church, to which he is a liberal contributor. In 1855 he was married in New Paltz, Ulster county, to Anna Bevier, daughter of Levi Hasbrouck, and two children were born to them: (1) Martha, who married William H. Young, a lawyer in New York City, living on Prof. S. F. B. Morse's place; they have two children—Annette Innis, and Innis. (2) Hasbrouck, of the firm of Innis & Co. Our subject is a com-petent business man, social in nature and well-liked by everyone.

JOHAN McGLASSON, the able superintend-ent of the Poughkeepsie (Dutchess county) Rural Cemetery, has made that place one of the most admirably managed burial grounds to be found along the Hudson river, his suc-cess fully justifying the confidence reposed in him by the officers of the association.

The ancient home of his family was in Dumfriesshire, Scotland. His grandfather Mc-Glasson was a native of that locality, and fol-lowed the business of quarrying, in which he lost his life. He and his wife, Elizabeth Elliott, had three children: Robert, our subject's fa-ther; Jane, who married Jacob Read, of An-nan, and Jessie, who married Mr. Wilkinson.

Robert McGlasson was born in July, 1818, and was a mere boy when his father's death occurred. He became a miller by occupation, and in 1848 came to the United States, lo-cating first in Stanford, Conn., where he was foreman of the spice mills for some time. Later he moved to the town of Lewisboro, Westchester Co., N. Y., and spent six or seven years conducting a flourmill, but about 1857 he disposed of this business and moved to Dover, Dutchess county, where he ran the Hancut Mills on shares for many years. With the exception of two or three years at Little Rest, the remainder of his life was passed there. Possessing good natural abilities, he was suc-cessful in business, and was regarded as one of the substantial citizens of the town. He was a Presbyterian in religion, and in politics was a Democrat, voting for Pierce, but later was a Republican, though liberal in his views. His wife was Mary Irving, daughter of John and Jeannette (Thompson) Irving, and they had six children, viz.: Jeannette T., who married S. B. Shaw, a farmer of Fairfax Court House, Va.; John, our subject; Thomas Irving, now the owner of an undertaking establishment and paint shop in Matteawan; Elizabeth Elliott, the wife of Robert J. Shadbolt, a lawyer of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Robert A., a railway conductor, residing in Harlem; and Minerva I., the wife of Samuel R. Hanna.

John McGlasson was born September 1, 1843, at the old home. The family settled in Dutchess county during his boyhood, and his education was obtained mainly in the district schools of Dover Plains before the age of fifteen years, although after he was twenty-one he attended night school in New York City, at Cooper Union and in the grammar schools. While his early advantages were not as liberal as might have been desired, he has done much to offset this by reading and private study, and is well-posted upon current topics. At the age of fourteen he left home and spent two years working for the father of W. T. Ketcham, and two summers with the father of George W. Perry. He began to learn the marble-cutter's trade, when he was seventeen, serving an apprenticeship of four years with Charles Smith, and then worked for him two and a half years longer. He went to New York and remained seven years, and in 1870, he established a marble yard at Pawling, and continued it until 1882, when he went to Poughkeepsie as foreman for Richard Graham. He worked seven years for him, and one year for Mrs. Graham. In December, 1889, he was appointed to his present responsible position, being one of twenty-eight applicants. He is now one of the leading workers in his line, and his management of the grounds with the force of from twenty to twenty-four men is beyond criticism.

He was married to Miss Ollivia Hurd, daughter of William and Laura Hurd, of Pawling. Her father was formerly a well-known merchant at Hurd's Corners. Four children were born of this union: Minnie Reed, Maud Campbell, Mable Irving and William T., all of whom are at home.

Mr. McGlasson sympathizes with the Democratic party in national issues, but is inclined to be independent in local politics. He attends the M. E. Church and contributes to its support, and to the advancement of other worthy causes, and he is a member of Triune Lodge, F. & A. M., Poughkeepsie Chapter No. 173, Poughkeepsie Commandery No. 43 and to the Royal Arcanum.

JOHN LYKE is now retired from the active labors of life, and occupies a comfortable home in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county. He is a native of the vicinity of Johnstown, Columbia Co., N. Y., where his father, George Lyke, was born. There the latter spent his boyhood days, and on reaching maturity was united in marriage with Anna Scofield, by whom he had two children, Margaret and John, but the sister and parents of our subject are all now deceased. The father was a farmer of Columbia county, and was the son of John Lyke, who was of German ancestry, and one of the first settlers of that county where he carried on agricultural pursuits.

Our subject spent his early years near Johnstown, N. Y., in the usual manner of farmer lads, until fourteen, when he went to Copake and completed his education. From the age of twelve years until he reached his majority he worked as a farm hand, but at that time entered a store at Ancram, where he clerked for a year and a half. He next secured a position in a store at Sheffield, N. Y., and later was employed in a hotel at New York City. He then began the show business with G. F. Bailey & Co., and afterward was with Van Ambergh & Co. for sixteen years, during which time he purchased an interest in the firm. On selling out he traveled for a few years with the London Show, and has visited nearly every town of any size east of the Mississippi river.

On giving up that life, Mr. Lyke returned to Copake, N. Y., where he lived retired until coming to Poughkeepsie in 1882, in order to educate his sons. At the former place he was married in 1861, to Sarah Sweet, a daughter of Rowland Sweet, and their family includes three sons: J. Hyatt, a dentist of Millerton, N. Y., wedded Georgiana Rowe, and has two children, Clinton and Stewart; Fred S., a stenographer, married Hattie Williams, by whom he has a son, Fred; and John J. belongs to the hospital corps of the United States Army and is stationed at Washington. For about fourteen years our subject has made his home in Poughkeepsie, during which time he has gained many warm friends and is held in the highest regard by all who know him.

He was identified with the Masonic fraternity in New York City, belonging to Polar Star Lodge; he is now a faithful member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church of Poughkeepsie.

CHARLES E. VAN KLEECK, a prosperous farmer and representative citizen of Poughkeepsie, was born in the town of Beekman, Dutchess county, January 14, 1843. He worked on his father's farm and attended school during his youth.

On November 17, 1869, he was married to Miss Kate B. Rogers, who was born in the town of Beekman August 4, 1842, and they settled on a farm in the town of Wappinger, where they remained for three years, and in 1873 moved to Poughkeepsie. After living here a year they moved to their present farm, where they have reared their two children, Mary E. and Robert M. Mr. Van Kleeck has a farm of eighty-seven acres in the town of Fishkill, and twenty acres in Poughkeepsie. He is a Republican, a public-spirited citizen, and, with his wife, is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

James W. Rogers, the father of Mrs. Van Kleeck, was born in the town of Beekman, where he married Miss Mary Besley, a native of Fishkill, and there were born to them the following children: Helen A., John A., Margaret, Kate B., Charlotte, Phœbe, Mary E., Walter, Henry, George and James. John A. and Walter are farmers in Dutchess county. The others, with the exception of our subject's wife, are deceased. Mr. Rogers died January 29, 1884, and his wife November 22, 1888. Micah Rogers, the grandfather, was also born in Beekman.

Robert M. Van Kleeck, the father of our subject, was born in the city of Poughkeepsie August 10, 1804. He grew up there, and in early life learned the harness and saddle making business of David B. Lent. He married Hannah Rogers, the daughter of John Rogers, a farmer in the town of Beekman. After their marriage, the parents of our subject located in Beekmanville, where he carried on the business of making harness, trunks, saddles, etc. One child, our subject, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Van Kleeck. In 1843 they bought a farm in Fishkill, to which they moved and carried on farming until his death, which occurred October 4, 1872, his wife dying November 19, 1874. He was a Republican, and both were members of Christ Church. The Rogers family was of English ancestry. Hezekiah, the grandfather, was a tanner and currier in the town of Beekman. John, the father of Mrs. Van Kleeck, married Mary Skidmore, a native of Beekman, where they settled and reared the following family: Phœbe, Ruth, Stephen, Laban, James, Judith, Gilbert, Mariah and Hannah.

John M. Van Kleeck, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Poughkeepsie September 15, 1776. His father, Myndert Van Kleeck, was born in Dutchess county, and died there December 17, 1799. He was a direct descendant of Baltus Van Kleeck, who came from Holland. John M. married Miss Eliza Noxon, the daughter of Bartholomew Noxon, a physician, for whom Noxon street was named. John settled in Poughkeepsie, where he carried on a general store on the corner of Main and Academy streets. He also did a shipping business between Poughkeepsie and New York City. He was the father of these children: Robert M., father of our subject; George M., a dry-goods merchant of Poughkeepsie; Edgar M. was in early life a merchant in Poughkeepsie, and later retired; Hester F. died unmarried. The old folks were members of Christ Church.

DAVID F. PHILLIPS, one of the energetic and progressive farmers of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, where he has resided since 1861, is now devoting his attention to the improvement and cultivation of his land with most excellent results. He is honored and respected by the entire community, who look upon him as one of the most wide-awake farmers and model citizens.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, David F. Feller, was a native of Columbia county, where his education was obtained in the common schools, and he there followed the vocation of farming throughout life. By his marriage with Miss Elizabeth Mink, of the same county, he had six children: William, Ezra, Lena, Helen, Jane and Emma Eliza. The last named, Emma Eliza, was born and educated in Pleasant Vale, Columbia county, and became the wife of Abraham Henry Phillips, a native of Columbia county, N. Y., where he was educated in the common schools and followed the occupation of farming. By this union were born seven children, namely: Romelia married Rennselaer Moore; David F. is next in the order of birth; William H. wedded Mary McClure; Martha is unmarried; George A. married Daisy M. De Forest; Elizabeth became the wife of William Wolcott; and Alice died at the age of four years. The brothers and sisters of Abraham Henry Phillips, father of our subject, were: Anthony, who married Catherine Lasher; Nicholas, who married Catherine Feller; Jacob, who also wedded a Miss Feller; John, who married Elmira Decker; Catherine, who became the wife of Edward Teator; and Elizabeth, who married Philip Hapeman.

Mr. Phillips, of this review, is also a native of Columbia county, his birth having occurred in 1845, but when quite young his parents removed west, locating in Michigan, where he attended the public schools and there acquired a fair education. He followed agricultural pursuits in that State until 1861, when he returned east, and has since made his home in the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county. In 1879, he married Mrs. Lottie De Forest, widow of Harry C. De Forest, by whom she had three children: Augustus R., born in 1852; Daisy M., born in 1868; and Wallace, born in 1876. Our subject and his wife have one daughter—Ruby L., born September 6, 1880.

The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Phillips, William Carter, married Miss Charlotte Farner, daughter of Douglass and Elizabeth Farner, of New Brunswick, and to them were born two children: William, the father of Mrs. Phillips; and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Samuel Montgomery. William Carter, Jr., was born and educated in New Brunswick, where he later engaged in the manufacture of cigars. He married Miss Maria B. Whiteman, and to them were born three daughters: Julia W., wife of James H. Cortelyou; Josie, wife of John P. Shafer, of Red Hook; and Lottie, wife of our subject. Her maternal grandfather, John P. Whiteman, was a prominent farmer of the town of Red Hook, Dutchess county, and there married Miss Annie Shook, daughter of John Shook, of the same town. By this union seven children were born, of whom, the mother of Mrs. Phillips was the eldest. She was followed by Eliza A., who became the wife of Robert Leete; Jane L., who married John Lambert; Sarah

M., who wedded George Deipignac; Sophia F.; Aaron W.; and John, who died at an early age.

FRANK TEATS, one of the reliable and progressive young men of Red Hook, Dutchess county, is connected with the firm of Curtis & Benner, hardware merchants. He is a son of Electrice Teats, a prosperous farmer of the town of Red Hook, where our subject received his literary education. He is a natural musician, the master of many different kinds of instruments, and is also quite a vocalist, being at the present time a member of the choir of the Methodist Church of Red Hook. On April 16, 1894, he was united in marriage with Miss Anna Traver, also a native of Red Hook, where she obtained a good education, and one child, Elmer, blesses this union.

Edgar Traver, the grandfather of Mrs. Teats, born in Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, March 20, 1829, was educated in the district schools of the neighborhood, and received his early training as a farmer at that place. He continued to follow that vocation, in connection with stock raising, throughout life, and was quite a prominent man in the community, serving as assessor and supervisor of Red Hook town for many years. He was twice married, his first union being with Anna M. Snyder, and for his second wife he married Catherine Benedict. He became the father of two sons: Arthur and Ransom. The former's birth occurred at Rhinebeck, January 12, 1851, and, after completing his studies in the common schools of the locality, he took up the occupation of farming, and now conducts the old Traver farm at Red Hook. He occupies the old homestead of his father, a substantial brick structure, over one hundred and fifty years old. He married Miss Martha Westfall, whose father was a native of Canada, and to them have been born three children: Mabel, born June 20, 1884; Edna, born April 26, 1886; and Edgar, born February 1, 1887.

Ransom Traver, the father of Mrs. Teats, was born at Rhinebeck, September 21, 1852, and his education was such as the common schools of the locality afforded. On starting out in life for himself he learned the drug business in the village of Rhinebeck, which he there followed for a few years, and then established a drug store at Red Hook, conducting the same very successfully for many years.

On disposing of his business there he removed to Watertown, N. Y., where he now resides. The lady who now shares his name and fortunes was in her maidenhood Miss Edith Hoffman, daughter of B. B. Hoffman, vice-president of the National Bank of Red Hook. They are the parents of four children, namely: William, born December 28, 1870; Herbert, born June 2, 1872; Addie, born March 26, 1875; and Anna, born September 15, 1876.

MYRON BARLOW (deceased) is remembered by the people of the town of Unionvale as a most valued and highly respected citizen. A native of Dutchess county, he was born in the town of Stanford in 1808, and was the son of Braman and Mary (Englasol) Barlow. Thomas Barlow, his paternal grandfather, passed his entire life in Dutchess county, following the occupation of farming during his mature years. He married a Miss Braman, and to them were born two sons—Braman and James.

The birth of Braman Barlow occurred in Stanford township, and in the common schools he secured his education. Like his father, he engaged in agricultural pursuits, and he died on his farm in the town of Stanford. In his family were four children: James never married; Cyrus, who was a member of the Masonic order, married Minerva Welling, and had three children—Myron, who married John Crokite; Caroline, who married Benjamin Palmer; and Frances, who married Dr. Thorn. Myron, of this review, is next in order of birth. Maria became the wife of James Germain, and had nine children—Edward; Talmadge; Cyrus, who married Viola Hicks; Mary; Sarah; Elizabeth; Frances, who married William Creede; Nettie, who married Robert Halstead; and Julia, who married Isaac Winance.

The educational privileges of our subject were such as the public schools of Stanford afforded at an early day, and as a life work he also followed the vocation of farming, to which he had been reared, and with which he was familiar. He was a straightforward, reliable man, courteous, genial, alert and enterprising, and his actions during life were such as to distinctively entitle him to a place in a publication of this character. Socially he affiliated with the Masonic fraternity.

Mr. Barlow was united in marriage with Miss Martha Van Vlack, who was born in Pleasant Valley township, Dutchess county, in 1834, and there received a good common-school education. Seven children blessed their union, namely: (1) Emerson is by profession a dentist, but is also engaged in the brokerage business in Poughkeepsie and Kingston, N. Y. He married Eugenie Du Bois, and they have one daughter, Susie. Like his father he is identified with the Masonic order. (2) Alfred is a buyer of stock for the Union Stock Yards of Chicago, Ill. (3) Myron married Miss Jennie Carpenter, and is now engaged in the furniture business in Poughkeepsie. (4) Alice married Frederick Hall, a carpenter of Patterson, Putnam Co., N. Y., and they have three children, Anna, Myron and Clayton. (5) Jennie is following the profession of teaching in Lagrange town, Dutchess county. (6) George turns his attention to agricultural pursuits. (7) Etta, who completes the family, is a teacher of New Hamburg, Dutchess county. With the exception of the two youngest children, whose births occurred in the town of Unionvale, all were born in Stanford town. They were provided with good educational privileges, and have become intelligent and useful citizens of the various communities where they make their homes.

Andrew Van Vlack, the grandfather of Mrs. Barlow, was a native of Dutchess county, and a farmer by occupation. By his marriage with Catherine Jewell he had seven children: Alfred, the father of Mrs. Barlow; Abraham, who married Phœbe Devine; Cornelia, who married John Stewart; Martha, who married Cornelius Ingraham; Eliza, who married Nicholas McMann; Catherine, who married Jonathan Devine; and Reuben, who married Catherine Johnson.

Alfred Van Vlack was born in 1814, in the town of Pleasant Valley, where he was educated and learned the milling business, which he successfully followed throughout life, purchasing and conducting a mill in Unionvale town. He was a stalwart Democrat in politics and quite an active politician, but never cared for the honors or emoluments of public office, while socially he was connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary Foster, daughter of Martha (Welling) Foster. Five children were born of this union, as follows: Amelia married Lewis Ward, by whom she had a daughter—Minnie. Martha is the second of the family. Jennie married Henry Burton, and has two children—Estella, now the wife of Edward Van Keuren; and Lewis, who married Hattie Duncan. Mary wedded Benjamin Van Wyck. Louisa died in infancy.

GEORGE NAGENGAST was born in Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, June 10, 1852, and has already resided in that city forty-five years. His father, Charles Nagengast, was born in Bavaria, Germany, in 1825, and came to America in 1840. He first settled at Honesdale, Penn., from there went to Albany and soon after found his way to Poughkeepsie.

Charles Nagengast was a teamster by occupation, hauling ore for the blasting furnaces where he was also foreman for many years. In the later years of his life he was in the saloon business. He married Mary Hanline, and they had children as follows: George; Caroline married Lindsley Downer; Charles is in business in Poughkeepsie; Elizabeth Louisa married Frederick Bart; John Schwartz. The mother of this family was a woman of strong character and a large fund of common sense. She died June 18, 1873, the father surviving her until 1889.

George Nagengast had but a limited education as he was only about eleven years old when he went to work in the cigar shop of Joseph Bayard, which a week afterward changed owners, John Schwartz taking possession of the business. He remained in this connection for nineteen years, lacking one month, and until March 25, 1881, when he went into the butchering business. In this, however, he remained only a few weeks, and then again took up the work of his trade, this time with Stephen Stafford. He afterward ran a factory for Eastmead & Lewis, and on October 2, 1881, he began keeping hotel in what is now the "Hudson River House." He remodeled the building, and conducted the business for six years and eleven months. Later he bought out the store of Mrs. Conger at 435 Main street, and ran it for a little over five years. On November 1, 1894, he purchased his present stand, and has since been carrying on a prosperous business. He is a careful, conservative man in financial matters, and has invested his money in real estate, owning some valuable property in Poughkeepsie. Mr. Nagengast was married November 2, 1878, to Miss Caroline, daughter of William and Adeline (Martin) Swartout, and two children have been born to them: Arminta and Lillie May.

Mr. Nagengast is a Republican, but has never been very active in political affairs. He does not belong to any fraternities, but joined the Niagara Company, No. 2, when eighteen years old, four years later joining the O. H. Booth Company, but returning after eight years to his first company, of which he is now treasurer. He is a public-spirited citizen, and is always ready to assist in all worthy enterprises.

DENNIS WHALEN, a well-known retired agriculturist of the town of Dover, Dutchess county, now residing at Dover Plains, was born in 1835 in the parish of Kiltely, County Limerick, Ireland. His family has been prominent there for many generations, and his father, the late Jeremiah Whalen, was one of the leaders of his day in the struggle for the liberty of his country, and was twice elected to Parliament. In 1851 the family immigrated to the United States and settled at Dover Plains. Patrick Whalen, one of our subject's brothers, resides there, and his biography contains a history of this highly esteemed family.

Mr. Whalen attended the schools of his native parish in boyhood, but on coming to this country he at once sought employment. The Harlem railroad was then in process of construction and for some time he worked upon it. He then spent ten years on a farm, and in 1869 he bought a farm of 157 acres at what is known as Illert Hills, and cultivated this while working at times for the railroad company. In 1873 he was appointed baggage master and switch man at Dover Plains, and held those positions until 1894, when an accident disabled him for active business, although he is not at present confined to his bed. He sold his farm in 1893 to S. R. Hanna, and took a pleasure trip to the old country, visiting all parts of the Emerald Isle and gathering a marvelous fund of information.

In 1858 Mr. Whalen married his first wife, Hanora Marona, by whom he had three children: Mary E., born in 1859; Catherine F. in 1860; and Sebastian F. in 1866. His first wife died August 11, 1891, and Mr. Whalen married Miss Delia F. Hogan, a native of County Limerick, Ireland. Her father, William Hogan, was a gardener by trade, and was one of five children, the others being John, Dennis, Mary (Mrs. James Rahilly), and Catherine. He married Margaret Lynch, who was also a member of a family of five. James Lynch married Bridget Sherye; Patrick married Ellen Sherye; Catherine was the wife of William Murphy; and Mary married James Ryan. Mrs. Whalen was the youngest of the five children of William and Margaret Hogan. Mary married John O'Shea; Catherine is at home; Margaret died at the age of thirteen; and Patrick is at home.

HENRY BOLENBAKER. There is probably not a finer farm in all its appointments in the town of Red Hook than the one owned by the subject of this history, who is still a young man, and of whom, on account of his enterprise and industry, great things are expected in the future. The residence is in keeping with the taste and means of the proprietor, and the whole place forms a picture which invariably attracts the admiration of the passing traveler.

Peter P. Bolenbaker, the father of our subject, is one of the prosperous farmers of Red Hook town, and on reaching man's estate he was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Traver, who is one of the nine children of Henry H. Traver and wife, also agriculturists. This worthy couple became the parents of five children, namely: Daniel, who died in infancy; Martha, who became the wife of Theodore Traver; Sarah, who remained single; Henry J., of this review; and Luella C., who also remained single.

In 1886 Mr. Bolenbaker, whose name introduces this notice, was married to Miss Emma E. Fraleigh, a native of the town of Clermont, Columbia Co., N. Y., where she was educated in the common schools. One child blesses this union—Roger Fraleigh.

Peter P. Fraleigh, the father of Mrs. Bolenbaker, was born in the town of Clermont, Columbia county, and in the district schools of the neighborhood he obtained his education. As a lifework he also followed farming. Early in life he was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary Lasher, daughter of Jonas Lasher, of Clermont town, and to them were born the following children: Peter F. married Jennie Saulpaugh; Jonas L. married Margaret Gardner; Helen married Montgomery Finger; William H. married Addie Van Horn; Barbara married Charles Moore; Margaret married Willis Hermance; Emma E. is next in order of birth; Edward W. married Kittie Francis; and Martin and Mary both died in infancy.

WILLIAM AUGUSTUS MOSHER, a prominent agriculturist of the town of Fishkill, Dutchess county, is well known along the Hudson, having spent many years in the transportation business before settling down to the quieter life of a tiller of the soil.

His family is of English origin, and his great-grandfather, William Mosher, crossed the Atlantic as a soldier in the British army during the Revolutionary war, but on landing he deserted and joined the forces under Gen. Washington, serving as a captain throughout the struggle. His son, Amos, married Jane Rhinehart, and their son Miles, our subject's father, was born at Breakneck, Dutchess county, and became a boatman on the Hudson, being engaged in carrying brick between Fishkill Landing and New York City, until his death. He married Louisa Smith, a native of Dutchess county, daughter of Elijah and Margaret Smith, and is still living. Of their eight children, the youngest, Frances, died in childhood, and the others are: William Augustus, Amos, Margaret Jane, Annie, Ida, Henry and Charles.

William A. Mosher was born at Burnsville, Dutchess county, in 1841, and, after acquiring a common-school education, left home to take a place on a boat with Capt. Virgil Coleman, who carried coal from Rondout to Fishkill Landing. He remained with him two years, then spent three seasons on a brick boat running from Fishkill Landing to New York City, passing the winters at home. In 1861 he went to Long Island and worked on a farm for his uncle, Charles Mosher, and on returning spent four months as fireman on the steamer "Rip Van Winkl ." In 1862 he served on the government transport, "Gen. Meigs," for several months, carrying troops and provisions for the army between New York City and southern ports; he also enlisted in Company E, 19th N. Y. S. M., and was sent to Baltimore, Fort Delaware and Havre de Grace, receiving his discharge at Newburgh, N. Y., on the expiration of his term of enlistment—one hundred days. He then went on a canal boat with Capt. Daniel Howell, and on leaving him worked in the Fishkill Landing Machine Shop for a year, when he took another place upon a government transport running from St. Louis to DuVall's Bluff, Memphis, Cairo and New Orleans. He was on this boat at Du Vall's Bluff when the news of Lincoln's assassination reached him. On his return home he was married to Miss Hannah Hickman, daughter of William and Martha (Purdy) Hickman, and granddaughter of Michael and Rachel Hickman. On the maternal side, her grandparents were Francis and Mary (Shaw) Purdy. Six children were born of this union: Amos, Ida, George, Matthew, Nettie and Blanche.

After his marriage Mr. Mosher worked for two years in the Fishkill Landing Machine Shops as a blacksmith and machinist, and two years on the Newburgh and Fishkill ferry as fireman, and then went to Kansas and spent five years in farming. On returning to the East he worked on the construction of the N. Y. & N. E. R. R., aboard a mud scow, and, while thus employed, saved from drowning two men, named John Cook and a Mr. Mitchell. His next employment was on the ferry boats "City of Newburgh" and "Fishkill-on-the-Hudson," as engineer, but after three years he gave up this work to take charge of the brickyard of William H. Aldrich, where he remained six years. He then purchased his present farm of 270 acres, which is bounded by the lands of William H. Cary, George Ireland, Alfred Miller, James Daniels and Reuben Knapp. His main crops are hay and grain, but he gives considerable attention to horticulture, having many grape vines and a number of apple and peach trees, with other fruits. Part of his land is as yet uncleared, and he sells a large amount of wood and hewn timber. His son George assists in the management of this estate. In politics Mr. Mosher is a Republican, and he is a member of the G. A. R.

EUGENE WELLS, one of the leading citizens of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, now living in retirement amid the charming surroundings of that picturesque locality, was born at Hudson, Columbia Co., N. Y., January 17, 1839.

Isaac Wells, the grandfather of our subject, was born in 1770, and among his family of children was Richard I. Wells, Eugene's father, who was born at Coxsackie, Greene Co., N. Y., September 25, 1795. Richard I. Wells was a prominent lawyer of New York City, a member of the well-known firm of Wells & Bushnell, and was a man of great mental ability and sound judgment. From his office were graduated some students who afterward achieved distinction at the bar. In early years he was a Whig and later a Republican, but he was never active in politics. He was an intimate friend of Stephen A. Douglas, and was prominently identified with the landed interests of Chicago, Ill., owning at one time a large amount of real estate there. Wells street in Chicago was named in his honor. On September 28, 1819, he was married to Ann Maria Olcott, daughter of Josiah Olcott, a prominent citizen of Hudson, and had ten children: Anna, the widow of Claudius L. Monell, who was, at the time of his death, chief justice of the Superior Court of the City of New York; Mary, who married Charles Roome, president of the Consolidated Gas Co., of New York; Caroline (deceased); John H. (deceased); Richard (deceased); Ophelia, who married Rev. Henry Darling, late president of Hamilton College; Frederick J., who died in infancy; Thomas O., a resident of New York City; Frances M. (deceased), formerly the wife of Isaac M. Collins, of Hudson, who is now the surrogate of Columbia county; and Eugene, our subject. After many years of successful practice, Mr. Wells, in 1837, retired to Hudson, where he passed his declining years. His death occurred there March 11, 1863. He and his wife were always leaders in the various philanthropic movements of the Church.

The subject of this sketch made choice of the medical profession, and studied for two years with the late Dr. H. B. Sands, of New York City, but was compelled to abandon his books on account of what is called double astigmatism. Since 1865 he has resided at Rhinebeck, where he has identified himself with the best interests of the community, and has won the esteem of all classes. He has been a director of the First National Bank for many years, and has held the office of president of the village.

On May 31, 1865, he married Miss Mary Thorn Teller, daughter of William T. and Eliza Thorn Teller and granddaughter of William Teller. They have one daughter—Caroline Thorn Wells. Mr. and Mrs. Wells attend the Reformed Church at Rhinebeck, and have always been among the leaders in the most exclusive social circles of that town.

FRANK TALLADAY, the well-known host of the "Talladay House," at Dover Plains, Dutchess county, is one of the leading citizens of that pleasant village.

His family has been identified with the town of Dover for many years, and his father, Neilson Talladay, was a native of the town, and, on finishing his education in the local schools, he engaged in business as a carpenter, following that trade throughout his active life. He was a soldier in the Civil war in Company E, 150th N. Y. V. I., and took part in many important engagements. For some time he served as hospital steward at Baltimore, Md. He married Miss Elizabeth Colby, daughter of a leading farmer of the town of Dover, and had five children, of whom our subject was the youngest. The others are: Phœbe (who has not married); Janette (Mrs. C. F. Segelken); Mary (Mrs. John H. Smith); and Elizabeth (Mrs. Archilas Birch).

Frank Talladay was born April 1, 1859, in Dover Plains, Dutchess county. He was educated in the schools of that village, and on completing his course of study, he engaged in business as a butcher at Brooklyn, N. Y. After four years in this enterprise, he moved to Naugatuck, Conn., where he was for some time connected with a rubber manufacturing concern. Later he was engaged in mercantile business at Dover, and in 1893 he rented the hotel now known as the "Talladay House" at Dover Plains, which he has since conducted in a manner to gain and keep the patronage of the public. In 1889 he married Miss Mary Humeston, daughter of Charles and Abbie Humeston, of Dover Plains, and they have one child—Frank W., born in February, 1895.

Mr. Talladay is a member of the Sons of Veterans, of Dover, and he has always taken great interest in politics, identifying himself with the Republican party. He has held several public offices. In 1891, he was elected constable of Dover town, and served three terms.

GRIFFIN COOKINGHAM, one of the leaders among the substantial and prosperous agriculturists of the town of Rhinebeck, Dutchess county, was born May 6, 1835, upon the estate where he now resides, and which has been in the possession of his family since the days of his grandfather, Frederick Cookingham, who was born, probably, in Germany, but settled in Rhinebeck when a young man. He married and reared a family of seven children: John F., a farmer in the town of Hyde Park; Andrew, a farmer in Rhinebeck; William, our subject's father; Rebecca, who married Andrew Pultz, a farmer of Rhinebeck; Omie, who married Frederick Pultz, a farmer in Columbia county; Rennie, the wife of David Marquet, a farmer in the town of Rhinebeck; and a daughter who married Michael Pultz, who was also a farmer there.

William Cookingham, our subject's father, was born in 1802, and always lived at the old farm, coming into possession of a portion of it on the death of his parents. He married Catherine Traver, daughter of Solomon Traver, a farmer in the same locality, and had children as follows: Elizabeth (deceased); Emeline, a widow; Julia, who never married; Frederick, a retired farmer of Rhinebeck; Griffin, our subject; Henry, a resident of Hyde Park; Charles, who lives in Rhinebeck; and James (deceased). The parents of this family are both deceased, the father dying in 1875. Both were devout members of the Lutheran Church.

Our subject grew to manhood at the old homestead, and in 1856 was married to Eleanor Westfall, a native of Nassau, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., and daughter of Jacob Westfall, a farmer, who in his later years moved to Dutchess county. For some years after his marriage Mr. Cookingham and his wife lived on a farm near his birthplace, but in 1877 he returned to the old homestead as owner of 182 acres, a fine farm which he devotes to general crops. He and his wife united with the Reformed Church many years ago, and were among its leading members. Mrs. Cookingham died April 17, 1894, leaving two children: Edward, now a farmer, and married to Maria Schultz; and Eleanor, who is at home. The first two children died—Rachel in childhood and William J. in 1892. In politics Mr. Cookingham, like his father in later years, supports the Republican party. He is one of the active workers in all local improvements, being especially interested in educational affairs, and has served as school trustee for thirteen years.

JOHAN McKEVITT, an energetic and industrious farmer of the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, was born in County Louth, Ireland, and is the grandson of Patrick McKevitt, also a native of the Emerald Isle, and a farmer and weaver by occupation. He wedded Miss Mary Cunningham, and to them were born seven children: Thomas, who married a Miss Leonard; Brien, who studied for the priesthood and had charge of a parish in his native land; Hugh, the father of our subject; Henry, who died when young; Owen, who died unmarried; Mrs. Mary Duffey; and Mrs. Catharine Myers.

The birth of Hugh McKevirt also occurred in County Louth, Ireland, and there he was educated and engaged in weaving and farming. He married Miss Ann Riley, a daughter of John and Mary (Cassidy) Riley, farming people of that country, and they became the parents of seven children, as follows: (1) Patrick spent his entire life on the Emerald Isle, where he followed farming and droving. By his marriage with Ann McBride, he had eight children—Mary, Hugh, John, Patrick (deceased), Peter, Catherine, Alice (deceased) and O'Brien. (2) Brien remained single, conducting a bakery in Ireland. (3) Henry came to the United States in 1852, locating in New York City, where he engaged in the liquor business. He married Miss Rose McLaughlin, and they have seven children—Hugh, Joseph, Annie, Henry, Rose, Mary and John. (4) Mary became the wife of James McCarty. (5) John, of this sketch, is next in order of birth. (6) Catherine married Thomas McDermott, and has four children—Annie, Hugh, Mary and William. (7) Alice married a Mr. Mooney, and has two children—William and Mary.

John McKevirt, the subject proper of this sketch, acquired his education in the place of his nativity, and there followed farming until coming to the New World in 1854, at which time he located on Long Island; after a year passed there he came to Dutchess county, where he has since resided. He is a valued and esteemed citizen of the community, and a credit to the land that gave him birth. He uses his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the Democratic party, but he has never aspired to public office.

Mr. McKevirt was united in marriage with Miss Catherine Newman, a daughter of Thomas and Mary (Garrey) Newman, farming people of West Meath, Ireland. Of their union have been born four children, namely: Thomas J., Annie, Mary R. and Catherine. The family is one of prominence, holding a high position in the social circles of the locality where they make their homes.

WINFIELD B. HINMAN comes of a good family, which was of English origin, but for several generations has been located in Connecticut. His grandfather, Abner Hinman, was born at Southbury, New Haven county, and passed his life there upon a farm, where he and his wife reared to adult age a family of seven children: (1) Esther married Johnson Tuttle, a farmer in Southbury, who died in 1876. (2) Sidney went to Ithaca, N. Y., and later to the vicinity of Detroit, Mich., where he settled in what was then an unbroken wilderness, and at his death, in 1880, he was a prosperous agriculturist. (3) Preston, who is not married, followed shoemaking at Southbury, later in Oxford, his present home. (4) Gennett married Smith Hine, of Bridgeport, and both are now deceased. (5) Polly married Smith Downe, a carpenter, and both are deceased. (6) Horace is mentioned more fully below. (7) Roswell (deceased) was a mechanic.

Horace Hinman, our subject's father, who is now living in retirement, was born in Southbury, Conn., and married a native of that place, Mary Hughes, a lady of Scotch descent. They first settled in Southbury and later in Oxford, Conn., Mr. Hinman following the shoemaker's trade. He is a Democrat in politics, and he and his wife are both consistent members of the M. E. Church. They had four children as follows: (1) Sarah married H. B. Folly, a wholesale merchant of Danbury, Conn.; (2) Fannie and (3) Della are deceased; and (4) Winfield B.

We will now return to the subject proper of this sketch, who was born at Oxford, Conn., October 30, 1863. He attended school there for some years, but as has been said he began at twelve to support himself by his own labor. At sixteen he left home to work on a farm at Newtown, Conn., where he spent two years. He then went to Southbury, where he was similarly employed for three years, and also rented a farm of 300 acres which he conducted for a time. Two years upon a rented farm near Liverpool, N. Y., followed, after which he went to Syracuse, N. Y., as shipping clerk for the Butler Manfg. Co. After one year there he spent a short time in Philadelphia, before going to Danbury, Conn., to take charge of a wholesale provision store, which he managed successfully for three years. There he learned all the details of the business, and having at last found a congenial pursuit which promised good financial returns he has since continued it. In January, 1891, he became manager of a retail produce business at Matteawan, which he purchased at the end of three months. His success was extraordinary. Beginning with a cash capital of $26 he increased his trade until he had three stores—one on Main street, Matteawan; one at Fishkill Landing, and one at Cold Spring; employing in all nine men. The business included a retail grocery and meat trade with a wholesale trade in sausages.

On April 4, 1883, Mr. Hinman was married to Miss Lizzie Loomis, daughter of K. H. Loomis, of Syracuse, N. Y., and three children have blessed their home: Harlow; and two who died in infancy. Mr. Hinman has been interested in public affairs, local and National. In politics he is a Republican, and as a member of the Presbyterian Church he takes a helpful part in religious and philanthropic effort. He is also a member of the K. of P.

NICHOLAS VAN WAGNER, farmer, post office Billings, Dutchess county, New York.

WILLIAM H. FIERO, a most reliable and faithful engineer on the Harlem railroad, whose fidelity to every duty has commended him most highly to his employers, is a resident of the town of Dover, Dutchess county. He was born in the town of Unionvale, Dutchess county, March 24, 1865.

William H. Fiero, his grandfather, was a native of Columbia Co., N. Y., born August 1, 1808, and on November 8, 1827, married Sallie Ann Chapman, a daughter of John and Katherine Chapman, born September 5, 1807, at Dover, Dutchess Co., N. Y. Their children were: Jonathan A., born August 3, 1833; Oscar, born August 21, 1836; John, born July 9, 1838; Hattie A., born April 28, 1841, died December 25, 1871; and William H., born April 7, 1846, died May 9, of the same year.

John Fiero, the father of our subject, an undertaker by occupation, is a native of Dover, Dutchess county, and, on growing to manhood, he was married to Adelaide F. Leonard, a native of the town of Pawling, Dutchess county, born April 28, 1841, and the marriage was blessed by the following children: (1) Jennie S., born November 5, 1859, in the town of Union, Penn., married in August, 1882, Edward Davis, of Danbury, Conn., and their children are—Ida May, born March 6, 1886; Bessie F., born February 26, 1890; and John, born June 26, 1893, died on December 6, 1895, in Albany, N. Y. Of these children, Ida May and Bessie F. were born at Danbury, Conn., and John in New York City. The mother of these died at Dover, July 9, 1895. (2) Hattie A., born July 7, 1862, in the town of Amenia, Dutchess county, married March 29, 1882, Marcus D. Marcy, and they have one child, Bertha F., born July 29, 1885, at Dover, Dutchess county. (3) William H., our subject. (4) Ida A., born January 24, 1869, in the town of Dover, died May 4, 1870, in the town of Amenia.

Our subject's marriage to Miss Minnie Rider, who was born at Bangall, Dutchess county, March 8, 1863, was blessed with the following children: Ida A., born June 3, 1884; Addie, born May 20, 1885, died March 12, 1894; John, born November 24, 1889; and William S., born January 14, 1893. The father of these is one of the progressive and enterprising citizens of Dutchess county, and the several members of the family possess qualities that endear them to a large circle of friends.

INDEX.

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|----------------------------------|-------------------|-------------------------------|----------|----------------------------------|----------|
| Abel, Dwight..... | 499 | Bain, Horatio N..... | 902 | Belding, George T..... | 361 |
| Abel, Mrs. Esther O..... | 400 | Baker, Benjamin N., M. D..... | 236 | Belding, Mrs. George T..... | 361 |
| Abel, John U..... | 400 | Baker, Charles E..... | 574 | Benedict, Julius..... | 396 |
| Abel, Orlin B..... | 674 | Baker Families..... | 574, 812 | Benson Families..... | 835, 905 |
| Abel, William W..... | 499 | Baker, Lewis..... | 107 | Benson, Franklin De Peyster..... | 524 |
| Ackerman Family..... | 533 | Baker, Lewis, Jr..... | 108 | Benson, James V..... | 835 |
| Ackerman, Jacob S..... | 533 | Baker, Morris..... | 800 | Benson, Joseph H..... | 524 |
| Ackert, David E..... | 128 | Baker, William..... | 565 | Benson, Joshua..... | 247 |
| Ackert, Dr. W. E..... | 257 | Baker, William W..... | 812 | Benson, Zadie J..... | 247 |
| Adriance Families..... | 115, 253, 361 | Baldwin Family..... | 843 | Berry, Elias W..... | 717 |
| Adriance, John E..... | 116 | Baldwin, James E..... | 843 | Berry Family..... | 717 |
| Adriance, John P..... | 115 | Baldwin, Peter W..... | 845 | Bevier Family..... | 312 |
| Adriance, Peter..... | 297 | Barculo, Judge Seward..... | 7 | Bevier, Henry B..... | 275 |
| Adriance, William..... | 253 | Baright, Daniel S..... | 681 | Billings, Isaac V..... | 863 |
| Akin, Albert J..... | 322 | Baright, Elijah..... | 682 | Billings, Mrs. Susan..... | 863 |
| Akin Families..... | 66, 322, 371, 373 | Baright, Samuel C..... | 286 | Bird Family..... | 468 |
| Akin, Miss Mary J..... | 372 | Barker, Henry M..... | 623 | Bird, J. Sterling, M. D..... | 70 |
| Albro Family..... | 415 | Barlow, James R..... | 627 | Bird, Mrs. Ruhamer W. P..... | 468 |
| Albro, William C..... | 415 | Barlow, Mrs. Martha..... | 935 | Bird, Virgil..... | 468 |
| Alden Family..... | 291 | Barlow, Myron..... | 935 | Birdsall, Frank E..... | 883 |
| Alden, Henry A..... | 290 | Barmore, Clark C..... | 521 | Bisbee Family..... | 28 |
| Alden, Mary M..... | 292 | Barmore, Edward..... | 521 | Bisbee, Joseph B..... | 29 |
| Aldridge, Thomas G..... | 892 | Barmore Family..... | 708 | Bisbee, Otis..... | 28 |
| Allen, Nicholas..... | 663 | Barmore, James..... | 708 | Bishop, Alexander, Jr..... | 807 |
| Allen, William H..... | 878 | Barnard, Hon. Joseph F..... | 1 | Bishop Family..... | 391 |
| Allendorf, Alfred..... | 331 | Barnes, David T..... | 679 | Bishop, Noah L..... | 433 |
| Allendorf, C..... | 919 | Barnes, Edwin, M. D..... | 568 | Blair, James..... | 755 |
| Allendorf, Mrs. Catherine A..... | 332 | Barnes Families..... | 568, 679 | Bliss Families..... | 85, 189 |
| Alling, J. Sackett..... | 458 | Barnes, Mrs. Mary E..... | 678 | Bliss, William A., M. D..... | 85 |
| Allison Family..... | 487 | Barnes, Oliver S..... | 678 | Bodden, William..... | 686 |
| Allison, Henry E., M. D..... | 228 | Barnes, Oliver Weldon..... | 305 | Bodenstein, Henry..... | 645 |
| Ambler Families..... | 330, 399 | Barnum, Andrew..... | 882 | Bodenstein, John G..... | 796 |
| Ambler, John P..... | 399 | Barnum, John D..... | 882 | Bogardus, Abraham A..... | 815 |
| Ambler, Samuel H..... | 330 | Barrett Family..... | 525 | Bogle, William..... | 191 |
| Anderson, A. Butler..... | 683 | Barrett, E. Lathrop..... | 487 | Boice, John H..... | 872 |
| Anderson Family..... | 683 | Barrett, John R..... | 807 | Boice, Nelson L..... | 176 |
| Anderson, John P..... | 710 | Barrett, Oliver..... | 525 | Bolenbaker, Henry..... | 937 |
| Anderson, Peter..... | 710 | Barringer, John C..... | 875 | Bolin, Gaius C..... | 116 |
| Andrews, Mrs. A. B..... | 248 | Bartholomew, Ralph A..... | 762 | Bolles, Arthur H..... | 862 |
| Andrews, Charles C..... | 458 | Bartlett Family..... | 711 | Bonney, Hon. Alfred..... | 26 |
| Angell, George H..... | 643 | Bartlett, Sanford J..... | 711 | Bonney Family..... | 26 |
| Angeli, Milton H., M. D..... | 207 | Bartlett, William H..... | 639 | Bontecou Family..... | 264 |
| Anthony Family..... | 701 | Barton, Anthony H..... | 734 | Bontecou, George H..... | 264 |
| Anthony, Theodore..... | 701 | Barton, Artemas S..... | 539 | Booth, Albert F..... | 826 |
| Armstrong, William C..... | 645 | Barton Families..... | 539, 592 | Booth, Oliver H..... | 44 |
| Arnold, Charles W. H..... | 62 | Barton, Lewis B..... | 592 | Booth, William F..... | 45 |
| Arras, Charles W..... | 133 | Bartow, Elizabeth D..... | 775 | Borden, Perry..... | 537 |
| Arras, Mrs. Emma A..... | 133 | Bartow, Moncure..... | 775 | Bostwick Family..... | 290 |
| Atwater, Edward S..... | 59 | Bates, Joseph..... | 874 | Bostwick, Frederic..... | 495 |
| Atwater Family..... | 59 | Baumann, Chas. G..... | 266 | Bostwick, William..... | 289 |
| Atwater, John P., M. D..... | 59 | Bayley, Guy C., M. D..... | 125 | Bowne, Charles E..... | 80 |
| Aucock, George S..... | 893 | Beardsley, William J..... | 842 | Bowne, Frederick..... | 81 |
| Austin Family..... | 490 | Becker, Alex. R..... | 860 | Boyce, Charles E..... | 811 |
| Ayres, DeWitt C..... | 871 | Beckwith, Nathan..... | 767 | Boyd Family..... | 820 |
| Badeau, W. H..... | 177 | Beckwith, William S..... | 766 | Boyd, Nathan T..... | 822 |
| Badgley Family..... | 414 | Bedell, William..... | 284 | Braman, Edward..... | 406 |
| Badgley, William E..... | 414 | Bedford, Edward H..... | 311 | Braman Family..... | 406 |
| Bahret, Jacob..... | 397 | Bedford Family..... | 311 | Braman, H. V. V..... | 407 |
| Bahret, John J..... | 397 | Bedford, John Bevier..... | 312 | Brett, Abraham..... | 599 |
| Bain, Ferdinand R..... | 116 | Beecher, Hiram T..... | 726 | Brett, Albert V..... | 599 |
| | | Beers, Darwin..... | 680 | Brett Family..... | 334 |

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|-----------------------------|----------|---------------------------|----------|--------------------------------|---------------|
| Brett, Harvey | 334 | Card, Colvin | 35 | Colwell, Frank W. | 543 |
| Brevoort, Benjamin H. | 178 | Card, Edson | 544 | Conklin, Mrs. Elizabeth | 227 |
| Brevoort, Thomas J. | 178 | Card, Silas E. | 544 | Conklin Families | 825, 873 |
| Brewster Family | 427 | Care, Charles A. | 649 | Conklin, George W. | 227 |
| Brewster, William A. | 427 | Carey Family | 770 | Conklin, Isaac P. | 873 |
| Briggs, Anthony | 192 | Carey, William J. | 623 | Conklin, John H. | 532 |
| Briggs, Davis W. | 193 | Carman, Leonard L. | 395 | Conklin, J. Mulford | 531 |
| Briggs, George G. | 788 | Carman, Lewis | 395 | Conklin, Storm H. | 825 |
| Briggs, George H. | 788 | Carpenter Families | 21, 210 | Conklin, William J., M. D. | 111 |
| Briggs, Mrs. Hannah | 192 | Carpenter, Hon. Isaac S. | 21 | Conover, Evritt | 753 |
| Briggs, Hiram H. | 541 | Carpenter, J. Du Bois | 211 | Conover, Peter | 753 |
| Briggs, Homer E. | 193 | Carpenter, William J. | 777 | Conroy, Rev. Edward J. | 328 |
| Briggs, Stephen D. | 541 | Carroll, James | 790 | Cook Families | 101, 667 |
| Brill, Aiken T. | 219 | Carroll, William | 865 | Cook, James Hervey | 101 |
| Brinckerhoff, Capt. John H. | 848 | Cary, Mary | 406 | Cookingham, Griffin | 939 |
| Brinckerhoff, William E. | 691 | Cary, Richard B. | 405 | Cooper, Gilbert | 732 |
| Brooks, Norman H. S. | 914 | Case, Mrs. Hannah M. | 797 | Cooper, John | 733 |
| Brooks, John J. | 123 | Case, Willis Haviland | 796 | Cooper, Tunis | 732 |
| Brooks, Mrs. J. J. | 124 | Cashin, Matthew J. | 514 | Corbin, Albert W. | 452 |
| Brooks, Norman J. | 124 | Cass, Robert | 859 | Corbin, Asa B. | 376 |
| Brooks, William J. | 884 | Chaffee Family | 171 | Corbin Family | 452 |
| Brown, Douglass | 724 | Chaffee, James Stuart | 171 | Corbin, Mrs. I. | 487 |
| Brown, Edwin | 465 | Chapman Family | 118 | Corbin, Isaac | 487 |
| Brown Family | 656 | Chapman, George B., M. D. | 117 | Corcoran, John | 310 |
| Brown, Frank D. | 724 | Chapman, George T. | 513 | Cornelius, Virtus H. | 919 |
| Brown, George | 575 | Chapman, Hiram W. | 513 | Cornell, Adrian M. | 415 |
| Brown, Samuel Holmes | 656 | Chapman, Mrs. Jane M. | 391 | Cornell, Isaac M., M. D. | 229 |
| Brown, Samuel H., M. D. | 245 | Chase, Mrs. Augusta H. | 342 | Cornell, Peter M. | 868 |
| Brown, Sebastian | 465 | Chase, Enos J. | 342 | Cornwell, Azariah | 727 |
| Brown, William J. | 175 | Chase Family | 89 | Cornwell, Frederick J. | 459 |
| Brundage, Alton | 56 | Chase, George W. | 89 | Cossum, Charles F. | 46 |
| Brundage, Capt. Charles W. | 56 | Chase, Lewis H. | 813 | Cotter, John | 98 |
| Brush Family | 770 | Chatterton, Henry | 534 | Cotter, John H., M. D. | 98 |
| Bryan, David | 496 | Clapp, Clinton W. | 664 | Couse, Edward | 874 |
| Bryan Families | 496, 817 | Clapp Family | 664 | Cowl, James | 616 |
| Bryan, Isaac | 817 | Clark, Carrie D. | 567 | Cowl, Orlando J. | 616 |
| Bryan, Mrs. Mary | 818 | Clark, Edgar | 567 | Cox, John H. | 741 |
| Bryant, Albert R. | 809 | Clark, Edward Lee | 721 | Craft, Eugene S. | 214 |
| Bryant, Evan | 893 | Clark, Elizabeth | 567 | Craft, Mrs. Margaret | 906 |
| Bryant, Samuel | 547 | Clark Families | 567, 775 | Craig Family | 432 |
| Buckingham, Charles H. | 393 | Clark, Henry | 776 | Craig, Rufus S. | 432 |
| Buckingham Family | 393 | Clark, Hiram | 775 | Cramer Family | 141, 200 |
| Buckley Family | 460 | Clark, John W. | 776 | Cramer, George E. | 200 |
| Buckley, Miles | 460 | Clifford, Mrs. Annie | 916 | Cramer, George H. | 450 |
| Budd, Albert J. | 757 | Clifford, Henry | 916 | Cramer, William C. | 895 |
| Budd Families | 273, 529 | Cline, Albert | 729 | Crapser, Abram B. | 397 |
| Budd, Joel N. | 529 | Cline, Charles A. | 494 | Crapser Family | 397 |
| Budd, Mrs. Mary J. | 530 | Cline Family | 729 | Crary Family | 54 |
| Budd, Underhill | 272 | Cline, Franklin | 729 | Crary, Rev. Robert F., D. D. | 54 |
| Budd, William D. | 420 | Codding, George H., M. D. | 142 | Cronk Family | 501 |
| Bullis, J. N. | 445 | Coffin Family | 193 | Cronk, George W. | 501 |
| Burgess, James D. | 285 | Coffin, Hezekiah R. | 92 | Cronk, Sarah E. (Mrs. Forshay) | 502 |
| Burhans, Peter | 195 | Coffin, Robert | 92 | Crummey, Edward | 138 |
| Burnett, Frank E. | 883 | Coffin, Robert G. | 124 | Crummey, Safford A. | 139 |
| Burnett, Stephen R. | 883 | Coffin, Tristram | 193 | Cruse, Thomas K., M. D. | 403 |
| Burroughs Family | 677 | Coffin, Valentine | 194 | Culver, Ambrose M. | 579 |
| Burroughs, Frank | 677 | Cole, Judge Andrew | 380 | Culver Families | 579, 586, 590 |
| Bushnell, Edwin L. | 773 | Cole, Charles N. | 611 | Culver, Walter B. | 590 |
| Butler, Edmond | 752 | Cole, David | 210 | Cunley, Court B. | 377 |
| Butler Family | 505 | Cole, Mrs. David | 210 | Cunningham, Thomas J. | 891 |
| Butler, Robert D. | 505 | Cole, Emery | 917 | Curtis, Herbert J. | 695 |
| Butts, Allison | 83 | Cole, Mortimer B. | 611 | Cutler, Charles G. | 769 |
| Butts Family | 83 | Coleman, Amasa D. | 325 | Cutler Family | 769 |
| Butts, John W. | 911 | Coleman, Mrs. Elizabeth | 325 | Cutler, Theron | 719 |
| Butts, Richard S. | 734 | Coleman, Joseph D. | 728 | Cypher, Henry D. | 896 |
| Butts, Thomas | 733 | Collier Family | 581 | | |
| | | Collin, Eli H. | 307 | Dakin, George | 826 |
| Caldwell, Theron H. | 827 | Collingwood, James | 138 | Dakin, William | 827 |
| Campbell, Mrs. Emeline C. | 537 | Collingwood, Mrs. Mary E. | 138 | Dalrymple, William E. | 725 |
| Campbell, Henry L. | 536 | Collins Families | 537, 572 | Dana Family | 351 |
| Campbell, John | 659 | Collins, Rev. Joshua | 422 | Davies Family | 95 |
| Cannon, Arnout | 913 | Collins, Martin W. | 572 | Davies, William Augustus | 95 |
| Cannon, Arnout, Jr. | 913 | Colwell, Charles M. | 388 | Davis, Charles | 235 |
| Cannon, Cornelius L. | 218 | Colwell, David E. | 542 | Davis, Charles H., Jr. | 650 |
| Cannon, George W. | 258 | Colwell Family | 388 | Davis, John | 236 |

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|--------------------------------|----------------------------|---------------------------------|--------------|------------------------------------|----------|
| Davis, Orville L..... | 784 | Dutcher, Mrs. May Losee..... | 718 | Giddings, John H..... | 538 |
| Davis, Willard H..... | 198 | Dutcher, Mrs. Sarah A..... | 226 | Gidley Family..... | 507 |
| Davis, William L..... | 198 | | | Gilbert, Burton..... | 87 |
| Dawson Family..... | 818 | Eastman, Hon. Harvey G., LL.D | 12 | Gilbert, Mrs. Thalia M..... | 88 |
| Dawson, J. G., M. D..... | 818 | Eastmead, Franklin S..... | 915 | Gildersleeve, Elmer D..... | 104 |
| Dean Family..... | 566 | Eaton, Lewis F..... | 605 | Gildersleeve Family..... | 104 |
| Dean, James E..... | 288 | Edmond, Frank M..... | 558 | Gildersleeve, Col. Henry A..... | 106 |
| Dean, Willis..... | 566 | Elsworth, Edward..... | 43 | Gildersleve, Isaac B..... | 774 |
| Dedrick, William J..... | 668 | Elting, Capt. Luther..... | 218 | Gildersleve, Rita A..... | 774 |
| De Garmo, David S..... | 114 | Emans, Albert S..... | 814 | Godinez, Jose Manuel..... | 215 |
| De Garmo, James M..... | 636 | Emans Family..... | 31 | Gollenbeck, John..... | 490 |
| De Garmo, Smith L..... | 114 | Emans, Hon. Storm..... | 31 | Goodell, James F., M. D..... | 93 |
| De Lacey Family..... | 119 | Embley, Thomas W., M. D..... | 237 | Goring, Hon. Edward M..... | 552 |
| De Lacey, William L..... | 119 | Emerson, Thomas..... | 792 | Goring, John M..... | 635 |
| Delamater, Eliphaz..... | 788 | Englehardt, Edward..... | 898 | Goring, Thomson E..... | 553 |
| Dennis Families..... | 447 | English, Dr. James R..... | 441 | Graham Family..... | 730 |
| Denton, Abram A..... | 723 | Eno Family..... | 94 | Graham, Le Grand..... | 648 |
| Denton, Amos..... | 875 | Eno, Frank..... | 94 | Gray, Hon. Augustus B..... | 204 |
| Denton Families..... | 723, 903 | Ensign Family..... | 485 | Greene, Robert M..... | 451 |
| Denton, Judson A..... | 875 | Ensign, John H..... | 485 | Gregory Family..... | 516 |
| Denton, Nelson..... | 903 | Esselstyn, George..... | 57 | Griffen, Charles H..... | 743 |
| De Peyster, Gen. J. Watts..... | 144 | | | Griffen, Cornelius W..... | 593 |
| Deuel Family..... | 722 | Faust, Frederick A., M. D..... | 764 | Griffen, Jacob..... | 608 |
| Deuel, Isaac N..... | 428 | Faust, Dr. John..... | 791 | Griffen, Timothy S..... | 593 |
| Deuel, Phoenix N..... | 722 | Feierabend, Louis..... | 327 | Griggs, James C..... | 55 |
| Deuel, Stephen T..... | 428 | Feller, Nathan..... | 746 | Guernsey, Judge D. W..... | 84 |
| Devine Family..... | 464 | Fendel, Martin..... | 393 | Guernsey Family..... | 197 |
| Devine, Wright..... | 464 | Feroe Family..... | 481 | Guernsey, Stephen G..... | 197 |
| Diamond, Hugh..... | 776 | Feroe, George..... | 481 | | |
| Diamond, William H..... | 776 | Feroe, Jacob H..... | 628 | Hackett, John..... | 137 |
| Dibble, Warren S..... | 596 | Ferris, Elmore..... | 613 | Hadden Family..... | 254 |
| Dickhaut, Rev. Benjamin E..... | 42 | Ferris Families..... | 66, 374, 613 | Hadden, James M..... | 254 |
| Dickinson, Jonathan..... | 668 | Field, Joseph..... | 223 | Haggerty, David V..... | 900 |
| Dinsmore, C. Gray..... | 887 | Field, Mrs. T. R..... | 223 | Haight, Abram V. V..... | 901 |
| Dinsmore, William B..... | 885 | Fiero, William H..... | 941 | Haight, Andreas V..... | 308 |
| Dodge, Mrs. Anna E..... | 453 | Finch, James..... | 658 | Haight, Arvis..... | 699 |
| Dolan, William..... | 912 | Fink, John H..... | 727 | Haight, Dr. Charles..... | 523 |
| Donald, Mrs. Jessie F..... | 14 | Flannery, John..... | 596 | Haight, Clement..... | 575 |
| Donald, John..... | 14 | Fletcher, Charles L., M. D..... | 402 | Haight, Cornelius J..... | 901 |
| Dorland, Cyrenus P..... | 99 | Fletcher Family..... | 402 | Haight, Emily R..... | 320 |
| Dorland Family..... | 99 | Flint, Charles A..... | 455 | Haight, Emmer J..... | 706 |
| Dorland, John M..... | 926 | Flint Family..... | 455 | Haight Families..... | 369, 510 |
| Doty, A. M..... | 309 | Foote, George Benton, Sr..... | 443 | Haight, Frances..... | 320 |
| Doty, Egbert..... | 805 | Foote, Mrs. Mary F..... | 443 | Haight, Franklin L..... | 368 |
| Doughty, Charles..... | 321 | Forster, Robert..... | 141 | Haight, Henry W..... | 702 |
| Doughty Family..... | 321 | Forster, Mrs. Robert..... | 141 | Haight, Isaac..... | 575 |
| Doughty, George T..... | 199 | Fowler, Benjamin M..... | 256 | Haight, Isaac, Jr..... | 320 |
| Doughty, Mrs. Hannah..... | 823 | Fowler, Charles E..... | 385 | Haight, James B..... | 927 |
| Doughty, Mrs. Mary E..... | 321 | Fowler, Gilbert..... | 867 | Haight, James H..... | 510 |
| Doughty, Miss Phebe J..... | 199 | Fox, Eugene..... | 905 | Haight, J. Cornelius..... | 369 |
| Doyle, John G..... | 642 | Fraleigh, Geo. W..... | 486 | Haight, J. Haviland..... | 523 |
| Draper, George W..... | 460 | Fraleigh, Irving..... | 864 | Haight, Sherman N..... | 316 |
| Draper, John H..... | 460 | Fraleigh, John A..... | 486 | Haight, Wm. H. (Poughkeepsie)..... | 768 |
| Drislane, David C..... | 823 | Fredrick Family..... | 536 | Haight, Wm. H. (Fishkill)..... | 702 |
| Du Bois Families..... | 129, 607, 673 | Fredrick, John B..... | 535 | Haines Family..... | 587 |
| Du Bois, Garret..... | 673 | French, Harvey J..... | 840 | Hall, Alfred E..... | 444 |
| Du Bois, John C..... | 607 | Frost, Joseph G..... | 357 | Hall, Alfred P..... | 523 |
| Dudley, Alexander H..... | 559 | Fry, Benjamin H..... | 451 | Hall, Edward J., M. D..... | 837 |
| Dudley Families..... | 97, 559 | Funk, Peter W..... | 497 | Hall Families..... | 522, 666 |
| Dudley, James H..... | 97 | | | Hall, Israel..... | 508 |
| Du Mond, Edward B..... | 39 | Gaines, Clement C..... | 652 | Hall, John J..... | 522 |
| Du Mond Family..... | 39 | Gallup, C. H..... | 249 | Hall, Leonard D..... | 508 |
| Duncan, Charles H..... | 612 | Gardner Family..... | 709 | Hall, Platt V..... | 522 |
| Duncan Family..... | 296 | Gardner, Charles C..... | 446 | Hall, Mrs. Priscilla..... | 666 |
| Duncan, John B..... | 612 | Garratt, Jonathan M..... | 343 | Hall, William..... | 666 |
| Duncan, John G..... | 296 | Genung, Adrian..... | 555 | Halsted, George S..... | 754 |
| Dutcher, Allen H..... | 626 | Genung, Isaac S..... | 689 | Halsted, Mrs. Julia..... | 91 |
| Dutcher Families..... | 19, 23, 626, 654, 662, 802 | Genung, Lewis W..... | 555 | Halsted, Nehemiah..... | 91 |
| Dutcher, George W..... | 802 | Germond, Mrs. Ella..... | 195 | Ham, Eugene..... | 583 |
| Dutcher, James E..... | 19 | Germond Family..... | 708 | Ham Family..... | 583 |
| Dutcher, John..... | 654 | Germond, Franklin..... | 708 | Hammond, Benjamin..... | 546 |
| Dutcher, Hon. John B..... | 23 | Germond, Isaac..... | 196 | Hammond Family..... | 466 |
| Dutcher, J. Van Ness..... | 503 | Gerow, Elizabeth H., M. D..... | 197 | Hammond, John L..... | 466 |
| Dutcher, Joshua..... | 503 | Giddings, George W..... | 538 | Hanna, David..... | 881 |
| Dutcher, Luzerne..... | 763 | Giddings, Jackson..... | 537 | Hanna Family..... | 25 |

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|----------------------------|----------|----------------------------|----------|--------------------------|----------|
| Hanna, Hon. John A. | 25 | Hopkins Families | 69, 110 | Kelly, Rev. Terrence F. | 324 |
| Hapeman, Irving | 372 | Hopkins, John | 483 | Kelly, Timothy G. | 797 |
| Harcourt, Joseph D. | 359 | Hopkins, William H., M. D. | 483 | Keisley, Rev. Edward D. | 189 |
| Harcourt, Mrs. Mary E. | 359 | Horton, Richard C. | 562 | Kerley, James | 514 |
| Harris Family | 510 | Horton, Theodore S. | 803 | Kerley, James R. | 514 |
| Harris, Smith D. | 846 | Hotchkiss Family | 684 | Ketcham, Andrew J. | 18 |
| Hart Family | 816 | Hotchkiss, Frank A. | 684 | Ketcham Family | 18 |
| Hart, William H. | 816 | Howard, Beverly W. | 493 | Ketcham, George W. | 419 |
| Hasbrook, Charles F. | 171 | Howard Families | 517, 699 | Ketcham, Hon. John H. | 64 |
| Haskin, Albert R. | 37 | Howard, John D. | 517 | Ketcham, John M. | 419 |
| Haskins, Alex. | 496 | Howard, Sherman | 699 | Ketcham, Mrs. Mary E. | 662 |
| Haskins, John M. | 496 | Howard, Silas | 502 | Ketcham, Richard P. | 662 |
| Hastings, Samuel | 761 | Howell, Benjamin | 847 | Ketterer, Charles | 880 |
| Haubennestel, Maj. William | 214 | Howell, Eugene N. | 489 | Ketterer, DeWitt C. | 880 |
| Haupt, John | 263 | Howell, Frank | 262 | Kidder, George W. | 280 |
| Havens, Edward E. | 557 | Howell, George W. | 717 | Kimlin, Mrs. Mary | 199 |
| Havens, William E. | 545 | Howland, Anna C., M. D. | 131 | Kimlin, William R. | 198 |
| Haviland, Barclay | 96 | Hufcut Family | 179 | Kinney Family | 713 |
| Haviland, Isaac | 113 | Hufcut, George | 441 | Kinney, George B. | 713 |
| Haviland, Mrs. Maria Ann. | 114 | Hufcut, Horace D. | 179 | Kirby, Clark | 221 |
| Hawley, Cyrus F. | 609 | Hufcut, Mrs. Jennie | 441 | Kirby, Frances | 221 |
| Haxton, William W. | 846 | Hughes Family | 618 | Kirchner, Charles | 317 |
| Hayes, Mrs. Ann A. | 431 | Hughes, George | 576 | Klady, Mrs. Lena | 528 |
| Hayt, Peter B. | 243 | Hughes, Miles | 618 | Klady, Philip | 528 |
| Heaney, Charles S. | 808 | Hull, Walter C. | 109 | Kline, Mrs. Joseph | 641 |
| Hebard, Newton | 304 | Humeston Families | 435, 786 | Kline, Joseph | 641 |
| Hedges, Lewis D. | 375 | Humeston, Geo. E. | 785 | Knapp, David A., M. D. | 121 |
| Hedges, Mrs. Mary | 375 | Humeston, John J. | 435 | Knapp Families | 121, 467 |
| Heermance Family | 224 | Humeston, Merritt | 785 | Knickerbocker, Edwin | 731 |
| Heermance, Martin | 224 | Humphrey, Abram S. | 299 | Knickerbocker, Henry | 566 |
| Hendricks, Allan B. | 90 | Humphrey Family | 299 | Knickerbocker, Henry B. | 566 |
| Hendricks, Edmund L. | 234 | Humphrey, John V. | 314 | Koch, August | 279 |
| Hendricks, Magdalene A. | 234 | Hungerford, Abner G. | 444 | La Due Family | 690 |
| Herrick, Charles B. | 143 | Hungerford, Robert J. | 630 | La Due, John N. | 690 |
| Herrick, Ephraim | 879 | Huntington, George, M. D. | 139 | Lamb, Joseph T., M. D. | 916 |
| Herrick Families | 674, 756 | Hupfel, Adolph G. | 564 | Lambert, Addie H. | 419 |
| Herrick, Frank | 492 | Hurd Family | 876 | Lambert, John H. | 418 |
| Herrick, James | 674 | Hurd, Robert | 876 | Lamoree Family | 688 |
| Herrick, John A. | 492 | Husted, Dewitt C. | 642 | Lamoree, George | 688 |
| Herrick, Marshall | 174 | Husted, George L. | 482 | Landon, Edmund N. | 644 |
| Herrick, Timothy | 484 | Husted, Jackson | 482 | Landon Family | 730 |
| Herrick, William | 755 | Hustis Family | 58 | Landon, John S. | 868 |
| Hewlett, Isaac S. | 917 | Hustis, Henry H. | 58 | Lane, Charles E., M. D. | 184 |
| Hicks, Campbell N. | 655 | Hutchison, Robert | 868 | Lansing Family | 34 |
| Hicks, Edward S. | 632 | Hutton, William B. | 907 | Lansing, Wellington C. | 34 |
| Hicks Family | 632 | Ingraham, George W. | 61 | Lasher, Almira J. | 261 |
| Hicks, Samuel S. | 632 | Ingraham, Thomas | 61 | Lasher, Frank P. | 720 |
| Hicks, Willard W. | 438 | Innis, Aaron | 88 | Lasher, Martin | 904 |
| Hignell, James H. | 545 | Innis Family | 88 | Lasher, Warren P. | 260 |
| Hinman, Winfield B. | 940 | Innis, George | 931 | Latson, Frank, D. D. S. | 255 |
| Hiserodt Family | 781 | Ireland, Mrs. Elmira A. | 418 | Latson, Henry | 255 |
| Hoag, Arabella | 364 | Ireland, Stephen H. | 417 | Lawson, Casper | 703 |
| Hoag, Arthur F., M. D. | 226 | Irish, Abraham W. | 387 | Lawson Family | 703 |
| Hoag, Charles W. | 520 | Irish Family | 303 | Lawson, Robert P. | 598 |
| Hoag Family | 520 | Jaycox Family | 705 | Leach, Alonzo M. | 377 |
| Hoag, Mrs. Laura B. | 520 | Jaycox, Mrs. Sarah M. | 924 | Leach Family | 372 |
| Hoag, Philip | 364 | Jaycox, Thomas W. | 924 | Leach, Lillius C. | 373 |
| Hoag, William P. | 226 | Jaycox, William H. | 705 | Leach, Martin | 373 |
| Hochstadter, Ernest | 282 | Jenks, Horace | 758 | Lee, P. Alverson | 842 |
| Hoffman Family | 571 | Jewell, John F. | 815 | Lee, Darius | 230 |
| Hoffman, Frank | 269 | Johnston Family | 43 | Lee, George F. | 909 |
| Hoffman, Henry | 571 | Johnston, Mrs. Mary Adams | 368 | Lee, George J. | 929 |
| Hoffman, John W. | 861 | Johnston, Robert | 897 | Lee, Mrs. Mary | 442 |
| Hoffman, Mrs. Lydia | 861 | Jordan, Josephus D. | 509 | Lee, Ward | 443 |
| Hoffman, Mrs. Mary A. | 572 | Jordan, William B. | 509 | Lee, William Morgan | 230 |
| Hoffman, Nicholas | 268 | Juckett, Edwin | 194 | Leith, Col. Samuel, Sr. | 348 |
| Hoffman, Theodore A. | 37 | Juckett, George B. | 194 | Le Roy Family | 841 |
| Holdridge, Augustus | 507 | Judson, Thomas S. | 551 | Le Roy, Irving D., M. D. | 841 |
| Holdridge Family | 507 | Julian, John M., M. D. | 824 | Lewis, Miles K. | 869 |
| Holmes, Gilman D. | 547 | Kampf, Louis E. | 676 | Link, John W. | 803 |
| Holmes, Henry A. | 71 | Kelder, Simon J. | 268 | Livingston Family | 144 |
| Holmes, Wheeler C. | 535 | Kelly Family | 797 | Lockwood, George | 356 |
| Holmes, William C. | 535 | | | Lovelace, James H. | 743 |
| Hopkins, Benjamin | 69 | | | Lown, Frank B. | 592 |
| Hopkins, Charles A. | 110 | | | | |

| PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE | |
|-------------------------------|---------------|--------------------------|----------|----------------------------|---------------|
| Luckey, Charles P. | 36 | Montfort, Peter V. W. | 441 | Parmeles, William | 765 |
| Luckey Family | 36 | Moore, Alfred H. | 612 | Parmenter, Emil | 551 |
| Lumb, Charles L. | 252 | Moore, David V. | 748 | Pawling Family | 86 |
| Lumb, George W. | 252 | Moore Families | 748 | Payne, George C. | 518 |
| Lyke, J. Hyatt, D. D. S. | 838 | Moore, Mrs. William R. | 166 | Payne, Samuel | 518 |
| Lyke, John | 932 | Moore, William R. | 166 | Peacock, Arthur S. | 629 |
| Lynch, James | 251 | More, Charles C. | 779 | Pearce, Benoni | 34 |
| Lynch, M. J. | 278 | Morehouse, Henry S. | 722 | Pearce Family | 63 |
| Lynch, Samuel | 857 | Morehouse, Julius S. | 722 | Pearce, Henry, M. D. | 63 |
| Lyon, Asahel A. | 602 | Morey, Edmond A. | 569 | Pearce, Jeremiah S. | 34 |
| Lyon, Asahel D. | 602 | Morey Families | 483, 569 | Pease, Mrs. Cornelia | 239 |
| Lyon, Leonard | 586 | Morey, Leonard L. | 482 | Pease, Edwin R. | 239 |
| McCarty Family | 47 | Morey, Mrs. Sarah | 930 | Peattie Bros. | 912 |
| McCarty, James C. | 47 | Morgan, Charles B. | 454 | Peattie, George | 912 |
| McGlasson, John | 931 | Morgan Family | 455 | Peet Family | 342 |
| McGlasson, Robert | 931 | Morgan, George | 132 | Pells, Michael | 678 |
| McGrath, Rev. John J. | 352 | Morgan, Julia A. | 132 | Pendleton Family | 205 |
| McKevitt, John | 939 | Morton Family | 10 | Perkins, Dr. Charles H. | 920 |
| McWhinnie, Thomas | 170 | Morton, Hon. Levi P. | 9 | Perkins, Cyrus | 673 |
| MacNeil, Crawford C. | 895 | Mosher, William A. | 937 | Perkins, Edward E. | 620 |
| Mabie, Hiram | 641 | Mott, Morgan L. | 326 | Perkins, J. A. | 925 |
| Mahony, Rev. Dr. Cornelius V. | 257 | Mott, Morgan L., Jr. | 327 | Perkins, Mrs. Sarah | 673 |
| Manning, Edward B. | 366 | Moul Family | 721 | Perkins, Stephen A. | 329 |
| Manning Family | 366 | Moul, Julius M. | 721 | Petillon, Ludwig | 136 |
| Mansfield, Samuel | 38 | Mulcox, Joseph H. | 914 | Phesay, George F. | 804 |
| Marcy Family | 858 | Muldowney, Michael A. | 866 | Phillips, David F. | 933 |
| Marcy, Marcus D. | 857 | Mulford, Edmund D. | 923 | Phillips, Joseph W. | 689 |
| Marill, Joaquim, M. D. | 75 | Munger, Capt. James E. | 100 | Phillips, Hon. Samuel K. | 196 |
| Marquet, John F. | 242 | Myer, Polhemus W. | 570 | Phillips, William T. | 922 |
| Marshall Families | 585, 738, 766 | Myers Family | 610 | Pierce, Isaac | 563 |
| Marshall, Henry S. | 485 | Myers, John Francis | 610 | Pierce, Leonard V. | 563 |
| Marshall, James A. | 738 | Mygatt Family | 747 | Pilgrim, Charles W., M. D. | 181 |
| Marshall, John A. | 585 | Mygatt, Henry | 747 | Pinckney, James L. | 694 |
| Marshall, Theron R. | 765 | Nagengast, George | 936 | Pinckney, Lewis | 266 |
| Marshall, William W. | 686 | Nelson, Mrs. Cornelia M. | 41 | Pinckney, Perry | 694 |
| Marshall, Willet J. | 782 | Nelson, Homer Augustus | 8 | Pingry Family | 834 |
| Martin, Hon. Augustus | 390 | Nelson, Mrs. Jeannette | 401 | Pingry, James O., M. D. | 834 |
| Martin, Col. Claudius G. | 746 | Nelson, John P. | 40 | Plass, Anson A. | 904 |
| Martin, Elizabeth B. | 191 | Nelson, Col. Joseph | 41 | Platt, Edmund P. | 78 |
| Martin Family | 390 | Nelson, Sarah C. | 353 | Platt, Isaac | 76 |
| Martin Family, Joseph | 190 | Nelson, Thomas Henry | 353 | Platt, Hon. John I. | 77 |
| Martin, James H. | 831 | Newman, James | 881 | Platt, William B. | 367 |
| Martin, Joseph | 190 | Nichols, Thomas G. | 600 | Platto, William | 383 |
| Martin, Miss Serena | 391 | Nilan, Rev. James, D. D. | 238 | Porteous Family | 122 |
| Martin, Wing J. | 830 | Norton Family | 650 | Porteous, James G., M. D. | 122 |
| Massonneau, Robert L. | 784 | Norton, George S. | 650 | Poucher, J. Wilson, M. D. | 220 |
| Matteawan State Hospital | 229 | Noxon Family | 707 | Powell Family | 736 |
| Matthews, Robert | 647 | Noxon, Mrs. Matilda V. | 425 | Powell, Horace R., M. D. | 736 |
| Mead Family | 422 | O'Brien, Thomas | 583 | Powers, John | 905 |
| Mead, Frank P. | 805 | Odell, Casper L. | 81 | Pralatowski, Wladyslawa J. | 675 |
| Mead, Dr. Isaac N. | 422 | Odell, Edward | 661 | Pratt, John M. | 606 |
| Mead, James V. | 661 | Odell Families | 29, 81 | Pratt, Peter | 606 |
| Mead, Jeremiah | 767 | Odell, Joseph E., M. A. | 29 | Pray Family | 516 |
| Mead, Morris | 768 | Odell, Samuel D. | 570 | Pray, Hamilton | 515 |
| Merritt, Douglas | 620 | Odell, Wright B. | 740 | Preston, Ebenezer A. | 631 |
| Merwin, Mrs. E. M. C. | 346 | O'Farrell, John V. | 635 | Preston, Ebenezer J. | 631 |
| Merwin, William J. | 345 | Orton, John H. | 695 | Preston Family | 26 |
| Millard, Miss H. D. | 242 | Ostrander, Alson | 819 | Prichard, James L., M. D. | 852 |
| Millard, Howard C. | 798 | Ostrander Family | 819 | Pultz Family | 733 |
| Millard, John | 242 | Ostrander, James H. | 820 | Pultz, Hiram A. | 733 |
| Millard, Miss L. D. | 242 | Otis, John C., M. D. | 79 | Pultz, M. T., M. D. | 238 |
| Millard, William B. | 168 | Owen, George W. | 292 | Pulver Families | 468, 502, 751 |
| Miller Bros. | 404 | Paine Family | 624 | Pulver, Herman | 751 |
| Miller, George N., M. D. | 223 | Paine, James Russell | 624 | Pulver, John W. | 502 |
| Miller, Peter | 267 | Paine, Martin W. | 855 | Putnam Family | 504 |
| Miller, Philip | 405 | Paine, Platt N. | 625 | Putnam, John W. | 504 |
| Miller, Valentine M. | 405 | Palmer, Abiah W. | 401 | Pye, Mrs. Amelia S. | 295 |
| Mitchell, John | 906 | Parker, Edward Hazen | 32 | Pye, Francis B. | 295 |
| Moith, August T. | 672 | Parker, Nathaniel | 813 | Rapalje Family | 130 |
| Moith, J. Edgar, M. D. | 672 | Parker, William H. | 617 | Rapalje, Lawrence C. | 125 |
| Monahan, Margaret B. | 448 | Parks, George E. | 477 | Raub, Mrs. E. S. | 141 |
| Monahan, Thomas | 448 | Parmeles, John H. | 765 | Record Family | 429 |
| Monfort, John A. | 758 | | | Record, William | 429 |
| Monks, Daniel H. | 559 | | | Redavats, Charles | 894 |

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|---------------------------------|----------|------------------------------|---------------|------------------------------------|---------------|
| Redman, John..... | 440 | Schryver, John T..... | 431 | Smith, Oliver Kees..... | 808 |
| Reed Family..... | 360 | Schryver, Matthew V. B..... | 431 | Smith, Silas G..... | 354 |
| Reed, Thomas..... | 360 | Schubert, Charles E. F..... | 887 | Smith, W. Wallace..... | 11 |
| Reynolds Families..... | 108, 772 | Schultz, John R..... | 515 | Snyder, Burton A..... | 259 |
| Reynolds, James..... | 885 | Schwartz, John..... | 782 | Snyder, Mrs. Gertrude M..... | 260 |
| Reynolds, Justus P..... | 772 | Scofield Family..... | 526 | Spaight, John W..... | 168 |
| Reynolds, Warren..... | 742 | Scofield, Miles..... | 526 | Spaulding, John J..... | 907 |
| Reynolds, William T..... | 108 | Scofield, Stephen..... | 279 | Spross, Elias..... | 588 |
| Rickes, Valentine..... | 658 | Scutt, John..... | 276 | Squires Family..... | 219 |
| Rider, Albert L..... | 445 | Seaman, Thomas H..... | 393 | Stephens, Charles A..... | 646 |
| Rider, John P..... | 164 | Segelken, Charles F..... | 421 | Stephens, John..... | 646 |
| Rikert Family..... | 640 | Seger, Charles E., M. D..... | 53 | Stevens, Hiram G..... | 855 |
| Rikert, R. Raymond..... | 640 | Seger Family..... | 53 | Stevens, Thomas H..... | 856 |
| Roberts, Charles H..... | 350 | Sencerbaugh, John G..... | 682 | Stevenson, George..... | 670 |
| Robinson, Chappell..... | 476 | Sencerbaugh, W. P..... | 683 | Stickle, Philip H..... | 910 |
| Robinson, Dr. Francis M..... | 247 | Seward, Hon. James A..... | 347 | Stockholm, Aaron A..... | 691 |
| Robinson, Jarvis C..... | 719 | Seward, Mrs. Mary B..... | 348 | Stockholm, A. B..... | 173 |
| Robinson, Osborn..... | 878 | Sexton Family..... | 408 | Storm, Mrs. Carrie..... | 345 |
| Robinson, Reuben J..... | 735 | Shaw, George R..... | 760 | Storm, Charles A..... | 320 |
| Robinson, Stephen..... | 476 | Sheaff, Edmund H..... | 549 | Storm, Mrs. Charles A..... | 321 |
| Rockefeller, Clinton J..... | 890 | Shear, Mrs. Catherine L..... | 504 | Storm Families..... | 135, 295, 456 |
| Rockwell, Arthur V..... | 436 | Shear, John Cornell..... | 503 | Storm, George..... | 344 |
| Rockwell, Ralph..... | 436 | Sheedy, Daniel M., M. D..... | 131 | Storm, Joseph H..... | 134 |
| Roe, Mrs. Amanda A..... | 773 | Sheldon, Mrs. Augusta B..... | 385 | Storm, Thomas I..... | 295 |
| Roe, John..... | 700 | Sheldon, Collins..... | 837 | Storm, Walter G..... | 891 |
| Roe, William B..... | 773 | Sheldon Families..... | 244, 837 | Storm, William J..... | 456 |
| Roe, William P..... | 700 | Sheldon, Jeremiah..... | 248 | Storm, Wilson B..... | 542 |
| Roger, George..... | 655 | Sheldon, William H..... | 384 | Stoutenburgh Family..... | 849 |
| Rogers, Charles D..... | 684 | Sheldon, Wilson B..... | 244 | Stowe, Charles N..... | 788 |
| Rogers, D. W..... | 778 | Shelley, Alva..... | 833 | Stowe, Mrs. C. N..... | 788 |
| Rogers, Mrs. Margaret..... | 475 | Sherman, Charles..... | 356 | Straight Family..... | 341 |
| Rogers, Patrick..... | 475 | Sherman Families..... | 823, 889 | Streit, Lewis F..... | 140 |
| Rogers, Philip Clayton..... | 204 | Sherman, Mrs. Mary A..... | 356 | Streit, Mrs. Rebecca M..... | 141 |
| Roosevelt Family..... | 63 | Sherman, Mrs. Rhoda L..... | 794 | Strever, Adam A..... | 781 |
| Roosevelt, James..... | 63 | Sherman, Walter A..... | 889 | Strever Families..... | 572, 580 |
| Rosa, Frederic L..... | 480 | Sherrill Family..... | 216 | Strever, Frederick H..... | 580 |
| Rosa, Hyman B..... | 480 | Sherrill, Isaac W..... | 216 | Strever, Rachel T..... | 581 |
| Ross, Duncan..... | 444 | Sherwood, Charles D..... | 129 | Strobel, Mrs. Christina..... | 402 |
| Ross Family..... | 793 | Shook, Sheridan..... | 120 | Strobel, Wendel..... | 402 |
| Ross, Mrs. Mary H..... | 444 | Shook, William A..... | 450 | Strong, Walter D. O. K., M. D..... | 62 |
| Round, Charles I..... | 175 | Shurter, Charles H..... | 476 | Stuart, Robert J..... | 584 |
| Rowe Family..... | 698 | Sickley, John C..... | 381 | Sturges, Ebenezer H..... | 667 |
| Rowe, Julius O..... | 698 | Sievers, George..... | 599 | Sutherland, Joseph..... | 685 |
| Roy, James..... | 437 | Simmons, Charles A..... | 627 | Sutcliffe, Eli..... | 312 |
| Roy, William K..... | 437 | Simmons, Edward W..... | 336 | Sutcliffe, John..... | 312 |
| Rozell Family..... | 271 | Simmons Family..... | 336 | Sutherland, Hon. Josiah..... | 823 |
| Rozell, Joseph B..... | 718 | Simmons, James B., D. D..... | 337 | Sutherland, Robert..... | 829 |
| Rudd Family..... | 172 | Skidmore Family..... | 705 | Sutton, Edwin..... | 540 |
| Rudd, Zebulon..... | 172 | Skidmore, Peter A..... | 704 | Sutton, Leslie A., M. D..... | 832 |
| Rundall, David..... | 638 | Slee, Samuel..... | 283 | Sutton, Mary D..... | 540 |
| Rundall Family..... | 637 | Sleight, Alexander W..... | 607 | Sweet, Pedro..... | 665 |
| Rundall, Henry..... | 638 | Sleight, Benjamin A..... | 294 | Swift Families..... | 462, 839 |
| Rupley, Samuel K..... | 923 | Sleight Family..... | 607 | Swift, George H..... | 462 |
| Russell, Benjamin H..... | 787 | Slocum, Charles H..... | 454 | Swift, Henry M..... | 839 |
| Russell Families..... | 787, 794 | Slocum, Hiram..... | 454 | Swift, Isaac..... | 498 |
| Russell, James H..... | 794 | Smith, Abel..... | 928 | Swift, James D..... | 693 |
| Russell, Selwyn A., M. D..... | 902 | Smith, Albert C..... | 864 | Swift, James H..... | 217 |
| Rymph, Edward L..... | 897 | Smith, Gen. Alfred B..... | 16 | Swift, Jane..... | 840 |
| Rymph Family..... | 490 | Smith, Andrew C..... | 506 | Swift, John M..... | 217 |
| Rymph, George W..... | 490 | Smith, Cassius M. C..... | 165 | Swift, Richard T..... | 693 |
| | | Smith, Charles E..... | 629 | Taber Families..... | 208, 212 |
| Sackett, Nathan C..... | 724 | Smith, Charles Hoag..... | 783 | Taber, George K..... | 212 |
| Sackett, Samuel H..... | 724 | Smith, Edward M..... | 500 | Taber, Thomas..... | 112 |
| Sackett, Smith J..... | 856 | Smith Families..... | 281, 500, 621 | Taber, Walter F..... | 112 |
| Sadlier, James Edgar, M. D..... | 315 | Smith, Frances..... | 783 | Taber, William H..... | 208 |
| Sanders, Robert..... | 925 | Smith, George C..... | 595 | Tabor Family..... | 789 |
| Sanford Family..... | 241 | Smith, George W..... | 629 | Tabor, Gilbert..... | 789 |
| Sanford, Robert..... | 240 | Smith, John H., Jr..... | 621 | Tabor, Myron P..... | 790 |
| Sargent Family..... | 564 | Smith, John T..... | 354 | Talbot, Benjamin M..... | 549 |
| Sargent, Winthrop..... | 563 | Smith, Lewis..... | 521 | Talladay, Frank..... | 939 |
| Schafer, Louis..... | 478 | Smith, M. J..... | 18 | Tallman Family..... | 48 |
| Schlegel, George..... | 297 | Smith, Myron..... | 281 | Tallman, John F..... | 51 |
| Schlude, George..... | 298 | Smith, Nathan..... | 463 | Tallman, Hon. John P. H..... | 43 |
| Schouten, Richard A..... | 615 | Smith, Nathan W..... | 492 | Tanner, Samuel J..... | 800 |
| Schrauth, Jacob..... | 899 | Smith, Nathaniel..... | 801 | Tanner, William H., M. D..... | 829 |

INDEX.

949

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|--|---------------|----------------------------------|-------------------------|---------------------------------|----------|
| Taylor, Mrs. Catherine E. | 167 | Underhill, Anthony, M. D. | 46 | Velie Family. | 440 |
| Taylor, Henry J. | 379 | Underhill, Edward A. | 543 | Vermilyea, Addison. | 922 |
| Taylor, H. Pauline. | 67 | Underhill, George. | 46 | Vermilyea, Brooks. | 921 |
| Teal, John D. | 715 | Underhill, Dr. Joshua B. | 46 | Ver Planck Family. | 128 |
| Teator, Uriah. | 832 | | | Ver Planck, Robert N. | 128 |
| Teats, Frank. | 934 | Vail, Edwin G. | 610 | Verplanck, Mrs. Samuel. | 387 |
| Teats, Mrs. Frank. | 934 | Vail Families. | 425, 692, 706 | Vincent, Edgar (Madalin). | 922 |
| Ten Broeck Family. | 560 | Vail, George I. | 706 | Vincent, Edgar (deceased). | 300 |
| Ten Broeck, Capt. Samuel. | 561 | Vail, Joseph I. | 799 | Vincent Family. | 671 |
| Ten Broeck, Samuel P. | 836 | Vail, Morgan L. | 692 | Vincent, George. | 670 |
| Ten Broeck, Walter L. | 560 | Vail, J. Watson. | 376 | Vincent, Isaac, Sr. | 300 |
| Terwilliger Family. | 550 | Vail, Willard C. | 314 | Vincent, Mrs. M. Ella. | 261 |
| Terwilliger, Silas. | 550 | Valentine Family. | 744 | Vincent, Obed W. | 261 |
| Tetamore Family. | 222 | Valentine, Richard L. | 744 | Vincent, Phebe A. | 846 |
| Tetamore, Frank L. R., M. D. | 222 | Van Benschoten Family. | 707 | Vincent, Reuben. | 845 |
| Thomas Family. | 749 | Van Benschoten, Henry. | 518 | | |
| Thomas, Robert M. | 730 | Van Benschoten, Mrs. Mary J. | 518 | Wait, John G. | 368 |
| Thomas, Walter B. | 749 | Van Cleef Family. | 15 | Waite, James E. | 270 |
| Thompson, Mrs. Caroline B. | 21 | Van Cleef, James S. | 15 | Waite, Joseph. | 270 |
| Thompson, Hon. Edward H. | 332 | Van Cott, Samuel. | 379 | Walcott Family. | 112 |
| Thompson Family. | 332 | Van De Bogart, Daniel. | 594 | Waldo, John B. | 811 |
| Thompson, Hon. John. | 20 | Van De Bogart Family. | 594 | Waller, Mrs. E. | 246 |
| Thompson, John R. | 871 | Van De Burgh, Hexton. | 346 | Waller, Homer. | 245 |
| Thompson, Robert R. | 206 | Vanderburgh, Edgar M. | 424 | Walsh, Charles. | 33 |
| Thomson, William. | 261 | Vanderburgh Family. | 424 | Wanzer, Charles F. | 896 |
| Tiedje, Henry. | 294 | Vander Burgh, Col. James. | 65 | Wanzer Family. | 301 |
| Tiel, Arthur R., M. D. | 648 | Van De Water, George. | 591 | Wanzer, Jedediah I. | 301 |
| Tiel Family. | 648 | Van De Water, William. | 590 | Ward, David B., M. D. | 779 |
| Tiemeyer, John H. | 554 | Van Dyne, Frank B. | 388 | Ward Family. | 364 |
| Timoney, Francis. | 597 | Van Etten, Cornelius S., M. D. | 604 | Warhurst, George, Sr. | 601 |
| Titus, Cleveland H. | 426 | Van Etten Family. | 604 | Washburn, Daniel. | 136 |
| Titus Families. | 426, 512 | Van Gieson, Rev. Acmon P., D. D. | 60 | Washburn Family. | 136 |
| Titus, Mrs. Harriet. | 358 | Van Gieson Family. | 60 | Watkins, Mrs. Mary M. | 358 |
| Titus, Richard. | 358 | Van Kleeck, Baltus B. | 389 | Watts Family. | 145 |
| Titus, Robert H. | 870 | Van Kleeck, Charles E. | 933 | Weeks Family. | 24 |
| Titus, Willet. | 512 | Van Kleeck, Charles S. | 277 | Weeks, Mrs. Harriet S. | 25 |
| Tobey, Arthur G. | 600 | Van Kleeck, Cornelia. | 287 | Weeks, James Henry. | 24 |
| Toffey Family. | 906 | Van Kleeck Family. | 277 | Welling, William J. | 869 |
| Toffey, John. | 431 | Van Kleeck, Frank. | 389 | Wellman Family. | 185 |
| Tompkins, E. Lakin. | 548 | Van Kleeck, James E. | 697 | Wellman, George M., M. D. | 185 |
| Tompkins Families. | 52, 714 | Van Kleeck, John H. | 346 | Wells, Eugene. | 938 |
| Tompkins, Franklin C. | 714 | Van Kleeck, Leonard B. | 287 | Weston, Rev. John B., D. D. | 416 |
| Tompkins, Mrs. Helen E. | 53 | Van Nostrand, Francis S. | 778 | Weston, Weldon F. | 633 |
| Tompkins, Mrs. Jane. | 511 | Van Tassell, John L. | 527 | Weston, Wilbur H. | 634 |
| Tompkins, Lewis. | 52 | Van Tassell, J. Wesley. | 527 | Whalen, Dennis. | 936 |
| Tompkins, William. | 511 | Van Vliet, Benson. | 411 | Whalen, Patrick. | 877 |
| Townsend, Charles. | 750 | Van Vliet Family. | 408 | Wheaton, Mrs. Caroline T. | 6 |
| Townsend Family. | 759 | Van Voorhees Family. | 378 | Wheaton, Judge Charles. | 4 |
| Townsend, Jacob S. | 759 | Van Wagner, Benjamin. | 763 | Wheaton, Homer. | 5 |
| Trafford, William. | 681 | Van Wagner, Mrs. Cornelia B. | 258 | Wheeler, Bailey. | 879 |
| Traver, Edwin. | 700 | Van Wagner, Egbert. | 258 | Wheeler, Corydon. | 323 |
| Traver Families. | 696, 700, 725 | Van Wagner Family. | 739 | Wheeler, Mrs. Charlotte P. | 74 |
| Traver, Herbert L. | 440 | Van Wagner, Gilbert E. | 739 | Wheeler Family. | 73 |
| Traver, John A. | 696 | Van Wagner, Millard. | 763 | Wheeler, Rev. Francis B., D. D. | 73 |
| Traver, Mrs. Mary J. | 439 | Van Wagner, Nicholas. | 941 | Wheeler, Henry. | 793 |
| Traver, William E. (Rhinebeck). | 725 | Van Wey, Alfred. | 478 | Wheeler, Mulford. | 269 |
| Traver, William E. (New Ham- burg). | 924 | Van Wey, Mrs. Alfred. | 478 | Wheeler, Obed. | 806 |
| Treen, B. F. | 555 | Van Wyck, Benjamin W. | 556 | Wheeler, Perry. | 793 |
| Tripp, Alfred N. | 69 | Van Wyck, Charles J. | 466 | Wheeler, Theodore. | 806 |
| Tripp, Mrs. Carrie E. B. | 69 | Van Wyck, Cornelius R. | 382 | White, Benjamin K. | 756 |
| Tripp, Charles H., M. D. | 712 | Van Wyck, David Barnes. | 319 | White Family. | 201 |
| Tripp, D. C., M. D. | 380 | Van Wyck, Duryee. | 534 | White, Frederick C. | 928 |
| Tripp Families. | 430, 641, 712 | Van Wyck Families. | 318, 466, 529, 532, 556 | White, Henry D., M. D. | 209 |
| Tripp, James B. | 810 | Van Wyck, Henry D. | 232 | White, Howell, M. D. | 201 |
| Tripp, Leonard I. | 641 | Van Wyck, James. | 392 | White, John B. | 926 |
| Tripp, Smiten Vincent. | 68 | Van Wyck, John. | 118 | White, John L. | 908 |
| Tripp, William A. | 866 | Van Wyck, Mrs. Phoebe C. | 382 | White, William A. | 780 |
| Tripp, William S. | 430 | Van Wyck, Mrs. Sarah. | 113 | White, William H. | 926 |
| Trowbridge Family. | 588 | Van Wyck, Stephen C. | 528 | Whitehouse, J. O. | 488 |
| Trowbridge, George A. | 588 | Van Wyck, T. De Witt. | 532 | Wilber Family. | 530 |
| Trowbridge, John. | 250 | Van Wyck, Theodorus. | 392 | Wilbur, D. W. | 652 |
| Trowbridge, N. Conklin. | 251 | Varian, Isaac L. | 134 | Wilbur Families. | 489, 652 |
| Trowbridge, Stephen B. | 251 | Varick, Mrs. Isabel. | 231 | Wilbur, Frank B. | 489 |
| Tuthill, Robert K., M. D. | 72 | Varjck, Richard A., M. D. | 231 | Wilbur, Ira E. | 848 |
| | | | | Wiley, Alfred S. | 745 |

| | PAGE | | PAGE | | PAGE |
|---------------------------------|----------|--------------------------|------|---------------------------|------|
| Wiley, Reuben | 225 | Wing Family..... | 340 | Worrall, Henry..... | 676 |
| Wilkinson, Col. Robert F..... | 180 | Wing, John S..... | 835 | Wright, Abram..... | 235 |
| Williams, George H., M. D..... | 183 | Wing, Jackson S..... | 341 | Wright, Charles W..... | 660 |
| Williams, George H..... | 14 | Wing, Martha T..... | 859 | Wright Family..... | 716 |
| Williams, James L..... | 45 | Wing, Obed..... | 300 | Wright, Isaac W..... | 498 |
| Williams, John..... | 653 | Wing, Phoebe A..... | 300 | Wright, James H..... | 498 |
| Williamson, Phebe T., M. D..... | 287 | Wing, Sheldon..... | 344 | Wright, John G..... | 687 |
| Willson Families..... | 434, 582 | Wixom, John O..... | 908 | Wright, Lewis H..... | 687 |
| Willson, George T..... | 434 | Wolcott, Charles M..... | 386 | Wright, Thomas..... | 716 |
| Willson, Israel R..... | 582 | Wood, Capt. Isaac H..... | 326 | Wymbs Family..... | 39 |
| Wilson, John P., M. D..... | 182 | Wood, James M..... | 702 | Wynms, Luke D..... | 39 |
| Wiltse, Alonzo S..... | 598 | Wood, Lewis E..... | 126 | | |
| Winans Family..... | 602 | Wood, William J..... | 892 | Yeomans, H. J..... | 479 |
| Winans, Joel S..... | 602 | Woodin, Daniel T..... | 592 | Yeomans, Mrs. Mary J..... | 479 |
| Winans, Walter H..... | 604 | Woodin, Egbert..... | 481 | Young, Clarence E..... | 806 |
| Winans, Virgil G..... | 461 | Woodin, Mrs. Mary J..... | 591 | Young, Henry L..... | 225 |
| Winchester, Milo F..... | 669 | Woodin, Solomon..... | 482 | Young, Louis..... | 619 |
| Wing, Ebbe P..... | 340 | Wormsley, Frederick..... | 311 | Young, Mrs. Louis..... | 620 |
| Wing, Emery..... | 217 | | | | |

BINDING SE

APR 28 19

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

F
127
D8C7

Commemorative biographical record of Dutchess County

